Sir Walter Clegg: I was about to say just what the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) said. That man was luckier than many of the others, partly due to the conditions of service of fishermen. I am concerned to hear that cases are still before tribunals and that appeals are in progress. Obviously we cannot comment on those. However, I believe that for the future of the fishing industry fishermen must know where they stand on redundancy. The sooner that is put right, the better.

Like the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, West I hope that we shall have a further debate in the not-too-distant future on the general state of the fishing industry because the matters that we are discussing today are highly technical which, to a certain extent, limits the debate.

The common fisheries policy is working better than most people thought it would. I hope that my right hon. Friend will continue to press for enforcement. That is the key. The more enforcement we get, the better the fishermen will accept the situation. The closing of fisheries and the reduction of quotas inflicts great hardship on the fishermen because they cannot earn a living while the fishery is closed. There is an increasing desire to look at conservation, which was perhaps not the case 20 or 30 years ago. The importance of it is now realised. Therefore, enforcement in preserving the stocks is important.

6.12 pm

Mr. Donald Stewart (Western Isles): I sympathise with the hon. Member for Wyre (Sir W. Clegg) about the hard days that have come to the Fleetwood fleet and other ports such as Hull and Grimsby. I was used to seeing the Fleetwood trawlers coming into my home port of Stornoway on their way to and from the fishing ground. They brought a certain amount of trade to the town. The local traders regret the disappearance of the fleets.

The hon. Member for Wyre is right to seek assistance for his local inshore fishermen. However, the fact that the Highlands and Islands Development Board does not offer help to fishermen in parts of Scotland, as the hon. Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Henderson) said, is due not to any animosity against the fishermen but to the fact that the board's remit is confined to a certain area of Scotland.

In a previous fisheries debate a Conservative Member accused me of having only tales of woe and prophecies of doom. I am willing and glad to concede that today the Minister has given us grounds for satisfaction. I am sure that the fishermen, who are inevitably interested in the industry, will welcome that.

The mechanisms for enforcing protection are extremely welcome. That has been a weak link in the chain. Many of our own fishermen have kept to the rules, but those of other countries have not. Some fishermen used to say that the protection was only against honest men who would not break the rules anyway and that the others simply ignored it. The present mechanisms are a welcome improvement.

I particularly welcome the way in which the by-catch of 18 per cent. in the Norway pout fishery has been reversed. I agree that that is a considerable achievement. Once that was conceded it appeared that it would be difficult to reverse it. There was no reason at that time for extending the 10 per cent. We all know that in certain fisheries it is impossible to catch 100 per cent. of a species, but we must allow a by-catch. Fishermen were willing to allow 10 per cent., but what is the point of 18 per cent.? It might now be said that they could have 25 per cent. for the destruction of perfectly good fish for human consumption. Therefore, I congratulate the Minister on the return to 10 per cent. and I hope that that will be set in concrete for the future.

[Mr. Donald Stewart]

One of the great disappointments that has created anger and incredulity in the fishing industry is the concession of 40 per cent. of the North sea herring allocated to Norway. All the evidence is that there is a historic performance, according to the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, of a level of 7 per cent. Now they will get 50,000 out of 200,000 tonnes in the EEC waters, which is effectively in British waters.

I hope that that will also be bombed out like the Norway pout by-catch of 18 per cent. because the fishermen believe that the Commission arrived at the negotiation determined to meet the Norwegians at all costs. It seems to me that the Norwegians do better outside the Common Market than the United Kingdom is doing as a member. One wonders what was the quid pro quo that allowed a TAC of that level to the Norwegians.

The reduction in cod quota is also a disappointment and the increase in the haddock quota does not compensate for that. However, I agree that we must listen to the scientific evidence. There is no use carrying on if the stocks cannot take the strain. One ray of hope is that when those stocks are fished with some restraint the recovery can be amazingly prolific in a short time.

Another matter that should be dealt with without delay to avoid uncertainty is the pelagic fisheries. A fleet of trawlers was allowed into those fisheries in 1985. I am sorry that the Ministry did not take immediate action to withdraw the licences because the precious stock still depends on strict adherence to the rules. I hope that that will be borne in mind. I welcome the report that we have had today.

6.17 pm

Mr. Barry Henderson (Fife, North-East): From what has been said so far, I think that the House will agree with the Minister's assessment that this year's settlement is satisfactory. It was encouraging to hear the right hon. Member for the Western Isles (Mr. Stewart) and the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall) agree with that in general. From my point of view, the most satisfactory aspect was the maintenance of the pout box and our not agreeing to the Commission's proposal to liberalise the human consumption by-catch. On behalf of the fishermen in the east of Scotland, I thank my right hon. Friend the Minister and his hon. Friends for their efforts. This is one of the most satisfactory features of the agreement in the Council of Ministers. I hope that this is the last time that this proposal comes from the Commission. I trust that it will not be resurrected.

I am glad that my right hon. Friend immediately recognised, as did the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food after the Fisheries Council, the widespread dissatisfaction with the European Community's deal with Norway. I am not against Norway. I like Norway and the Norwegians. Some of my best friends are in the Norwegian Government. I met the Hoyre Stortingruppe about 15 years ago, and many of them are now in the Norwegian Government. I do not want to see any bad blood between Norway and the Community, Norway and Britain and particularly Norway and Scotland. However, I think that we can enhance our relations with Norway by making a more satisfactory arrangement than has been concluded this year. It has not been as bad as it might have been because herring has not yet recovered its proper place in the fish markets. It is still a weak market, and I hope that it will not be too long before it returns in strength.

I hope that two things can be achieved—a stronger herring market, and more satisfactory arrangements with Norway on herring. Perhaps to that end my right hon. Friend will encourage the Commission to undertake an education programme whereby officials might visit some of the fishing communities interested in the arrangement with Norway in particular to see whether, before next year, they can better understand our concerns.

There has been considerable disappointment at the sudden and substantial reduction in the cod TAC. It is hardly compensated for by the increase allowed for haddock. I say that for two reasons. The first is the price consideration. The price of cod is about 50 per cent. higher than the price of haddock, which is an important consideration for the fishermen. What is more, too many of the haddock being caught are of the smaller variety. There is not a market for that, and too much of the fish is going into intervention. Just as we have all agreed that it would be a bad thing to have more human consumption fish picked up at by-catches of the pout box, it would be unfortunate if too much small haddock fit for human consumption did not find a market.

A related matter, which is not part of this year's Council, is mesh sizes. There is much controversy about what should happen, particularly for commercial species, and about the direction in which to go. I urge my right hon. Friend the Minister to give further consideration to the compromise proposals that I understand have been submitted by the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, on this and on small haddock. It should be one of the objectives of an effective marketing regime that one should seek to balance supply and demand. If, as is likely, there is a healthy fishing industry in the coming years, it will be enhanced by a more satisfactory balancing of these supply and demand considerations.

6.23 pm

Mr. Robert Maclennan (Caithness and Sutherland): I have a great deal of sympathy with the point made by the hon. Member for Wyre (Sir W. Clegg) about the complexity of the matters that we are considering. In future, will the Minister do himself greater justice by bringing more light and shade to the debate, so that we can applaud his achievements and see more clearly his failures, by not giving us quite such an extensive tour d'horizon as he did, breaking down into consideration of the problems of megrim and pollock, blue whiting, area VI and so on? I am always grateful for amplification from the Minister when the points at issue are difficult. However, in a debate such as this, most of the matters could be published in advance in the simplified form suggested by the hon. Member for Wyre. We could then concentrate on the issue with which the House wants to grapple.

I said that the Minister might not have done himself justice by his approach tonight. Therefore, I express my satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations on the Norway pout box. That was clearly an aberration of a most unacceptable kind, raising the by-catch from 10 to 18 per cent. There was unanimity in the fishing industries and across the House that this had to be brought to an end. This is something for which the Minister deserves great credit. I hope that we can take some comfort from what he has said about the unlikelihood of this matter ever being raised again in the same way.

Having dealt with light, I must turn now to the shade of the Minister's speech. The darkest corner of the negotiations on which he has reported are the arrangements with Norway on North sea herring. That is unacceptable and quite extraordinary. The idea that the Norwegians should receive 40 per cent. of central and northern North sea herring TACs is fantastically inequitable. It cannot be justified for this year, but even more disturbing is the policy that, because the final arrangements for herring have not been agreed, that might conceivably be used as a baseline for a permanent regime. I hope that the Minister will give us a categorical assurance that he intends to be trenchant and robust in rejecting any such notion.

I do not know how the 40 per cent. was arrived at, but it is worrying that the permanent regime may be based on historical considerations of Norway's catches in particular years. The Minister and the Government must not allow a historic base to be taken from a time when the Norwegians were substantially overfishing and there was a threat to stocks from that overfishing.

I move on from the inequity of the present position to the way in which it was arrived at. The Minister properly drew attention to his anxieties about how the Commission had initialled the agreement, despite the notifications that had been given by Britain and France about the unacceptability of what was proposed. We all share his concern, but it is important that we learn something more of how this can be avoided in the future.

Did the Commission act in defiance of the views of member states because of the deadline on the accession of the Iberian countries and the desirability of getting agreement on the whole package from the beginning of the year? If so the Government's approach, and that of the House, should be that these matters cannot properly be left so late in negotiations that the Commission has the freedom to sell the pass. I hope that the Minister will say something about the manner in which the Government intend to defend our interests in formulating a permanent arrangement.

The hon. Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Henderson) spoke about a matter that was not decided at the Council but is to be considered in March—minimum mesh size. It is of particular importance to the Scottish fleet that an increase should not be proposed and that the compromise should be set at the 85 mm mark. That is about the best that we can hope for, so I hope that the Government will deal with that matter with considerable force.

The pelagic fishing review is the background to some of the matters that we have been discussing today. There is considerable anxiety among Scottish fishermen, in particular that the increase in the number of freezer trawlers with licences will adversely affect the pelagic fleet. I do not know how the Minister proposes to reverse the embarrassment that has been caused. I hope that it is not too late. It has been suggested that those three licences should be withdrawn. Certainly, the present position is most unsatisfactory.

In November, we were told that the outcome of the pelagic review would be announced before the end of the year, but we are still waiting. Can the Minister give us the expected date of the completion of the review?

Dr. Godman: Does the hon. Gentleman know what is likely to happen to the crews of those three vessels if their licences are removed?

Mr. Maclennan: I can only reply by putting another question. What will happen to the crews of those vessels that have been unable to obtain precious stock licences and what will happen to the fishermen whose catches are substantially reduced because of the occurrence of overcatching? Incomes are dropping, which has led to redundancies in several inshore ports. It is not much good robbing Peter to pay Paul. If that is what the Minister has done by granting licences to the three freezer vessels, he was unwise. I believe that it was not done deliberately, but it is a mess which has a continuing consequence for the inshore fleet. It is not a mess that will go away. I hope that the Minister recognises that fact.

I wish to discuss the reduction in cod TACs and the compensatory increases — as the Minister put it — in haddock. If the reduction in cod were based on unassailable scientific evidence, it could not be resisted. However, the Minister cannot argue that the increases in haddock will offset that reduction. Further pressure could be placed upon those who already catch haddock, because of the possible adverse effect on haddock prices. That underlines the difficulties with which the industry has to contend.

I do not quarrel with the Minister's overall assessment of the package and the state of the industry this year. However, it is a fragile industry with great ups and downs and it is subject to considerable hazards. The most tragic example of that occurred off the coast of my constituency during the recess when the Bon Ami sank with all hands on board. That event raises the matter of safety measures in the Minch and in the north-west and the appropriateness of locating helicopter safety services in Stornoway in the constituency of the right hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Stewart). I hope that the Government are already considering such measures.

The country owes a great deal to the fishing industry. The Government's stewardship to ensure adequate returns is important not only for the future of fishing and of consumers, but for those fragile communities where our fleet is largely based. This year, I believe that the Minister has presented a fair account of the conclusion of an agreement which, I am pleased to say, was reached early in the year, giving some certainty as to prospects for the year ahead.

6.34 pm

Mr. Alexander Pollock (Moray): Following a period of conventional silence on this and related subjects, I am grateful for the chance of catching your eye, Mr. Speaker, at the start of 1986. I hope that my right hon. and learned Friend the new Secretary of State for Scotland will take as much interest in fishing matters as did his predecessor. He will be warmly welcomed if he takes the opportunity to acquaint himself at first hand with the enormous contribution that Scotland makes to the industry, especially in the north-east.

While debating the European fishing agreement of 1986, we should remember the general state of the fishing industry. The latest figures issued in November by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland showed that the Scottish fishing fleet made an operating profit of £27·7 million from a total income of £182·3 million, which is a considerable improvement on the three previous years.

[Mr. Alexander Pollock]

Regarding the 1986 average, I commend the Government on reaching political agreement before the new year for the second year in succession. It suggests a deeper political commitment among the member states, which must be warmly welcomed. I trust that a similar momentum can be maintained in other matters as they fall due for review.

Perhaps the most impressive achievement to emerge from the Council has been the successful resistance to the Commission's proposal for an increase in the Norway pout by-catch derogation. The Minister made clear his satisfaction about that outcome.

The matter of enforcement has been raised by several hon. Members. I, too, was concerned when the news came last August of the Government's plans to introduce radical changes in the arrangements for fishery protection and surveillance. A major Nimrod base lies at Kinloss in my constituency. My fishing constituents are especially aware of that service's contribution to the effective policing of those who seek to evade the rules. Last September a photograph from a Nimrod cost a Basque trawler skipper a fine of about £35,000 for illegal fishing off the west coast of Scotland. I hope that the Minister can reassure us that careful consideration is being given by the Department to the effectiveness of any alternative arrangements.

As the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) reminded us, 1985 was a tragic year for all those who exact their trade from the sea. The loss, just before Christmas, of the crew of the Banff-registered Bon Ami came two months after the disappearance of the Macduff fishing vessel, Ocean Harvest, when four men were lost. It must be our hope that 1986 will be kinder to our fishermen and their families, to whom we all owe such a large debt.

6.38 pm

Dr. Norman A. Godman (Greenock and Port Glasgow): I echo the sentiments expressed by the hon. Member for Moray (Mr. Pollock). I have been associated with the fishing industry for many years. Fearsome hazards are placed upon those who follow that trade, and I am pleased to associate myself with the hon. Gentleman's remarks. This is the first time that I have followed the hon. Gentleman in a fisheries debate, but I am sure that it will not be the last.

I offer a brief contribution to what I believe to be a too brief debate on an industry that is so important to Scotland, and especially to the more remote maritime communities. We have an interesting collection of documents, which I would call a mixed catch.

The fears of the fishing communities aroused by the accession of Spain to the European Community have been considerably diminished. The grant aid offered for the decommissioning of Spanish fishing vessels is a most sensible measure, because the Spanish fishing fleet must be severely reduced to a level where it poses no threat to the viability of the fishing stocks that those vessels will harvest over the next decade or two. Extra capacity must be reduced before a new common fisheries policy is negotiated in the 1990s.

Mr. Austin Mitchell I echo my hon. Friend's remarks about the need to take Spanish vessels out of commission. It is good that they are receiving a far better decommissioning grant than our vessels did when our fleet was being run down. At the same time, it is wrong that the Spanish industry receives a 50 per cent. grant for new construction, whereas ours receives a 25 per cent. grant.

Dr. Godman: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for mentioning what can only be described as an absurd anomaly. The decommissioning grant is about £400 per gross registered tonne. It is absurd that the Spanish should be awarded the type of new build grant that my hon. Friend mentioned.

The hon. Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Henderson) claims that he is not anti-Norwegian. I am sure that we all readily accept that. I should like to claim that I am not anti-Spanish when talking about Spanish fishing activities. I shall quote Mr. Boyd Gordon, who I believed was a former senior official in the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, but somehow he is still around.

When answering a question put to him by the hon. Member for Fife, North-East in the Scottish Affairs Committee's investigation of the fisheries protection services, Mr. Boyd Gordon had this to say about the Spanish fishing fleet in Scottish waters:

"At the moment, they can have 16 vessels at any time in Area VI"—

that is the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea area—

"which comprises waters partly off Scotland and partly off England. Under the accession arrangements, I think that that number is going up to 25. But there will be strict control of the number of Spanish vessels, especially now. The problem with Spain is to make sure that no more than the 16 or 25 are in your waters at the one time. They are notorious law-breakers in that regard, and we regularly find unlicensed Spanish vessels fishing off the West Coast — not in any great numbers; but we certainly find Spanish vessels that should not be there."

Spanish fishing must be subjected to close surveillance. However, the fears about their activities are being reduced.

Agreement has been reached between the EEC and Norway. Like some of my hon. Friends and some Conservative Members, I find it disturbing that that concordat gives Norway an incredibly high percentage —some 40 per cent.—of the central northern North sea herring total allowable catch. Surely the Norwegians are not entitled to such a share of a stock which is still recovering. Is the Minister satisfied with the quality of the negotiators acting on behalf of British fishing interests? Is he satisfied about their understanding of the needs of the United Kingdom fishing industry? Members of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation are deeply dissatisfied with the Community's role in this affair.

I join the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) in expressing anxiety about the increase in the minimum mesh size from 80 mm to 90 mm. I understand that, unexpectedly, that has been extended to the west of Scotland. If true, it will take effect from 1 January 1987. The introduction of such a minimum size will have serious effects on the whiting fisheries harvested by small vessels from ports on the east and west coasts of Scotland. The question should and will be asked whether the Minister will seek a derogation to 80 mm in respect of the whiting fishery.

The quality of the enforcement of the common fisheries policy is important, because the management of fishing —I can say this because I come from a fishing family— is too important a subject to be left to fishermen. As has been correctly said, the stewardship must rest with the Government. If the fishermen see that the enforcement system to which they and others are subject is reasonable and fair, they will play by the rules.

When I was on a fairly large fishing vessel five years ago fishing out of a United Kingdom port—I had better not tell the House which one—the skipper when he was fishing off Shetland ordered the crew to insert a small mesh net inside the belly of the trawl net. I asked him why he did that, because not even the Norway pout could get through such a tiny mesh—I could not get my little finger through—and he said, "I will obey the rules when others obey them and when they are fair and square." The improvements in enforcement are to be welcomed.

The consequence of the regulation which allows penal or administrative action to be taken against owners and charterers as well as skippers over irregularities under the regulations may help to reduce some of the dreadful exploitation to which British fishermen have been subjected by Spanish fishing interests. That will go a long way towards dissuading skippers from fishing where they should not fish. Similarly, the need for member states to verify log book entries is a most welcome development.

We have a mixed bag of documents. As the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland said, they contain shade and light, but nevertheless there are some positive aspects to them. In general, I welcome the documents.

6.48 pm

Mr. David Harris (St. Ives): I shall concentrate on the subject which is uppermost in the minds of the fishermen of south-west England—the Spanish question. My area is closer to Spain than any other part of the United Kingdom. The Fishing News of 3 January carried the headline:

"We are ready for the Spanish."

I wish that were true.

I pay tribute to my right hon. Friend and to the Minister of State. They have done splendid work in this matter. I seek further reassurances, for the reason that my right hon. Friend gave when he mentioned the recent arrest of a Spanish trawler.

Our fishery protection boats can go almost 200 miles off Land's End and pick up Spanish trawlers carrying out illegal fishing almost at will. There is a huge problem there and nobody knows the extent of illegal fishing. I look to my hon. Friend with some confidence to intensify our enforcement efforts, because I am certain that the Spaniards will not enforce conservation measures on their own fishermen.

6.51 pm

Mr. Austin Mitchell (Great Grimsby): The Minister has hauled in a big catch for us and I shall try to be brief. I want to concentrate on cod because Grimsby is a cod port. It is geared to cod: its vessels are appropriate for cod but not for much else. Anyway, there is not much else for the fishermen to catch. The haddock is further north in Scottish waters and it is expensive and difficult for us to catch it. For the Grimsby fishermen, it is cod or nothing. This year the cod catch has been down substantially and it has been a tough struggle to land even the quota. We have had great difficulties, with vessels carrying on long into the winter and making much more frequent and later trips. Prices have improved, but they have not risen sufficiently to compensate for the drop in the catch.

Moreover, the cut in the North sea cod quota in these measures will be a bitter blow for Grimsby because, while it is a 30 per cent. cut in quota, it is a 17 per cent. cut on this year's catch. The industry is already hard hit and facing difficulties. It is not generating enough revenue for reinvestment in new vessels to replace our aging fleet. I accept that the cut is based on scientific advice, but could not something have been done to protect Grimsby? It may be a matter of squeezing more for Grimsby from elsewhere, particularly from the Scots who have done far better out of this than we have, and who always have the alternative of haddock, which Grimsby does not have to the same degree, or perhaps it is a matter of providing some compensation for the loss of the CAT class vessels, which have now been laid up. They made a vital contribution to the fish throughput for the port but were not part of our sectoral quota. To maintain the quantity of fish coming in, Grimsby needs some compensation for the loss of those vessels.

If there is to be a cut in the cod quota, it is imperative that the Minister should press for special measures of conservation, because such measures are necessary for the cod stocks. In particular, he should press for an increase in the mesh sizes so that we can provide for proper conservation. I know that mesh sizes are to be increased from January next year, but that is a long time away and there is a welter of derogations and exceptions for that. We shall face difficulties even then, because there will be extra costs for re-equipping and there is a need for compensation for fishermen for the fall in catches. We need those conservation measures and we also need seasonal restrictions on fishing in spawning areas. In some cases there should be an absolute ban on fishing in spawning areas. We must rebuild the cod stocks if Grimsby is to have a viable future.

There is another essential matter. It is right and fair that there should be compensation for Grimsby fishermen for the loss of earnings, which will now hit them because the cod quota is down so substantially. It is, after all, a cod quota cut as a consequence of Government decisions and Government agreement. It is not the fault of the fishermen, but it will affect their earnings severely. It is a peculiar regional problem for the English ports, and particularly for the premier English fishing ports such as Grimsby.

Fishing has always been a poor relation, yet the treaty of Rome said it should be treated in the same way as agriculture. It never has been. Last year the Minister gave £16·9 million in compensation to specific geographical areas such as Durham, north Yorkshire and Northumberland to help hill farmers who had had to contend with bad weather and poor harvests. The same principle should apply to the fishermen in the English ports, particularly in Grimsby which has been affected and will continue to be affected by the disastrous drop in the cod catches. It is confined to a specific geographical area and will have severe consequences for the profitability of the industry. Fishing should qualify for special help, as did hill farmers, and on the same scale, or the fishing industry will be in difficulties.

[Mr. Austin Mitchell]

I should like to comment briefly on a couple of other aspects of importance to Grimsby. The first concerns guide prices, about which the Minister said little. The increase in guide prices is pathetic. They are being edged up by a low figure in each review, in this case by 6 per cent. Such guide prices have no relevance to the costs of catching fish and to the costs of keeping the industry going. The whole guide price system was based on the French market, not on the English market. In other words, red fish and dace do not sell for much in this country but are priced quite highly in France because they are prized there. Cod is important in this country, but brings a far lower price in France because it is not so important there. The system is geared to French needs and not to ours.

Grimsby used to have its autonomous withdrawal system, with prices two to three times higher than the official withdrawal prices, but the withdrawal system collapsed three years ago and now there is no base to the market, except for the withdrawal prices based on the guide prices. If we are to raise the roof, we need to raise the floor as well. The guide prices should be increased to provide a firm base for a viable market and they need to relate to the costs of catching fish.

In the matter of control, the CFP system of policing has never been satisfactory. Thirteen inspectors is a pathetic and inadequate figure. Answers to parliamentary questions that I put down soon after the inspectors started to operate showed that the 13 spent most of their time in this country policing the most law-abiding part of the system rather than policing our continental competitors who are less strict in their observance of the rules. If the CFP is to be accepted, it has to be fair and impress equal consequences on all. In this country there is a feeling that everybody else is getting away with cheating, with inadequate supervision, with catches that are beyond the limits, because they are not adequately controlled by this police force. There is traditionally close collusion between the fisheries inspectorate and the local fishing industry in continental ports which certainly does not exist in English ports. I do not know about Scottish ports.

Three or four years ago my wife made a film about illegal Dutch fishing at a time when there was a ban on herring. In the Dutch ports they were landing herring. She immediately went to the local fishery inspector and said, "We should like to film you dealing with this problem of herring." First, he said it was mackerel and that it was nothing to do with him. Then he flatly refused to attend to the matter because he said that he would end up in the dock. That is the sort of warm relationship that exists there. The inspectors are the people who are policing the system, but European inspectors cannot operate if national controls are not effective and adequate.

What is proposed is totally inadequate. The catching fleet has been more than doubled with the accession of Spain and Portugal, but we have not doubled the number of inspectors for the control of a nation which traditionally cheats and does not observe regulations. The system must be enforceable.

My main point is a simple straightforward one about the needs of the Grimsby fishing industry. The Government's policy has been one of letting market forces prevail, and market forces have been running down an industry which vitally needs investment if it is to survive. Grimsby has a good future because, with proper conservation, the stocks will build up and we shall have a prosperous future. We have to survive to be able to inherit and to catch that future, and we need special help from the Government. We do not want the Minister to stand by and say, "We can do nothing; it is all down to market forces." Unless we get special help, we shall not survive to catch that adequate future.

It is vital that the industry be concentrated in centres of excellence like Grimsby, which has the facilities, the landing and the ice and food processing, all of which forms an excellent nucleus for the expansion of the fishing industry, but it needs help if it is to survive. There is no point in the Government standing by and saying, "There is nothing we can do."

7 pm

Mr. John Home Robertson (East Lothian): This has been a useful debate on an extremely important industry. We are grateful to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for the details that he gave when he introduced these documents. Fishing is an important industry throughout the United Kingdom. I agree with my hon. Friend the Member for Kingston upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall) that we ought to have a further opportunity in the near future to discuss the affairs of the fishing industry.

I should like to refer to a point that was made by my hon. Friend the Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) and by the hon. Members for Moray (Mr. Pollock) and for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) concerning the tragic loss of life in the Scottish fishing fleet in recent months. This is a matter of great concern throughout the country, particularly in the fishing communities. I have fishing communities in my constituency, so I am aware of this great concern. The House is to have an opportunity to debate fishing fleet safety when the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie) introduces his private Member's Bill next month. I welcome his initiative, and I have no doubt that he will receive widespread support.

I ask the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute (Mr. McKay), to say something tonight about the apparent serious lack of helicopter cover to deal with emergencies off the north-west coast of Scotland. This is a matter of immediate concern, and it would be useful if the Under-Secretary of State could say something about it.

Other aspects have been mentioned in the debate. I share the satisfaction of all right hon. and hon. Members who have spoken about the ending of the outrageous derogation from the by-catch limit in the Danish industrial fishery in the North sea. I pay tribute to the Scottish Fishermen's Federation for its efforts to demonstrate the harmful effects of that derogation on whitefish stocks in the North sea. That point was referred to by, among others, the right hon. Member for the Western Isles (Mr. Stewart). It caused concern during the time that the derogation took effect. The 10 per cent. limit should never have been increased to 18 per cent., and I sincerely hope that we shall hear no more about it. I congratulate the Minister on having ensured its demise this year.

I wish to refer to two detailed points on the new restrictions that are to come into effect. Everybody recognises the need to conserve stocks on the basis of scientific evidence. However, it is important that restrictions should be phased gradually, wherever possible, in order to protect not only those who fish for these species of fish but those on shore who trade in and process the fish. We remember the almost complete destruction not only of the offshore herring catching fleet but of the onshore herring processing industry in this country when there was a complete ban on herring fishing around our coasts.

The first detailed point that I want to raise on these documents is the increase in mesh size from 80 mm to 90 mm for the demersal fishery in the North sea and off the west coast of Scotland. That point was referred to by the hon. Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Henderson). It could create serious difficulties for a number of small fishing vessels which rely upon the whiting fishery in those waters. Is it really necessary to impose these restrictions? In future, would it be possible for further restrictions to be phased and for fair warning to be given of them? The Minister must recognise the difficulties that restrictions create for a number of small fishing vessels and their crews.

My second detailed point, which has already been referred to by the hon. Member for Fife, North-East and by my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), is the substantial cut of 31,000 tonnes in the British share of the total allowable catch for cod in the North sea. That is a substantial volume of fish. It will create difficulties not only for fishermen but for onshore processors and traders. In future will the Government try to avoid such drastic fluctuations in the total allowable catch and similar restrictions?

One of the key points in the debate concerns the Norwegian share of the herring total allowable catch in the North sea. We have heard about the Minister's dissatisfaction over the Norwegians having got away with 40 per cent. of that valuable fishery. The Government seem to have been completely outmanoeuvred. The conduct of the European Commission in general and of M. Simonet in particular in negotiating that deal raises serious questions. Representations have been made by a number of people. The Scottish Fishermen's Federation has said:

"We were very angry indeed at the unbelievably high percentage share (40 per cent.) of the Central and Northern North Sea Herring TAC allocated to Norway as part of the EEC/ Norway Fisheries Agreement for 1986 negotiated by the Commission and ratified by the Fish Council in December last, inasmuch as we do not believe the Norwegians to be entitled to such a high share of this recovering stock and, moreover, we fear very much for the precedent which this One-Year Deal may have set in the context of the need for both Norway and the Community to settle a substantive agreement on the future share-out of North Sea Herring."

The federation goes on to express its lack of confidence in the Commission's negotiations with Norway. I understand that the Minister is not satisfied with them. The federation suggests that in future there should be an independent element in the negotiations. I understand that representatives of the Scottish Fishermens Federation were present during the negotiations, and its observation was:

"The Commission seemed hell-bent on achieving a deal with Norway at all costs and, in so doing, behaved in a cavalier fashion in proceeding to a settlement after paying little or no regard to the positions put to them by the Officials of the various Member States."

The Scottish Fishermen's Federation has an axe to grind, but I notice that its views seem to be confirmed by a more independent source, Agro-Europe, in its fish report of December 1985, which referred to

"thinly veiled accusations that Simonet might just be paying more attention to the needs of the whitefish fishing industry in his native France rather than to those of British herring fishermen. It was even suggested by some industry representatives that Simonet was trying to keep the French sweet in the hope of avoiding too heavy demands from Paris on matters relating to the Spanish fleet after accession."

It has happened. It must not be allowed to happen again.

I join the hon. Members for Wyre (Sir W. Clegg) and for Moray and other hon. Members, including my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby, in appealing for effective enforcement of the agreed restrictions throughout the European Community. We have heard a certain amount about the Inspectorate of Inspectorates. We have even heard about the Minister of State's computer. But there is a legitimate sense of outrage among British fishermen that the effective controls that are applied to them are not matched by controls over the fleets of other European Community nations. The Spanish got themselves a bad reputation, even before joining the European Community. The hon. Member for St. Ives (Mr. Harris) pointed out that a Spanish vessel managed to get itself arrested only days after Spain's accession to the European Community. That does not seem to demonstrate good intentions on Spain's part.

I see from a banner headline in Fishing News of 3 January 1986 that the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the right hon. Member for Suffolk, Coastal (Mr. Gummer), has said:

"'We're ready for the Spanish'".

I am not sure that the Minister of State is a particularly convincing figure as a latter-day Drake trying to see off the Spanish armada, but we wish him and his officials well in dealing with this clear threat.

The industry and the House expect the Government to enforce the fishing restrictions upon vessels of all nations that come within our waters. Like the hon. Member for Wyre, I want not just private reporting through the Minister's famous computer. It would be useful if we could have a public account of the conduct of the respective fishing fleets in European waters—not only around Britain, but elsewhere—and of the enforcement measures which may have been taken.

I repeat the appeal of my hon. Friend the Member for Kingston upon Hull, West, at the beginning of the debate, that more time should be made available at an early date to discuss this extremely important industry.

7.10 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland (Mr. John MacKay): We have had a most interesting and informative debate on the European Community documents recommended by the Select Committee for consideration by the House. As is usual in these debates, we have ranged widely over many other aspects of United Kingdom and Community fisheries policy. I am grateful to the many hon. Members who have contributed to the debate and to those who cut their speeches short to allow everyone who wished to speak the opportunity to say a few words. I fully recognise that the fishing industry is an important element in many of our constituencies.

As each year passes since the common fisheries policy was introduced in 1983, we see more and more clearly that the deal that we negotiated then has been good for this country and for our fishing industry. The CFP has provided the stability which fishermen need in order to plan ahead. The developing arrangements for the conservation of stocks, the annual allocations of total allowable catches and national quotas, and the improved procedures for control and enforcement have all helped to provide improved opportunities for the fishermen and to safeguard their long-term interests.

[Mr. John MacKay]

In 1985 the CFP was extended to cover the accession of Spain and Portugal to the Community. I know that some of our fishermen were apprehensive about this enlargement of the Community, but, as my right hon. Friend noted at the start of today's debate, the arrangements have been agreed without too much trauma, and I do not think that there is any need for the industry to feel threatened by the changes that have taken place.

There has been a broad recognition in the House today of the fact that the arrangements that we negotiated for TACs and quotas in 1986 are very satisfactory for the United Kingdom industry. Some aspects of the overall package are not ideal, notably the provision for Norwegian catches of North sea herring, but the arrangements have generally been given a warm welcome by the industry itself.

In particular, mention has been made today of the successful resistance that we mounted to the Commission's proposal for a further derogation allowing an 18 per cent. by-catch of white fish in the industrial fishery for Norway pout. This was regarded by the fishing industry as being the major issue of 1985, and it is very gratifying for Fishery Ministers to come to the House and report that we have achieved what the industry wanted. I am sure that my right hon. Friend has noted the thanks and appreciation of all hon. Members who spoke, in particular the right hon. Member for the Western Isles (Mr. Stewart) who said that it was very good for my right hon. Friend to be able to come to the Dispatch Box with real grounds for satisfaction.

I would just mention the performance of the industry in 1985. The value of the fish landed up to 31 October 1985 was £260 million, compared with £245 million for the corresponding period of 1984. My hon. Friend the Member for Moray (Mr. Pollock) highlighted the position of the Scottish fleet, which plays such an important part in the economy of his constituency.

One of the problems which most Members have mentioned is that of North sea cod. I fully appreciate the problem, especially as it affects Grimsby, mentioned by the hon. Members for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), and for Kingston upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall), and by other hon. Members. The scientific advice on the need for the reduction of the TAC was very firm indeed. The figure recommended by the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea was, in fact, 130,000 tonnes, so that by settling for 170,000 tonnes we are already taking certain risks in order to mitigate the impact on fishermen. The new quota will not necessarily restrict fishermen's activities this year, because, if the scientists are right, the cod will unfortunately be that much less abundant.

The hon. Member for Great Grimsby mentioned that the quota of 107,530 tonnes in 1985 was not caught. Although all the figures are not in, we consider that about 90,000 tonnes was caught. The main problem is a very poor 1984 year class. Of course, if surveys during the year produce evidence that the original assessment was substantially wrong the advice will no doubt be reviewed, but it would be wrong of me to hold out any hope that we are likely to see any increase later in the year as a result of the scientists' advice.

Many Members mentioned the control of Spanish fishing. Indeed, my hon. Friend the Member for St. Ives (Mr. Harris) is perhaps nearer the problem than any of the rest of us. I assure the House that every effort is being made to ensure the effective control of Spanish fishing in the waters round our coast, following Spain's accession to the Community. A majority of the Spanish fleet operates outside Community waters under agreements with third countries. The number of vessels allowed to fish at any one time in Community waters will be strictly limited. The House can be assured, by the catching and fining of a Spanish vessel so early this year, that we take the whole matter very seriously indeed.

With Spain inside the Community, Spanish vessels will be subject to the full range of existing Community conservation and control measures, including logbooks and landing declarations. We will most assuredly enforce these measures in our waters, and we can expect an improvement in enforcement at the Spanish end under the supervision of the Community's Inspectorate of Inspectorates.

Mr. Harris: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for giving way—I did try to limit my speech to two minutes. May I ask whether he has had any indication at all of when the number of inspectors will be increased to 21, because this is crucial? I know that my right hon. Friend has been pressing very hard on this.

Mr. MacKay: I cannot give my hon. Friend a date for it, but the Council has endorsed the Commission's proposals for an increase in the complement of inspectors in 1986 from 13 to 21, and we hope that this will be done as soon as possible.

While I am speaking about control and enforcement, may I say that, as the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, West freely recognised, we have led the way on enforcement in the Community and we think that a lot of progress has been made. Had I time, I would give the House the evidence on which I base that statement; for example, the catch limits closed down 46 fisheries in 1984 and 52 fisheries in 1985, not just in this country, but throughout the Community, which shows that member states are increasingly taking action to manage the fisheries so that quotas are not exhausted before the end of the year.

I was asked about the possibility of reporting this. The Commission will report on control arrangements early this year. My right hon. Friend, I think, referred to that. We have asked the Commission to study whether there should be some system of penalty on compensation when a member state exceeds a quota. We have listened with interest to these points and will see what we can do about publishing these various papers when they come to us.

A few quick words on quota hopping. From 1 January 1986, all licences contain new conditions aimed at ensuring that vessels wishing to fish against United Kingdom quotas have a real economic link with the United Kingdom. Licensed vessels need to be registered under part IV of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894, normally operate from the United Kingdom, the Isle of Man or the Channel Islands, be crewed by at least 75 per cent. British or European Community nationals, excluding Spanish, Portuguese or Greek nationals, under the transitional arrangements, be resident in the United Kingdom and have all the crew contributing to United Kingdom national insurance or the equivalent Isle of Man or Channel Islands schemes. As a further deterrent, western hake was designated a pressure stock, which will restrict access to the fishery.

I have little time left in which to deal with the Norwegian point. My right hon. Friend explained that the agreement with Norway involved an explicit transfer from the Community to Norway of North sea herring for 1986 to balance the rest of the agreement. In addition, the agreement does not just concern North sea herring, but covers a wide range of important fish stocks and assures vital access to Norwegian grounds for our whitefish fleet. I am happy to give an assurance that the Government cannot accept that the decision to allocate 40 per cent. of the herring in the central and northern North sea to Norway in 1986 sets any kind of precedent for the longer-term share out. My right hon. Friend has continually made it clear that he was not at all pleased with the way in which the negotiations were conducted by the Commission. He has made that clear to the Commission. We very much hope that a repeat of the situation will not happen this year.

I have only sufficient time to mention one very serious point which it would be remiss of me not to mention. I was asked by three hon. Members about the safety of fishing vessels in the light of the tragic loss of the Bon Ami off the north-west coast of Scotland at the end of last year. At present my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has responsibility for safety, and his Department is conducting the shipping investigation. I cannot say more than that. However, I assure hon. Members that his Department and the Fisheries Departments view the incident with great seriousness.

Last year we finished on the successful note of scrapping the proposals for the Norway pout by-catch derogation, together with an agreement on tax and quotas for the main fish stocks in 1986. This year the industry will undoubtedly have to face certain difficulties and problems, including the unfortunate but necessary reduction in quota in North sea cod. There are opportunities for the industry to continue to prosper, and I am sure that it will seize them.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved,

That this House takes note of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's unnumbered explanatory memoranda dated 10th December 1985 on 1986 total allowable catches and quotas, on modifications to the proposed 1986 total allowable catches and quotas and on the fisheries agreement for 1986 between the European Community and Norway, of European Community Documents Nos. 9284/85 on amendments to Regulation 2057/82 establishing certain control measures for fishing activities by vessels of Member States, 8662/85 on the allocation of flat rate quantities of hake, horse mackerel and blue whiting to Spain, and 10047/85 on 1986 fish guide prices; and welcomes and approves the provisional agreement reached on these arrangements for 1986 with the improvements obtained for the United Kingdom fishing industry.

Hong Kong (Nationality)

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Lennox Boyd.]

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Sir Paul Dean): The House will wish to know that many right hon. and hon. Members wish to speak in the debate. As it must end at 10 o'clock, I appeal for short speeches.

7.20 pm

The Minister of State, Home Office (Mr. David Waddington): The White Paper which is before the House today sets out the Government's proposals for implementing the nationality provisions of the Hong Kong Act 1985. With the White Paper is the draft of an Order in Council which would enact the provisions and which, subject to what is said in the debate, we would hope to lay formally before the House before Easter.

The Government believe that the nationality provisions in the White Paper are fair and comprehensive. They are intended to establish clearly the future citizenship of British dependent territories citizens in Hong Kong once Hong Kong ceases to be a dependent territory on 1 July 1997. We are introducing them in good time to prevent uncertainty, and to ensure that people in Hong Kong and third countries have an opportunity to get used to the new passport. Once the order is made there will be much detailed work still to do, but the foundation will have been laid, and we believe that it will provide a stable basis on which the people of Hong Kong can plan their future with confidence.

The nationality provisions arise directly from the Sino-British joint declaration on Hong Kong and its associated exchange of memoranda on nationality. Hon. Members will recall that the House debated and approved the Government's intention to sign the agreement just over a year ago, after the people of Hong Kong had been given an opportunity to express their views, and the overwhelming majority had found it acceptable. Following that debate, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister went to Peking to sign the agreement.

As a consequence, the Hong Kong Bill was passed and received Royal Assent in April last year. Paragraph 2 of the schedule to the Act allows for provision to be made by Order in Council for the ending on 1 July 1997 of British dependent territories citizenship for those having such citizenship through a connection with Hong Kong, and for their acquisition of a new form of nationality, the holders of which will be known as British nationals (overseas). The paragraph also allows provision to be made for the avoidance of statelessness.

It is important for the House to remember the whole time that what we can do for nationality is confined by the Hong Kong Act. The framework has already been set by the Act, and the Order in Council must keep within that framework. Its role is not to reopen questions already considered and approved by the House, but to establish the detailed arrangements which will be necessary to give effect to the provisions set out in the agreement and the Act. Furthermore, neither that agreement nor the Act in any way alters the decision initially taken in 1961, and confirmed in subsequent legislation, that British nationals in Hong Kong are subject to United Kingdom immigration control. It is the Government's general policy to maintain the effectiveness of that control, and the case for making concessions to any particular group of people, whether in Hong Kong or elsewhere, must be judged, not in isolation, but in the context of the Government's general policy and the pleas that many people throughout the world make to be allowed to come to settle in this country. That is the background to the Government's approach to the issues to be addressed by the House this evening.

[Mr. David Waddington]

During the debate on the Hong Kong Bill the Government undertook to put forward their detailed proposals for the nationality order in good time, and in a form which would allow them to be debated and, if necessary, amended, before the House was invited to give its approval. We have done that. The White Paper containing the order was published in the United Kingdom and in Hong Kong on 17 October. The 3·25 million British dependent territories citizens in Hong Kong to whom these matters are of vital interest have had a full opportunity to comment on the order. Hon. Members now have a chance to express their views. The Government will listen carefully to all that is said tonight. We shall consider particularly whether we should amend any of the provisions in the order.

We have followed carefully the reaction in Hong Kong to the White Paper, the text of which had been agreed with the Hong Kong Government and Executive Council. It was debated in the Hong Kong Legislative Council on 4 December 1985, and some important points were raised. During that debate Members asked the British Government to do more to explain the arrangements for the new passport to third countries. They wanted to be assured that it would be internationally acceptable as a travel document, and that its holder would enjoy the same rights of access to other countries as those holding British dependent territory passports. They asked that the new passport should say that the holder did not need entry clearance to enter the United Kingdom. Members also supported the request by the non-Chinese ethnic minority in Hong Kong and by some former service men to be granted British citizenship rather than British national (overseas) status or British overseas citizenship. A motion to that effect was passed, supported by the Hong Kong Government, and I shall respond to those points which are of the greatest importance in a few minutes. It might be for the convenience of the House if I first say a few words in explanation of the draft order.

I should like to make it clear at the outset that the order can, by definition, affect only those who are British dependent territories citizens by virtue of a connection with Hong Kong. Therefore, it cannot affect anyone who is not a British dependent territories citizen, or whose citizenship can be derived wholly from a connection with another dependent territory. But it is not sufficient simply to refer in the order to without defining what such a connection may be.

"a connection with Hong Kong"

Article 2 of the draft order provides that definition. It sets out in a convenient, logical and clear format all the ways in which a person may have become connected with Hong Kong. It encompasses all the Hong Kong British dependent territories citizens listed in annex 2 to the White Paper—although, as the White Paper explains, virtually all such people in Hong Kong are citizens by birth, registration or naturalisation there. It is possible, however, that a citizen may be able to trace this connection through a number of the circumstances set out in article 2 and in the more detailed annex 2. While the categories in article 2 are satisfactory for legislative purposes, the greater detail given in annex 2 is intended to help people find out whether they come within the order by matching their particular circumstances with those in the list. Therefore, article 2 defines connection with Hong Kong for the purpose of the order, and article 3 provides that anyone who is a British dependent territories citizen by virtue of such a connection shall cease to be such a citizen on 1 July 1997.

Article 4 sets out the way in which the new status of British national (overseas) may be acquired by those who will cease to be British dependent territories citizens in 1997. The terms of the United Kingdom memorandum associated with the joint declaration provide that this status will be acquired by such persons only if they hold or are included in a passport showing the new status issued before 1 July 1997 or before the end of 1997 in the case of persons born in the first six months of that year. Under the terms of the agreement, therefore, it will not be transmitted to descendants born after 30 June 1997.

All Hong Kong British dependent territories citizens will be entitled to acquire BN(O) status. Acquisition will be by registration. This is consistent with the long-standing provision in British nationality law for those exercising an entitlement to citizenship, but the terms of the memorandum, reflecting the particular needs of Hong Kong, link its acquisition to the holding of a BN(O) passport. The passport, together with the central register which will be maintained, will be evidence of the new status so article 4 provides a clear entitlement to hold a BN(O) passport.

Mr. Andrew Faulds (Warley, East): I am sorry to intervene while the Minister is going into such detail, but I rise perhaps more on a point of comfort than of order. Can something be done about the coldness of the Chamber? There are great gusts of cold air blowing in and it is excessively chilly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the hon. Gentleman feels uncomfortable, I shall make some inquiries about the problem.

Mr. Waddington: I am sure that that should be done in deference to our guests from Hong Kong, who may be finding it very uncomfortable. I hope that what I am saying does not create any cold winds.

The formalities going with registration will be kept to a minimum. This is very important. We envisage only that each person's particulars will be entered on a central register. It is important to repeat the point that no separate fee will be charged for registration.

I come next to the article dealing with statelessness. The joint declaration guarantees to all those BDTCs, except those who have left Hong Kong permanently and have the right of abode elsewhere, the right of abode in Hong Kong from 1 July 1997, and the Order in Council gives all Hong Kong BDTCs the right to register as BN(O)s. During the passage of the Hong Kong Bill a number of Members were concerned that those British dependent territories citizens in Hong Kong who were not ethnically Chinese, and their children, might be left stateless in 1997 because they would not be regarded as Chinese nationals. The Government recognised that concern and gave a firm undertaking that no former Hong Kong British dependent territories citizen, nor any child born after June 1997 to such a person, would remain stateless as a result of the agreement. In Committee on the Bill in another place, this undertaking was extended to cover the grandchildren of former Hong Kong British dependent territories citizens if they were born stateless.

Our proposals to deal with that undertaking are set out in article 6. It provides that any former Hong Kong British dependent territories citizen who for any reason has not acquired the BN(O) status to which he is entitled and would otherwise be stateless in 1997 will automatically become a British overseas citizen on 1 July of that year. Any of their children born after June 1997, if they would otherwise be stateless, will also acquire British overseas citizenship at birth, and any of their grandchildren, if born stateless, will be entitled to be registered as British overseas citizens.

Mr. Max Madden (Bradford, West): The Minister may well be aware that the Library of the House of Commons has produced an addendum to the research note previously issued, No. 205, dated 3 December. The addendum is dated 15 January, the last paragraph of which says:

"The possibility of statelessness could arise for people who do not have and cannot obtain any citizenship other than that of Hong Kong but are not Chinese and therefore not automatically claimed by the Chinese Government as nationals of China. This could apply to a minority of the roughly two per cent. of Hong Kong's population who are not Chinese."

Can the Minister confirm that that statement is correct, and if so, whether it is compatible with what he is now saying to the House?

Mr. Waddington: I think that the hon. Gentleman may not have been following what I was saying. I shall come back to this later. The whole point of article 6 is to make provision, otherwise there would be statelessness. Because of article 6, there will not be statelessness. If a non-Chinese ethnic person chooses for some reason not to apply for BN(O) status before 1 July 1997—he is, of course, entitled to apply for it—then, as distinct from ethnic Chinese inhabitants of Hong Kong, he will not automatically become a Chinese citizen. Therefore he could, if he had no other nationality, be stateless—hence article 6 in furtherance of the undertakings given to the House automatically gives such a person the status of British overseas citizen. I shall come back to this in more detail, because it is one of the most important matters under discussion.

Non-Chinese ethnic BDTCs will be entitled to BN(O) status, but if for any reason they do not become BN(O)s, they will have a recognised nationality status, and so will their descendants until well into the middle of the next century.

The Government recognise, of course, that nationality status alone is not sufficient. It is equally important that those now established in Hong Kong should continue to have right of abode there. Clearly, right of abode in Hong Kong after June 1997 cannot be secured by holding any form of British nationality, since Hong Kong will no longer be part of British territory. For this reason the agreement made separate provisions to safeguard rights of abode in Hong Kong. These are set out in section XIV of annex I to the joint declaration. For the non-Chinese ethnic community, right of abode is guaranteed to all those who have been ordinarily resident for seven years in Hong Kong either before or after the establishment of the Hong Kong special administrative region, and who have taken it as their place of permanent residence. The same guarantee extends to their children born in Hong Kong; and to anyone who had right of abode only in Hong Kong before 1 July 1997 even if he has not been there for seven years. In other words, the guarantee cover all the non-Chinese ethnic Hong Kong British dependent territories citizens except those who have left Hong Kong permanently and have the right of abode elsewhere.

The Indian community in particular, with support from the Executive and Legislative Councils of Hong Kong, argue that these provisions do not go far enough. They are concerned, firstly, that BN(O) status will not itself give them right of abode in Hong Kong; and secondly, about the nationality status of their descendants after the second generation born after 1997, and they have therefore asked to be granted British citizenship rather than BN(O) or BOC status.

I shall listen very carefully to all that is said in the debate, but I have to say that the Government are not persuaded that it would be right to grant British citizenship to those BDTCs who are not ethnically Chinese. They want to continue to live in Hong Kong. The joint declaration guarantees their right to do so. British citizenship cannot help them in this regard. British citizenship cannot, after 30 June 1997, give them the right of abode in a territory which will no longer be British. Furthermore, the grant of British citizenship would not benefit future generations any more than the present proposals. British citizenship can be transmitted to only one generation born abroad. The second generation has an entitlement to registration as British citizens similar to the proposed entitlement to BOC status. After that there is no automatic claim to entitlement or registration as a British citizen. There is, therefore, no advantage for future generations in avoiding statelessness or securing their future in Hong Kong by conferring British citizenship on the non-Chinese ethnic community in Hong Kong.

Mr. Barry Sheerman (Huddersfield) rose——

Mr. Robert Adley (Christchurch): Will my hon. and learned Friend give way?

Mr. Waddington: To be fair, I must give way to an Opposition Member first.

Mr. Sheerman: Surely the Minister has met members of the Indian community, to whom many of us have listened sympathetically. The Minister's remarks will not put their minds at rest. Can the Minister speak again in the debate and go further to try to put their minds at rest? That part of the community has special worries and a special place in Hong Kong, and in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: The House was anxious that we should follow tonight's procedure. The House was anxious that the Government should not just bring before the House a draft order and ask for its approval after a one-and-a-half hour debate after 10 o'clock. It would be silly to say that I was not here to listen. The whole purpose of the exercise is that I should listen to everything that hon. Members say. It would be equally silly if I did not spell out the difficulties. It would be unfair to give the impression that there are no difficulties. I shall listen carefully.

Mr. John Morris (Aberavon): Is the comparison with other nationalities fair? The claim by non-Chinese ethnics is that they have no choice. They are there and have nowhere else to go. After two generations they will be stateless. Is that not their real fear?

[Mr. John Morris]

Mr. Waddington: The right hon. and learned Member for Aberavon (Mr. Morris) and others must face the fact that by granting any form of British nationality we cannot guarantee the right of abode in Hong Kong. The right of abode in Hong Kong is guaranteed to such people as a result of a joint agreement and cannot be guaranteed as a result of the conferment of British nationality. We have made provision in article 6 for the conferment of nationality on those who do not take out BN(O) citizenship before 1 July 1997. Article 6 also provides that that citizenship can be taken up by two further generations. That takes us well into the middle of the next century. One would expect that by then people still resident in Hong Kong will have taken out Chinese citizenship.

Mr. Adley: The assumption behind what my hon. Friend says is that the only alternative open to the non-Chinese ethnic minority in Hong Kong is some form of British citizenship. Will my hon. Friend elaborate briefly on the discussions between the British Government and the Chinese Government in the liaison group about the possibility of people in that category obtaining Chinese citizenship under Chinese nationality laws? It would be unwise to assume that this is just a normal immigration debate.

Mr. Waddington: Article 7 of the Chinese nationality law provides that aliens or stateless persons who are willing to abide by China's constitution and laws may acquire Chinese nationality on approval of their application, provided that they are settled in China. One should not assume that those who are settled in China long after the takeover will not by then be Chinese citizens because of Chinese law.

Dr. Jeremy Bray (Motherwell, South): It is understood that the British Government cannot do anything about the long-term status of such people in Hong Kong. Surely they are seeking full British citizenship as a fallback if all else fails.

Mr. Waddington: The problem must be looked at in that context, not in the context of giving security to these people in Hong Kong. One must ask what might be the effect on others if the claim were conceded. We know from experience that many claims are made by people who have connections with Britain to allow them to come to Britain if certain circumstances develop. One cannot ignore the knock-on effect or that other claims could arise. Let us see how the argument develops during the debate. I do not want to speak for too long, but I want to cover the other points raised in our debate in December.

Mr. James Prior (Waveney): I come new to the subject, but I am worried, because the debate in the Legislative Council on 4 December showed that the Chinese Members of the Council were taking a different attitude from that which they took earlier. That is what worries some of us. It should be given careful consideration.

Mr. Waddington: We shall give that matter careful consideration. The fact that the Chinese Members of the council are taking a different attitude should send warning notes through our minds. My right hon. Friend is saying that before that debate in December some people gave the impression that they felt that more should be done for the BDTCs, not just for the Indian BDTCs in Hong Kong. I should be surprised if after a time other groups were not easily identified and wanted similar privileges. We shall be debating that in the near future.

I shall be dealing with service men. They are a good example of how one can keep on identifying groups with special claims. I am not now talking about groups in Hong Kong, but about others throughout the world whose status is less than that of full British citizens.

Mr. Ian Wrigglesworth (Stockton, South): Will the hon. and learned Gentleman give way?

Mr. Waddington: I must move on in fairness to other hon. Members. I am sure that the hon. Member for Stockton, South (Mr. Wrigglesworth) has a good chance of being called to speak.

The Unofficial Members have also asked that some 400 or so former service men in Hong Kong should be granted British citizenship, or alternatively that the Government should consider sympathetically any application that they might make for registration as British citizens under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981. The Government fully recognise the contribution that these service men made during the war, and indeed the contribution made by many other people in Hong Kong during those years, but it does not necessarily follow that we should mark this contribution by granting them British citizenship. Their sufferings were matched by many other people in Hong Kong, and indeed in other parts of the world. Like their neighbours, many of them were born in Hong Kong, as were their parents and grandparents, and all their personal and family connections are there.

Furthermore, the order must, as I have said, keep within the framework of the agreement and the Hong Kong Act. That framework would not allow us to grant British citizenship to all former service men in Hong Kong even if we thought it right to do so. Paragraph 2(3) of the schedule to the Act does not allow us to use the order to grant British citizenship to those BDTCs who have another nationality, and are not at risk of becoming stateless; nor, obviously, does the Act provide a power to grant citizenship to former service men who are not even BDTCs. We could therefore risk creating invidious distinctions between one former service man and another. I hope I have made it absolutely clear to the House that we could not deal with those former service men as one class under this order.

Mr. David Howell (Guildford): I am grateful to my hon. and learned Friend for giving way to this further interruption. Many of the service men are ethnic Chinese and would, under the joint declaration, automatically acquire Chinese nationality. I am puzzled, because the comparison between this group and the group discussed earlier does not really stand up. The group discussed a moment ago are not automatically entitled to Chinese nationality. My hon. and learned Friend has read out some of the conditions on which their nationality application will be judged. There are other conditions which my hon. and learned Friend read out, all of which amount to it being left to the discretion of the People's Republic of China whether these people should have Chinese nationality. Surely the two groups are not comparable.

Mr. Waddington: With respect to my right hon. Friend, I was not trying to compare the two groups. I was going through the list of matters which were raised in the debate on 9 December and which are mentioned in the letter received by my right hon. and hon. Friends from the Legislative Council.

I am not making a comparison—different arguments apply. The argument for the first case is that they will not be left stateless. The order specifically provides that they will get nationality status. They will get the nationality of British overseas citizen. There is no argument that this would not give them the right of abode in Hong Kong, because, as I pointed out, no nationality is conferred as giving the right of abode in Hong Kong.

A different argument applies with ex-service men. One cannot deal with ex-service men as a class under the order, because the order only allows us to give people British citizenship if they come within the statelessness provisions of the Act.

Mr. Paddy Ashdown (Yeovil): Is it possible for the Minister to consider their cases under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981, using the discretion given by that section at least to consider who might be eligible?

Mr. Waddington: The hon. Gentleman must be clairvoyant. The Government will consider carefully any application for British citizenship under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 on grounds of service under the Government of Hong Kong, but I need to make it clear that this section cannot apply to those who were in service under the Government of the United Kingdom, which may have been the position for some of the Hong Kong ex-service men. There is no other provision in the British Nationality Act 1981 under which former Crown servants under the Government of the United Kingdom can be granted British citizenship if they do not meet the normal requirements for citizenship.

It is not possible to say in advance what the outcome of any application under section 4(5) would be. Those who would come within the terms of section 4(5) would be those who had served under an organ of a dependent territory. The Government are committed to using the power very sparingly and granting British citizenship only to those who have given outstanding service. It would be necessary to take these factors fully into account in fairness to other ex-service men throughout the world.

I believe that the provisions in the draft order, taken together with the guarantees given in the agreement, go as far as we possibly can in ensuring that all British dependent territories citizens resident in Hong Kong regardless of their background, ethnic origin or future citizenship status are ensured of a satisfactory and secure future there and that the provisions are fair for them all. I shall listen with interest and sympathy to the views of the House and will certainly wish to consider carefully any suggestions for overcoming the difficulties that I have outlined in meeting the requests made in the recent letter endorsed by the Legislative Council.

I should like to consider a matter which, while it does not come directly within the terms of the draft order, is nevertheless closely linked with it — the detailed arrangements which we propose to follow in issuing passports to British nationals (overseas) once the order comes into effect.

We intend to issue these passports from 1 July 1987. Those who then hold valid BDTC passports will be able, if they wish, to retain them. From 1 July 1987 Hong Kong BDTCs will have a choice of applying for a BDTC passport with a restricted validity until 30 June 1997 or for a BN(O) passport valid for a full 10 years. It will not be possible to carry both a BN(O) and a BDTC passport. The fee will be set under the Consular Fees Act 1980 and, save for exchange variations, it will be the same throughout the world. The fee is for the passport, just as all of us have to pay for passports. As I made clear earlier, it is not a fee for citizenship.

Passports issued to BDTCs in Hong Kong are currently issued by the Governor in the name of Her Majesty. It would be inappropriate for passports issued to BN(O)s which will remain valid beyond 30 June 1997 to be issued by the Governor. BN(O) passports will therefore be issued from the start by "Her Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State" as they are at present in the United Kingdom and at consular posts overseas.

One issue which has been of particular concern is the right of abode endorsement to be placed in BN(O) passports. This must be agreed with the Chinese Government, because the United Kingdom Government cannot give such a right in the special administrative region after June 1997. We have therefore discussed this matter with the Chinese Government in the Joint Liaison Group, and they have agreed in principle that the wording of the endorsement should be as follows:

"The holder of this passport has Hong Kong Permanent identity card No.—which states that the holder has the right of abode in Hong Kong".

We expect to reach final agreement on this and other related matters at the next meeting of the Sino-British joint liaison group in March.

This endorsement will effectively guarantee that BN(O)s will be able to return to Hong Kong and there is therefore every reason to think that the BN(O) passport will be acceptable to third countries as the present BDTC passport. This at the present time enables holders to travel to about 70 countries in the world visa free.

I appreciate the concern felt in Hong Kong which has led Members of the Legislative Council to propose an endorsement in the passport to show that the holder does not require entry clearance in the United Kingdom. It is of course a fact that no visas are required for holders of BDTC passports to visit the United Kingdom, but entry clearance is a facility available to those coming to this country who wish to assure their entry before they set off and it would be wrong to say anything that might discourage the use of this facility.

There is another important point to be made. It is a fundamental part of our system of "on entry" control that people arriving here have to satisfy the immigration officer that they qualify for admission under the immigration rules. Obviously we must beware of putting any endorsement in the passport which might mislead and give an impression that in some way examination by an immigration officer and compliance with the ordinary immigration rules is not required. Bona fide visitors from Hong Kong are always welcome here and always will be, but there are difficulties about an endorsement in the passport and we have to ensure that people are not misled by it. I am, however, considering with sympathy how to meet the concern which Members of the Legislative Council have voiced on this matter.

Mr. John Morris: The Minister will be aware of the concern about the acceptability of the BN(O) passport in other countries. He has just told us that for 70 countries BDTC passport holders require no visa. What steps have been taken, especially with our European colleagues, to ensure acceptance of this new passport?

[Mr. John Morris]

Mr. Waddington: The new BN(O) passport will contain an endorsement making it clear that the person concerned is returnable to Hong Kong. There is no reason why the passport should not be treated by other countries in exactly the same way as the BDTC passport, because third countries are concerned with returnability. That is why it was so important to get that endorsement in the passport.

One of the reasons why we have introduced the draft order so early is that there should be adequate time for discussion and for preparation. The right hon. and learned Gentleman is right to say that the Foreign Office will now go to considerable lengths to explain to other countries the significance of the new BN(O) passport, so that when it arrives on the scene in 1987 they will know its significance and not have to have explained to them what I have explained to the House today. That is a reasonable way in which to proceed.

Mr. Ivan Lawrence (Burton): Have no other countries given any assurances that they will accept this form of passport? The right hon. and learned Member for Aberavon (Mr. Morris) asked about European countries.

Mr. Waddington: Yes, they have. The United States and Australia have said that it will be acceptable, and the European parliament has passed a resolution saying that it should be acceptable. These are early days. My hon. and learned Friend would not expect the Foreign Office to have started this process before the House had debated the matter. There is plenty of evidence that the passport will be acceptable overseas.

We believe that the draft order provides for nationality arrangements that are fair and consistent as between BDTCs in Hong Kong, and that they are on the right lines. We shall listen with interest, however, to what the House says and consider whether any amendments are desirable or necessary before we bring the order back. It is right that we should act with care and deliberation, as the order will be a key step in the implementation of the agreement. The agreement itself was widely accepted by the people of Hong Kong and welcomed around the world as a significant achievement. With the help of the House and of the people of Hong Kong we look forward to the nationality order being seen in the same light.

8.2 pm

Mr. Alfred Dubs (Battersea): I welcome this opportunity to discuss the Order in Council in draft. I regret that originally we were due to have only a three-hour debate, but even that was shortened by 20 minutes. The matter might not seem to be the source of that much concern in Britain, but it is vital to the people of Hong Kong who will be aware of what we say tonight and will analyse the Minister's pronouncements in detail. He knows that a great deal of attention will be paid to what he said.

I had the opportunity to visit Hong Kong for a few days last month. I returned with much more confidence in Hong Kong's future after 1997 than perhaps I had before I set out. It is important that, whatever criticisms we make of the Order in Council and whatever emphasis we give to the anxieties of the people of Hong Kong that their needs are not being met fully by the Order in Council, we say nothing that damages the overall confidence of the people of Hong Kong in their future after 1997.

In a sense, we are considering means of amending the British Nationality Act 1981. The Minister knows that part of the Act dealt with the circumstances of British dependent territory citizens. During debates on the Bill in Committee and on the Floor of the House, the Minister's predecessor put much emphasis on Hong Kong, the Falkland Islands and Gibraltar. That was the nub of the case for BDTC status. Before the Bill was enacted, Gibraltar's position was changed and, after the Falklands war, the Government realised that the people of the Falkland Islands did not have the right of entry to Britain, so their circumstances were changed. That leaves Hong Kong. Now, the Nationality Act as it was intended to apply to Hong Kong is having to be changed because it is no longer appropriate. That is cause for concern.

Furthermore, the Government have had to change the concept of British overseas citizenship because, in the British Nationality Act 1981, that concept implied no hereditary status. The Government have now had to present a new concept of British overseas citizenship which has hereditary status for two generations. I mention that because it casts doubt on how the Government have approached nationality in the past few years.

The Government have a responsibility regarding the British national (overseas) passports, I am not sure that the Minister has addressed himself fully to the worries of the people in Hong Kong. He said that there would be an addition to the BN(O) passport mentioning the Chinese identity card. Even at the moment, however, Hong Kong holders of BDTC passports are having difficulties when they come to Britain as visitors or for other bona fide purposes. There are many bitter complaints in Hong Kong about how they are being treated. Indeed, that is why the Government in Hong Kong advise people before coming to Britain to get an entry certificate, although none is obligatory under the regulations.

Furthermore, some of the staff of the Hong Kong Government office in London have had difficulties and hassles at Heathrow and Gatwick airports. The Minister's assurance that BN(O) passports will be regarded as BDTC passports is something of a mixed blessing. The Minister owes it to the people of Hong Kong to ensure that BN(O) passports get a little more recognition than they are likely to get to judge from his comparison with BDTC passports.

The people of Hong Kong value highly the right to travel. The Minister said that he is hopeful that the no-visa arrangement which applies to holders of BDTC passports from Hong Kong will be extended to BN(O) passports. The Government could be a bit more positive and forthright. I urge the Minister to ask his Foreign Office colleagues to bring more pressure to bear on other Governments. It is not enough merely to say that it seems all right and that they hope that other Governments will take the passport.

The Minister will have seen the letter from Lydia Dunn, the senior Unofficial Member who, on this subject, says:

"Measures should be introduced to allow unobstructed and untroubled entry into the United Kingdom by bona fide travellers from Hong Kong".

I understand the Minister's technical point. The method suggested in the letter might not be the most appropriate, but I wish that the Minister could be more forthright about Hong Kong people travelling to Britain and to third countries with BN(O) passports. After all, the BN(O) passport is being introduced later this year so that foreign Governments can get used to it. Unless the British Government give a bit more weight to their value, however, there is a danger that people in Hong Kong will exercise their choice of sticking with BDTC passports until the last minute in 1997. If we are to have more sense, the Government must be more forthright and committed.

The Minister will also be aware that there is in Hong Kong a considerable element of distrust in Britain, especially since the passage of the British Nationality Act 1981. I have referred to the hassles experienced by people from Hong Kong when seeking entry to Britain.

Mr. Hugh Dykes (Harrow, East): I also apologise for not being here at the beginning of the debate. The hon. Gentleman said that members of staff at the Hong Kong Government office in London had encountered difficulties at Heathrow and Gatwick. That is a serious and disturbing charge. I am not criticising him for making it, but perhaps he could substantiate it. No doubt the Government would wish to be helpful, as it would be inconceivable and awful if bona fide members of the staff of the Hong Kong Government had difficulties coming and going.

Mr. Dubs: I take the hon. Gentleman's point. Many of the things that happen at Heathrow and Gatwick airports are inconceivable and awful. As for the Hong Kong Government office, I base what I say on a conversation with the London office of the Hong Kong Government when I was told that even its staff had had difficulties at airports. I am not saying that these people were turned away; rather that they were subjected to hassle. I believe that "hassle" is the most appropriate word. The Hong Kong Government office in London may wish to make representations about that, following the intervention by the hon. Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes). The main point is that the Minister has been made aware of what has happened and of the anxiety about that matter.

I should like to refer to the position of ethnic minorities in Hong Kong and to the Legislative Council debate which took place early in December 1985, and at which I was privileged to be present. I was able to hear the whole of that debate.

Approximately 10,000 people are members of ethnic minorities in Hong Kong and have BDTC status. That group of people comprises approximately 6,000 people of Indian origin, nearly 2,000 of Portuguese origin and about 2,000 of Eurasian origin. The Minister did not fully recognise their problem, although other hon. Members have recognised that the ethnic minorities will not automatically become Chinese citizens. The ethnic minorities believe that they will have a lesser status in Hong Kong after 1997 than the bulk of the population of Hong Kong. They are concerned about their future because they will not have equal status. That is the nub of their argument.

The Minister is getting close to playing with words when he argues that BOC status is a way of avoiding statelessness. When the House debated the Third Reading of the British Nationality Bill in June 1981, my right hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook (Mr. Hattersley) succinctly said:

> "British overseas citizenship is not a citizenship but a subterfuge".—[Official Report, 4 June 1981; Vol. 5, c. 1158.]

There is a danger that the ethnic minorities in Hong Kong will, after 1997, be given a very doubtful status that is tantamount to statelessness. That is the reason for their anxiety. As one of my hon. Friends said, they have no choice in the matter. The ethnic minorities were looking for comfort in the Order in Council and in the Minister's remarks, but I fear that they found none.

I should like to pay tribute to the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants which ably conveyed to us the case on behalf of the ethnic minorities in Hong Kong.

As far as I know, there are approximately 400 prisoners of war in Hong Kong. They are mainly of Portuguese origin and they are seeking to gain British citizenship under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981.

I should also like to mention the civil servants and others in administration who have occupied sensitive posts under the present Hong Kong administration. That group includes the police special branch. They expressed their anxiety to me that their career prospects may not be bright after 1997. I believe that there has been an understanding that some of these people will be considered under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981. Can the Minister say a little more about that?

The Minister did not refer to the 8,000 or 9,000 Vietnamese who are in open or closed camps in Hong Kong. Hopefully that problem will not exist in 1997. Although their position is not directly affected by the Order in Council and today's debate, the fact is that, unless they are removed from Hong Kong by 1997, they will be in a very invidious position. I do not believe that this country has a responsibility to take every Vietnamese boat person, but we have a responsibility to take our share. If we do that, other countries will follow suit. We are not doing as much as we should and therefore the problem may continue almost until 1997.

I wonder whether the Minister has fully appreciated the many anxieties that have been expressed in the House and in what I have said. There are no precedents for the situation that will face Hong Kong in 1997. It is a matter not of giving Hong Kong independence but rather of handing Hong Kong over, on the basis of a Sino-British agreement, to another country. Therefore, the people of Hong Kong are entitled to sympathy and consideration from the House and the people of Britain.

I contend that the Minister has not shown that sympathy or understanding. The people of Hong Kong feel badly let down. As Lydia Dunn states in her letter:

> "There is a good deal of lingering cynicism in Hong Kong about the gradual erosion of the rights and privileges of British subjects outside the United Kingdom as a result of successive amendments in recent years to the laws governing nationality and immigration".

The people of Hong Kong feel let down and the Minister must do something about that. He has not said enough this evening to give the people of Hong Kong, who feel that they are being missed out by the Order in Council, confidence that he understands their anxieties. In the absence of assurances from the Minister, the Opposition will have no alternative but to express their concern in the Division Lobby.

8.17 pm

Sir Peter Blaker (Blackpool, South): There are four main questions in the debate, and I want to refer briefly to each of them. The first is whether the British national

[Sir Peter Blaker]

(overseas) passport will be acceptable to other countries, bearing in mind the particular form of endorsement about the right of abode in Hong Kong. I do not believe that that will be a difficult question to solve. We have 18 months in which to solve it and we already know that the United States, Australia and various other countries find that form of passport acceptable. I am confident that in the 18 months available we will find that all the relevant countries will find that passport acceptable, as they did the British dependent territories citizen passport.

I recognise the importance of this subject to the people of Hong Kong, as it affects their ability to travel to different parts of the world and return to Hong Kong freely. I do not think that they should be too worried about the problem.

The second question is whether the new passport should be endorsed in a way that will enable visitors to this country, either for business or tourism, to be sure that there will not be the problem of delays at Heathrow or other ports of entry that sometimes occurs. I have felt for some time that the present situation is unsatisfactory. Visitors from Hong Kong find that they can go more freely to other countries—for example, the United States or Europe—than they can here. When they pass through immigration control at British airports, they are unduly delayed.

I hope that the Minister will pursue that matter. He has many clever officials in his Department and, as I believe he said, it is a matter of finding the right form of words that will avoid the sort of problems to which he referred. I believe that if he were to ask his clever civil servants to find the right form of words, they could do so.

The third question concerns the ex-service men. I have sent to the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton), a petition from three organisations in Hong Kong. He has not yet had time to reply to it, as I only sent it to him the other day. The three organisations are the Hong Kong and China branch of the Royal British Legion, the Second World War Veterans Association of Hong Kong and finally the Hong Kong Prisoners of War Association. Those organisations ask that the Home Secretary should exercise his discretion under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 in their favour and grant British citizenship to their members.

I believe that those three organisations have cast their net very wide. They seem to be including not only former Hong Kong prisoners of war but—I do not have all the details, but I shall get them—people who have served in the British forces, no matter where. That could include people who served in British regiments that were in Hong Kong in 1941. Such people are in a totally different situation from the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Force. The latter were volunteers—they were not conscripted and they served in Hong Kong. Those who were not killed became prisoners of war. My father was one, and that is why I speak with some feeling on that matter.

Members of the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Force are in a special situation. I must correct the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs). I do not believe that they number 400. The number 400 applies to members of all three organisations to which I have referred. There are fewer than 100 former Hong Kong prisoners of war. That is a more manageable problem. I hope that my hon. and learned Friend the Minister will consider the case of those former volunteers who served in Hong Kong and were prisoners during the whole war.

I am talking not about those who are British citizens—they have the right to come to Britain anyway—but about the Portuguese, Indians and Eurasians, many of whom are from families that have lived in Hong Kong for a long time, sometimes well back into the last century. There are fewer than 100 of those people, and their numbers will continue to dwindle during the next 11 years.

I do not think that there is any danger of a precedent being set if the Government consider the petition favourably. I do not think that will open the floodgates to many applications from, for example, Chinese who were in civilian prison camps. The Chinese were not in civilian prison camps. Those camps held only non-Chinese, because it was Japanese policy not to put the Chinese into the camps.

Mr. Dave Nellist (Coventry, South-East): The right hon. Gentleman is attempting to distinguish between those who should and those who should not be entitled to certain concessions. He referred to fewer than 100 being manageable, although 400 seemed to be a large number. Is he aware that, in the past 19 years, over 1 million more people have emigrated from than have emigrated to Britain? The idea of playing a numbers game and delineating certain nationalities is objectionable to members of the Labour party.

Sir Peter Blaker: The hon. Gentleman is at liberty to say that we should admit for permanent residence in Britain all the BDTCs residing in Hong Kong—about 3 million—if they wish to come. That position is not supported by me or, I think, the majority of our fellow citizens. That would impose an impossible burden. One must indeed look at the numbers issue.

The fourth main question in the debate concerns the Indians and the Portuguese. They ask to have the right of abode in Britain. I congratulate them on the way in which they have presented their case. Their petition to the Legislative Council was a model of clarity which enabled one to follow this complicated matter with—I will not say, with ease—a great deal less pain than normally is the case. They have formidable support. They now have the support of the Legislative Council. As my right hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Prior) pointed out, members of the Legislative Council formerly said that, if this concession were granted to the Indians and the Portuguese, many other people, including the Chinese, would want the same concession. They no longer say that.

I understand from a telephone call I received this morning that the Indians and the Portuguese have the support of the General Chamber of Commerce, the Chinese Manufacturers Association and the Federation of Hong Kong Industries.

I am referring, of course, not to the Indians and the Portuguese who have Indian and Portuguese passports, but to the BDTCs. In general, those communities have been remarkably successful in business. They account for a disproportionate amount of Hong Kong's trade and have made a success of their lives in Hong Kong. Some of them have been involved in less prosperous activities, such as clerical work or guard duties, but they are nevertheless solid citizens.

I understand the point which these BDTCs are making. After 1997, the United Kingdom, which will be responsible ultimately for them as BN(O)s, will not be responsible for the place where they have the right of abode. My hon. and learned Friend the Minister rightly stressed that, under the agreement, they will have the right of abode in Hong Kong. I understand that they will be able to apply for Chinese nationality. I should like the Government to explore that point a little further with China, because it would be useful to obtain clarification on how China will apply the discretion, which it appears it has, according to its nationality law.

I should like to put this point in a friendly way to the Indians and Portuguese in Hong Kong who are making this plea, many of whom I know. Are they not tending to forget how good the agreement with China is? It is a remarkable agreement—better than any hon. Member would have believed possible. Looking again at it this week I am amazed at how fully it gives the Hong Kong people all the guarantees after 1997 for which they could ask. Perhaps some hon. Members have not recently looked at the agreement.

Paragraph 13 on page 22 gives the Chinese statement of policy, not the British Government's statement of policy. Every possible freedom is guaranteed in that paragraph. Page 20 states:

"The Special Administrative Region shall maintain the educational system previously practised in Hong Kong."

Page 14 states:

"The . . . capitalist system and life-style shall remain unchanged for 50 years."

It is a remarkable agreement. It is a solemn treaty, which will be deposited with the United Nations. It will be incorporated in Hong Kong's basic law.

As I understand it, the Indians and the Portuguese say that, whatever the agreement contains, it might not turn out as it says. They would like an extra option. It would be unusual, but advantageous, for the Indians and the Portuguese if that option were available. I must say that my view is more optimistic than theirs. I believe that China signed the agreement because it meant what it said. It took several years of negotiation to hammer out the agreement. It was not done lightly. Moreover, it is very much in China's interests to carry out the agreement, because Hong Kong is the source of a large part of China's foreign exchange earnings. Hong Kong is increasingly becoming the "open door" in China's open door policy with the Western world. It is becoming the channel through which technology reaches China. All this will continue. Hong Kong will not lose its value to China in 1997. It will become more valuable.

Dr. John Marek (Wrexham): Does the right hon. Gentleman foresee some anxiety by the Hong Kong people who are dependent upon the succession in government in the People's Republic of China? Deng Xiaoping will not be there for ever.

Sir Peter Blaker: That is obvious. I shall not dispute that. Of course he will not be there for ever. But regardless of who is in charge in China, underlying factors suggest that there is a good future for Hong Kong. I hope that the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) will reflect on the points I have made.

The agreement is already being put into force. An excellent agreement has been reached on the release of land in the coming year. The Land Commission is already functioning. There is already a good agreement on Hong Kong's position with respect to the Asian Development bank. Both sides are putting the agreement into effect. I believe that confidence during the next 11 years will grow steadily. As Deng Xiaoping has said, the success of Hong Kong is an example to Taiwan. Joining Taiwan with China is the main point in China's foreign policy.

We have only recently obtained this excellent agreement. It could not be easy for the British Parliament to take a decision now, more than 11 years before the transfer of sovereignty to China—the prospect which is worrying the ethnic communities in Hong Kong—based on the possibility that the agreement which we have only just signed will not work. From an outside observer's point of view that would seem a difficult act to perform. Let us remember another point. If the Indians and the Portuguese in 1997 or thereafter were to find the position in Hong Kong intolerable, many people of other races would say the same thing.

I welcome the Government's willingness to consider the points that hon. Members make in the debate. I am glad that we have had the debate in this form so that the Government may consider whether the draft order should be changed. I hope that they will take into the account the change in the attitude of the Legislative Council in the last few months when they are making up their mind. As far as I am concerned, I want to put it firmly on record that I believe that the events which are causing concern to the ethnic minorities will not take place.

8.30 pm

Mr. Andrew Faulds (Warley, East): I am one of those who, in the excellent company of the right hon. Member for Blackpool, South (Sir P. Blaker), warmly welcomed the Sino-British agreement. It was an historic achievement. I believe that it is working out well, although there are a few colonial types—most of them chaps who want to scribble their nonsense in whatever media will present their concerns—who are trying to stir worries about developments up to 1997 and thereafter.

I entirely endorse the comments just now of the right hon. Member for Blackpool, South. I am certain, as he is, that China has a total commitment to making the agreement work. I am sure she is totally committed to the stability and prosperity and the well-being of the people of Hong Kong. But there are reasons for concern in limited areas. If I may, I want to touch on two that are relevant to the draft order.

The first, which has been discussed and will be pursued in the debate, is the acceptability of the British national overseas passport when it is introduced in 1987. The British Government must be responsible for proving its practicality and its acceptability. Her Majesty's Government must pursue negotiations with countries throughout the world to ensure that the 70 or so visa abolition agreements that now apply to the present British dependent territories citizenship passport will apply to the British national (overseas) passport when it is introduced. The Minister should give strong reassurance on that point. If negotiations are not being pursued with the 70 or so countries, they should shortly be undertaken.

Consideration must be given, too, to providing, after the introduction of the BN(O) passport, an unhindered —I mean unhindered—passage to visit Britain for those who wish to do so without being harassed by immigration officials. I will not make any quips about Heathrow. It is disturbing that there are unhappy instances at that airport and other ports of entry time after time. Those of us who have large immigrant communities in our constituencies could cite case after case. Hong Kongers who are British nationals should not have to suffer the suspicious caution that is natural to immigration bureaucrats. There must be an open sesame endorsement to prevent the distressing hindrances and delays that are far too common.

[Mr. Andrew Faulds]

My second main concern is the unhappy impending limbo of those 10,000 or so BDTCs who, because they are not of Chinese stock, will not become Chinese nationals in 1997. In raising the issue I am not casting any doubt at all on the intentions of the Chinese. I am raising it because it is a matter of concern, whether we want to face it or not, to a great number of people in Hong Kong. I was the first hon. Member, I think, to raise this issue in the debate on 5 December, 1984.

Those 10,000 include about 6,000 Indians, some 3,000 Eurasians and some others such as the Portuguese. The draft order proposes that in 1997 they will become British overseas citizens—BOCs. This proliferation of initials for the six different types of British citizenship is very vexing. It is a pity we have had to indulge in such surreptitious terminologies to pretend that we are still an open-hearted country. The BOC status will give those people no right of abode in Britain or anywhere else and will effectively leave them stateless, however the Minister may try to argue to the contrary.

The people of Macao, a few miles away from Hong Kong, have full entitlement to Portuguese citizenship. After Portugal's entry into the EEC they will be entitled to free entry into the Community and into Britain to pursue work if they wish to do so. How ironic for the Hong Kongers. Millions of people abroad have the right to enter Britain—from Australia, Canada and New Zealand and, indeed, from South Africa when the funk flight starts, as it will in the next year or sooner. Millions can come too from the EEC.

But all those are white. It is only the colour of those 10,000, or most of them, and the immigration fears of every Government, sedulously worked on by the less worthy of our colleagues, some of whom are absent this evening, that prevent Her Majesty's Government from behaving honourably towards those 10,000. What discreditable conduct all this is in the wrapping up of our residual imperial responsibilities.

I have had considerable correspondence over the months with the Council of Hongkong Indian Association in its pursuit of the right to full British nationality and the right of abode in Britain. In one of its earlier letters, of 27 April 1985, it disputed the contention by Baroness Young in the other place that if the non-Chinese BDTCs were granted the right of abode there would be resentment by the majority Chinese. That false argument was disposed of roundly by the unanimous endorsement of Miss Lydia Dunn's speech in the Legislative Council debate of 4 December in Hong Kong when she argued, to the surprise of many people but absolutely sincerely, for just such special treatment for this non-Chinese minority.

In a letter of 31 December last year the president of the Association, Mr. Harilela, summarised their dilemma. I cannot do better than quote his words on the nationality issue:

"Any form of nationality which has such serious shortcomings must be regarded as a uniquely attenuated one, and would leave its holder in a position of great disadvantage. The BN(O) status carries no notion of citizenship, and is little better than a travel document facility. Yet this is all the British government has been prepared to offer to the 10,000 or so non-ethnic Chinese BDTCs. We therefore request that this small group of people be given full British citizenship with the right of abode in the UK. Of this group some 4,500 to 6,000 are of ethnic Indian origin without being Indian citizens, and while our Council is primarily concerned with the fate of this particular group, any plea which we make must also apply to the other 3,000 to 4,000 ethnic minority BDTCs who are largely of Portuguese or Eurasian origin.

The ethnic Indian BDTCs came to Hong Kong because it was a part of the British Empire. They were first brought out here by the British to help colonise Hong Kong in the nineteenth century and many have since served the Crown loyally as policemen, soldiers and civil servants. Many came here shortly after India became independent in 1947 and, having decided to settle here, renounced their Indian citizenship and became British in the expectation that they would spend the rest of their lives under British rule. They therefore severed their ties with India when they swore allegiance to the Crown. . . . In contrast with many Indian communities throughout the world the ethnic Indian community of Hong Kong is totally British in outlook and attitude. . . .

They are a legacy of the British empire and Britain must continue to be responsible for them. . . . The non-Chinese BDTC minorities face an uncertain future, and while the numbers involved are small the principle involved is a great one."

Really, no hon. Member can dispute or disregard our responsibility in this matter. Matters of principle, and this is one, should not be lightly put aside by parliamentarians.

Mr. Wrigglesworth: Does the hon. Gentleman agree that the non-ethnic Chinese are seeking an assurance, not seeking to come to this country? They want an assurance that they will have a citizenship that means something and that gives them the right of abode in the place where they want to live—Hong Kong.

Mr. Faulds: Yes. I did not spell out that point because I thought that it was self-evident. It is obviously the reason for their arguments, and we should accept that it is a perfectly proper basis for their position.

Many of my hon. Friends will have read the excellent article in The Times a few days ago entitled

"What will befall Hong Kong's dispossessed?"

It was written by Anne Owers of the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants. She powerfully details the concern which should properly be shown for those people and argues the need to meet that concern by granting right of abode. She concludes her article with a paragraph that I want to read to the House; it is a warning that we should all heed and which I certainly endorse. It states:

"Britain's failure to take responsibility for ensuring that all British people in Hong Kong have an effective and secure nationality status is now creating insecurity for them and for Hong Kong; in the long term"——

this is the point—

"the legacy of bitterness and mistrust which it has created could do even greater harm to Britain's own long-term interests."

It is those long-term interests of this country about which we in this House should be concerned.

8.42 pm

Sir Paul Bryan (Boothferry): I congratulate my hon. and learned Friend the Minister on a very clear exposition of a very complicated subject.

I, together with the Minister and my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South (Sir P. Blaker), was in Hong Kong for the historic opening of the Legislative Council building in October. A year had passed since I was there for the announcement of the joint agreement, so I had the opportunity to see at first hand the really dramatic improvement in confidence since the agreement was signed.

Private home purchase had increased by 50 per cent., as had office space—both undeniable signs of increasing confidence. The stock exchange had recovered, the first elections for the Legislative Council had gone well, and all seemed to agree that the elected councillors were of very high calibre. That was a good start to the long and difficult period of adjustment that leads to 1997.

Confidence remains good, but brittle. People are naturally touchy. For example, the remarks of Xu Jia Tun of the New China News Agency were taken as an ominous sign that the PRC meant to interfere in the development of democracy in Hong Kong. Ji Pengfei, the director of the states council's Hong Kong and Macao Affairs Office, tried to allay fears during his visit, but not with great success. I am sure that such incidents will repeat themselves and try the nerves of the public many times before the takeover. I agree with the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) that we must not say anything tonight that will disturb confidence.

In debating the order—and a very impressive debate it was—the new Legislative Council brought to the surface all the worries that go with the practical formulation of even a small part of the agreement. This will happen time and again between now and 1997. The new Legislative Council will have a great responsibility in leading the people of Hong Kong through some troubled and emotive waters.

The council is extremely lucky, at this vital stage in its development, to have Miss Lydia Dunn in the all-important role of senior Unofficial Member. Her letter to all hon. Members highlights the three points that we have been discussing — the acceptability of the BN(O) passport, the future of former service men, and the treatment of the ethnic minorities.

On the question of the acceptability of the BN(O) passport, there is plenty that the Government could and should do to make the passport more acceptable. However, we shall have to exercise patience, for it cannot all be done at once. Clearly the Government must take every possible step to persuade foreign Governments to acknowledge its validity, but they cannot be expected to do so officially until the passport is in being so that they can see the exact form that it takes.

I see no reason why the 70 countries that already grant visa exemption should reject the passport. The unofficial assurance that the Government have obtained from Australia, America, Germany and so on, are as much as we can expect at this stage.

The British Government can act straight away by taking the lead in showing their willingness to make the entry of Hong Kong citizens into this country as simple as possible. I do not apologise for repeating what has already been said about the difficulties of the Hong Kong people when trying easily to come into this country. They are great travellers. There are more than 1 million international departures from Hong Kong every year.

I must tell my hon. and learned Friend that one of the main sources of friction between Hong Kong and Britain is, and has been for many years, the treatment of Hong Kong citizens at British airports. It does not seem to improve, whatever protests we make. I press the Home Office to examine present practice carefully, and to get it improved well before we come to the problem of dealing with the new passports.

As the PRC, understandably, will not countenance a passport issued by a colonial power granting the right of abode in Hong Kong, it appears that achieving the same effect by reference to the identity card is as good a solution as any. Negotiations leading to that solution were a very reassuring example to the people of Hong Kong that the joint liaison committee really does work. It was effective in tackling a practical problem that affects the daily lives of the people.

The plan to issue the first BN(O) passports in 1987 is entirely sensible as that provides plenty of time to establish the passport's validity before the transfer of power. The Minister appears to assume that a certificate of entry, in addition to a passport, is something that everybody will naturally understand to be necessary. He will have to explain that more convincingly than he has done so far to persuade the people of Hong Kong or me that that is so. At present, it is a very tiresome chore.

I refer my hon. and learned Friend to the speech of Mr. Swayne and others in the Legislative Council debate. I should like to hear his answer to the question put by Mr. Howard Young, who is not only a Legislative Councillor but the managing director of Swire Travel, about how it is possible for the American Government to issue free of charge visas of indefinite validity, while the Hong Kong Government charge £12.

On the question of the volunteer prisoners of war, I entirely support my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South, who is knowledgeable on this subject. It could no doubt be argued with legal precision that that would be illogical, that it would set a precedent, and so on. But when Governments make illogical exceptions of that sort, they often show themselves to be not only kindly but wise. The problem gets smaller as the numbers get less. The procedural difficulties cannot be very great. Where there is a will there is a way. It seems to me that this is the kind of action that will show the people of Hong Kong that if Her Majesty's Government can help they will do so.

The unanimous recommendation of the Legislative Council regarding ethnic minorities is a more difficult problem for the Government. I have listened to the arguments of their representatives many time and I sympathise with them. Moreover, I realise that if the outcome of the joint agreement is as we hope, very few members of the minority are likely to take advantage of their right of abode in Britain. Taking all that into account, I still appreciate the difficulty facing the Minister. He has to deal with thousands of claims from all over the world and they all think that they have justified reasons for a right of abode in Britain. He has a difficult task. All I ask is that he gives the matter serious consideration because people feel strongly about it and it is a problem which cannot be shrugged off.

Members of the Legislative Council will be disappointed with the outcome of this debate. Despite the unanimity of their views on the three issues, they will not receive the firm undertaking on all three subjects they had hoped for. However, I ask them not to assume or to say that their views have been ignored or scorned on this or any future occasion. That would be counter-productive.

[Sir Paul Bryan]

They have many friends in the House and in the other place who will continue to fight their case. We are their allies, not their opponents.

The Government are not unsympathetic to Hong Kong. I am proud of the persistent and untiring efforts of the Government at the highest level, especially over the past four years, which have produced a far more promising long-term outlook for the territory than many of us had hoped. I assure the Legislative Council that their friends here will not let up on their efforts on behalf of the people of Hong Kong.

8.52 pm

Mr. Paddy Ashdown (Yeovil): I have listened to the comments of the hon. Member for Boothferry (Sir P. Bryan) with great attention and I am able to agree with many, if not all, of them. In previous discussions about Hong Kong I have expressed my grave reservations about the way in which the British Government have handled the matter of nationality for the people of Hong Kong, in particular the status and the future of BDTC passport holders. I believe that we have a moral responsibility towards BDTC passport holders which was not adequately fulfilled by Britain.

I regret to say that the House of Commons, which has built its reputation on its fearless championing of the causes of those who are oppressed or dispossessed — particularly on an international basis — has on this occasion all too easily been viewed as part of the conspiracy to sweep some of the issues under the carpet. There has been an all too cosy cross-party agreement on some of the issues where it would have served the people of Hong Kong better if there had been a more strenuous debate.

I appreciate that those are uncomfortable words with which, no doubt, many hon. Members will disagree. However, the sentiments that I have expressed are not only my own; they are also widely, and in my view justifiably, held in Hong Kong itself. We must recognise the dissatisfaction and concern about this issue in Hong Kong. That point was made in the report of the assessment office on the Anglo-Chinese agreement. The assessment team found that on nationality

"most of those who commented . . . did so in adverse or critical terms . . . There was a widely shared hope that the British Government and Parliament may find a way of assurance for BDTCs in coming years".

It is within that context that we now hold the debate.

I have no doubt that the Minister will be able to provide, as he has already suggested, thousands of careful reasons for not taking the action that his heart and our sense of justice require. Those reasons will, no doubt, be based on premises and previous practices. However, there have been no premises for the situation in which we find ourselves. Britain has handed countries over to self-government but has never handed over an entire people lock, stock and barrel to another Government. Moreover, many of those inhabitants fled from that Government in fear and in the hope of freedom. I make no comment about the present state of the PRC Government. We know that there are many moves in that Government which must be welcome and reassuring. I merely state the fact that many people have fled from a previous tyranny. We are facing a new problem where old practices do not apply and should not be applied. If the Minister recognises nothing else I hope that he will recognise that.

It must be recognised that decisions being made today will be made against a background of cynicism towards Britain and a fear for the future of Hong Kong. We do not want to encourage that, but we should recognise that half the population of Hong Kong are very young and have their whole future to look forward to. Indeed, half of them are under 35 years of age. More importantly, many are immigrants who have known statelessness and the fear of being a refugee.

Mr. Paul Marland (Gloucestershire, West): Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Ashdown: I would prefer not to. I am sure the hon. Gentleman will be called. I ask him to forgive me.

What the Minister decides today will be of special importance and will be taken as a mark of Britain's seriousness towards achieving an equitable solution in Hong Kong. There is already a prevailing feeling in the colony, which may be justified or not, that Britain simply wants to walk away from the problem with the minimum of inconvenience. If that feeling is untrue we can show it by the decisions that we take today and that the Minister will take in due course.

The British Government are offering two forms of "citizenship". I put the word citizenship in inverted commas. There is British national (overseas) status and British overseas citizenship status. Bluntly, and discarding euphemism, they are merely two different names for the same thing. They both describe a British nationality that carries no right of abode anywhere, cannot be passed on to the children except in limited circumstances, and is little more than a travel facility. The hon. Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) mentioned in his excellent speech the contrary situation in Macao in the way in which the Portuguese are treating their people in similar circumstances. He said, and it is right to point out, that at exactly the same time as the people in Hong Kong may be apprehensive about the approach of 1997, they will be able to look 40 or 50 miles across the bay to 80,000 people who have the right to enter Britain which is denied to Britain's own nationals in Hong Kong. It is scarcely surprising that the issue is giving rise to strong feelings.

I do not claim that Britain can or could provide a home or even a right to work for all BDTC passport holders in Hong Kong. However, there are a limited number of assurances that we can provide in the present circumstances. We should be prepared to use section 4 (5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 in a liberal manner. That section allowed those who have worked in a paid or unpaid capacity for the British Government to register as British citizens at the discretion of the Home Secretary.

At present, it appears — I ask the Minister to comment on this, as we had a small exchange about it earlier—that no one is being granted British citizenship under this section in case it increases the insecurity. This is simply inadequate and, as it creates insecurity in those who now assist us in the running of Hong Kong, it is counter-productive as well. The Home Secretary should be prepared now to set out his criteria for granting citizenship under this section and to put the provisions into operation as soon as possible.

In view of the importance of the decisions that the Home Secretary will be taking, there should be a right of appeal against those decisions. If he cannot do this, I ask him to look especially at the position of former service men. There are a mere 400 of them and the Government should make it clear that they will give sympathetic consideration to applicants from this group. To disown a brave and loyal people who deserve our gratitude, or to show indifference towards them, is morally wrong and, as importantly, a symbol of our lack of concern in Hong Kong.

I move on to the status of the BN(O) passport. On the day of our last debate on this subject, I understand that the Hong Kong Government gave assurances that BDTC passports in the future, and those of the special administrative region, should state, albeit indirectly, the holder's right of abode in Hong Kong. Doubts remain over this and it is essential that the Government take action to ensure that the new passport is as fully acceptable as present BDTC passports are for foreign travel. We were all reassured by what the Minister had to say about the progress of those negotiations. I hope that he will carry them through with full energy, and take such opportunities as he can to report progress to the House. If he does not, I hope that he will be questioned by hon. Members about the progress.

As to entry into the United Kingdom by people from Hong Kong, they must be given assurances that the new BN(O) passports will give freedom of entry for visits. At best, this should be operative for the period of validity of the passport and at the very least for a specified period. We should understand the position of Hong Kong well, because Hong Kong survives, as Britain always has, on its trading capacity. The future of the colony will be terribly threatened if international contacts are in any way inhibited by the status of the new passport. This matter goes into the heart of the survival of Hong Kong itself, and it is up to the British Government to take action to make sure that their rhetoric about wanting a secure future for the colony is honoured by their action. I was reassured to discover that the Minister is thinking seriously about this.

The greatest issue in this debate is the position of the minorities. There are about 10,000 BDTC passport holders in Hong Kong who are not ethnically Chinese and who, therefore, unlike the vast majority, are not entitled to Chinese nationality. Many of these have been in Hong Kong under British rule for many generations. One family arrived with the British in 1842 and set up the first ferry service between the mainland and the island. Nearly all have served Britain over the years in one capacity or another. The Minister's proposals will, quite simply, leave these people stateless.

The Minister is frowning, so I shall describe their situation. They will have a citizenship for one country —Britain—in which they are not entitled to a right of abode, and they will have a right of abode in another country — China — in which they will not have citizenship. I ask any hon. Member how he would feel if, for example, he had the citizenship of Britain but was not entitled to live here but was entitled to live in France while not having citizenship, even in the stability of the European position. We are thrusting 10,000 people into a hybrid insecure position while their future is worrying and somewhat opaque.

I am not in any way undermining the ability, strength and determination of the Chinese Government to honour their agreement. However, some of the rights enshrined in the Chinese national status are not honoured, and that must worry people living in Hong Kong. The future is unclear and it would be an abandonment of Britain's right to be called a civilised nation if we did not do something to correct this. We cannot provide assurances into the distant future, but we must provide some for the interim period between now and the time when we see how the new arrangements for Hong Kong are developing.

The non-ethnic Chinese do not wish to flood into Britain — why should they? In most cases they run highly successful businesses in Hong Kong and are happy. However, they want the right of abode somewhere and feel justifiably aggrieved that they are being denied it. They should be granted full British citizenship. There are few enough of them, and it would be disgraceful to leave them out in the cold or in a precarious position for our convenience.

There is no point in the Minister saying that this would encourage others, for the Hong Kong Chinese population agreed that the minorities should be regarded as a special case.

The matter of Vietnamese refugees was mentioned by other right hon. and hon. Members. In the past, I have spoken in strong terms about the conditions of the Vietnamese refugees. I visited the refugee camps in Hong Kong just before Christmas and I found a vast improvement in the conditions under which they are held. However, the existence of the camps is an affront. The refugees' only crime has been to flee from tyranny to what they believed to be freedom. We can imagine their anger at finding themselves, as a consequence, incarcerated in barbed wire camps. However humane the inner regimes of those camps, they are still barbed wire camps.

We cannot solve the problem immediately, but it is up to Britain, as several hon. Members have already said, to take a lead in resettling those unfortunate people. I hope that the Minister will give the assurance that it is the Government's policy to solve the problem before 1997.

9.5 pm

Mr. Robert Adley (Christchurch): I congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on your excellent timing in returning just in time to call me. However, this is a serious debate. I was reminded of its seriousness for the people of Hong Kong by the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown), who spoke yesterday about the problems of his constituents. Even the hon. Gentleman would agree that those problems pale into insignificance beside the fears of the people of Hong Kong. In some ways their fears are unreal, but in certain instances, as has been mentioned already this evening, they are whipped up and generated by a variety of people for their own ends.

The hon. Member for Yeovil said that the people of Hong Kong are being handed over to China. We must recognise that that is inaccurate. Hong Kong is being returned to China. Unless we understand the historic context within which the British-Chinese agreement has been reached, we are in danger of making a range of allegations, assertions and assumptions that do nothing but harm to the prospects of the Hong Kong people.

I am glad to be following my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South (Sir P. Blaker) and my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Sir P. Bryan), as I always seem to be doing in discussions about Hong Kong. I echo the crucial point that they made. The agreement is an historic one. The future of the people of Hong Kong does not depend on the immigration legislation of this

[Mr. Robert Adley]

House. It depends on the willingness and ability of the British and Chinese Governments to do what they can to maintain stability and prosperity in Hong Kong. I reject the use of such phrases as "if all else fails" and "fallback position". They are not only pessimistic but deeply offensive to the Government of the People's Republic of China. Each time that people comment about the need for the people of Hong Kong to have a "fallback position" that demonstrates implicitly not only our mistrust of the willingness and ability of the parties to the agreement to make it stick, but our mistrust of the motives of the Government of the People's Republic of China.

I echo strongly the words of my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South. There is no evidence to suggest that the Chinese Government have anything but the strongest desire to ensure that the agreement works. It is vital that the people of Hong Kong receive the message of the House that our first priority is to do everything that we can to ensure that the agreement sticks and works. That is our primary responsibility and it is the best guarantee that we can give to the people of Hong Kong of a secure future in the land of their birth and abode.

The hon. Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) referred to the excellent letter from my old friend Hari Harilela. Page 3 of his letter states:

"Very few ethnic Indian BDTCs would want to leave Hong Kong under the present circumstances."

I am sure that that is true. We are not dealing here with what I might paraphrase as a Bangladeshi immigration-type debate, because we are not dealing with large numbers of people who deliberately want to come to this country to better themselves. I am thus delighted to see my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, on the Front Bench. This is not a normal immigration debate.

If we were merely talking about numbers I would have no objection to welcoming with open arms large numbers of the citizens of Hong Kong who might wish to come and take up permanent abode in this country. I say that in the light of a rather aggravating and unpleasant conversation on this subject that I had with one of my constituents as recently as last Friday evening. But that is not the proposition that we are discussing. Even to discuss the matter in such terms is to set the debate's context incorrectly.

I hope that we recognise that we have priorities this evening other than to discuss the position as though it were an ordinary immigration debate.

There is a direct conflict between the ambition to maintain stability in Hong Kong and the demand of people in Hong Kong to have the right to live in the United Kingdom. Fundamental change in Hong Kong was always inevitable. Now it is on the horizon. We must now deal with the obstacles to the maintenance of stability.

I believe that the hon. Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) used the phrase a "few colonial types". There are a "few colonial types" in Hong Kong, deliberately seeking to stir up discontent in Hong Kong, whose ambition is to sow dissent between Britain and China to achieve their rather weird objectives. Such people are not restricted solely to ex-colonial types, as he rather quaintly put it.

In the previous Hong Kong debate I intervened in the speech of the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Sir R. Johnston) and mentioned the lovely lady, Miss Emily Lau, who shelters behind the comfort of a British passport through her husband to make a series of innuendos from her position as a journalist on the Far East Economic Review. They provide a classic example of the misuse of a journalist's position not to report news but to put forward one's own political views.

We in this House have an obligation to point out to the people of Hong Kong that there are some people—few — who for their own political motivations want the agreement to fail. It is essential that we point out who they are and what they are doing.

I do not care whether the editor of the Far East Economic Review, who refused to publish my letter when I wrote to him, proceeds to attack me in his column about a letter that he has not published. People in the far east last week said to me, "What on earth was Derek Davies going on about attacking you in his article?" Not surprisingly, Mr. Davies had forgotten that if he refused to publish my letter and then attacked me for what I said in it, the people who read his magazine might be a little confused. I can take his criticism lightly. I am amused at being accused of McCarthyite tactics and such allegations, but Mr. Davies is not worth wasting time on and I do not propose to do so.

I intervened in the speech of my hon. and learned Friend to ask about the position of the non-Chinese ethnic minorities in so far as they face the possibility of citizenship of the People's Republic of China. It would be unfair in the short time available to read the question that I posed to and the answer that I received yesterday from my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I refer all hon. Members to it.

First, it is wrong to assume that the ethnic minorities would be stateless. I reject that proposition, which was put forward by the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) and others. Secondly, it is wrong to assume that their only alternative to staying in Hong Kong is citizenship of, and the right of abode in, this country. The People's Republic of China is reacquiring Hong Kong. It is to it that the British people and Parliament properly have turned and should continue to turn to see what alternative citizenship might be available to those people.

When my hon. and learned Friend is winding up this debate, I should like to hear him say that, as events unfold in the months and years ahead, this option will be pursued with the Chinese Government, and that information on it will be made available regularly and openly to the people in Hong Kong who might be involved. I asked my hon. and learned Friend about that before. It would do great credit to the Government of the People's Republic of China if they opened their minds very broadly to the fact that non-Chinese might want to be entitled to citizenship of the People's Republic after this agreement comes into force.

Our responsibility is clear, and it is not just a responsibility to the rich and powerful people in Hong Kong, many of whom already have the right of access to the United Kingdom. We have a responsibility to the millions of Hong Kong citizens who have neither the desire nor the intention ever to come within thousands of miles of the United Kingdom. If they are to have a secure future, they have one overriding priority, and that is to see that the agreement between our two Governments works and that nothing is said or done that so aggravates and annoys either of the parties to the agreement that there might be a wish to wonder whether it is all worthwhile.

I agree with my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South that the British-Chinese agreement is a remarkable one. Let us spend a little less time worrying about what will happen if it goes wrong and a little more time making sure that it goes right.

9.16 pm

Mr. Tom Pendry (Stalybridge and Hyde): This is too important a debate to be dealt with in just over two and a half hours. That fact was mentioned by my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs). Therefore, I will endeavour to be brief.

I must declare an interest, because I lived for some 18 months in Hong Kong. That is not as long as some of my hon. Friends lived there, but as a former middleweight boxing champion of Hong Kong perhaps I should again do battle for it on this occasion. Perhaps the only thing on which I agree—not generally but in this debate—with the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) is that it would be churlish and stupid in the extreme for any hon. Member to say that the Foreign Secretary and his team did not conclude by the joint agreement a mighty achievement, because it was a mighty achievement by any standard. I start from that premise, and I do not want to do anything to undermine that agreement.

On 5 December 1984 the Foreign Secretary said:

"It would be too much to expect that this document"—— that is, the draft agreement—

"which has emerged from extremely complex and sometimes difficult negotiations, could provide the whole answer to every problem".—[Official Report, 5 December 1984; Vol. 69, c. 397.]

I certainly concur with that. We are debating the order in that context. Certainly it is far from perfect. To their credit, the Government have said that they will withdraw and revise the order if necessary to take account of the views of hon. Members and of their Lordships in another place and, of course, the views of the people of Hong Kong. In the Official Report of the other place on 19 February last year, Baroness Young said just that. She said that this was an "order with green edges" and that, if necessary, the Government would withdraw and revise it.

We know that on one important aspect at least there is no doubt that the people of Hong Kong speak with one loud voice, and that is on the problem of the inequities contained in the nationality provisions and their effects on a relatively small number of people in the colony, the non-Chinese ethnics. I refer to a small number deliberately, because Home Office Ministers in particular become paranoid when one talks about large numbers of potential immigrants. We are talking about 10,000 or so. The Minister of State is well aware that it is rare for both the Official and Unofficial Members of the Legislative Council ever to reach a unanimous agreement, but they did so by means of the resolution that was referred to by a number of hon. Members.

The three points that are contained in the resolution have been agreed by both the Official and the Unofficial Members of the Legislative Council. Those who follow Hong Kong affairs know that this is very rare. I was in Hong Kong in October, not as a guest of the Government but because I was on my way to Australia as a member of a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association delegation. I spent about 10 days in the colony. I was told that these modest demands were the least that the British Government could accept.

I have already praised the members of the joint declaration and its authors. However, what is being advanced by both the non-elected and the elected representatives of the Legislative Council will in no way —I am sure that the hon. Member for Christchurch agrees with me — undermine that declaration. No negotiations are required. It is a British problem. That is acknowledged by the Chinese. I refer those hon. Members who can read Chinese to the pro-Communist Chinese newspaper Wan Wei Po. In a recent editorial, it makes it very clear that this is a British problem. It says:

"To deal with this question, one cannot cut adrift history. One should not depart from reality. These people have always held British passports. If the result of these several changes causes them to lose their nationality, then, to them, this would be hard to accept."

I return to the numbers game. Of the 10,000 or so non-Chinese ethnics, most of whom are members of the Indian community, very few intend to leave Hong Kong. However, if they did leave Hong Kong, what an enterprising lot they would be. They would fit very neatly indeed into the mould that the Prime Minister is for ever saying we should have in British industry. However, they do not wish to depart from the spirit of the joint declaration. They helped to build Hong Kong into the very strong economic unit that it is today. When the Minister replies to the debate, I hope that he will make it clear how the ethnic Chinese can become Chinese nationals. That point is not clear to me.

Article 6 of the Chinese nationality law state:

"any person who is born in China whose parents are stateless or of uncertain nationality should have settled in China as Chinese nationals".

These people are not stateless. They have British National (Overseas) passports. They are not of uncertain nationality, so how do they qualify? Article 7 says:

"Aliens or stateless persons who are willing to abide by China's constitutions and laws may acquire Chinese nationality upon approval of their applications, provided that
(i) they are close relatives to Chinese nationals, or
(ii) they have settled in China, or
(iii) they have other legitimate reasons."

Article 14 says:

"The acquisition, renunciation or restoration of Chinese nationality shall go through the formality of application".

It is true that it is grace and favour. Nobody can be certain about it, so clearly it is a uniquely British problem.

It is as much a British problem as the fate of those who lived in Gibraltar or in the Falkland Islands when the British Government took a decision that was not very different from the one that they are taking now. These people, or their ancestors, went to Hong Kong, as was made clear by my hon. Friend the Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) because it was part of the British empire. As my hon. Friend said, they served the Crown loyally as soldiers, policemen and civil servants. They expected to be treated then, as now, by the British in the way in which the British were accustomed, so we are told, to deal with those who went to the colonies. I do not have time to dwell upon that point, because I might disagree with certain right hon. and hon. Members, especially Conservative Members, about it. I do not wish to dwell, because of the time, either, upon the fate of the Vietnamese refugees in this country, or former service men. I am sure that other hon. Members will do so.

I wish to conclude with someting that is a little flowery, in line with the words that I have used about the colonies. It is from a recent editorial in the Hong Kong Standard:

[Mr. Tom Pendry]

"The sun has long set upon the British Empire. What remains to be seen is whether an obligation going back 150 years and honour have sunk below the distant mountains."

I hope that at the end of this debate it will be clear that honour and obligation will remain intact as far as this country is concerned. It is not just the non-Chinese ethnics that we are talking about; it is the entire people of the colony of Hong Kong who believe that this group of people is being wronged by this Government.

It is good that this is a draft order and that we can alter it. We plead that the Government will heed this message from hon. Members who feel strongly about Hong Kong and especially about its minority groups, and will amend the order before too long.

9.26 pm

Mr. James Couchman (Gillingham): I rise with some humility after the eloquent and deeply knowledgeable speeches by right hon. and hon. Members who know Hong Kong far better than I. It is nine months since the Hong Kong Act received the Royal Assent and about a year since it went through the House in record time. As the Bill went through its various stages, great concern was expressed about nationality, particularly the vexed question of the transfer of British nationality by way of BDTC to the new BN(O) nationality. Since the passage of the Bill, there seem to have been a number of hiccoughs in the morale of the people of Hong Kong. The way in which we deal with the question of nationality is most crucial for morale in the colony at present. The arrangements which we make when the order is confirmed and comes to us as a firm order will be absolutely vital in determining the way in which the passage towards 1997 continues.

It is clear from the speeches made during the LegCo debate on 4 December that there was a great deal of concern about the three questions mentioned so frequently tonight: the integrity of the BN(O) passport, which seems to be on the way to being resolved in the joint discussions with the Chinese; the ex-service men so eloquently referred to by my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South (Sir P. Blaker); and the non-Chinese ethnic minorities.

There is a clear cynicism about the status and currency of British overseas citizenship, and with some reason. Whether this somewhat nebulous concept has any validity has to be proved to us by the Government. The greatest concern in this regard is the position of the succeeding generations of the non-Chinese ethnic minorities, about which so much has been said this evening. I would like to add to the plea that a particular concession be granted to the ex-service men. Those who have served king and country in this way have every right to our most sympathetic consideration, and I am sure that those words are unlikely to fall on deaf ears.

I do not want to go over ground which has been covered very well throughout the debate. [Interruption.] Nor have I time in any case, as I am being reminded by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) sitting below me. I believe that there should be no question about granting the right of abode in the United Kingdom to the ex-service men.

That brings me to the question of the non-Chinese ethnic minorities, some 10,000 people, mostly Indian. They or their forebears came to Hong Kong, for the most part, before India received its independence and they have served Britain in the colony for many years. As we have already been told by several right hon. and hon. Gentlemen, very few of these people would actually wish to come to live in the United Kingdom at present, but it is incumbent on Britain to look at their claims with due consideration and sympathy, for at several times during their lives it is quite likely that they have had a right of abode here. It would be churlish if we forgot that.

It also seems that the statelessness which the draft order seeks to avoid could result from our treatment of the matter. These people have no chance of emigrating to India or Pakistan because they have not lived there for many years. Indeed, few speak the language, and in any case some would return to Pakistan as Hindus, which would be a particularly unattractive prospect. We have a responsibility to the minorities which is special and apart from our responsibilities for the vast majority of Hong Kong people who are ethnically Chinese. The small minority would have almost no impact on our general immigration policy, and I feel certain that the necessary steps can be taken — there is plenty of time — to encompass their desire for British citizenship as opposed to BN(O) or BOC status within the regulation when it is drawn.

Several hon. Members have said that Hong Kong is in a unique position. It is unique in the history of decolonisation. We are handing it back to the Chinese, as my hon. Friend the Member for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) said. It behoves the House and the Government to pay special attention to the wants of two small minorities— the ex-service men and the non-Chinese ethnic minority.

9.31 pm

Dr. John Marek (Wrexham): I agree completely with the hon. Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman), and wish to express my anxiety about the draft Order in Council. It is not right and the Government need to change it before it is generally acceptable, most importantly in Hong Kong, and in the House. It is a pity that the Front Bench spokesmen were not spokesmen on foreign affairs —I say that with no disrespect to the Minister or my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs)— because we are talking not about the immigration policy of Britain, but about the future of Hong Kong. Although at present Hong Kong has the status of a colony of the United Kingdom, it is governed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and we must always have that at the front of our minds. Indeed, that is obvious to the people of Hong Kong.

My hon. Friend the Member for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mr. Hogg) and I paid a visit to Hong Kong earlier this year, and we were struck by the knowledge that all sections of society had of the matter, and by their feeling that the United Kingdom had completed a deal with the People's Republic of China which was the best deal in the circumstances, and that it now wished to wash its hands and let the matter go quietly away. I do not think that that is true, and no hon. Member will wish that to happen. If that is the case, we must consider what is best for a smooth transition so that the people of Hong Kong can continue to prosper, and life can go on as they wish it to do. We must not worry about judging matters in line with our general policy on immigration, as the Minister does.

Although the agreement was the best one available, it was not widely welcomed by the people of Hong Kong.

who are resigned to the fact that it has been made and that they must make it work. They may come positively to enthuse about it in years to come, but they are not doing so now.

This is an important subject, and it is a pity that we have only two and a half hours of debate on it. The legislative council decision was a unanimous one which was supported by the unofficial members and by the Government members. It must be taken seriously by this House and the Government.

If I may deal with the service men, there are 100 or 400 —it does not matter what the number is. I am sure that the Government, if they wanted to, could come to some agreement on what the status of service men should be and, if they want the right of abode in this country, they should be able to have it. It is not a question of whether 100 or 400 might be acceptable. Both numbers are very small.

With regard to the problem of the ethnic minorities, I will not repeat the points which have been made by other hon. Members. There is great concern in Hong Kong— and it will grow unless the House does something about it — about the effective statelessness of the ethnic minorities if nothing is done about their status. I realise that the Government have tried to put together a package which will accommodate the wishes of the ethnic minorities, but they have not succeeded. It is the continuing stability and prosperity of Hong Kong which is important. The Government must try again. The only answer in my view is to give the minorities, if they want it and wish to take it up, the right of abode in this country. If we get things right in Hong Kong, no one will want to come to this country in any case — perhaps a few hundred at the most. If we get things wrong, the ethnic minorities will have as a fallback position the assurance that they have somewhere to go and somewhere they can call their home. I confidently say that it is a right of abode which would be used by no more than perhaps a few hundred people.

Then there is the question of entry into the United Kingdom for Hong Kong people of Chinese origin. I came back from Hong Kong a few days ago through Gatwick airport. Only two windows were open for the passengers on the flight, who were mainly Chinese. The two queues were of seventy or eighty people each. I watched for about half an hour. Everyone had to wait a minute and a half or two minutes. The details were handled expeditiously. However, if 70 or 80 people had been in each line, I imagine that it would have been about two hours before the last person passed through immigration — hardly something to get excited about when entering the United Kingdom.

One young boy appeared not to have his papers in order, he was led away fairly early and I did not see him again. This has been called hassle, and so it is. We have to do something about it. People from Hong Kong who come to this country not to stay but on business, to visit friends or on holiday should be able to do so without having to go through many formalities and feeling that they are being hassled. I know that it is dangerous to generalise on the basis of just one visit, but this has been not only my evidence but that of other people. Something needs to be done about it. I support fully the legislative council decision to put into the passport the right of entry to the United Kingdom. That would be straightforward.

In this issue it is not right for the Government or Parliament to take all the decisions without paying attention to what might happen after the next general election or the one after that. We have until 1997. I suggest that the Government would be wise to discuss the matter with my hon. Friends on the Front Bench and see whether some common agreement might be attained. I am sure that my right hon. and hon. Friends would be more than happy to do this. Perhaps we can have a bipartisan policy. We are all on the same side. We want Hong Kong to prosper, and we want there to be stability in Hong Kong. We want the changeover in 1997 to go as smoothly and as quietly as possible. If the Government pay attention to what has been said in the debate, I am sure that that will happen.

9.40 pm

Mr. Andrew Rowe (Mid-Kent): I am confident that the people of Hong Kong and hon. Members would prefer to listen to the Minister than to me, so I shall be brief. I feel strongly that we have a duty to take care of the non-Chinese ethnic minority in Hong Kong. They have made their money, created their lives and brought up their families in Hong Kong. They owe their prosperity to Hong Kong. It would be wrong, when the future of Hong Kong seems to be moving more brightly than expected, and when things are getting better, to say to them that the need for a fallback position is so urgent and imperative that we should create it now. We should see whether the Chinese will move towards a clearer statement of the right of those people to Chinese citizenship in 1997 before we feel bound to take any action.

I have no way of knowing what electoral fortune will bring, but I hope that I shall still represent Mid-Kent in 1997. If I do, I shall certainly bring the issue to the attention of the Government of that day. If the non-Chinese ethnic minority are in danger of being harassed or persecuted, I shall say that we should pick up the obligation that we have incurred over the centuries. That will be the time to act, and I hope that we shall do so.

9.42 pm

Dr. Jeremy Bray (Motherwell, South): Like all hon. Members, I support the three proposals by the Legislative Council in Hong Kong. I spent some childhood years as part of a tiny ethnic minority in inland China as well as in Hong Kong. We were happy there, but I am sure that the safety valve that we had increased the harmony among the foreigners who worked to contribute to China.

The order is important for current political reasons within Hong Kong and for its relations with Britain and China. It is necessary to build substance into the joint declaration and the British and Chinese memoranda which it contains. That needs the support and confidence of China and, most important, of the people of Hong Kong.

The changes will cause little difficulty in Britain, but if we are half-hearted in our commitment to the agreement, that will encourage China to be half-hearted in fulfilling its more important commitments. It will lead the people of Hong Kong now — not in 1997 — to doubt the substance of the agreement, particularly about the positive contribution that they have to make to the future running of the special administrative region. The vital building up and the capacity of Hong Kong's peoples to look after the special administrative region will be set back at a critical stage. We must do everything that we can to build the people of Hong Kong's confidence and that of their elected representatives, so that they can speak and expect to be listened to by the sovereign power.

[Dr. Jeremy Bray]

Britain exercises that power today. Tomorrow it will be exercised by China. To concede the point will cost Britain little, but it will count for much in Hong Kong and, through Hong Kong, in our relations with China.

The Minister has been far from hostile. I think that he will consider further the views expressed in the House. I hope that he can be more positive in his acceptance of our arguments.

9.45 pm

Mr. Ivan Lawrence (Burton): The debate on the treatment of non-ethnic Chinese has swung between two points of view. One is that that group including prisoners of war and service men should be allowed to become full British nationals but the Government have proposed that those groups should not be allowed in because we will upset the Chinese Government by not trusting their promises and it may open a gate to 3 million people who want to come in.

In my last half minute may I suggest a middle way—to treat applications for full citizenship on a case-by-case basis and on their merits. This is precisely the approach that the Government have adopted to stateless British citizens who no longer opt for citizenship of China. It is also the approach that is covered by section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 and exercised at the discretion of the Home Secretary.

If our hopes about the future of Hong Kong are fulfilled and China, as we hope and expect, honours its obligations, few people will be making applications. The procedural problems in judging each case on its merits would then not arise. I ask my hon. and learned Friend who has listened to this debate on behalf of the Government to take this suggestion of the middle way.

9.47 pm

Mr. Dubs: I have confined myself to two or three minutes because I wanted to give as many hon. Members as possible the chance to have their say, although I realise that there is still much to be said.

There has been much criticism of the Order in Council regarding passports and their acceptability in Britain and other countries. The position of prisoners of war and the position of the ethnic minorities in Hong Kong. I believe that the overwhelming opinion of the House is to ask the Minister to look at all this again.

Whatever the Minister decides when the Order in Council comes back to use the Labour party, when next in government, will certainly look at it again. May I remind the Minister that the Labour party is committed to the repeal of the Immigration Act 1971 and the repeal of the British Nationality Act 1981. We would replace both of those measures with non-discriminatory legislation. In that context we would sympathetically review the claims of the ethnic minorities as well as claims from other groups in Hong Kong and elsewhere. We would thus arrive at a policy of nationality and immigration which is just and honourable.

The least the House can do is to ask the Minister to look at the claims of these people as a Labour Government would do as soon as we had the chance. We shall press this to a vote tonight to keep pressure on the Minister. It may be that Government Back Benchers will support us in the Division Lobby. Whether they do or not, we wish to make it clear to the people of Hong Kong and the people of Britain that we are not satisfied with the Order in Council and we ask the Minister to think again before he brings it back to us.

9.53 pm

Mr. Waddington: This has been a good debate, although the beginning of the finale was rather odd. I do not propose to dwell on the undertaking just given by the hon. Gentleman. It is a most irresponsible undertaking, and it did not help the House to understand how the Labour party's proposals have anything to do with whether we should admit 400 or 500 ex-service men, or whether we should admit those in Hong Kong who are not of Chinese ethnic origin.

The House is indebted to the right hon. and hon. Members who have spoken, some with a close knowledge of Hong Kong, but all with concern for its future. We are here tonight because, during the passage of the Hong Kong Bill, the House asked that there should be a general debate on the draft Order in Council so that the Government could listen to and study various points of view before laying a final draft and asking the House's approval. I have listened, and we shall study.

I remind the House and listeners elsewhere that this is a debate on the Adjournment. It is not a motion asking for approval of the White Paper or of a draft Order in Council. I was therefore surprised, as no doubt were some other hon. Members, to hear talk before we came here to the effect that the Opposition were thinking of dividing the House. If that is their decision, it is odd, as the whole object of the exercise is to have an open and frank discussion so that everybody can say what he thinks about the White Paper and the draft order and we can go away and think about it.

The hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) asked about those who might be at risk after the Chinese takeover. I can only repeat that undertakings have been given to some people in Government service. As for the Vietnamese refugees, I remind the House that the number of people in the closed and open camps in Hong Kong has decreased by 2,500 in the past 12 months, which is moderately encouraging. The United Kingdom has recently agreed to take some 500 family reunion cases, in addition to those who are coming here anyhow under the orderly departure programme, and the ordinary family reunion criteria. We are working hard, and with some success, to persuade other countries to help more. We strongly hope that the problem of refugees in camps will be solved long before 1997.

I should like now to consider the endorsement in the passport to make it easier for people to come here and to get through immigration control. My right hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South (Sir P. Blaker) and my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Sir P. Bryan) and others mentioned this. It is not an easy problem. It would be odd to say that a person who does not have the right of abode here must not subject himself to immigration control like anyone else. I am aware of the worry expressed in Hong Kong, and I understand that they want to feel that they are receiving proper consideration. We shall think about the matter carefully, in case we can arrive at an acceptable formula.

As for the ex-service men, there have been pleas for us to use the power in section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981. Many have already made claims under that section, and many more will do so. We have always said that we will use the power most sparingly. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development was at great pains during the debate on the British Nationality Bill to make that clear. I must also make it absolutely plain that there are service men all over the world who gave great service to humanity during the war. All over the world there are service men who suffered confinement and deprivation. There are Sikhs, Gurkhas and countless others who might feel that they, too, have a claim to British citizenship if claims under section 4(5) are granted.

Mr. Ashdown: I shall ignore the fact that such people are not in the same circumstances as people in Hong Kong. Have any claims—not just those made by service men under section 4(5)—been granted?

Mr. Waddington: No, but a number of claims are under consideration, and of course they need careful consideration.

I should like to deal now with the question of non-Chinese British dependent territory citizens. I agree with my hon. Friends the Members for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) and for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) that to grant British citizenship now would certainly be looked at by some, particularly the Chinese, as a demonstration of a lack of confidence in the Sino-British agreement. Those who have been urging that course have frankly admitted that the real argument is that there should be an escape route for these people in case things go wrong.

Non-Chinese BDTCs can, like others, apply for BN(O) citizenship. If they do not apply, there are fallback provisions and the availability of BOC status until the middle of the next century. Such people would be able to apply to become Chinese nationals. I shall try to clarify matters for the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) and for my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent, who are concerned about that.

That matter has been discussed with the Chinese Government in the Sino-British joint liaison group. The Chinese Government have confirmed that non-Chinese who meet the legal requirements under the Chinese nationality law may apply for Chinese nationality and that such cases would be dealt with by the appropriate authorities. People will not, of course, be compelled to apply for Chinese nationality.

The right of abode provisions agreed with the Chinese Government provide the best possible guarantee that those people established in Hong Kong and their children can continue to live there. There is no other satisfactory or reliable way to provide people in Hong Kong with what they want—the right of abode there. In the unlikely event of any British nationals being forced to leave Hong Kong and having nowhere to go, we have made it clear that we would expect the Government of the day to consider sympathetically whether to admit such people on a case-by-case basis in the light of particular circumstances.

In trying to identify particular groups, one immediately runs into trouble. Of course, one never finds two groups in the same position. An examination of a group's composition shows that people within a particular group are not all in the same place.

That is a valuable reminder to the House that it is always possible for the Home Secretary to exercise his discretion to allow someone to enter the country and later qualify for British nationality if there is exceptional hardship. In the case of a minor, somebody under the age of majority, section 3(1) of the British Nationality Act 1981 allows the Home Secretary to grant British nationality as a matter of discretion.

Hon. Members are concerned that we should act as quickly as possible to ensure that the BN(O) passport, when it is issued, will be recognised by other countries and be as acceptable as the present BDTC passport. The Government will not forget the advice that has been given. That advice is in accordance with the plans already made by the Foreign Office in that regard. I was able to tell the House earlier that great strides have already been made, and it is very encouraging indeed that certain countries have made it plain that they are happy to acknowledge and recognise that passport.

The debate was an opportunity for the House to express its views. We have had a most interesting debate, and some of the matters mentioned go wider than the draft Order in Council. Of course, on the question of the endorsement of the passport, the Government cannot be indicted for not dealing with that in the order because that——

Mr. Norman Hogg (Cumbernauld and Kilsyth) rose in his place and claimed to move, That the question be now put.

Question, That the Question be now put, put and agreed to.

Question put accordingly, That this House do now adjourn:—

The House divided: Ayes 99, Noes 144.

Division No. 39] [10 pm

AYES

Adams, Allen (Paisley N)	Evans, John (St. Helens N)
Anderson, Donald	Ewing, Harry
Archer, Rt Hon Peter	Fatchett, Derek
Ashdown, Paddy	Faulds, Andrew
Atkinson, N. (Tottenham)	Fields, T. (L'pool Broad Gn)
Barnett, Guy	Fisher, Mark
Barron, Kevin	Flannery, Martin
Beckett, Mrs Margaret	Foster, Derek
Bell, Stuart	Foulkes, George
Benn, Rt Hon Tony	Freud, Clement
Bermingham, Gerald	George, Bruce
Blair, Anthony	Godman, Dr Norman
Boyes, Roland	Hamilton, James (M'well N)
Bray, Dr Jeremy	Hancock, Michael
Buchan, Norman	Haynes, Frank
Campbell-Savours, Dale	Hogg, N. (C'nauld & Kilsyth)
Canavan, Dennis	Holland, Stuart (Vauxhall)
Carlile, Alexander (Montg'y)	Home Robertson, John
Clarke, Thomas	Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Clay, Robert	Lamond, James
Clelland, David Gordon	Leighton, Ronald
Clwyd, Mrs Ann	Lewis, Terence (Worsley)
Cook, Frank (Stockton North)	Lloyd, Tony (Stretford)
Cook, Robin F. (Livingston)	McCartney, Hugh
Corbett, Robin	McDonald, Dr Oonagh
Cox, Thomas (Tooting)	McKay, Allen (Penistone)
Craigen, J. M.	Maclennan, Robert
Crowther, Stan	McNamara, Kevin
Davis, Terry (B'ham, H'ge H'l)	McWilliam, John
Deakins, Eric	Madden, Max
Dewar, Donald	Marek, Dr John
Dixon, Donald	Maxton, John
Dormand, Jack	Maynard, Miss Joan
Dubs, Alfred	Michie, William
Eadie, Alex	Mikardo, Ian

Millan, Rt Hon Bruce
Miller, Dr M. S. (E Kilbride)
Morris, Rt Hon J. (Aberavon)
Neillist, David
O'Brien, William
Park, George
Parry, Robert
Pendry, Tom
Pike, Peter
Randall, Stuart
Redmond, Martin.
Richardson, Ms Jo
Roberts, Ernest (Hackney N)
Robertson, George
Ross, Stephen (Isle of Wight)
Sheerman, Barry
Short, Ms Clare (Ladywood)
Silkin, Rt Hon J.
Skinner, Dennis
Smith, C. (Isl'ton S & F'bury)
Soley, Clive
Spearing, Nigel
Stott, Roger
Strang, Gavin
Wardell, Gareth (Gower)
Welsh, Michael
Winnick, David
Woodall, Alec
Wrigglesworth, Ian

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. Ron Davies and
Mr. Ray Powell.

NOES

Adley, Robert
Alexander, Richard
Amess, David
Ancram, Michael
Arnold, Tom
Ashby, David
Aspinwall, Jack
Baker, Rt Hon K. (Mole Vall'y)
Baker, Nicholas (Dorset N)
Batiste, Spencer
Bellingham, Henry
Best, Keith
Biggs-Davison, Sir John
Blackburn, John
Blaker, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Bonsor, Sir Nicholas
Boscawen, Hon Robert
Bottomley, Peter
Bottomley, Mrs Virginia
Bowden, Gerald (Dulwich)
Brandon-Bravo, Martin
Bright, Graham
Brinton, Tim
Brooke, Hon Peter
Brown, M. (Brigg & Cl'thpes)
Bruinvels, Peter
Bryan, Sir Paul
Buck, Sir Antony
Burt, Alistair
Butcher, John
Butterfill, John
Carttiss, Michael
Cash, William
Chope, Christopher
Coombs, Simon
Cope, John
Couchman, James
Cranborne, Viscount
Crouch, David
Currie, Mrs Edwina
Dickens, Geoffrey
Dover, Den
Dunn, Robert
Durant, Tony
Dykes, Hugh
Emery, Sir Peter
Evennett, David
Eyre, Sir Reginald
Fenner, Mrs Peggy
Forth, Eric
Fraser, Peter (Angus East)
Freeman, Roger
Gale, Roger
Galley, Roy
Gardiner, George (Reigate)
Garel-Jones, Tristan
Gow, Ian
Greenway, Harry
Gregory, Conal
Griffiths, Peter (Portsm'th N)
Ground, Patrick
Gummer, Rt Hon John S
Hanley, Jeremy
Harris, David
Haselhurst, Alan
Hawksley, Warren
Hayes, J.
Hayward, Robert
Heathcoat-Amory, David
Henderson, Barry
Hirst, Michael
Hogg, Hon Douglas (Gr'th'm)
Holland, Sir Philip (Gedling)
Howard, Michael
Howarth, Alan (Stratf'd-on-A)
Hunt, David (Wirral, W)
Hunter, Andrew
Jackson, Robert
Jessel, Toby
Johnson Smith, Sir Geoffrey
Jones, Robert (Herts W)
Kellett-Bowman, Mrs Elaine
Key, Robert
King, Roger (B'ham N'field)
King, Rt Hon Tom
Knight, Greg (Derby N)
Knowles, Michael
Lang, Ian
Lawler, Geoffrey
Lawrence, Ivan
Lennox-Boyd, Hon Mark
Lester, Jim
Lilley, Peter
Lloyd, Peter (Fareham)
Lord, Michael
Lyell, Nicholas
MacGregor, Rt Hon John
Maclean, David John
McQuarrie, Albert
Major, John
Malins, Humfrey
Maples, John
Marland, Paul
Marlow, Antony
Mather, Carol
Maxwell-Hyslop, Robin
Mayhew, Sir Patrick
Miller, Hal (B'grove)
Mitchell, David (Hants NW)
Morrison, Hon C. (Devizes)
Morrison, Hon P. (Chester)
Moynihan, Hon C.
Murphy, Christopher
Nelson, Anthony
Newton, Tony
Nicholls, Patrick
Norris, Steven
Oppenheim, Phillip
Osborn, Sir John
Ottaway, Richard
Page, Sir John (Harrow W)
Page, Richard (Herts SW)
Patten, Christopher (Bath)
Pollock, Alexander
Portillo, Michael
Powell, William (Corby)
Powley, John
Proctor, K. Harvey
Raffan, Keith
Renton, Tim
Rhodes James, Robert
Rhys Williams, Sir Brandon
Ridsdale, Sir Julian
Rowe, Andrew
Sainsbury, Hon Timothy
Shaw, Giles (Pudsey)
Sims, Roger
Skeet, Sir Trevor
Thompson, Donald (Calder V)
Thorne, Neil (Ilford S)
Thurnham, Peter
Waddington, David
Wells, Bowen (Hertford)
Young, Sir George (Acton)

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. Archie Hamilton and
Mr. Michael Neubert.

Question accordingly negatived.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland would confirm that the two orders are being taken together.

10.10 pm

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Tom King): I understand that it would be for the convenience of the House if the two orders were debated separately—[Interruption.] I hear an echo saying that that might make for better expedition. I am not sure that I endorse that sentiment.

In that light, I beg to move,

That the draft Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Continuance) (No. 3) Order 1985, which was laid before this House on 14th November, be approved.

This is the first debate on the Act in which I have had the privilege of speaking as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, and specifically on security issues. I should like to begin by restating clearly the Government's firm commitment to the eradication of terrorism and our determination to pursue that aim wherever it is appropriate. The news that the House will have heard today will be confirmation of our determination to pursue that aim as effectively as possible.

We are determined to do all that we can to create again in Northern Ireland the conditions for a peaceful, stable and prosperous Province in which all the people can pursue their political, economic and social goals free from fear.

The essence of our policy is to pursue suspected terrorists in respect of actual offences that they are believed to have committed, and to bring them to justice before the courts. As in the rest of the United Kingdom, the police naturally take the lead in the implementation of that policy, with the Armed Forces providing appropriate support on request, where that remains necessary. That approach has achieved a substantial reduction in violence since the mid-1970s and continues to offer the best hope for the future. But terrorism and the threat of violence continue to cast a shadow over the political and economic life of the Province, so our efforts to stamp it out must continue with unremitting vigour.

When the Act was last debated in this House in June, my predecessor reported that terrorist violence during the first six months of 1985 was running at a similar level to that for the same period in 1984. He also stated that the RUC had borne the brunt of the violence. I am sorry to tell the House that this unhappy situation has continued. Although at 54 the total number of deaths during 1985 was 10 fewer than the previous year's total, the number of policemen and police women included in the figure has not been exceeded in any year since the present campaign of terrorism began. Twenty-three members of the RUC and RUC Reserve were murdered during 1985, and the first casualties, as the House will know, at the turn of the new year were also policemen. Many left behind young wives or husbands, and young families. I am sure that all Members of the House will join me in paying tribute to the dedication and courage displayed day in and day out by the members of the RUC and RUC Reserve, by the regular and UDR soldiers who so faithfully and unstintingly support them and one of whom was, sadly, so brutally murdered last night. I would not exclude the courage and dedication of the men and women of the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

The small reduction in the number of deaths was paralleled by a more significant reduction in the number of terrorist incidents. That was down by more than 18 per cent. But welcome as that reduction is, it can give us no cause for complacency. There can never be an acceptable level of terrorism and violence; and the security forces, with the Government's fullest support, will spare no effort to lift the curse of terrorism and intimidation from all sections of the community.

At this moment it would also be appropriate to pay tribute to the work of the courts in Northern Ireland. The Northern Ireland judiciary deserves our warmest and fullest support. Over the years, in the face of intimidation and against the background of a peculiarly nasty and murderous terrorist campaign that has imposed unprecedented strains on the community it has dispensed justice firmly, fairly and impartially. It has successfully maintained the integrity of the judicial system in Northern Ireland.

Mr. D. N. Campbell-Savours (Workington): While the Secretary of State is paying tribute to the courts in Northern Ireland will he also pay tribute to the courts in Eire? There is a case in southern Ireland where it is assumed that Associated British Foods made a contribution of £1·5 million to the IRA. Is he aware of that case? In the event that it can be proven that that contribution was made does he intend to bring a case on the mainland against Associated British Foods and Fine Fare its subsidiary?

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Ernest Armstrong): Order. Before the Secretary of State rises, I must remind him that our discussion must not range too widely.

Mr. King: I cannot comment on cases that are before courts in other jurisdictions. I pay tribute to any court seeking to dispense justice fairly and impartially in the face of terrorism and intimidation.

The hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) may know General Order No. 7 in the IRA manual which means that those in the Republic face a different problem from those who are exposed to a peculiar threat in the Province where they are, themselves, a target of terrorism.

Sir John Biggs-Davison (Epping Forest): Since the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) raised the position of the courts in the Irish Republic—we would all wish to pay tribute to the judiciary there—would my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State remind the House that the Special Criminal Court sits without a jury? That is worth mentioning in view of the criticisms made of trial without jury in certain cases in Northern Ireland.

Mr. King: I recognise the validity of my hon. Friend's comment. It is true that there is a court that sits without a jury, which shows all too clearly both the problems that terrorism imposes not only north of the border but south, and the need to be able to respond to it in the most positive way.

The Government are anxious to take every possible step that can help to combat the evil of terrorism and it is against that background that I mentioned the Anglo-Irish agreement, one of the prime considerations of which is to improve co-operation between ourselves and the Republic in the fight against terrorism. We are looking for increased co-ordination of security activities on both sides of the border. The Chief Constable of the RUC and the Commissioner of the Garda Siochana have attended two of the first three meetings of the Intergovernmental Conference. As a first step a programme is being set in hand to improve co-operation and communication between the two forces. The conference is also looking at ways of simplifying the procedures for extradition between the two countries, and for mounting extra-territorial prosecutions.

[Mr. King]

One of the other benefits that we expect from the conference is that it will help us to try to remove any misunderstandings and misconceptions that may in the past have hindered the development of a better understanding of the importance of support for the security forces and a better cross-community support for their activities. Following the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement and the establishment of the Intergovernmental Conference, we look to the SDLP to give an early lead in encouraging full-hearted support from the minority community for the security forces. The RUC, as the front line defence for the whole community, deserves the support of the SDLP. It has certainly earned it, not only through the sacrifices to which I referred earlier and the tragic casualties that it has sustained, but through the professional, even-handed way in which it has carried out its duties.

Ms. Clare Short (Birmingham, Ladywood): I have heard the right hon. Gentleman make this remark both in a recent conference in Oxford and tonight. Is he implying that in the past the SDLP has not given support to the RUC? If so, he should spell it out, and if not he should say so.

Mr. King: In the Province, the feeling is that the SDLP has qualified its support for the RUC. In the present situation, it is important to recognise that the RUC is entitled to wholehearted support. The RUC has shown clearly, not least in recent weeks, its determination to uphold the law and resist intimidation from whatever quarter it comes. That should be recognised by all the communities in the Province. I hope that this will be understood, because I recognise that extremists exist in both communities who are trying to undermine security in the Province and obstruct the agreement.

The enemies of peace and reconciliation have realised that the security benefits that the agreement can bring will pose a direct threat to them, so they may seek to undermine and wreck it at the start. The campaign of violence from the IRA ever since the signing of the agreement is the clearest sign of that. I make it clear to the IRA that that campaign will not succeed and that the Government will not be deterred. The Government will pursue greater and more effective security policies with increasing vigour. I make it clear that the agreement makes no change in the responsibilities of Her Majesty's Government and the Chief Constable for security in Northern Ireland. The Chief Constable's independence is quite clear—in the discharge of his operational responsibilities he is and will remain answerable only to the law. By the same token, all executive decisions about security issues in Northern Ireland will continue to be taken by the United Kingdom Government.

Mr. Tony Benn (Chesterfield): In the light of the Anglo-Irish agreement will the Secretary of State tell the House whether the order was discussed with Irish Ministers? Were they consulted, and do they support the agreement? In the light of what the Minister has just said we would expect the Government to state that any matters discussed by the House are discussed previously with Irish Ministers. If that is the case, what were their views on the continuation of the order?

Mr. King: The right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) may not have been able to attend the debate when my predecessor, the right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), made clear what our proposals would be for the initial stages in response to the Baker report. Those proposals were made in June. Tonight we are implementing those proposals that my predecessor put forward following the Baker report which investigated and considered the applications of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. I will give a simple answer to the right hon. Gentleman, or he may make the amazing accusation that I am not answering his question. We had already reached decisions on the matter and we subsequently informed the Irish Government of what our actions would be.

In discharging my duties I shall of course consider the views expressed in this House by all parties, by Northern Irish Members of Parliament and by the Northern Ireland Assembly. I shall be willing also to listen to the views that may be expressed by the Irish Government through the Intergovernmental Conference. I relinquish none of my clear, distinct and sole responsibility for decisions in this matter on behalf of the United Kingdom Government. I will take my decisions in the interests of all the people of Northern Ireland and of the United Kingdom as a whole, in the knowledge that I remain fully accountable to this House.

Mr. Benn: Will the right hon. Member give way?

Mr. King: I may be able to help the right hon. Gentleman. That is not always possible, but it may be on this occasion. The Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 is and must be seen as temporary, exceptional legislation. It is consistent with the European Convention on Human Rights and the United Nation's International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, but it provides for departures, in certain circumstances from the normal procedures of British justice. My fervent hope is that it will soon become unnecessary. I wish that it were possible to allow the Act to lapse, but I am afraid that it is not, if we are to carry out successfully the security policies that I emphasised at the start of my speech. In his review of the operation of the Act, published in 1984, the late Sir George Baker endorsed this view, recording as his first substantial conclusion that there was only limited scope for amending the Act.

While the Act remains on the statute book I believe that it should continue to come under close parliamentary scrutiny, such as is provided for by this debate. As my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney told the House last June, the Government intend, when amending the Act, to recommend that it have a maximum life of five years, providing the occasion for major and detailed parliamentary scrutiny within a reasonable period. In considering the amendment of the Act, the Government's concern is to ensure that it provides only for the minimum necessary departures from normal law and procedure.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Witney, during the last renewal debate to which I referred, set out the Government's proposals for amending the Act. I intend to introduce legislation on those lines as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits, and certainly within the lifetime of this Parliament.

Mr. Benn rose——

Mr. King: It is important that I should conclude this part of my remarks.

In the meantime, we have laid an order under section 30 of the Act which will widen the discretion of the Attorney-General to certify in respect of particular cases that offences should not be treated as scheduled offences. The implication of that, as hon. Members will be aware, is that they will be eligible and available for jury trial. That is, generally, along the lines proposed by Sir George Baker, and when we come to the amendments that I shall move when we debate the later order that by agreement we have decided to debate as a separate instrument, we shall discuss those matters.

Mr. Benn: Will the Minister try to answer the questions that I asked? He referred to a statement that was made in June, which was before the Anglo-Irish agreement was reached, so that the agreement represented a change. He then said that the Irish Government had been notified. They do not now have to be notified because they know what the business is from studying last Thursday's statement. My question—if he will lift his eyes from his text for a moment—was specific. Were they consulted, was the matter put on the agenda of the last intergovernmental conference, did they give a view, and, if they did, what was that view? In view of the new statement that the right hon. Gentleman has made, will he say whether the Irish Government will be consulted about the legislation to amend the Act before he introduces it in this House?

Mr. King: The right hon. Gentleman is losing some of the effortless charm that I normally expect from him.

Mr. Benn: All that I ask the right hon. Gentleman to do is answer the question.

Mr. King: I made it clear that the Government's decisions were announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney in June. They had not been previously discussed with the Government of the Irish Republic. These matters were on the record and, whether or not they were aware of them, we informed them that we would be tabling these orders, so they were aware of them. They were not the subject of negotiation and discussion because they had already been announced and had been tabled in this House, as I recall, before the signing of the agreement.

Mr. Benn indicated dissent.

Mr. King: The right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) keeps shaking his head in dissent. I do not know why he still cannot understand the point that I have made.

I have one more question of the right hon. Gentleman's to answer, but if I fail to answer anything else, he can rise and tell me. He asked whether, if there were any further proposals in respect of the Act, they would be discussed. The answer is yes, in the same way as they would be discussed with anybody else who had views to advance. We are more than ready to listen to views. I am amazed that any Opposition Member should think it outrageous that we should discuss provisions of this kind as widely as possible. As the right hon. Gentleman has stopped shaking his head, I trust that he feels that I have answered all his questions.

Mr. Benn: As the right hon. Gentleman failed to answer my first question, I will ask it again. Was there specific consultation with the Irish Government after the Anglo-Irish agreement? Secondly, in view of his statement now that consulting the Irish Government is just part of listening to everybody, will he say whether the new legislation in draft that he has promised to present to the House will be put on the agenda of the conference between the Irish and British Ministers? [Interruption.] Will it be put on the agenda for discussion with the Irish Government before the right hon. Gentleman brings the legislation to the House of Commons? Will he now answer those questions?

Mr. King: The answer is yes. I always respect the natural courtesy of the right hon. Gentleman and I do not want to embarrass him, but if I have to answer the question for a third time and if that helps to clear up any misunderstanding, then I will do so. The answer to his first question about whether the amendment order was discussed is no, because it was already made clear that it was announced in the House in June. I do not know if the right hon. Gentleman was here for that debate. I am sure that if he was not, it was for a perfectly understandable reason. It was announced to the House in June and therefore what we proposed to do was on the record. The Irish Government were subsequently informed. The orders were laid.

Bearing in mind his close attention to parliamentary matters, I am sure that the right hon. Gentleman knows the orders were laid before the Anglo-Irish agreement was even signed. I am sure the Irish Government were informed courteously of what was happening. I have great respect for the Irish Government and I guess they already knew these matters were before the House of Commons.

The right hon. Gentleman also asked if further matters of this kind would be discussed and could they be considered in the Anglo-Irish conference. The answer to that is yes, and I have said that absolutely categorically. The right hon. Gentleman may be under the impression that matters that come before the Anglo-Irish conference may be discussed there and that nobody else is allowed any insight into what is taking place. I have made it quite clear that on matters of this importance others can contribute as well.

Mr. Ian Gow (Eastbourne): I have been listening with close attention to my right hon. Friend, as indeed have all hon. Members. Could he remind us, as it is not clear from the draft instrument now before the House, on what date it was laid before Parliament?

Mr. King: I believe it was early November, 11 November.

Mr. Stephen Ross (Isle of Wight): Will the right hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. King: I have given way many times to hon. Members, and other hon. Members want to take part. The continuance order that is before the House reflects the view, my view, shared by Sir George Baker, that the Act contains provisions which are necessary in the fight against terrorism, to the eradication of which the Government remains totally committed. The powers must, regrettably for the reasons that I gave, be preserved for a further period. The House will see when we reach the amendment order that while we recognise and believe it is necessary to maintain the Act, we are determined to look carefully at it to see if we can find ways in which changes could be made, where possible, without putting at risk in any unacceptable way the lives and welfare of the people of Northern Ireland, and we are determined to wage as effectively as we can the battle fight against terrorism.

10.39 pm

Mr. Peter Archer (Warley, West): Twice a year the House debates an order in the terms of the order which is before us today. That has been happening for many years and those of us who took part in the earlier debates have developed a feeling of déjà vue. Time and again the Opposition have deployed their arguments and not only have the Government disagreed with us — we can understand that — but they have never engaged in the debate. They never offered any sign of comprehending what we were saying. Remembering how the Scots fought the battle of Bannockburn, I should like to try again, particularly as I shall be trying with a new Secretary of State; particularly because I sense that in some respects this debate is different; and particularly because the right hon. Gentleman has said this subject may be discussed at the Intergovernmental Conference. But I hope that the right hon. Gentleman will forgive me if I refrain from repeating at length all that I have said on previous occasions.

I appreciate that many demands are made upon the Secretary of State's time, but I wonder whether I may prevail upon him to read three contributions that I made to previous debates. It will enable me to spare the House a repetition of them. Let me at least give the references to him. On 5 July 1984 I traced the history of these debates from July 1980 when my hon. Friend the Member for Pontypridd (Mr. John) expressed from this Dispatch Box the Opposition's anxiety about this Act. On 20 December 1984, in the debate on the Baker report, I tried to set out in detail our concern about the Act and our reactions to the report. On 20 June 1985 I sought to indicate the issues to which the Government's approach to the Act had given rise.

Mine was not a lone voice. My hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) has pursued the theme more than once. Some of my right hon. and hon. Friends were saying it long before I was. But if I may be permitted an argument by reference, it will enable me to be the briefer tonight.

There is one proposition that I must repeat because, however often I say it, there are those who persist in misunderstanding our argument and who seem determined to misapprehend the issue. The issue is not whether we are opposed to lawlessness and violence, whether we have any sympathy with the men of violence, or whether we care about the victims of violence. I am happy to compare my record in denouncing lawlessness and violence in any context with the record of those who persist in misrepresenting us. I am rather less selective in my condemnation than they are. But that is not the issue. The issue is not whether we appreciate the difficulties of those who are charged with enforcing law and order. They have a thankless charge and they are entitled to ask that we should have their difficulties in mind when we debate these matters. We on these Benches share the horror of the Secretary of State at the loss of the life of a police officer last night.

The police in particular have been called on over the last few weeks to deal with situations not of their own making and they have responded with a degree of restraint and objectivity which deserves to be recognised. The Royal Ulster Constabulary, the Army, the Ulster Defence Regiment are none of them perfect. To suggest that they never fall below the standard of perfection would be as silly as to say that they are all part of some dishonest conspiracy, but it is no reflection upon them to insist that they cannot be better than the system they are called upon to administer.

There are two issues before the House. The first is whether there has been an erosion of civil liberties which may endanger those very values and that very way of life that our security policy purports to defend. When the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973, the first edition of the present Act, was being debated as a Bill everybody recognised that whatever the necessity for it may have been it was a wholly exceptional measure — as, indeed, the right hon. Gentleman reminded us tonight. It introduced a range of provisions which were wholly exceptional in character. That appreciation was reflected in the title of the Bill. These were emergency powers. It was reflected in the provision for review by the House at six-monthly intervals. It was reflected in the speech of the then Secretary of State, Lord Whitelaw, who said:

> "It is the Government's intention that none of the provisions of the Bill, if it is passed, should continue in force a moment longer than it is needed."—[Official Report, 17 April, 1973; Vol. 855, c. 278.]

It was reflected in the speech of the then Attorney-General, now Lord Rawlinson, who called it draconian.

That was more than 12 years ago. Since then it has become a standard, everyday part of prodecure, a part of everyday life in Northern Ireland. A whole generation of police officers and a whole generation of lawyers has matured with the emergency provisions Act as an accepted part of life. There are lawyers of 12 years' standing, quite senior practitioners, who have known nothing else in their professional lives.

Ms. Clare Short: Does my right hon. and learned Friend agree that there have been special powers ever since Ireland was partitioned and ever since that unhealthy state was created? There have been distortions of normal justice. There has not been a system of normal justice as we expect it in the rest of Britain. That is a sign and a representation of the political problems that underpin the partitioned state of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Archer: My hon. Friend is, of course, quite right. I seem to recollect that a South African Minister of Justice, commenting on the original emergency provisions Act, said that he would be prepared to forgo all the powers at his disposal for section 1 alone of that Act. There was a time, arising, I think, from Human Rights Year in 1968, when it looked as though there might be a hope of breaking away from all this. Yet, as my hon. Friend says, it remains a normal part of administration in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Biggs-Davison: Does the right hon. and learned Gentleman entirely treat Sir George Baker's recommendations as nonsense? That is the gist of the speech that he is making at the moment. Sir George Baker, after the very distinguished inquiries that he made—I was one who appeared before him, and I dare say that the right hon. and learned Gentleman also appeared before him—came to a completely different conclusion. Does he utterly reject the Baker report?

Mr. Archer: It is true that I gave evidence to Sir George Baker, both in writing and orally. My complaint is that it is the Government who treat a substantial part of the Baker report as nonsense.

Mr. Gow rose——

Mr. Archer: If I may answer one question at a time, I will then happily give way to the hon. Gentleman.

One of the unfortunate aspects of Sir George's terms of reference was that he was required to accept that a measure of emergency legislation was necessary, so his terms of reference prescribed the conclusions which he was to reach.

Mr. Gow: I am grateful to the right hon. and learned Gentleman. He is a characteristically fair Member of the House. Is it not the case that the parent Act under which this draft statutory instrument is made was introduced into the House by the Labour Government of which his right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) and he were members? We are talking now about approving a statutory instrument which is being made under an Act of 1978.

Mr. Archer: If the hon. Gentleman means the second edition of the 1978 Act, that is true. I am coming to that. I fully recognise what happened in the past and I am not even suggesting that we were necessarily wrong at that time. If he will allow me to make my speech, I shall try to answer his point.

A whole generation of lawyers have passed their professional lives in Northern Ireland with this as a normal part of their background, and knowing nothing else. Worse, a whole generation of lay people have grown to adulthood who, when they think of policing and of the law, think of the powers that we are discussing today. We, heaven forgive us—it is obvious from tonight's debate—have become inured to it. It no longer seems exceptional. We no longer use the word "draconian"; and, of course, because in the Northern Ireland context it has a ring of familiarity we are less shocked when its spawn appears in Great Britain. This week we have seen in the Roskill report one more proposal for paring away the right to trial by jury, and it does not smite us with the impact that such a proposal would have made 12 years ago. Quite well-informed people say to me, "Well, they don't have a jury system in Northern Ireland, do they?" They are wrong; it is a total misapprehension, yet it is all part of a perception which has spread over a very long period but especially over the past 12 years.

The second issue before the House is whether the measures which have been adopted to maintain law and order and preserve security are counter-productive, and whether they make the task of the police and of the courts harder. Probably the greatest single factor in securing observance of the law is a recognition among local communities that the law is fair and that it protects them from injustice. The greatest deterrent for a potential lawbreaker is the disapproval of his peer group because it believes that the law should be observed. But wherever a young person is stopped by a police officer in circumstances where he believes he is being victimised, wherever a family sees one of its members charged with an offence on what it sees as unconvincing evidence, and detained in custody awaiting trial for a long period the whole bedrock of public confidence and support on which the law rests is undermined.

These are the issues which we urge on the Government time and time again, with no indication that we are getting through; and they are the issues which I seek again to place before the House tonight.

I will not rehearse our anxieties at length today. In the past we have discussed the admissibility of confession evidence under section 8(2) in circumstances where that evidence would not be admitted in any other part of the United Kingdom. We have discussed the fact that section 12 still provides the Secretary of State with the power to detain without trial, although it has not been used since 1975. We have discussed the power to arrest without warrant under section 11 which was clearly intended simply as a prelude to detention under section 12, which is no longer used. I note that today three American girls were arrested whose activities are said to consist of making a film about joy riding. It would not be right for me to say more because I know no more about the facts, but perhaps the Minister could tell us more about that tonight.

It is understandable that when an arrest is made it is perceived as referring back to the power in section 11, and that people ask why that power is needed when there are other powers in other legislation, and when section 11 was never intended for that purpose. We have discussed the delays in bringing cases to trial, and the restricted right to bail under the Act. Sir George Baker made representations about all those matters because he was troubled about the position.

We make no secret of the fact that we were disappointed by the Baker report and hoped to see more radical recommendations, but on those matters Sir George Baker expressed himself to be unhappy. His review was announced by the then Secretary of State on 30 June 1982. It was not until 5 April 1983 that Sir George Baker's appointment to undertake it was made known. He reported in March 1984, and here we are in 1986 with no idea when we may expect the legislation to implement the representations.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) asked a perfectly relevant question: what consultations had taken place or were expected to take place under the procedures in the new intergovernmental agreement? The debate is to be followed by the introduction of an order to amend the Act. I accept that that was announced before the intergovernmental agreement, and could not have been discussed under those procedures. We welcome that amendment as a fish in a desert welcomes a solitary raindrop, but it does not begin to dispose of our anxieties about the Act. It is not even a significant move towards implementing the report. If I say a word about it now, it will enable me to invite the Secretary of State to think about what is probably the central issue relating to the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978—the system of trial without jury. It will have the additional advantage of enabling me to keep my speech on the next debate brief.

[Mr. Archer]

On previous occasions I have tried to remind the House of the arguments which persuaded Lord Diplock to make the original recommendation. He thought that juries would be subject to intimidation, but accepted that he had no evidence to support that proposition. No member of the Diplock commission except Lord Diplock even felt it necessary to visit Northern Ireland, and his meetings there appear to have been restricted to members of the security forces on the ground. The argument advanced by the commission which dominated the debates on the Bill in 1973 was that prejudiced juries were likely to acquit people who should be convicted.

Ms. Clare Short: They were Unionists.

Mr. Archer: My hon. Friend has anticipated me. At that time, before the Juries (Northern Ireland) Order 1974, the property qualification ensured that juries were predominantly Unionist. So the problem was about Unionist juries acquitting Protestant paramilitaries. Those debates belong to a different world from that of today. The whole argument was openly and avowedly a means of increasing the conviction rate.

Mr. Robert Maclennan (Caithness and Sutherland): I hope that the right hon. and learned Gentleman has not overlooked the fact that the conclusions of the Diplock commission were considered and upheld by the committee of Lord Gardiner, the former Labour Lord Chancellor, in 1975.

Mr. Archer: If the hon. Gentleman will forgive me, I was coming to the events following the 1973 Act. I can appreciate the hon. Gentleman's desire to blacken the record of the Labour party, but I am quite prepared to put our record against his personal record.

I come now to the question that I have been asked. In 1973 we on these Benches said that we were not persuaded by those arguments. But, when the provision was on the statute book, it seemed sensible to see how it worked. For some years it did not appear to give rise to any serious anxieties. Perhaps that was precisely because it did not seem to be achieving its stated purpose of increasing the conviction rate.

More recently, three factors have emerged which have compelled us to look at it again. First, there has been a significant fall in the acquittal rate in Diplock trials. In 1973 it was 57 per cent. By 1979 it had fallen to 35 per cent. In 1981 it was 33 per cent. That was happening at a time when the acquittal rate in jury trials in Northern Ireland had increased. That was bound to raise the question whether judges were becoming case-hardened. That is not a criticism of the judiciary. It is a danger which they fully recognise themselves, and they expressed it to Sir George Baker. It is the very reason why we in the United Kingdom have for hundreds of years recognised the value of jury trials.

Secondly, it has become apparent that a system which is avowedly designed to deal with offences associated with terrorism was being used in cases which clearly had no connection with terrorism. Listing the offences which are sometimes committed for political reasons and providing that anyone accused of any of those offences should be tried under this procedure clearly casts the net too wide. We are all familiar with the study carried out by Mr. Dermott Walsh for the Cobden Trust which concluded that 40 per cent. of those convicted under the Diplock procedure had no connection with terrorism.

Thirdly, over the last few years there has emerged the phenomenon known as the supergrass. Again I will not repeat today what I have said on other occasions about the problems of supergrass trials, but they have inevitably been associated with the Diplock procedure, because it is the Diplock procedure which is in issue, and they have rendered it more urgent that we should look at it again.

Various proposals have been made as to what the Government might do. The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights suggested making a significant reduction in the number of scheduled offences and enlarging the powers of the Attorney-General to certify out, which is what is being proposed tonight. Sir George Baker recommended that the Attorney-General should have a much wider discretion to certify out. There have been proposals to replace the single judge with a panel of three judges, possibly one of them chosen from the Republic. One suggestion, which I confess I find attractive but which was rejected by the Secretary of State's predecessor last June, is the suggestion made by Sir George Baker in paragraph 151 for what has been called "contingent jury trial". He said:

> "It would be possible to provide for the judge, if he is satisfied that there has been any attempt to intimidate, harass or otherwise interfere with the jury, amounting to an interference with the course of justice, to discharge the jury and continue the trial himself or direct that it is to be heard by another judge sitting alone."

That would at least enable us to begin every trial with a jury. He went on to point out that such a provision might itself discourage attempts at intimidation.

There really is a need for the Government to address themselves to all this discussion and all these proposals. We ought to be told their thinking in much greater detail than we have been told it up to now, and perhaps we ought to have a further debate on the subject devoted specifically to the non-jury trials.

What the Government have done in the order which is to be discussed in the next debate is to propose a minor extension in the number of offences where the Attorney-General is to have a discretion to certify out. Clearly it is a move in the right direction, although it could not by itself begin to persuade us to support the renewal of the law in its present form. But the order misses the mark.

We are indebted to the National Council for Civil Liberties for information which illuminates that figure of 40 per cent.—the proportion of Diplock cases which, as Mr. Dermott Walsh found, had no connection with terrorism. The majority of them were connected with robbery involving real or imitation firearms. The offences are robbery, aggravated burglary and the possession of firearms while committing other offences.

To be technical, the offences which should have been in the order and are missing are offences under sections 8 and 10 of the Theft Act and articles 17, 18, 19 and 23 of the firearms order. If the Government had included those in the order, we should have been happier that they were making substantial inroads on these problems. These are the offences where frequently there is no connection with terrorism and so no justification for the fears which led to the passing of the Act. The new order fails to deal with those offences and they remain excluded from the Attorney-General's power to certify out.

That does not mean that the Opposition have any sympathy with armed robbery. All the offences which I listed are serious, but for that very reason it is important to ensure that people are not convicted of them unless they are found, to the community's satisfaction, to be guilty. We do not combat lawlessness from political or other motives by risking convicting the wrong people. Unless there is good reason to deny jury trial to people accused of such offences, they should have the same right to jury trial as anyone else accused elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

The provision for a six-monthly review of the Act was included so that the House could address itself to such matters from time to time and to review each of the provisions against the background of what is known at that time. It is an obligation which we have tried to take seriously. As the Secretary of State said, it might now be subject to discussions in the Intergovernmental Conference. But it is no safeguard unless the Government listen to what is said. They must at least engage in the debate. We have seen no sign that the Government are listening, and that compels us to divide the House.

11.3 pm

Sir John Biggs-Davison (Epping Forest): When the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) and I had an exchange about the Baker report, he said that Sir George was unhappy about the emergency powers in Northern Ireland. Everyone in the House is unhappy about the emergency powers and about anything which infringes human and civil rights. The greatest human right is the right to be alive.

Sir George was not circumscribed by his terms of reference when he came to his conclusions. He certainly was not circumscribed when he said in paragraph 32 of the report:

"I have become increasingly more convinced that any provisions of the EPA which may save even one life or bring one guilty terrorist to conviction and sentence should be retained until the paramilitary forces forswear terrorism unless there is a powerful convincing reason for repeal or amendment."

Sir George did not find any such convincing reason for repeal or amendment.

I find the Opposition's attitude not that of an alternative Government who might become responsible for the Government of Northern Ireland, or a responsible party. Their position is indefensible, save by excuse of ignorance of the brutal and bloody realities of life in troubled Ireland. I say Ireland because, as I ventured to remark during the Secretary of State's speech, there exist in Ireland not only Diplock courts, but the special criminal court.

There is a difference. The difference is that the special criminal court in the South is a court of three judges but no jury. It is frequently pointed out that the Diplock courts have no jury and are presided over by a single judge. There is a difficulty here. If it is desirable—I believe it is—to add to the single judge assessors of some kind, whether they be judges, resident magistrates or others, the difficulty is that there are none willing to come forward from the Northern Ireland Bar to accept the wish of the Lord Chancellor that they become judges. I understand that the reason is the peculiar risks to which judges are subjected in Northern Ireland. My hon. Friend referred to the murder of judges and magistrates, notably Catholic judges and magistrates, in the Province.

Mr. William Cash (Stafford): Does my hon. Friend agree that it is highly satisfactory that a Catholic has recently accepted nomination to this court? Is that not correct?

Sir John Biggs-Davison: It is correct, and I do not believe that it arises in any way from the Anglo-Irish agreement. I am delighted that this courageous person has come forward to take up that dangerous task. It is still difficult to find barristers who are willing to serve. It is the risk of murder and intimidation of judges and magistrates and jurors that made the Diplock courts regrettably necessary. I repeat regrettably necessary—and I warmly welcome the second order that we are to consider.

I spoke of the realities of life in troubled Ireland. In The Times of 4 January the first leading article said:

"the Hillsborough Agreement can only work if Dublin ministers at the intergovernmental conference can combine their role as representatives"—

I quarrel with this phrase, but I shall not go into that now—

"of the north's minority Catholic population with support for properly conducted security operations."

What the House and many in Northern Ireland are looking for are tangible results from the new arrangement with the Republic in terms of improved cross-border security.

Ms. Clare Short: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Sir John Biggs-Davison: This is a short debate and I want to give other hon. members a chance to speak. We have come a long way since 1962 when Mr. Sean Lemass so crushed and harried the IRA that, in the words of one of the historians of the Irish Republican Army, he destroyed

"the hopes of a generation".

The present Fine Gael Government in Dublin are weaker than that Fianna Fail Government. Even so, the present Taoiseach expressed the intention, as recorded in the communiqué — it is not in the agreement — after the Hillsborough meeting that the Government of the Irish Republic intended to adhere to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism.

I should like my hon. Friend the Minister to say whether any steps have been taken in that regard. We still need a change in the extradition law. Progress in that direction might be of comfort to the estranged majority and the frightened minority in Northern Ireland today.

11.9 pm

Mr. Tony Benn (Chesterfield): This is a regular process of renewal which the House has had many times. The difference is that this is the first time since the Anglo-Irish agreement. That is why I put some questions to the Secretary of State.

There was no specific consultation where everyone would have expected it. The Irish Government, for example, have expressed views on the super-grass trials. The Irish Government apparently gave no view on this order, which may be a subject of interest in Dublin. As for the future, there is no exclusive relationship in any way with the Irish Government. As the Secretary of State said, anyone can come in. The intergovernmental ministerial conference will, therefore, have no special role. Continuing the order—even with some amendments—is a continuation of the present policy.

I want to take these events to underline why the policy that the Government are following will fail. That policy was intended to do four wholly incompatible things. First, it was intended to de-fuse opposition in the Republic by involving its Ministers. Secondly, it was intended to isolate the Republicans in the North by making them look as though they alone stood out against the Anglo-Irish agreement. Thirdly, it was intended to reassure the Loyalists. Of course, they are not here, because they are busy campaigning against the policy anyway. [Interruption.] We do not know the outcome, but at least it is unlikely that they will return to the House without majorities, showing that opinion in Northern Ireland is not, despite their Loyalist protestations, as much in favour of United Kingdom parliamentary control as they claim. Fourthly, the Government's policy was intended to bring in the Common Market and the Americans with cash and endorsement — there were also defence overtones — by persuading them that it presented a real break.

[Mr. Tony Benn]

With the agreement, the Government have tried to internationalise the status quo. The order proves this. No one could have doubled that after the Secretary of State, in his first speech after appointment, said that, as far as he was concerned, nothing would ever change. I suspect that there will be growing disillusionment with the agreement. The order will result in the first stage of that disillusionment among significant groups. Those who put their faith in the agreement will discover that what they have actually endorsed is an official Anglo-Irish licence for the continuation of partition and British repression in Northern Ireland, which will solve nothing.

The Anglo-Irish agreement made a fundamental change in the relationships between Britain and the North. The by-elections are occurring because some people have seen that, when one licenses a foreign Government to share responsibility with a part of the so-called United Kingdom, there is a fundamental change. There has been a fundamental change, but no solution to the problem.

The war will continue. The Diplock courts will continue. The super-grass trials will continue, despite the protests from Dublin. The strip searches and the plastic bullets will continue. This policy of the Secretary of State will fail, as all the others have failed. Reference has been made to the Labour Government. I could go back further, to when I was in the Cabinet in August 1969 and we sent the troops in. We were told that that would solve the problem. We were told that Sunningdale and direct rule would solve the problem. We were told that power sharing would solve the problem.

People will be suspicious of tonight's meticulous textual address by the Secretary of State because they have heard it all before. The Secretary of State may not like the change, but when it comes, the Government will be seen to have begun the process by recognising—although that does not entitle us to support the agreement which will fail like everything else—that the United Kingdom does not have an exclusive right to govern Northern Ireland.

In joining my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) and voting against the other, I think that those in the Republic and in the North who study this debate can draw a certain conclusion about it and perhaps even some comfort from it.

11.13 pm

Mr. Ian Gow (Eastbourne): It is a tragedy that the Labour party intends to divide the House on this statutory instrument. I warmly approve of the speech of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and of the order.

This is a short debate, and I know that hon. Gentlemen want to participate——

Ms. Clare Short: What about me?

Mr. Gow: And hon. Ladies, too. I shall, therefore keep my remarks short.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State rightly said that it was the Government's policy to pursue the campaign against terrorism in Northern Ireland with unremitting vigour. My right hon. Friend also referred to the Anglo-Irish agreement of 15 November. It is of first importance, as my right hon. Friend acknowledges, that the promise of the increased co-operation between Her Majesty's Government and the Republic of Ireland should become a reality so that a more effective campaign may be waged by both Governments and the security forces of both Governments against terrorism throughout the island of Ireland.

I want to reinforce the question that was put to my right hon. Friend by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison). Not, alas, in the treaty—I wish that it were in the treaty — but in the joint communiqué that was issued on 15 November the Prime Minister of the Republic gave notice of the intention of the Government of the Republic

"to accede"—

these are the exact words—

"as soon as possible to the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism."

Ms. Clare Short: Is this in order?

Mr. Gow: It certainly is in order. I point out to the hon. Lady that my right hon. Friend referred in his speech to the benefits which he believed would flow from the agreement on co-operation.

The question that I want to put to my right hon. Friend or to my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, if he is to reply, is what, in the view of Her Majesty's Government, was meant by the words "as soon as possible" when in the joint communiqué, the Taoiseach gave that undertaking about the accession of the Republic to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism? It would be of the greatest importance if "as soon as possible" really meant in the very near future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I say to hon. Members that the Front Bench would like to catch my eye at half past eleven.

11.16 pm

Mr. Martin Flannery (Sheffield, Hillsborough): Some of us have opposed the various pieces of legislation on the prevention of terrorism since their inception for the very reason that the Secretary of State, when he became Secretary of State, was fatuous enough to say that Northern Ireland would be there for ever. As my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) implied, if the border is there for ever this legislation will be in force for ever because it is the border that led to the legislation. We go through this melancholy six-monthly ritual. Some of us have never missed it throughout the years, unlike the Secretary of State who is new to it.

The Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 is virtually unamended. The Government have no intention of amending it. It is draconian and unjust on a grand scale, and it solves nothing. It actually deepens and intensifies the crisis in Northern Ireland. There was a time when some of us got no help from the Labour Government. In the bi-partisan years, they were as bad as the Tories and we had to struggle against them as well. Now officially the Labour Front Bench is with us, although the vote has not increased very much.

When Sir George Baker made his report, as my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) said, he could not make a proper report. He began with a conclusion; it came from the terms of reference, which began as follows:

"Accepting that temporary emergency powers are necessary to combat sustained terrorist violence".

What could he do with that? All he could do was produce a draconian report on a draconian Act. I have heard people praising that report. I was appalled at it because it did not do anything to help.

The Government did not follow the ritual he went through. Out of 72 or 74 recommendations they paid slight attention to two, I think. When there are three judges instead of one, that merely means that there are three case-hardened types dealing with a case instead of one. If there are only 10 judges in Northern Ireland they must be case hardened. How could they be anything else? They would be inhuman if they were not. That is the reality. There is no justice in Northern Ireland to do with anything concerned with what is called terrorism.

Let us be quite clear about this — it means long periods of detention without charge, admission of involuntary confessions in court and uncorroborated evidence from supergrasses. A year ago I led a delegation to Northern Ireland, which it split into two halves. Half went to Long Kesh and the other to visit the women in South Armagh. We spoke to all 34 women, some of whom had been there for two years without trial. Can the Secretary of State tell me whether they have now been there for three years without trial? Is that the sort of justice that we are meting out in Northern Ireland? I want to know. That is the sort of behaviour that intensifies the conflict and makes people fight against a draconian regime.

The Solicitor-General (Sir Patrick Mayhew): I shall write to the hon. Gentleman in answer to his question. Perhaps he will answer my question. What does he mean by his assertion that there is no justice in a Northern Ireland court hearing a terrorist case? How does he equate that assertion with the fact that over the years, and certainly today, the rate of acquittal in Diplock courts is within 1 or 2 per cent. of the rate of acquittal in jury trials?

Mr. Flannery: The reality is that all sorts of people are not getting a proper trial because of the position in Northern Ireland. Can the hon. and learned Gentleman tell me how a convicted murderer, who has committed crimes of terrorism and already been convicted of perjury, can go into court — as one did recently, I think that it was Kirkpatrick — and denounce 27 people, without corroborated evidence, who were then gaoled for life? That is perhaps what the hon. and learned Gentleman calls justice, but I believe that many people, especially young men, are stirred to join the IRA when they see the travesty of justice in Northern Ireland.

The Solicitor-General: Does not the hon. Gentleman recognise that there is no difference between the law of admissibility of uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice in Northern Ireland and that in the law in England and Wales? If he does recognise that, perhaps he will acknowledge it.

Mr. Flannery: I say with respect to the hon. and learned Gentleman that he can enmesh me in a web of lawyer-like talk if he wishes, but the reality is that there is a lack of justice in Northern Ireland, as there always has been as long as there has been occupation of any part of Ireland. He can quote whatever he wants from the law books, but that is the reality.

The Act hovers like a rain cloud over the people of the minority Catholic community in Northern Ireland. It constantly has them in turmoil. It solves none of the problems that it was intended to solve. I shall cite two aspects, which I have mentioned already but which are worth repeating. First, on the question of detention without charge, I hope that the Secretary of State will tell me what has happened to the women in South Armagh. Are they still being dragged out—[Interruption.] Yes, it is true. We went over the track that they take after they have been strip searched once a week. We discovered that not all the strip searches were being recorded in the book. The Secretary of State may smile about these serious issues, but they are the issues with which we must deal.

This appalling Act should be taken off the statute book. It does nothing to solve the problems. Ireland under British occupation, especially Northern Ireland, has never been ruled without military control over the people and a total lack of democracy. My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West mentioned property qualification, and it is only one aspect. There are many people on the Tory benches who I have watched smiling and laughing as those points have been put to them. There is no hope for Northern Ireland from those people. The only hope for peace in Northern Ireland is for the election of a Labour Government and the abolition of the border. There is no hope unless that happens.

11.25 pm

Mr. Stephen Ross (Isle of Wight): I should like to put a question to the Opposition spokesman, the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer). If he were the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, would he be recommending to the House tonight that we should reintroduce jury trials for all terrorist charges? Could he put that to the House in all seriousness? In my worst moments, I wake up at about 3 o'clock in the morning and dream that I am the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in an alliance Government. That will not happen, not because an alliance Government will not be in power next time, but because I shall not be there. I understand that the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West is saying from the Opposition Front Bench that he would do away with the Diplock courts and have a jury trial for all cases.

The reason why I support the renewal of the legislation is that I realise that it is early days in the life of the Anglo Irish Intergovernmental Conference. It has been in operation for only about six weeks, and I am prepared to recommend further patience to my colleagues in connection with the renewal of the order.

I welcome the statement by the Secretary of State about tabling new legislation in the life of this Parliament. That should be taken on board. It is with great reluctance that we accept the impossibility at this time of providing a jury trial for terrorist offences. There is no foolproof method of safeguarding the anonimity of jurors and therefore avoiding intimidation. As I understand it, they have to give their names and addresses. If the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West can say that he will put those people's lives at risk, I cannot agree with him.

[Mr. Stephen Ross]

Mr. Dennis Canavan (Falkirk, West): Is the hon. Gentleman telling us that the official position of the once great radical Liberal party is that in one part of the United Kingdom there should be a standard of so-called justice which is grossly inferior to the standards of justice that prevail elsewhere in the United Kingdom?

Mr. Ross: Of course I am not saying that. I remind the hon. Member of the judges who have lost their lives and been maimed trying to carry our justice in Northern Ireland. He may be prepared to put those lives at risk, but I am not.

Ms. Clare Short: Intern them.

Mr. Ross: No, I shall not intern them. Our joint report of July 1985 contained words to that effect and was accepted by both the Social Democratic party and the Liberal party at their assemblies this autumn.

I agree with much of what has been said by Opposition Members. We also think that it should be possible to deschedule cases where there is no apparent connection with serious terrorist offences. The accused should have the right to apply to the court to have his or her individual case descheduled, with the right to appeal to a higher court. The amendment seems to leave everything in the hands of the Attorney-General. I do not accept that.

I think that there should be jury trials unless a challenge is made. We would like to see a move to three judges. I should like to see Garret FitzGerald's suggestion followed up, so that we swap judges between the North and the South. I want to see the use of tape recorded interviews as evidence and a limit on the number of defendants in any one supergrass trial. That was a Baker recommendation. He recommended a maximum of 20, we recommend six.

Above all, new legislation should now be drafted, the provisions of which would be acceptable and applicable to both the North and the South. We regard that as an important step towards the harmonisation of British and Irish law and practice in the fight against terrorism.

I refer to the time spent on remand, which was referred to by the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery). In 1983 the average time spent on remand was 322 days. That is outrageous, and we must move to the Scottish practice of 110 days as quickly as possible. Above all, a Bill of Rights is needed in the Province, but we must leave that issue to the more persuasive powers of Lord Scarman.

11.29 pm

Mr. Stuart Bell (Middlesbrough): We welcome the presence of the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Ross), a Liberal Member. He asked my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) what a future Labour Government would do. He went on to make a series of recommendations on the legislation that we are debating. He even went so far as to say that entirely new legislation should be drafted. A future Labour Government would have no difficulty in pronouncing that they would move towards jury trials as quickly as they could in the context of the situation in Northern Ireland. We make no bones about that commitment.

The hon. Member for Epping Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison) fell into the same trap. He spent the first part of his speech criticising Labour policies, and the second part saying that there should be three judges in the Diplock courts, resident magistrates or assessors. Therefore, it is clear that there is an all-round agreement in the House that there is something wrong with this legislation, and that it should be looked at with care. That is what the Labour party is doing, and is therefore rendering the House of Commons and the people of Northern Ireland a service in opposing the legislation.

The hon. Member for Isle of Wight is joining the Tories in his acceptance of TINA—there is no alternative. He seems to be saying that in this, as in other legislation, nothing else can be done. Our party is the one being creative in this matter of Northern Ireland. We are looking seriously at the Diplock courts, and are constantly pushing and prodding the Government to move towards the Baker report. Tonight, two of the report's 72 recommendations are being implemented, and the Secretary of State has said, as did his predecessor in June, that there would be implementation of the Baker recommendations during the lifetime of this Parliament. That commitment was given as a result of the pressing and prodding of the Labour Opposition, and tonight's commitment was given as the result of the same pressure. The Labour party is the effective Opposition in the Chamber in the interests of the people of Northern Ireland and of justice.

We are grateful for the presence of the Solicitor-General. It must be a great relief to him to come to our debate after the other matters with which he has had to deal over the past few weeks.

Mr. Gow rose——

Mr. Bell: I have only three minutes to make my speech, so, with the utmost respect to the hon. Gentleman, I shall not give way.

We are grateful to the Solicitor-General because he has put into the context of the law the admissibility of evidence. We are saying that there is something wrong with a Diplock court with a single judge linked to a trial where one witness is able to give uncorroborated evidence. That is the great problem, as my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West said.

The situation has changed since 1973 because of the uncorroborated evidence of a single witness before a single judge, who has not only to establish what the law is, but to establish what the facts are. He must then do the work of 12 good men—and women—true, in place of the jury. A judge in a Diplock court does the work of 13 people.

For all the reasons that I have given, we feel an obligation to divide the House. The Under-Secretary said last year that the legislation was:

"in the interests of security, and indeed justice". —[Official Report, 20 December 1984; Vol. 70, c. 651.]

That is the curious dichotomy of this legislation. It is supposed to be used for justice, but it is used for security. That is where the ambivalence, the erosion of civil rights, the uneasiness of the people of Northern Ireland come in, and where there is an addition to the sense of alienation.

That is why this legislation is an obstacle to bringing the two communities together. We have no conscience about drawing the attention of the public of Northern Ireland and that of Great Britain to the curious inadequacies of the current legislation. The people of Northern Ireland put up with a system and administration of justice that we in Great Britain would not tolerate.

I was in a Diplock court during a supergrass trial when Mr. Kirkpatrick was the witness. I had the uncanny feeling that I was being cast back a century or so to the Chancery courts of old. There was a plethora of lawyers and security guards and dotted around the court were the accused, none of whom, as far as I could ascertain, could hear a word of what was being said. Although their future was at stake, they had to fall back to chattering among themselves while their relatives and families looked on haplessly behind bullet-proof glass, being unable to follow the proceedings.

It is not surprising that there are those of us who are aghast at the judgments that are reached and the verdicts that are entered in the Diplock courts. We have a sense of indignation that the current legislation remains on the statute book. I have no hesitation in commending my right hon. and hon. Friends to divide the House on the issue.

11.36 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Nicholas Scott): In the few minutes that remain of the debate, I wish to deal with a number of issues that have been raised.

First, I take up the opening remarks of the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer), who accused us of not being prepared to enter into an argument. I have about five minutes in which to reply and it will be difficult to address the arguments in depth, but I can assure him that successive Ministers—Secretaries of State and others bearing responsibility for Northern Ireland—have concerned themselves with the arguments and worried deeply about whether they had the balance right. They have had to move away from the practice of the law on this side of the water in the special circumstances of Northern Ireland, but only to the minimum degree that is necessary to ensure the life, the security and the safety of the general public within Northern Ireland. We have worried about it ourselves and have sought the best advice available to us to ensure that we have the balance right.

I shall refer to three matters that are raised by Sir George Baker in the opening part of his report. In paragraph 50, he stated:

"I am driven to the sad but inescapable conclusion that despite the undoubted improvement and optimism which I noted during last summer . . . there is little room for manoeuvre"

in amending the legislation. He went on to make a point that I wish had been taken up by one or two of those who have contributed to the debate. At the end of paragraph 50, he said:

"The remedy is squarely in the hands of those who say they are waging war. Let them forswear violence and respect the right to live."

If that were done, we would not need emergency provisions in Northern Ireland. Sir George concluded the opening part of his report in paragraph 51 by asking:

"'Is it reasonably foreseeable that repeal or amendment may deprive yet another man, woman or child of the right to life or to live free from fear?'"

That was the question to which he rightly addressed himself, and that was why he rightly concluded that there was little room for manoeuvre in amending the legislation.

I understand that there is a down side to the existence of the powers that are set out in the Act, and that there is an extent to which they are bound to be counter-productive. When an innocent person is arrested and released without charge, or when a person is stopped in the street and searched, it is possible—on this side of the water and elsewhere—for resentment to build up and a wish on the part of those concerned to distance themselves from involvement in the processes of the administration of justice and policing. That is a factor that must be taken into account. However, that must be balanced against having the present powers of the police and the security forces and a law that enables the courts to operate free from the intimidation that would, but for the Diplock courts, be a manifest part of the administration of justice in Northern Ireland. There must be that balance to ensure that the lives of the people of Northern Ireland are given the protection that they deserve.

I do not accept lightly the need for the current powers to continue in existence. In many ways, it is with regret that I have again to argue that the House should renew them for a further period. However, I must tell the House that, as one who has considered the issue carefully, I am convinced that we need the powers. As I told the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West when we debated these issues previously, if he were on the Government Front Bench he would learn very quickly that he, too, would need the powers.

My hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) asked about the intention of the Government of the Republic of Ireland to accede to the convention on the suppression of terrorism. They have reiterated on several occasions their intention to do so as soon as possible. It has become apparent that they will need primary legislation in the Oireachtas to carry their accession to the convention into existence, and they are still investigating the timescale for doing that. They have reiterated their intention to do so it soon as possible.

The message tonight is that the Government are convinced that the fight against terrorism can be won without draconian security policies and without departing from the rule of law. But it will be necessary to provide the security forces for another six months with the powers that are included in this instrument.

We shall later deal with an amendment to the legislation. My right hon. Friend has reiterated our determination to introduce new legislation in the lifetime of this Parliament following many of the recommendations of Sir George Baker, and the House will welcome an opportunity in due course to discuss those issues. We are convinced——

It being one and a half hours after the commencement of proceedings on the motion, MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER put the Question, pursuant to Standing Order No. 3 (Exempted business).

The House divided: Ayes 116, Noes 62.

Division No. 40] [11.40 pm

AYES

Alexander, Richard	Biggs-Davison, Sir John
Amess, David	Blackburn, John
Arnold, Tom	Blaker, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Ashby, David	Bonsor, Sir Nicholas
Aspinwall, Jack	Boscawen, Hon Robert
Baker, Nicholas (Dorset N)	Bottomley, Peter
Batiste, Spencer	Bottomley, Mrs Virginia
Bellingham, Henry	Bowden, Gerald (Dulwich)

Brinton, Tim
Brooke, Hon Peter
Brown, M. (Brigg & Cl'thpes)
Browne, John
Bruinvels, Peter
Buck, Sir Antony
Burt, Alistair
Butterfill, John
Carlisle, John (Luton N)
Carttiss, Michael
Cash, William
Chope, Christopher
Coombs, Simon
Cope, John
Couchman, James
Cranborne, Viscount
Crouch, David
Currie, Mrs Edwina
Dover, Den
Durant, Tony
Evennett, David
Fenner, Mrs Peggy
Forth, Eric
Fraser, Peter (Angus East)
Freeman, Roger
Gale, Roger
Galley, Roy
Garel-Jones, Tristan
Gow, Ian
Gregory, Conal
Griffiths, Peter (Portsm'th N)
Ground, Patrick
Gummer, Rt Hon John S
Hamilton, Hon A. (Epsom)
Hancock, Michael
Hanley, Jeremy
Haselhurst, Alan
Hayes, J.
Hayward, Robert
Heathcoat-Amory, David
Henderson, Barry
Hind, Kenneth
Hogg, Hon Douglas (Gr'th'm)
Howard, Michael
Howarth, Alan (Stratf'd-on-A)
Howarth, Gerald (Cannock)
Hunt, David (Wirral, W)
Hunter, Andrew
Jackson, Robert
Jessel, Toby
Jones, Robert (Herts W)
Kellett-Bowman, Mrs Elaine
Key, Robert
King, Roger (B'ham N'field)
King, Rt Hon Tom
Knight, Greg (Derby N)
Knowles, Michael
Lawler, Geoffrey
Lawrence, Ivan
Lennox-Boyd, Hon Mark
Lester, Jim
Lilley, Peter
Lloyd, Peter (Fareham)
Lord, Michael
Lyell, Nicholas
MacGregor, Rt Hon John
Maclean, David John
Maclennan, Robert
Major, John
Malins, Humfrey
Marlow, Antony
Mather, Carol
Maude, Hon Francis
Maxwell-Hyslop, Robin
Mayhew, Sir Patrick
Miller, Hal (B'grove)
Moate, Roger
Moynihan, Hon C.
Murphy, Christopher
Nelson, Anthony
Neubert, Michael
Newton, Tony
Nicholls, Patrick
Norris, Steven
Oppenheim, Phillip
Osborn, Sir John
Page, Sir John (Harrow W)
Page, Richard (Herts SW)
Patten, Christopher (Bath)
Portillo, Michael
Powell, William (Corby)
Powley, John
Raffan, Keith
Rhodes James, Robert
Rhys Williams, Sir Brandon
Ross, Stephen (Isle of Wight)
Scott, Nicholas
Thurnham, Peter
Waddington, David
Young, Sir George (Acton)

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. Donald Thompson and
Mr. Tim Sainsbury.

NOES

Archer, Rt Hon Peter
Atkinson, N. (Tottenham)
Barnett, Guy
Beckett, Mrs Margaret
Bell, Stuart
Benn, Rt Hon Tony
Bermingham, Gerald
Blair, Anthony
Boyes, Roland
Campbell-Savours, Dale
Canavan, Dennis
Clarke, Thomas
Clay, Robert
Clwyd, Mrs Ann
Cohen, Harry
Cook, Frank (Stockton North)
Crowther, Stan
Davies, Ronald (Caerphilly)
Davis, Terry (B'ham, H'ge H'l)
Deakins, Eric
Dixon, Donald
Dormand, Jack
Dubs, Alfred
Fatchett, Derek
Fields, T. (L'pool Broad Gn)
Fisher, Mark
Flannery, Martin
Godman, Dr Norman
Haynes, Frank
Hogg, N. (C'nauld & Kilsyth)
Holland, Stuart (Vauxhall)
Home Robertson, John
Lamond, James
Leighton, Ronald
Lewis, Terence (Worsley)
Lloyd, Tony (Stretford)
McDonald, Dr Oonagh
McNamara, Kevin
Madden, Max
Marek, Dr John
Maxton, John
Maynard, Miss Joan
Michie, William
Mikardo, Ian
Nellist, David
Parry, Robert
Pike, Peter
Powell, Raymond (Ogmore)
Randall, Stuart
Redmond, Martin
Richardson, Ms Jo
Roberts, Ernest (Hackney N)
Short, Ms Clare (Ladywood)
Silkin, Rt Hon J.
Skinner, Dennis
Smith, C. (Isl'ton S & F'bury)
Soley, Clive
Spearing, Nigel
Strang, Gavin
Wardell, Gareth (Gower)
Welsh, Michael
Winnick, David

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. John McWilliam and
Mr. Allen McKay.

Question accordingly agreed to.

Resolved,

That the draft Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Continuance) (No. 3) Order 1985, which was laid before this House on 14th November, be approved.

Northern Ireland

11.52 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Nicholas Scott): I beg to move,

That the draft Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985, which was laid before this House on 14th November, be approved.

The order we are considering tonight gives us an opportunity to amend schedule 4 to the Act on roughly the lines proposed by Sir George Baker, as this can be achieved by order under section 30 of the Act and does not require a Bill to introduce the amendment. The amendment order will in effect widen the discretion of my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General to certify in respect of particular cases that offences should not be treated as "scheduled" offences. This extends the range of offences which could potentially be tried before a jury and is intended to make it possible for more cases to be tried by jury in Northern Ireland. However, the Government share Sir George Baker's view that unfortunately the time has not yet arrived at which jury trial could be restored for all cases involving terrorist-type offences in Northern Ireland.

Nevertheless, I hope that the House will agree that this amending order marks a small step in the right direction and provides, I hope, an answer to those who question the sincerity of the Government's commitment to dismantle the apparatus of emergency legislation as soon as it is safe to do so. This is something to which we have long been committed and the order is a direct result of Sir George Baker's review, which was completed in 1984.

I am very conscious of the fact that the order may not go as far as many right hon. and hon. Members and the Government would like, but it goes as far as we can in the present circumstances. I hope, therefore, that everyone, both in this House and elsewhere, will recognise in this measure, limited though it must be, our readiness to match our actions to our understanding of the importance of building and maintaining public confidence in the administration of justice in Northern Ireland.

In essence, the order meets virtually the whole of Sir George's recommendations 12, 13 and 15, which were that kidnapping, false imprisonment, offences under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 and all scheduled offences which are triable summarily, or carry a maximum sentence of less than five years, should be capable of being certified out. The exceptions are those offences under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 and those scheduled offences which carry a low maximum penalty but are, in practice, only likely to be committed by persons associated with terrorists. In my view, it would be pointless to give the Attorney-General discretion to certify out such offences when he will almost certainly never be able to exercise that discretion.

The amending order does not extend the Attorney-General's discretion to cover robbery or aggravated burglary, as Sir George Baker had recommended, but it is worth emphasising to the House that this does not mean that all cases involving robbery or aggravated burglary will, in practice, be tried in a Diplock court, as under note 4 to schedule 4 such offences only come within the definition of scheduled offences "where it is charged that an explosive, firearm, imitation firearm or weapon of offence was used to commit the offence". In circumstances where such weapons are used, it is usually very difficult to tell whether the alleged offence was committed for domestic or terrorist purposes. If such offences were capable of being certified out, the Attorney-General's decision in particular cases might be perceived as an indication that one accused person had terrorist links while another did not. That could prejudice the outcome of certain trials and make my right hon. and learned Friend's decisions in such matters a matter of public debate. Where the decision cannot be clear-cut, I believe that it is better not to confer discretion and to leave the mode of trial to be determined on objective criteria by reference to the nature of the offence.

For completeness, I should record that the Government do not intend to accept Sir George Baker's recommendations 16 and 17. He had recommended that the power to certify out offences in particular cases be given to the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland. However, my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General believes that it would be right to reserve this important power to himself. He can then continue to be directly answerable to the House on the way in which he exercises that power.

Sir George Baker also recommended—and this is a particular point raised by the right hon. and learned Gentleman the Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) in the last debate—that if a case had been certified out and was being heard by jury, and seemed likely to result in a wrongful verdict as a result of intimidation, harassment or whatever, the trial judge should have the power to discharge the jury and continue the trial alone or to direct that it be heard by another judge sitting alone. The Government disagree with this recommendation, because any such decision would risk bringing the courts into disrepute. Critics would argue that judges exercised such powers only where they disagreed with the likely outcome of a jury trial, and that it was a device for setting the judge's views on matters of fact above those of a jury. We believe that, where a jury is believed to have been intimidated, the correct course would be to abandon the trial and to order a retrial. It would then be for the Attorney-General to use his discretion to judge whether the offence should be certified out or not.

I believe that this amending order represents a modest step in the right direction, and I commend it to the House.

11.58 pm

Mr. Peter Archer (Warley, West): The House will be grateful to the Minister for that explanation.

As to the matter which he has just mentioned, the proposal of Sir George Baker for conditional jury trial, this is obviously not the occasion on which we should enter into a debate on it, but I hope that we can properly infer from what the Minister has said that the Government at least intend to introduce the amendment in the form in which he has just described it, so that we will then have an opportunity to discuss it.

The measure which the Government propose today is a very modest one, but it is a move in the right direction and, as far as it goes, we welcome it. I have already indicated the reason why we believe that it misses the essential point. For the record, I will try to say it again in one paragraph.

The whole justification which is suggested for non-jury trial is that it is designed to deal with offences connected with terrorism. We know that at present some 40 per cent.

[Mr. Peter Archer]

of those convicted under that procedure have no connection with terrorism. The schedule, as it is drawn, catches allegations of offences committed from motives which are in no way political. This order extends the discretion of the Attorney-General to certify out of the provisions some offences additional to those already in the schedule. We know that the large percentage of charges which are not connected with terrorism relate to robbery involving the use of real or immitation firearms. The order does not give the Attorney-General power to certify out the offences under the provisions that I listed in the previous debate. I do not find it easy to understand the Minister's reason for that. It seems to be that discretion is not to be given to Law Officers because their decision might be misunderstood. We may have an opportunity to discuss that at greater length on another occasion.

This is one further example of the frustration that arises from legislating for Northern Ireland by unamendable orders. This is essentially an order on which we would have liked to table amendments to include those provisions. Then we could have discussed them, and we would all have known where we were. We can only make that point and hope that in due course the Government will hear and respond to it.

We accept the order, modest as it is, as what we hope will be the beginning of more effective reforms.

12 midnight

Mr. Robert Maclennan (Caithness and Sutherland): I shall not speak at length, because the general views of Social Democrat and Liberal Members on the order were adumbrated during the previous debate by my hon. Friend the Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Ross). However, the view of the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) that it is possible to conduct criminal trials in Northern Ireland by jury seems completely unsustainable.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Ernest Armstrong): Order. The hon. Gentleman will realise that we are discussing changes proposed to schedule 4 to the 1978 legislation. He must not speak to the last debate which was concluded.

Mr. Maclennan: The changes are being made to the 1978 Act, but they relate directly to jury trials and non-jury trials. It seemed that I could comment in passing on the general principle which the right hon. and learned Gentleman supported in his speech on this order. I do not seek to do more than that. I seek briefly and cogently to point out that the reason why we must stick to the Diplock trials and cannot move towards descheduling on a larger scale is that there is no guarantee of justice being done and jurors not being intimidated in the present position.

How do the Government view the difficulty of descheduling? It is not entirely clear from the nature of an offence whether it is associated with terrorism, for example a bank may be broken into to enrich the robber or to finance the IRA. It must be extremely difficult on the face of it to determine whether it is a terrorist offence which it would be appropriate to schedule, or whether it is not and appropriate for the Attorney-General to deschedule. It must be necessary for the Attorney-General to err on the side of assuming that offences capable of being terrorist offences are such.

Our anxieties about the continuance of the Diplock courts is to some extent alleviated by information which the Solicitor-General gave in tonight's debate and in the summer, in which he pointed out that the rates of conviction in Northern Ireland were not substantially greater for scheduled offences than for unscheduled offences where trials are conducted by juries.

Another point which has been overlooked is that, in trials of scheduled offences, certain additional rights are enjoyed by the accused, including the requirement that the judge give his reasons for his findings of fact as well as his sentence. Secondly, there is an automatic right of appeal against the judge's findings to the Court of Appeal which does not follow in the case of unscheduled offences.

These balancing factors, in my view, are reasons why it is right to move with caution towards descheduling. I hope that that view is shared by the Government. I think that the alliance would accept the reasons which were advanced by the Minister in opening the debate for not proceeding further or faster, and for rejecting those recommendations of Sir George Baker which he indicated the Government did not accept.

12.6 am

Mr. Ernie Roberts (Hackney, North and Stoke Newington): I have a few observations only which I make because I understand that there is unlikly to be a Division at the end of the debate.

I am opposed to the so-called temporary seven-year old Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. Even with the amendments proposed, it will not comply with the European convention on human rights. Furthermore, it will still not compare with the level of justice which exists in this part of Britain. I am advised that the Government are proposing these amendments based on the fact that they were the sort of amendments recommended by the Baker review.

However, Baker also put forward some other important recommendations for the Government to put into effect to make the Act a little more just. Among those was that the power of internment should be totally removed from the statute book. It was also recommended that all arrests should be on the basis of reasonable suspicion and not just suspicion; the army's powers of arrest should be confined to terrorist-type offences, the initial onus for opposing bail should be on the prosecution, and bail should be automatic for anyone held on remand for more than 12 months without committal for trial. Furthermore, confessions obtained by violence or the threat of violence should be inadmissible in court. Baker recommended that a limit should be placed on the number of defendants in any one trial. I maintain that the amendments so suggested will not make the emergency powers legislation any more just than it is at present.

Mr. Stuart Bell (Middlesbrough): This is the expurgated version of the speech that I might have made but for the lateness of the hour and courtesy to the House.

I welcome to our debate my hon. Friend the Member for Hackney, North and Stoke Newington (Mr. Roberts). I listened with interest to his brief remarks.

We waited with some eagerness to hear the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan). I had hoped to hear a definitive description of the alliance position which would have been of some assistance to the people of Northern Ireland. I regret that the message from the hon. Gentleman is that the people of Northern Ireland have nothing to hope from the SDP/Liberal alliance other than half-baked, half-thought out, ill-advised and ill-conceived ideas. I am sure that that message will be clear.

The order extends the list of so-called scheduled offences in schedule 4 of the 1978 Act. They are not to be treated as scheduled offences unless the Attorney-General so certifies. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) said in his short but cogent speech, the order does not go far enough, but earlier the Secretary of State said that he would take into account the wider and more positive recommendations in the Baker report and that legislation would be introduced in this Parliament.

The Opposition do not intend to divide the House on this order.

12[illegible] am

Mr. Scott: With the leave of the House, may I say that we have covered briefly some interesting matters.

I must tell the hon. Member for Hackney, North and Stoke Newington (Mr. Roberts) that the order has to be seen against the background of the Government's declared intention further to implement the Baker recommendations by introducing legislation in this Parliament, as the hon. Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) recognised. We were conscious that this limited progress could be made through an amending order without primary legislation. We thought it right to demonstrate the Government's commitment and to respond to pressures by taking this modest step. The Government are determined to legislate further during this Parliament.

The Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act is fully consistent with the European convention on human rights and the United Nations international covenant on civil and political rights. It is a distortion to imply that it is not.

The hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) mentioned the distinction between different types of robbery. We have come to the conclusion that there is a difficulty in deciding, when firearms are used to rob a bank or post office, what the motive is—whether it is for paramilitary purposes or for private gain. To give the Attorney-General the power to decide whether it was a terrorist or domestic offence before the case comes to trial would prejudice the trial and we decided not to go down that road. But I have noted the hon. Gentleman's comments.

I am glad that the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) agrees that this order is a modest step in the right direction. I commend it to the House.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved,

That the draft Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985, which was laid before this House on 14th November, be approved.

Orders of the Day

CROWN AGENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Motion made, and Question put forthwith, pursuant to Standing Order No. 69 (Second Reading Committees), That the Bill be now read a Second time.

Question agreed to.

Bill accordingly read a Second time, and committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 42 (Committal of Bills).

Crown Agents (Amendment) Bill [Money]

Queen's Recommendation having been signified—

12.14 am

The Minister for Overseas Development (Mr. Timothy Raison): I beg to move,

That, for the purposes of any Act resulting from the Crown Agents (Amendment) Bill, it is expedient to authorise any remission of interest on the commencing capital debt of the Crown Agents for the period 1987-1991; and in this resolution "commencing capital debt" has the same meaning as in the Crown Agents Act 1979.

The money resolution is straightforward. It reflects the narrow and specific purpose of the Crown Agents (Amendment) Bill on which we had a full debate in Second Reading Committee last month. There is nothing of substance that I can add, and I commend the resolution to the House.

12.15 am

Mr. Stuart Holland (Vauxhall): I do not want unduly to detain the House at this hour, but issues were raised in Committee concerning the special estates of the staff of the Crown Agents pensions division at East Kilbride. The Minister assured us that he would seek to settle the matter by the end of December. Has he done that? If he has not, why not, and when can we expect a decision? We are prepared to anticipate that we shall get a better decision by waiting, but the Minister will appreciate the great anxiety of staff about their future and we should like to know when there might be a decision.

Mr. Raison: With the leave of the House, I should like to reply. I am afraid that I have to tell the hon. Gentleman that the matter is still under consideration. We have not yet been able to make a decision and I cannot say what the likely outcome will be. I realise the need to get on with it. I also realise that there is interest in it in East Kilbride.

I am anxious that we should make a decision as soon as possible. It has proved quite a complex matter—there are several interests that have to be taken into account, including the interests of my Department that pensions work is most effectively done, the interests of the Crown Agents and the interests of those concerned. I assure the hon. Gentleman that we are keen to get the matter settled as soon as possible, and I shall do all that I can to that end.

Question put and agreed to.

Urban Deprivation (Liverpool)

Motion made, and Question proposed, that this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Peter Lloyd.]

12.15 am

Mr. Robert Parry (Liverpool, Riverside): I am pleased to have this opportunity to raise the subject of urban deprivation and housing problems in the inner-city areas of Liverpool.

In the debate initiated by the Opposition on a Supply Day on 11 December, I sat in the Chamber for more than five hours without being called. The debate covered the increasing poverty and deprivation in our inner-city areas and the Government's failure to deal with the serious pproblem of widespread disrepair in urban areas, the need to regenerate Britain's cities and the need to reverse the deliberate reduction of rate support grant and investment in housing which is leading to a major housing crisis and more homelessness among the more unfortunate members of our society.

I do not apologise for detaining the House so late, as I want to put on record my views and the problems facing my constituency and inner-city areas in Liverpool. According to figures supplied by the House of Commons Library, the estimated level of male unemployment in my constituency is 41 per cent. That is the highest in Great Britain, not just on the mainland. Of that number, 40 per cent. are under 25 and 61 per cent. have been unemployed for more than one year. Of the under-25s, 47 per cent. have been unemployed for more than 52 weeks. In areas such as Vauxhall, Everton and Toxteth, the true figure is well over 50 per cent.; more than one in every two people is on the dole and the scrap heap cannot be tolerated in any caring or civilised society or by any Government, including this most heartless and cruel one. The tragedy of long-term unemployment, especially among youth and white people is bad enough, but it is far more serious among black youth in Toxteth and other inner-city areas such as Handsworth, Brixton, Tottenham and Moss Side, which have witnessed horrific riots, violence and civil disturbances.

The Merseyside Manpower Services Commission has recently published a survey on ethnic minorities which shows that a disproportionate degree of unemployment is experienced by the black population of Liverpool and that, on average, black people need to be submitted for 25 vacancies before finding a job as compared to 15 for white people. I suggest that the figures are on the conservative side and can be multiplied throughout our urban areas. Mass long-term unemployment is, I believe, the major root cause of discontent in our inner-city areas.

I shall now consider the critical housing situation. I firmly believe that the right to life is the first basic human right but that the right to work and live in dignity with a roof over one's head follows closely behind. The right hon. Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Jenkin), when he was Secretary of State for the Environment, and the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow), when he was the Minister for Housing and Construction, visited my constituency, at my request, and both publicly stated after the event that they saw some of the worst housing they had ever seen. In spite of seeing pre-war slum tenements and appalling tower blocks, like the infamous "Piggeries" and the "Ugly Sisters", their response was to cut further Liverpool's allocation for the housing investment programme. The cuts have averaged 15 per cent. each year since 1979. Last year, Liverpool bid for £132 million to deal with its critical housing problems but was given only a miserly £31 million.

Then there were the central Government's cuts and the dereliction of responsibility by the Liberal-Tory coalition on the city council: few houses were built for rent for nearly a decade, the maintenance and repair departments were deliberately run down with job losses and the repair backlog reached epidemic proportions — the elected Labour city council, on a mandate given to it by the Liverpool people in two successive elections, kept its promise. It embarked on a crash programme of demolition of the old pre-war slum tenements and rat-infested tower blocks, maintenance of jobs within the council and provision of services. For that initiative, the democratically elected councillors will later this month face a court threat. This action may banish them from public office and make them bankrupt and even face imprisonment.

I have always supported the city council. I salute its brave councillors, its men of honour. Most of the 17 priority areas which are designated to be built in Liverpool are in my constituency. This is the most imaginative house-building programme in Britain. Where there were old slums, there are new building programmes. People are moving out of the slums to semi-detached houses and bungalows. There is sheltered accommodation for the aged and disabled. People, sometimes for the first time in their lives, are in a house with a garden in the back and front. I know people who are grandparents and great-grandparents who moved out of Victorian dwellings into the pre-war tenements and have never had a house. For the first time, they have a house in the community with a garden at the back and front. They are very happy about this.

According to the official figures, Liverpool, Riverside has 19·5 per cent. owner-occupiers compared with 55·7 per cent. for Great Britain. Rented council accommodation in the area is 53 per cent. compared with 31 per cent. nationally. On overcrowding, 8·5 per cent. of households in Riverside have more than one person per room, which is nearly twice the national average of 4·3 per cent. This is the highest in the north west. The last census shows that 6·2 per cent. of households in Riverside lacked or shared the use of a bath, which is nearly twice the British average of 3·2 per cent.

I must declare an interest in that I am a sponsored member of the Transport and General Workers Union and a member of its construction branch. Liverpool, despite its house-building programme, still has a waiting list of more than 20,000 people. It has the highest unemployment level in the construction industry in the United Kingdom.

It is crazy that, in areas of mass unemployment in the building industry and where there is a dearth of good housing, we witness the Government robbing the city of badly needed resources and finance. The "Group of Eight" in the construction industry, of whom the national secretary of my trade union, Mr. George Henderson, is one, has lobbied the Prime Minister, without success. Recently, the chairman of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities housing committee stated that it would need an injection of £19 billion just to keep the present housing stock in both the private and the public sector in a decent state of repair. In Liverpool alone, for every £1 spent on housing in 1979, when the Conservatives first came to power, only 26p was spent in 1985. Since 1979, more than 450,000 jobs in the building industry have gone. None of those statements has been refuted by the Government.

Last January, I tabled an early-day motion on unemployment in the building industry, which was supported by 123 right hon. and hon. Members. The Motion called for a massive increase in public investment to build badly needed new homes, to construct new roads and improve existing roads, and to overhaul our decaying sewerage and water system. It also called for a programme of public works to be carried out as suggested by the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress, the National Federation of Building Trade Employers, the building trade trade unions, the National Home Improvement Council and others to get the 450,000 building workers back to work and to help the companies which supply materials, thus creating more jobs and putting more life into decaying inner city areas. Those areas are stinking ghettoes suffering much deprivation. Thousands of our citizens are homeless or are living in dirty, squalid conditions. The unemployed are living in misery and despair, without any hope for the future.

I wish to quote from a letter which I received from the National Home Improvement Council:

"The NHIC is deeply concerned regarding the depressed housing of Liverpool and believe that this is reflected in many other inner cities. It is time the Government made positive steps to encourage new initiatives before the crisis becomes a national disaster."

I agree totally with that.

To complete the picture, now that public transport is under attack by the Government and the metropolitan councils are being abolished services will be further affected in inner city areas. Official Government figures in the 1981 census showed that in Riverside, my constituency, 79·3 per cent. of all households had no car. That was a higher percentage than in any other constituency in England and Wales and the third highest in Great Britain. The United Kingdom average was 39·5 per cent.

When the Minister replies, I hope that he will not put on the old record which we have heard so many times in the past when we have raised the question of deprivation. The Government keep repeating talk about investment in Merseyside in the international garden festival, the Merseyside development corporation, the enterprise zone or the freeport. The garden festival was a success for nine short months. The 500 jobs that were created by it have gone unfortunately and those people are back on the dole. Very few new jobs have been created by the freeport or by the Merseyside development corporation which is looking after the Albert docks.

Recently the Government were warned about what is happening by the Church of England in its report "Faith in the City". The Church of England, which was once called the Conservative party at prayer, and the leaders of the Catholic Church, the Methodists and the Free Church have expressed deep concern, as have the League of Friends, the Quakers. They cannot all be wrong.

In a Quaker survey a newcomer to Liverpool, who was a former social worker, said:

"They're really friendly, really warm. They go out of their way to help. It's as if there's a war on and we're all in it."

An NSPCC official said:

"One of the most awful things about unemployment is the loss of the individual's self-esteem and value in society. Our materialistic society rates success in terms of the kind of job and size of salary that a person has, rather than on who people are and what they do for each other—their personality and caring.

We need to change how we value people. We need to recognise that we have bred a generation of young people who may never work—may never have the opportunity to attain success as we now measure it."

Even this uncaring, heartless Government cannot ignore a city's cry for help. I represent Toxteth and before redistribution I represented the Granby area in which there is most civil disturbance. I warned the Government before the 1981 riots that things would blow up, but I was ignored.

Unfortunately, in 1981 there were the worst civil disturbances on the British mainland in our history. In 1985 there were even more serious incidents in Birmingham and London. I warn the Government that if they ignore the problem they will be responsible for any further civil disturbances, not only in Liverpool but in other inner-city areas.

We are sitting on a volcano ready to erupt. The time bomb is ticking away. The answer lies with the Government, and I sincerely hope that they heed the warning.

12.30 am

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Sir George Young): The hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) made a moving speech about the real problems that face his constituency in Liverpool. He is honest enough to acknowledge that the problems have not simply emerged over the past six years. They derive from the long-term economic decline of Liverpool, which has brought with it high unemployment and associated problems of physical dereliction, poor housing stock and a high proportion of disadvantaged groups.

The problems in Liverpool have built up over the past 25 years. It has been subjected to massive economic changes over that period, and it has lost about 30 per cent. of its population. Many of those who have left have been young people with skills. Changes in the national economy since the war have also led to the rundown of the port of Liverpool and the port-related activities. That, in its wake, has brought substantial losses in manufacturing capacity.

The hon. Gentleman would be wrong to suggest that there had been a massive reduction in Government spending on Merseyside. Since 1979-80, Government expenditure in that area has risen from £718 million to £1,041 million — an increase of 45 per cent. The Government are spending a great deal of money on the city of Liverpool. A massive £28 million was allocated through the urban aid programme alone last year. The initiatives have included the creation of a new maritime museum, a revamp for Lime street station, improvements to the city centre sites and buildings and access routes related to the international garden festival.

We are doing what we can with derelict land in Merseyside. We spent £6 million on derelict land grant, and there was a major land reclamation exercise costing £6·5 million to create the Wavertree technology park. Some £12 million has been spent on housing and historic buildings. The Anglican cathedral precinct is the most significant initiative under that heading, but we are also upgrading housing in Princes boulevard, preserving the

[Sir George Young]

18th and 19th century houses in Canning street and helping the Weller street and Brownlow hill co-operatives provide homes.

The hon. Gentleman spent some time discussing housing and homelessness. There are a large number of vacant dwellings in Liverpool—2,178 in 1984, which is 3·35 per cent. of the housing stock. It is essential to bring back into use existing dwellings that are unoccupied, before we indulge in a major new house building for rent programme.

Mr. Parry: Is the Minister referring to houses awaiting demolition? A number of pre-war tenements are boarded up and cannot be used for housing.

Sir George Young: Those are the figures given to us by Liverpool city council, and they are vacant dwellings in its area. Any district council will have some houses that are empty because tenants are changing or the properties are awaiting refurbishment, but the percentage in Liverpool is 3·35. That is relatively high. In Birmingham it is 2·15 per cent. and in Gateshead it is 2·59 per cent. The first point that I want to make on housing is that, before the city council engages in a fairly expensive programme of new buildings for rent, it should realise that it is cheaper and quicker to bring back into use some of the dwellings that are unoccupied.

The hon. Gentleman spent much time on housing, I would not dispute the proposition that Liverpool's housing problems are among the worst in the country. The reasons for housing decay and the appalling problems of some of the post-war housing are well known. It is common ground between us that much money will have to be spent to give the people of Liverpool the opportunity to live in decent houses. The Government's view is that we must get the best value out of every pound of public money spent.

The Government believe that the response should not be rooted in the replacement of unpopular municipal stock. The aim should be to find the most cost-effective approach which provides housing choice and uses all available resources, including the private sector and the resourcefulness of local communities. The city council's reliance on a physical solution underplays the social problems on estates and ignores the desirability of giving people responsibility for their own homes. The municipal solution to which the council is committed is very expensive and rides roughshod over people's aspirations to own a home of their choice or to be involved in the management of their own housing.

There are many examples of improved council estates in other Merseyside authorities which have not relied on municipal action. Through the Merseyside task force, initiatives have been set in hand covering more than 10,000 dwellings. Housing choice has been widened through the privatisation of estates in Wirral and Sefton.

Through a package of urban programme and MSC funds, improvements to rundown estates are being secured by tenants themselves on community refurbishment schemes. Twelve such schemes are now under way, covering 6,500 dwellings.

The private sector is taking part in an initiative to develop sites which would not normally have attracted private funds, as a result of which over 800 new homes are being provided. However the sad fact is that none of those initiatives are taking place in Liverpool. They are taking place elsewhere in Merseyside. The opportunities for making more rapid progress in tackling the problems raised by the hon. Gentleman have been sacrificed by the city council on the altar of dogma.

The need to develop a varied and innovative approach to the problems was emphasised when my Department's urban housing renewal unit visited Liverpool in October. The unit explored the scope for involving the private sector in renewing the city's rundown estates. Both the task force and the unit have encouraged the city to decentralise its key management functions to a local level to improve services for the tenants. I hope that Liverpool will respond positively to these initiatives. They are not inspired out of political dogma, but have at their heart a commitment to improve the difficult conditions in which many tenants find themselves living in Liverpool.

The hon. Gentleman was critical of the Government's response to the issue that he has raised. I think that there is a feeling between us that much needs to be done to regenerate Liverpool. Government expenditure on Merseyside is running at about £1 billion a year, but we can see from the problems associated with post-war housing that committing resources is not by itself enough. Measures have to be taken to rebuild confidence as well as bringing about physical improvements. The Government are tackling the deep-seated economic and industrial problems of Liverpool on many fronts. The Department of Trade and Industry's grants and expenditure towards industrial investment in the area exceed £50 million in 1985-86. Since May 1979 Liverpool has received over £155 million in regional aid.

A concerted effort has been made, through MSC programmes, to improve the skill levels of the community, with some £78 million being spent in that area in 1985-86. Overall there has been an increase in adult training opportunities in Merseyside from 3,500 in 1984-85 to about 11,000 in 1985-86. Urban programme resources have been used in conjunction with MSC programmes to set up training projects. The designation of the Merseyside development area, the Speke enterprise zone and the freeport in Bootle have also improved the climate for investment in Merseyside. That joint approach is vital if real progress is to be made.

The hon. Gentleman was somewhat dismissive of the Merseyside Development Corporation, which we established in 1981. It has a remit to regenerate some 900 acres of massively derelict and disused docklands at the heart of the Merseyside conurbation. We have made good progress, and substantial reclamation and infrastructure programmes are under way. They already include notable successes such as the international garden festival and the restoration of the Albert dock, which will include the Tate of the North from 1988. In the current year, the MDC has resources of some £30 million.

The hon. Gentleman was again somewhat dismissive of the garden festival. It was the first ever garden festival to be held in this country. It attracted over 3·3 million visitors in the six months that it was open during 1984. It represented a major boost to the reclamation programme in the area and a stimulus to the Merseyside economy. The corporation has moved on to restoring the Albert dock warehouses — an outstanding group of grade 1 listed buildings in the Liverpool south docks. A joint restoration project with the Arrowcroft Group is now under way to provide commercial and residential accommodation. Two major blocks of development opened in August 1984, including the highly successful Maritime museum. A further block opened in July 1985, and a further development, to open in 1988, will include the Tate of the North gallery.

Other substantial projects include the restoration of the water system to the south docks, and the British American Tobacco project to convert disused dock sheds into small industrial units.

The MDC has adopted a tourism and leisure strategy for the Liverpool waterfront which builds on the success of the international garden festival, Albert dock and Martime museum. For the dock system between Albert dock and Toxteth dock a "shopping list" of key projects has been identified from which a successful mix of schemes will be drawn. These will include national tourist attractions as well as local and regional sports and leisure facilities.

The hon. Gentleman referred to the need for central Government to play their part in stimulating investment. The Merseyside task force has been active in promoting development projects and bringing together different agencies. Particular emphasis has been placed on interdepartmental co-operation and esablishing good links with the private sector, including the secondment of staff on specific initiatives. The main job of the task force is to work with local authorities, Government agencies such as English Estates, and with the private sector to carry forward initiatives and projects which help regenerate the area. There are considerable achievements to the credit of the task force.

A number of vacant sites have been brought back into use through the efforts of the task force — the most important being the Anglican cathedral precinct site. Others are the former Exchange station, which has been redeveloped for offices, the Wavertree technology park, where 64 acres of derelict land are being transformed into a centre for high technology industry. Public parks at Everton and Speke are being created out of derelict and neglected land. The Government have also co-operated with the private sector in land reclamation—examples of such schemes are Minster court, Kingsway loop and Mathew street.

The Government have been doing what they can, and it is legitimate to question the approach of the city council. The municipal approach of Liverpool city council has not been helpful in the regeneration process. It has largely ignored the potential of the private and voluntary sectors and has been patently wasteful of resources. It has helped to camouflage financial inefficiency. The council's housing strategy is almost entirely oriented towards municipalisation. It has embarked on an extensive new building programme, but has consistently refused to support self-help initiatives such as co-operatives, shared ownership schemes and building for sale.

Mr. Parry rose——

Sir George Young: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, I must finish my speech, so I shall not give way.

The city council has been at best indifferent and at worst hostile to the private sector and has withdrawn much of the support and encouragement given by the previous council. It has disbanded the Liverpool development agency, whose job it was to assist existing businesses and encourage new investment.

The council has failed to make use of Government money, provided through the urban programme, to assist firms. It has abandoned the industrial improvement areas set up by the previous Administration. It has made next to no use of urban development grants from my Department, which are specifically designed to enable investments to go ahead which would not otherwise be viable.

It has refused to co-operate with major Government-led initiatives to improve Liverpool's image and generate new activity, including the international garden festival and the Speke enterprise zone.

Mr. Parry: Will the Minister give way?

Sir George Young: No. With respect, the hon. Gentleman took 15 minutes to present his case and I have only half a minute left of my 15 minutes.

The council has tried to undermine and take over the traditionally strong voluntary section in Liverpool by refusing to support new voluntary sector proposals, and it has attempted to municipalise existing activities.

That is a formidable catalogue of missed opportunities by the city council. I know from my own experience as chairman of the London partnership committees, which are run by Left-wing Labour councils, that it is possible to work with the Government to tackle problems of urban regeneration. There is still the possibility of a consensus on the need to encourage business, create jobs and promote self-help. All too often, Liverpool has slammed the door on this type of co-operation. I very much hope that the hon. Member for Riverside will use what influence he has with the city council to persuade it to change its posture for the better in the coming year.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at fifteen minutes to One o'clock.

House of Commons

Friday 17 January 1986

The House met at half-past Nine o'clock

PRAYERS

[MR. SPEAKER in the Chair]

PETITION

Breast Cancer

9.34 am

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I beg to ask leave to present to the House a petition concerning breast cancer. The petition has been organised by the National Association of Ladies' Circles of Great Britain and Ireland. It is appropriate that it is being presented today, because the association will celebrate its 50th anniversary tomorrow. It has been signed by 12,855 women in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and it includes names from every one of the association's 55 areas. I pay tribute to the work of the association's secretary, Mrs. Daphne Fowler, who organised the petition.

The petition concerns an extremely serious matter, as 20,000 women a year are diagnosed as suffering from breast cancer. The condition leads to the death of about 12,000 women a year. A similar petition was presented 12 years ago, and since then over 140,000 women are estimated to have died from the condition. If earlier diagnosis were possible, many of these tragic deaths could be avoided. The petitioners believe—I agree with them whole-heartedly — that there is a desperate need to remedy the deficiencies in the system of dealing with this problem.

The petition reads:

Wherefore your petitioners pray that your honourable House urge the government to promote further research into the early diagnosis of breast cancer and stress the need for a screening programme to be more readily available.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

To lie upon the Table.

BILL PRESENTED

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. Secretary Fowler, supported by Secretary Sir Keith Joseph, Mr. Secretary Rifkind, Mr. Secretary Edwards, Mr. Secretary Baker, Mr. Kenneth Clarke, Mr. Peter Brooke, Mr. Tony Newton and Mr. John Major, presented a Bill to make provision in relation to personal pension schemes, to amend the law relating to social security, occupational pension schemes and the provision of refreshments for school pupils, to empower the Secretary of State to pay the travelling expenses of certain persons, and for connected purposes: And the same was read the First time; and ordered to be read a Second time on Monday 20 January and to be printed. [Bill 59.]

Orders of the Day

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill

Order for Second Reading read.

9.37 am

Mr. Tom Clarke (Monklands, West): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read a Second time.

I am extremely grateful and profoundly privileged to have the opportunity to present the Bill on behalf of my sponsors. I acknowledge the tremendous assistance that I have been given by right hon. and hon. Members on both sides of the House. I especially thank my right hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) and his all-party disablement group for endorsing the Bill and showing that they feel that it represents a priority when set against the problems that face us.

I accept that the coverage for this important event should, perhaps, be as distinct as that of other events—for example, the meeting that is taking place in the Royal Albert hall today. The implications of the Bill will perhaps have an influence on many more people than those whose causes are being debated at the Royal Albert hall. I regret that the interests of the disabled—of ordinary people—have not as yet captured the imagination of the media in a way that I consider to be important and which might be helpful to the progress of the Bill.

This is the first full debate on disability in the House for some time. If the Bill is enacted in due course, I hope that it will prove to be as major an advance as the Disabled Persons Act 1981, a measure which was piloted through the House by the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), and the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, which was introduced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris).

The Bill is firmly based on what has now become known internationally as the "Alf Morris Act". I pay tribute, as I think hon. Members would wish me to do, to my right hon. Friend the Member for Wythenshawe for his unstinting work for the disabled — [HON. MEMBERS: "Hear, hear."]—as a Back Bencher, as a Minister, and, for the time being, as an Opposition spokesperson.

I want to quote from the significant speech that my right hon. Friend made on 5 December 1969 in his Second Reading debate. He said something then which matches the test of time:

"if we could bequeath one precious gift to posterity, I would choose a society in which there is genuine compassion for the very sick and the disabled; where understanding is unostentatious and sincere . . . where, if years cannot be added to the lives of the chronically sick, at least life can be added to their years". —[Official Report, 5 December 1969; Vol. 792, c. 1863.]

If I can emulate that today in only a minor way, I am delighted to echo those sentiments.

I hope that the Bill will add to the "Alf Morris Act" and to the principles of the International Year of Disabled People — principles which show that we should be searching and seeking for full participation and equality for disabled people and giving those words genuine and true meaning.

Seen in its proper context, the Bill will give increasing recognition to the rights of disabled people to have a full say in decisions which concern them. It recognises that decisions are usually taken for, not with, disabled people; that disabled people have rights as well as needs; that disabled people are uniquely qualified to contribute to determining their needs; and that disabled people represent an untapped resource for society, offering great potential not just for their own individual achievement but for the enrichment of the whole of society.

[Mr. Tom Clarke]

I have received many letters from organisations, individuals and families from all over the United Kingdom. I know that other hon. Members have had that experience as well. At this stage I would simply like to quote a letter which I received from a parent of a mentally handicapped person in Lanarkshire who said:

"My son now aged 22 years suffers from cerebral palsy and is both mentally and physically handicapped. As parents we have always treated him as an equal to his three younger sisters. Therefore, he is very much part of our household, giving us the love and affection that only a son like he can give. They have a stabilising effect in a household that only persons with these disabilities can have."

I quote that to show the affection and genuine commitment in every sense to disabled people and in the knowledge that it is reciprocated in a way that all of us accept and welcome.

The people covered by the Bill are clearly defined and I want to repeat the definition because there have been some misunderstandings elsewhere. The definition is clearly stated as :

"Any person to whom section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 applies"— namely, people who are blind, deaf or dumb, substantially disabled by illness, injury or congenital deformity, or who are suffering from mental handicap or mental illness.

The Bill is intended to cover England, Wales and Scotland. In my recent travels in many parts of the United Kingdom, from Manchester to Edinburgh to Glasgow, some doubt has arisen on that point. When I visited the constituency of my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mr. Craigen) that point was raised and I hope that I assured those who were present that Scotland has in no sense been forgotten. Incidentially, I saw the excellent Maryhill central halls and the splendid work of voluntary organisations and individuals.

Mr. Jim Craigen (Glasgow, Maryhill): I am grateful for that. I know that my hon. Friend's visit was much appreciated, but did he find, as I have in the recent past, that while there is more scope for and call on the time of voluntary bodies they are now even more strapped for cash than ever because of the cuts in Government backing?

Mr. Clarke: I am sure that my hon. Friend makes a valid point. I am equally sure that not only will that be pursued in the course of the debate but in the many other debates when we come to argue about the priorities that we attach to these important matters.

Mr. Patrick Cormack (Staffordshire, South): Does the hon. Gentleman agree that the problems just referred to could equally well be solved if the Government would heed the campaign led by my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on VAT and charities?

Mr. Clarke: I am sure that the House will take on board the hon. Gentleman's comments. I am delighted to take interventions, but, if there are too many, some other legislation that might have been considered may not be reached.

My hon. Friend the Member for Maryhill referred to the voluntary organisations and that point is important. But I wish to develop my remarks to embrace the dedication — I use that word after great thought — of local authorities and health authorities in the way in which they deal with these important matters. I hope that they will accept that the Bill is an attempt to improve the situation of millions of disabled people and that that can indeed, be done, especially with the co-operation and commitment of such bodies, which have themselves a great deal to gain from improved administration, co-ordination, co-operation and efficiency. Therefore, I look forward to even more support than perhaps has been expressed so far by the various local authorities and people involved in health administration.

There will be improvements indirectly for the disabled, for example, over the right to be consulted on the planning of services. But perhaps more importantly there will be direct requirements that will be of assistance to the disabled among three special priority groups — young persons leaving special education, people leaving mental handicap or psychiatric hospitals and people whose carers can no longer cope.

I recognise that the timetable for considering the Bill is inevitably short, but I have endeavoured already to implement the basic thrust of the Bill's approach by seeking to consult as widely as possible, not just by way of correspondence—there has, as I have said, been a lot of that, and welcome it is too — but in meeting organisations representing disabled people and organisations of disabled people and listening carefully to what they have to say.

I want to acknowledge the assistance that I have had from the three Ministers on the Front Bench today—the Minister for Health, the right hon. Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Hayhoe), the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute (Mr. MacKay), and the Minister for Social Security, the hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton). The right hon. Member for Brentford and Isleworth and the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute will expect me, and rightly, to thank them for their contributions. Older hands in these matters have advised me that at the various ministerial meetings that took place, formal and informal, I should remember that in meeting two Ministers I should be ready to face Mr. Nice and Mr. Nasty. My problem, without wishing to make any comment on the attributes of both Ministers, is to decide which of those labels applies to which Minister. I think that the compromise is to distribute them fairly between both and to tell them that I shall suspend judgment until I see their performance in Committee.

Mr. Dennis Canavan (Falkirk, West): Who took the notes at the meeting?

Mr. Clarke: We shall come to that later.

Whatever our differences, we have all-party support and support throughout Britain for this measure. That must be an important consideration for us all, whatever our personal views. There comes a point when we cannot simply ignore public opinion or the views of those who deal daily with these problems. There needs to be continued consultation.

I understand from the Secretary of State that amendments will be submitted in due course, and I hope that they will strengthen the Bill. I accept that the Bill is a framework for progress. If the Government table amendments, I think that the British people will clearly say, "Do not weaken this legislation, for which we have been waiting for many long years. Give strength and conviction to it." I think that the Secretary of State would be well advised to do what they say.

The Bill's main principles are clearly determined by its short title. The Bill is about the services to and for disabled people which they receive individually or collectively. It is about consultation — the right of individuals to be consulted about services to them and the right of organisations of disabled people to be consulted about general services. The Bill is about representation — principally the right of disabled people to appoint a representative to speak for them. Above all, it is about crisis prevention. There will be a duty on local authorities to intervene before, rather than after, a crisis arises for the three key groups—children needing special education, people leaving mental handicap or psychiatric hospitals and people whose parents can no longer cope.

It might be for the convenience of the House if I refer briefly to each clause to explain my position and that of the Bill's sponsors. Clause 1 deals with the right to be represented. It builds on the successful advocacy schemes which are already in operation. It converts a concession into a right. This measure is of special concern to the mentally handicapped and the mentally ill. I draw the attention of Ministers to the 1980 DHSS review of mental handicap services, which specifically said:

"The most important factor in safeguarding the position of vulnerable patients and ensuring that their rights are upheld is personal contact between the patient and someone whose job it is to explain the position from the patient's point of view".

Clause 2, on assessments, will extend existing good practice. Information will be made available in booklet form. The right of disabled persons to present their views will be acknowledged. A written record of decisions will be made available to the disabled person or his representative.

Clauses 3 to 7 concern the move from crisis management to crisis prevention among the three groups I have identified. Clause 3 especially deals with young persons needing full-time education. Of all the clauses in the Bill, clause 3 is the one on which I have received outstanding support. I hope that, whatever the amendments that appear in due course, the Government will bear in mind that many organisations throughout the United Kingdom support this measure and believe that it is long overdue.

Often people leave school and fall into a trap not of their making. This frequently imposes a great strain on aging parents trying to cope full-time with a difficult domestic situation. With clause 3 we want to ensure that the social services departments and, in Scotland, the social work departments, are asked to act as the one door to all services. I know a young widow in my constituency with three children. Her son, who is approaching 19, is profoundly mentally handicapped. He is having difficulty in coping with plans for the future. Much more help should be available in such circumstances. I hope that the clause will strengthen the position of that young woman who has coped magnificently, and similar families.

Mr. Peter Thurnham (Bolton, North-East): Does the hon. Gentleman agree that people who are considering adopting handicapped children are especially concerned about cases such as the one he mentioned and what is to happen to such a child when he reaches 19? Will there be sufficient care, and will there be sufficient help for the carers?

Mr. Clarke: I am delighted that the hon. Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham), with his knowledge and experience of these matters, has made that point.

The main thrust of clause 4 concerns discharge from hospital. Individuals and public bodies have made many representations to me on this. On 4 December, an interesting debate on the mentally ill occurred in the other place. Time and again, speakers of all political complexions and of none pointed out that many mentally handicapped people—I accept that the debate was about the mentally ill — are finding themselves in prison because the courts have decided that there is nowhere else to send them. That is all the more reason why we should look closely at these matters.

I have not plucked the 28-day provision out of thin air. The Mental Health Act Commission in its biennial report stated:

"Discharge of a patient should be regarded as a process, rather than an event—a process of stages leading up to the event of physical discharge. Sudden discharge should be a thing of the past."

The Bill's sponsors and I have borne that recommendation in mind in making this provision.

There is appalling evidence of the lack of co-ordination on these matters, leading to a great deal of hardship and mental anguish for the people who are least able to cope. They are discharged from mental hospitals and no assessment of their needs is made. If no such assessment is made, it becomes more difficult to make adequate provision for them.

I know that we shall, in due course, have a debate on resources, but this is an opportunity to avoid wasteful expenditure, caused when patients go in and out of hospital like yo-yos, and to assess and deal properly with long-term needs.

The Royal College of Psychiatrists in a letter to me has said that it

"is very concerned that run-down of mental hospitals is already occurring up and down the country without adequate alternative provision being made by Local Authorities. In many areas there are no plans to accommodate vulnerable and dependent patients following their discharge into the community after many years in hospital."

I am sure that the House would wish to bear those points in mind.

Mr. Canavan: I support my hon. Friend's comments. Does he agree that the health authorities should not be allowed simply to pass the buck to the social work departments, bearing in mind the severe financial constraints that all local authorities are suffering because of Government policy? Does my hon. Friend agree that the National Health Service should have a continuing dominant role in the provision of community care for patients discharged from mental hospitals? Does my hon. Friend agree that the NHS and local authorities need much more generous funding from the Government if community care is to be a success? This is needed instead of community care on the cheap, which would mean that patients suffering mental handicap or mental illness would be wandering the streets, as happens in some countries such as the United States?

Mr. Clarke: I entirely agree with my hon. Friend. I hope that in due course the House can address itself to that serious problem.

Clause 5 deals with carers. This country owes an immense debt to carers, who do first-class work. They could never be paid for their dedication all round the clock, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year. The least we can do for carers is to offer them the right, when they feel that they can no longer cope, to a fresh assessment of their own position. I hope by that assessment to encourage local authorities to make reasonable provision for respite leave in recognition of the tremendous work that carers and often parents are doing.

I have had numerous representations on that point. One theme that shines through letter after letter in respect of carers is the question from elderly carers or from those worried about elderly carers, as to what will happen to the handicapped child after the parent can no longer cope or, perhaps, has gone. I hope that the clause, if it is endorsed by the House, will give reassurance to some extent about that important point.

Dr. Norman A. Godman (Greenock and Port Glasgow): That clause is one of the most important in my hon. Friend's Bill. Does he agree that one element of support that can be given to carers, which provides immense relief, is that of a break from caring—the provision of a holiday relief for such people each year?

Mr. Clarke: My hon. Friend has made an extremely good point. The assessment that we wish to see would mean that much more attention is paid to the important matter that he mentions.

Clauses 6 and 7 are an extension of the Education Act 1981, but no new statutory duties are involved. The procedures are based on existing best practice and on good administration which, I hope, saves time and money and emphasises the need for the full involvement of the disabled persons in decision making.

Clause 9 deals with advice to disabled people. It is a minor extension of the desire and the request for local authorities to provide information. I am sure that the House will be reassured by the knowledge that provision has been in force in Northern Ireland since 1978.

Clause 10 deals with public bodies. We ask that people appointed to committees should represent the views of disabled people. Times are changing. In the overwhelming majority of cases, disabled people can articulate their own views. When appointments are made to public bodies, I hope that that point will be borne in mind and that when the Bill becomes an Act it will give statutory backing to that principle.

Clause 11 deals with the role of this House. When my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) intervened, he reminded me that this clause, if approved in due course, will ensure that this Parliament will have information about people in mentally handicapped and psychiatric hospitals, and, what is even more important, it would know what happens to them after they are discharged. Although I am not asking for something like "War and Peace" to be presented to the House every second week, I believe that it is right that the House should know the global position. It would therefore be better informed when we have debates on this subject and about the resources which have been mentioned.

That would avoid the nonsense—worse than that: the unacceptable practice—of people being discharged from mental hospitals into community care which, hon. Members on both sides of the House know, in many cases does not exist.

Clause 12 deals with planning. I pay tribute to the Ministers involved for the measures that they have already introduced in respect of building regulations and access to buildings. The clause extends those principles to development plans. There is a need for disabled people to be involved at an early stage if provisions are to be right and money, again, is not to be wasted.

I have received representations from Scotland where a strong view is held that the principles contained in the clause might be adapted to meet Scottish needs. That matter will be raised as the Bill is debated.

Clause 13 is regarded by many people as controversial. I hope that in due course that will not prove to be the case. It relates to co-operation in planning services in Scotland. We are behind England and Wales, where health authorities are required to set up joint consultative committees and to include representatives on them from the voluntary sector.

The clause does not establish new bodies, but requires co-operation on joint planning, consultation with voluntary organisations and the need to publish joint plans. I know that the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland who has responsibility for health is aware of the many views that exist on that issue. It is right to remind him that of all the clauses this is the one which received most tepid response—if I can put it that way—in Scotland. As I understand he does, I look forward to the discussions that we will have in Committee. I hope that we can give profound consideration to that clause and perhaps find ourselves able to reflect what is, I believe, the overwhelming view of the people of Scotland—that the planning of these matters should not be left to a few people on health boards but that the consumers should have a meaningful say in how these matters are being dealt with.

Mr. Tom Cox (Tooting): My hon. Friend is talking about Scotland. I wish him well in his endeavours, but I hope that he will learn from the many mistakes that, unfortunately, we have made in England, especially in local government, where often social services departments do not liaise with housing departments. There is utter confusion. I hope that he will bear that point in mind and try to avoid the pitfalls that we experience week by week with many of our authorities.

Mr. Clarke: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for making that point. I welcome what he said. I am sure that the Minister responsible for Scottish health matters was listening even more carefully and will find that such a comment will encourage him to take a view different from the one that he has so far.

Clause 14 deals with financial provisions in respect of the Bill. I recognise that there are not just limitations, but profound limitations, on a Member seeking to introduce a measure of this kind. I thank the Minister for Health, because I understand that he intends to introduce a money resolution.

I have been involved with local government, so may I make the request and express the hope that the Minister will also put money into the rate support grant settlement for any initial extra cost? Then, when the Bill is enacted, we can debate the resources which might be required.

If we have genuine consultation and co-ordination, accept that there are people who know much more about these matters than we do, and if we take that expression of opinion into account and have a genuine democratic input into the decision-making process, I believe that money will be saved. I must admit, however, that that is not the Bill's major intention.

Clause 15 deals with phasing. It gives to local authorities, public bodies and others the right to express their views as to when each section of the Bill should be applied, in consultation with the appropriate Minister.

As the Bill makes its way through the House, a great deal of public interest will be expressed. I believe the support which is already known to exist among hon. Members will grow and will influence our deliberations. I am delighted that organisations such as the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the Association of Scottish Local Health Councils, Care in the Community—the Scottish working group—the Association of Directors of Social Work in Scotland and numerous voluntary organisations and individuals throughout the country have expressed their support for the principles of the Bill. I am delighted that we are reflecting the opinions of people who have done so much for the disabled and with the disabled and, above all, the disabled themselves. Disabled people within our society represent enormous potential for themselves, for the community, for their environment and for the nation. That is something that the Bill seeks to acknowledge.

Over 10 years ago, the United Nations General Assembly adopted a declaration on the rights of disabled people and called for national and international action to ensure that it would be used as a common base and frame of reference for the protection of those rights. The declaration said:

"Disabled persons have the inherent right to respect for their human dignity. Disabled persons, whatever the origin, nature and seriousness of their handicaps and disabilities have the same fundamental rights as their fellow citizens of the same age which implies, first and foremost the right to enjoy a decent life as normal and full as possible."

I believe that the Bill represents a small step in that direction. Given imagination and positive support, I believe that it represents a major beacon which, in time, the rest of the world may wish to copy.

10.12 am

Mr. John Hannam (Exeter): I apologise for the fact that I have a bad cold, so I will keep my comments brief. I am an extremely enthusiastic supporter of the Bill and am proud to be one of its sponsors. I should like to congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) for his choice of legislation and the way in which he has presented it to the House. He was fortunate to draw such a high place in the ballot but the disabled in Britain are more fortunate in having such a good champion of their interests.

I was not so lucky in the ballot. I drew number 19, but I am endeavouring to secure a second Reading for my Corneal Tissue Bill which will help with the increased provision of eye transplants. I am celebrating today because I have just received a letter from my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health and Social Security stating that the Government are able to give full support to that Bill. Therefore, I hope and trust that it will start its passage later today.

This Bill is a very good one. As the hon. Member for Monklands, West has stated, it has received little publicity in the press as it is not an eye-catching Bill. It is not as eye-catching as some of the other matters that are taking place in London today. However, it is important for disabled people and has been strongly supported at local level. Its effect will be to pull together much legislation and Government policy concerned with the provision of services for disabled people.

The Bill will make all the difference to the quality of decision making and the provision of services affecting disabled people. It is built out of years of experience of the provisions of such services. It picks out aspects of good practice and puts them into legislation. It does not put any additional duties on local authorities to incur extra expenditure. In some ways, as the hon. Member for Monklands, West stressed, it will streamline much of the bureaucracy involved in assessing the needs of a disabled person. I warmly welcome the Bill and I hope that it receives its second reading today.

The Bill is about better assessment procedures and the involvement of the disabled person and his or her representative in that assessment. I should like to highlight a few areas which I believe are particularly important.

Clause 3 is of particular interest to me. It deals with young handicapped people leaving school. The Education Act 1981—on the Bill for which I served—has done much to improve education for disabled children although there is still much to be done. However, for many reasons the Bill did not cover young people moving out of the school system at the age of 16 or 19. That has meant, as we have found through many of our constituency cases, that many children, having received appropriate education and care, are suddenly faced with an array of bodies all of which are reluctant to take responsibility for their needs. That has led to a waste of good resources and practices established during that person's school years.

The Bill builds on many of the practices established under the Education Act 1981, under which the local education authority has a duty to assess a child with special educational needs and to produce a statement of special educational needs. That should take into account the views of the parents and should outline the education authority's view of the needs of the child and how it intends to meet those needs. The Bill provides that the education authority responsible for a child or young person should inform the social services department, at least a year before the person is going to cease to receive full-time education. Not later than three months before that person's education is due to cease, the local education authority will inform the social services department of what further education or training is appropriate for the young person or child. The social services department will then make an assessment of that person's needs within the three months.

I believe that that will bring many advantages without incurring any additional cost. The local education authority already has assessments of the person involved and the social services should, under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, be making an assessment of the person. It will mean that the local authority is aware of a person's needs before he or she requires their services. It will ensure improved communication between the local education authority and the social services department which is most desirable in the provision of good community care. It will help to ensure that resources are targeted where they are needed, when they are needed. Local authorities frequently have to spend more at a later stage because of a failure to identify needs in time. It will encourage forward planning of services and, most important of all, the assessment will involve the young person and his or her representative.

[Mr. John Hannam]

That process must seem like good common sense to most people, but it is not carried out in many authorities. Some do carry out such procedures, but the Bill will ensure that such good practice is universal across the country.

Clause 10 highlights the central principle of the Bill, which is that the needs of disabled people are most efficiently and effectively met if the disabled people themselves are involved in the planning and decision making. It builds on sections 9 to 15 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970. That Act provided that a number of specific committees should include at least one person with experience of the needs of disabled people. To a large extent that has been achieved. We have all seen great progress in our constituencies in the involvement of disabled people on various committees. However, it has often led to a token disabled representative being nominated to a committee who is not truely accountable to disabled people. Clause 10 will ensure that such appointments are made only after consultation with the organisation of disabled people. I believe that that is important.

Clause 12 builds on existing practice on access for disabled people. We have made considerable progress in that area in the past few years. In 1985, regulations came into force that will ensure that all new offices and shops and one-storey buildings provide access facilities for disabled people. That is to be extended to cover all new buildings. We hope that it will also be extended to include alterations and extensions. It has now been established that access for disabled people is a genuine planning issue. That took many years to achieve. It was a long battle, but an important result was achieved.

The Bill amends the Town and Country Planning Act 1971. It will ensure that the local planning authority takes into account the needs of disabled people when it reviews or examines matters affecting the development of the area, that it also includes in its local structure plans measures to improve access to the environment for people with disabilities, and that disabled people are provided with adequate information and opportunities to make representations on those matters.

Once again, the Bill is doing no more than building into legislation what is already carried out in some local authorities as a matter of course, and has proved to be good practice. For example, one such matter on which local authorities should be consulting disabled people is pedestrianisation, which is taking place in many of our towns and cities. The Access Committee for England has been particularly concerned about some pedestrianisation schemes failing to take into account the needs of disabled people. What tends to happen is that, when an area is turned over to pedestrians, disabled people lose the facility to park outside the shops in which they wish to shop. It is factors such as that which planners must look at before finalising new schemes.

It is on such matters and on the whole issue of community care that improvements can be made without the local authority incurring any additional costs. Time and again, we hear of decisions being taken that have not accounted for the needs of disabled people, and of bureaucracy ploughing on and not stopping to think about the implications of a particular decision on disabled people. The local authority then has to pick up the pieces; in the meantime, considerable frustration has been caused to disabled people.

Like other hon. Members here today, and as the hon. Member for Monklands, West said, I have received letters of support from a wide range of local and national organisations, for example from the Devon Association for the Blind, which says that everything in the Bill adds up to good housekeeping. I received a letter from the Spastics Society drawing attention to the fears and worries facing elderly parents about the future of their disabled sons and daughters after their death.

I should like to quote from a letter that I received yesterday from the chairman of the Exeter and District branch of the Royal Society for Mentally Handicapped Children and Adults. It is a wonderful MENCAP branch of which I have the honour to be president. The chairman, Mr. Randall, expresses concern in his letter about the number of mentally handicapped people coming out into the community without proper assessment and preparation of facilities. He writes that in Exeter and District, where we have a good relationship between the health authority and the local community,

> "Occupation in leisure hours, evenings and weekends is at a premium. There are three clubs operating each on one night a week—they are overloaded already and are invaluable to the community and to the authorities who depend so heavily upon their existence, yet they receive no financial help from those authorities."

Therefore, we must make sure that there is proper co-ordination between our various statutory authorities—between the health and social services departments, and the education and leisure committees. Clause 4 will help immeasurably in achieving that end.

Disabled people and their carers will at last be brought within a working framework, which began in 1970 with the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act. Since then we in the all-party disablement group have helped to secure much progress. We are proud to help to secure the Second Reading of this excellent Bill.

10.24 am

Mr. Alfred Morris (Manchester, Wythenshawe): It is now virtually an annual custom for the House to debate one or more private Members' Bills on the problems and needs of Britains's 5·5 million disabled people and their families. Yet it is not by any means an old custom. In fact, before the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, there were entire Parliaments in which the claims of disabled people were never debated at all.

It seems outrageous, even incredible now, but in the Parliaments of 1959-64 there was not one debate on disability in the House of Commons. Going further back, there was not a single mention between 1945 and 1959, in the manifestos of either of the main political parties, of anything that might be done specifically to help people with disabilities.

In congratulating my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on his choice of Bill, I also most warmly thank him for so strongly maintaining the important new custom of this House. At the same time, I recall with gratitude today the generosity, among many others over recent years, of the right hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Stewart) and of my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing), who unhesitatingly used their good fortune in the ballot for private Members' Bills to advance the claims of disabled people.

The new custom of which I speak owes much to the work of the all-party disablement group in the House and, in particular, to the untiring endeavours of my right hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) and the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam), as its officers. It was the all-party disablement group, in its early stages, which made my task much easier than it would otherwise have been in securing the enactment of my Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Bill in 1970. The group's officers helped to build a unity of purpose in the House which, against very daunting odds, vouchsafed the Bill's enactment. In the entirely new climate which the measure created, spending on services and benefits for chronically sick and disabled people rose in the Act's first decade and, under successive Governments, from £330 million in 1971-72 to £3,030 million in 1981-82. That, too, in no small part, was the all-party disablement group's achievement.

Mr. Alexander Eadie (Midlothian): My right hon. Friend has given a chronology of the events. I hope that he remembers the legislation that I introduced, the Education (Mentally Handicapped Children) (Scotland) Act 1974. It was readily taken up by the present Lord Gray of Contin and it made a tremendous difference to the mentally handicapped, as it meant that children in Scotland were no longer deemed ineducable.

Mr. Morris: I well recall my hon. Friend's important initiative in 1974. There are many other Bills that pressure of time makes it difficult for me to mention today. I am grateful also, of course, to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), among others, for the very important Disabled Persons Act 1981. May I just say, too, that it will be wrong for me to give way to right hon. and hon. Members this morning, as much as I would like to. This is because I know that the Minister is under pressure of time. I naturally want him to have full opportunity to reply to the debate.

In referring to the influence of the all-party disablement group in all that has been achieved for chronically sick and disabled people, I must also briefly mention the untimely recent death of the right hon. Sir Neil Marten. He was a distinguished member of the group over many years and was of enormous help throughout the proceedings on the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act. He was fearless, incredibly industrious and a strongly principled man of the highest integrity. I mourn his passing, as I feel sure will the House as a whole.

My hon. Friend's Bill aims to ensure fuller and more humane implementation of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act in the conditions of today. It is a private Member's Bill eminently worthy of the name. Many such Bills are, in fact, Government Bills masquerading as private Members' Bills. They are sponsored by hon. Members who win high places in the ballot for a reward of the whole range of help available to Ministers in promoting legislation. Not only their Bills, but often their speeches, are wholly drafted for them. They are briefed by civil servants on every aspect and detail of the legislation and its effect, and, among other favours, are guaranteed not just the benevolence but the practical assistance of the Government Whip's Office. That was not the primrose path chosen by my hon. Friend. He has opted for the hard and hazardous road of presenting a private Member's Bill properly so-called and richly deserves the reward today of achieving a unanimous Second Reading for his Bill.

My hon. Friend opened the debate with a speech that was at once well-informed, persuasive and characteristically sincere. He was strong on issues of principle and flexible about the means of giving them effect. The content and manner of his speech will have won him support on both sides of the House and, from this Opposition Front Bench, I pledge our full support for the aims of this Bill.

There will be many technical and drafting points to consider in Committee and all of us know that the Bill will not solve all of the problems to which it is addressed. Yet it provides a new framework for progress and we, on this side of the House, will play our full part in detailed discussions on the Bill upstairs. The only real issue today is whether the Bill should go to Committee and we have no doubt whatever that it should so proceed.

Over the years since 1970, millions of people with disabilities have been helped by the provisions of the 1970 Act, but the emphasis in many localities has too often been on what the providers thought best, with little if any attempt to consult disabled people or their representatives. The single most important aim of my hon. Friend's Bill is to give disabled people a much bigger say in the making of decisions that crucially affect their own lives. It asserts the right of disabled people to an active involvement in the assessment of their needs and is strongly endorsed by their organisations.

There can be few hon. or right hon. Members who have not been moved by the extent of the support for this Bill among the voluntary organisations that work to make life better for disabled people. The Bill's recognition of the importance of assessing the needs of carers is very widely welcomed in the voluntary sector, as is the call for an annual review of community care plans for children and adults in long-stay mental handicap and psychiatric hospitals. It is a Bill about trying to bring representation into rehabilitation which can do much, given the support it merits, both to improve the quality of life of people with disabilities and to ease the strain on families.

The Bill is wholly consistent with some of the major aims of the world charter for disabled people, the international drafting committee of which I had the honour to chair as the first ever Minister with responsibility for the disabled, and which the Prime Minister "warmly welcomed" on behalf of the British Government at 10 Downing street on 11 November 1981. That alone entitles the Bill to the Minister's approval and I hope that, when he speaks today, he will do so in full support of its provisions—indeed that he will pledge himself to help in strengthening the Bill, wherever possible, when we come to discuss it in more detail in Committee.

When this Government came to power, they promised to single out disabled people for special help. Yet all of us know, on both sides of the House, from our mailbags, as from our meetings with disabled people, that they complain today of being singled out for special hardship. They insist, with total justification, that they have been pushed to the back of the longest and most heartbreaking queues in Britain, those for jobs and homes, and of being the victims of some of this Government's unkindest cuts of all. I was given last week, by Peter Large of the

[Mr. Morris]

Disablement Income Group, who is held in the highest respect in all parties, a list of 12 very damaging actions by the Government against disabled people since they came to power. It is an indictment as formidable as it is authoritative.

The disabled and their families suffer disproportionately from cuts in social spending. Special housing provision for the disabled has slumped disastrously since 1979, while housing adaptations have also been much more difficult to secure. For many, the tragic cost has been to lose their independence and their reaction is often one of anger when people in authority talk piously of community care. If anyone doubts the seriously adverse effects for disabled people of the sustained assault on local government spending over recent years, let them look at the published statistics of help made available under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act since the Government came to power.

This debate gives the Minister an opportunity to make some amends. I hope that he will put to shame the Ministers who responded for the Government to the important Bills of the right hon. Member for Western Isles and of my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, West Derby, both of which were defeated by procedural manoeuvring of the shabbiest kind. I hope the right hon. Gentleman will also take the opportunity that this debate provides to deal as conclusively as he can with questions of current concern which, if unanswered today, are bound to recur in Committee.

First of all, there is the question of charging for home helps. It is the Government's policy, confirmed by one DHSS Minister after another, that local authorities should not charge people who are provided with home helps, under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act, if they are in receipt of supplementary benefit. Yet many such people are still charged for their home helps. Take the case of the London borough of Barnet, whose policies affect the Prime Minister's own constituents in Finchley. That local authority still imposes home help charges on disabled people in receipt of supplementary benefit—including disabled constituents of the right hon. Lady—and I approached her about it on 1 December last to see whether she could help to have the policy urgently reviewed. I told her of the very deep concern, among organisations of disabled people, that the Government's policy is being flouted in the Prime Minister's own constituency and at the expense of the most needful of her electors. Seven weeks later I have still not had her reply.

The rationale of excluding people on supplementary benefit from home help charges is, of course, that very often the only alternative to helping them to live at home is to admit them to hospitals or other institutions at far greater cost to the taxpayer and/or ratepayer than the cost of providing a home help. That is why it is against their interests and is self-defeating to charge disabled people for their home helps if they are on supplementary benefit. I hope that the Minister will now strongly reprove Barnet and the other authorities which still force disabled people into making the choice of paying for their home helps or economising on food and warmth. It is a grossly reprehensible policy that amounts to kicking people when they are down. I implore the Minister to speak out against it loud and clear today, since it makes no sense whatever to threaten the independence of people who, if they are forced into institutional care, involve central and/or local government in far more public expenditure than the cost of help in the home.

Home helps are unquestionably one of the most cost-efficient of all sources of assistance to disabled people. Yet in most localities there are now fewer home helps than the DHSS's own recommended minimum of 12 per 1,000 of the population. The Liberal-controlled Isle of Wight provides less than one quarter of the Government's minimum. With one exception, all of the councils at the top of the league are Labour-controlled or built up their home help service during a recent period of Labour control. All of the councils at the bottom of the league, with the exception of the Isle of Wight, are Conservative-controlled.

Newcastle upon Tyne has 16·25 home helps per 1,000 of the population, compared with Barnet's 3·96; and Lewisham has 15·25, compared with Surrey's 3·47. Ironically, the reward for the caring councils is to be branded by the Government as overspenders and they are financially penalised for refusing to cut the provision they make. How can that possibly be justified by Ministers who profess a commitment to community care?

The Minister will know, from his colleague the Minister with responsibility for the disabled, of the concern expressed to the Government by organisations of disabled people about the effect on the most caring local authorities of the Government's proposals for changing the social security system. In particular, there is concern about their ability to cope, even with their legal responsibilities to disabled people, if the present system of single payments for exceptional needs is abolished.

Many voluntary organisations see the Government's proposal to replace these payments by a cash-limited social fund as a step towards passing the "final safety net responsibility" for claimants in urgent need from the DHSS to local authorities. At a time when brutal cuts in the Government's rate support grant already involve agonising choices for councils, that is a deeply worrying prospect. In fact, as described in the White Paper, the social fund is akin to sealing the valve on a pressure cooker while keeping the heat going. Sooner or later, as compelling needs are no longer met, there will be an explosion. The social fund is, as Action for Benefits has said:

"a disaster waiting to happen that will have grave social consequences."

In the week before the Christmas recess, on 17 December, the Minister with responsibility for the disabled met the all-party disablement group to discuss the Government's proposals in the White Paper. He was told in detail of the anxieties of the organisations of and for disabled people. The Spastics Society had commented on the proposals in a paper headed

"Programme for Disaster for Disabled People", while the Disability Alliance described them as:

"pernicious proposals which will hit the poorest and most vulnerable groups in society."

Is there any likelihood that the arguments put to the Minister with responsibility for the disabled on 17 December will soften the Government's proposals as they affect disabled people?

I raised with the Minister with responsibility for the disabled the case of Jennifer, a severely disabled person who is also housebound and incontinent. The Government's proposals will, in the Spastic Society's view, create for her "a major crisis". Jennifer also has renal failure and is treated by dialysis. She now receives £23·30 in additional allowances as follows: heating addition—she is housebound—£5·45; diet addition for her renal failure, £10·65; laundry addition because of her incontinence, £1·80; bath addition because of her incontinence, £3·90; and special wear and tear on clothing, £1·50.

According to the White Paper's illustrative figures the disabled person's premium is to be pitched at £12·25, or only half of what Jennifer and other severely disabled people like her now receive. If she is put under pressure in that way, there may be no alternative to institutional care, and the whole purpose of my hon. Friend's Bill will be shamefully subverted. It is a matter of some urgency, therefore, for the Minister to say whether the criticisms we raised with the Minister with responsibility for the disabled before the recess have had any effect on the Government's thinking.

Ministers are never slow to pay tribute to carers. As the number of very elderly people in the population goes on rising, the extent to which we depend as a community on the unpaid labour of their friends and relatives also increases. As the cared for grow older, so do the carers, which is why clause 5 of my hon. Friend's Bill is so essential. If the carer breaks down, either physically or emotionally, the state has two disabled people to look after instead of one.

Over recent years we have seen how failure to provide adequate community care involves higher costs for the community in the long run. I refer to the sharp upsurge in supplementary benefit payments to support people in private residential homes. The early intervention that the Bill proposes will, in the view of many experts, actually save resources. The Government must in this debate clarify their social security policy for carers. I appreciate the Minister's problem, and that his hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland may respond later in the debate where he himself cannot do so.

Are the Government willing to face further humiliation in the European Court over extending invalid care allowance to married and co-habiting women? Again, how can they possibly justify cutting the supplementary benefit entitlement of carers in their White Paper proposals? Today carers may receive the long-term rate of supplementary benefit after a year, but in the White Paper they are treated in the same way as an unemployed person. I ask the Minister to comment on that when he replies, and must remind him that it is just not good enough for the Government to ask us to await the results of their prevalence study of people with disabilities, which will not be available for several years.

By definition of the word "family", if one member is disabled the whole family will probably be involved in the problems of disability. That is why it is the merest mistake to think that the problems of disability affect only the 5·5 million disabled people in Britain today. As I argued when commending my own legislation to the House, the mother of a disabled child is affected, like the child of a disabled mother. With millions more they, too, are involved in the problems of disability, and the involvement of family is nowhere stronger than it is in the case of disability caused by mental illness. When mental illness strikes, as in the case of schizophrenia, the family as a whole can be devastated by its consequences, and it is the beginning of wisdom in any discussion about disability to realise that very often one can only help the disabled person in the context of family.

I most warmly congratulate The Times and, in particular, Marjorie Wallace on her superb series of articles on schizophrenia, for which she richly deserves a major journalistic award. In a powerful leading article on 19 December, The Times put some very important questions to the Government, which deserve the Minister's attention today. I ask him to respond, in his speech, both to that leader and the eloquent message of the articles by Marjorie Wallace. I hope also that he will acknowledge the relevance of the Bill to many of the issues that were raised.

In its leader of 19 December, The Times said:

"The policy of making care in the community available is the right one. It is the execution which is proving weak."

it sought a closing of the gap, as my hon. Friend's Bill does, between precept and practice and, under the very apt heading

"Ease a Tragedy, Stop a Scandal"

it challenged the Government to recognise both the urgency and compelling importance of ensuring that people with schizophrenia, like other victims of mental illness, receive the right help, in the right place at the right time. It was worthy of the attention of everyone in positions of responsibility for the mentally ill.

Through lack of clear ministerial guidance, many needful families have been unaware that the Chronically Sick and Disabled Person Act applies, where appropriate, as much to the mentally ill and the mentally handicapped as to people with physical and sensory disabilities. As the Minister will know, under section 28 of the Act the Secretary of State, where it appears to him to be necessary or expedient to do so for the proper operation of any provision of the Act:

"may by regulations made by statutory instrument, . . . make provision as to the interpretation for the purposes of that provision of any of the following expressions appearing therein, that is to say, 'chronically sick', 'chronic illness', 'disabled' and 'disability'."

Activating section 28, to make it absolutely clear that the mentally disabled are covered by the legislation is one positive step open to the Government that could have an immediate and beneficial effect for many families now trying to cope with the problems of mental illness who are unaware of their statutory rights under the 1970 Act.

Like other right hon. and hon. Members on both sides of the House I am concerned about the special educational needs of children who suffer from dyslexia. Late last year, there was a High Court ruling which ought to improve the educational opportunities of many thousands of such children. It was held that the Hampshire education authority's refusal to recognise that a 13-year-old boy with dyslexia had special educational needs—and to make special provision for him—was based on an error of law. That case prompts me to say that it is perhaps timely for section 27 of the 1970 Act, which deals with special educational treatment for dyslexic children, to be reviewed when my hon. Friend's Bill reaches Committee. The Minister may wish to discuss this with his colleagues at the Department of Education and Science as consideration of the Bill proceeds. Meanwhile it will be helpful to the House, as to the parents of all dyslexic children, to know what study the Government have now made of the implications of the ruling in the Hampshire case and what action they propose to take.

[Mr. Morris]

The parents of dyslexic children are not alone in wanting to see the Government's rhetoric matched by realistic action to relieve their anxieties. My friend Peter Mittler, the professor of special education at the university of Manchester, with responsibility for the training of teachers of children and young people with special educational needs, told me only this week of the daunting difficulties he and his colleagues are facing. They are involved in a programme of teacher re-education in consequence of the Education Act 1981, and their centre at Manchester university is a world leader in the field of special educational needs. They provide a wide range of courses, both part-time and full-time, in which large numbers of teachers and psychologists are being trained for positions of responsibility in meeting special educational needs in ordinary schools. Yet, although they are at the sharp end of implementing the Government's policy in this field, their work is constantly undermined by crippling shortage of resources.

Professor Mittler writes:

"To give you just one example, we had to abandon one of only four courses in this country in the education of children with social and emotional difficulties. Only London University now has a course on working with what used to be called maladjusted pupils—surely a high priority, since ordinary schools are not succeeding in retaining and teaching these pupils, with the result that increasing numbers of them are being sent to special schools, contrary to national policies and professional advice. We have tried to retain some aspects of our teaching in this field by buying in part-time help, but there are no funds to continue this work next year."

In a strongly compelling passage in his letter, Professor Mittler goes on to say:

"The education of the children of this country, and the training of those who teach them, is a higher priority than spending more than £1 million a day in maintaining a presence in the Falklands, not to mention the billions of pounds we spend without question on nuclear armaments."

He believes, as I do, that politics is fundamentally about priorities and the allocation of resources, and that this country cannot afford to neglect the education of its handicapped children. He makes the point, as I have done in many recent debates on disability, that the problem of meeting the legitimate claims of disabled people, not least of disabled children, is basically one not of resources but of political will and priorities. The right hon. Gentleman may like to comment on Professor Mittler's deeply disturbing statement to me.

I hope that the right hon. Gentleman will also comment on the case for reconsideration of the provisions of section 22 of the 1970 Act, which requires a report to Parliament each year on progress made in research and development work carried out, by or on behalf of any Minister of the Crown, in relation to equipment that might increase the range of activities and independence or well-being of disabled persons and, in particularly, such equipment as might improve their indoor and outdoor mobility. The annual reports which have been presented under section 22, many of them of high quality, are of the first importance to disabled people and their organisations. They are all too often unplublicised and unread, which is why many informed people feel that there should now be a requirement for them to be debatable by Parliament. The necessary amendment to section 22 is one that we could perhaps consider in Committee. If we can do so, it will be seen as a positive step by disabled people and by many right hon. and hon. Members on both sides of the House.

The very sharp differences in what different local authorities now provide under section 2 of the 1970 Act alone justify the main provisions of my hon. Friend's Bill. The Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation is to be congratulated on its work in producing a code of practice for use by local authorities in implementing the Act. The code gives valuable guidance on both assessment of need and the provision of services but, in supporting my hon. Friend's Bill, the royal association now appeals with all of the other main organisations for a strengthening of the Act itself.

In this regard, I was pleased to note a point made by the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi), speaking as a former Minister with responsibility for the disabled in the present Government. He made plain his dissatisfaction with the way in which section 2 of the 1970 Act is now too often applied when, in July 1983, he said:

"Local authorities are both 'judge and jury' regarding assessment of need and there is no right of appeal; perhaps a disabled person should have recourse to the Courts instead of having to work through the Secretary of State for Social Services."

My hon. Friend's Bill does not go that far, but, if the present Minister feels that his predecessor's view should be looked at in Committee, I am sure that my hon. Friend will want to respond sympathetically and that he will be pleased to look at any proposition that is put to him, from either side of the House that can strengthen and improve the provisions of his Bill. As of now, the former Minister's statement strongly underlines the moderation of my hon. Friend's approach. He wants to work closely with everyone who can assist him and the House for the sole purpose of helping some of the most needful people in this country.

The Act which this Bill seeks to amend, and whose 15th anniversary was marked by our debate last June, reached the statute book entirely without party animus. Everyone who spoke, whether here on the Floor of the House or upstairs in Committee, seemed to know the value of things as well as their cost. It was a rare parliamentary moment when unity of purpose, in an important cause, triumphed over every other consideration, and when innumerable people and organisations outside parliament worked with us to achieve lasting progress for disabled people.

In their thousands, those people and organisations helped to transform the whole climate of parliamentary and public opinion from one of, at best, benign charity to one of acceptance that disabled people are entitled to live independent and dignified lives as full members of the community. Their 'Word Charter' asserts that disabled people have the same rights as all humanity to grow and to learn, to work and to create, to love and to be loved. That is the philosophy of my hon. Friend's Bill, which is why he deserves all possible support and success in his endeavours.

10.55 am

The Minister for Health (Mr. Barney Hayhoe): I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on his good fortune in coming first in the ballot—that is the essential element—and on his choice of subject. There are notable precedents for using private Members' Bills to legislate on services for the disabled. Indeed, the Bill before the House builds very much on the foundations laid more than 15 years ago by the Chronically

Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970. I am glad to follow two sponsors of that Act—my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam), whose work in the all-party group is well known, recognised and respected on both sides of the House, and the right hon. member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris), who has a distinguished record of concern and action on behalf of the disabled.

The right hon. Gentleman paid a rightful tribute to Neil Marten—someone whom I first met at a conference on developments for young people in 1946—which will have been warmly welcomed on both sides of the House. However, I am not sure whether I can say the same about some of the right hon. Gentleman's other comments in his wide-ranging speech. He took advantage of the traditions and procedures of the House, which do not confine a Second Reading debate to matters precisely relevant to the Bill and which permit hon. Members to range as wide as they wish, but within the limitations that you impose, Mr. Deputy Speaker, across other areas. Many of the right hon. Gentleman's points will be more relevant to the Social Security Bill, to which we gave a First Reading earlier today, and I have little doubt that the right hon. Gentleman will return to them during the Second Reading debate on that Bill, if he is fortunate enough to catch the eye of the occupant of the Chair.

A notable absentee from our debate is my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for the disabled. He has explained to the hon. Member for Monklands, West why he is not standing at the Dispatch Box speaking on behalf of the Government. But he was able to hear the opening speech in the debate, and I shall have the advantage of his advice when further consideration is given to the Bill. My hon. Friend is bound up with the Social Security Bill, and, as the right hon. Member for Wythenshawe will readily acknowledge, it is difficult to be involved in the Committee stage of a complicated Bill on Tuesdays and Thursdays and then to give adequate attention to the Committee stage of a private Member's Bill, which will normally be considered on Wednesdays.

Although regretting the absence of my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for the disabled, I am delighted that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland with responsibility for health is here. If provoked, he may intervene on particular Scottish matters, although I know that he wishes to give hon. Members as wide an opportunity as possible to participate in the debate.

I make it clear at the outset that the general philosophy that has inspired the provision of the Bill is, by and large, wholly in line with Government thinking on services for disabled people. A more open style of communication between disabled people and those who provide services for them, better communications between authorities and better co-ordination of services, proper regard for the needs of informal carers are all principles that, in one way or another, the DHSS and the health departments and Scotland and Wales have tried to promulgate and encourage among those working in this sector for many years, and under successive Governments.

I quote just two examples of recent DHSS activity to illustrate the point. On the co-ordination of services, I published only a few weeks ago—at the very end of November—a report entitled "Progress in Partnership" on ways of improving collaboration between health and local authorities in planning and delivering health care and social services. I have agreed with the local authority and health authority associations about the need to follow up the report as soon as possible with guidance to authorities on joint planning.

With my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, I participated in a meeting with the local authority associations and others earlier this week.

On informal carers, I remind the House of the recent project of the Department's social work service—now the social services inspectorate—to draw attention to the needs of informal carers and to encourage policy makers, managers and front line workers to consider how support for a dependent person's informal carer could be made an integral part of the range of services needed for effective community care. A number of elements in the centrally-funded programme which is called "Helping the Community to Care" are also specifically concerned with support for informal carers. I join in the tributes to the work that they do and the crucial and vital contribution that they make towards caring and coping with the disabled within the community.

The general principles that the Bill seeks to enshrine are ones that, for the most part, the Government wish wholeheartedly to endorse. This is a Bill whose heart, if I may put it in this way, is very much in the right place. However, when one turns from general principles to specific provisions, I am afraid that my enthusiasm for the Bill becomes rather less glowing. This is despite the fact that the hon. Member for Monklands, West was kind enough to show me and my hon. Friend the Scottish Minister with responsibility for health the early draft of the Bill, before it was published. Subsequently, he incorporated a number of changes that were suggested to him into the published version. I think that he will agree that many of the suggested changes made a significant improvement to the Bill. I am grateful to him for the action that he has taken. However, from the Government's point of view, the changes do not go far enough, and some substantial further changes will be needed before the Bill can become a workable measure that the Government can support.

One objection to a Bill such as this, which lays specific and detailed duties on local authorities and others in respect of particular client groups, is that it must inevitably put pressure on local authorities to concentrate some of their effort and resources on one kind of client rather than another. I do not want to make too much of this argument. Physically and mentally disabled people are of course priority groups in terms of Government policies, and much existing legislation—including of course the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act to which I referred earlier—could be described as "client-group specific".

On the other hand, I remind the House that, given the need of all local authorities to control their overall expenditure—and I make absolutely no apologies for the fact that there is such a need—any extra pound that a local authority has to spend on services for disabled people as a result of this Bill could well mean a pound less for other groups which hon. Members might feel should be given at least as high priority—elderly people, the frail, or children at risk. If the resources are constrained, there is no increase and the effect of the Bill is to direct more of those resources to the particular groups with which the Bill is concerned, that inevitably means, as a matter of mathematics rather than a matter of policy, that there are fewer resources available for other groups.

Mr. Jack Ashley (Stoke-on-Trent, South): I appreciate the point that the Minister is making, and that it poses a difficulty for him. However, does he agree that one of the crucial aspects of this Bill which should recommend it to the Government is that it is cost effective and will not cost the Government a great deal of money? Will he endorse that general principle of the Bill?

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall continue to make the point that I was making, because I shall deal, at least to a limited extent, with the resources problem that is linked with the Bill.

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): Does the Minister accept that the Government, in giving certain priority to the needs of the mentally handicapped and mentally ill, must inevitably imply that there should be a resource allocation deserving some priority? If there is no additional priority in resource allocation, surely the Government's words towards these groups are meaningless.

Mr. Hayhoe: As the right hon. Member for Wythenshawe said, in the past decade substantial extra resources have been allocated by consecutive Governments. My point is the narrow but important one that if legislation such as this leads merely to a change in the direction to which resources are deployed, it can have the effect of reducing resources for other groups not covered by legislation such as this but which have an equal, or at least some similar, claim upon available resources. Surely my point commends itself to the House. We have to be careful to recall that there are other groups within society—I mentioned the frail, the elderly and children as examples—at risk that also have claims upon public resources.

Mr. Thurnham: Does not the pressing need for resources for the disabled, to which the Bill points, emphasise the need for local authorities to use all their resources with the greatest efficiency? This is only a small part of their total revenue, and there need be no need for a diminution of other resources if local authorities use their resources efficiently.

Mr. Hayhoe: I agree with my hon. Friend. He knows that this has been the thrust of Government policy on the National Health Service, and much more widely. We are seeking the efficient use of resources. We want to deploy them in the best possible way by delivering care and services where they are most needed. I am glad that at least on this part of my speech I carry the whole House with me.

There is no doubt that to give local authorities new duties of the sort prescribed in this Bill—in particular, duties as to precisely when and how the assessment of a disabled person's needs should be carried out—will have quite substantial resource implications, although I am not in a position to attempt to quantify them at the moment. However, I and, I am sure, all right hon. and hon. Members have seen the briefing that has been provided by the Association of Metropolitan Authorities. One paragraph of its letter states:

"The Bill, as it stands would increase expenditure on service provision very significantly indeed. Additionally the administrative structures and staff to support the formal assessment and appeals system which the Bill seeks to introduce would be a costly business. We do not object to the Bill in principle but we believe that the expenditure implications are formidable."

May I now say something about the Association of County Councils, because it is wise to get the views of both of these major local authority associations clearly on the record. The ACC says:

"There is a further point which causes concern, that of over-bureaucratisation . . . Indeed, at a time of scarce resources, it could be argued that the money which might otherwise have been spent on administrative processes to the benefit of no one."

I take into account what my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) said a moment ago—that very few right hon. and hon. Members would argue that resources ought to be diverted away from care and services for the disabled to administrative purposes.

Mr. Tom Cox: Is the Minister for Health aware that what he is saying will be received with utter disbelief by the very people who are looking to my hon. Friend's Bill for help? There are two old psychiatric hospitals in my constituency. If we are to get people out of them, financial resources are needed in this area, otherwise they will remain there and all this talk will be meaningless.

Mr. Hayhoe: If the hon. Gentleman is arguing in favour of the Bill because it will lead to a significant extra flow of resources into the areas with which the Bill is concerned, he is making the same point as I am making—that as it stands the Bill can lead to an extra flow of resources. But it will not go necessarily to the client groups to which the hon. Gentleman has drawn attention but to the bureaucratic processes. I should have thought that nobody would want that to happen.

Mr. Robert N. Wareing (Liverpool, West Derby): Will the right hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Hayhoe: I should prefer not to do so at this stage, because the sharp criticisms that I have made of the Bill's provisions are not my words but those of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and of the Association of County Councils.

Mr. Wareing: I am grateful to the right hon. Gentleman for giving way. A number of right hon. and hon. Members have received the AMA's briefing, and the Minister for Health is perfectly correct in saying that it points to the serious financial implications of the Bill. However, if he looks at the last paragraph of the AMA's letter I am sure that the Minister has to admit that it is not true that the AMA is saying that what is needed is simply a movement of resources from one priority area to another within the existing budget. In its last paragraph the AMA says:

"It is for the government to decide whether or not to give effective support for this Bill and we hope that you will be able to urge the necessity for such support."

As the Minister for Health has responsibility for disabled people, it is for him and for his right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services to use their muscle in Cabinet to get such resources for local authorities. I am sorry to intervene at this point, but I understand that the Minister has to leave the House, which will probably be before I am able to catch your eye, Mr. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Hayhoe: I do not think that I misrepresented the AMA's position in any way. I quoted the points that it was making. The record will show, I think, that in no way did I misrepresent what the AMA said. The hon. Gentleman must have misunderstood me. When he looks at the record I think he will find that that is so. The Bill's sponsors may well reply—indeed, this is implicit in one or two of the comments that have been made—that the Bill requires all authorities only to do what the best of them are doing already. But local authorities must have the right to order their own priorities within the broad framework prescribed from the centre. If this Bill were enacted, it would be bound to inhibit them to some extent from doing so.

The basic difficulty here, I suggest, is not the general principle of legislation relating specifically to disabled people. As I say—and I pay tribute to those concerned—there are distinguished precedents for that. However, the detailed nature of many of the specific provisions in the Bill are, in the Government's view, a recipe for inflexibility, bureaucracy, legalism and waste. We are sustained in that view, to some extent at least, by the briefing we have had from the local authority associations.

Mr. Tom Clarke: I am sorry to intervene, but I understand that the Minister for Health will be leaving the Chamber at a later stage.

Mr. Hayhoe: Perhaps I can clarify this matter. Many hon. Members seem to be wholly misinformed—I think inadvertently — by the right hon. Member for Wythenshawe. I said merely that I hoped, as is not abnormal in these circumstances, to be able to slip out of the Chamber for a brief time during the course of the five hours that might be devoted to this debate and I thought that it would be useful to make the Government's position clear before doing so. I intend to leave the Chamber, but of course I shall return to listen to and take note of what is said later in the debate.

Mr. Clarke: Will the Minister for Health accept from a former president of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, which supports the Bill, that there has hardly been a measure introduced by any Government of whatever political complexion upon which local authorities have not said precisely the kind of thing that they are saying in those briefings and that there has hardly been a time when Governments of all political complexions have not dismissed the representations and said that the local authorities ought to try to make better use of their resources?

Mr. Hayhoe: There is something in what the hon. Gentleman says. However, one needs only to look at the detailed prescription that is contained in many of the Bill's clauses—a matter to which we shall return if the Bill is given a Second Reading—to see that in many areas it imposes a new bureaucratic burden upon the local authorities and, indeed, upon others. This detailed and over-prescriptive approach appears throughout the Bill. The worst offenders are clause 6 — procedures for assessment—and clause 7 which seeks to transplant a procedure from the Education Act 1981 and transform it into a provision for adult disabled people, a proposal about which the Government have already expressed scepticism in their response to the recommendations relating to community care of the Select Committee on Social Services.

There are other examples. In the Government's view, legislation should provide a framework within which services can be developed locally, not the sort of detailed prescription which is set out in the Bill. Potentially, the Bill could provide a basis for building some modest extentions to the existing strategic framework within which services for the disabled are provided. But if, as I expect, the House gives the Bill a Second Reading, a lot of work will be needed to remove some of the bureaucratic excesses and let the basic framework of principle emerge. But those are matters for the Committee and Report stages.

The Government applaud many of the ideas behind the Bill, but to its individual provisions our attitude is one of sceptical neutrality. I cannot positively commend the Bill to the House in its present form, but neither do I oppose its Second Reading. If the House takes the view that the Bill merits further detailed discussion, I hope that the hon. Member for Monklands, West and his sponsors will be prepared to respond constructively to amendments, some perhaps radical and substantial, which the Government will bring forward. If they do, it is likely that at the end of the day they will be responsible for a Bill that provides a useful if modest development of the present legislative basis on which services are provided for disabled people. That is a worthy achievement for any Member of this House.

11.21 am

Mr. Jack Ashley (Stoke-on-Trent, South): I warmly congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke), not only on his choice of subject for the Bill, but on the admirable way in which he presented it this morning. The fact that he was so reasonable should commend the Bill to the House. Indeed, the Minister has told us that my hon. Friend has been very reasonable in his discussions with the Department and in seeking to accommodate it so that the Bill could proceed unimpeded.

A number of people have helped in the preparation of the Bill. The all-party disablement group was only too delighted to give all the support that it could. I pay tribute to Peter Mitchell and John Healey who have made a major contribution to its preparation. We appreciate their work both for the all-party disablement group and in the preparation of the Bill.

Given the help that we have had and given the good will on all sides of the House, I was deeply disturbed by the Minister's speech. He began well by saying that the philosophy of the Bill was in line with Government thinking. That is fine—anyone can agree with a general philosophy. I suppose that Adolf Hitler could have said that Churchill's philosophy was in line with his—peace in our time. But that general philosophy led to war between our two countries when it came to the detail of interpreting the philosophies of Nazi Germany and Great Britain.

The application of the general philosophy as adumbrated by my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West and the general philosophy as explained by the Minister may appear to be the same. However, what the Minister said about the application of that philosophy shows that we are diametrically opposed in the implementation of the Bill.

The significance of that is that the Government may basically oppose the Bill. I hope that they will not do so on Second Reading today. Some influential members of the Conservative party are on record as supporting the Bill. I pay a warm tribute to the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam), whom I feel I should call my hon. Friend. He supports the Bill and I hope that he will vote in favour of it, together with his colleagues who have also expressed their support. We need the support of those Conservative Members in Committee, assuming that the Bill reaches

[Mr. Jack Ashley]

Committee. If the Bill is emasculated in Committee, we shall be left with nothing. I beg Conservative Members to support the Bill both in principle and in detail.

I understand that the Government cannot simply accept the Bill as it stands and that they will seek to amend it in Committee. However, I hope that the changes will not be so great as to make the Bill a nonentity. We need a great deal of understanding and co-operation, and the Minister's remarks upset me deeply. I hope that he will not push his points too far.

The Minister spoke of the costs of a bureaucratic burden. I think that he misunderstands what is required which is simply planning by local authorities to ensure that the disabled people provided for in the Bill have the benefit of planned transition from one stage to the next. The young disabled at school, the mentally handicapped in hospitals and the carers all need that sort of help. The whole aim of the Bill is to help them at the trigger points. We must plan those transitions. They may mean to some people bureaucracy, but to dismiss the idea as bureaucratic is the wrong approach.

We know from our discussions in the all-party disablement group that local authorities are jealous of their autonomy. We respect that autonomy, but we cannot leave this matter to local authorities alone because their provision is far too patchy. The Minister must intervene and put pressure on local authorities. He must insist that they provide resources that make it easier for the disabled to cope with their difficult periods. Therefore, there is no point in the Minister talking about the autonomy of local authorities.

The Minister quoted the AMA and the ACC, but was he doing so with approval? If he was, those words were really his words, even though he was quoting their words. his words were put into the mouths of the AMA and the ACC.

I am anxious not to make a long speech because I frown on long speeches. I shall briefly refer to my other points. The Bill confers new rights on disabled people, which is why I commend it to the House. They will have the right to information about themselves and the right to be involved in their cases. That is of paramount importance. The Bill gives a voice to those who hitherto were silent. It ensures open government for the disabled, which is something that we badly need. This Bill tackles the indifference and apathy of authorities and institutions and takes the disabled further along the road to equality. It enables them to have more control over their own destinies and helps them to make or to be involved in decisions about them. The Bill is a blow to the patronising attitude of so many people and it buttresses the self-respect of the disabled.

The Bill tackles long-standing scandals arising from society's neglect of the disabled, and my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West mentioned three groups in his admirable speech. He referred to handicapped school leavers, the mentally handicapped who leave hospital to live in the community, and carers. These groups have all suffered from an administrative failure to identify their needs, and there is no point in the Minister saying that helping them will cause bureaucracy. I hope that the Minister will change his view and his mind on that issue.

Handicapped children are protected while they are at school but they are neglected on leaving school. Their real needs should be recognised. The sad reality is that they go out in the world to face prejudice and sometimes derision. The stage at which they really need help is when they leave school.

The mentally handicapped who are leaving hospital represent the latest scandal. It is scandalous that mentally handicapped people should leave hospital, be confronted with normal responsibilities and find themselves bewildered. They go out into the big, wide and hard world without any help. They are people who can slither into miserable oblivion unless we can give them the sort of help that they need.

I pay tribute to what the Government have done for carers. I acknowledge that they have tried to help them but, unfortunately, they have not done enough. I hope that carers will be helped further.

The Government have helped to get children out of mentally handicapped hospitals but not enough has been done for them. A significant number have left the hospitals but those who are discharged find that there is no proper assessment of their needs. The Bill will ensure that they are properly assessed, which is a vital requirement.

Disability is always an individual affair and specialist and comprehensive assessment is vital. It is an individual matter and even the same diseases can have variable effects. In conferring new rights on the disabled, the Bill establishes good practice and ensures a framework for good service provision.

I have seen enough of the present Minister for Health to believe that he is a reasonable man. I believe that he is amenable to argument. I am aware of the constraints that he has to face and I know that his Department is faced with cash problems, for example, but I emphasise that the Bill is a low-cost measure. It does not demand massive expenditure. It goes a long way to provide new rights for three groups of vulnerable people and I hope that it will be given a Second Reading. I hope also that we shall all try to be reasonable in Committee. I trust that the Government will not try to emasculate it.

Mr. Wareing: On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. I think that you will agree that my right hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) is a respected standard bearer for the disabled and that his speeches need to be considered. Is it not a convention of the House that, when a right hon. or hon. Member has spoken, he remains in his place to hear at least the speech of the Member who is called to take up his remarks. I think that it is discourteous for the Minister to absent himself from the speech of my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Harold Walker): The Minister referred to his necessary absence from part of the debate.

11.34 am

Mr. Peter Thurnham (Bolton, North-East): I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on his good fortune. I well remember the excitement of the ballot. I was present at the draw. Statements were made on how many Members would pledge themselves to introduce another Bill to follow the measure about which we heard so much during the previous Session, which fell into the trap of being highly controversial.

First, I congratulate the hon. Gentleman on his good fortune. Secondly, I congratulate him on his wisdom in choosing such an important subject to take up in his Bill. As my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health has said, it is a warm-hearted Bill which has the support of both sides of the House. It seems that it will not run into the dangers of other private Members' Bills. At least, I hope that it will not. I heard my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health say that he was sceptical about some of the detailed clauses, but, I was pleased to hear the Government say, through my right hon. Friend, that they support warm-heartedly the ideas that are behind the Bill. I hope that that commitment will come through in Committee. It is obvious that a great deal of detailed work will have to be done at that stage.

It is so important for a Back Bencher to choose a subject that will ensure the safe passage of his Bill through the House. We learned in the previous Session that a Private Member's Bill can face opposition that is 99 per cent. based on procedural matters and 1 per cent. on content. We saw some extraordinary manoeuvres during the passage of the Bill that Mr. Enoch Powell attempted to introduce. I am pleased that the hon. Member for Monklands, West did not fall into that difficulty, especially as he had been involved in Mr. Powell's Bill as a member of the Committee that considered it. He must have been subjected to pressure to bring such a Bill before Parliament again.

At this stage I should declare an interest. I am not familiar with all the details of the legislation to which the hon. Member has referred, which stretches back over many years, but I have a practical interest in these matters through having brought into my family a handicapped child, who had been in care for many years. For six years he was shuffled from one place to another, and attempts to place him had broken down. He was in good temporary care before he came to my family but he had had six years in care. He had been advertised for 18 months as needing parents while my family and I, who lived only 30 miles away, had had our name down for over two years, having stated that we were interested in fostering or adopting a handicapped child.

I drew attention in an Adjournment debate on 25 November to the need for the Government to give greater help in co-ordinating services to ensure that when would-be parents are available and a child is in need of care, the two parties can be brought together. It is no good leaving these matters to local authorities. We often find that those who are involved are confronted with a sort of pass-the-parcel exercise, with the chances of coming to grips with the problem being submerged in bureaucratic difficulties.

I wish the hon. Member all success with his Bill. I trust that it will have a safe passage through Committee and Report. I am sure that he is relieved to know that no Bill is ahead of his and that no manoeuvres can take place that threaten the passage of his measure or hinder it. I hope that the Government will show commitment and that they will ensure that individual clauses do not give rise to difficulties on the grounds of excessive expense or bureaucratic pressures.

I draw attention to the need for handicapped children to receive special care, especially those who are still in institutions. The campaign which was mounted by Exodus rightly drew attention to the fact that over 500 children are still in hospitals in England and Wales. Throughout the United Kingdom there are probably about 1,000 children in National Health Service institutions, to which we can add an uncertain number who are, in effect, in long-term care in local authority institutions. I estimate that there are in total about 3,000 children in that predicament.

I welcome the work which is done by the British Agencies for Adoption and Fostering which has placed 2,000 children with special needs and has currently launched an appeal for £200,000 to help with its work in placing the next 2,000 children. The children who are now coming forward for placement are those with the most difficult needs, for whom care is most needed. If people are considering adopting or fostering a child with severe handicap they need to know what care will be available while the child is young and at the difficult stage when the child is 18 or 19 years old and falls into a gap. The Bill rightly draws attention to that latter point and it is that feature of it which I welcome most warmly. The hon. Member referred to 18-year-olds as falling into one of three key areas.

I am particularly concerned about all three of the key areas mentioned by the hon. Gentleman—the 18-year-olds, the hospital leavers and the carers who cannot cope. Adoptive or foster parents of handicapped children are most concerned about just those three areas. They are worried about what will happen to a child when he or she reaches the age of 18 and what help can be given if the child leaves hospital and the parents fall ill.

I recently received a long letter from a lady in an adjacent constituency who had seen a newspaper article. It is one of the most heart-rending cases that I have heard recently. The hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) said that this was not an eye-catching subject and that perhaps there were more eye-catching items in the news this week. But I congratulate my local paper on its treatment of the subject and I am sure that other local papers give full attention to this subject. My local paper the Bolton Evening News drew attention on its front page on 26 November to two forgotten children—case one, David, and case two, Ian—who have been in care, in one case for over five years, while the local authority has tried to find adoptive or foster homes. I am sure that there are people who would like to take them into care and they will be interested in the Bill and whether they will be able to do that and do it with confidence.

We have already touched on the need for respite care and that was dealt with in a recent article by Madeleine Simms in The Lancet on 2 November 1985. She wrote of the dreadful predicament of parents of severely handicapped young adults and she quoted the response of people whom she had been to see. It is appalling to read the remarks of some of those parents who said that they felt that they were imprisoned because of the difficulties that they were facing and the lack of help that was available to them. That shows the serious needs to which the Bill pays attention.

Some parents said that their difficulties were so great that, had they been able to consider an abortion at the time of the pregnancy, they would have opted for it and they could now see no end to their problems. The Bill should rightly help draw attention to such problems.

The Bill has been described as being cost-effective. Let me draw attention to the sort of costs that have been quoted. The latest figure that I have for the annual cost of looking after a mentally handicapped child in institutional care in the Greater London area is £19,000 a year and that excludes capital charges. If people were prepared to adopt or foster children in care, the costs would be less, so long as respite care and other services are made available. I draw the attention of the House to the fact that voluntary care is available. It is not just a question of money but of co-ordinating all the efforts of those people who are available. I am sure that many more people could be found to help children.

[Mr. Peter Thurnham]

The British Agency for Adoption and Fostering has done a great deal to draw attention to that problem. In a recent book entitled "Against the Odds: Adopting Handicapped Children" Catherine Macaskill says that there has been a revolution. It is a revolution that not all local authorities are properly aware of. The greater the needs of a child the more people who wish to adopt or foster rise to the challenge. Years ago, such children were locked away because it was felt that nobody wanted them. Now it is more like mountaineering—the higher the mountain, the greater the challenge. The more profound the degree of handicap, the greater the child's needs and the greater the challenge to the parents. Not all local authorities are aware of that. They are inclined to think that people who offer to adopt or foster a handicapped child must be odd. In many cases a family which has taken one child is interested in taking another, but the local authority regards them as being doubly odd.

Mr. Andrew Rowe (Mid-Kent): I confirm what my hon. Friend says. Many years ago, I went to the Lennox castle hospital, the largest institution for the mentally handicapped in Scotland, and was told by the medical superintendent there that he was confident that a number of staff working in that institution would not be there if there were not patients in that hospital with a handicap which most local authorities would regard as making them unadoptable.

Mr. Thurnham: That illustrates exactly the point that I am making. I recommend that hon. Members should read Catherine Macaskill's book. She says that the revolution started in America and is now here. The British Agencies for Adoption and Fostering have done an excellent job in producing a book called, "Be my Parent" which is available at nearly all local authority offices.

The right hon. Member for Ashton-under-Lyne (Mr. Sheldon) is not here today, but I do not think that he would mind me referring to a parent who wrote to me as a result of the newspaper article on 26 November to describe her dreadful predicament. The letter runs to 16 pages. She has a child, Sarah, who she is barely able to look after any longer. The mother has had to go into hospital for a serious brain operation and she finds that because of the effects of that operation, and the child's growth and greater weight, she can now hardly manage. When she turns to the Thameside local authority she finds that help is not as readily available as she hoped. Her letter is most moving and I only hope that she is now able to get the help that she so desperately needs.

That is the exact predicament which the Bill will deal with. I hope that it will provide that lady and many others like her with a solution to their great problems. That lady has looked after her child for 11½ years. All this time she has assumed that, if she were not able to care fully for the child, alternative care would be available, but she now finds that there is not. The child has the mental age of a one-month-old baby and is incapable of any further development. The child is unable to move properly although she has been going to a school for day care. The mother now finds that she cannot manage at home, despite the commitment of all the years of care for her daughter. Obviously, she is most worried about what will happen if she cannot continue to care for her.

I conclude by congratulating the hon. Member for Monklands, West on the choice of such an important subject—his ideas are so good. I have not been able to go through the Bill in the detail in which it will be gone through in Committee, but I hope that the Government will be able to come to an understanding with the hon. Gentleman about the detailed provisions so that the Government can give full support not only to the ideas but to every word of the Bill.

11.49 am

Mr. Tom Cox (Tooting): I join the many other Members who have paid warm tribute to my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) for introducing the Bill. As we know from the people we meet in our constituencies, this matter is crucial to them.

It is significant that, in a week in which there have been so many happenings in the House, this debate shows how the House really works. It shows that hon. Members whatever their party, get together and try to work together on the crucial issues that affect so many people. This is where the House comes into its own. This is what the people we represent expect from it.

I refer to clause 4. The speech by the Minister for Health fills me with concern. To make meaningful progress in getting people out of hospitals and back into the community will cost money. I am sure that many hon. Members agree. The people who come out of mental hospitals will need specialised back-up services for a considerable period. The Minister said, "Of course, the Government are concerned. Of course, we would like to do something." That is the old record by the Government that we hear repeatedly. They would like to do things for everyone but, if it will cost anything, they say, "Sorry, nothing from us today." That seemed to be the Minister's comment.

I am sure that in the run-up to the Budget the Prime Minister and many other Ministers will make statements about how essential tax cuts will be. We all know that, if tax cuts are to mean anything, they will be given only to those who are already on high incomes, as has happened repeatedly under the Government.

We should help the people mentioned in the letter to the hon. Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) and the letter to my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West which outlined the difficult problems. Some of the Minister's comments were an insult—such as, "If if will cost money, the Government cannot give it much warm support." In the coming weeks we shall hear only, "Tax cuts are the priority." They are not. It is up to the Government to have the courage to say, "Of course, we would like to give tax cuts but we believe that sections in the community have a greater priority. We must help them." We know that we shall never get all the money that we want for the issues that interest us as individual Members, but I believe that the Minister should think again about his comments. They will be received with utter disbelief by the many people who have listened to or read the debate. This Bill will be meaningless if the right hon. Gentleman pursues that line in Committee.

Mr. Roy Galley (Halifax): The hon. Gentleman is right that the Bill and the whole principle of community care will cost more money. That must be the case if the provisions are to succeed. I am a little concerned that the hon. Gentleman's comments are a little out of balance with the actual position. Does he not accept that the increase in health resources of 20 per cent., above any allowance for inflation, in the past five or six years and the projected increase in this week's public expenditure White Paper are a substantial additional injection of funds into health? There has been also a substantial additional injection of funds into social services. The mentally ill and the mentally handicapped have priority in that injection of funds. That may not be enough—we can argue about that—but it must be taken into account. The hon. Gentleman must balance his comments about resources.

Mr. Cox: I think that progress has been made. Many hon. Members will know from their experiences in their constituencies that that progress had to be made and still must be made. What are our priorities? They are the issues we are discussing—not the tax cuts about which we shall hear in the next few weeks.

Clause 4 recommends that 28 days' notice of discharge should be given to a local authority. That is commendable. Many people in my area, especially the elderly—I cannot believe that it is just my area—complain that they are virtually turned out of hospital, often with little or no back-up services in the community, and told, "Get your neighbour to keep an eye on you and to do the shopping." Notice must be given and assessment services provided if we are to ensure that the people who come out of hospital, where they have perhaps stayed for many years, are to be helped.

I return to the intervention by the hon. Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley). There are two psychiatric hospitals in my constituency—Tooting Bec and Springfield. The Government blackmailed us about Springfield hospital. It is an old-type mental hospital establishment. To the credit of the staff, doctors and local administration, they wanted to make improvements. The problem was that the South London hospital for women in my part of south London was closed. We were told, "If you want progress in Springfield hospital, the South London hospital must be closed." This kind of thing has happened repeatedly under the Government. To make progress in one aspect of health care, other services in the area must be closed so that the money can be reallocated. That is what is so wrong with the Government's policy. Unless we get away from that attitude we shall not make the progress we want. There has been an uphill battle in many areas to obtain the type of services—whether NHS or local authority—that are needed.

An allocation of money will mean that those services can begin to develop. We do not consider frequently enough the surplus land and buildings that belong to local hospitals. I do not particularly disagree with such sales—if the land and buildings are surplus, sell them—but I object to how that money is used. In my area, where hospitals have been closed, land has been sold off. We had an enormous struggle to obtain what we believed to be a fair share of the proceeds. The money did not go to us, as we believed it should. We could have done a great deal with it. We must look into this aspect of policy.

Young disabled people have a different attitude to their lives. They are not prepared to accept the conditions under which middle-aged or elderly disabled or handicapped people have had to live for many years. Obviously, the disabled and mentally ill have a right to say what type of role they wish to play in society. Many of the Bill's provisions will go a long way towards ensuring that their voices are heard because, far too often, they are not.

I have commented twice on hon. Members' remarks about participation. The views of the families who look after disabled and mentally ill people must be taken more account of to ensure that they are not always struggling to overcome the problems with which they live, not just for a few weeks and months, but often for many years.

There must be greater participation between hospitals and local authorities. The role of local authorities must be improved enormously. Within a local authority one department often follows one policy while another department follows a different policy. It might be thought that those departments must liaise, but one wonders how much liaison there is when one see letters about decisions that have been made. We cannot allow a debate such as this to go by without paying the warmest tribute to the staff working in hospitals catering for disabled and mentally ill people.

There are two psychiatric hospitals in my area. I go and I see the staff. I am full of admiration. I ask myself whether I could do that job. I do not know. We must obtain a genuine commitment from the Government towards the staff in National Health Service hospitals. We do not always see it. The staff should not always have to fight to obtain better working conditions and salaries. They do a job that demands the highest calibre of people. They should not be seen, as so often they are unfortunately, to be struggling to improve their conditions.

A few weeks ago MIND organised a conference called "Patients before People". That should be the aim not just of this Government but of all Governments, local authorities and those of us who have some power to make decisions. I hope that that will be the motto that we shall try to follow. We have a long way to go. As long as we can see progress and see that patients are again being treated as people in our community, we shall have gone a long way towards making life much better for many people who deserve a much better deal than, unfortunately, they have had in the past.

12.3 pm

Sir Nicholas Bonsor (Upminster): I add my voice to those who have already congratulated the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke). I am pleased to be able to take part in a debate on a subject upon which both sides of the House are warmly united. I agree with most of the Bill's detail.

Before commenting on the details, I should like to lay two red herrings that have been introduced by two Opposition Members. It is a pity that the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox), in what was so many ways an excellent speech, could not resist the temptation to make some party political digs on an occasion when I might have hoped we could try for more unanimity. What he said—I suppose that I should be grateful for this—showed the fundamental weakness of the Socialists' case which has been demonstrated every time that they have held office. It can be summarised briefly. Socialists are incapable of grasping the fact that unless we can found a strong economy and have a tax system which will encourage initiative, enterprise and growth, we shall not have the public funds available to spend upon public services such as the one that we are discussing and which we are dedicated to improving.

[Sir Nicholas Bonsor]

The hon. Gentleman attacked the Government for proposing tax cuts. He will find that the people will not agree with him, particularly if, as I hope, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer introduces those cuts by way of altering the tax threshold so that more people can be taken out of the tax system, and not take it off the top, but that is something we shall have to see.

Mr. Austin Mitchell (Great Grimsby): That has nothing to do with the Bill.

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I do not pretend that is has, but I did not raise the point. The hon. Member for Tooting raised it, and it had to be dealt with.

Mr. Thurnham: Everyone has said that voluntary care is the most important part of care in this country. The less tax burden those people have the better. They can then care for themselves. It is no good regarding the state as a nanny to take over whenever there are any problems. People should have the money in their pockets to care for themselves.

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My hon. Friend makes a valid point. One could go further, because the Bill is about encouragement and assistance given to the carers. The better off the carers, the less financial support they will need to carry out the magnificent work they do.

The Bill is about the quality of life of those people who have the misfortune to suffer handicaps. Without wishing to dismiss or diminish the importance of physical handicaps or to denigrate the importance of supporting such people, I should like to address my comments to the subject of mentally handicapped people. I believe that that is where the greatest need lies and where society is slowest to respond.

It is sad but true that most people prefer to ignore mentally handicapped people. They are embarrassed by them. They often do not extend the same sympathy to those who suffer from mental handicap as they do to those who are physically handicapped. That is especially true of communities around homes for the mentally handicapped and of people who might be able to offer the mentally handicapped work within their capabilities. The Government can, and I hope will, do more to encourage people to understand the problems better and to participate more fully in assisting to care for afflicted people.

The quality of life is affected by the Bill primarily through its encouragement of greater support for those who come out of the institutions in which many have to spend a large portion of their lives.

The Government are as dedicated—notwithstanding the implication in the otherwise good speech of the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris)—to encouraging the return of handicapped people into the community as are Opposition Members. Much of the Government's enterprise and attention are, as the right hon. Gentleman well knows, aimed at that purpose.

The survey established last summer to identify the needs of the handicapped and to see what further must be done is already under way. When it has reported, I trust that the Government will introduce further legislation in accordance with its recommendations.

It would be unfair to allow the right hon. Gentleman's untrue attack upon the Government's policy to be unchallenged. He said that the Government were doing less for handicapped people than the Labour Government had done. That is not true. He said that he had a list of 12 things which someone had given him critising the Government and saying how they had hurt handicapped people. One can point to shortcomings in every Government policy. I have no doubt that one of the criticisms justified but equally I have no doubt that many are not. What is undoubtedly true is that the Government have put aside far more resources to deal with the problem than any other Government.

Mr. Alfred Morris indicated dissent.

Mr. Thurnham: The right hon. Gentleman is shaking his head, but he should know that that is a fact.

Mr. Morris: The hon. Gentleman referred to the survey on disabled people on which the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys is working. The results of that survey are not expected for some years. The Government are taking decisions as if the results were already known. I agree about the importance of the survey. Incidentally, the 12 points put to me were those of Peter Large of the Disablement Income group. He is known and respected as a disabled person by both sides of the House.

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I accept the right hon. Gentleman's comments about Mr. Large. In the matter of the report he cannot have his cake and eat it. He is saying that the Government are taking no action but he is also saying that the Government are taking action as if the report were already completed. In the circumstances, I am sure that the right hon. Gentleman would not wish the Government to sit back and do nothing while waiting for the report. Nothing that the Government are doing is not subject to review when the report is published. His point is not a good one. He knows, as well as I do, that £5 million has been spent in 1985-86 and much of that has been set aside specifically for benefit for the long-term sick and disabled. That figure is substantially more than double what was being allocated in 1978 when the Labour party was last in office. I believe that the Government's record is nothing to be ashamed of in terms of the way in which the disabled are being supported.

I should like to congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West on avoiding the pitfalls of party political cross-Chamber argument. He gave a magnificent opening to the Bill, which has played a large part in cementing the intentions of both sides of the House to see that the Bill is successful. The hon. Member mentioned the effect of the inefficiency in some areas of the present administrative system and the way in which, without putting further allocations of funds into that system, much could be done which is at the moment left undone. I endorse that wholeheartedly.

I believe that one of the most important shortcomings in the area of mentally handicapped people is the accommodation in which they have to spend their lives if they are institutionalised beyond help. In my previous constituency of Nantwich, some hon. Members may recall that during the previous Session I had to fight, by way of an Adjournment debate, against an area health authority decision abruptly to close a small local hostel for the mentally handicapped holding 15 people and transfer them to a huge conglomerate in the middle of Manchester. The area health authority showed an unbelievable callousness. It ignored the medical advice that at least two of the people living in the hostel would probably die if they were moved. It ignored the wishes of the people in that hostel to remain in a village environment where they could get out and meet the people and do some light work. It ignored all the fundamental necessities of public health care.

It was only with the help of my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg), who was then Minister of State for Health and Social Security, that I managed to forestall the area health authority's wishes and win a reprieve. During that reprieve, we have changed the hostel from a public service hostel to a private trust. Without putting any additional allocated funds into the hostel above those which were already being spent in the public sector, the private trust has managed to give everybody who lives there a room of their own, a colour television and proper furnishings. Before that, they were living in dormitory accommodation with very little privacy and no amenities.

I do not believe that the public service is incapable of administering such homes with equal efficiency, but I believe that in almost all cases at present it is failing to do so. I hope that, when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State looks at the Bill and the provisions that must be made for the mentally handicapped, he will do everything he can to review, audit and check the efficiency of our present health administration service to make sure that the public, especially those who are being cared for, are getting full and proper value from the funds allocated to the problem.

I will not detain the House long on specific clauses because most of them have been adequately covered. Clause 1 is particularly welcome for the mentally handicapped. The right of representation instead of the facility for representation is a significant change that the Bill will introduce, I hope unchallenged in Committee and at the Report stage. For the mentally handicapped, even more than the physically handicapped, such representation is essential to ensure that the rights and the needs of the people who cannot look after themselves are properly safeguarded.

The assessment of those needs must be improved, again more for the mentally handicapped than for the physically handicapped. Clause 4 sets out the way in which that should be done. Clause 5, which is equally welcome, gives an additional assessment of the capacity of the carers to cope and provides for support to be given to them if that capacity falls short of what is needed. The people who put in the wonderful work of looking after the disabled, both mentally and physically, need a greater back-up and support. They often undertake those duties and carry them out to the best of their ability but find that it involves more than they expected. When that happens, the carer and the cared for are bound to suffer.

There are three reservations that I should like to bring to the attention of the hon. Member for Monklands, West. I should like him to consider them before the Committee stage, and perhaps I could have his answers then. I join with the Minister for Health in having reservations about the bureaucratisation. That is a horrible word but I cannot think of a better one.

Mr. Rowe: A horrible word for a horrible thing.

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: That is right. It is always difficult when defining statutory duties to get the balance right between giving sufficient power to the local authorities to help and giving too much power to them, so that instead of helping they interfere. The paperwork and the red tape that follows that often undoes the good work that would be done and which the legislators intend to do. In Committee and on Report, we must ensure that the Bill gets that balance right.

I am puzzled as to why, under clause 3(3), the consent of the child is required and the consent of the parent is required only if the child is incapable of forming a judgment. I am not sure of the legal position, because I have not had the opportunity to check it, but I should have thought that a 13 or 14-year-old child to whom that may refer might be capable of forming a judgment, but that if that judgment is at odds with that of the parents one should back the parents rather than the child. The parents' judgment is more likely to be in his interest.

Dr. Godman: Always?

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Not always, but generally. A 13 or 14-year-old has not had the experience of an older person. One is not always in the best position to make the decision for oneself. I should like to see a safeguard so that an adult judgment can be exercised in the matter.

The hon. Member for Monklands, West asked for a list of the numbers and ages of handicapped people. I am not convinced that such a list would assist the House in the form in which the Bill appears to demand it. For example, it does not give any breakdown of the severity of the handicap. It does not say whether the handicap is mental or physical or to what degree of handicap it applies. A breakdown of numbers and ages, particularly in the adult section, between 18 and 95, will not be of great assistance. The hon. Gentleman might like to consider whether better and more useful information might be achieved by some other means.

With those reservations, only one of which could be described as serious, I have the greatest pleasure in welcoming the hon. Gentleman's proposals, and I shall certainly support them.

12.20 pm

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on his good luck and thank him warmly for choosing this subject for the Bill, which is very relevant. We all know that those who come first in the ballot are under considerable pressure as to the legislation that they introduce. The Bill reflects the priority that the hon. Gentleman has given to this subject, which is shared in all parts of the House, as is evident from the debate. I hope that it is a priority that the Government will continue to support, not only in theory but in practice as far as possible, with the resources that are available.

The House knows of my interest in the area and of the family interest that we have. For that reason, apart from all the others, I wholeheartedly support the objectives of the Bill. I hope that it is given a unanimous Second Reading and that it goes forward to Committee to be considered and improved. I acknowledge that some areas might need rewording to achieve the Bill's objectives. All of the sponsors recognise that. We want the Bill to go forward so that those objectives can be achieved in the most efficient, effective and cost-effective manner, the main objective being the services that we are trying to give.

[Mr. Dafydd Wigley]

I add my thanks to the representatives of several organisations such as MENCAP, MIND, the Spastic Society and the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation, which have helped considerably in preparing the Bill.

The hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) said that we must always remember that we are discussing people. There is a tendency—I am guilty of it, as are all other hon. Members, and the Bill is, too—to refer to "the disabled" or "the mentally ill". We are talking about people. Many mentally and physically handicapped people feel a little resentful when they are classed generically like that. If we can, we should always refer to them as mentally handicapped people or mentally ill people. It is a good discipline and leads to better analysis.

The Bill has three objectives, which are all worthy. One is the improvement of representation and the establishment of rights. The second is the planning of services and the third deals with consultation. Representation is very important. If disabled people are able to represent themselves, that is the ideal. All well and good if they can represent themselves. We should do everything that we can to enable them to do so and to knock down the barriers, physical and others, that sometimes prevent them from being able to represent themselves.

Many disabled people, particularly those with a mental handicap, might not be able to represent themselves, and might never be able to represent themselves. Many of those people, particularly older people, may have few to speak up on their behalf. Some may be in long-stay hospitals or institutions and have only a handful of visitors, or not even any visitors, during the year. Therefore, they are in the hands of the staff. I pay tribute to the staff, who almost invariably show kindness and consideration to those people.

If individuals need someone to speak up for them, we must make sure that there is representation and advocacy of their needs. That is particularly relevant when people are moving from long-stay hospitals into the community. It is important that their wishes and needs are taken into account and that there are people to speak up for them.

Mr. Thurnham: Will the hon. Gentleman include children in long-stay mental hospitals, who have lost touch with their parents? The difficulty is to know who is responsible for them, because the National Health Service does not have ultimate responsibility for a child's life. It is important that, order clause 11, the names and addresses of the children are listed, as well as the local authorities, which should take responsibility if the parents have lost touch with the children. If parents have not seen their child for years, it is important that the local authority accepts responsibility for the child. I should like a list of local authorities responsible for the children to be included.

Mr. Wigley: The hon. Gentleman makes an important point. I am sure that we shall deal with it in Committee.

It is important that there is someone speaking from the child's point of view. In some circumstances where, regrettably, the parents may not be able to do so, have lost interest, or have died, there is a need for someone to do that. There could be dangers sometimes if the local authority takes that responsibility unto itself, because the local authority would have to represent the child against itself. The person representing the child must be genuinely independent, and his first priority must always be the need of the disabled person, be that person a child or an adult.

Representation and the advocacy of the needs and interests of disabled people should be a fundamental right. We should look at the wording of the Bill in Committee to ensure that we are establishing a fundamental right.

One aspect of the Bill that worries me is clause 1(1), which states that any disabled person

"may be represented by a representative whom he has authorised".

Two things cause me concern. First, the word "may" always causes difficulty in the House, and we ask whether it is strong enough. That is nothing new, and I am sure that we shall examine it in Committee. Secondly, I refer to the words "whom he has authorised". The client group that most greatly needs representation on its behalf is the profoundly mentally handicapped. They may not be able personally to give authorisation. We should ensure that the wording of clause 1(4) is adequate, so that those who most need the Bill are not left out or ignored. That matter needs attention.

Another important area in the Bill is the improvement that it provides in the procedures to assess the needs of disabled people and to plan services. By defining disabled people's needs and identifying them specifically in a coherent manner, there is a better chance of ensuring that those needs are met and the services are available for them in the right place and at the right time. Many organisations that deal with the needs of disabled people have referred to that. I should like to quote from a letter from Sir John Cox, director of the Spastics Society, who says:

"The Society is increasingly concerned with more multiply severely handicapped people, many of whom live at home with their parents, with little or no contact with statutory authorities. A co-ordinated assessment of need will help to provide a framework for progress for them by helping to strengthen the hand of disabled people and their families."

That is evidence from the Spastics Society, which is involved in that work. I commend those words to the Minister, because they help to answer some of the misgivings that he has expressed, reflecting discussions that he has had with local authority representatives. We need a balance, and the views of organisations such as the Spastics Society and MENCAP should be heeded.

Many disabled people do not get the support and services that they need, and nor do their families. Indeed, they sometimes miss out even when services are provided under statute. Part of the reason for that is lack of resources. There will always be a lack of resources, so we must maximise our use of them on selected priorities. Resources must go where our mouths are. Part of the reason is ignorance of services available to disabled people, and part of the reason is the system's failure to match the needs of disabled people with services.

I have an example of that in my village. A mentally handicapped man is being cared for by his mother. She is getting quite old and finds it increasingly difficult to look after him as he has become physically handicapped as well. Although they were in our midst and we knew about them, nobody had told her about mobility allowance which she could have got several years earlier than she did. We all know of similar examples. Services are available and it is possible to get help but there is a breakdown in communication. We must overcome that. We need a system that ensures that the people do not fail to get services because of ignorance of them.

We must plan services properly. There is an acute problem for young mentally handicapped people leaving school or full-time education. I think particularly of 16-to-19 year-olds. We heard Brian Rix, the secretary-general of MENCAP, talking on the radio this morning about a young mentally handicapped person from Gwent who went to an institution in Scotland. His parents gave up their home and moved up there to be close to him, but, as they arrived, he was discharged without any planning for the future.

We all know of parents of mentally handicapped people being acutely anxious about what will happen when their child's time at school ends—whether there will be any work opportunity, an opportunity in an adult training centre or any social life. Often, such people's social life has revolved around the place of education. Parents are also anxious about whether they will receive enough support to look after their child and whether their children will be able to lead an independent life, and can hope to have their own home and possibly to marry.

Such things should not be thought to be irrelevant to young mentally handicapped people. The system should ensure that they have such opportunities and, if they are unmarried, the opportunity to live as adults with two or three others of the same age in a group home. There should be services and support to facilitate that rather than make such people increasingly dependant on aging parents who grow less able to cope. Without that provision, such people can less easily be integrated into the community in middle age after their parents die. There must be planning at the appropriate time. Clause 3 provides for that. I hope that, with improvement, it is accepted.

Another group is a cause of concern—the ageing parents of adult mentally disabled or mentally ill children, or brothers, sisters, or spouses caring for them. The perennial question is, "What will happen when we are dead?" Their predicament is worrying and becomes worse with time, just as it becomes ever more difficult to cope. We should ideally be able to ensure that such people develop independent living in the community. Some families might not want that. If so, we must provide support services that increase gradually with time so that their position does not become impossible. We all know of people for whom it has become impossible. We must face the fact that circumstances might well become intractable without planning and gradually increasing support. The Bill addresses itself to that as well.

Disabled people must play a larger part in the planning of services for their benefit. We, the "do-gooders", often do what we perceive to be right and fail to consult those who are affected. We can often get constructive and enlightening replies if we ask what they need. More than that, we should provide an opportunity for them to be involved in the decision making process. That is an important development. Clause 10 helps in that direction, and clause 12 is also relevant. As for the objective of screening developments of public policy, whether of central or local government, we should screen all our decisions for their implications for disabled people, as we monitor those decisions for their effect on other groups.

Mr. Thurnham: Will the hon. Gentleman also include in that the need for medical research into the causes of handicap which goes to the point when conception occurs? If medical research could help at that stage, it could avoid later difficulties.

Mr. Wigley: I was using the term screening to mean looking at the implications of decisions for disabled people, just as we consider their effect on women and other interest groups. That should be built in, and the Bill aims to build it in in relation to town and country planning procedures. That is an advantageous step forward. It is already done in the GLC area and could be done elsewhere. The hon. Gentleman's point is absolutely right. It is much more desirable to prevent mental or physical handicap, but that goes beyond the realms of the Bill. However, it is worth noting that 141 hon. Members have supported the motion on the prevention of congenital handicap.

Many local councils have individually welcomed the provisions of the Bill. I am aware of the comments made by the Association of County Councils and, to a lesser extent, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities. I have received a letter from the ACC, which opposes the Bill. Did it consult properly with all its members? Did it receive comments from all member authorities, and do all those authorities take that view? I suspect not. With measures, including my Disabled Persons Act 1981, there is a danger that some bodies will give an instant reaction, and say, no on principle and because they do not want any change that makes impositions. It is perfectly valid for them to point out any increases in bureaucracy so that we can try to minimise them, and to point out the resource implications as we should be aware of changes that will require more resources. But let us have a positive attitude. We are not merely trying to pass laws to make impositions on authorities. We are here to improve essential services, and to improve minimum standards to the best practice that already exists. Those bodies should support that, not decry it, as they have done.

The Minister said that local authorities must be free to order their priorities and not have them prescribed from the centre. That comes a bit rich from the Government, given what has happened during the past three years in terms of the Government's direction of the resources that local authorities can use. But if we ask for priority to be given to a group, whether it be the mentally handicapped, the mentally ill or the elderly, we must accept the accompanying resource implications. As we work to integrate the mentally handicapped and the mentally ill into the community, we must accept that we shall need additional resources. Hon. Members on both sides of the House advocate this because it is the right policy. If it costs a bit more in public expenditure, we should go to the people and ask them to pay it. If we did that, we would obtain their support.

The Bill is timely and welcome, and if it reaches the statute book it will make a material change in the well being of families and individuals who must cope with disability, including mental handicap, physical handicap and mental illness. It deserves the support of hon. Members on both sides of the House, and I wish it well.

12.39 pm

Mr. Andrew Rowe (Mid-Kent): I begin by striking the only note of discord that I shall make in my speech, because I wish to get it out of the way quickly. The right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr.

[Mr. Andrew Rowe]

Morris), whose record in this area is respected by all and for whom I have a high regard, should not be allowed to get away with the suggestion that a straight comparison of the amount of money paid by local authorities on, for example, home helps is sufficient to attribute a good reputation to those which pay a lot and a bad reputation to those which pay less.

I drive to work every day through the borough of Lambeth and I see the results of the extraordinary depredations that that council has made on its ratepayers for many years. Many businesses have closed. Clapham used to be the centre of an enormous thriving industry, which has been almost driven out of London. I compare Lambeth with a district council in my area, which has held its rates steady for more than 10 years, as a direct consequence of which businesses have been attracted to the area, unemployment is beginning to decrease and the amount of resources available to spend on provision for the disabled is beginning, at last, to increase.

I ask myself whether some boroughs are being extraordinarily generous with other people's money. A great difficulty in my area is that the demands made by the so-called generous boroughs are a direct disadvantage to our district councils, which would dearly like to have more money to spend. I am, I might add, not wholly satisfied with the Government's allocation of rate support grant to my county and, therefore, my district councils. It would be better if the Government considered more carefully the way in which they reward local authorities that have faithfully carried out Government policy.

I shall leave that partisan note and pass on to the excellent Bill. It is fortunate that politicians develop thick skins, because the compliments showered deservedly upon the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) would have made an ordinary person turn bright scarlet and remain so for the entire debate. But I am delighted to add to what would be the embarrassment of anyone who was not a professional politician.

I am chairman of the all-party parliamentary panel on the personal social services, and I am delighted to follow the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), who is one of my fellow officers. It is important to remind the House of this new panel, which has existed for about 15 months. It was the brainchild of the social workers who, having discussed ways in which the dilemmas, difficulties and opportunities of social workers and the personal social services could best be presented and understood in Parliament, made available to us the services of a part-time research assistant. The House has responded by providing an all-party parliamentary panel, which takes an interest in social work and the personal social services. We work closely with other groups, about which I shall say something in a moment.

The Bill deals avowedly with crisis prevention and partnership. I re-emphasise the fact that the present lack of co-ordination not only among local authorities but, more importantly, among different services leads to carelessness—in the strict sense of the word—and to the wasting of resources.

When I was first a civil servant in the Scottish Office, my assistant secretary made an interesting case for prisons being returned to local authorities, not because he felt that it would necessarily add enormously to the provisions for serious criminals but because it would bring home to local authorities and to the local community the costs involved in putting people in prison. A genuine dilemma is posed by our present administrative divisions. For example, if a local authority can shift responsibility for something to, for example, the NHS, that is off its hands and on those of somebody else. The fact that it costs more to keep people in the NHS is something of which they are aware, but feel that it is not their business.

I congratulate the Government on having extended the arrangement for joint finance, which is an indispensable aid to making sense of the way in which we handle the overlap between local authorities and the NHS. In my area of Maidstone, the health authority is carrying out a very energetic and enlightened campaign to get a whole range of patients out of psychiatric hospitals and back into the community. This is being facilitated considerably by the arrangements for joint finance. This is an admirable policy, and I hope that when the time comes for the present arrangements to expire, the policy will be looked at carefully to see whether the time is yet ripe for it to be wound up or whether it should be extended for a while.

The Bill is about restoring power over their life to handicapped people, and this is enormously important. In this, the element of representation is almost indispensible. I am sure that every hon. Member has experience of being made to feel like an inanimate object in the presence of experts. I remember vividly the experiences of someone whom I know well. When he was in hospital, he was appalled when a specialist swept in to his room with 12 students, stood the students round the bed and said, "This, gentlemen, is a straightforward case." The dehumanisation, and the feeling that thereafter the students would go away and talk about him behind his back was extraordinary, and I have never forgotten hearing about it.

All the time there is a "de-skilling" of patients by a combination of their anxieties and the doctor's attitude. They come along desperately worried about some aspect of their lives, whether their health or disability or that of their loved ones. They come seeking help and are far too ready to lay aside common sense and experience and leave everything in the hands of the specialist. The specialist may be one of two kinds. He may be utterly humane but paternalistic and think that he must assume the burden of telling the patients exactly what should be done or, far more often than we realise, the specialist is extremely anxious.

I used to teach students and, when I was confident of a subject on which I was teaching, I was only too glad to allow questions from, and discussion with, my students, but, when I felt that I was on pretty shaky grounds and had prepared the lecture only superficially, I filled the entire time allotted by speaking—a feeling with which hon. Members may not be entirely unfamiliar. This happens in the interaction between the clients, or patients, and the specialist. To have a representative there to hold the balance—somebody who is slightly detached—is an admirable proposition and I very much hope that it will be pursued.

May I also re-emphasise the point that was very well made my the hon. Member for Monklands, West that the contribution of the disabled to society is still grossly underestimated. I have told the House on previous occasions that I am proud to be a trustee of Community Service Volunteers. In that position I have learnt vicariously that it is the young volunteer who is engaged in the very interesting and exciting experiment of living in a house with a severely handicapped person who gains from that experience. Quite frequently that young volunteer will admit only too readily that what he or she had to contribute at the beginning was little more than the unskilled work of providing a pair of hands and that they have absorbed from the handicapped person an experience of life and an expansion of their whole understanding of life that will be treasured long after the experiment is over.

Another question is that behind the Bill and integral to it is the need for training. May I remind the House that a debate is taking place about the training of social workers? In statutory terms the House has very little to say about that debate. I think that I am right in saying that the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work is entitled to make what recommendations it likes and to some extent to adapt the formal curriculum for social workers without very much interference from the House. However, it is a matter of the greatest importance. It brings sharply into focus the role that we expect social workers to play in our society. Frequently we put social workers into an intolerable position by demanding from them things which it is quite unrealistic to demand from them and then pillory them when they fail to deliver our wholly unrealistic expectations. Those wholly unrealistic expectations are frequently fuelled by highly skilled but over-ambitious social work trainers. They may feel confident that they could deliver those expectations, but they are dealing with students who frequently will find it quite impossible to do so. We need to look very carefully at the way in which the training of social workers is undertaken.

Furthermore, there is a very large number—I believe that it is over 70 per cent.—of staff in residential social service establishments who have had virtually no training at all. It is a horrific proposition that we should commit people, perhaps for the rest of their lives, to the care of untrained staff. We need desperately to look carefully at that proposition. One of the things that training needs to do is to provide these workers with confidence to handle their own doubts and difficulties and to share them with the client, and with their representative, in ways that will allow the client to make a much better plan for his own life than the life that these people, who are not very confident, frequently feel that they have to make for them.

Although this has nothing to do with the debate that is taking place within the social worker profession, we desperately need to expand and improve the training of the whole community so that it understands these very serious problems. In that connection I pay a high tribute to the posters of the Spastics Society. It has done a remarkable job in raising public awareness of the contribution that can be made by handicapped people. There should be very much more of that kind of activity.

It is also true that a great deal of discrimination against the handicapped results from unfamiliarity. People are afraid of saying the wrong thing, so they say nothing. They do not want to cause offence, so they simply ignore them. One reason why I applaud the move away from institutional care to community care is that by putting people frequently in touch with the handicapped, they will become familiar and more confident in their dealings with them. We need to help them in that, so the Government might consider extending the assistance given to voluntary organisations and others in raising public awareness of the contributions to society that the disabled can make.

In our consideration of the Bill, we should not be afraid of expanding considerably the contribution of volunteers. For example, many representatives could, quite properly, be volunteers. I say that for two reasons. First, during the past 85 years the average working life has halved. I believe that by the year 2035, it will have halved again. There will be an enormous reservoir of time that could be used for that sort of work. There is a great deal of evidence that there are people hungry to make that sort of contribution.

Secondly, I believe that volunteers are often the best people to represent other people. Professionals constantly must bear in mind that the person with whom they are battling today may be the person with whom they will have to co-operate on another case tomorrow.

Mr. Thurnham: On the difference of approach between voluntary organisations and local authorities, I refer my hon. Friend to Catherine Macaskill's book which contains 20 case studies of families who wanted to foster or adopt handicapped children. Half of them applied to local authorities, while the other half applied to voluntary bodies. The half that applied to local authorities were rejected, and only when they applied to the voluntary bodies were they able to adopt or foster. That shows the contribution of voluntary organisations. I believe that local authorities still suffer from the belief that the fear of handicapped people is something with which most people cannot cope.

Mr. Rowe: Local authorities face considerable difficulties, partly because of their statutory responsibilities, so they are more cautious. It is not only the voluntary bodies that make a contribution, but volunteers. The volunteer can commit himself to an emotional attachment for an individual, something that might be regarded as bad practice for a professional social worker.

The attention that the Bill pays to carers is absolutely right and, of great importance. I remind the House that the parliamentary panel, in conjunction with other all-party groups, has tabled an early-day motion drawing attention to carers. It is a very important subject and I hope that it will receive the support of the House. My private hope is that, eventually, this country will come to the concept of a minimum income, which would be of enormous assistance in resolving many of the problems.

I have wandered widely in my speech but I hope that I have given a clear sign of my personal support for this admirable Bill.

1 pm

Mr. Robert N. Wareing (Liverpool, West Derby): First, I warmly congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on his choice of subject for his Bill. As others have already said, it is difficult, when one takes a high place on the ballot, to make a decision between laudable causes which come to one's notice. I commend my hon. Friend's Bill as very much in the spirit of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, which was probably the most humane piece of legislation to be placed on the statute book this century. That measure owes everything to the work of my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris).

I came to the House this morning in the hope that the Government would show that they were not willing to subject my hon. Friend to the shabby treatment we saw on 18 November 1983, when the full forces of the Government were launched against my Bill to amend the

[Mr. Robert N. Wareing]

Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act. My Bill would have given more life to that Act and would have ensured that the disabled were not discriminated against. At that time, right hon. and hon. Members will remember that Conservative Ministers were unofficially whipped to return to the House, and all bar eight Ministers cancelled their engagements that day to dishonour the name of the House.

I warn my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West that, although he will hear Conservative Members use the rhetoric of compassion, the Minister's speech this morning echoed the real voice of the Government. No doubt they will allow the Bill to have a Second Reading, but they may try to denude it of its essentials in Committee. I recognise that the Minister with responsibility for the disabled is unable, because of the genuinely difficult task that he faces in his office, to be in the Chamber today, but it is worth reflecting on his speeches when there was a Conservative Opposition. The hon. Gentleman was very much a skinhead in Opposition, but in Government he has proved to be a skinflint. When he spoke for the Conservative Opposition, even Torvill and Dean would have qualified for the mobility allowance if he had had his way.

The Bill is important in seeking to give representation to the disabled, especially to the mentally handicapped in their bid to obtain their just rights. The take-up campaigns by various local authorities have revealed that many of our people are not obtaining the benefits to which they are entitled. With many organisations imperilled by the Government's legislation to abolish the GLC, the Merseyside county council, the West Midlands county council and the other bodies which carried out take-up campaigns, it is all the more necessary that those who are doubtful about their rights should be adequately represented before tribunals and local authorities.

The Bill would bestow vital obligations upon local authorities to provide care, and upon managers of hospitals when patients are discharged to inform local authority social services departments of the need to provide for such patients. I know that many of my constituents in areas such as Croxteth, where there is entirely inadequate provision for those leaving hospitals in the Liverpool and Sefton areas, would benefit greatly should the Bill reach the statute book and be implemented in the way in which my hon. Friend seeks.

I have strong feelings about clause 5, because of my own practical experience. During the last three years of my mother's life she was blind and entirely dependent upon me. I had a full-time job as a lecturer in further education and I worked difficult and unsocial hours. I know what a relief it is to be able to obtain help to allow one the relief of a holiday.

My wife's sister had a stroke some six years ago and has been completely dependent upon her husband, whose health is not of the best, ever since. He has to devote every minute of every hour to looking after his wife. He has to see that her food is cooked and the groceries are bought. he must provide for her needs when she visits the toilet and look after her every night, with little assistance from the local authority. How relieved he is when occasionally a relative or someone else can sit in with his wife allow him to breathe in the fresh air and feel free from the onerous duties that love has brought his way.

When the Minister talks about the cost of community care and the cost that the Bill will bestow upon local authorities, I hope that he will remember how much my sister-in-law's husband saves the National Health Service and how many people in his situation are similarly saving public funds.

I remind the Minister that in its 1983 manifesto the Conservative party said:

"Most people who are ill or frail would prefer to stay in or near their own homes, rather than live in a hospital or institution. helping people to stay in familiar surroundings is the aim of our policy."

The Bill challenges the Government to put their money where their mouth is.

It is essential that, in many areas of social legislation, people should be informed of their rights, and the Bill seeks to do just that. Organisations for the disabled such as the Spastics Society and the Disablement Income Group, have published an excellent pamphlet called "Getting the best out of your Act"—the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970. I hope that, as far as possible, the Government will try to give such information to the people so much in need.

Disabled people feel that they are discriminated against. My Bill sought to outlaw discrimination, but there are many kinds of discrimination. Simply to be disabled and unable to discover one's rights—whether one has a right of appeal or is being dealt with correctly by the local office of the Department of Health and Social Security —is a form of discrimination. Such people are in a doubly difficult position.

The Minister has an opportunity to tell us how he has carried out his promise to the House when my Bill was debated in 1983, when I was told that education and persuasion was the way to deal with discrimination. How much have the Government spent in attempting to eradicate discrimination by education and persuasion?

The Bill will do much to eradicate discrimination by merely providing for information to be made available, but the Government's record cannot be looked on with favour. In Committee we cannot expect much real help from the Government to ensure that the Bill's principles are carried through. Indeed, the Government's record in relation to the disabled since 1979 has been disgraceful. The record has been full of broken promises since the Conservative party's research department produced a document in February 1979 which stated:

"Conservatives have singled out the disabled for priority within the social security budget."

There has been a complete rundown in the incomes of disabled people. In November 1980, there was a 5 per cent. cut in the real value of invalidity and sickness benefits. The Social Security Act 1980 abolished the earnings-related supplement to short-term benefits. In July 1982, when a much higher proportion of disabled people than able-bodied people were unemployed, unemployment benefit for the disabled was taxed. In 1984, the real value of heating additions fell. They are now under threat from the Social Security Bill which has recently been published. Dental and ophthalmic charges and prescription charges have been increased.

Hon. Members may ask, "What has that have to do with the Bill?" These cuts in benefits have meant that disabled people must lean more and more on local authorities at a time when those authorities have been uner vicious attack through financial cuts by the Government.

Under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, disabled people are entitled to help with holidays, telephones, aids to daily living, adaptations to accommodation and transport to educational and recreational facilities. Too few local authorities provide such facilities. Even with the best will in the world, local authorities cannot provide the necessary services, although many try hard.

Between 1979 and 1984, 41 local authorities increased spending on personal social services by less that 10 per cent. and 84 local authorities—two thirds of the total—increased expenditure on personal social services by less than 20 per cent. There is a great discrepancy between different parts of the country. As my right hon. Friend the Member for Wythenshawe pointed out, there is a discrepancy in the provision of home helps. In the much-abused London borough of Camden, there are 14 home helps per thousand people and in Wiltshire — about which there is little abuse in the House—there are 5·5 home helps per thousand people.

The authorities that want to provide for the needs of disabled people should be given the means to do so. It is no use Ministers genuflecting in the direction of compassion if they are not willing to provide the funds that will enable local authorities to act. Too often we hear Ministers passing the buck to those same local authorities that are subjected to reductions in rate support grant. RSG has fallen from 61 per cent. of expenditure in 1979 to 48 per cent. this year. There cannot be cuts of that dimension without harming essential social services.

It is not local councillors who have failed to implement the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1971 and who are appealing to the High Court against the decision of a district auditor; it is those who wish to implement such legislation. Under this Government, local authorities have to decide not only between what is discretionary and what is legal but between what is legal in one case and what is legal in another. That is why deprived people in many areas are becoming even more deprived.

If the Government believe that disabled people form too small a proportion of our community to consider, we should remind them that they are a large constituency—5·5 million people.

I agree with my right hon. Friend the Member for Wythenshawe: people are becoming more aware of the problems of disabled people. Disabled people's organisations must continue to agitate to maintain the morale and confidence of those whom they seek to represent. It is only in that way that we shall have legislation of the type for which we are pressing today.

The Labour party recognises the needs of disabled people, in its manifesto. It is creating the Socialist Disability Action Group, which I hope will soon represent disabled people as an organisation affiliated to the Labour party.

I hope that the Government will not, here or in Committee, tell my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West that there is insufficient money, and will not repeat what the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) said in 1982, when he told the House that there were insufficient resources to provide for disabled people.

In this rich country, what sort of society is it where millions of pounds can be gained by buying and selling shares in Westland within the period of the stock exchange fortnightly account and where we can afford £2 billion on tax relief to rich people since 1979, but not afford the means to allow our disabled brethren to have a normal and decent life? What sort of a society is it where we have to have flag days for scanners to screen for breast cancer and to raise funds for kidney machines? What sort of a society is it that allows that to happen? Many people would like to see flag days for Trident, cruise and Polaris. I suggest that there would be few givers.

I hope that the Government will look favourably, at least today, on the Bill and will not repeat the shabby treatment of November 1983. That discredited them in the eyes of many disabled people. It made many of them politically aware of the type of Government with which we are dealing.

Many Conservative Back Benchers feel compassion for disabled people. We have heard speeches from some of them today, such as the one by the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam). I hope that those Back Benchers will press the Government to ensure that destructive amendments will not be tabled in Committee and that we shall find on the statute book a measure to reverse the trend of recent years, which has been to destroy and undermine the standard of living of 5·5 million disabled people.

1.20 pm

Mr. Colin Moynihan (Lewisham, East): My one criticism of the debate today is that some of the speeches have been wide-ranging and lengthy. Perhaps the best service that I can render the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) is to keep my comments short to enable other hon. Members to speak.

It is a particular pleasure and honour to speak on the issue because, as hon. Members know, I was prevented from speaking for a while because of my position as a parliamentary private secretary in the Department of Health and Social Security. It was sometimes difficult to restrain myself from speaking on issues that I felt strongly about. I know that on this issue that applies to my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman), who would like to contribute to this debate.

I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West on providing a Bill that is a framework for progress. That is to be welcomed by both sides of the House. I think that he would want to pay tribute, not just to the people covered directly by the Bill, but to many of those who voluntarily work to provide the services to the disabled throughout the country, not least in my own borough of Lewisham. There has been an enlightened approach in that borough and I pay credit to the social services department in Lewisham for its approach to the issue.

The Bill provides closer co-ordination for the provision of community care and services to the disabled. That is much needed at the present time. In many cases the local district health authority has not been closely associated with, or aware, of the procedures of the Department of Health and Social Security or the housing department and I have been involved in bringing such people together to achieve the co-ordination that the Bill seeks to promote. The Bill does that in the best way by involving the disabled themselves. I strongly welcome that. It is another step towards the closer communication that is needed to solve the problem. It is all the more important when regional health authorities have a long-term aim to provide a comprehensive adult mental illness service, with each district ultimately closing the larger mental hospitals.

[Mr. Colin Moynihan]

The right for the disabled to have a say is important. The Bill goes further than that. It does not give them just a partial or nominal say but a full one. That must be welcomed. One of the subjects that should be highlighted and considered as a result of the debate is loneliness. Loneliness is a subjective feeling and is in no way confined to people with disabilities. Sharing experiences and giving the disabled the right to have a full say would do much to alleviate the problem of loneliness. With the responsibility that they will receive comes interest and involvement. That provides a remedy for their problem of loneliness. I perceive that the Bill will be important not just in terms of communication and entitling disabled people to rights but to solving one of the great problems that exists with disabled people who feel alienated from the solution to their problem of loneliness. I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West on directly tackling that problem at the same time as providing an important onus on the state to ensure greater rights and responsibilities for disabled people.

I should like to mention the vital role of public education in this area. We have discussed that role on many occasions in the House. For many years the prime necessity has been for public education to move towards acceptance of disabled people as people rather than as exceptional cases. It has also moved towards the integration of those people with the able-bodied of our society. The first and most important place for that process of education to occur is in our schools. I praise my own education authority, the Inner London education authority. It is rare for me to have an opportunity to praise ILEA, but I am delighted to be able to praise it for its input into the important area of education among our youngsters. It realises that the excellent initiative that is taken towards integration is of the utmost importance for public education in society. I wish other local education authorities would follow its lead in that area.

I refer to the importance of the right to be consulted, It is important to recognise what lies behind that view. There is increasing awareness by carers and the public of the needs, abilities and aspirations of disabled people, but it is not enough. We have to go further. That awareness is to be praised, but by involving those people in the decision-making process in areas affecting them, we shall make real progress. The debate is the beginning of the road in that direction. It is progress well beyond the rights of consultation in section 15 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act.

Participation through consultation and the establishment of the right of representation do not necessarily lead to the integration and equality that I seek. The disabled are not a homogenous group. They all have different and important needs and requirements and, equally, different ideas about what they require. We should celebrate the Bill because the fact that they have different ideas about what they require will be covered by the much fuller representation to which they are entitled under it. That will happen when as I dearly hope, the Bill becomes law with the minimum number of amendments to it.

Community care is one of the most important initiatives to have been picked up from previous Governments and developed by the Government. While I was a junior parliamentary private secretary at the Department of Health and Social Security, I had the opportunity to see how community care initiatives were being properly and constructively developed.

Extra costs will be incurred. That point has been rightly made. The costs will be in addition to what is spent on day centres, adult training centres an occupational therapy departments, which will have to be increased with the policy of community care. It is better not to pursue community care policy than to underfund it or do it badly. The Select Committee was right when it stated:

> "Community care on the cheap would prove worse in many respects than the pattern of services to date."

Therefore, it is important that we continue with the commitment to community care and fund it properly. I am sorry that this point has not been raised more vigorously by my colleagues on the Back Benches. There is no doubt that we have put a tremendous amount of effort and increased resources behind community care in the past six years. In the past 10 years the number of community psychiatric nurses has increased to 2,000 from a mere 663, and the number of day centre places is now over 9,000 compared with 6,500 in the middle of 1978. It is important that that increase in resources continues.

With increased resources and the policy of community care comes a critical consultation process, which will now be improved radically by the Bill. I welcome that because it is no good having the state deciding how to process community care if at the same time we cannot take complete account of the individual needs of each and every person who is going from a mental hospital into the community or being given the opportunity to go to a new home, having been institutionalised. The Bill goes a long way towards achieving that.

I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West on his Bill and I hope that everyone in the House will secure its safe and swift passage through the House.

1.30 pm

Mr. Bruce George (Walsall, South): I shall try to stick to the 10-minute limit imposed by my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke), who is assuming the guise not only of promoter of the Bill but of the chief person who is whipping his colleagues into meeting his requirements.

Dr. Godman: On both sides of the House.

Mr. George: Indeed, on both sides of the House.

Reflecting on having been in the House for nearly 12 years, I have come to the conclusion that on few occasions have I succumbed to the lure of attending a debate on a Friday on a private Member's Bill. The push and pull at midnight on a Thursday generally leads me to my constituency. My presence today, and my support of the Bill and participation in the debate are not only testimony to my admiration of my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West but the result of my empathy with the many organisations and individuals who have asked me to support his Bill.

The debate might not push today's Westland shareholders' meeting off the front pages. Nor perhaps will it gain as much publicity as debates on pornography or abortion. But I assure right hon. and hon. Members present, if they need any assuring, that many millions of people are awaiting the House's decision today. I refer to the sufferers and those who care for them. We should not measure enthusiasm for the Bill or indeed the need for it in terms of column inches or minutes of air time on radio or television.

Perhaps not everybody who will benefit if the Bill becomes law is aware of the Bill's existence, let alone some of it provisions. That covers one of the principles embodied in the Bill—the concept of representation of those who are unable to articulate their views to authority. I dutifully, ritually and warmly congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West on his initiative. I rarely display the sin of envy, but I have tried for 12 years to get a place in the ballot for private Members' Bills and have not even got on the bottom rung of the ladder. The nation eagerly awaits the workings of the law of averages which I hope will display itself next time so that my long-awaited piece of legislation can deservedly reach the statute book.

I shall not talk in general about the problems of the disabled, services for the disabled, the need to improve the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, the need for maintenance benefits, the need to abolish discrimination against the disabled and the need to improve access to buildings despite recent building regulations, but confine myself to the Bill. I was not at all happy with the Minister's response. I shall be charitable and say that he does not believe what he said but dutifully reproduced what his senior colleagues wanted him to say. The Minister is high on principle but low on practice, and principle will not help the hundreds of thousands of people in need.

I regret that the concept of divide and rule extends even as far as underprivilege—the Minister said that if the group to whom the Bill addressed itself came from legislation, it would be to the detriment of other underprivileged groups. I am unhappy that one group of underprivileged must be played off against another to benefit.

The Minister conjures up and nurtures the national antipathy towards the bureaucrat by implying that this is a bureaucrat's charter. Perhaps I am being unfair to the Minister, but he seemed to imply that the bureaucrat, not the disabled, will benefit from the Bill. If so, why do so many groups who represent the mentally disabled and the physically disabled participate in the process of legislation by working closely with my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West?

The Minister also said that the Bill would damage local democracy. This is not the occasion to be openly partisan, but those words came rather strangely from the Minister in view of the Government's attitude to local democracy. The Bill should not take away the right of local authorities to decide what is in the interests of those whom they represent. The Minister's response is not at all helpful. He talked of sceptical neutrality. I only hope that the neutrality that he displays is the neutrality that the Government have shown towards the American-Westland deal. Perhaps my hon. Friend will welcome such neutrality. I hope that a group of hon. Members will not simply do the bidding of the Government and emasculate the Bill.

If there is a criticism of the Bill it is that it does not go far enough. That reflects my hon. Friend's sense of realism. He knows what he can get away with. However, even his limited objectives may expect too much in the light of the Minister's response. The Minister criticised my hon. Friend for covering only some of the disadvantaged. If my hon. Friend had applied a broader brush approach, he would have been dismissed for being Utopian and too broad in his concept. There is no way that he can win.

We must ensure that there are proper provisions for those in need. Much progress has been made since 1969 —I like to refer to it as the year "1 BA"—one year before Alf. Enormous progress has been made since the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Bill was enacted, but we still have a long way to go to achieve a proper attitude among public officials and a proper legislative framework, and we are light years from getting proper funding for the disabled and the needy. If this Bill reaches the statute book more or less intact, it will be a further step towards our goal.

The Bill helps to achieve a proper balance between the public and private sectors, and between voluntary and public organisations, which we need to do. The needs of the disabled will be catered for by both public and voluntary sectors functioning effectively, and it is important that the legislation secures that.

Hon. Members should read the evidence given to the Social Services Select Committee by the Association of Educational Psychologists — perhaps they are the bureaucrats who are being castigated—and the Select Committee's report on community care which contains 101 recommendations and represents one year's work. that is one pigeon hole filled by a lengthy report. The evidence shows how important it is that assessment is made. It states:

> "It is our professional experience that the families of mentally handicapped children are deriving great benefit from the recent improvements in the education and care of their children. The vast majority of parents wish to look after their handicapped child in their own home. Such commitment should be encouraged and indeed strengthened by the provision of facilities such as short stay hostels, short stay fosterings, counselling and on-going support and by on-going support and training for parents in matters relating to the care of their offspring."

We must seek support for individuals who can look after their own children with proper support. The evidence continues:

> "However, a variety of accommodation . . . should be available to meet the individual needs of mentally handicapped adults for whom living with their parents is not possible. It is essential that the families of handicapped adults have access to advice and support which they perceive as being tailored to meet their own personal needs."

We must break away from the old-fashioned approach where having a disabled child was seen as a form of divine retribution, and the child was sent to some institution to "join the field of cabbages", as a local friend of mine described it. The child would grow up there and probably die there. Expectations have changed and the provision of services has improved immeasurably. We must nurture voluntary organisations far more successfully.

I have a close relationship with the local MENCAP organisation and the Parkinsons Disease Society in my constituency which have an enormous volume of experience. They work with the local authority, require national and local funding, and can articulate the views of their members and stimulate a national debate. Supporters of the Parkinsons Disease Society are working on great research papers, and are trying to get the Government and people interested in developments in Hungary. What is happening there should not be dismissed because it emanates from the other side of the Iron Curtain. It is not strictly a cure or a treatment for Parkinsons disease; it is known as conductive education. I have read papers and spoken to enthusiasts, and I hope that this form of treatment, which provides a structured therapeutic educational programme for Parkinsons disease patients, will be seriously considered. In Birmingham, the Parkinsons Disease Society is spending money in an attempt to inculcate new attitudes among sufferers and in the Government. It is an example of a voluntary organisation that should be helped financially more than it is now.

[Mr. George]

My local MENCAP branch, with which I have close contacts, said in a recent report:

"National MENCAP is committed to a policy of providing for people with mental handicap within the community. We support that policy."

It continues—this is where the Bill is so important—by saying:

"No longer should large mental subnormality hospitals cater for the offspring of despairing parents. A wealthy and civilised country, as ours is, should ensure that the needs of people with a mental handicap are met within normal society. Thus we see that our efforts will increasingly be placed in co-operating with the District Health Authority and the Council Departments involved in developing housing, educational and leisure services for adults."

This is a fine Bill that deserves support. If it passes this plenary session, I hope that it will not be emasculated in Committee but will be strengthened. I hope that we can send to the Government our message of support. From the sponsors of the Bill, one knows that it has cross-party support. It will reflect badly upon Members of Parliament who sit on the Committee dealing with the Bill if at the behest of the Whips, they try to do it down and to leave nothing except the title and the principle. The physically and mentally disabled deserve more than we have given them so far. The Bill must be acted upon. I congratulate the sponsors, and especially my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West, on his initiative and good fortune. He needs our support.

1.42 pm

Mr. Roy Galley (Halifax): It is unfortunate that a series of unnecessarily partisan points have been made during the debate to bring a discordant note into our proceedings. It would have been pleasant had the House been united in applauding the principles of the Bill.

I congratulate the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on introducing the Bill, which is an important part of the gradual process in recent years of improving the lot of physically and mentally disabled people. It is inevitably a gradual process, and progress has certainly been made. If one considers the information on resources and the availability of services during the past five or six years—whether one considers Health Service provision, social services provision, the number of social services, the claims for social security or improvements to social security rules—one sees that the Government have a record second to none in help for the disabled. The policy of community care and its application is an advance for the disabled. I am especially pleased with the Bill because it is a great improvement upon the naive and potentially counter-productive approach set out in the Bill introduced last year by the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing).

As a member of the Select Committee on Social Services, I am pleased that the Bill seeks to implement several key recommendations in its report on community care. One of the most vital recommendations was that no one should be discharged from hospital without a practical individual care plan, devised jointly by all concerned, communicated to all those responsible for its implementation, and with a mechanism for monitoring. To a large extent, the Bill brings into effect that and other key recommendations of the Select Committee. It is a matter of regret that there are not more members of the Select Committee present today.

The individual treatment of the disabled is the key to the success of our community care policy. If the policy does not succeed and if we are not sensitive to the needs of individuals, and work out a plan for each that will work, the whole policy will fall into disrepute. If there are a series of incidents where people are cast into the community with inadequate provision, the basis of our policy will be questioned. That would be regrettable, because the policy is a great improvement in the treatment of so many of the needs of the disabled.

I hope that the hon. Member for Monklands, West and the Committee will take into account one or two points about the precise content of the Bill. On the whole, these are relatively minor matters, and the principles of the Bill are accorded agreement by both sides of the House. However, in certain aspects, it is rather bureaucratic and it will be easy for local authorities to hedge round some of the provisions with detailed regulations that could be counter-productive to the effects that the hon. Gentleman wishes to bring about. I do not say that from a sinister motive but because I am concerned that the disabled, their families and representatives could be inundated with a barrage of incomprehensible paperwork that could be counter-productive in helping them in their needs.

It is important that there are guidelines and some clear understandings about who may be representatives and what the role of those representatives will be. It may be difficult to build into the legislation specific provisions to overcome the difficulties that I see, but there is a danger of people being manipulated in a particular direction if a specific group sets itself up, almost as a business, as professional representatives of disabled people.

The major voluntary groups have to be involved and are likely to have the necessary detachment and experience to help disabled people. There are groups that do good and are well-meaning, but have a particular slant in their philosophical, religious or moral code of life that may work for some individuals but not for others. It is important that the authorisation procedures for representatives include elements that will guard against some malfunctioning of the system.

There is also a slight danger that a number of statutory solutions may result in the mentally ill and the mentally handicapped being moved from one type of institution into a different one, nearer to the community but not necessarily within it. This is the concept of what the Americans delightfully call "trans-institutionalisation". I hope that the establishment of statutory procedures such as those set out in the Bill will not, as they could, lead to such "trans-institutionalisation".

Clauses 1 and 2 in particular, but other parts of the Bill as well, give me cause for concern about the needs for, and the right of, families, as well as the disabled, to be consulted. I have no doubt that most health and local authorities will consult. There are references in the Bill to the needs of families and the rights of parents and children to be consulted at appropriate times. Families have an important role to play in the overall concept of care for the disabled and I should like some inclusion in the Bill of statutory rights for those involved to be consulted at other points.

It is most welcome—and it is a matter to which we shall have to pay increasing attention in the next few years—that the Bill attaches importance to the 5·5 million carers. We must balance the needs of the carer, the disabled person and the extended family in any assessment that is made. I hope that the Bill will spur on the development of a range of respite care. The Bill could have a good spin-off effect in that direction.

I doubt whether it would be possible or right for statutory bodies to provide with sufficient flexibility the kind of respite facility that is needed, but they have a vital role to play in the co-ordination, encouragement and grant-aiding of that kind of provision. Within the imaginative and wide-ranging central funding initiatives that are currently undertaken by the Department of Health and Social Security it may be possible to lay particular emphasis when allocating funds upon the provision of respite care.

The result of advances in respite care may be that many carers will feel able to care for their relatives for a longer period of time if they know that occasionally they will receive help and a break from their onerous duties. To be cared for in the home is likely to be to the advantage of disabled people. To be able to continue in a family environment is very important for them.

Finally, I turn to a small point in the Bill that is of considerable importance. It continues the trail blazed last year by my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Mr. McNair-Wilson) in his Hospital Complaints Procedure Act: the provision of specific rights for patients. Our system does not provide sufficient protection for patients. We have sought, so far unsuccessfully, to find a number of financial mechanisms within the National Health Service that will result in a more responsive operation that can more readily be adapted to the needs of patients and that allows the voice of patients to be fully heard. If we cannot find the financial mechanisms, we must continue the search for them. It is important to introduce into legislation a statutory right for patients to be consulted and to have their complaints dealt with. It is another important side effect of the Bill that I welcome wholeheartedly.

1.52 pm

Dr. Norman A. Godman (Greenock and Port Glasgow): I am pleased to welcome this Bill and I am happy to congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke). I almost said "my hon. Friend the Member for Gartcosh" because he is so closely associated with Gartcosh in the minds of all my constituents on account of his deep concern for the people employed there. He has also long been known for his deep concern for those who suffer from that particularly debilitating handicap of blindness. Therefore I am pleased to be taking part in the debate upon his Bill.

Part I relates to the assessment of the needs of disabled persons. There is a need to define clearly in part I what is meant by the needs of both the disabled and their families. The identification of needs must have as its aim the object of enabling the disabled person to participate as fully as possible in his or her family and in the community. The definition of needs should, therefore, include economic, financial, social, education and employment needs.

During the last few days I have spoken to a senior psychiatric social worker, Mrs. Tricia Godman, and Miss Ann MacLean, a senior social work manager in the Strathclyde regional council's social services department. Both of them have considerable experience of working with the disabled. Clauses 1, 2 and 3 are eminently sensible. They seek to protect and promote the interests of the blind and the physically and mentally disabled.

It is important that social work departments are equipped with the skills to conduct the assessments spelt out in clause 3. Perhaps some specialisation should be encouraged, and, at the very least, given the range of needs of the young disabled, social workers may require some form of in-service training. Basic grade social workers will be involved in the important work of assessment, and they should be committed to the interests of that client group.

Miss MacLean told me yesterday that the Strathclyde regional council social work department planned to set up assessment teams to deal with the needs of young people who were physically or mentally handicapped or blind. Such a team would have among its members a social worker, the school teacher involved and an educational psychologist. I welcome that development. Educationists and others who train social workers will need to take cognisance of that. The hon. Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) outlined the implications for social work training contained in the Bill.

The two senior social workers both welcomed clause 4. They say that there is nothing more disastrous than a person — especially someone suffering from a mental disorder — being discharged from hospital with no warning of and no preparation for what may be an intensely difficult transfer to the community. Both social workers welcomed the need for prior notification spelt out in the clause and the need to plan discharge from hospital, especially for those suffering from psychological illness or mental disorder.

Too many people are discharged with no social skills and no experience or understanding of the DHSS regulations or provisions. That is an important requirement for those discharged from psychiatric institutions. Few, if any, undertake rehabilitation programmes. That is disgraceful. If my hon. Friend succeeds with his Bill, as he should, he will earn the immense gratitude of many patients, their families and their professional carers. Clause 4 will enable social workers to assist the disabled to settle in the community following their hospitalisation.

Clause 5 provides much-needed assistance for those millions of people who may be called informal or family carers — the parents, brothers, sisters, sons and daughters who give so much of their lives to disabled members of their families. It has already been pointed out that those family carers save the state a great deal of money. Just think of what would happen if they decided to forgo those immense burdens.

Clause 5 should deal with the problem that often confronts social workers when they discover the existence of a mentally disabled person only if his or her family carer is taken ill or, even worse, dies. That often involves a mentally disabled person in his or her 40s or 50s who has been cared for since childhood by parents who have grown old and who may still be carrying that awesome burden while in their 60s, 70s or even 80s. It is vital that decisions concerning the care of middle-aged people are taken while their elderly parents are still able to participate in that decision making. Many of these elderly family carers are plagued by worries about the care of their handicapped sons or daughters when they themselves are unable to perform that duty. An old lady in my constituency said to me recently that she was desperately worried about the care of her middle-aged son following her death. Her fear was that he would be filed away in some uncaring institution.

[Dr. Norman A. Godman]

We should recognise that carers should be given holiday breaks from the difficult task of caring for their disabled family members. The Bill will perform a service for elderly carers of disabled relatives as well as for many others. I hope that it will have a safe passage and that its provisions are given the widest publicity by central Government and local authorities.

2 pm

Mr. Tom Clarke: I seek leave to reply to some of the issues which have been raised during what I think has been a splendid debate. I thank right hon. and hon. Members on both sides of the House for their contributions. I thank especially those who have taken part and those who have offered constructive criticism. Hon. Members on both sides of the House have shown that it is not true that Fridays are necessarily unpopular. They have shown by their presence in the Palace of Westminster that they support the main thrust of the Bill.

My right hon. and hon. Friends will understand that in thanking them for their support I confine my response to three contributions. First, I should like to thank the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) for his first-class speech and for the excellent support that he has given to the Bill. I am sure that his work in this area is much appreciated by hon. Members and by those beyond the House. I thank the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) for his speech and for his input into the Bill. He mentioned a number fo organisations, and I agreed with every word that he said. My difficulty is that the organisations have been so helpful, as the hon. Gentleman appreciates, that it would be impossible for me to put on record my gratitude to them while trying to enable a decision to be taken on whether the Bill should receive a Second Reading by 2.30 pm. Nevertheless, my gratitude is firm.

I turn to the most important contribution to the debate, which was made by the Minister for Health. He seemed to sum up his own response to the Bill by saying that it was one of "sceptical neutrality". That is a pity, especially after a debate in which it has been made clear that, although there is constructive criticism of some parts of the Bill, it is the will of the House to place the Bill on the statute book undiluted so that it can make a contribution to solving the problems of the disabled. The House wants to see progress, and it would be a great pity if the Government attempted to thwart that objective. I hope that the Minister will bear in mind what has been said in that respect during the debate.

As an ex-local government man, I am sorry that the Minister appears to have been influenced so profoundly by the last-minute letter of the Association of County Councils. When he mentioned the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, I am sure that the Minister wished to remind the House that it is supporting the Bill. In my view, the ACC did not make its best effort. It may be that it is suffering from a lack of resources, but there was nothing very constructive about what it had to say.

If the Minister is bearing in mind that advice, I hope he will consider a few points. First, it is overwhelmingly evident that prevention is not only better but cheaper than cure. Secondly, he should accept that good administration is cheaper than bad. I hope that he will also agree that too often those who pretend to oppose bureaucracy are in reality offering excuses for unacceptable lethargy.

The duties towards disabled people mentioned in the letter already exist to a great extent. I am trying to assist the association and other councils to keep within the law. They should not blame me for giving them that opportunity by spelling out the needs which exist and by imploring those public bodies and others involved to accept that disabled people are entitled to be represented or to express their views on the kind of society in which they live and the kind of services that they think they should be receiving.

I know that the Minister would never dream of letting councils take their own decisions, on the basis of the kind of autonomy he talked about today. I know that if members of the GLC were here they would have welcomed today's approach, but that attitude does not apply to the Minister's view on the DHSS. There is no way that he would tell each office in whatever geographical area they are located that the matter will be left to them. Therefore, I found the Minister's response on that point surprising to say the least.

I do not want to go overboard, because I am still trying to convince the Minister that he should be Mr. Nice instead of Mr. Nasty. Were he here, my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Callaghan) would have said that the Association of County Councils in its letter was, to say the lesst, over-egging the pudding. The Minister fell into the trap of exaggerating the administrative nature of the Bill, especially when he referred to clause 6. That will become increasingly clear as the matter is debated in Committee.

In the spirit of good will which exists in the Chamber today, I want to say that, if the Minister is asking the Bill's sponsors for constructive discussion on his amendments, that is fine. We would all accept that. What we could not accept is any attempt to destroy the real meaning of the Bill; any attempt to knock the heart out of the Bill and therefore to disappoint the millions of people whose needs have been identified by hon. Members on both sides of the House, who look, and rightly so, to the House of Commons for leadership in relation to their needs.

The Bill is not a blueprint for bureaucrats; it is a charter for the consumer within existing legislation. It offers a fair deal for disabled persons; they, too, are ratepayers. When the Minister comes to give quiet, sober and reflective consideration to those points, we as a House might even be able to convince him that he should remove from his mind the sceptical neutrality which he advances as an argument today and put in its place the positive merits of positive commitment.

Question put and agreed to.

Bill accordingly read a Second time, and committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 42 (Committal of Bills).

Criminal Records Bill

Order for Second Reading read.

2.8 pm

Mr. Patrick Cormack (Staffordshire, South): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read a Second time.

I begin by saying how delighted I am that the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) has secured a Second Reading for his important Bill. I wish it speedy progress on to the statute book. May I also say how honoured I am that the Leader of the Opposition is in his place? He has obviously come specially to give support to my Bill, not tempted just because it obliges the disclosure of certain records. It is good to see him here and to know that he is four square behind a Bill which has magnificent all-party support. I shall be brief, because it is important that my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Office should have the chance to explain and expound on the Government's view on this important matter.

The genesis of the Bill is interesting and important. We look back to one of the most brutal and appalling examples in recent years, of child abuse and cruelty, culminating in murder — the Colin Evans case. Colin Evans had a record, which was undisclosed. He was able to obtain a voluntary position of trust acting as a baby sitter and to murder one of his charges. This brought into the open the problem that has been highlighted, especially by the Association of County Councils—people with previous criminal convictions who have abused and assaulted the weak, the elderly and especially little children have subsequently been able to obtain positions of trust.

The ACC has circulated to hon. Members a number of illustrations of the types of cases that have made it so keen to see legislation on the statute book. I do not want to detain the House by quoting too many, but some should be put on the record. There is the case of a driver convicted of acts of gross indecency with mentally handicapped minors only to be found not to have declared his record of convictions on similar charges. There is the case of a school caretaker who had been convicted of indecent assault on a child, which was unknown at the time of his appointment to the county council. He was subsequently convicted of a similar offence with respect to children at the school and dismissed. There is the case of a resident warden on a gipsy caravan site on which a number of children lived. He was found to have been convicted and imprisoned for sexual offences in Zimbabwe. The association details drug offences and a number of sad cases of people convicted of theft and dishonesty who were able to obtain positions in registered private nursing homes or homes for the elderly run by local authorities.

The catalogue of 33 cases is but the tip of the iceberg. This week, the ACC furnished me with another list of 14 cases that have come to light in recent weeks. One particularly objectionable case involved a man appointed to the post of warden at a hostel for adolescent boys. His application showed that he had worked for 15 years previously in a similar capacity in a home for displaced teenagers run by a charitable society. Before his appointment, he claimed that he had been employed in a hostel for homeless families. He gave references, but these were later proved to be forgeries. He had a deplorable record, yet he obtained that position of trust. Such cases have made the ACC feel that there should be a statutory obligation to disclose the records of people seeking positions of trust in work with the young and with vulnerable adults.

There is no difference between me and the Government in determination. I know that my hon. Friend the Minister of State is as concerned as every hon. Member. He shares my concern that modest measures like this should not become an excuse for a witch hunt. I was one of those many Members who supported the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974. That measure enables those who have made mistakes, have been punished and have atoned for their crimes to have the opportunity to wipe the slate clean. I do not object to that and nor could anyone who had any feeling of compassion.

There are always exceptions—those who have abused the young, sexually or in other ways, and those who have defrauded the elderly and have convictions which are relevant and remain relevant. They remain relevant, especially if their acts come about because of some mental abnormality or flaw in their characters which makes it almost impossible for them not to do those things again. Society needs protecting from them and they need protecting from themselves. It is with that in mind that I believe that the Bill should commend itself to the House.

I was gratified when I talked to my hon. Friends—I use those words advisedly—in all parts of the House and had no difficulty in attracting an impressive list of sponsors.

I have not discussed the matter with my hon. Friend the Minister of State, but I have discussed it with my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department whose responsibility this matter is. He has apologised to me for the unavoidable reasons for his absence, which I accept. We have had what I call an enlightened disagreement.

I am aware that the Government feel that this matter can best be dealt with by some form of voluntary code. I beg to differ. I feel strongly, and I know that the ACC does, that the Bill will do something more than the code. It will ensure that anyone who seeks employment or offers his services as a volunteer—that is important—to care for children, the elderly, physically and mentally disabled people and all who are vulnerable should have previous convictions disclosed.

The Bill does certain things which the admirable guidelines upon which the Home Office has spent a great deal of time, care and thought in hammering out do not do. I know that my next point will appeal to the right hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Stewart). The Bill applies to Scotland. The Home Office guidelines do not. It is invidious that one important part of the United Kingdom should be omitted from such provisions. A number of bad cases have come to light north of the border. I am pleased to see the right hon. Gentleman and to see him nodding vigorous assent to that matter. For that reason alone, the Government should pause and think again.

Of course, the Bill is not perfect, although as one who drew seventh place in the ballot, I had the opportunity of having it drafted professionally. I realise that it is not perfect and I am more than happy, in effect, to say to my hon. Friend and his colleagues, "Put in what amendments you wish." I hope that when my hon. Friend replies he will surprise us all and say that my argument has, at last, prevailed.

The Government have worked exceptionally hard. People involved in voluntary organisations and the local authorities have been consulted. A great deal of homework has been done. The experts in the Home Office know far more about the problem and its details than I do. However, I strongly and respectfully urge my hon. Friend to realise that there is no difference in interest and determination between us as we share the same objectives, and for a moment to reflect that on this occasion my road might be slightly better than his.

[Mr. Patrick Cormack]

I believe that it is often right to rely on voluntary guidelines and codes of practice that do not have the force of statute. In many areas that is entirely the right road to take. I also believe that there are certain areas where legislation is necessary. When we are dealing with the wellbeing of the disadvantaged in our society, we have to do that in legislation. Just as it was right, laudable and proper for the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) to introduce his Bill today and to have all-party support in an area where it could have been argued that legislation was not absolutely necessary, so I believe that in this case legislation will improve matters. It will mean no ducking. If people seek to evade or avoid their responsibilities, there will be parliamentary and legislative sanction.

Mr. Donald Stewart (Western Isles): Does the hon. Gentleman accept that to many of us the inference from his Bill is that, if the legislation is accepted by the Government, the code will operate without any recourse to the legislation?

Mr. Cormack: That is precisely why, at this late hour, I am urging my hon. Friend, whose sincerity is not in doubt and whose determination is not in question, to think again about legislation.

I speak as one who is convinced that this is a real problem for Parliament to tackle. As are so many hon. Members in the House, I am the father of young children. I know how vulnerable they can be. In my constituency I have seen many young and elderly people in danger of exploitation. We have all had similar experiences. Before I came to the House I was a school master for 10 years and during that time I came across evidence of many disturbing cases. They would have been dealt with more adequately had legislation of this sort been on the statute book. Therefore, I urge my hon. Friend, whose credentials are impeccable, to reconsider whether it would not be better to legislate rather than to rely on a code of practice.

I am most anxious, as I am sure the House is, to hear the comments of my hon. Friend. I am anxious to hear his conversion and to learn that he has been sitting in Damascus rather than in the Chamber.

2.23 pm

The Minister of State, Home Office (Mr. Giles Shaw): I do not think that anybody can fail to be moved by the cogency, clarity and extreme charm with which my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, South (Mr. Cormack) has made his case. I endorse the fact that my hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor) cannot be here. I am glad to know that my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, South recognises and acknowledges his absence. However, there is a continual confusion between Putney and Pudsey, so it is not surprising that I am here instead.

My hon. Friend has made an eloquent plea that the legislative route, which is what he would prefer to deal with this matter, is one that the Government should follow as opposed to the administrative route that we prefer. That lays upon me the obligation to expose to the House the reasons why we are not so minded at this time.

I am prepared to start from the position of common ground, which I am sure my hon. Friend will undoubtedly admit. Despite the close limitations placed on disclosure, there have been many changes within recent years to provide greater protection for children. For example, in 1982 it was agreed that information on the background of people seeking to register as child minders should be made available to the local authorities concerned. Many serious incidents of assault on children by those in a position of trust has led to widespread concern that more fundemental changes need to be made. The Home Office and the police share that view.

Following the particularly horrible case of the murder of 4-year-old Marie Payne and the conviction of her murderer in 1984, to which my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, South referred—I must point out that she was unknown to her murderer before the tragedy took place — the then Home Secretary decided that the arrangements for disclosing the criminal background of people seeking work with children should be urgently reviewed.

The terms of reference of the review, which was announced by means of a parliamentary written answer in March 1985, were:

"To devise a system under which information about the unsuitability by reason of criminal background of people seeking positions where they will have substantial opportunities for access to children can be communicated to those bodies which are responsible for engaging such people, whether in a paid or voluntary capacity, and to those who have responsibility for authorising or licensing such people to occupy such positions."

Although the terms of reference were restricted to those with access to children, the review was undertaken on the basis that the system should be capable of extension to cover other vulnerable members of the community such as the elderly and the handicapped. The review team included representatives of the local authorities and the police as well as central Departments, and produced its first report in July last year.

I think that my hon. Friend will concede that the review team examined in detail every aspect of disclosure and made several recommendations for a new system capable of being applied to children and other vulnerable groups. Specific recommendations were made about those working in the state sector with substantial access to children. The review team has been expanded to include representatives of the voluntary and private sectors, and I hope that the House will be interested to know that it is now considering what acceptable arrangements can be made to extend disclosure to them as well. Those who have read the report, a copy of which is in the Library, will understand that, far from being a simple matter, the issue is full of complexities. The principle of the complexity of the problem is at the heart of our present anxiety about the legislative proposals currently before the House.

The then Home Secretary welcomed the report when it was published on 23 July and said that consultations would be held with interested organisations before the recommendations were brought into effect. The report was widely circulated for comment and was in general well received. Draft circulars to give effect to the recommendations for paid and volunteer staff in the local authorities and the National Health Service have been prepared. Subject to any comments on the drafts, we hope to be able to bring the new arrangements into effect in the state sector with effect from 1 April this year. It is estimated that as a result of those arrangements about 100,000 extra checks may be made each year covering areas of particular concern, such as teaching and social work.

The recommendations in the report and the guidance in the circular have been worked out very carefully, keeping the protection of children as the paramount consideration but balancing the often conflicting views about how disclosure can most effectively be made. As a result, we have produced proposals that take account of the needs of children and also pay regard to the scope of checking, the confidentiality of records and the practicalities of running criminal record checks on potentially hundreds of thousands of staff and volunteers. I emphasis the sheer scale of the operation that is now to be set in train.

Because of the impracticability of checking on everyone who has any access to children or other vulnerable people, which must run into several millions, the arrangements that we propose are limited to those appointed to positions giving opportunity for substantial access to children. Checks will not necessarily be required for administrative staff or those with little or supervised access to children. Guidance is also to be given to the local authority services concerned and to the National Health Service about the main groups of people for whom checks should be considered and about the elements to be considered in deciding whether a person has substantial access.

In order to limit the volume of checking, we are proposing that checks should be made at the point when a person has been otherwise accepted for a job. Checks will not therefore be made on all candidates for jobs or all volunteers but only on those who, apart from a criminal records check, have been accepted for an appointment. That will greatly reduce the amount and cost of checking and avoid unnecessary exposure of criminal records, Because confidentiality is an extremely important part of public confidence in the system—

It being half past Two o'clock, the debate stood adjourned.

To be resumed upon Friday 7 February. — [Mr. Cormack.]

NEW TOWNS (ACCESS TO INFORMATION) (SCOTLAND) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Sir Paul Dean): Second Reading what day? No day named.

CORNEAL TISSUE BILL

Read a Second time.

Bill committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 40 (Committal of Bills).

Ordered.

That it be an Instruction to the Committee on the Corneal Tissue Bill that they have power to extend the Bill to make provision to permit the removal of eyes or parts of eyes for therapeutic purposes or for purposes of medical education or research.—[Mr. Hannam.]

MARRIAGE (WALES) BILL

Read a Second time.

Bill committed to a Committee of the whole House. —[Mr. Coleman.]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: This is an unusual course. Does any hon. Member object to proceeding? No.

Bill immediately considered in Committee; reported, without amendment.

Motion made, and Question, That the Bill be now read the Third time, put forthwith pursuant to Standing Order No. 58 (Third Reading), and agreed to.

Bill accordingly read the Third time, and passed.

Mr. Patrick Cormack (Staffordshire, South): On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. I should like to congratulate the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Coleman) on his good fortune, which is in stark contrast to mine.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is not a point of order, but the hon. Gentleman has got it on the record.

LAW REFORM (PARENT AND CHILD) (SCOTLAND) BILL

Read a Second time.

Bill committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 42 (Committal of Bills).

Special Constables

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Sainsbury.]

2.34 pm

Mr. Colin Moynihan (Lewisham, East): The House will regret the absence of my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Conway). He had the good fortune to draw today's Adjournment debate on the special constabulary. Regrettably, his younger child has fallen ill, and rightly, he is with his family. I am sure that all hon. Members will wish his baby a speedy recovery. My hon. Friend's views on the subject are well known and respected by hon. Members. He is wholly committed to a growing role for the special constabulary, and seeks a clear sign of political will from his colleagues to support it in its present and future role to uphold law and order. Although it may be unusual, it is a mark of my respect for him and of the importance of the subject that I have chosen the same title for my Adjournment debate.

The special constabulary receives all too little credit for the service it provides to both the public and the regular forces. It is a very British idea. Only recently it celebrated the passing of the Special Constables Act 1831, 155 years ago. We ask ordinary members of the public to give some practical help to the police, and we give them the same powers as regular officers. That sounds a concept fraught with dangers and difficulties, but it works.

For years specials have been carrying out the duties asked of them without giving civil liberty activists the slightest cause for complaint. I suspect that those activists share the general public's ignorance of the contribution and, even, the existence of the special constabulary. I share the views expressed in the House by my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken), who said in a similar Adjournment debate — too much time has elapsed since we discussed the subject in detail—

> "My purpose in initiating the debate . . . is to call on the Government to expand, strengthen and revitalise the specials, so that they can be built up into an effective and well-trained police reserve with roots in their local communities. . . . The priorities for the specials are more training and more recruitment. Neither priority should be all that difficult to achieve, provided the political will exists, because there are such solid foundations to build on within the existing structure of the special constabulary." — [Official Report, 31 July 1981; Vol. 9, c. 1410.]

Those words are equally true today.

I recognise and applaud the fact that the long decline in the number of special constables has been halted since those words were uttered. However, I find it hard to believe that only 15,000 or 16,000 men and women are willing to give a few hours a week to this important work when 45,000 were employed in 1964. Is enough being done to inform potential applicants, and to make the work attractive? I fear that the answers may be No. I am looking for answers to those questions from the Government Front Bench today. I seek an assurance from the Government that the specials are being taken seriously. I am confident that my hon. Friend the Minister will give me that assurance, but I hope that he will go on to describe the role within the police service that the Government seek for the special constabulary.

Is enough being done to inform the public about the specials, and to encourage recruitment? If any hon. Member conducted a survey of his constituents he would find that the majority would not know of the existence of the special constabulary. Even most of those who have heard of the specials will have little idea of what they do. Some constituents would be surprised and alarmed to discover that for a few hours every week their next-door neighbour or friend down the road had all the powers and privileges of a regular constable, and used them. They would be even more surprised to learn that special constables had existed for 155 years.

Cannot we make greater inroads into that widespread ignorance? From time to time in the national newspapers I see advertisements for regular officers and for other voluntary national bodies, such as the Territorial Army. I cannot remember seeing any advertisement for the special constabulary. Yet that could be the subject matter, particularly for local newspapers. There are human interest stories that could be sensibly written up by such excellent local papers as the Lewisham Star, Mercury and the South London Press, to mention only those in my borough. I would welcome such an initiative.

There is great difficulty in recruiting special constables, even in London. Catford has one divisional officer, one sub-divisional officer and 11 special constables, but it would need 40 to 50 officers. Lewisham has one divisional officer, one sub-divisional officer and only five special constables; it could do with about 30 to 40 constables. Divisional Officer Jenkins of Lewisham has given outstanding service to the force and to the country for about 21 years. He has a bar to his long service medal, which I understand means that he has served for a minimum of 19 years. He is competent, responsible and has great experience. He is much liked in the force and in the community that he serves, and I pay tribute to him and to his colleagues.

Why do I say that human interest stories are involved? During the past year, Lewisham special constables, who work voluntarily, have done duty at Millwall, have patrolled regularly in pairs and have helped elderly folk. The sight of the policeman out of the panda car and on the beat is important in removing the fear of crime, which is larger than the incidence of crime, among the population. They also participated in Brave Defender, on the security side, patrolling Biggin Hill 24 hours a day for three to four days. Their role in ceremonials, including the Easter parade, is well known to all who follow their work in London, but I fear not to the majority of the population. I emphasise that the critical part of their work is the removal of the fear of crime by their presence on the streets, in the estates and especially among the elderly and responsible citizens, who like to see officers patrolling the streets on foot and who like to know their officers personally.

There are other ways in which police forces could bring the existence of the special constabulary to the notice of local residents. I should be glad if my hon. Friend would say something about the methods used by forces and how successful they are. I should be interested to know what the Government do at national level to increase the size of the special constabulary.

On the important subject of relations with regular officers, it is possible that the Government take specials seriously. It is possible that senior police officers are clearly aware of the value of special constables. But I wonder whether that view is shared all the way down the line in the police force? If we are to use the special constabulary to its full potential, we must be certain that there is no friction with regular officers. Specials must be fully integrated into the force. I have heard it said that some regular officers do not view the efforts of the special constabulary as important. I have also heard of resistance from regular officers to the extension of the special's work into more vital areas of police activity. But if there is a lack of trust between specials and regular officers elsewhere than in Lewisham and Catford, where it does not appear to be a problem, it will be difficult for the Government to make progress. There must be a clear understanding on both sides of the limits of the role of the special constabulary. Will my hon. Friend tell us whether there is a problem here? if so, what is he doing about it?

I mentioned the extension of the specials' work. Ordinary men and women will not wish to devote their spare time to the police service unless they get some reward. I am not talking about a financial reward, although I shall say something about that later. I am talking about gaining satisfaction from the work and feeling that they are making a contribution to the force. If we use specials only for the dull, undemanding tasks which regular officers do not wish to undertake, we cannot reasonably expect them to attract recruits or to keep them once they have been attracted. People will not be moved to apply by the prospect of standing in the rain every November to line the route for the Lord Mayor's show. they will, understandably, decide that they have better things to do. Surely we can offer them better things within the special constabulary.

One area where specials could play a useful role is in crime prevention. It is the soft end of policing, but it is just as important as the hard end—public order policing—for which specials are clearly not qualified.

Much has been done recently to help people to help themselves. The specials have a foot in both camps. They are part of the community as well as part of the police force. Most are deployed in the area in which they live. If they are more involved in neighbourhood watch schemes in their area, other local residents might find it easier to identify with them and might be more ready to turn to them. People might find it easier to get into contact with a special constable who is also a local resident than with a beat constable who lives at the other end of the borough.

I know that in London, and in my borough of Lewisham in particular, the Metropolitan police have made some progress in involving the special constabulary in crime prevention work. I should be interested to learn from my hon. Friend the Minister whether other forces have taken similar steps and whether more work could be done on the important neighbourhood watch schemes which have done so much good in terms of upholding law and order, certainly in London and, as I understand, throughout the country.

If specials are to perform more duties in the mainstream of police work and if they are to do so in a way that attracts the respect of regular officers, they must be properly trained. They cannot just pick it up as they go along. They have important powers to exercise and they must be taught how to use them.

I recognise that there are problems in providing training for part-time volunteers. It is difficult to plan a programme when one cannot be certain who will attend, and when, but the problems are not insuperable. Anyone who has a commitment to the police service—which every special must have—will be prepared to make the effort to ensure that he is equipped to do the job properly. It is not unreasonable for the specials to give up the occasional weekend.

It is in the specials' interest not just to ensure that they can carry out the work with knowledge and confidence but to provide a wider and more fulfilling range of tasks. The training that they are given must not be superficial. The training given to regular officers is unsuitable for specials, but the courses that specials undertake must be just as professional. A member of the public will be upset when a constable misuses his powers whether he is a regular or a special. I seek an assurance that the special constabulary is being taken seriously.

Earlier, I mentioned the need to provide a reward for the time that specials devote to the service. I was talking about a sense of personal satisfaction. Such a reward is most important to special constables. However, we should not assume that a financial reward in unnecessary. At the moment, specials receive various allowances but no remuneration. I know that the question of making some kind of payment, perhaps along the lines of the Territorial Army bounty, has been considered. I can see that there are arguments on both sides.

I am interested in having more special constables. The only question that interests me is whether a payment would persuade more public-spirited members of the community to offer their spare time to help the police. As specials are not paid, I assume that the Government think that the answer to that question is no. They may be right, but the question still needs to be asked from time to time. It is important to many special constables. To some it may seem as though a lack of payment is a measure of the value that the Government place on their work. I am sure that they are wrong, but I should be grateful for some light on the Government's thinking.

This is a secondary issue compared to that of job satisfaction, and I believe that the vast majority of special constables take the same view. However, we should note the benefits of a formal payment along the lines of the Territorial Army bounty.

My hon. Friend may make a fair point about paying special constables—that even without payment forces are finding it possible to attract recruits. I leave aside the question whether a payment would attract more. I wish the House to consider the fact that without the promise of a financial reward, and at the cost of their spare time, men and women are prepared to offer their services to help the police with the heavy burden that they carry on our behalf.

It is generally recognised that the prevention of crime and the maintenance of law and order are the responsibility not just of the police but of the community as a whole. There are people to whom this idea is not part of the small change of political debate on the police but a principle which they are prepared to put into practice.

We do not hear much about them, and we probably fail to recognise them when we see them, but every time a police force is under pressure, we can be sure that ordinary men and women are being called from their homes to keep routine police work turning over while the regular officers are diverted to deal with the crisis, whatever it may be—an important sporting event, a royal visit or a riot. The men and women of the special constabulary all over the country deserve our gratitude for the contribution that they are making to the police service. More than this, they deserve our support.

[Mr. Moynihan]

I am glad to have this opportunity to raise various questions with the Minister about the policies that the Government and the chief officers of police are pursuing. All right hon. and hon. Members can help the specials. All of us can do more to make the public more aware of the work that the special constabulary performs. We can all do more to encourage people to put their own spare time at the disposal of the police service. The police are more than ever under pressure and more than ever in need of our support. I sometimes hear people say that the police are too cut off from the public. Tell that to a special constable. There may be many suitable, public-spirited people who would be prepared to give practical assistance to the police service. Let us find them.

I hope that my hon. Friend does not think that my recognition of the general responsibility of us all to help the special constabulary means that I do not acknowledge his particular responsibility. I do. I look forward to his replies to the questions that I have raised in this debate.

2.51 pm

The Minister of State, Home Office (Mr. Giles Shaw): The whole House will be delighted that my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) has had the good fortune to take this debate, even though my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Conway) was unable so to do. I sympathise with him in the decision that he had to take. However, my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, East has made this, as it should be, a special day. It is a rare event when the House has time to discuss the special constabulary. I know that the men and women of the special constabulary will be particularly delighted with my hon. Friend's speech. he has demonstrated not only his substantial knowledge of the problem but his enthusiasm for their cause. The way in which he has presented his case shows a professionalism, a commitment and a detailed knowledge of this problem which I envy. I am most grateful to him.

The contribution that the special constables make has already been set out by my hon. Friend, but let us be quite clear about this. There is no way in which the police forces of this country can continue to sustain some of the major events that they have to sustain without the service of the specials. Specials in many forces worked long hours, far beyond their normal contribution, in order to ensure that the level of service to the public was not reduced by the inevitable diversion of regular officers to police, for example, the miners' dispute. That is a classic example of how important the specials are.

But the specials have another value. We all recognise that effective policing depends upon the support and co-operation of the public, and my hon. Friend was right to draw attention to that point. What more practical and valuable form of support is there than giving some of one's time to sharing the burden of the police service? What better way is there of ensuring that the police know what the public want of them and that the public know what problems the police face in meeting their wishes? I am happy to join my hon. Friend in paying tribute to the work of the men and women of the special constabulary within the police service.

My hon. Friend referred to the number of special constables. They have declined steadily from the very high wartime peak of about 100,000 to just under 15,000 at the end of 1981. I am happy to say that there has been some recovery since then. At the end of 1984 the numbers stood at just over 16,000. We are at present collecting information on the position at the end of 1985. This informaton will be available next month. I hope that it will show a further upward trend.

However, we should not be too anxious about the recent decline in numbers. A significant proportion of the loss has resulted from the weeding out of inactive members and the introduction by most forces of a retirement age of 55. That has played an important part. At the same time, forces have made efforts to improve and extend the training of specials. My hon. Friend drew particular attention to that point, to which I shall return in a minute. Let me assure him that we believe that the forces are moving in the right direction. We have now a special constabulary that is smaller than it was in the past, but in general it is younger, better trained and more active. The position varies considerably from force to force, and I certainly do not suggest that we have all the specials that we need.

The special constabulary is not a national force, which may be part of the reason why my hon. Friend queried the scale of its operation. It is based on individual forces, and, under the Police Act 1964, individual chief officers have responsibility for appointing special constables. Experience has shown that local recruiting campaigns are a better way of attracting members than national recruiting by, for example, the Home Office. The Home Office did undertake national advertising campaigns for several years, but they were less successful than local campaigns. Therefore, I should prefer recruitment of specials to take place through local campaigns, and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I are very willing to lend our support to local recruitment initiatives.

There are obvious reasons why local recruitment activities are likely to be more successful. Specials more than regular officers, identify closely with their local force. National recruitment initiatives for regular officers are a different matter, as that job involves a professional commitment to a service that can carry a person from one force to another or from one branch of the service to another as the opportunity presents itself. By definition, special constables are local residents. That is their strength and value. Probably the most effective method of recruitment is still personal contact with another special or a regular officer drawn from the location. Local events can be used to bring the special constabulary more immediately to the attention of local people.

We should not underestimate the importance of recruitment. The local force of my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham—the West Mercia police—has recently increased the number of special constables by more than 50 per cent. It has applied a number of interesting methods to achieve that.

My hon. Friend raised the question of possible difficulties in the relationship between regular officers and specials. That has been a problem, and we understand that a special constable must not be seen, and would not wish to be seen, as a cheap substitute for a regular officer. There will always be many duties that can be carried out only by properly trained regular officers. However, I accept what my hon. Friend said about the need for the role of the special constabulary to be significant. Deployment of the specials on tasks of interest and importance should play a major part in the commitment to join. Correct training for staff is important and is seen as such. I assure my hon.

Friend that there has been considerable development in training in that area during the past few years. A working party of the Police Advisory Board, which reported in 1981, recommended a more extended and structured training programme for specials, to include a great deal of practical work. I assure the House that all forces have taken steps to implement those recommendations, together with the recommendation of an earlier working party that specials would benefit from residential courses.

We now have a special constabulary that is not only younger and more active, but better informed, better prepared and better able to take on a more demanding role. What should that role be? The duties of specials traditionally have been on some of the peripheral functions to do with traffic, lining the roads and supplementing the police presence at local events. However, there has been a growing recognition that that is not the most effective use of specials. The police service cannot expect to attract and retain volunteers unless they can be offered more rewarding activities. The specials can contribute in areas such as traffic control, patrol duties, manning police stations and administrative duties within police stations. Indeed, most chief officers now reckon that that is the sort of role that they should provide.

There are some duties for which special constables are especially well equipped, and crime prevention activity is certainly one example. They are a bridge between the police and the community and they are well placed to participate in community-based crime prevention activities.

My hon. Friend referred to neighbourhood watch schemes. There are about 8,000 such schemes and I am sure that chief officers will be using specials to ensure that neighbourhood watch schemes, though they are selected and established by the regular crime prevention officers of the force concerned, are maintained enthusiastically. Continuity will be maintained by the activities of special constables, who can play a valuable role in that direction.

I understand that in Rugby the local crime prevention panel maintains a caravan for crime prevention publicity and information, which is manned by the Warwickshire specials. I understand also that in Bedfordshire, specials, as well as regular officers, give talks on crime prevention to schools and youth clubs. In London, in which my hon. Friend has a particular interest, members of the Metropolitan special constabulary run a series of self-defence courses for women. In all these activities, specials act in support of regular officers and under their direction. I cannot emphasise too strongly that the extension of the duties of specials is not intended to encrouch on the activities of proper regular officers.

My hon. Friend talked about the payment of a bounty. It is an issue that arises from time to time. My hon. Friend has experience of the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve, which pays such a bounty. The specials are divided on this issue. It is one that is considered regularly but the conclusion has always been that the payment of specials would not necessarily improve the recruitment of volunteers who were prepared to give long-term service to the force. The last formal review was undertaken by a working party of the Police Advisory Board, which reported in 1981. The special constabulary was represented on it and it was consulted. The working party gathered information from a number of voluntary bodies, including the Territorial Army, and it came to the firm conclusion that those which offered a financial reward faced exactly the same problems of recruitment and wastage and seemed no more successful in recruiting volunteers or keeping them.

The cost of paying a bounty would not be enormous, but before we add even slightly to the costs of police authorities we must be certain that the money would be well spent. At present, the evidence is not especially persuasive.

I have been speaking mainly about what chief constables are doing and I shall turn now to what the Government can do. At national level, our aim is to strengthen the special constabulary to ensure that it receives appropriate training and to encourage its effective use. In the end, it is chief officers who will decide whether to recruit additional specials, and it is they who will recruit and train them. We seek to provide chief constables with encouragement—they need very little—to pursue the objectives I have mentioned and to support them in doing so. This we do partly through our own commitments as Ministers by making it clear in public how important the role of the specials is. In the Metropolitan police district we have direct responsibility by virtue of the role of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary as the police authority. In the provinces, our main means of providing support and encouragement to chief officers is through Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary. It is with our full backing that the inspectors, in their annual inspection visits to provincial forces, provide professional advice to chief constables on their efforts to recruit special constables and to deploy them more effectively.

I hope that I have not sounded complacent, because that would be far from the truth. I trust that what I have said is encouraging to my hon. Friend, who raised the issue, deployed effective arguments and emphasised the importance of the service. I hope that my remarks have been encouraging to the specials. We have a more important role for them. We have a body of men and women whose dedication and volunteer spirit we much admire. We have an adjunct to the professional police service and it is one that is becoming increasingly important. It has proved itself extremely valuable under critical conditions in recent times. It is a voluntary service and we respect those who serve in it. We admire what they do and we trust that we shall give them every encouragement in future to fulfil their part in helping the police and the community from which they come.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at three minutes past Three o'clock.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 16 December 1985

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Storage

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest available information on the amount of surplus food stored (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the European Economic Community and the costs of storage.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of United Kingdom and Community intervention stocks, including those of foodstuffs, on the latest available dates is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly.

The storage, handling and related costs of United Kingdom intervention products (including barley and feedwheat) in 1984 were £46·4 million. We have no figures for storage costs incurred by other member states.

Cereal Stocks

Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the total cereal production in intervention in the United Kingdom has been stored for more than one year.

Mr. Gummer: Twenty nine per cent. of the grain held at 29 November 1985 has been in store for more than one year.

Veterinary Services

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement about the restructuring of veterinary investigation centres and their management.

Mr. Jopling: I have carefully considered the proposals for restructuring of veterinary investigation centres in the light of the many comments received from interested organisations and individuals. In addition, we have undertaken a detailed investment appraisal of the recommendations made by the efficiency study.

Against this background, I have concluded that the Gloucester centre should be closed but with retention of the badger-tuberculosis unit. I confirm that Chester and Cardiff centres will be closed. Discussions on the future of the Moulton centre have taken place with Northampton county council to ascertain whether it would wish to take it over. It concluded that it did not wish to do so. Accordingly this centre will also be closed. I have also decided that it would be wrong to close both the Leeds and Lincoln centres, which would leave the large pig population in the area without adequate laboratory diagnostic facilities, and concluded that the best course would be to retain and enlarge the Lincoln centre and close that at Leeds. This represents a better option than establishing a new centre in the area.

On further examination it is clear that closure of Truro, Starcross, Winchester and Wye centres with their replacement by two new centres would not be cost effective. I have therefore decided not to take any action in relation to these centres. The timing of the closures will require careful consideration and this is now being pursued with a view to implementation during the first half of next year.

Finally, I confirm that we shall be establishing a new and more centralised management structure for the veterinary investigations which I am confident will increase efficiency and enable the more effective deployment of available resources.

Less-productive Areas

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline his policy concerning the effect of the European Economic Community common agricultural policy on the more extensive systems for poorer land; and if he has considered alternative crops and systems for the less productive areas of the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 13 December 1985]: Our policy for the areas of poorer land in the United Kingdom is to take full advantage of the provisions of EC Directive 75/268 on farming in less favoured areas. Accordingly, we secured agreement in Brussels last year to a major extension of these areas which now represent over 50 per cent. of our agricultural land. For many years we have paid headage allowances in them and on 28 November my right hon. Friend the Minister announced an increase in the rates. Within the constraints of the common agricultural policy we are continually seeking ways of assisting these areas. But most of them are not basically suitable for any form of agricultural production except livestock rearing. It is partly with this in mind that in the new agricultural improvement scheme, introduced on 1 October, we included certain new features to encourage conservationally sensitive investments and diversification.

Crop Research

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to advise the Agriculture and Food Research Council that it should invest in research on a broader range of crops; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 13 December 1985]: The Agricultural and Food Research Council already studies a wide range of crops. There is close collaboration between my Department and the council in order to identify opportunities for the further development of agriculture.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. John Fraser asked the Attorney-General if it is the intention that the scheme of interim payment on account of costs under the legal aid scheme should again be made in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: Yes. Another payment on account scheme will operate in the current financial year, on a similar basis to those operated in each of the last two years.

Magistrates

Mr. Hoyle asked the Attorney-General if he will enumerate magistrates in England and Wales under the following categories: (a) sex, (b) age groupings, (c) occupation, (d) social background, (e) resident or non-resident within their petty sessional area and (f) if they have acknowledged a political viewpoint, party affiliation.

The Solicitor-General: On the last count at the beginning of the year there were 27,244 active justices of the peace, of which 15,980 were male and 11,264 female. The other information could not be ascertained except at undue cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours List

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister (1) what procedure is followed by Departments in submitting names for the honours list; and if she will move to appoint a joint committee to review the present departmental procedure with the object of widening its scope;

(2) if she will define the phrase political services as it is used by her in submitting her list for honours;

(3) what representations she has received on the procedure followed by Departments in submitting names for the honours list; and what reply she has sent;

(4) if she has any plans for reviewing and modernising the departmental machinery for the submitting of names for honours lists; and if she will make a statement;

(5) what are the functions and powers of the political honours scrutiny committee in relation to the suitability of individuals whose names are proposed to be submitted for honours to Her Majesty;

(6) on what dates the political honours scrutiny committee met in each of the last five years;

(7) who are the current members of the political honours scrutiny committee; and what are the criteria for making appointments to the committee;

(8) what criteria are used in determining whether an individual's name should be included on the list of proposed honours submitted to the political honours scrutiny committee;

(9) how many names were included in the list of proposed honours submitted to the political honours scrutiny committee in each of the last five years; and if she will provide a breakdown according to the political parties in respect of which those names were submitted.

The Prime Minister: It has rightly been the practice of successive Prime Ministers not to disclose or discuss details of the procedures and processes by which their recommendations to the Crown for inclusion in honours lists are arrived at, and I do not propose to depart from that practice.

I keep the arrangements under regular review, and they are modified from time to time in the light of changing needs or circumstances. I have no plans for any kind of external review.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what scientific advice she sought from outside the Government about the feasibility of the strategic defence initiative programme before Her Majesty's Government concluded an agreement with the United States Administration on research projects; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None. The United States strategic defence initiative is a research programme to investigate the feasibility of strategic defence.

British Atlantic Committee

Mr. Nellist asked the Prime Minister what was the financial support given by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation in each of the last 10 years to the British Atlantic committee.

The Prime Minister: The British Atlantic committee (BAC), whom we have consulted, receives no grant from the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation. NATO refund a proportion of the travelling costs of visits to NATO headquarters organised by the BAC and other voluntary associations affiliated to the Atlantic Treaty Association. In the case of the BAC, this amounted to £13,201·50 in 1984-85.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Prime Minister if, having regard to the international status of the Anglo-Irish agreement, she will require a Minister at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, or other appropriate representatives of that Department, to attend meetings of the Inter-Governmental Council.

The Prime Minister: Membership of the conference is small and flexible. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will be represented as appropriate.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Prime Minister which Ministers and Departments of State have taken part or been represented in meetings of, and within the framework of, the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, my hon. Friends the Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office, and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State attended the first meeting of the intergovernmental conference on 11 December. The Northern Ireland Office and Foreign and Commonwealth Office were represented at official level. There have been no other meetings.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Petitions)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of petitions received by his Department from prisoners in prisons in England and Wales in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: As I stated in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Knowsley, North (Mr. Kilroy-Silk) on 30 October at column 556, no record is kept of the total number of petitions received from prisoners in prison in England and Wales.

Advancement of Women

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will establish law reform committees constituted as proposed in paragraph 66 of the United Nations Nairobi forward looking strategies for women.

Mr. Waddington: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. Every Government Department already has a duty to keep under review as appropriate the legislation relevant to its areas of responsibility. The Equal Opportunities Commission has a duty to keep under review the working of the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 and the Equal Pay Act 1970 and may review other legislation in the fulfilment of its other statutory duties.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a special office within his Department to monitor periodically and accelerate the process of equitable representation of women as called for in paragraph 88 of the United Nations Nairobi forward looking strategies for women.

Mr. Waddington: The Home Office designated two equal opportunity officers in January 1984. They oversee and monitor the equal opportunities policy within the Departments, including the Civil Service programme of action for women.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to evaluate those parts of the United Nations forward looking strategies for women which apply to his Department; what resources he has allocated to this; and if he will make a statement..

Mr. Waddington: Those parts of the 'forward looking strategies' which are relevant to the Home Office are being carefully considered as part of the normal work of the Department.

Departmental Appointments

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those bodies to which his Department makes appointments, the number of appointees and the number of these who are women.

Mr. Hurd: The information is contained in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1984". I understand that the 1985 edition is to be published on 17 December and that a copy will be placed in the Library.

Pit Bull Terriers

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to secure the removal from the United Kingdom of two pit bull terriers recently imported from the United States of America and currently in quarantine.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have no power to remove from the United Kingdom animals which have been legally imported and properly held in compliance with our quarantine regulations.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records and statistics are compiled of the number of United States citizens entering Britain each year.

Mr. Waddington: Nationals of all countries outside the European Community are required on entering the United Kingdom to complete a landing card which includes details of the purpose of their journey. Analyses of these cards showing the numbers admitted by nationality (including the United States of America) and purpose of journey are published annually in table 1 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom" (Cmnd. 9544 for 1984).

National Drugs Unit

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the establishments of forces from which officers are to be seconded to the national drugs co-ordinating units are to be increased so as to enable additional officers to be recruited to replace them;

(2) if the police officers being seconded to the national drugs unit under the command of Mr. Colin Hewitt are to be placed on central service.

Mr. Giles Shaw: For the period of their service in the national drugs intelligence unit (NDIU), provincial officers are seconded to the Metropolitan police. They do not remain on the strength of their home force and chief officers providing officers to NDIU may replace them for the duration of that secondment; there is thus no need for any increase in establishment. NDIU is funded as a common police service.

This reply also provides information pursuant to my reply of 13 December to a question from my hon. Friend about police officers being seconded to the NDIU.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in establishing a new national drugs intelligence unit and the creation of drug wings within regional crime squads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The national drugs intelligence unit, superceding the central drugs intelligence unit, came formally into existence on 1 November. It currently consists of 25 officers drawn from provincial forces as well as from the Metropolitan police together with five officers from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and 16 civilian staff.

My right hon. Friend has indicated to police authorities his readiness to approve appropriate increases in establishments of regional crime squads, to make provision for drugs wings, which they are currently considering.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated extra annual expenditure to the South Yorkshire police committee and the metropolitan council in the funding of the new drug wings within regional crime squads; to what extent this will be nationally funded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The precise arrangements for the funding of each regional crime squad, including drugs wings, are a matter for its constituent police authorities. Eligible expenditure will rank for 50 per cent. police grant from the Home Office in the usual way.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will meet a delegation from the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss the operational and financial implications of establishing drug wings within each regional crime squad and the possibilities of national funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As the then Home Secretary indicated, we are ready to approve requests for increases in regional crime squad establishments necessary to create drugs wings. The extra expenditure involved will qualify for 50 per cent. police grant from the Home Office in the usual way. Moreover, specific provision has been made in police grant related expenditure to cover local authority expenditure for this purpose.

The addition of drugs wings will not change the operational or other arrangements as regards the control of regional crime squads.

Officials are already in touch with the AMA, and my right hon. Friend is ready to consider any particular issues which it may wish to raise: but we hope that police authorities will play their part in the tripartite system by recognising in financial provision the priority which the Government attaches to the investigation of drugs offences.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for the most recent week for which the data can be conveniently assembled, the number and percentage of prisoners in each closed prison and in aggregate who spent more than 18 hours a day (a) in their cells on three or more days, (b) on average and (c) on any day.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Reward Payments

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of the Metropolitan police towards reward payments; in what circumstances they may be made; what guidance or limits are laid down regarding their size; at what level the decisions to sanction payments are made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police does not disclose details of reward payments. The policy is that payments are made in suitable cases, where there is no risk of compromising the criminal process. They vary in size but the decision is always taken at the highest level within the specialist Operations Department.

Civil Defence

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the pilot study in home defence region 10 examining the need and scope for improved co-ordination of home defence planning takes into account the transition to war measures contained in the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication agreement;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the interim report of the pilot study concerning the co-ordination of planning in home defence region 10; and when the final report is expected.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This study is expected to be complete in a year or so's time after which the results will be made available to the House. An internal report has been made on the first part of the study which has confirmed the need for regional co-ordination. It would not be appropriate to place it in the Library. The study takes into account the agreement referred to in as much as plans made under it bear on regional co-ordination.

Detained Young Persons

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has as to how many persons under the age of 16 years were detained in the penal system in England and Wales at the latest date for which figures are conveniently available.

Mr. Mellor: According to the records held centrally, which are approximate, on 31 October 1985 about 340 persons aged under 16 were held in prison department establishments in England and Wales.

Cinemas (Safety) Regulations 1985

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects to issue the Cinemas (Safety) Regulations 1985 and accompanying guidance; if he has agreed to any changes to the draft regulations as originally circulated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is planned both to make the Cinemas (Safety) Regulations and issue the accompanying guidance during the course of 1986. No significant changes to the draft regulations are expected, but the guidance's advice on access for disabled people will be revised on the lines explained in the reply given on 5 December 1985 to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam).

Freemasons

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records justices' clerks keep of persons in their area known to be freemasons.

Mr. Mellor: None.

Citizenship

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy not to place any impediment in the way of people claiming British citizenship by descent being able to exercise their rights, including rights of appeal, in the same way as Momotaj Begum, the daughter of Nurul-Islam, a British citizen settled here with his wife and other children, following the recent decision of the immigration appeal tribunal in this case.

Mr. Waddington: British citizens do not require leave to enter the United Kingdom under the Immigration Act 1971. The immigration officer's examination of such persons is confined to establishing that they are British citizens. The tribunal determination to which the hon. Member refers concerns rights of appeal, not substantive questions of admission. Passengers who are refused entry because they do not satisfy the immigration officer that they qualify under the Immigration Act and the rules but who nevertheless can put forward a claim to British citizenship by descent may, as the tribunal confirmed, appeal against refusal on the grounds that they do not need leave to enter.

In the Government's view passengers claiming to be British citizens by descent have such a right of appeal only if there appears to be some basis for the claim. The instructions available to immigration officers cover the matters set out above.

The Government have no immediate proposals for changes in the operation of the immigration control. They do, however, keep these arrangements under continuous re-examination and would not hesitate to take appropriate action if attempts were made to misuse the tribunal's determination to evade the prescribed entry clearance procedures overseas.

Emergencies

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure adequate co-operation in dealing with peacetime emergencies between local authorities, emergency services, public services and voluntary bodies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This is already covered in sections 22-25 of the "Emergency Planning Guidance to Local Authorities" issued last June. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate total spending by local authorities on training, designation and preparation of appropriate staff at each level to cope with peacetime emergencies;

(2) what, in each of the past five years, has been the level of (a) central Government and (b) local authority spending on planning for non-nuclear emergencies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the categories of grant available to local authorities for planning to deal with peacetime emergencies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: None is available to local authorities specifically to support peacetime emergency planning.

Immigration

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what statistics are collected by immigration service officers serving terminal 3 at Heathrow airport regarding right hon. and hon. Members' representations in respect of arriving passengers refused admission by immigration officers there; and if he will publish the statistics collected regarding the first nine months of the current year;

(2) what is his policy towards the collecting of statistics at ports of arrival of the number of immigration cases attracting representations by right hon. and hon. Members; what analyses are carried out of these statistics (a) at the ports of arrival and (b) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: At all ports, the number of cases in which a right hon. or hon. Member makes representations is recorded. At terminal 3 Heathrow in the first nine months of this year it is recorded that representations by right hon. or hon. Members were made in about 2,500 cases. These statistics are required as management information both at the ports, and centrally, as a record of the cases themselves, and as a measurement of the work involved and of the resource implications of that work. The available information is looked at in a variety of ways depending on the issue being examined.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 26, if he will place in the Library any statistical data submitted by the Immigration Service Union in support of its concern expressed at the increase in the number of immigration cases attracting representations from right hon. and hon. Members; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his policy towards members of the immigration service gathering statistics on the number of immigration cases attracting representations by right hon. and hon. Members for union purposes; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what information he has disclosed to representatives of immigration service officers about the number of immigration cases attracting representations by right hon. and hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The statistics available to me of the number of representations made by right hon. and hon. Members about immigration cases are compiled and presented by immigration service management and/or by my private office. I have not received such statistics from representatives of the Immigration Service Union but, in my discussion with it, both I, and it, referred to the considerable increase this year in cases attracting such representations at the ports.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many South African or former Rhodesian nationals have been recruited to the Metropolitan police; in what years; and in which divisions.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the information requested is as follows:

Officers of South African origin

Rank	Year of joining police service	Currently serving at
Chief Inspector	1963	S District
Chief Inspector	1972	A3 Branch
Inspector	1967	N District
Inspector	1973	N District
Sergeant	1959	C11 Branch
Sergeant	1963	W District
Sergeant	1968	Special Branch
Sergeant	1971	M District
Sergeant	1976	L District
Sergeant	1977	K District
Sergeant	1978	C District
Sergeant	1979	P District
Sergeant	1979	S District
Constable	1962	Special Branch
Constable	1974	C District
Constable	1975	R District
Constable	1976	C District
Constable	1976	Special Branch
Constable	1976	D District
Constable	1977	Royalty and Diplomatic Protection Department
Constable	1981	P District
Constable	1981	Q District
Constable	1981	M District

Rank	Year of joining police service	Currently serving at
Constable	1982	B District
Constable	1982	E District
Constable	1982	F District
Constable	1982	D District
Constable	1982	I District
Constable	1984	P District
Constable	1984	Y District
Constable	1985	Z District

Officers of Rhodesian origin

Rank	Year of joining police service	Currently serving at
Inspector	1974	B8 Branch
Sergeant	1976	W District
Sergeant	1979	B District
Constable	1972	T District
Constable	1977	M District
Constable	1977	X District
Constable	1979	A District
Constable	1979	G District
Constable	1980	X District
Constable	1980	A District
Constable	1980	N District
Constable	1980	Y District
Constable	1981	Y District
Constable	1981	M District
Constable	1981	G District
Constable	1981	Q District
Constable	1981	Y District
Constable	1982	B District
Constable	1982	K District
Constable	1982	E District
Constable	1982	P District
Constable	1982	N District
Constable	1982	M District
Constable	1982	G District
Constable	1982	E District
Constable	1983	A District
Constable	1983	Q District
Constable	1983	T District
Constable	1983	C District
Constable	1983	P District
Constable	1983	J District
Constable	1984	M District
Constable	1984	A District
Constable	1984	Y District
Constable	1985	H District
Constable	1985	B District

Local Government Reform

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give separately for the six metropolitan county councils and for the Greater London council, the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985, listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mr. Hurd: No staff are presently engaged exclusively on such work. The total estimated staff time devoted to reorganisation in all seven areas is:

Grade	Total staff input at each grade devoted to this work
Grade 3	0·2
Grade 4	less than 0·1
Grade 5	1·0
Senior legal assistant	less than 0·1
Principal (and related specialists)	3·4
SEO (and equivalents)	1·4
Junior administrators (HEO/HEO(D)/EO/AT)	3·4
Clerical grades (CO/CA)	0·3

The estimated annual cost is £213,000. About £13,300 can be attributed to work on Greater London but it is not possible to provide any further breakdown by area. The figures do not include members of Home Office inspectorates who are consulted on reorganisation preparations.

ENVIRONMENT

Water

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why, under article 20 of the European Community directive (80/778/EC) relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption, he has applied for a delay on lead for four years and on all private water supplies for 10 years for the United Kingdom as a whole, rather than specified geographical areas thereof.

Mr. John Patten: The Government's response of 1983 to the ninth report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution set a target date of December 1989 for reducing lead concentrations in drinking water to acceptable levels. Our application to the European Commission under article 20, which is consistent with that policy, relates to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and to the areas covered by the Anglian, Severn-Trent, North West and Yorkshire water authorities where major improvement programmes are still under way. These programmes will be substantially complete by the target date.

Private supplies, although only serving 1 per cent. of the population, are spread throughout the country and in general do not constitute a serious health risk. District councils have a duty to ascertain the wholesomeness of private water supplies and powers to ensure that action is taken to secure improvement when necessary. The article 20 application does not relate to private supplies serving more than 500 people.

Z Scores

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that the statistical technique known as Z scores used by his Department accurately reflects the poverty, deprivation and difficulties within each local authority.

Sir George Young: There is no single authoritative measure of the difficulties faced by a particular area. The Z scores prepared by my Department provide a comparative index of local authority areas, combining six indicators of deprivation based on information at census enumeration district level. They provide a useful guide to the incidence of multiple deprivation, but cannot give a comprehensive picture of an area's social and economic circumstances.

Retail Superstore Developments

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what emphasis he places on the anticipated employment potential of large retail superstore developments when assessing an appeal through referred planning applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Each case must be considered on its merits in the light of all the circumstances.

GLC (Land and Property)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the total amount of land and property in the possession of the Greater London council; and what is the latest estimate of its value.

Mr. Tracey: My Department does not have comprehensive information about the GLC's land and property holdings. It is for successor authorities to obtain information about the property to be transferred to them at abolition.

Holiday Project Funding

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what he plans to spend on holiday project funding from the traditional urban programme in 1986-87; and if he proposes to restore the £400,000 initially cut from the current year's funding.

Sir George Young: Bids from local authorities are being considered and an announcement will be made in the new year.

Thermal Insulation Standards (Building Regulations)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will increase the thermal insulation standards of the building regulations in energy efficiency year.

Sir George Young: The requirements of the regulations, including those for thermal insulation, are under review. The principal aim of the review is to reduce the burden of regulation, but the Government recognise that the building regulations have a role in setting basic standards of cost-effective energy efficiency.

Building Controls (Inner London)

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to lay regulations to apply the system of building controls currently operating in England and Wales to inner London.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has today laid before Parliament the Building (Inner London) Regulations 1985. It is intended that the regulations will come into operation on 6 January 1986. The effect of the regulations is that the building control system will become essentially the same in inner London as in the rest of England and Wales. With certain limited exceptions the Building Regulations 1985 will apply to building work in inner London in place of the present constructional byelaws made under the London Building Acts. The Building (Approved Inspectors, etc) Regulations 1985 will also apply to inner London from 6 January 1986.

The Greater London council and the district surveyor service will be responsible for administering the new system for inner London until 1 April 1986, when responsibility for this function will pass to the inner London borough councils and the Corporation of the City of London.

The regulations provide for transitional arrangements so that schemes in progress on the 6 January will continue to be subject to the London Building Acts and byelaws.

Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, with dates, the orders made under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland are responsible for making section 29 orders within their own territories. In total, the following orders have been made: —

Order	Date Made
The Baddesley Common (Hampshire) Nature Conservation Order 1982	21 October 1982
The Sandford Heath (Dorset) Nature Conservation Order 1982	9 December 1982
The Tealham and Tadham Moors (Somerset) Nature Conservation Order 1983	23 March 1983
The Annesley Woodhouse Quarry (Nottinghamshire) Nature Conservation Order 1983	24 June 1983
The Waltham Chase Meadows (Hampshire) Nature Conservation Order 1983	28 June 1983
The Carstairs Kames (Strathclyde) Nature Conservation Order 1984	31 May 1984
The Carnkief Pond (Cornwall) Nature Conservation Order 1984	21 September 1984
The West Westray (Orkney) Nature Conservation Order 1984	26 September 1984
The Tan-y-Gadair, Cadair Idris (Gwynedd) Nature Conservation Order 1984	2 October 1984
The Uddens Heath (Dorset) Nature Conservation Order 1984	22 October 1984
The Llyn Mawr (Powys) Nature Conservation Order 1984	3 December 1984
The Walton Moss (Cumbria) Nature Conservation Order 1984	20 December 1984
The Horse Field (North Yorkshire) Nature Conservation Order 1984	21 December 1984
The Upton Heath (Dorset) Nature Conservation Order 1985	22 January 1985
The Leek Moors (Staffordshire) Nature Conservation Order 1985	1 May 1985
The Tealham and Tadham Moors (Somerset) Nature Conservation Order 1985	7 April 1985
The West Mersea Meadow (Essex) Nature Conservation Order 1985	17 May 1985
The Hencott Pool (Shropshire) Nature Conservation Order 1985	17 July 1985
The Coedydd A Chorsydd Aber Teifi (Dyfed)	6 August 1985

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide details, including dates, of those orders under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 which were proposed by the Nature Conservancy Council and which he rejected.

Mr. Waldegrave: In three cases submitted to him by the Nature Conservancy Council, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment was not satisfied that the criteria set out in section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 had been fully met. Details of the three sites are:

Site	Date rejected	Comment
Went Ings—South Yorkshire	30 August 1983	Order requested to avert damage. Agreement involving exchange of land subsequently reached.
Sherburn Willows —North Yorkshire	8 February 1985	Order requested to curtail damage. Modified site being re-notified.
Brimham Rocks—North Yorkshire	27 February 1985	Order requested to avert damage. Site currently protected under the provisions of section 28 of the Act.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list separately for (a) the six metropolitan county councils and (b) the Greater London council, the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985, listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mr. Tracey: I will answer this question shortly.

Channel Fixed Link

Sir Hector Monro asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to consult the Nature Conservancy Council on all relevant environmental and nature conservation matters before Her Majesty's Government come to a decision on the preferred route for a Channel fixed link; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Yes. The Government have consulted the Nature Conservancy Council on the relevant environmental and nature conservation matters in respect of the proposed Channel fixed link and will take its views into account in reaching a decision on which (if any) scheme is to be preferred.

Sewer Collapse (North-West)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the extent of sewer collapse in the north-west region in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how this figure compares with the average for the other regions in each of those years;

(2) what percentage of total United Kingdom sewer collapse occurred in the north-west region in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: The North West water authority reported 690, 690 and 600 significant collapses respectively in 1981-82, 1982-83 and 1983-84. Reporting standards have improved but they vary between water authorities and this makes comparisons unreliable. Ignoring those variations, the north west has about 14 per cent. of the collapses in England and Wales. The rate of collapses per kilometre is about the same as for England and Wales as a whole.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the ratio of housing stock to inhabitants in each of the member countries of the European Economic Community.

Sir George Young: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible with the information available.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the crude surplus by which the number of dwellings in England and Wales exceeded the number of households in the latest year for which figures are available; and how this figure compares with the adjusted figure, taking into account second homes, unfit dwellings, unoccupied dwellings undergoing repair and concealed households.

Sir George Young: 1981 is the most recent year for which information is available about each of the items referred to in the question. The "crude surplus" of dwellings over households in England and Wales was:

	Number
Dwellings	19,086,000
Households	18,293,000
"Crude surplus"	793,000

There is no unique conventional set of adjustments to be made to the crude surplus. The 1981 figures for the item referred to in the question are:

	Number
Second residences, including holiday accommodation	221,000
Dwellings that were vacant and undergoing improvement	181,000
Unfit dwellings	1,207,000
Concealed families	343,000

Some of the concealed families are likely to have lived that way from choice. There is probably some overlap between vacant dwellings undergoing improvement and unfit dwellings. Many of the unfit dwellings could probably be made fit by remedial work.

London Forum

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give approval to the funding which has been allocated by the Greater London council for the London Forum.

Mr. Tracey: I am not aware of any application by the GLC for consent in respect of a payment to London Forum.

Easiform Houses

Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the number of Easiform houses which (a) have been reported as defective and (b) have been reported as in good repair.

Mr. John Patten: Over 60,000 Easiform houses are estimated to have been built in England and Wales. A preliminary analysis of local authorities' responses to my Department's recent stock condition inquiry has identified only some 38,000 houses of this type; and that authorities had some information on 36,500. Some 1,000 were reported to require no renovation work of any kind; the other 35,500 were said to require renovation work averaging £5,100 per house, compared with an average cost of £4,900 for all dwellings requiring renovation.

Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from hon. Members seeking designation of Easiform houses under the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Mr. John Patten: I have received three such representations this year, including that from my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South. In response I have explained that the Department has no evidence at present to justify national designation of Easiform houses under the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have designated Easiform houses under section 12 of the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Birtenshaw Farm, Bolton

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 170, on what date he signed the document giving approval to the planning appeal at Birtenshaw farm, Bolton.

Mr. Tracey: The decision was signed on behalf of the Secretary of State on 18 July 1985.

Rugby Football (Grants)

Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much public money the rugby football unions have received through grants payable to their members by the Sports Council during each of the last five years.

Mr. Tracey: The Sports Council grant aids rugby union football in England through direct grants to the governing bodies and capital grants to clubs.

Grant aid to the governing bodies for rugby union football in England for the last five years was:

	1980-81 £	1981-82 £	1982-83 £	1983-84 £	1984-85 £
Rugby Football Union	21,615	19,766	24,703	32,229	23,762
Rugby Football Schools Union	7,961	5,161	12,500	6,691	6,691
TOTAL	29,576	24,927	37,203	38,920	30,453

Figures for capital grants are only available for the last two financial years. For 1983-84 the total was £137,776, and for 1984-85, £183,951.

Nature Conservancy Council

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make arrangements for right hon. and hon. Members to obtain reports of the nature Conservancy Council from the Vote Office.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am arranging for copies of the eleventh report to be placed in the Library. Other NCC publications may be obtained direct from the council.

Urban Programme

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will explain, in respect of each authority invited to bid for traditional urban programme resources in 1986-87, the reasons why it has been included, setting out the information in the format of table 3 of his Department's census information note No 2.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 13 December 1985]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Comparison of Key Indicators of Deprivation for Authorities invited to bid for Traditional Urban Programme new approvals in 1986-87

Local Authority	*Number of Times in Worst 50	Number of Times in Worst 10†	Main Issues	Local Authority
Burnley	4	1	Lacking amenities, Mortality rate, single parents, pensioners living alone	Burnley
Calderdale	2	—	Overcrowding, pensioners living alone	Calderdale
Camden	6	2	Population loss, non-whites, Lacking amenities, single parents, overcrowding, pensioners living alone	Camden
Corby	4	2	Unemployment, Single parents, mortality rate, overcrowding	Corby
Derby	2	—	lacking amenities, non-whites	Derby
Derwentside	2	1	mortality rate, Unemployment	Derwentside
Ealing	5	2	Non-whites, lacking amenities, Overcrowding, population loss, single parents	Ealing
Greenwich	3	—	single parents, non-whites, overcrowding	Greenwich
Grimsby	3	—	single parents, unemployment, mortality rate	Grimsby
Halton	3	—	unemployment, mortality rate, single parents	Halton
Haringey	5	3	population loss, Non-Whites, Lacking Amenities, Single Parents, overcrowding	Haringey
Hartlepool	5	1	Unemployment, single parents, lacking amenities, overcrowding, mortality rate	Hartlepool
Hyndburn	2	—	lacking amenities, mortality rate	Hyndburn

Local Authority	Number of Times in Worst 50*	Number of Times in Worst 10†	Main Issues	Local Authority
Kensington & Chelsea	5	3	Population loss, Lacking Amenities, Overcrowding, single parents, non-whites	Kensington & Chelsea
Kirklees	2	—	overcrowding, non-whites	Kirklees
Langbaurgh	3	1	unemployment, Mortality Rate, single parents	Langbaurgh
Lewisham	5	1	population loss, non-whites, Single Parents, lacking amenities, overcrowding	Lewisham
Lincoln	3	—	lacking amenities, unemployment, single parents	Lincoln
Luton	3	—	non-whites, overcrowding, single parents	Luton
Newham	6	3	population loss, Non-Whites, Lacking amenities, single parents, Overcrowding, unemployment	Newham
Pendle	3	—	pensioners living alone, non-whites, lacking amenities	Pendle
Preston	7	—	lacking amenities, unemployment, overcrowding, single parents, non-whites, population loss, pensioners living alone	Preston
Rossendale	2	—	mortality rate, pensioners living alone	Rossendale
St. Helens	3	—	mortality rate, lacking amenities, unemployment	St. Helens
Scunthorpe	3	1	Unemployment, single parents, population loss	Scunthorpe
Sedgefield	2	—	mortality rate, unemployment	Sedgefield
Southwark	7	2	Population Loss, non-whites, Single Parents, overcrowding, lacking amenities, unemployment, pensioners living alone	Southwark
Stockton-on-Tees	3	1	unemployment, Mortality rate, single parents	Stockton-on-Tees
Stoke-on-Trent	4	—	lacking amenities, unemployment, population loss, mortality rate	Stoke-on-Trent
The Wrekin	2	—	unemployment, single parent	The Wrekin
Walsall	3	—	unemployment, overcrowding, non-whites	Walsall
Waltham Forest	5	1	population loss, non-whites, Lacking Amenities, overcrowding, single parents	Waltham Forest
Wear Valley	3	1	unemployment, Mortality Rate, overcrowding	Wear Valley
West Lancashire	2	—	mortality rate, single parents	West Lancashire
Westminster	5	2	Population Loss, non-whites, Lacking Amenities, overcrowding, pensioners living alone.	Westminster

Note. The other authorities invited to bid for Traditional Urban Programme new approvals in 1986 do not score under columns * or †. They are Barnsley, Bristol, Dudley, Ellesmere Port, Plymouth, Rotherham, Tameside, Trafford, the Wrekin.
* Listed in "Main Issues" column.
† Listed in Capital Letters in "Main Issues" column.

WALES

Cycle Tracks

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the use made by Welsh highway authorities of the provisions under the Cycle Tracks Act 1984 for converting footpaths into cycle tracks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The powers in the Cycle Tracks Act 1984 to convert footpaths to cycle tracks are discretionary, and it is for the local authorities concerned to decide what use to make of them. To assist them we shall shortly be issuing a circular giving advice on the Act and the associated regulations.

Free School Meals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate for primary and secondary maintained schools in Wales the number of pupils receiving free school meals where the entitlement derives from families' (a) receipt of supplementary benefit, (b) receipt of family income supplement and (c) local authority discretionary powers.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: On the basis of the 1984 school meals census in Wales, the following is an approximate estimate:

Pupils receiving free meals on the basis of:	Numbers
(a) families' receipt of supplementary benefit	64,000
(b) receipt of family income supplement	16,000
(c) local authority discretion	14,000

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give figures for each year since 1975 for primary and secondary maintained schools in Wales for the total number of pupils in attendance, the number of pupils taking school meals on payments and free and the number of pupils bringing their own food.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The figures for 1984, the latest year for which information is available, are as follows:

	Numbers
Primary Schools
Pupils present	222,564
Pupils taking midday meals:
On payment	31,115
Free	57,007
Pupils bringing own food	56,488
Secondary Schools
Pupils present	198,788
Pupils taking midday meals:
On payment	72,864
Free	37,009
Pupils bringing own food	30,276

	Numbers
Primary and Secondary Schools
Pupils present	421,352
Pupils taking midday meals:
On payment	153,979
Free	94,016
Pupils bringing own food	86,764

The corresponding information for the years 1975 to 1983 inclusive is published in section 8 of volumes 5 and 9 of Statistics of Education in Wales, copies of which are in the Library.

Local Authorities (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Raffan asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce the capital allocations for individual local authorities.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: On 3 December I announced that the total of capital allocations for 1986-87 in Wales would be £323 million. Authorities have also been informed of the allocations I have made for housing (£141 million) and for projects of regional or national importance or special projects (£10 million). The major remaining component of local authority capital allocations is distributed on a formula basis. These allocations together with those for major road schemes will be notified today. In total they amount to almost £150 million. Authorities will then have the information they need to plan their detailed capital programmes for the coming year.

Details of the allocations for individual authorities have been placed in the Library. Allocations for schemes under the Urban Programme, totalling £23 million, will be announced early in the new year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advertising

Mr. Jim Spicer asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advertising agents have been appointed by his Department, or by the Central Office of Information on behalf of his Department, to handle campaigns involving the communication of information on subjects for which his Department is responsible to Parliament over each of the last 10 years, respectively; what was the subject of each campaign; and how much was spent on each campaign.

Mr. Butcher: Information is readily available covering only the past five years and not all of that permits the advertising agent to be readily identified. However, where the advertising agent is known the information is as follows:

Agency	Campaign	Expenditure £
1980-81
Ogilvy Benson and Mather	Queens Award to Industry	28,067
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Furniture Fire Safety	43,729
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Electronic Applications Division	6,023
Ogilvy Benson and Mather	National Maritime Institute	2,690
Ogilvy Benson and Mather	Technology Advisory Point	7,026
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Conference on Chemical Nomenclature	4,176
Ogilvy Benson and Mather	Computer Aided Design Centre	31,850
Ogilvy Benson and Mather	British Business	16,825
Freeman Matthews Milne	Small Firms Service	362,969
Freeman Matthews Milne	Inward Investment	16,356
Doyle Dane Bernbach	BOTB Home and Overseas Publicity	3,968
Charles Barker Recruitment	Recruitment	123,942
Charles Barker Recruitment	Statutory Notices	10,234
1981-82
Freeman Matthews Milne	Companies (No. 2) Act	101,749
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Queens Award to Industry	26,889
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Country of Origin Legislation	2,133
Freeman Matthews Milne	Business Opportunities	7,069
Freeman Matthews Milne	Small Firms (Local)	124,226
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Maritime Institute	20,848
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Physical Laboratory	39,180
Royles and Parker Ltd	Robotics	91,433
Freeman Matthews Milne	Small Firms (West Midlands)	32,299
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Engineering Laboratory	85,042
Doyle Dane Bernbach	British Business Magazine	7,184
Roles and Parker Ltd	Microprocessors Application	79,184
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Technology Advisory Point	18,997
Doyle Dane Bernbach	CADCAM	58,762
Doyle Dane Bernbach	BOTB Export Services	19,167
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Export Services	135,035
Charles Barker Recruitment	Recruitment	29,166
Charles Barker Recruitment	Statutory Notices	11,229
1982-83
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Queens Award to Industry	34,520
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Physical Laboratory	14,371
Doyle Dane Bernbach	CADCAM	18,702
Doyle Dane Bernbach	NPL (NATLAS)	16,341
Doyle Dane Bernbach	British Business Magazine	22,603
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Export Services	133,298
Charles Barker Recruitment	Recruitment	25,630
Charles Barker Recruitment	Statutory Notices	19,806
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Engineering Laboratory	70,544
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Research Support	52,876
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Technology Advisory Point	14,420
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Robotics	4,891
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Cadcentre (Home/Overseas)	48,374
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Regional Industrial Development	191
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Maritime Institute	43,055
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Information Technology Caravans	39,272
Freeman Matthews Treasure	Small Firms	469,562
Dewe Rogerson Ltd / Hilton Advertising Ltd	Information Technology Year	485,000
Roles and Parker Ltd	Biotechnology	50,058
Roles and Parker Ltd	Microprocessor Application Project	86,558
Wight Collins Rutherford Scott	Small Firms	964,917
1983-84
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Queens Award to Industry	30,954
Doyle Dane Bernbach	SURMA-Asian Eye Make-up	7,854
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Furniture Fire Safety Regulations	10,462
Doyle Dane Bernbach	NPL Awareness	24,197
Wight Collins Rutherford Scott	Help for Small Businesses	19,257
Roles and Parker Ltd	Quality Control	244,338
Roles and Parker Ltd	Robotics	238
Roles and Parker Ltd	SEFIS	48,761
Roles and Parker Ltd	Microsystems	90,996
Dorland	Information Technology	1,315
Roles and Parker Ltd	CADCAM	124,376

Agency	Campaign Expenditure	£
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Engineering Laboratory	6,026
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Invest in Britain Bureau	1,021
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Physical Laboratory	3,879
Roles and Parker Ltd	Robotics	3,122
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Invest in Britain Bureau	63
Freeman Mathews Treasure	Small Firms	169,965
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Design for Profit	23,263
Dorland	BOTB Modern Languages	992
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Marketing Advertising Services	10,144
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Export Services	8.021
Charles Barker Recruitment	Recruitment	24,596
Charles Barker Recruitment	Statutory Notices	13,234
1984-85
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Engineering Laboratory	89,000
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Queens Award to Industry	38,970
Doyle Dane Bernbach	National Physical Laboratory	710
Doyle Dane Bernbach	Business Statistics Office	9,500
Young and Rubicam	Microsystem Centres	10,000
Wight Collins Rutherford Scott	Small Firms	261,168
Roles and Parker Ltd	Biotechnology	5,344
Ayer Barker Ltd	Industrial Heat Recovery	6,930
Dorland	Micros in Primary Schools	395
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Export Services	3,542
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Export United States of America	70,000
J Walter Thomson	BOTB Small Firms Review	150,000
Charles Barker Recruitment	Recruitment	29,417
Charles Barker Recruitment	Statutory Notices	29,892
David Tolson	Inward Investment in United Kingdom	494,892
Industrial Publicity Services	SF (local)	220,173

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on advertising in national and local newspapers, on television and in other printed journals during the financial year 1984-85; and what is the amount budgeted and spent to date in 1985-86.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 6 December 1985, c. 373]: Information is not readily available to provide a breakdown of the advertising between national and local newspapers and periodicals nor is it readily available for minor amounts of advertising placed other than through the COI or centrally by my Department. The figures which are readily available are:

	1984-85 £	1985-86* £
Press and Periodicals	2,081,283	1,160,410
TV	31,635	Nil

* To 4 December 1985.

Electricity (Resale)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to introduce legislation to require landlords to charge tenants for the resale of electricity and gas at the standard tariff operated by the appropriate electricity or gas board covering the area in which the premises are situated.

Mr. Howard: I have no such plans. Under present legislation, the electricity and gas supply industries fix the maximum resale prices of electricity and gas and I understand that in the light of my statement to this House on 5 December at column 287 the electricity supply industry is considering some further rationalisation of the domestic resale price of electricity.

Television (Programme Schedules)

Mr. Parris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to introduce legislation to prevent broadcasting authorities from using copyright to restrict the circulation of information about future programmes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: We expect to publish a White Paper early next year, setting out the Government's proposals for the reform of copyright law.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give separately for the six metropolitan county councils and for the Greater London council the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985 in relation to the enterprise boards and other economic functions of the metropolitan county councils listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No staff of the Department of Trade and Industry are employed on the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985 in relation to the functions referred to.

Tobacco Industry (Grants and Loans)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the number and total value of grants and loans made by his Department in each of the last 10 years for businesses involved in the manufacture, processing, packaging or distribution of tobacco products, including cigarettes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The information is not available in the detail requested.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will be seeking to make any changes in the draft European Economic Community negotiating mandate for the multi-fibre arrangement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Steel

Sir John Osborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the tonnage and value of bulk steels, special alloy stainless engineering and tool steels, respectively, in total, manufactured and used in the United Kingdom in 1975, 1980 and 1985, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The following is the available information:

United Kingdom Producers Deliveries

'000 tonnes

	1976*	1980	1984	‖ 1985
Ordinary steels	14,626	9,221	11,072	8,542
Special steels†	1,686	1,293	1,566	1,215
of which
engineering steel	976	742	665	532
tool steel	13	13	6	4
TOTAL STEEL	16,312	10,514	12,638	9,757

United Kingdom Steel Consumption of Finished Steel Products

million tonnes

	1976	1980	‡1983	‖ 1985
Ordinary steel	14·50	11·47	10·31	n/a
Special steel	1·67	1·30	1·31	n/a
TOTAL STEEL	16·17	12·77	11·62	8·51

Sources: Total steel consumption from the Department of Trade and Industry inquiry, all other figures are from the Iron and Steel Statistics Bureau.

* Comparable figures for special steel are not available prior to 1976. Total steel deliveries in 1975 were 15,353 thousand tonnes.

† As defined in Euronorm 20-74.

‡ 1983 is the latest year for which estimates of consumption of special steel are available.

‖ January to September.

Companies (Inspectors)

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will appoint inspectors under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 into the affairs of Fab Fashions, Fair Fashions and Quatriz companies.

Mr. Howard: The Official Receiver is already investigating the affairs of Fab Fashions Limited and Fair Fashions Limited which are in compulsory liquidation. The hon. Member's request for investigation of Quatriz Limited will be considered but it is open to creditors to petition for its compulsory winding-up.

Grant Aid (Worsley)

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount of grant aid paid to firms in the Worsley constituency, under the old rules, during the same period of time £9,300 was offered under the rules introduced a year ago.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Steel Council

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the outcome of the Steel Council on 29-30 October.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 11 November at columns 48-49 to my hon. Friend the Member for Fulham (Mr. Stevens) and to my right hon. Friend's reply of 27 November at columns 877-78 to my hon. Friend the Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Hickmet). In order not to delay the adoption of conclusions which represented a successful outcome for the United Kingdom, I judged it important to give my agreement even though the House had not had the opportunity to debate the proposals in accordance with the Scrutiny Committee's recommendation. I reported to the House at the earliest opportunity in my reply of 11 November.

ENERGY

Coal Industry

5. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Energy what plans he has to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss employment problems in the industry.

Mr. Peter Walker: I meet the chairman of the National Coal Board regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

27. Mr. Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give figures on the increased productivity per man shift of British coal mines.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) earlier today.

32. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he next intends to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss investment in the coal industry.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the National Coal Board frequently to discuss all aspects of the coal industry, including the NCB's substantial programme of investment to reduce costs and improve productivity.

Oil and Gas Development

6. Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many annexe B oil and gasfield development approvals have been granted so far in the current year.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: So far in 1985 I have approved 18 projects.

19. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a list of the number of oil and gas wells drilled so far in the current year and in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The total number of oil and gas wells drilled so far this year, and in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

	Number
1985*	329
1984	330
1983	244
1982	245
1981	237
1980	197
1979	154
1978	167
1977	207
1976	145
1975	156

* To 30 November.

30. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the value of research and development work carried out in relation to the offshore oil and gas industry since 1979.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My Department has spent over £90 million on research and development since 1979. We do not have any figures available for the amount of money invested by the oil and gas industry.

British Gas

12. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Energy what steps will be taken to ensure that small investors will have an opportunity to purchase shares in British Gas.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The Government intend to see the widest possible ownership of British Gas shares. Details of the special opportunities which will be provided for small investors will be announced nearer the time of the sale.

26. Mr Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has had any recent discussions with trade unions involved in the gas industry concerning his privatisation proposals.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of representations from various organisations and individuals, including the trade unions involved in the gas industry.

Coal Conversion Scheme

22. Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many schemes have been approved so far in 1985 for the conversion of boilers to coal firing.

Mr. Peter Walker: In the 11 months to the end of November 1985, grants were offered for 118 schemes for converting boilers to coal firing.

Wind Energy

25. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what grants and assistance are available for the development of wind energy.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is supporting a comprehensive research and development programme aimed at exploiting the United Kingdom wind resource for electricity generation. The Department of Trade and Industry, through its support for innovation scheme, makes funds available to manufacturers for innovative research and development in this and other sectors. The European Commission offers grants both for research and development and for demonstration projects in wind energy.

7. Mr. Neale asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any plans further to assist development of wind energy for isolated communities.

Mr. David Hunt: Wind energy is a most promising source for generating electricity in particular for isolated communities in the United Kingdom and overseas. My Department's renewables programme for this year includes £6·5 million for wind energy research and development.

Gas Meters (Accuracy)

28. Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make provision for a free check on the accuracy of all domestic gas meters in advance of privatisation of British Gas.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: No. The Gas Bill provides that the existing consumer protection in respect of meter testing will continue unchanged; it would be both unjustified and impracticable to test some 16,000,000 meters before privatisation.

Opencast Coal Mining

29. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many new opencast coal mining schemes were initiated by the National Coal Board in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. David Hunt: The National Coal Board had submitted 19 planning applications for opencast coal sites in the last 12 months (since December 1984).

Nuclear Power Stations

31. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will indicate the number of nuclear power stations planned for construction over the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB has applied for consent to build a PWR station at Sizewell B. The board's plans for further stations will depend on the outcome of the inquiry into that application.

33. Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any plans to introduce amending legislation concerning the mining industry before the Christmas recess following recent consultations with the industry.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) earlier today.

34. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he next expects to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss manning levels.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the National Coal Board regularly for discussions on the coal industry.

Oil Sales

35. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the traditional and non-traditional markets, respectively, to which Her Majesty's Government respectively authorise and prohibit the sale of oil from the continental shelf of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The Government expect that oil companies exporting North sea crude will do so in the markets of our partners in the International Energy Agency and in the European Community. This expectation in no way cuts across the maintenance, to the extent possible, of any existing patterns of trade outside these regions. In practice, such patterns exist only with Finland and certain Caribbean destinations.

National Coal Board

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what has been the total expenditure of the National Coal Board or its subsidiaries upon overseas activities in 1983, 1984 and for that period of 1985 for which figures are available;

(2) what consultations he has had with the National Coal Board about the board's involvement in International Fuels Ltd., the Coal Trading Corporation and involvement in South Africa, in the British Fuel Company and in Coal Development (Queensland) Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: These questions are matters for the National Coal Board and I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

European Fast Reactor Collaboration

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he remains satisfied that the French Government are complying fully with their obligations under clause 5 of the intergovernmental memorandum of understanding on European fast reactor collaboration and that the collaboration is directed solely to the peaceful development of nuclear energy.

Mr. Goodlad: I have no doubt that all our partners in the collaboration are fully conscious of their obligations under clause 5 of the memorandum of understanding.

Capenhurst Enrichment Plant

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy what provisions exist for allowing the withdrawal of nuclear material from safeguards at the Capenhurst enrichment plant under the recently announced safeguards agreement covering that plant.

Mr. Goodlad: The Capenhurst enrichment plant has been designated for inspection by the IAEA under the terms of article 78 of the United Kingdom International Atomic Energy Agency/Euratom safeguards agreement. Article 14 of this agreement provides for the withdrawal of nuclear material from safeguards for national security reasons.

I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for Bedfordshire North (Mr. Skeet) on 9 March 1983 at column 402-3.

Coal Industry (Private Capital)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take action to encourage the introduction of private capital into the deep-mined coal industry.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government have no plans for the introduction of private capital into the deep-mined coal industry.

Power Stations (Coal Supplies)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the latest effects of the coal strike on the balance, as between road and rail, of coal supplies to the power stations.

Mr. Goodlad: I understand that rail will continue to be the dominant means for delivering coal to the Central Electricity Generating Board's power stations.

Gas Prices

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will explain without reference to mathematical formulae the basis upon which gas price increases are to be controlled or influenced following privatisation.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The price of gas to tariff customers will be strictly controlled by reference to changes in the retail price index and changes in gas costs. The maximum price (covering both standing charge and rate per therm) that can be charged will be determined by the price formula set out in the licence.

The price formula itself is in two parts:

(i) a part relating to the cost of gas purchased (Y in the formula) which provides for changes in gas costs to be directly reflected in the maximum price. At present the cost of gas accounts for about half of the price customers pay.

(ii) the remaining part of the price (RPI—X in the formula) which is limited to X per cent. below the rate of inflation. This puts a discipline on the company to achieve real reductions in the non-gas costs under its control and will ensure that customers take a share of the benefit. The value of X, the efficiency factor, will be set when the scope for improved efficiency has been assessed.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received from the Trades Union Congress concerning the proposed privatisation of British Gas.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow East (Mr. Dykes).

Nuclear Power Stations (Safety)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will describe any precautionary measures taken at other nuclear power stations following the site incident at Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 29 November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB has confirmed its continuing full compliance with its statutory duty to maintain safe working conditions at all times, and has advised me that the Hinckley Point B incident on 29 November has no implications for any of its other nuclear power stations, which do not have gas circulators of the same design.

Continental Shelf

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Energy if the Continental Shelf Jurisdiction Order 1968 has been repealed.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The Continental Shelf (Jurisdiction) Order 1968 (SI 1968/892) was revoked by the Continental Shelf (Jurisdiction) Order 1980 (SI 1980/184), which re-enacts the provisions of the 1968 order (and subsequent amendments), and also extends jurisdiction to additional designated areas.

Hinckley Point

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a list of reactors at nuclear power stations showing the number of gas circulators or blowers at each reactor and whether these have any relevant features of design and construction in common with the faulty gas circulator that led to a site incident being declared at Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 29 November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 751-752]: The following is a list of CEGB Advanced Gas-Cooled Reactors showing the number of main gas circulators in each.

Power Station	Reactor/Unit	Number of main gas circulators
Dungeness B	Reactor 21	4
	Reactor 22	4
Hartlepool	Reactor 1	8
	Reactor 2	8
Heysham I	Reactor 1	8
	Reactor 2	8
Heysham II	Reactor 7	8
	Reactor 8	8

The main gas circulators on all the above AGRs (8 in all) are different from those at Hinckley Point B.

CIVIL SERVICE

Equal Opportunities Officer

44. Mr. Janner asked the Minister for the Civil Service how many of the applicants for the post of equal opportunities officer in his Department were (a) white males, (b) white females, (c) males of Afro-Caribbean or Asian origin and (d) females of Afro-Caribbean or Asian origin.

Mr. Luce: It is not the practice to fill this post by inviting applications. A member of the personnel division is designated equal opportunities officer on the basis of overall suitability and not on sex or ethnic origin. The first postholder was female, the current holder is male.

Civil and Public Services Association

45. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met representatives of the Civil and Public Services Association; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I have met representatives of the Civil Service unions, including the CPSA, informally.

Trade Unions (Meetings)

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met Civil Service trade unions; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I have not yet had formal discussions with the Civil Service unions but I met representatives informally on 29 October.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Philippines

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the Government of the Philippines.

Mr. Eggar: The Philippines are members of the Association of South East Asian Nations and occupy an important strategic and economic position. Our policy towards them takes count of these factors. We also take opportunities, with others, to encourage and help the Philippine Government to pursue policies contributing to the stability and development of the region.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all crimes, by category, for each of the past five years and to the most recent available date in the current year, which have been committed in the Falkland Islands; what was the verdict of the court in each case; and whether the crimes in question were committed by Falkland Islanders, airport construction staff or military personnel.

Mr. Eggar: I will ask the Falkland Islands Government to provide me with statistics regarding convictions in the Falkland Islands comparable to those which are made available about convictions in the United Kingdom. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what personnel are available for the detection, prosecution and trial of offenders in the Falkland Islands; what training and qualifications they have; and whether he has any plans to strengthen their complement.

Mr. Eggar: There ae eight fully trained police officers in the Falkland Islands. There is an Attorney-General and a stipendary magistrate, both of whom are solicitors. There are also lay magistrates. There is a Supreme Court, but no resident judge. Most prosecutions are conducted by the police. If appropriate, the Attorney-General or counsel from the English Bar would prosecute. The legal assistant to the Attorney-General, who is a barrister, is available to represent accused persons, there being no lawyers in private practice in the islands. The Falkland Islands Government have no plans to increase the strength of the police or legal service.

Cyprus

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about progress on the Cyprus initiative of the Secretary General of the United Nations and on the prospects for the success of that initiative in the light of the breakdown of the Washington talks on 17 January 1985 and of the recent elections in Southern Cyprus.

Mr. Eggar: The Secretary-General of the United Nations continues to have our full support and confidence. He has pursued his initiative through talks with both sides in recent weeks. We understand he will continue this process following the elections in the Republic of Cyprus.

European Assembly

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will initiate inquiries into the reasons for the physical abuse and assaults sustained by British citizens who are members of the European Assembly in Strasbourg following the violent scenes on Wednesday 11 December; and if he will make a statement on the extent of the injuries sustained by British members of the European Assembly during the incident.

Mr. Rifkind: No. These events are a matter for the European Parliament itself.

Israel (Trade Boycott)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list all the firms and industrial organisations which were (a) consulted by his Department and (b) submitted written comments to his Department during the review in 1983 into the practice of authenticating negative certificates of origin relating to the Arab trade boycott of Israel, indicating which respondents favoured continuation of the existing system and which wished the authentication to be discontinued.

Mr. Eggar: Such exchanges with British companies and trade bodies are held on the basis that they will remain confidential.

Tristan da Cunha

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which companies supply Tristan da Cunha; and which companies have been given concessions to trade and exploit resources there.

Mr. Eggar: Tristan da Cunha has a long-standing but non-contractually binding agreement with Table Bay Marine of Capetown which acts as a buying agent of general merchandise for the island.

The concession to take crayfish from Tristan waters (the only known exploitable resource) is held by South Atlantic Islands Development Corporation Limited (SAIDC) a Bermuda registered company. The concession is operated by its subsidiary, Tristan Investments Limited of Capetown. Tristan da Cunha receives a royalty (1985 US $294,000) for this concession, which along with revenue from the sale of postage stamps makes the island financially self-sufficient. The concession runs from 1962 to 1997.

Departmental Appointments

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those bodies to which his Department makes appointments, the number of appointments in each case and the number of women appointed in each case.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 29 November 1985]: The information concerning those bodies to which my Department makes appointments is as follows:

Name of body	Number of appointments	Number of women appointed
Diplomatic wing appointments:
Royal Commonwealth Society for the Blind	3	0
British Council: Board	2	0
Great Britain—China Centre	2	0
Great Britain—East Europe Centre	2	0
Universities China Committee	1	0
University College of Wales, Aberystwyth Wilson Chair of International Politics: Advisory Board	Unfilled	—
Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission	7-10	1
School of Oriental and African Studies	2	0
Imperial College of Science and Technology	1	0
Imperial War Museum: Board of Trustees	2	0
Advisory Panel on Arms Control Control and Disarmament	32	2
The Lloyd Foundation	1	0
Academic Council of Wilton Park	22	2
Commonwealth Institute	*13	2
Commonwealth Foundation	1	0
Diplomatic Service Appeal Boards	8	0
ODA appointments:
Institute of Development Studies	22	2
Economic & Social Committee for Overseas Research	9	1
Commonwealth Scholarship Commission	15	2
Imperial College of Science & Technology (Governing Body)	1	0
Queen Elizabeth House (Governing Body)	4	0
British Post-Graduate Medical Federation	2	0
Bureau of Hygiene and Tropical Diseases Managing Committee	1	0
Imperial Cancer Research Fund (Governing Body)	1	0
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine (Board of Management)	1	0
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine (Court of Governors)	1	0
Tropical Medicine Research Board	6	0
Commonwealth Development Corporation	10	1
Crown Agents Holding & Realisation Board	8	0
Crown Agents for Oversea Governments and Administration	8	0
Royal Veterinary College (The Council)	1	0
Superior Services (India) Family Pension Fund (Transferred) Scheme	4	0
Overseas Service Pensions Scheme (Advisory Board)	2	0
Overseas Superannuation Scheme (Advisory Board)	3	0
Centre for International Briefing (Farnham Castle) (Governing Body)	3	1
United Kingdom National Commission for UNESCO	68	7
School of Oriental and African Studies (Governing Body)	1	0
United Kingdom Trade Agency	8	1

* Plus 1 vacant.

THE ARTS

Yorkshire Water Colour Society

Mr. Mason asked the Minister for the Arts if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Yorkshire Water Colour Society to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall on 17 March 1985.

British Library

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the next stage of the new British Library building at St. Pancras.

Mr. Luce: I have today authorised a start on the second stage of the building, which is estimated to cost £61 million and will be ready for occupation in 1993. Work on this stage will start in 1987, in parallel with the first stage, which will be ready in 1991.

When both stages are complete, the library's new facilities will include substantial new storage space in the modern environmental conditions which the collection requires, reading rooms for the departments of manuscripts and oriental manuscripts and printed books, and open access reading rooms for the science reference library.

Further decisions on later stages will be taken and announced in due course.

British Film Institute

Mr. Dormand asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will increase the grant to the British Film Institute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 9 December 1985, c. 620-21]: I am now able to announce further details of the arts budget for 1986-87, including the allocation for the British Film Institute.

The central Government element of the arts and libraries programme has been set at £321 million for 1986-87, an increase of nearly 18 per cent. in cash over the corresponding provision for 1985-86. Subject to parliamentary approval of the Supply Estimates, I propose the main 1986-87 allocations listed below. The greater part of the increase reflects the additional central funding for the performing arts, film and museums, following the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils. The grants to most bodies directly supported from my central Government programme will be broadly in line with the provisional forward planning figures for 1986-87 given to them last January. But it has been possible in some cases to make modest additional provision for new developments or other special needs.

As I announced to the House on 14 November 1985 at columns 700-710, the grant to the Arts Council in 1986-87 will be £135·6 million, including increased central post-abolition funding of £25 million. The grant to the British Film Institute will be £9·738 million (20 per cent. more than in 1985-86): this includes £1·3 million for post-abolition funding, and a further £0·3 million above its provisional planning figure to help with matching funding for film production and with the Institute's accommodation needs.

For the major museums and galleries affected by the abolition of the GLC and metropolitan county councils, I propose the following arrangements.

First, an order in council will be made under section 46 of the Local Government Act 1985 to establish a new trustee body with responsibility for the bulk of the museums and galleries hitherto administered by Merseyside county council. A grant-in-aid of £8·745 million will be made to the trustee body for these institutions in 1986-87.

Secondly, a grant-in-aid of £1·075 million will be made in 1986-87 to the existing trustee body responsible for the Greater Manchester Museum of Science and Industry, which has hitherto been funded by Greater Manchester county council.

Thirdly, subject to the enactment of the Museum of London Bill currently before the House, the Government's grant to that museum will be increased to £2·25 million in 1986-87, reflecting the proposal in the Bill that the Government's share of the museum's main budget will be raised from the present one-third to one-half.

Fourthly, I am allocating an additional £1¼ million to the Museums and Galleries Commission for pump-priming grants to other museums and gallery services affected by abolition.

Finally, some provision for certain affected museums is being channelled separately, as follows: for the Manchester university museum and Whitworth gallery, through the University Grants Committee; for the London historic house museums, through the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission; and the Geoffrye and Horniman museums will be maintained by the Inner London Education Authority, whose expenditure limit and grant-related expenditure assessment for 1986-87 take account of this transfer.

I will be making a separate announcement in due course following the recent consultations on arrangements for the treatment of revenue generated by the nine national museums and galleries for which I am responsible. That announcement will also cover the provision to be made in 1986-87 for those institutions' purchase grants, other net running costs, and the building and maintenance programme undertaken for them by the Property Services Agency.

Meanwhile, as regards the other institutions in the museum field for which I am responsible, the grant to Sir John Soane's museum in 1986-87 will be £250,000, including a supplementary allocation towards the improvement of its building and facilities; and, for the Museums and Galleries Commission, I am making additional provision for increased staffing and accommodation requirements and for the establishment of a new Conservation Unit to provide advice on conservation facilities and on training opportunities available throughout the country. The £½ million conservation grant fund administered by the commission, introduced two years ago, will be continued in 1986-87, as will the existing schemes of grants for Area Museum Councils and for purchases and capital development by local museums.

As in 1985-86, the grants to the Crafts Council and the National Film and Television school will in 1986-87 include modest additional provision for special regional or capital developments during the year. A token sum is allocated to the South Bank Theatre Board, which is to be wound up as soon as its responsibilities for settling the outstanding accounts for the initial construction and equipping of the National theatre building have been discharged. The voted provision for the National Heritage memorial fund and for acceptances of art objects in lieu of tax (both of which also receive corresponding sums from Department of the Environment votes) will remain at the same level as in 1985-86. The new arrangements for supplementing the acceptance in lieu provision, announced on 26 July last [Official Report, Vol. 83, Col. 777], will of course continue to apply.

In view of the sustained success of the business sponsorship incentive scheme launched in 1984, I have decided to make a further increase in its allocation, to £1¾ million next year. This should yield some £6 million or more from combined public and private sources for sponsored activities in arts bodies. I shall keep under careful review the arrangements for 1:1 matching grants for first-time sponsorship and 1:3 matching grants for additional sponsorship.

The recurrent grant to the British Library will be increased to £49·8 million in 1986-87, including an allowance towards initial expenditure on its corn stores storage project for its lending division in Boston Spa. Provision will be made on the Property Services Agency vote for continued expenditure on construction of the present stage of the Library's new St. Pancras building, and for net expenditure on the Library's existing accommodation. I am making a separate announcement about the next stage of the St. Pancras project.

The grant to the Royal Commission on historical manuscripts will be raised to £0·54 million next year, including a special allowance for computerisation of its records. The ceiling for the public lending right scheme, which was substantially increased to £2¼ million in 1985-86, will remain at that level in 1986-87.

These allocations are within the arts and libraries programme total given in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Autumn Statement. Plans for 1987-88 and 1988-89 will be summarised in the next Public Expenditure White Paper, and will be subject to annual review. Provisional planning figures for those years will be communicated to the arts bodies concerned early in the Next Year.

Details of the main allocations covered by today's announcement for 1986-87, compared with the provision originally made for 1985-86 (as amended by Supplementary Estimates where relevant), are set out in the following table.

Table of Main Allocations

£ million (cash)

	1985-86	1986-87
Arts
Arts Council	105·600	135·600
British Film Institute	8·075	9·738
National Film and Television School	1·120	1·100
Crafts Council	1·680	1·925
Government Art Collection purchases	0·133	0·135
Business sponsorship incentive scheme	1·250	1·750
South Bank Theatre Board	0·200	0·001
Heritage
National Heritage memorial fund (OAL share)	1·500	1·500
Acceptances in lieu (OAL Vote share)	1·000	1·000
Museums and Galleries
Museums and Galleries Commission:
Administration	0·380	0·596
Grants to area museum councils etc	2·726	2·781
Local museum purchase grants	1·282	1·282
Post-abolition grant scheme	—	1·250
Museum of London	1·372	2·250
Merseyside museums and galleries	—	8·743
Greater Manchester Museum of Science and Industry	—	1·075
Sir John Soane's museum	0·232	0·250
Libraries
British Library current grant	48·254	49·800
British Library capital/maintenance (PSA)	7·245	9·861
Royal Geographical Society	0·054	0·054
Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts	0·412	0·540
Public lending right scheme	2·750	2·750

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

"Going to College or University"

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will request local education authorities and university authorities to send to all new students copies of leaflet FB23, "Going to College or University", currently available from the Department of Health and Social Security.

Mr. Chris Patten: No. Copies of the leaflet are readily available to students from DHSS local offices.

Trauma (Research)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all the Medical Research Council funded projects on research into trauma; if he will give the range of such research and numbers of researchers involved, the particular disciplines of the directors, the location of each unit and the research grant available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 3 December at column 158 and to my reply of 25 November at columns 397 and 398 to questions from my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton). I will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Schools (Lunchtime Supervision)

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the ratio of supervisors to pupils and the amount to be paid per hour of supervision upon which his Department's calculation of £40 million as the cost of lunchtime supervision in a full year is based; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The figure of £40 million was arrived at after considering a range of costs and staffing levels because different staffing ratios and rates of pay may be appropriate within the new arrangements to be supported by education support grant according to local circumstances. Such local differences might arise, for example, from variations in the numbers of supervisory assistants already employed and in the qualities of the staff which need to be recruited. Thus the sum of £40 million is not based on any single staffing ratio or rate of pay, but the Government are satisfied that it will suffice to provide reliable and adequate supervision in schools in England and Wales.

Parental Involvement

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to support and encourage parental involvement in education.

Mr. Dunn: Our Education Act 1980 substantially increased parents' rights to influence and involve themselves in their children's schooling. Yet greater scope for parents to utilise their natural and beneficial interest in their children's progress will be given by the proposals in chapter 9 of "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9496) which, as announced in the Gracious Speech, will feature in a Bill to be introduced later this session.

Science Budget

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the distribution of the science budget for 1986-87.

Sir Keith Joseph: Having considered the recommendations of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils (ABRC), I have decided that the science budget for 1986-87 should, subject to approval by Parliament of the Estimates in due course, be allocated as follows:

1986-87	£ million cash
Agricultural and Food Research Council	52·7
Economic and Social Research Council	23·6
Medical Research Council	128·3
Natural Environment Research Council	70·3
Science and Engineering Research Council	315·5
British Museum (Natural History)*	17·2
Royal Society	6·4
Fellowship of Engineering	0·45
Science Policy Studies (ABRC)	0·11
	614·56

* Including expenditure of £5·4 million by the Property Services Agency on behalf of the museum.

Copies of the ABRC's recommendations on allocations from the science budget for 1986-87 have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Student Grants

Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about levels of student grants and parental contributions in 1986-87.

Sir Keith Joseph: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have agreed that, subject to Parliamentary approval, the main rates of student grant will be increased by around 2 per cent. in 1986-87. There will, in addition, be some adjustment to grant rates following the consultations on students' entitlement to certain benefits described in the White Paper on Social Security published today.

The parental contribution scale for 1986-87 will be adjusted upwards in line with earnings, as follows:

Parental contribution scale 1986-87

Residual income £	1986-87 contribution £
8,100	—
8,200	—
8,400	—
8,600	—
8,700	20
8,800	34
8,900	48
9,000	62
10,000	205
11,000	348
11,100	362
11,200	382
11,300	402
11,400	422
11,500	442
12,000	542
13,000	742
14,000	942
15,000	1,142
16,000	1,342
16,200	1,382
16,300	1,407
16,400	1,432
16,500	1,457
17,000	1,582
18,000	1,832
19,000	2,082
20,000	2,332
21,000	2,582
22,000	2,832
23,000	3,082
24,000	3,332
25,000	3,582
26,000	3,832
27,000	4,082
28,000	(maximum) 4,300

Notes:

(1) For 1986-87 the rate of contribution is assessed at £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £8,700 to £11,100; then £1 in £5 to £16,200; then £1 in £4 thereafter. In 1985-86 the rate of contribution was assessed at £1 in £7 from £8,100 to £10,300; then £1 in £5 to £15,000; then in £4 thereafter.

(2) The contribution payable may be less than the amounts shown on the scale, particularly at its top end. This will depend on the amount of the grant against which the contribution has to be set and whether any of the assessed contribution is offset by allowances for other dependent children.

(3) The maximum parental contribution of £4,000 introduced in 1985-86 has been increased in line with earnings to £4,300 in 1986-87.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Dr. Mawhinney asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any estimate of the amount of money required from the aid budget to feed one person for one day in Ethiopia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: Using the information in the report of the Ethiopian Relief and Rehabilitation Commission on 8 October 1985, which gives a food requirement of 500 grammes of grain per person per day, I estimate that it costs 12·6 pence to feed one person for one day in Ethiopia with imported food aid, including purchase, shipping and internal transport.

Dr. Mawhinney asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the number of people in Ethiopia who have died of malnutrition in the past six months.

Mr. Ralson: We cannot know how many Ethiopians have died of malnutrition in the past six months. It is clear that the suffering has been great, but the scale of the tragedy that loomed a year ago has been much reduced thanks to the resilience of the Ethiopian people and the response of the international community.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Staff

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants there are in his Department employed (a) in Northern Ireland and (b) outside Northern Ireland; and how many, in each category, were born in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: The numbers of civil servants employed in Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments are:

	Number
(a) in Northern Ireland	28,632
(b) outside Northern Ireland	144

Details of the places of birth of civil servants could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Youth Training Programme

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total funding for the youth training programme in Northern Ireland; how it is allocated to the various providers; what percentage of the total funding comes from the European Economic Community; what is the cost per training place for each provider; what is the cost of the Civil Service administration of the youth training programme; and what number of civil servants are involved in the administration.

Dr. Boyson: For the total funding of the youth training programme and its allocation to the various providers, I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 11 November 1985 at columns 97-8.

Eligible expenditure on the provision of the YTP attracts 55 per cent. assistance from the European social fund.

As more than one provider is involved in delivering each young person's programme of training, further education and work experience, the cost of a training place can not be allocated per provider. In 1984-85, 5,289 first year full-time training places were delivered for a total cost of £20·8 million; the figures for second year full-time training places were 2,000 and £7·9 million. The cost per training place was therefore £3,076 for the first year and £3,950 for second year trainees. These figures do not take account of a further 1,473 first-year full-time training places which were sponsored by the Government training centres, the costs of which were included in the GTC running costs. Ninety eight civil servants are employed full-time in the administration of YTP at an annual cost of £1·3 million. There is also additional indirect and part-time input by other civil servants which can not be readily quantified.

Construction Industry (Subcontractors)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to introduce legislation to outlaw labour-only subcontracting in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I have no such plans.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many self-employed labour-only sub-contractors were employed in the construction industry in the Province in each of the past six years.

Dr. Boyson: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

RUC (Code of Conduct)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the new code of conduct of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

TRANSPORT

Dim-dip Lighting

36. Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current status of his dim-dip vehicle lighting proposals before the European Court.

Mrs. Chalker: I understand that the Commission is preparing an application to the European Court. The point at issue is whether our national lighting regulations should exempt vehicles that meet the provisions of the lighting installation directive.

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost to public funds of defending his dim-dip lighting proposal in the European Court.

Mrs. Chalker: Such costs would be largely in the form of official time in preparing written submissions on any application made by the Commission to the European Court, and in answering questions raised by the court. No estimate can be made in advance.

Road Signs

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many road signs on the M1, M62 and A1 refer to Pennine Radio and Radio Leeds and give the wavebands on which these stations can be obtained; if he will ensure that these radio stations are mentioned on suitable new signs erected on these roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: There are no signs giving the wavelengths of Pennine Radio or Radio Leeds on the M1, M62 and A1. The only radio station signs on these roads in South or West Yorkshire refer to Radio Hallam and Radio Sheffield. These signs were erected as part of an experiment to assess whether such signs should be introduced nationally. The results showed an increase in the number of motorists listening to the stations but this still represented only a small proportion of the total.

As yet I do not consider public expenditure would be justified on a national network of local radio station signs on motorways and other major roads, but the broadcasting authorities and the RAC are considering submitting proposals for a national scheme, including suitable sign locations to ensure equal treatment for the BBC and IBA stations. We await their proposals.

M25 (Fog)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the points and stretches on the M25 that are statistically prone to a greater than average frequency or intensity of fog.

Mrs. Chalker: We commissioned the Meteorological Office to undertake a study of fog susceptibility on the M25. Their report identified the following areas as prone to fog (ie visibility less than 1,000 metres):

Site	Approximate average annual number of days with fog
River Mole crossing	35
River Roding crossing	35
River Chess crossing	35
River Wey crossing	33
River Misbourne crossing	33
Titsey wood	33
Junction 22 area	33
River Lea crossing	31
River Colne crossing	30
Westerham wood	28
Limpsfield area	28
River Darent crossing	28
Brasted	28
Junction 10 area	27
3km east of junction 6	27
Junction 12 (Thorpe)	27
2km west of junction 9 (wooded cutting near Dorincourt)	26
Junction 5 area	26
Between junctions 13 and 14	26
'The Paddocks' area	26
Junction 6 area (including slip roads)	26
Junction 23 area	25
Junction 7 area	24
Junction 27 area	23
Cutting at Downside	22
Junction 17 area	22
Between junctions 29 and 30	20
Junction 25 area	20
Between junctions 30 and 31	18
Junction 28 slip roads	18

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Roads

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to modify the public inquiry procedure for major roads and motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Transport and the Environment are reviewing all preconstruction procedures for national road schemes in the light of the Civil Engineering EDC's report "A Fairer and Faster Route to Major Road Construction". They expect to publish their response to the report early next year.

Rail Electrification (Dorset)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce his decision on British Rail's proposals for railway electrification in Dorset; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I hope to be in a position to reach a decision on the investment that BR has submitted for electrifying the line between Bournemouth and Weymouth before the House rises for the Christmas recess.

M25-M1 Interchange

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost to date for the construction of the M25-M1 interchange, the budgeted cost for completion, and the likely cost for this completion.

Mrs. Chalker: The costs for the M25-M1 interchange cannot readily be separated from the total costs for contract 2 of the Micklefield Green to South Mimms section of M25, which also includes lengths of the main M25 carriageway on both sides of the interchange and a junction with A405 to the east. The estimated main works cost for contract 2 was given as £24·7 million at November 1982 prices in "Policy for Roads in England: 1983". The final main works cost will depend on the rate of inflation throughout the contract and the determination of any contractual claims. The estimate at current prices is approximately £21 million, of which £15·7 million has already been spent.

Rail Closures

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each stretch of railway from which British Rail withdrew passenger services but did not submit the closure to the full procedures laid down in section 56 of the Transport Act 1962 on the grounds that the alternative was of the nature of a service improvement, in each of the last three years; and if he will also list any stretches of railway in respect of which British Rail has decided to adopt this procedure, but not yet implemented it.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Department does not have the information requested. In the first instance it is for the Railways Board to satisfy itself whether the statutory closure procedures apply to its plans for any particular stretch of line or station. It is always open to those affected by such plans to challenge them.

A40 (Flyover)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has received from the London Borough of Hillingdon for the construction of a temporary flyover at the Swalkeleys road junction on the A40(T); and if he will indicate the level of resources he will make available for this project.

Mrs. Chalker: Possibilities for alleviating congestion at this junction pending decisions on our proposed grade-separation scheme are still being explored. Hillingdon borough council has not as yet put any specific proposals to me.

Road Accidents

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have been reported on British roads in each of the last three years involving vehicles carrying hazardous substances.

Mrs. Chalker: There is no central record of all road accidents involving hazardous substances.

Road Haulage (Hazardous Substances)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the present regulations governing the carriage of hazardous substances by road in the United Kingdom; if he is satisfied that these regulations are adequate; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The present regulations governing the carriage of hazardous substances by road are as follows:

Non-Radioactive

Gas Cylinders (Conveyance) Regulations, 1931, 1947, 1959
Petroleum Spirit (Conveyance by Road) Regulations 1957, 1958, 1966
Carbon Disulphide (Conveyance by Road) Regulations 1958, 1962
Corrosive Substances (Conveyance by Road) Regulations 1971
Inflammable Liquids (Conveyance by Road) Regulations 1971
Inflammable Substances (Conveyance by Road) (Labelling) Regulations 1971
Organic Peroxides (Conveyance by Road) Regulations 1973
Petroleum (Regulation) Acts 1928 and 1936 (Repeals and Modifications) Regulations 1974
Petroleum (Consolidation) Act 1928 (Enforcement) Regulations 1979
Petroleum (Consolidation) Act 1928 (Conveyance by Road Regulations Exemptions) Regulations 1980
Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981
Classification, Packaging and Labelling of Dangerous Substances Regulations 1984

New regulations to control the carriage by road of dangerous substances in packages are to be made next year. These will replace all the above regulations apart from the final two.

Radioactive

The Radioactive Substances (Road Transport Workers) (Great Britain) Regulations 1970 SI 1970 No. 1827
The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Great Britain) Regulations 1974 SI 1974 No. 1735
The Radioactive Substances (Road Transport Workers) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1975 SI 1975 No. 1522
The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1983 SI 1983 No. 344
The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1985 SI 1985 No. 1729.

On 1 January 1986 the first and third of these regulations will be replaced by the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 SI 1985 No. 1333 for which the Health and Safety Executive are responsible.

New regulations to control the carriage by road of explosives will also by made next year to replace a number of orders made under the Explosives Act 1875.

I believe that the new regulations and those which will remain in force will provide a comprehensive framework for the safe carriage of hazardous substances by road.

Motorways (Traffic Forecasts)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has concerning the average number of vehicles per day by which forecast capacity for the year 2000 will exceed the actual capacity at present standards for each of the motorways in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: The Department is considering predictions from the 1984 national road traffic forecast in relation to the latest information from the national traffic census as part of its current review of motorway capacity. It will then be necessary to examine in more detail those sections of the network identified as likely to come under greatest traffic pressure. Motorways in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are the concern of my right hon. Friends.

Traffic Control Systems

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he proposes to exercise his reserve powers under paragraph 10 of Schedule 5 to the Local Government Act 1985 in respect of traffic control systems.

Mr. Ridley: Yes. I propose to accede to the London co-ordinating committee's request to exercise my reserve powers to take over the traffic control system in London, employing the London Residuary Body as my agent from 1 April 1986. Officials of my Department have written to the London boroughs with details of my proposals for managing the system and I am arranging for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House. The appropriate specialist GLC staff will be transferred to the Residuary Body by order.

In Merseyside, the co-ordinating committee was unable to agree satisfactory joint arrangements and I therefore intend to exercise my reserve powers to take over the traffic control system in that area. As in London, I propose to ask the Residuary Body to act as my agent with appropriate transfer of MCC staff.

I expect the boroughs and districts in both areas to develop proposals for joint arrangements in the longer term.

Road Safety

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Transport how he proposes to alleviate the problem of blind spots on the nearside of lorries; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I am grateful for the opportunity to explain our proposals. The problem is well known and has led to accidents resulting in serious and fatal injuries to other road users, particularly cyclists, who have been alongside the lorry outside the driver's view. Following a recent amendment to the European Community directive on mirrors my Department is circulating draft regulations which would require additional near side mirrors giving a downward, as well as improved rearward, view alongside the vehicle, to be fitted to new lorries from 1 October 1988. Meanwhile I hope operators will take advantage of the amending Directive and consider fitting the additional mirrors to their present vehicles or to any new ones which they buy.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of state for Transport when he will announce his proposals for the levy on London's ratepayers in support of his grants to London Regional Transport for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: Section 13 of the London Regional Transport Act 1984 empowers me to make a levy on London ratepayers to recover up to two-thirds of the cost of my total grants to London Regional Transport. I have today laid before Parliament a draft levy order, which is subject to affirmative resolution. This provides for a levy in 1986-87 of 9·79 pence in the pound which is estimated to raise £193·6 million. This is equivalent to 65·6 per cent. of my estimated expenditure on grants to LRT in 1986-87 of £295 million, the balance of £101·4 million being found from the Exchequer.

By comparison with 1985-86 these proposals represent a reduction in grant of £28 million and a reduction in the call on ratepayers of £18·4 million. The burden on the ratepayers falls by slightly more than a penny in the pound, while the proportion of expenditure they fund has been held constant.

My proposals reflect London Regional Transport's major achievements to cut costs while providing more efficient and responsive pubic transport services in the capital. My proposals sustain an increased programme of investment, directed mainly at cost-saving projects and modernisation of the system, and provide £5 million for the funding by LRT of Dial-a-Ride services for the disabled.

Further details of LRT's proposals for 1986-87 are given in its annual business plan which I understand is being published today. Copies will be made available to hon. Members.

Air Agreements

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the bilateral liberalised air agreements he has made in 1985 and the agreements he hopes to make in 1986.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to the reply, 13 December 1985]: In 1985 we have secured new liberal agreements with Belgium, Luxembourg and Switzerland, and have made our agreement with the Netherlands even more liberal. We have also been able to note the growth in air traffic that has followed our liberal agreements in 1984 with the Netherlands and the Federal Republic of Germany.

In 1986 during the EC Presidency of the Netherlands and the United Kingdom we will be making a major effort to achieve a truly liberal EC aviation policy. Bilaterally, we shall be continuing our discussions with Finlnd, the Scandinavian countries and Spain, and we already hope to open discussions with Austria and the Irish Republic.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give separately for the six metropolitan county councils and for the Greater London council, the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985, listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mrs. Chalker: About 46 staff in the Department of Transport are concerned with abolition at an annual cost of about £1·2 million. Of these 16 are directly concerned with metropolitan counties and 13 with the Greater London council; the remaining 17 are employed on general policy work in headquarter divisions. Following is the breakdown of staff by grade.

Grade	Estimated full-time equivalents
Grade 3	0·7
Grade 4	0·7
Grade 5	2·8
Grade 6	0·6
Principal	7·3
Senior executive officer	1·5
Higher executive officer	5·8
Administrative trainee	0·7
Executive officer	3·0
Clerical officer	3·7
Clerical assistant	0·6
PPTO	4·0
PTO I	4·1
PTO II	2·2
Statistician	2·8
Assistant statistician	0·5
Senior personal secretary	0·8
Personal secretary	3·8
TOTAL	45·8

NATIONAL FINANCE

Home Civil Servants

46. Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total number of home civil servants; and how many of these have their place of work outside the inner London area.

Mr. MacGregor: At 1 April 1985, there were 592,400 home civil servants, both industrial and non-industrial. Of these, 515,800 work outside the inner London pay area.

Assets (Disposals)

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will estimate in respect of the most recent year practicable (a) the number of disposals in that year of assets acquired prior to 6 April 1965, other than quoted securities, subject to capital gains tax, or in the case of companies' capital gains, to corporation tax, (b) the number of valuations as at 6 April 1965 carried out in the year in respect of such assets and (c) the cost to the Inland Revenue and taxpayers, respectively, of those valuations.

Mr. Moore: I regret that information is not available on which to base satisfactory estimates.

Budget Council

Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community Budget Council.

Mr. Brooke: The Budget Council met in Strasbourg on Wednesday/Thursday of last week. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council and the representatives of the European Parliament failed to reach agreement on the Community budget for 1986. The Council decided nevertheless by qualified majority to propose a further 242 mecu (some £150 million at the budget exchange rate of 1·61 ecu to the pound) of payment appropriations for non-obligatory expenditure, on top of the provision proposed in the Council's revised draft budget, provided that agreement could be reached in the Parliament's plenary on this figure. I voted against this decision on the grounds that the figures in the Council's revised draft budget were already too high and represented a threat to budget discipline.

The Parliament's plenary voted on Thursday to increase the Council's revised draft budget figures by the larger sum of some 570 mecu in payment appropriations (about £355 million). This figure rises to some 630 mecu (about £390 million) after including the consequential increase in transitional refunds for Spain and Portugal. The Parliament also voted to increase the provision for commitment appropriations by some 410 mecu (about £255 million).

The President of the Parliament is expected to decide shortly whether to sign the budget as voted by the Parliament.

Crown Property

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the hereditaments owned by the Crown but occupied by private sector organisations on behalf of the Crown for public purposes to which contributions in lieu of rates are payable by the Treasury in accordance with sections 37 and 38 of the General Rate Act 1967 or under parallel provisions of the Scottish Valuation Acts.

Mr. MacGregor: Those contributions in lieu of rates made centrally by Her Majesty's Treasury are on property deemed to be occupied by the Crown for public purposes. Estate holding departments are responsible for any arrangements reached with private sector organisations acting on their behalf and where the private sector occupation is for that public purpose the rating position remains unchanged.

No comprehensive list of such occupations is kept by Her Majesty's Treasury and I regret that this information cannot be collated without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Fatchett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give separately for the six metropolitan county councils and for the Greater London council the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985, listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mr. MacGregor: The number of staff in my Department who have been working during 1985 on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985 is as follows:

Grade	Estimated full-time equivalents
Grade 3	0·1
Grade 5	0·2
Grade 6	0·1
Principal	0·6
Higher Executive Officer	0·1

It is not possible separately to identify work on the Greater London council and the metropolitan councils.

The cost, including accommodation, of employing these staff for a whole year would be approximately £40,000 (1985 prices).

Construction Industry (Subcontractors)

Mr. Parry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many current valid 714 tax certificates are held at the latest available date according to Inland Revenue records;

(2) if he will call for a public inquiry into the operation of 714 tax certificates;

(3) if he is satisfied with the present system of the issue of 714 tax certificates; and if he will make a statement;

(4) how many prosecutions have been made for fraud in cases involving 714 tax exemption vouchers in England and Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. Moore: There are 492,880 valid 714 certificates currently in issue.

I have no plans to call for a public inquiry into the operation of the scheme.

The 714 tax certificates are an integral part of the construction industry tax deduction scheme. Significant improvements have been made to the system of issue of certificates and I am satisfied with the present arrangements.

Since April 1977, when the present scheme came into operation, the Inland Revenue has prosecuted 862 cases in England and Wales involving subcontractor exemption certificate frauds and obtained 817 convictions. In the same period a further 119 convictions were obtained by the police for the United Kingdom as a whole. It is not possible to say how many of those 119 police convictions relate to England and Wales.

Independent Schools

Mr. Hancock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated loss of revenue arising from the charitable status of independent schools.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 770]: I regret that the information is not available.

Income Tax

Mr. Silvester asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1)what would be the cost of introducing an income tax rate of 15 per cent. to apply to half the present 30 per cent. tax rate band, leaving other tax rates undisturbed;

(2) what changes would be necessary to higher rate bands to ensure that no tax benefit accrues to higher rate taxpayers if a lower rate band is introduced at 15 per cent. to apply to half the present 30 per cent. tax-rate band.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his replies, 6 December 1985, c. 356]: The direct revenue cost of introducing an income tax rate of 15 per cent. to apply to the first £8,100 of taxable income would be about £14·4 billion in a full year at 1985-86 income levels.

It is not possible to alter the higher rate structure to withdraw completely the benefit of the lower rate band from all existing higher rate taxpayers without also reducing the benefit which the band would give to those currently liable at the basic rate. By way of illustration, leaving the present higher rate structure as it stands but charging tax at 45 per cent. on taxable income between £8,100 and £16,200 would withdraw the whole of the benefit of the lower rate band from higher rate taxpayers. This structure would, however, mean that taxable income between £16,200 and £19,200 would be charged at a lower rate (40 per cent.) than the taxable income between £8,100 and £16,200. The net cost of this rate structure (including the lower rate band of £8,100 at 15 per cent.) would be about £11·9 billion.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many of the new jobs since 1983 are part-time; and how many are temporary.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information about job gains and job losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

Between June 1983 and June 1985, the latest date for which estimates are available, the number of part-time female employees in employment in Great Britain increased by 87,900; corresponding figures for part-time males are not available. The latest available figures subdividing self-employment between full and part-time show an increase between June 1983 and June 1984 of nearly 80,000 part-timers. Temporary jobs included in the estimates of employed labour force are not separately identified but estimates from the labour force surveys suggest an increase of 43,000 between spring 1983 and spring 1984 in the number of persons in employment doing seasonal, temporary or casual work.

Special Employment and Training Programmes

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what is the number of persons in the London borough of Newham on special employment and training programmes analysed by programmes.

Mr. Alan Clark: Some 3,800 people were covered by the employment and training measures in the London borough of Newham at the end of November. Because of the various bases on which local information is collated, an unknown proportion will be in areas outside Newham. The numbers in respect of each scheme are as follows:

	Number
Community Industry	120
Community Programme	2,269
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	610
Job Release Schemes	140
Young Workers Scheme	55
Youth Training Scheme	658

Community Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General (1) how many additional community programme places became available in November;

(2) how many additional community programme places became available in September.

Mr. Alan Clark: 8,744 in September and 7,057 in November.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General how many people on the community programme receive financial support for their participation in the new community programme training places.

Mr. Trippier: Community programme participants receiving off-the-job training under the MSC's adult training programme are not paid a training allowance for attending courses though out of pocket expenses (such as travel and meals) are met. The training costs are paid direct to providers.

In the seven-month period ending in October some 7,000 community programme participants had benefited from this training. The number of those who had claimed expenses is not yet known.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General how many officers were employed by the Health and Safety Executive in the construction industry in England and Wales in each of the past six years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The numbers of health and safety inspectors allocated to inspection work in the construction industry in England and Wales on 1 January each year were:

	Number
1980	76
1981	77
1982	79
1983	78
1984	79
1985	76

Inspectors in Her Majesty's factory inspectorate's construction national industry group and in other specialist branches of the Health and Safety Executive are also engaged in advisory and policy work related to the construction industry.

Construction Industry (Subcontractors)

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General how many self-employed labour-only subcontractors were employed in the construction industry in England and Wales in each of the past six years.

Mr. Alan Clark: This information is not available from the Department's statistics.

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to introduce legislation to outlaw labour-only subcontracting in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There is no intention to introduce such legislation.

Construction Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General (1) how many workers employed in the construction industry have been killed in accidents in England and Wales in each of the past six years;

(2) how many workers have been injured (a) seriously and (b) slightly in the construction industry in England and Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The available information for the period 1979 to 1984 (provisional) is given in the table:

Reported injuries to workers in the construction industry, 1979-84 England and Wales*

Type of Injury	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	*1984
Fatal
to employees	103	118	84	82	104	88
to self employed†	17	29	6	14	18	15
Major‡
to employees	‖	‖	1,446	1,666	1,847	1,973
to self-employed	‖	‖	27	47	57	68
Total notified to¶ HSE enforcing authorities as leading to over three day absences from work (injuries to employees only)	‖	‖	37,507	33,540	‖	‖

* Provisional.

† Before 1981, fatalities to the self-employed were reported on a voluntary basis only. They are therefore not strictly comparable with figures for 1981-84 which are based on reports resulting from a specific requirement under the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulation 1980 (NADOR).

‡ As defined in NADOR and reported to relevant enforcing authorities. Information before 1981 is therefore not available.

‖ Not available.

¶ Those giving rise to claims for industrial injury benefit. Arrangements for industrial injury benefit changed in April 1983. From that date, only a proportion of such injuries give rise to benefit claims so that total figures are not available. Comparable figures prior to 1981 are not available for England and Wales.

Barnsley

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General (1) how many persons were employed in the Barnsley travel-to-work area in each of the last five years in the coal mining industry;

(2) how many persons were employed in the Barnsley travel-to-work area in the glass manufacturing industry in each of the last five years;

(3) how many persons were employed in the Barnsley travel-to-work area in manufacturing industries, excluding glass manufacture, in each of the last five years.

Mr. Alan Clark: Comprehensive employment statistics for travel-to-work areas are not available except for dates when censuses of employment are taken. In the six years from 1978 to 1984, these censuses have been taken triennially. The available information for the years 1978 to 1981 is given in the table. More up-to-date employment figures for travel-to-work areas will become available following the publication of the 1984 census of employment in the spring of 1986.

Information for the glass manufacturing industry alone cannot be given without directly disclosing confidential information relating to individual undertakings. The table therefore gives figures for a broader group of industries comprising the manufacture of glass, bricks, fireclay and refractory goods, pottery, cement abrasives and other building materials.

Employees in employment in the Barnsley travel-to-work area

Industry and Order or Minimum List Heading (MLH) of the Standard Industrial Classification 1968	(thousands) June 1978	September 1981
Coal mining (MLH 101)	17·7	16·3
Bricks, pottery, glass, etc. (Order XVI)	3·3	2·3
Manufacturing industries (Orders III-XIX) excluding Order XVI	18·7	15·1

As results of the 1978 census are not available for the new travel-to-work areas announced last year, figures are given for the travel-to-work areas as defined before last year's review.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General whether he expects the Manpower Services Commission to meet its commitment of a place on a youth training scheme for everyone who wants one by Christmas.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have undertaken to offer a place on the youth training scheme by Christmas to all minimum age school leavers who remain unemployed. I am confident this undertaking will be effectively met once again, as it had been in the previous two years.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement about the funding position of information technology centres under the two-year youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: Following a wide ranging review of the information technology centre (ITeC) programme, agreement has now been reached on the funding arrangements that will apply to ITeCs from 1 April 1986.

These arrangements are designed to give ITeCs a much sounder basis of operation, by reducing their costs and increasing their range of activities. The funding package will enable ITeCs to play a full part in the new two-year YTS and to develop their role in the training of adults.

ITeCs have achieved a great deal in the last four years and we are determined to build on this foundation. The Government have made a real investment in ITeCs. I am looking to industry and local areas to back this with their own support.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list the current, past and projected expenditure on the youth training scheme for 1984 to 1989, broken down according to trainee maintenance, training costs, and central administration.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the form requested. Expenditure on the youth training scheme in 1984-85 and the estimate for 1985-86 can be categorised as in the following table:

	Allowance costs*	Other grants to managing agents and sponsors†	Other YTS costs (including central administration)‡	Total
1984-85 (actual)	384·0	362·6	80·4	827·0
1985-86 (estimate)	411·6	350·2	72·1	833·9

Notes:

* Includes the trainee's allowance and the cost of excess travel and lodgings.

† Includes managing agents' fees, the non-allowance element of the block grant and vacated place payments in mode A; all non-allowance costs in mode B1; and managing agents' fees and grants in mode B2.

‡ Includes the costs of YTS administration, development of YTS training techniques and residual expenditure on youth opportunities programme, unified vocational preparation and apprentice support.

The Manpower Services Commission's corporate plan 1985-89 shows planned expenditure on the scheme of £855 million and £860 million in 1986-87 and 1987-88. Additional sums of £125 million and £300 million will be made available in these years to expand the scheme from one to two years. It is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown of these figures.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list for each area manpower board area the available number of mode A, mode B and mode B2 places for the years 1984, 1985 and 1986, giving the figures for premium and non-premium places where appropriate.

Mr. Trippier: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

"Burdens on Business"

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the time per employer spent on paperwork for compliance with the regulations covered in the "Burdens on Business" White Paper; and if he will estimate the past, present and future monetary costs to the small firm for this compliance.

Mr. Trippier: The information is not available in the form requested. The findings of the "Burdens on Business" scrutiny included evaluations by businesses of the time and costs involved in complying with various Government regulations. As proposed in "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571), the Government are setting in hand new arrangements to assess the costs to business of compliance with new regulatory proposals.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list the available evidence that he referred to in his written answer on 10 December; and if he will place the material referred to in the Library.

Mr. Trippier: "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571) refers to the evidence collected in a survey of 200 businesses by Research Associates as part of the "Burdens on Business" report which was published in March. The survey shows that 52 of the firms questioned reported that they had lost or not taken on an average of 6.5 employees each year over the last five years due to the inhibiting or costly effect of regulations. Copies of both Cmnd. 9571 and "Burdens on Business" were placed in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the total number of jobs lost as a result of the burden of regulations on small firms; and if he will list the present number of small firms in the economy and the total number of persons employed by these firms.

Mr. Trippier: The White Paper "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571) pointed out that it is not possible to prove a direct causal relationship between deregulation and job creation or conversely between regulations and jobs lost. Hence, no reliable estimate can be provided though the available evidence suggests that there is a link between deregulation and jobs through stimulating economic activity.

There are a number of difficulties (such as the definition of a small business) in the way of giving an accurate count of the number of small businesses, but on the basis of VAT registrations there would seem to be over 1·5 million small businesses in the economy. While accurate information on employment in small firms is not available, these firms probably provide employment for over one quarter of the employed labour force.

The Department is investigating possible methods of improving the quality of information on the level of employment in small firms without increasing the burdens on small businesses.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the costs for the formation and administration of the deregulation units resulting from the "Burdens on Business" White Paper proposals; and if he will list the costs for each unit.

Mr. Trippier: The enterprise and deregulation unit established to co-ordinate follow-up to "Lifting the Burden" across Government generally has a total staff of 12. In addition, a number of Departments have established their own internal units with, on average, one full-time official engaged on deregulation. The cost of these arrangements is small compared with the prospective benefits of reducing the burden on regulations.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list the agencies created for industrial development and the agencies created for reducing regulations on small firms.

Mr. Trippier: My Department does not have records of all agencies created to encourage industrial development. However, local enterprise agencies fall into this category, and according to my Department's records there are currently 310 agencies in operation. A list of these has been placed in the Library.

One of the major tasks of the regional enterprise units (REUs) that have recently been established by my Department is to help the work of the enterprise and deregulation unit in promoting business enterprise by identifying burdens on small firms. A list of the REUs has also been placed in the Library.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the average waiting period between applying for funding from the enterprise allowance scheme and receiving the grant.

Mr. Trippier: It normally takes from two to four weeks from the date an application is made to the date it is approved. The allowance is payable as soon as the business starts, which may be immediately upon approval of the application or up to six weeks later, the choice being left to the individual concerned. The first payment is made two weeks after the business has started.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General for how long individuals can receive grants from the enterprise allowance scheme; and if he will give his estimate of the percentage of businesses still operating one year after the grants have stopped.

Mr. Trippier: The enterprise allowance is payable for a maximum period of 52 weeks. No evidence is available on the percentage of businesses still operating one year after the grant has stopped, but surveys of participants on the pilot schemes show that 77 per cent. of those taking advantage of the full year's allowance were still trading six months later and 61 per cent. two years later.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list the number of persons joining the enterprise allowance scheme and the percentages of women and minorities participating in the scheme, broken down by year.

Mr. Trippier: The number of persons joining the enterprise allowance scheme with the percentage of women participants are as follows. No information on the percentage of minorities has been collected.

	Number of participants joining	Percentage of women
Pilot scheme January 1982—July 1983	3,331	10
National scheme
August 1983—March 1984	27,629	14·6
April 1984—March 1985	46,037	20·4
April 1985—November 1985	40,302	23·4

SCOTLAND

Unemployment (Glasgow)

Mr. White asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the measures taken to reduce unemployment in the Glasgow travel-to-work area during the last year.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question of 20 March.

The Government's full range of special employment measures continues to be available to people in the Glasgow travel-to-work area. During the last year these have comprised and still comprise:

Economic Measures
Regional development grant at the maximum level available;
Selective financial assistance under the Industrial Development Act 1982;
Scottish Development Agency financial assistance (eg to Glasgow eastern area renewal project);
Local enterprise grants for urban projects (the LEG-UP scheme);
Financial assistance under the Housing Acts.

Special Employment Measures
Young workers scheme;
Community industry;
Community programme;
Job release scheme;
Job splitting scheme;
Enterprise allowance scheme;
Voluntary projects programme;
Geographical mobility schemes;
Services for seriously disabled.

Joint Finance Projects

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the projects, the total annual costs and the percentage split between health boards and local authorities, health board area by health board area, for all current capital and revenue for joint finance projects.

Mr. John MacKay: Information held centrally relates only to projects approved before 1 April 1985. The annual costs and the proportionate share met by health boards and other agencies, including local authorities, may vary, or be subject to renegotiation, during the lifetime of the project. I shall write to the hon. Member listing projects, on this limited basis, and shall place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Support Finance

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the anticipated total spending in Scotland for the financial year 1985-86 on support finance; and what the breakdown of expenditure is expected to be between new start projects in 1985-86 and continuing expenditure on projects begun before 1 April 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 11 December at column 696.

Joint Plans

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if any health boards or local authorities have requested an extension to the 31 March 1986 deadline set for the preparation of the first round of joint plans.

Mr. John MacKay: No such request has been made. Joint plans are intended to be for the guidance of the health boards and local authorities concerned. They do not have to submitted formally to my right hon. Friend; nor do they require his approval, although he has indicated that it would be helpful if copies were sent to him.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the areas in which the health boards and local authorities have confirmed to his Department their intention to prepare the joint plans requested on 24 April in the Scottish Office circular entitled "Community Care; Joint Planning and Support Finance".

Mr. John MacKay: All health boards, in collaboration with local authorities through joint liaison committees, have been asked to prepare joint plans by 31 March 1986. They are not required to confirm their intentions in this regard.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he intends to take in respect of authorities which do not prepare joint plans by 31 March 1986, either (a) to encourage speedy remedial action, or (b) to penalise them for their failure to respond.

Mr. John MacKay: Any need for further guidance or other measures to encourage advances in joint planning will be considered after 31 March 1986 in the light of progress made in the preceding year.

Joint Liaison Committees

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the mechanisms which joint liaison committees have adopted for contact with, and for seeking representation from, the voluntary sector.

Mr. John MacKay: This is entirely a matter for the decision of individual joint liaison committees, which are not obliged to inform the Department of the arrangements made. Health boards and local authorities have, however, been advised that voluntary organisations should be invited to take part in the deliberations of joint liaison committees whenever relevant matters are on the agenda.

Agricultural Colleges

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the market research survey on services provided by the Scottish agricultural colleges; what plans he has to publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Council of Scottish Agricultural Colleges (COSAC) has commissioned a market research survey to assess the options for charging for advisory services provided by the Scottish agricultural colleges. The report of the study team is expected to be presented to COSAC later this month. There are no plans to publish the survey findings.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the Inbucon management survey of the three Scottish agricultural colleges; what arrangements he has made for it to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Council of the Scottish Agricultural Colleges has commissioned a study by management consultants to advise on the future management structure and administrative arrangements for a new company which would have overall responsibility for the management of all the services currently provided by the existing Scottish agricultural colleges.

The findings of the study team, which are expected early in the new year, will not be published.

As indicated in the consultation paper on the agricultural advisory services in Scotland, the Secretary of State supports this and other initiatives which the management of the Scottish agricultural colleges has taken in pursuit of a more economic and effective service.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the financial allocations for each of the Scottish agricultural colleges for 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88, in each case breaking down the amount into allocations for advisory, research and development and educational work; and if he will give the projections of staff able to be employed in each college in each year financed by these allocations.

Mr. John MacKay: The financial allocation to each of the three Scottish agricultural colleges for 1985-86 is as follows:

£000's

College		Advisory	R & D	Education	Total
East	Maintenance	2,245	2,154	771	5,170
	Capital	136	131	47	314
North	Maintenance	2,567	2,251	1,004	5,822
	Capital	144	126	56	326
West	Maintenance	2,399	2,444	2,203	7,046
	Capital	227	231	208	666

Financial allocations to each college for 1986-87 and 1987-88 have not yet been determined.

The numbers of staff employed by each college at 1 September 1985 were as follows:

	Number
East	354
North	427
West	500

Given the integration of the Colleges' advisory, research and development and education functions with staff employed on more than one activity it is not possible to provide a breakdown of staff numbers by function.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the full staff levels and complements for each of the departments in each of the Scottish agricultural colleges for 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 and projections for 1986-87.

Mr. John MacKay: I am arranging to send to the hon. Member the information requested for the years 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86. Copies will be placed in the Library of both Houses.

I regret that it is not possible to provide projected figures for 1986-87.

Strip Searches

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reasons and in what circumstances male and female prisoners are strip-searched in Her Majesty's prisons in Scotland; and what contribution such searches make to prison security.

Mr. John MacKay: Strip searches of male and female prisoners in penal establishments in Scotland are carried out for security reasons to prevent prisoners having concealed weapons or contraband substances — for example, drugs. The circumstances in which strip searches are carried out are (a) as part of normal admission and discharge procedures; (b) when a prisoner is being transferred to a segregation unit; (c) during routine cell searches and special cell searches where there is reason to believe that contraband or weapons are being concealed; (d) following "open" visits; (e) on leaving prison to attend a court hearing.

Such searches are crucial to the maintenance of prison security.

Road Works (A92)

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown of expenditure on road improvements on the A92 between the Bridge of Don and the Gordon/Banff Buchan district boundary during the period from 1975 to the latest available date.

Mr. Ancram: Expenditure on road improvements on the A92/A952 trunk road between the places specified, during the period 1975 to November 1985, is as follows:

(all figures at cash outturn prices)

	£
Completed schemes
Parkway Roundabout	96,000
Mill of Waterton	628,000
Fountainbleau	40,000
Stacking lane at Rashierieve	39,000
Pitburg Railway Bridge	56,000
Total	859,000
Preliminary expenditure on future schemes
North Deeside Roundabout	32,000
Murcar to Balmedie	93,000
Ellon Bypass	50,000
Tipperty	18,000
Total	193,000
Grand Total	1,052,000

Construction Industry (Subcontractors)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to introduce legislation to outlaw labour-only subcontracting in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce such legislation and is satisfied that the existing legislation as it affects labour-only subcontracting is operating successfully in Scotland.

Bypasses

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the current programme of trunk road bypasses under construction, at tender stage and at each other stage of planning; and how this compares with the lists, including a comparison of priorities, for the past five years.

Mr. Ancram: There are no trunk road bypasses currently at tender stage. Bypasses under construction or in preparation are as follows:

	Bypasses
	Under construction
A1	Musselburgh and Tranent bypass
A75	Gatehouse of Fleet bypass
A75	Creetown bypass
A9	Alness bypass
A84	Forfar bypass
	In preparation
A1	Tower to Dunglass (bypassing Cockburnspath)
A68	Newtown St. Boswells bypass
A68	Dalkeith bypass
A7	Dalkeith bypass
A7	Middleton bypass
A75	Annan bypass
A75	Ringford bypass
A75	Castle Douglas bypass
A75	Carrutherstown (bypass) to Hetland
A75	Dumfries bypass
A75	Glenluce bypass
A76	New Cumnock bypass
A76	Cumnock and Auchinleck bypass
A76	Mauchline bypass
A76	Kirkconnel-Sanquhar bypass
A77	Maybole bypass
A78	Ardrossan-Saltcoats bypass
M80	Stepps bypass
A82	Lass bypass
A83	Inveraray bypass
A87	Dornie Bridge (bypassing Dornie)
A9	Dunbeath diversion
A9	Dunblane bypass
A91	Auchtermuchty bypass
A92	Ellon bypass
A96	Forres bypass
A96	Auldearn bypass
A96	Inverurie bypass

In addition, feasibility studies are being undertaken for a number of other locations. Information in the form requested is not readily available for the past five years, but further information about the trunk road programme in recent years, together with an indication of priorities, is contained in "Policy for Scottish Roads: 1984" and "Roads in Scotland: 1980", copies of which are in the Library. In the period from 1 April 1980 to date, 20 trunk road bypasses have been opened to traffic, so the momentum of progress is being maintained.

Tobacco Industry (Grants and Loans)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number and total value of the grants and loans made by his Department in each of the last 10 years for businesses involved in the manufacture, processing, packaging or distribution of tobacco products, including cigarettes.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There have been three offers of regional selective assistance over the past 10 years to companies in Scotland classified to the tobacco industry in the standard industrial classification. Details of grants offered in each year cannot be given as to do so would disclose information relating to individual companies. Information on awards to regional development grants in the form requested is not available.

Sea Fisheries Order

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the scientific evidence to which he has regard before making the Sea Fisheries (Prohibition of Fishing and Fishing Methods) (Scotland) Order 1985 (S.I., 1985, No. 962).

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. Friend was advised by scientists of his Department's marine laboratory in Aberdeen on the basis of studies undertaken by them. Advice to Ministers is, by convention, treated as confidential.

AIDS

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome notified for each health board area over each of the last five years; what is the current total for 1985; what advice has been given to health boards regarding the isolation, treatment or prevention of the spreading of acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and what action has been taken by each health board in response.

Mr. John MacKay: To date, seven cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) have been registered in Scotland as follows:

	1984	1985
Forth Valley Health Board	—	1
Greater Glasgow Health Board	2	—
Lanarkshire Health Board	1	—
Lothian Health Board	—	3

Since August 1983 the Scottish Home and Health Department has issued nine letters of guidance to health boards about various matters relating to this disease with the primary object of preventing its spread. Health boards are fully aware of the need for effective action and have responded appropriately.

Detained Young Persons

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has as to how many young persons under the age of 16 years were detained in the penal system in Scotland at the latest date for which figures are conveniently available.

Mr. John MacKay: On 12 December 1985, seven persons under the age of 16 years were held in Scottish prisons.

Death Statistics

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths in Scotland were attributed, respectively, to all maternal causes, all forms of abortion, spontaneous abortion, illegal abortion and legal abortion in each of the years 1960 to 1984 inclusive.

Mr. John MacKay: The available figures, which are classified by the international classification of diseases (ICD), are given in the tables. Figures for the three time periods are not strictly comparable because of changes in the ICD. Also, before 1968 the ICD did not distinguish between criminal and other abortions and before 1979 it did not distinguish between spontaneous abortion and other forms of abortion. The relevant ICD codes are shown in the headings.

Numbers of direct maternal deaths (Complications of pregnancy, childbirth and puerperium including abortion)—Scotland 1960 to 1984

Year	All maternal deaths 640-689	All forms of abortion 650-652
1960	35	3
1961	37	5
1962	42	10
1963	39	3
1964	24	4
1965	38	7
1966	24	4
1977	22	—

Year	All maternal deaths 630-678	All forms of abortion 640-645	Criminal abortion 642	Other abortions 640, 641, 643-645
1968	14	1	1	—
1969	13	3	2	1
1970	17	—	—	—
1971	14	2	1	1
1972	13	3	1	2
1973	16	2	—	2
1974	16	2	1	1
1975	6	—	—	—
1976	10	—	—	—
1977	13	1	—	1
1978	4	1	—	1

Year	All maternal deaths 630-676	*All abortion 630-639	Spontaneous abortion 634	Illegally induced abortion 636	Legally induced abortion 633
1979	7	1	1	—	—
1980	10	1	—	—	1
1981	13	—	—	—	—
1982	6	—	—	—	—
1983	8	1	1	—	—
1984	8	—	—	—	—

* Excluding 633.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will describe any precautionary measures taken at other nuclear power stations following the site incident at Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 29 November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: The South of Scotland Electricity Board will continue to ensure the most stringent observance of all safety procedures in the course of any operations comparable to those during which the site incident at Hinckley Point B occurred. The board will be maintaining close contact with the Central Electricity Generating Board and Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate about the incident at Hinckley Point B and will take account of any lessons to be learnt. The inspectorate is satisfied that it is safe to continue to operate nuclear reactors with the type of gas circulator in use at Hinckley Point B and Hunterston B.

Teachers (Independent Review)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received in support of an independent review of teachers' salaries and conditions of employment in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I continue to receive many letters making representations about the teachers' dispute, a large proportion of which support some form of independent review. As my right hon. Friend said on 11 December, at column 903, in reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang), there is no substitute for direct negotiations among the parties involved.

Tourism

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to respond to the recommendation by the Select Committee on Scottish Affairs on 27 March that the tourism function of the Highlands and Islands Development Board should be transferred to the Scottish Tourist Board.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. Friend will announce his response to this and certain other recommendations of the Committee on Scottish Affairs in the near future.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Oral Questions (Northern Ireland)

40. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal if, following the Anglo-Irish agreement, he has any plans to vary the time available for Oral Questions to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Biffen: The arrangements for the question roster are under regular review through the usual channels and in accordance with the wishes of the House. There are no current proposals to extend the time allocated to questions to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Personnel Statistics

41. Sir Anthony Grant asked the Lord Privy Seal why the number of officers and staff of the House of Commons have increased by 45 per cent. in the decade 1970 to 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I refer my hon. Friend to the annual report of the Commissioners for Regulating the Offices of the House of Commons and, since 1979, the House of Commons Commission. These reports, which are available in the Library, detail each increase in the staff complement made between 1970 and 1980 and the reasons for it.

SOCIAL SERVICES

NHS Patients (Private Hospitals)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much has been paid by health authorities in the West Midlands region to send patients for treatment at private hospitals; how many patients were sent by each authority; what treatment or urgent or non-urgent operations they were sent for; and by how much this reduced waiting lists in National Health Service hospitals in those areas in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that all the information that the hon. Member is requesting is not collected centrally. Table A sets out the total expenditure under contractual arrangements for patient care in the west midlands since the 1980-81 financial year. This information is not directly comparable with the activity figures in tables B and C which are for calendar years. If the hon. Member requires further information she may like to write to the chairmen of individual district health authorities who may be able to help.

Table A
Expenditure on contractual arrangements for patient care

Area Health Authorities	1980-81 £	1981-82 £	District Health Authorities	1982-83 £	1983-84 £	1984-85 £
Hereford and Worcester	22,503	68,755	Bromsgrove and Redditch	23,230	22,238	1,424
			Hereford	—	—	—
			Kidderminster	6,209	1,962	16,259
			Worcester	44,367	38,807	32,451
Salop	153,180	133,587	Shropshire	122,106	86,069	85,877
Staffordshire	136,115	157,347	Mid-Staffordshire	22,415	91,720	100,100
			North Staffordshire	160,000	188,409	218,490
			South East Staffordshire	—	67,620	96,467
Warwickshire	642,528	828,278	Rugby	22,233	20,916	23,053
			North Warwickshire	58,096	668,670	737,469
			South Warwickshire	889,682	451,178	507,118
Birmingham	451,641	601,280	Central Birmingham	30,227	23,569	4,028
			East Birmingham	29,611	—	83,899
			North Birmingham	5,605	14,873	13,771
			South Birmingham	34,832	47,692	36,171
			West Birmingham	3,415	—	5,475
Coventry	—	23,438	Coventry	66,399	114,631	119,756
Dudley	26,084	44,127	Dudley	81,692	73,891	110,069
Sandwell	2,397	19,177	Sandwell	34,807	50,111	53,967
Solihull	—	—	Solihull	—	—	—
Walsall	24,580	11,603	Walsall	41,725	33,968	61,485
Wolverhampton	15,127	22,440	Wolverhampton	110,164	60,000	117,689
Total	1,474,155	1,910,032	Total	1,786,795	2,056,324	2,425,018

Notes:

1. The figures are derived from the annual accounts of area health authorities and their successor district health authorities and represent total revenue expenditure on all contractual arrangements for patient care incurred under hospital and community health services. The accounts give no detailed analysis of this expenditure.
2. The accounts of the West Midlands Regional Health Authority show no expenditure of this type.

Table B

Discharges and deaths of in-patients receiving treatment under contractual arrangements with institutions outside the National Health Service. West Midlands Regional Health Authority

District health authority	1980*	1981*	1982	1983	1984 (provisional)
Bromsgrove and Redditch	15	5	3	10	21
Herefordshire			—	—	—
Kidderminster and District			3	3	—
Worcester and District			—	2	6
Shropshire	73	64	55	74	44
Mid Staffordshire	201	217	25	62	55
North Staffordshire			230	291	273
South East Staffordshire			—	66	114
Rugby	918	1,117	—	—	—
North Warwickshire†			—	1,432	1,724
South Warwickshire†			1,057	161	170
Central Birmingham	19	—	—	—	—
East Birmingham			15	24	20
North Birmingham			—	—	—
South Birmingham			14	6	—
West Birmingham			—	—	—
Coventry	—	—	—	156	166
Dudley	21	10	62	56	93
Sandwell	13	16	16	33	50
Solihull	—	—	—	—	—
Walsall	11	19	22	35	27
Wolverhampton	—	11	108	106	125
Regional Total	1,271	1,459	1,610	2,517	2,888

* For 1980 and 1981 the figures relate to Area Health Authorities.

† Responsibility for contractual arrangements with the Warwickshire Orthopaedic hospital (St. Gerards) was transferred from South Warwickshire to North Warwickshire DHA in 1983.

Table C

Number of new out-patients receiving treatment under contractual arrangements with institutions outside the National Health Service. West Midlands Regional Health Authority.

District health authority	1980*	1981*	1982	1983	†1984
Bromsgrove and Redditch	—	—	—	—	—
Herefordshire			—	—	—
Kidderminster and District			—	—	—
Worcester and District			—	—	—
Shropshire	—	—	—	—	—
Mid Staffordshire	—	—	—	—	—
North Staffordshire			—	—	—
South East Staffordshire			—	—	—
Rugby			—	—	—
North Warwickshire	2,352	2,285	—	584	1,012
South Warwickshire			2,383	1,513	732
Central Birmingham	—	—	—	—	—
East Birmingham			—	—	—
North Birmingham			—	—	—
South Birmingham			—	—	—
West Birmingham			—	—	—
Coventry	—	—	—	—	—
Dudley	—	—	—	—	—
Sandwell	—	—	—	—	—
Solihull	—	—	—	—	—
Walsall	—	—	—	—	—
Wolverhampton	—	—	—	2	—
Regional total	2,352	2,285	2,383	2,099	1,744

* For 1980 and 1981 the figures relate to Area Health Authorities.

† Provisional.

Rate Rebate (Lambeth)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the date of the first payment of rate rebate to Lambeth council in the financial year 1985-86; and what interest accrued to public funds as a result of it not being paid at an earlier date;

(2) what is the current annual cost of housing benefit in Lambeth and the cost of administering the scheme.

Mr. Major: The first payment on account of rate rebate subsidy to Lambeth for the year 1985-86 was made on 15 July. On the second point, it is not possible to give a figure since the calculation would depend on hypothetical assumptions about how central Government's financing would have been carried out in other circumstances.

Latest estimates provided by the London borough of Lambeth indicate that the cost of housing benefit in 1985-86 is expected to be £49 million and the cost of its administration is expected to be £2·5 million.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply of 22 November, Official Report, columns 335-36, if he will list the additional requirements for which a boarder can qualify as prescribed in schedule 4 to the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1983 (S.I., 1983, No. 1399); and if he will state (a) the top limit that can be claimed for laundry and (b) the average weekly laundry payment where such a payment is made.

Mr. Newton: Subject to there being a need for the item and provision for it not being made in the boarding charge, a boarder can, in appropriate circumstances, qualify for the following additional requirements:

(a) extra heating; (b) old age addition; (c) attendance needs; (d) extra baths needed on medical grounds; (e) blindness; (f) boarding out fees for a child prior to adoption; (g) special diet due to illness; (h) fares to visit certain close relatives or friends in hospital; (i) laundry expenses; (j) special wear and tear on clothing; (k) extra cost of special clothing or footwear; and (l) storage of furniture.

The limit for a laundry addition is the amount by which the estimated average cost exceeds £0·55 a week. The latest figure available on the average laundry addition is £1·56 a week which relates to all claimants in receipt of such an addition and not just those in board and lodging.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the number of supplementary benefit claimants in Leyton and Leytonstone in each of the past six years.

Mr. Major: The London postal districts of Leyton and Leytonstone are covered by the Department's office at Leytonstone, although the boundaries are not conterminous. The number of people receiving supplementary benefit from that office on 30 July 1985—the latest available figures—and on comparable dates in the past five years were:

	Number
1980	6,444
1981	7,529
1982	8,252
1983	8,980
1984	9,629
1985	10,340

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

NHS (Overseas Visitors)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services by when he expects charges on overseas visitors using National Health Service facilities will have raised £6 million per year, as he originally estimated in February 1982.

Mr. Hayhoe: This early and provisional estimate was too high. Income figures were given to the hon. Member in my reply to him on 2 December at columns 117-26.

AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines he has issued to health authorities on the development of local counselling services for carriers of HTLV III virus.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities were asked on 30 July 1985 to plan for the counselling of people found to be HTLV III antibody positive. The AIDS booklets "General Information for Doctors" and "Information for doctors concerning the introduction of the HTLV III antibody test", issued by the Chief Medical Officer in May and October this year, refer to counselling for seropositive individuals. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of haemophiliac patients have so far been tested for HTLV III antibody.

Mr. Hayhoe: Most of those exposed to the greatest risk of HTLV III infection have been tested.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many spouses of haemophiliacs have so far (a) been identified as carriers of HTLV III virus, (b) contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome and (c) died.

Mr. Hayhoe: Complete figures for the number of spouses of haemophiliacs who may be infected with HTLV III are not held centrally, as all testing of haemophiliacs and their partners is entirely voluntary. Of the 120 known to have been tested to date, five have been found to be HTLV III antibody positive. From reports received by the communicable disease surveillance centre, it is understood that one of these five has contracted AIDS. None has died.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what will be the length, content and intake of courses for training health professionals in the counselling of acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers.

Mr. Hayhoe: St. Mary's hospital Paddington is running a series of two-day courses for health professionals involved in the counselling of people taking the HTLVIII antibody test and those exposed to the AIDS virus. The courses provide up to date information on the AIDS infection and the specialist skills required for related counselling. To date 380 health professionals have been trained and courses for a further 150 people are planned.

As my right hon. Friend announced on 2 December at columns 1-2 in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chiselhurst (Mr. Sims) a further £100,000 is being provided next year for AIDS counselling training. This money will support counselling courses in addition to those being run by St. Mary's.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the 1986 national information campaign on acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and what agencies will be involved in its planning and execution.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims) on 2 December at columns 1-2. The Central Office of Information, Reflexions Ltd (the research company), TBWA (the advertising agency) and the Health Education Council are involved in the planning of the campaign.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 126, what are the six research projects on acquired immune deficiency syndrome funded by the Medical Research Council; and to which two his Department is contributing money.

Mr. Hayhoe: I understand that the Medical Research Council, which receives grant-in-aid from the science budget of the Department of Education and Science, is currently funding the following six research projects at a total cost of about £431,000.

1. Professor M. W. Adler, Dr. R. S. Tedder, (Middlesex hospital medical school) and Dr. Dorothy Crawford (University college, London): an investigation into the immunology and aetiology of AIDS.
2. Dr. J. Craske (PHLS, Withington hospital, Manchester): an epidemiological study of the relationship of AIDS in patients with disorders of blood coagulation to its possible acquisition through treatment with blood products.
3. Dr. D. J. Jeffries (St. Mary's medical school) and Dr. D. Taylor-Robinson (clinical research centre, Harrow): virological investigations of patients with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
4. Dr. A. J. Pinching (St. Mary's hospital medical school): a study on the killing of intra cellular pathogens by macrophages derived from homosexual males with AIDS and related disorders.
5. Professor R. A. Weiss (Institute of Cancer Research, London): retroviruses associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
6. Dr. C. A. Ludlam (University of Edinburgh): clinical and immunological study of haemophiliacs treated exclusively with NHS Factor VIII/IX concentrate.

My Department is contributing a total of £59,000 to Professor Adler's and Dr. Craske's projects.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 126, what are the problems concerned with discrimination against carriers of the HTLV III virus which he is considering.

Mr. Hayhoe: Experience in this country, the United States and elsewhere indicates the main problems resulting from discrimination may fall mainly in the areas of insurance, employment and education and they are under consideration by the Government.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer on 2 December, if he has any plans to increase funds available from his Department for research into acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: A contribution of up to £250,000, towards the cost of the United Kingdom centre for co-ordination of epidemiological research on AIDS to be set up by the Medical Research Council has recently been agreed.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any preparations have been made for the establishment of isolation units in the case of an acquired immune deficiency syndrome epidemic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: As AIDS is not highly infectious isolation units are not appropriate for AIDS patients. The wide variety of illnesses associated with the infection requires the use of normal district general hospital in-patient and out-patient facilities.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the period after which an unemployed person is no longer entitled to any form of unemployment benefit in the following countries: (a) France, (b) Germany, (c) Japan, (d) Italy, (e) Switzerland and (f) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: Information on the period for which unemployment benefit is paid in countries of the European Community is contained in section VII of the Department's publication, "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the Member States of the European Communities, Portugal and Spain" (position at 1 January 1985).

The most recent information on Switzerland is contained in "Comparative Tables of the Social Security Systems in Council of Europe Member States not belonging to the European Communities" (situation at 1 July 1984) published by the Council of Europe. Information on Japan is contained in "Social Security Programs Throughout the World 1983", published by the United States Department of Health and Human Services. Copies of all three publications are in the Library.

Child Benefit

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of children in Scotland in receipt of child benefit in each of the last five years for which there are figures available.

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows:

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Number of children in Scotland for whom child benefit was in payment	1,261,400	1,236,750	1,208,800	1,185,150	1,156,550

Single Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in the light of S circular S/48/85 and the preceding ruling by the social security commissioners, he will take steps to publicise the fact that claimants may be entitled to claim for benefits under single payment Regulation No. 26, for which they were ruled ineligible last winter because of invalid guidance.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 6 December at column 394.

Mentally-ill Patients

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients over the age of 50 years in mental illness and mental handicap hospitals died of respiratory or chest related conditions in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The table shows the number of deaths which occurred in National Health Service (NHS) and non-NHS psychiatric hospitals (including mental handicap hospitals) in England and Wales for persons aged 50 and over for the latest five years, where the underlying cause of death was a respiratory or chest-related disease.

The figures for 1984 are not comparable with earlier years because of a change in coding following a rule of the World Health Organisation. In 1984 some deaths previously coded to bronchopneumonia (ICD 485) have been allocated to other chronic conditions mentioned on the death certificate.

Number of deaths from respiratory and chest-related diseases occurring in NHS and non-NHS psychiatric hospitals, persons aged 50 years and over—England and Wales 1980 to 1984

ICD number 9th revision		1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
460 – 519	Respiratory diseases	4,831	4,827	4,956	4,887	1,469
See below*	Diseases of lower respiratory tract	4,800	4,797	4,916	4,834	1,449
487	Influenza	28	30	36	52	19
162	Malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus and lung	173	159	135	159	153
010 – 012	Tuberculosis of lung and pulmonary	7	6	6	3	6

* Diseases of respiratory system excluding acute upper respiratory infections and other diseases of upper respiratory tract ICD 9th revision 466, 480 – 519 excluding 487.

Smoking

Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons died from smoking-related diseases in the Norfolk North-West constituency in each of the last five years.

Mr. Whitney: It is not possible to be precise. Most deaths associated with cigarette smoking arise from three diseases: lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and "heart attacks" due to obstruction of the arteries of the heart. However, the proportion of deaths attributable to smoking from each of these diseases varies. Furthermore, smoking is also implicated in certain other conditions where no estimate of the numbers of the deaths caused by smoking is available—for example, obstruction of the arteries of the lower limbs.

In 1983 the Royal College of Physicians in its report "Health or Smoking?" estimated that at least 90 per cent. of deaths from lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and obstructive lung disease are attributable to smoking. The total number of deaths from the main conditions involved is given in the table.

Norfolk, North-West Constituency (1984 boundaries)

	1981	1982	1983	†1984
Malignant neoplasm of Trachea bronchus and lung (ICD* 162)	66	58	54	57
Bronchitis and Emphysema, Chronic airways obstruction, not elsewhere classified (ICD* 490-492, 496)	42	36	46	66

* International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

† Figures for 1984 are not comparable with earlier years because of a change in coding rules.

In the same report the Royal College of Physicians also estimated that perhaps 20 per cent. of deaths due to obstruction of the arteries of the heart were related to smoking. The medical term for this condition is "ischaemic heart disease", but it is nowadays very often referred to as "coronary heart disease". The total number of deaths from this condition for the North West Norfolk constituency is as follows, but the proportion of these directly attributable to smoking is less certain as this is only one of a number of causes that give rise to obstruction of the arteries of the heart.

Year	Ischaemic Heart Disease (ICD 410-414)*
1981	321
1982	277
1983	288
1984†	284

* International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

† Figures for 1984 are not comparable with earlier years because of a change in coding rules.

The Royal College of Physicians' estimate of at least 100,000 smoking-related deaths in 1981 is based upon a total of 70,000 deaths from lung cancer, bronchitis and obstructive lung disease and 180,000 from coronary heart disease; that is, it encompasses conditions not included in the ICD categories, such as various other cancers, other vascular diseases, myocardial degeneration and so on.

Because of changes in area coding, figures are not available for 1980.

Low Income Families

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the reason for the assumption in Low Income Families 1981 that families off work sick or unemployed for less than three months had income equal to their normal income in paid work; and how many more families would be shown as unemployed, sick or living on low incomes if this assumption were discontinued.

Mr. Major: The bulk of data contained in the tables "Low Income Families — 1981" is derived from the family expenditure survey. The practice of equating the incomes of families off work, sick or unemployed for less than three months to their normal income in work, follows the convention adopted by the Department of Employment in its published reports of these surveys. The main purpose of the convention is to provide a more accurate indication of the budgetting behaviour of families. My hon. Friend may wish to refer to note 15A of annex A to the report of the family expenditure survey in 1981 which explains the convention more fully.

The table shows the changes in the estimated numbers of low-income families in 1981 if the income of those sick or unemployed for less than three months at the time of the survey is not equated to their normal income in work.

Employment status

	Unemployed	Sick	In work
Receiving supplementary benefit	+400,000	+20,000	—
Not receiving supplementary benefit but with income below that level	+160,000	+40,000	−40,000
Not receiving supplementary benefit but with income above, but less than 40 per cent. above, that level	+80,000	+30,000	−120,000

Pensions

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report any geographical area in the United Kingdom where delays are being experienced in making available the new up-rated weekly pension payments.

Mr. Major: People who receive their weekly pension payments from the Department's Office at Newcastle were issued with uprated order books before the date the increases took effect.

The great majority of those who receive their payments from the Department's network of local offices were also issued with their increases by the due date, but a few people living in areas covered by the following offices may have experienced some delays:

Bracknell
Camberwell
Hounslow
Ipswich
Kennington Park
Kirkby (Liverpool)
Leicester
Tottenham
Wood Green (North London)
Surbiton

National Health Service (Rural Areas)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the difference in the formula for allocation of resources for the National Health Service in rural areas between his Department and the Scottish Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The allocation of resources for the hospital and community health services to regional health authorities in England is based upon the formula recommended in the report of the resource allocation working party published in 1976. A copy of the report is in the Library. Regional health authorities are responsible for allocations to English health districts. The allocation of resources to family practitioner committees for their administrative functions in 1985-86 was based on their level of expenditure before becoming administratively independent of district health authorities on 1 April 1985.

The allocation of resources for the National Health Service in Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. A. D. Hickson

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate when Mr. A. D. Hickson of 21 Lansdowne Way, Etching Hill, Rugeley will receive the supplementary benefit to which he is entitled from 13 September last (ref. no. 2809/222803).

Mr. Major: A payment of supplementary benefit, including all arrears due, was made to Mr. Hickson on 15 November 1985.

Ship Engine Rooms (Noise)

Viscount Cranborne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any advice from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council about the effects of noise levels in ships' engine rooms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have received no recommendations from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council about noise in ships' engine rooms.

The council keeps the occupational deafness scheme under continuous review. I understand it is examining noise levels in a number of occupations not at present covered by the scheme, including work in ships' engine rooms. Its recommendations will be carefully considered.

Hyperbaric Oxygen

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make hyperbaric oxygen treatment for multiple sclerosis patients available on the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The view of the Medical Research Council and of the Department's neurosciences liaison committee is that the effectiveness of hyperbaric oxygen in the management of multiple sclerosis is at present unproven and I do not therefore consider the expenditure of National Health Service resources on its provision could be justified at this stage. Our position will be reviewed when the findings of the clinical trials at present being undertaken, and any other relevant data, have been evaluated.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evaluation studies have been made of the effects of hyperbaric oxygen treatment on multiple sclerosis patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Department commissioned a review of research data on the use of hyperbaric oxygen therapy in the management of multiple sclerosis in 1983. This review, carried out by Dr. J. Martin and Professor W. I. McDonald and published in the British Medical Journal on 31 March 1984, concluded that the research evidence then available was insufficient to substantiate claims that the treatment was effective, and recommended that further clinical trials be undertaken.

We are aware of two voluntary organisations that are currently conducting clinical trials on the use of the therapy. The Multiple Sclerosis Society has conducted trials at the Royal Victoria hospital in Newcastle and at Whipps Cross and St. Thomas' hospitals in London. All three are now completed and involved a total of 204 patients; the results of the Newcastle trial were published in the Lancet on 9 February 1985, and publication of the results of the other two trials is awaited. Action for Research into Multiple Sclerosis is conducting clinical trials at the Western infirmary in Glasgow and at the Central Middlesex hospital in London involving a total of 180 patients, and the results are expected in 1986.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the centres providing hyperbaric oxygen treatment for multiple sclerosis patients.

Mr. Whitney: Facilities for hyperbaric oxygen therapy are provided in a number of National Health Service hospitals but not, as far as I am aware, specifically for the management of patients suffering multiple sclerosis except in the context of controlled clinical trials. I am informed that the therapy is provided for multiple sclerosis sufferers at 45 centres established by Action for Research into Multiple Sclerosis.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of (a) new beds and (b) beds closed, including individual hospital wards since May 1979.

Mr. Whitney: From May 1979 to the end of June this year there were 18,325 beds in hospitals or parts of hospitals which have been approved for permanent closure. These are beds no longer sensibly required for patient services. Major hospital schemes (those costing £5 million or more) completed since 1979 have provided almost 12,500 new beds. Many smaller schemes have also provided new beds but full details of these are not available centrally.

Doctors (Computers)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, following his reply of 28 November, Official Report, column 646, how the cost of the computers loaned to doctors by the medicines manufacturer referred to will be reflected in the prices of National Health Service medicines.

Mr. Whitney: Companies supplying medicines to the National Health Service are obliged to submit audited annual financial returns to the Department under the terms of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme. These returns reflect the costs and profits incurred by companies in their sales of medicines to the Health Service and are the basis upon which the Department determines whether such costs and profits are reasonable. We are still examining the particular company's returns for the period in which the computers were loaned but at this stage have no reason to doubt that the cost of the loan may be legitimately charged as a cost.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the expenditure of his Department in 1984-85 on housing benefit and housing benefit supplement was expended in satisfying the rate bills of recipients of those benefits.

Mr. Major: About one third of housing benefit expenditure was expended on rate rebates in 1984-85.

Mammographic Screening

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress is being made by the expert group set up in June to consider future policy on mammographic screening; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: An expert working group on breast cancer screening was appointed in July. By the end of the year, it will have met on 4 occasions, considered 36 papers and taken evidence from a number of experts.

I expect to receive its report in the spring.

Disability (Dietary Factors)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what research is being done into dietary factors related to disability in early life, in middle age and in old age; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Department is funding research at St. Thomas' hospital, London, into the nutrition of children which, while not directly concerned with dietary factors related to disability, may provide further information in this field.

The Medical Research Council, which receives grant-in-aid from the science budget of the Department of Education and Science, is the main government funded body for the promotion of medical research in the United Kingdom.

Immunisation Policy

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provisions are being made to improve the national immunisation policy; if there are any sectors of immunisation policy to which he proposes to devote additional resources and publicity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, which advises the Department on immunisation matters, reviews national policy on a continuing basis.

Last August, the Department asked health authorities to draw up programmes for increased uptake of childhood immunisation, particularly against measles and whooping cough.

The Health Education Council, with special Government funding, is running a publicity campaign to promote immunisation against whooping cough. This will continue throughout the current whooping cough epidemic. The National Rubella Council, which is funded by the Department, is in the second year of a three year campaign to improve uptake of immunisation against rubella among schoolgirls and adult women of childbearing age.

Construction Industry (Safety)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much has been claimed in benefits by persons due to accidents in the construction industry in England and Wales in each of the last six years;

(2) if records are kept of beneft claimed by workers involved in accidents in the construction industry and of amounts paid.

Mr. Newton: Records of number of claims and amounts of benefit paid to workers in the construction industry are not held centrally.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many workers in the construction industry in England and Wales claimed benefit for industrial injuries in each of the past six years.

Mr. Newton: Information in the form requested is not available centrally. The following table shows the number of awards of benefit to construction workers in Great Britain from 1976 to 1982. Figures for later years are not yet available.

Year ending 30 September	Awards of injury benefit	Awards of disablement benefit
1976-77	70,300	*
1977-78	69,000	*
1978-79	*	*
1979-80	57,100	6,810
1980-81	49,300	5,810
1981-82	45,300	5,330

* Not available.

Applications and Appeals (Ayr)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current average time taken between refusal of an application by an officer and an appeal against that refusal being heard by a tribunal in the area covered by the Ayr Office; and how this compares with the Scottish and United Kingdom averages, respectively.

Mr. Major: The information available relates to the period between the lodging of an appeal against a decision by an adjudication officer and the hearing of that appeal by a social security appeal tribunal.

The most recent information relates to the last quarter of 1984. At that time the average time for the hearing of appeals relating to all social security benefits was 11·8 weeks in Scotland and 13·9 weeks in Great Britain. Equivalent figures are not available for the United Kingdom or for localities smaller than a Region.

Residential Homes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the criteria used by his Department for licensing (a) a nursing home and (b) an old people's home; how often each is inspected; what is the minimum number of beds, nurses and other medical staff necessary, including visiting doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Registration of nursing homes is a function exercised by District Health Authorities on behalf of the Secretary of State, and in accordance with part II of the Registered Homes Act 1984 and the Nursing Homes and Mental Nursing Homes Regulations. The legislation provides for every home to be inspected not less than twice in every period of twelve months; does not prescribe a minimum number of beds; and requires the person registered to provide adequate professional, technical, ancillary and other staff and to make adequate arrangements for patients in the home where necessary to receive medical and dental services, and to provide or make arrangements for other facilities and services.

Residential care homes, which include homes for elderly people, with places for four or more people are registered by local social services authorities under part I of the 1984 Act and in accordance with the Residential Care Homes Regulations 1984. Authorities have to inspect registered homes at least once every 12 months. Those registered to run homes have to employ sufficient suitably qualified and competent staff; make arrangements for residents to receive, where necessary, medical and dental services; and provide, or make arrangements for, other facilities and services appropriate to the needs of residents.

Family Planning Association

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any recent representations concerning the Family Planning Association; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Copies of an anonymous letter about staff and management matters at the Family Planning Association have been received. I understand that the association's solicitors have issued a statement contending that the letter contains libellous allegations about senior staff of the association.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any Government funds are made available through the Health Education Council for the Family Planning Association.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Health Education Council funds the family planning information service, which is operated jointly by the council and the Family Planning Association. Funding in the current financial year is £290,000.

Rate Rebates

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) to how many of the local authorities which failed to set a rate by 1 April 1985 his Department delayed payment of its contribution to rate rebates;

(2) if he will list the local authorities that continued to pay rate rebates after 1 April 1985 but before they had set a rate.

Mr. Major: Payments on account of rate rebate subsidy were not made to ten authorities who did not set a rate on time since rate rebates are properly payable under the statutory housing benefits scheme only when a rate has been set. The hon. Member might like to consult the authorities concerned for information about rate rebates they paid before setting a rate.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list all changes, with dates, which have taken place in the limited list of medicines available under the National Health Service since the introduction of the list.

Mr. Hayhoe: All changes to the products affected by the selected list scheme are contained in the following Amending Regulations: S.I. 1985 No. 540, S.I. 1985 No. 803 and S.I. 1985 No. 1712. I will send my hon. Friend a copy of each of these regulations.

Children (Statistics)

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of children aged under 18 years in the population, the number of children in care and the proportion of children in care in each of the years 1964 to 1984 inclusive.

Mr. Whitney: The information readily available is for England and Wales and is given in the table. The numbers of children in care in England and Wales for each year 1964-83 and the corresponding proportions for 1976-83 are given in "Children in Care in England and Wales", published annually, copies of which are available in the Library.

Number of children aged under 18 years in the population, number of children in care and the number of children in care per 1,000 population aged under 18 years, in England and Wales, 1964-84

At 31 March	Number of children aged under 18 years in the population* (in thousands)	Number of children in care†	Number of children in care per 1,000 population aged under 18 years
1964	12,985	66,281	5·1
1965	13,143	67,099	5·1
1966	13,130	69,157	5·3
1967	13,165	69,405	5·3
1968	13,254	69,358	5·2
1969	13,384	70,188	5·2
1970	13,509	71,210	5·3
1971	13,597	87,377	6·4
1972	13,666	90,586	6·6
1973	13,722	93,188	6·8
1974	13,755	95,867	7·0
1975	13,698	99,120	7·2
1976	13,599	100,628	7·4
1977	13,455	101,158	7·5
1978	13,272	100,646	7·6
1979	13,093	100,085	7·6
1980	12,936	100,158	7·7
1981	12,776	96,896	7·6
1982	12,591	93,238	7·4
1983	12,369	86,552	7·0
1984	12,148	78,889	6·5

* Estimates at 30 June of the previous year.
† The number of children in care includes a small number who were aged 18 or 19 years.

Death Statistics

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths in England and Wales were attributed, respectively, to all maternal causes, all forms of abortion, spontaneous abortion, illegal abortion and legal abortion, in each of the years 1960 to 1984 inclusive.

Mr. Hayhoe: The available figures are given in the tables. Because of changes in the international classification of diseases (ICD), figures from 1979 to date are not comparable with those of earlier years.

Before 1979 it is not possible to distinguish between spontaneous abortion and other forms of abortion, and the statistics for this period include maternal deaths where the interval between the onset of the maternal condition and death is up to one year.

From 1979, the category "All abortion" is defined as pregnancy with abortive outcome, excluding ectopic pregnancy. A maternal death is defined as the death of a woman while pregnant or within 42 days of termination of pregnancy, irrespective of the duration and the site of the pregnancy, from any cause related to or aggravated by the pregnancy or its management but not from accidental or incidental causes.

Numbers of direct maternal deaths (complications of pregnancy, childbirth and puerperium including abortion)

England and Wales 1960-84

Year	All maternal deaths ICD (8) 630-678	All forms of abortion ICD (8) 640-645	Criminal abortion ICD (8) 642	Other abortions ICD (8) 640, 641, 643-645
1960	310	62	30	32
1961	274	54	23	31
1962	299	57	29	28
1963	243	49	21	28
1964	227	50	24	26
1965	221	52	21	31
1966	223	53	30	23
1967	172	34	17	17
1968	200	50	22	28
1969	155	35	15	20
1970	146	32	11	21

Year	All maternal deaths ICD (8) 630-678	All forms of abortion ICD (8) 640-645	Criminal abortion ICD (8) 642	Other abortions ICD (8) 640, 641, 643-645
1971	134	27	6	21
1972	112	26	7	19
1973	88	12	4	8
1974	81	11	2	9
1975	77	8	1	7
1976	78	7	1	6
1977	74	6	1	5
1978	68	5	—	5

Year	All maternal deaths ICD (9) 630-676	All abortion ICD (9) 630-639 excl 633	Spontaneous abortion ICD (9) 634	Illegally induced abortion ICD (9) 636	Legally induced abortion ICD (9) 635
1979	74	6	1	—	2
1980	70	3	1	—	1
1981	57	4	1	—	1
1982	42	4	1	—	2
1983	54	2	2	—	—
1984	52	3	—	—	1

"Reform of Social Security"

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, out of all the responses to the Green Paper, "Reform of Social Security", how many gave positive support to the proposal for a lower rate of supplementary benefit for under-25s; and which they were.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

National Health Service Hospitals

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give, for each year since 1979 and for each district health authority, the total number of National Health Service hospitals;

(2) if he will give, for each year since 1979 and for each district health authority, the total number of beds in National Health Service hospitals.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 133]: The information requested is given in the tables.

Number of National Health Service hospitals in England

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Northern Regional Health Authority
Hartlepool	4	4	4	4	4	4
North Tees	2	2	2	2	2	2
South Tees	18	16	15	14	13	13
East Cumbria	*	*	*	11	11	11
South Cumbria	*	*	*	10	10	10
West Cumbria	7	7	7	7	7	7
Darlington	5	5	5	5	5	5
Durham	7	7	7	7	7	6
North West Durham	4	3	3	3	3	3
South West Durham	8	8	8	8	8	8
Northumberland	16	16	16	16	16	16
Gateshead	8	7	7	7	7	7
Newcastle upon Tyne	14	14	13	14	14	14
North Tyneside	7	7	6	6	6	7
South Tyneside	6	6	7	7	7	6
Sunderland	8	8	8	8	8	8
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority
Hull	13	13	11	10	9	10
East Yorkshire	12	12	12	12	12	12
Grimsby	7	7	7	7	8	5
Scunthorpe	11	11	11	10	10	10
Northallerton	7	7	7	8	8	8
York	16	16	16	16	14	12
Scarborough	7	6	6	6	6	6
Harrogate	10	9	9	9	11	10
Bradford	21	20	20	20	20	20
Airedale	9	9	9	9	9	9
Calderdale	4	4	4	4	4	4
Huddersfield	7	7	7	7	7	7
Dewsbury	6	6	6	6	6	6
Leeds Western	*	*	*	11	12	10
Leeds Eastern	*	*	*	7	7	7
Wakefield	8	8	8	8	7	8
Pontefract	6	6	6	5	5	5
Trent Regional Health Authority
North Derbyshire	20	19	19	19	19	19
South Derbyshire	31	28	27	28	28	29
Leicestershire	37	37	38	37	37	38
North Lincolnshire	17	16	15	14	14	13
South Lincolnshire	12	12	12	12	13	13
Bassetlaw	3	3	3	3		3

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Central Nottinghamshire	13	13	13	13	13	13
Nottingham	17	16	16	14	14	13
Barnsley	3	3	3	3	3	4
Doncaster	*	*	*	7	7	7
Rotherham	*	*	*	10	10	10
Sheffield	27	28	26	25	24	25
East Anglian Regional Health Authority
Cambridge	*	*	*	7	8	7
Peterborough	12	13	14	12	13	12
West Suffolk	*	*	*	5	5	5
East Suffolk	*	*	*	18	18	17
Norwich	25	25	25	25	25	25
Great Yarmouth	9	9	9	10	10	10
West Norfolk and Wisbech	12	12	8	7	7	7
Huntingdon	*	*	*	4	4	2
North West Thames Regional Health Authority
North Bedfordshire	8	8	8	7	7	7
South Bedfordshire	6	6	6	6	6	5
North Hertforshire	6	6	6	6	6	6
East Hertfordshire	8	7	7	7	7	7
North West Hertfordshire	7	7	7	7	7	7
South West Hertforshire	7	7	7	6	6	6
Barnet	15	15	13	13	13	13
Harrow	3	3	3	3	3	3
Hillingdon	7	7	6	6	6	6
Hounslow and Spelthorne	*	*	*	6	6	6
Ealing	8	6	6	6	6	6
Brent	8	8	8	8	8	7
Paddington	10	9	9	10	10	10
Hammersmith and Fulham	5	4	4	3	3	3
Victoria	7	7	7	8	7	7
North East Thames Regional Health Authority
Basildon and Thurrock	8	8	8	8	8	8
Mid Essex	7	7	7	7	7	7
North East Essex	15	15	15	15	15	14
West Essex	9	7	7	7	7	7
Southend	5	5	5	5	5	5
Barking, Havering and Brentwood	10	10	10	10	10	9
Hampstead	*	*	*	4	4	4
Bloomsbury	*	*	*	15	15	16
Islington	*	*	*	5	5	4
City and Hackney	8	8	9	10	10	10
Newham	9	8	8	8	8	5
Tower Hamlets	8	7	6	5	5	4
Enfield	5	5	5	3	3	3
Haringey	5	5	5	5	4	4
Redbridge	6	5	5	4	4	4
Waltham Forest	11	11	11	11	11	10
South East Thames Regional Health Authority
Brighton	15	15	14	15	14	15
Eastbourne	7	7	7	7	7	8
Hastings	11	11	10	10	10	10
South East Kent	12	10	9	9	10	10
Canterbury and Thanet	20	20	19	19	19	19
Dartford and Gravesham	9	9	9	9	9	8
Maidstone	7	7	7	7	8	6
Medway	10	10	10	10	10	11
Tunbridge Wells	15	15	16	16	16	15
Bexley	3	3	3	3	3	3
Greenwich	9	9	7	7	7	7
Bromley	9	9	9	9	9	9
West Lambeth	*	*	*	4	4	4
Camberwell	5	5	5	5	5	5
Lewisham and North Southwark	9	7	7	7	7	7
South West Thames Regional Health Authority
North West Surrey	13	13	12	12	12	12
West Surrey and North East Hants	5	5	5	5	5	6
South West Surrey	8	8	8	9	9	9
Mid Surrey	11	11	9	10	10	10
East Surrey	13	13	13	13	14	13

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Chichester	5	5	5	5	5	6
Mid Downs	9	9	9	9	9	8
Worthing	5	5	5	5	5	5
Croydon	10	9	9	9	9	8
Kingston and Esher	*	*	*	6	6	6
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton	*	*	*	6	6	6
Wandsworth	12	10	8	8	9	8
Merton and Sutton	17	16	16	16	16	15
Wessex Regional Health Authority
East Dorset	17	17	15	15	18	18
West Dorset	17	17	17	17	17	18
Portsmouth	19	18	18	19	19	21
South West Hants. and Southampton	25	25	26	26	27	27
Winchester	12	12	12	13	14	14
Basingstoke	8	8	8	8	8	8
Salisbury	5	5	6	6	6	8
Swindon	9	9	9	9	9	10
West Wiltshire and Bath	27	27	27	27	27	30
Isle of Wight	8	8	8	8	9	9
Oxford Regional Health Authority
East Berkshire	11	11	12	12	12	12
West Berkshire	19	18	18	18	18	16
Aylesbury	*	*	*	6	6	6
Wycombe	8	8	8	8	8	7
Milton Keynes	*	*	*	4	4	4
Kettering	5	5	5	5	5	5
Northampton	10	8	8	8	8	8
Oxfordshire	29	28	27	27	27	30
South Western Regional Health Authority
Bristol and Weston	18	18	20	20	19	18
Frenchay	12	12	12	12	12	12
Southmead	14	14	13	13	13	12
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	30	30	30	30	30	29
Exeter	30	30	30	29	28	28
North Devon	*	*	*	10	10	10
Plymouth	*	*	*	27	26	26
Torbay	16	17	17	18	19	19
Cheltenham	*	*	*	15	15	15
Gloucester	*	*	*	19	20	21
Somerset	31	30	31	31	31	31
West Midlands Regional Health Authority
Bromsgrove and Redditch	8	8	8	9	9	8
Herefordshire	15	15	15	15	15	13
Kidderminster and District	7	7	7	7	7	7
Worcester and District	11	11	11	11	11	10
Shropshire	23	23	23	23	23	21
Mid Staffordshire	10	11	11	11	12	9
North Staffordshire	19	19	19	19	19	21
South-East Staffordshire	7	7	7	7	7	7
Rugby	3	3	3	3	3	2
North Warwickshire	*	*	*	6	6	6
South Warwickshire	*	*	*	12	12	12
Central Birmingham	*	*	*	9	10	11
East Birmingham	1	1	1	1	1	1
North Birmingham	8	8	8	8	8	8
South Birmingham	*	*	*	9	9	8
West Birmingham	*	*	*	8	8	8
Coventry	6	6	6	7	7	7
Dudley	10	10	10	10	10	11
Sandwell	7	5	5	5	5	5
Solihull	*	*	*	7	7	7
Walsall	6	6	6	6	6	6
Wolverhampton	8	8	8	8	8	8
Mersey Regional Health Authority
Chester	8	8	8	8	6	6
Crewe	13	12	10	9	9	8
Halton	6	6	6	6	6	6
Macclesfield	10	10	10	11	12	9
Warrington	5	4	3	3	3	3
Liverpool	17	17	17	17	17	17
St. Helens and Knowsley	5	5	5	5	5	5

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Southport and Formby	8	8	8	7	7	7
South Sefton	2	2	2	2	2	2
Wirral	13	11	10	11	7	5
North Western Regional Health Authority
Lancaster	6	6	6	6	6	6
Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde	9	9	9	9	9	9
Preston	*	*	*	6	6	6
Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley	11	11	11	11	12	12
Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale	8	8	8	8	8	8
West Lancashire	5	5	5	5	5	5
Chorley and South Ribble	*	*	*	3	3	3
Bolton	8	7	6	7	7	6
Bury	6	6	6	6	7	7
North Manchester	6	6	6	6	6	6
Central Manchester	4	4	4	4	4	6
South Manchester	4	4	4	4	4
Oldham	5	5	4	4	4
Rochdale	5	5	5	5	5	5
Salford	9	9	9	9	9	9
Stockport	10	10	9	10	10	9
Tameside and Glossop	5	5	6	6	6	5
Trafford	9	9	9	8	8	9
Wigan	9	9	9	9	9	6
Special Health Authorities
The Hospital For Sick Children	3	3	3	3	3	3
National Hospitals For Nervous Diseases	4	4	4	4	4	4
Moorfields Eye Hospital	1	1	1	1	1	1
Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals	1	1	1	1	1	1
National Heart and Chest Hospitals	5	4	4	4	4	4
The Royal Marsden Hospital	2	2	2	2	2	2
Hammersmith and Queen Charlotte's	*	*	*	5	5	5

* Comparable figures not readily available because of NHS restructuring on 1 April 1982.
† Figures are based on a count of hospitals which provide residential facilities during the year. Day hospitals and clinics are therefore not included.

Average daily number of available beds in National Health Service hospitals in England

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Northern Regional Health Authority
Hartlepool	592	614	600	627	636	705
North Tees	956	971	954	952	973	970
South Tees	2,282	2,232	2,122	2,066	2,069	1,973
East Cumbria	*	*	*	1,552	1,532	1,524
South Cumbria	*	*	*	872	862	847
West Cumbria	1,113	1,094	1,045	1,052	1,078	1,087
Darlington	1,310	1,336	1,326	1,307	1,319	1,264
Durham	1,192	1,188	1,181	1,156	1,165	1,107
North West Durham	717	697	685	681	664	642
South West Durham	1,921	1,890	1,847	1,828	1,800	1,719
Northumberland	3,996	3,988	3,870	3,827	3,766	3,727
Gateshead	1,368	1,378	1,357	1,362	1,383	1,368
Newcastle upon Tyne	3,479	3,570	3,567	3,517	3,566	3,488
North Tyneside	719	724	723	719	733	740
South Tyneside	771	762	828	825	829	821
Sunderland	2,426	2,379	2,356	2,338	2,351	2,349
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority
Hull	2,145	2,128	2,024	1,955	1,948	1,935
East Yorkshire	2,184	2,113	2,004	1,934	1,951	1,904
Grimsby	797	800	806	800	807	800
Scunthorpe	993	983	962	936	931	913
Northallerton	437	448	448	444	413	406
York	2,985	2,960	2,933	2,847	2,548	2,473
Scarborough	689	701	674	688	694	682
Harrogate	995	927	954	959	1,142	1,068
Bradford	2,721	2,719	2,724	2,711	2,680	2,621
Airedale	1,528	1,533	1,501	1,464	1,402	1,376
Calderdale	1,370	1,385	1,344	1,357	1,302	1,258
Huddersfield	2,625	2,389	2,391	2,391	2,321	2,235
Dewsbury	777	778	785	756	761	752
Leeds Western	*	*	*	3,327	3,218	3,172
Leeds Eastern	*	*	*	2,734	2,726	2,698
Wakefield	2,607	2,505	2,473	2,321	2,309	2,273
Pontefract	854	848	873	865	883	904

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Trent Regional Health Authority
North Derbyshire	1,722	1,674	1,701	1,668	1,673	1,684
South Derbyshire	4,208	4,323	3,913	3,935	3,929	3,734
Leicestershire	5,140	5,221	5,221	5,225	5,149	5,070
North Lincolnshire	2,815	2,749	2,693	2,653	2,581	2,420
South Lincolnshire	1,894	1,868	1,835	1,794	1,801	1,819
Bassetlaw	403	408	412	424	424	419
Central Nottinghamshire	1,997	1,967	1,949	1,934	1,888	1,851
Nottingham	4,198	4,088	4,041	4,029	4,000	3,958
Barnsley	962	1,013	1,014	971	1,032	1,073
Doncaster	*	*	*	1,946	1,954	1,929
Rotherham	*	*	*	1,244	1,250	1,246
Sheffield	5,233	5,075	5,032	4,922	4,800	4,799
East Anglian Regional Health Authority
Cambridge	*	*	*	1,926	1,933	1,875
Peterborough	1,122	1,120	1,149	1,144	1,129	1,161
West Suffolk	*	*	*	1,236	1,241	1,247
East Suffolk	*	*	*	2,668	2,637	2,537
Norwich	3,928	3,979	3,991	3,822	3,915	3,697
Great Yarmouth	852	862	875	1,000	995	991
West Norfolk and Wisbech	830	882	833	817	831	841
Huntingdon	*	*	*	300	320	378
North-West Thames Regional Health Authority
North Bedfordshire	1,233	1,259	1,230	1,224	1,243	1,216
South Bedfordshire	1,653	1,649	1,649	1,630	1,606	1,549
North Hertfordshire	849	851	857	858	855	855
East Hertfordshire	829	763	772	791	765	742
North-West Hertfordshire	3,288	3,310	3,277	3,198	3,175	3,185
South-West Hertfordshire	2,385	2,308	2,237	2,233	2,176	2,124
Barnet	2,841	2,800	2,771	2,748	2,670	2,551
Harrow	908	902	914	938	935	878
Hillingdon	1,628	1,480	1,528	1,526	1,499	1,406
Hounslow and Spelthorne	*	*	*	1,548	1,497	1,447
Ealing	1,709	1,713	1,753	1,725	1,663	1,622
Brent	2,316	2,332	2,263	2,273	2,203	2,059
Paddington	1,365	1,276	1,236	1,216	1,211	1,187
Hammersmith and Fulham	1,041	989	989	965	953	902
Victoria	2,185	2,053	2,047	2,981	2,892	2,807
North East Thames Regional Health Authority
Basildon and Thurrock	1,893	1,880	1,922	1,960	1,976	1,984
Mid Essex	1,282	1,276	1,260	1,260	1,271	1,267
North East Essex	3,381	3,244	3,137	3,066	2,972	2,853
West Essex	1,256	1,174	1,187	1,214	1,210	1,199
Southend	1,937	1,941	1,924	1,942	1,933	1,912
Barking, Havering and Brentwood	3,283	3,238	3,183	3,095	3,033	2,984
Hampstead	*	*	*	1,963	1,919	1,894
Bloomsbury	*	*	*	2,487	2,490	2,344
Islington	*	*	*	1,177	1,105	1,018
City and Hackney	1,990	1,867	1,743	1,887	1,884	1,853
Newham	941	924	936	887	845	877
Tower Hamlets	1,561	1,484	1,605	1,433	1,396	1,363
Enfield	1,234	1,217	1,137	1,087	1,114	1,076
Haringey	1,236	1,122	1,143	1,157	1,109	1,028
Redbridge	1,655	1,655	1,650	1,633	1,644	1,630
Waltham Forest	3,311	3,318	3,245	3,051	2,842	2,667
South East Thames Regional Health Authority
Brighton	1,896	1,851	1,770	1,794	1,803	1,796
Eastbourne	1,714	1,710	1,702	1,660	1,593	1,487
Hastings	1,064	1,016	974	995	955	927
South East Kent	1,004	1,043	1,081	1,087	1,093	1,073
Canterbury and Thanet	2,926	2,838	2,762	2,743	2,693	2,524
Dartford and Gravesham	2,646	2,552	2,478	2,454	2,290	2,125
Maidstone	1,741	1,697	1,680	1,689	1,680	1,618
Medway	991	982	972	992	994	1,011
Tunbridge Wells	2,419	2,396	2,338	2,268	2,213	2,174
Bexley	1,653	1,667	1,635	1,585	1,543	1,468
Greenwich	1,777	1,666	1,623	1,598	1,611	1,586
Bromley	2,591	2,491	2,466	2,377	2,296	2,116
West Lambeth	*	*	*	2,100	2,119	2,066
Camberwell	1,432	1,366	1,332	1,289	1,279	1,232
Lewisham and North Southwark	2,336	2,257	2,208	2,185	2,194	2,058

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
South West Thames Regional Health Authority
North West Surrey	2,138	2,041	2,001	1,996	1,970	1,886
West Surrey and North East Hampshire	1,743	1,773	1,712	1,704	1,688	1,725
South West Surrey	857	872	930	959	951	927
Mid Surrey	2,901	2,835	2,592	2,579	2,466	2,356
East Surrey	2,776	2,666	2,597	2,512	2,444	2,267
Chichester	1,255	1,244	1,250	1,237	1,225	1,204
Mid Downs	1,576	1,572	1,625	1,647	1,676	1,621
Worthing	933	925	952	945	980	982
Croydon	3,192	3,089	3,006	2,929	2,860	2,728
Kingston and Esher	*	*	*	1,564	1,517	1,457
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton	*	*	*	979	970	916
Wandsworth	2,871	2,689	2,543	2,476	2,494	2,534
Merton and Sutton	2,687	2,610	2,510	2,495	2,477	2,390
Wessex Regional Health Authority
East Dorset	2,126	2,135	2,093	2,128	2,187	2,233
West Dorset	1,704	1,702	1,693	1,693	1,653	1,640
Portsmouth	3,058	3,032	3,037	3,028	2,978	2,835
South West Hampshire and Southampton	3,112	3,106	3,129	3,073	3,037	3,017
Winchester	921	915	910	899	875	867
Basingstoke	1,634	1,623	1,617	1,598	1,573	1,545
Salisbury	999	959	960	970	968	1,030
Swindon	1,478	1,435	1,382	1,336	1,347	1,377
West Wiltshire and Bath	3,044	3,029	2,974	2,947	2,838	2,737
Isle of Wight	946	909	868	875	855	794
Oxford Regional Health Authority
East Berkshire	1,773	1,775	1,759	1,726	1,668	1,642
West Berkshire	2,987	2,820	2,758	2,704	2,626	2,489
Aylesbury	*	*	*	1,610	1,556	1,546
Wycombe	778	737	724	760	757	742
Milton Keynes	*	*	*	209	209	354
Kettering	849	875	896	918	891	902
Northampton	2,116	2,129	2,163	2,068	2,087	2,013
Oxfordshire	3,288	3,246	3,155	3,120	3,024	3,034
South Western Regional Health Authority
Bristol and Weston	2,276	2,278	2,254	2,220	2,140	2,105
Frenchay	2,968	2,941	2,894	2,811	2,734	2,666
Southmead	2,175	2,089	2,060	2,005	1,917	1,802
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	2,670	2,693	2,747	2,745	2,691	2,621
Exeter	3,848	3,792	3,738	3,613	3,471	3,134
North Devon	*	*	*	640	647	659
Plymouth	*	*	*	2,226	2,200	2,167
Torbay	1,021	1,048	1,057	1,075	1,177	1,170
Cheltenham	*	*	*	932	942	939
Gloucester	*	*	*	2,248	2,201	2,088
Somerset	3,478	3,440	3,392	3,347	3,339	3,326
West Midlands Regional Health Authority
Bromsgrove and Redditch	1,227	1,206	1,101	1,081	1,023	986
Herefordshire	1,174	1,151	1,126	1,106	1,064	1,019
Kidderminster and District	1,313	1,238	1,214	1,226	1,094	1,093
Worcester and District	1,684	1,645	1,619	1,630	1,603	1,567
Shropshire	2,603	2,573	2,578	2,573	2,564	2,480
Mid Staffordshire	1,372	1,399	1,372	1,309	1,319	1,309
North Staffordshire	3,492	3,499	3,504	3,448	3,406	3,358
South East Staffordshire	1,514	1,483	1,482	1,474	1,451	1,468
Rugby	327	327	328	334	324	318
North Warwickshire	*	*	*	1,212	1,210	1,165
South Warwickshire	*	*	*	1,893	1,866	1,834
Central Birmingham	*	*	*	1,729	1,793	1,829
East Birmingham	966	966	988	997	990	972
North Birmingham	1,879	1,753	1,680	1,658	1,595	1,507
South Birmingham	*	*	*	2,723	2,525	2,353
West Birmingham	*	*	*	2,247	2,202	2,130
Coventry	1,871	1,937	1,930	1,937	1,909	1,839
Dudley	1,492	1,476	1,510	1,523	1,544	1,514
Sandwell	747	771	805	851	858	872
Solihull	*	*	*	1,140	1,102	1,057
Walsall	1,762	1,697	1,676	1,628	1,598	1,614
Wolverhampton	1,543	1,503	1,484	1,510	1,506	1,479
Mersey Regional Health Authority
Chester	2,031	1,943	1,911	1,847	1,836	1,771
Crewe	2,310	2,201	2,180	1,789	1,760	1,692

Regional, District and Special Health Authority	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Halton	452	438	445	449	406	358
Macclesfield	1,572	1,526	1,548	1,863	1,758	1,668
Warrington	2,991	2,974	2,917	2,797	2,705	2,620
Liverpool	4,024	4,003	3,805	3,766	3,740	3,561
St. Helens and Knowsley	2,734	2,561	2,606	2,620	2,535	2,462
Southport and Formby	1,324	1,275	1,250	1,299	1,281	1,207
South Sefton	1,755	1,709	1,740	1,750	1,681	1,668
Wirral	2,789	2,703	2,622	2,341	2,149	2,022
North Western Regional Health Authority
Lancaster	2,645	2,601	2,508	2,512	2,406	2,352
Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde	1,564	1,576	1,664	1,733	1,732	1,737
Preston	*	*	*	2,318	2,239	2,196
Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley	2,825	2,781	2,746	2,706	2,665	2,624
Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale	2,591	2,591	2,522	2,513	2,516	2,438
West Lancashire	886	862	854	851	851	867
Chorley and South Ribble	*	*	*	374	378	357
Bolton	1,361	1,315	1,328	1,303	1,294	1,285
Bury	716	740	786	801	812	822
North Manchester	2,041	2,038	2,026	1,982	1,950	1,831
Central Manchester	1,137	1,201	1,227	1,254	1,250	1,242
South Manchester	2,408	2,423	2,389	2,401	2,417	2,355
Oldham	1,045	1,028	1,004	1,003	1,029	1,019
Rochdale	953	904	875	879	869	827
Salford	3,098	3,089	3,017	3,008	2,972	2,876
Stockport	1,677	1,692	1,759	1,816	1,793	1,749
Tameside and Glossop	869	965	981	941	917	942
Trafford	836	864	869	837	827	814
Wigan	1,479	1,450	1,430	1,446	1,467	1,426
Special Health Authorities
The Hospital for Sick Children	517	506	544	494	474	418
National Hospitals for Nervous Diseases	357	355	345	356	351	341
Moorfields Eye Hospital	208	204	204	208	210	181
Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals	472	492	497	501	498	506
National Heart and Chest Hospitals	603	570	577	556	552	540
The Royal Marsden Hospital	361	361	350	340	343	333
Hammersmith and Queen Charlotte's Hospital	*	*	*	891	900	917

* Comparable figures not readily available because of NHS restructuring on 1 April 1982.

Review of Nursing Skill Mix

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list in the Official Report the districts and the units within each district which those engaged in the review of nursing skill mix have already visited, together with a list of those projected for such visits in the future;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of reference of the review of nursing skill mix currently being conducted by his Chief Nursing Officer on behalf of the National Health Service Management Board; what are the reasons for conducting this inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 3 December 1985, c. 209]: I regret that my earlier reply contained a typing error. The second sentence of the second paragraph should read:

"In all the above districts, units for the care of the mentally ill, the mentally handicapped, and the elderly, intensive care units and special care baby units were visited".

DEFENCE

HMS Resolution (Crewmen)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Defence what health records his Department has kept of the 300 crewmen of the Polaris submarine HMS Resolution.

Mr. Lee: Comprehensive medical records are maintained for all nuclear submariners throughout their service career. In addition the defence radiological protection service maintains permanent radiation dose records for nuclear submariners whose jobs involves potential exposure to radioactivity, such as those working on the reactors of Polaris submarines. These radiation dose records are forwarded to the national registry for radiation workers run by the national radiological protection board.

Bolton and Bury (Defence Establishments)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of existing and proposed defence establishments in Bolton and Bury.

Mr. Lee: The defence establishments in Bolton and Bury are as follows:

1. Army Careers Information Officer, Bolton
2. TAVRA Centre, Bolton
3. TAVRA Centre, Bury
4. Army Regimental Headquarters, Bury
5. Army Training Camp and Area, Holcombe Moor

We have no plans at present to create a new establishment in the area, but the size and number of establishments throughout the country are of course kept under continuous review.

Pensions

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much it would cost to bring the pre-March 1973 rate of forces' family pension up to the current one-half rate.

Mr. Lee: An estimated £27 million per year for pensions currently in issue.

Faslane (Construction Work)

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the construction work planned at the Clyde submarine base at Faslane.

Mr. Lee: Yes. Now that the construction work for the Trident project at Faslane is more defined it has become clear that the noise levels during some of the construction phase will be greater than those predicted in the EIA prepared for the outline planning notification.

Accordingly, we have decided to introduce a scheme of noise insulation for residential properties where the daytime levels of noise are likely to exceed 75 dB(A) Leq 12 hours and to offer to purchase (or insulate if preferred) those houses where levels are likely to exceed 80 d(A) Leq. About 30 houses in all are affected. The Property Services Agency, acting on behalf of the Ministry of Defence, will be in touch with the householders concerned shortly.

VC10 Tankers

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the time scale for the proposed VC10 tanker conversions; and what is the anticipated commencement date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The programme for converting the first batch of nine VC10s to tankers is nearing completion. We are considering a number of options for the conversion of further VC10 aircraft to the tanker role. No decision has yet been made and it is too soon to specify the programme time scale.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the Super VC10s and VC10s were purchased for the Royal Air Force for conversion to tanker aircraft;

(2) what is the total cost of the conversion programme for the Royal Air Force VC10s and Super VC10s;

(3) what is the length of the conversion programme for the Royal Air Force VC10 tankers;

(4) when the programme for conversion of the VC10s and Super VC10s purchased by the Royal Air Force began.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Nimrod

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the major servicing of Nimrods;

(2) what consideration has been given to the offer made by British Aerospace, Woodford, to examine the possibility of some special pricing arrangement if follow-on-aircraft can be provided for continuity of work in 1986; what response has been made; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when he expects to announce whether future work can be allocated to British Aerospace, Woodford; and if he will make a statement;

(4) whether the first major service account in respect of Nimrod aircraft has been completed by British Aerospace, Woodford, on time; and if he will make a statement;

(5) whether the second major service account in respect of Nimrod aircraft placed with British Aerospace, Woodford, is currently proceeding on time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The first Nimrod MR Mk 2 aircraft has already completed its major servicing at British Aerospace, Woodford, and has been returned to service on schedule. The second is currently undergoing its major servicing which, I understand, is also proceeding to programme. We have no plans at present to allocate any further major servicing work to BAe Woodford beyond that already scheduled. We intend, however, to review the situation again in the middle of next year and will at that time take the BAe offer into account.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the present efficiency of the GEC Avionics radar in the airborne early warning Nimrod.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The radar for the Nimrod AEW Mk3 is still under development. It has not yet reached its full performance potential.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on GEC's performance on the Nimrod airborne early warning contract.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As I told my hon. Friend on 26 November, at column 736, the Nimrod AEW programme causes the Government considerable anxiety. It remains a procurement exercise of which neither the Ministry nor industry can be particularly proud.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Nimrod airborne early warning aircraft he has ordered; and what is the latest estimated cost of each aircraft when completed.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Eleven aircraft. Final costs will depend on the outcome of our evaluation of GEC Avionics' proposals for the further development of the Nimrod AEW mission system avionics to an acceptable standard of operation.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he is considering accepting the Nimrod airborne early warning aircraft at a lower level of performance specification than originally required;

(2) what would be the cost to public funds of the cancellation of the Nimrod airborne early warning project.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 29 October, at column 474, and to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 9 December at column 545.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the effect on United Kingdom air defence if the Nimrod airborne early warning system is not in service by 1986.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Nimrod AEW system is planned to provide an important component of the United Kingdom's overall air defence capability and the United Kingdom's contribution to the NATO mixed AEW force. The delay in the introduction of the system is therefore a matter of concern. In the meantime, however, the RAF's Shackletons still provide a useful contribution to AEW capability and the air defence of the United Kingdom.

British Aerospace

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the performance of British Aerospace, Woodford, on Ministry of Defence contracts (a) as regards work standards and (b) as regards performance on completion dates and price, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence is generally satisfied with the work standards and overall performance of British Aerospace, Woodford.

14 Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many former service men of 14 Signals Regiment, who have been discharged since 3 February 1984, have been discharged under Queen's Regulations 1975, paragraph 9.414, and under which subsection of section 'D'.

Mr. Lee: This information could not be provided except at disproportionate costs.

9 Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many former service men of 9 Signals Regiment who have been discharged since 3 February 1984 have been discharged under Queen's Regulations 1975, paragraph 9.414; and under which subsection of section 'D'.

Mr. Lee: This information could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Royal Air Force (Aircrew)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men have entered the Royal Air Force college, Cranwell, to train as pilots since 31 December.

Mr. Lee: Two hundred and eighteen.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force pilots have graduated from Royal Air Force Valley since 31 December.

Mr. Lee: Eighty-four.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force pilots have graduated from Royal Air Force Shawbury since 31 December.

Mr. Lee: Thirty.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many of the 46 navigators and 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement, are currently serving with Royal Air Force Germany;

(2) how many of the 147 pilots and 69 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force this year were serving their last posting with Royal Air Force Germany;

(3) how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between 12 and 16 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Royal Air Force for non-completion of engagement;

(4) how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between eight and 12 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Royal Air Force for non-completion of engagement;

(5) how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between eight and 12 years;

(6) how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between four and eight years;

(7) how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served under four years;

(8) how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between 12 and 16 years;

(9) how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served less than four years; and what is the average amount that they have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(10) how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between four and eight years; and what is the average amount that they have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(11) how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between 12 and 16 years;

(12) how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served between eight and 12 years;

(13) how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served between four and eight years;

(14) how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served under four years;

(15) how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement in the current year have served between 12 and 16 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(16) how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served under four years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(17) how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between four and eight years; and what is the average amount they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(18) how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement in the current year have served between eight and 12 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement;

(19) how many of the 74 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement are serving currently with fast jet squadrons in (a) Royal Air Force Germany, (b) Strike Command or (c) fast jet training schools;

(20) how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year were serving with fast jet squadrons in (a) Royal Air Force Germany, (b) Strike Command or (c) fast jet training schools.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply shortly.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force pilots have graduated from Royal Air Force Finningley since 31 December.

Mr. Lee: Fifty-seven.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many navigators have graduated from Royal Air Force Finningley since 31 December.

Mr. Lee: Fifty-three.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen have entered the Royal Air Force College, Cranwell, since 31 December to train as navigators.

Mr. Lee: Seventy-two.

Signals Regiments

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the current strength of 14 Signals Regiment;

(2) what is the current strength of 9 Signals Regiment;

(3) what was the strength of 9 Signals Regiment on 2 February 1984;

(4) what was the strength of 14 Signals Regiment on 2 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: Details of the strengths of operational units are classified.

Royal Dockyards

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his Department's total work force in the Plymouth area; in what departments they work; and under whose overall responsibility they come;

(2) what is the total strength of his Department's work force in the Rosyth area; in what departments they work; and under whose immediate responsibility they come.

Mr. Lee: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the new training procedures for the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Mr. Stanley: Training in all branches of the armed forces is kept under review in an effort to identify possible improvements and a number of such improvements in the training of the UDR have either recently been set in hand or are about to be introduced, as follows:

a. The basic training of part-time members of the regiment is to be increased from nine to 14 days. The extra five days will be completed within the recruits' first three months of service.

b. Until now UDR officers, full or part-time, have attended a two-week course at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, but from next year selected permanent cadre officers will be eligible to attend the six-month standard military course taken by potential officers in the Regular Army.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 17 December 1985

PRIME MINISTER

King's College Hospital

Q50. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Prime Minister if she will make an official visit to King's college hospital.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Double Taxation

Q101. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Prime Minister if the Double Taxation Relief (Taxes on Income) (Canada) Order 1985 has yet come into force.

The Prime Minister: Not yet, but the intention is that it will come into force later this month and take effect for 1986 and subsequent years.

Engagements

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 December.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 December.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 December.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 December.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

ENVIRONMENT

Water (Metering)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the progress of his inquiry into domestic water metering.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) on 11 December at column 668.

Housing Defects Act

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which have repurchased homes under section 3(5) of the Housing Defects Act, indicating the number of properties involved in each case.

Mr. John Patten: In my reply of 30 October, at column 533, to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald), I gave the numbers of dwellings then known to have been repurchased under the Housing Defects Act. Seventythree local authorities in England have now reported that a total of 541 dwellings were purchased during the first half of the current financial year. I regret that information on the number of repurchases specifically under section 3(5) of the Act is not currently available.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent consideration has been given to a home counties weighting being introduced in calculating rate support grant for counties such as Hertfordshire.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have in the past considered representations on this subject from a number of the home counties. My predecessor wrote to my hon. Friend on 31 January. We have received no further representations from Hertfordshire since that date.

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent consideration has been given to rate support grant for counties such as Hertfordshire being no longer based on rateable values as a measure of ability to pay rates.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 requires block grant to be calculated according to the gross rateable value of each authority. However, we have over the past year been conducting wide-ranging studies of the whole local government finance system. We hope to publish our proposals around the turn of the year. There will then be extensive consultations.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial targets he has set the Ordnance Survey for the financial year which ends on 31 March 1986; and when they were set.

Mrs. Rumbold: After several months of discussion, the following targets have been set:

1. to recover 35 per cent. of the total cost of core activities;
2. to maximise revenue on commercial activities and to recover not less than 110 per cent. of total costs of that category;
3. to recover 100 per cent. of the total cost of both public sector repayment and overseas business categories.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet set a financial target for the Ordnance Survey for the financial years beginning on 1 April 1986, 1 April 1987 and 1 April 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: Targets for the three years to March 1989 are currently under discussion and an announcement will be made when they are finalised.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about future arrangements for the management of the Ordnance Survey.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Following discussion with the Ordnance Survey advisory board I have decided to set up a management board for the Ordnance Survey composed of executive and non-executive directors. It will replace the present advisory board. The advisory board agreed that a management board was the most suitable structure for the Ordnance Survey, but recommended that the new management board should have an independent chairman. After careful consideration, I have concluded that in the case of the Ordnance Survey this would create needless problems of accountability to Ministers and Parliament. I have therefore decided that the Director General, who is the accounting officer, should be chairman of the management board and report directly to Ministers as at present. In this way the chain of command and responsibilities remain clear and unaltered. The executive directors will be five Ordnance Survey senior managers.

I am pleased to announce that Mrs. Jean Denton, Mr. David Feeny and Professor Jean Millar have agreed to serve as independent non-executive directors of Ordnance Survey. They will bring valuable private sector experience into the management of Ordnance Survey. They will also have direct access to departmental Ministers as necessary.

The management board will be primarily responsible for reviewing policy, planning and the monitoring of performance in order to ensure that Ordnance Survey:

1. continues to flourish as an efficient and cost-effective organisation, satisfying current and future user needs;
2. meets the financial objectives set by the Secretary of State;
3. reduces Exchequer support by increased involvement in the commercial market place;
4. remains in the forefront of technological change.

Ministers, however, will continue to have final responsibility for ensuring that Ordnance Survey gives value for money and is set challenging and realistic performance targets.

In particular, one of the early matters which the board will consider will be the creation of a sub-committee, composed of independent and Ordnance Survey members, to advise generally on scientific and technical matters, and with particular reference to the needs of digital mapping. Such a group was recommended by the advisory board and accepted by Ordnance Survey.

I believe the new arrangements will provide Ordnance Survey with better strategic direction and will contribute to the sound development of the organisation. I would like finally to express my gratitude to the members of the advisory board for their good work and advice over the past three years, and to thank them for their services.

GLC (Scientific Services)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision is to be made for the work of the scientific services branch of the Greater London council after the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: This is a matter for the boroughs and other successor bodies. I understand that it is on the agenda for the London Co-ordinating Committee meeting on 18 December.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) in how many planning appeals decided between July 1983 and September 1985 he did not accept the inspector's report where the number of homes proposed involved (a) 200 to 300, (b) 300 to 400, (c) 400 to 475, and (d) 475 or more;

(2) how many planning appeals decided between July 1983 and September 1985 involved the proposed construction of (a) 100 homes or more, (b) 200 homes or more, (c) 300 homes or more, (d) 400 homes or more and (e) 475 homes or more.

Mr. Tracey: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals involving residential development were decided between July 1983 and September 1985; how many of these were successful; and in how many cases he did not accept the inspector's report.

Mr. Tracey: The information is only readily available for the calendar year 1984. In that period 5,340 appeals involving residential development were decided; 1,311 of these were successful and seven were decided by my right hon. Friend contrary to inspectors' recommendations. It should be noted, however, that only about 5 per cent. of all appeals are decided by my right hon. Friend following submission of an inspector's report.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals were decided between July 1983 and September 1985; and in how many of these cases he did not accept the inspector's report.

Mr. Tracey: 28,161 appeals were decided in the period July 1983 to September 1985. Thirty-eight were decided by my right hon. Friend contrary to inspector's recommendations. It should be noted, however, that only about 5 per cent. of all appeals are decided by my right hon. Friend following submission of an inspector's report.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) further to the answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 589, to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn, if he will state why lead is not regarded as the most suitable containment material for nuclear waste; why no studies have been carried out by his Department; and if he will make a cost and efficiency comparison between lead, mild steel and stainless steel, and concrete as containment material for nuclear waste;

(2) further to the answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 589, to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn, if he will give further details of the studies into mild steel and stainless steel containers for nuclear waste.

Mrs. Rumbold: Lead is not regarded as suitable containment material because of its high commodity value, its relatively poor mechanical strength and the pollution hazards that may arise from its use in the long term. In these circumstances we have seen no need to initiate detailed studies on the use of lead containers and the question of making cost and efficiency comparisons between lead and other materials consequently does not arise.

Studies funded by my Department and the European Community on the corrosion of carbon steel external packaging for high-level radioactive waste have been carried out and a report of the first phase, which has been completed, is publicly available from the British Library. Research and development work is continuing with the support of European Community funding. A three-year programme is under way to study the use of steel containers for intermediate-level waste with joint funding from my Department and NIREX.

Wildlife Inspectorate

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement about his Department's Wildlife Inspectorate.

Mr. Waldegrave: I informed the House on 12 December 1984 that there had been serious allegations against members of the Wildlife Inspectorate. With the full co-operation of my Department these allegations were investigated by the police.

The Director of Public Prosecutions concluded on the evidence available that no criminal offence had been committed, and advised that no further action should be taken. As I told the House on 21 May, I called for a thorough review of the management and structure of the inspectorate. Subsequently, when the threat of a private prosecution had been dropped, I also asked the director of establishments to arrange for a full investigation into the specific complaints which had been made.

The investigating officer has now considered all the evidence made available to the Department, including transcripts of various tapes. He is satisfied on the evidence that the inspector concerned did not prompt or encourage others to make a criminal entry into private property, nor did he indicate that he would be prepared to supply unregistered birds to be planted on a private individual in order to obtain a conviction. The investigating officer considers, however, that there is evidence that the inspector was indiscreet and acted improperly in the way he pursued his discussions with other people, and that this exposed the Department to criticism. There were also faults of supervision on the part of his superior officer. The necessary disciplinary procedures have been instituted.

As a result of the management review, steps will be taken to strengthen the management of the inspectorate, to separate enforcement from the duties of normal inspection, and to improve the instructions and guidance which wildlife inspectors must follow.

The inspectorate plays a major and positive role in bird protection. I am satisfied that these further measures will strengthen management control and improve the inspectorate's performance, so that it is better able to deal with the increased volume and greater sensitivity of its work in bird protection, and with the new challenges arising from the implementation of CITES.

GLC Precept

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a Green Paper setting out options for 1986-87 to replicate the equalisation effect of the Greater London council precept, showing the options for calculating contributions from boroughs of different kinds and options for distribution to boroughs.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: No. There has been a two-year period of consultation with local government on this issue. I will announce tomorrow my decisions on the London arrangements within the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement.

WALES

Hospitals (Children)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those hospitals in Wales that have separate outpatient facilities for children.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not held centrally.

Social Workers

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many social workers are employed by each local authority in Wales; and what proportion of these have a certificate of qualification of social work.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The numbers of social workers employed by each local authority in Wales at 30 September 1984, is given in the table. Information about qualifications is available centrally only for whole-time staff.

Local authority	*Number of whole-time social workers	Percentage of whole-time social workers with a certificate of qualification†*	*Number of part-time social workers
Clwyd	163	81·0	12
Dyfed	123	78·9	—
Gwent	186	76·9	13
Gwynedd	91	64·8	17
Mid Glamorgan	224	75·4	27
Powys	38	55·3	2
South Glamorgan	194	90·2	24
West Glamorgan	149	62·4	18

*The figures include only those staff designated as senior social workers, social workers or community workers.

†This includes the certificate of qualification in social work (CQSW) of the CCETSW and also the following equivalent qualifications: qualifications in medical or psychiatric social work or family case-work obtained by specialist or applied social studies course (including the certificate of the Institute of Medical Social Workers); the certificate or subsequently the letter of recognition issued by the Central Training Council in Child Care; the certificate in social work of the Council for Training in Social Work or qualification as a probation officer.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Latent Damages

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Attorney-General what action has been taken on the proposals of the Law Reform Committee on latent damages.

The Solicitor-General: Following publication, on 29 November 1984, of the Law Reform Committee's 24th report on latent damage (Cmnd. 9390), the Lord Chancellor's Department consulted a broad range of interested groups. On 18 June this year the Lord Chancellor announced that the Government proposed to introduce legislation based on the committee's recommendations. It is hoped to introduce a Bill later in the current Session.

Land Registry

Mr. Rooker asked the Attorney-General if he will arrange for an office of the Land Registry to be opened in Birmingham; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Land Registry recognises that its future commitments may well be met by acquiring premises in new locations.

Preliminary inquiries are being made, but at this time there are no firm proposals.

SCOTLAND

Reprocessing Plant (Dounreay)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many objections, inclusive of petition signatories, he had received in respect of the proposed European demonstration fast reactor fuel reprocessing plant at Dounreay by 1 December.

Mr. Ancram: Up to 13 December there have been 662 individual objections to the proposal. In addition, there have been approximately 2,750 signatures to various petitions. It is not known how many individuals have signed one or more of the petitions.

There have also been 761 representations in support of the proposed development.

School Meals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate, for primary and secondary maintained schools in schools in Scotland, the number of pupils receiving free school meals where the entitlement derives from families' (a) receipt of supplementary benefit, (b) receipt of family income supplement and (c) local authority discretionary powers.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures for each year since 1975 for primary and secondary maintained schools in Scotland for the total number of pupils in attendance, the number of pupils taking school meals on payment and free and the number of pupils bringing their own food.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information taken from the annual school meal census is as follows:

Year	Number of pupils in attendance on census day		Number of pupils taking meals on payment		Number of pupils receiving free meals		Number of pupils taking own food
1975	933,675		343,487		121,974		*
1976	911,143		345,438		161,801		*
1977	930,119		335,839		117,785		*
1978	909,093		269,532		155,711		*
1979	899,941		286,622		142,986		*
1980	876,816		258,690		122,618		*
1981	867,786		214,956		114,711		71,793
1982	823,646		191,665		124,547		73,551
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1983	434,043	341,440	108,470	66,423	82,066	43,053	61,314	18,409
1984	402,523	317,879	106,814	72,471	80,846	41,545	60,004	17,104
1985	399,619	311,737	103,298	75,948	86,570	43,072	61,751	14,052

Note: The information on the numbers, separately, of primary and secondary school pupils is not available prior to 1983 and the figures for 1975 to 1982 include nursery and special schools.

* Prior to 1981 statistics of pupils taking their own food were not collected centrally.

CIVIL SERVICE

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Chapman asked the Minister for the Civil Service how many non-departmental public bodies are currently in existence; and when the annual list of such bodies will be published.

Mr. Luce: On 1 April 1985, there were 1,653 non-departmental public bodies. That is 28 fewer than last year and over 500 fewer than in 1979. These bodies are listed in "Public Bodies 1985" published today. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has given further consideration to the future of the Woolwich ferry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: The Woolwich ferry currently provides a useful link in east London's transport infrastructure.

My initial view had been that responsibility for the ferry should pass to the two boroughs between which it plies. However, I am now persuaded that this arrangement would not be satisfactory as the ferry has an importance that goes much wider then the two borough areas. I have decided, therefore, that it would be more appropriate for my Department to take responsibility for the ferry. I would propose to invite the London borough of Newham to act as my agent to employ the necessary staff to maintain and operate the ferry service.

I have written to the boroughs of Newham and Greenwich advising them of my decision so that detailed arrangements can be concluded.

GLC (Flyovers and Tunnels)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what approaches he has received from London borough councils concerning the retention as a single coherent unit of that part of the Greater London council engineering staff and equipment concerned with the maintenance and servicing of flyovers and tunnels for vehicles and pedestrians; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I have written to the hon. Member.

Dartford Tunnel

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the reply of 29 November, Official Report, column 717, when he will be announcing the terms and conditions under which proposals will be invited for a third crossing at Dartford.

Mrs. Chalker: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend on 29 November. However, I have recently appointed Messrs. Mott, Hay and Anderson as consultants to assemble the basic data relevant to the provision of additional capacity at Dartford.

Temporary Spare Wheels

Mr. Ian Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport what tests have been carried out on temporary spare wheels for passenger cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Transport and Road Research Laboratory tests on temporary spare wheels have shown that a car's braking and cornering abilities remain satisfactory under normal conditions but if the car is driven at its limits of braking or cornering it could be more difficult to control than if fitted with a normal wheel. A temporary spare wheel should not be used at a speed exceeding 50 mph and must be replaced by a normal wheel as soon as possible.

Mr. Ian Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport what response he has made to the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe regulations on vehicles fitted with temporary spare tyres and wheels.

Mrs. Chalker: In the near future we shall be consulting on draft regulations to require vehicles supplied with temporary spare tyres to meet the requirements of ECE regulation 64.

Traffic Lights A5120-M1

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the traffic lights on the A5120 junction 12 with the M1 to be operative; what has caused the delay in their operation; and what has been the cost of installation.

Mrs. Chalker: The signals, which cost £42,000 to install, should be in operation by Christmas. There have been problems with the computer control mechanism.

Leighton Linsdale Bypass

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether, following the letter from the Minister of State of 5 December, to the hon. Member for Bedfordshire, South-West about the Leighton Linsdale bypass, it remains his policy to give a 100 per cent. grant for this scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The letter sent to Bedfordshire county council on 5 December drew attention to defects in its orders for the bypass and invited it to consider how to remedy them. My right hon. Friend has for the moment deferred a decision on the scheme following the public inquiries held in the summer. The approval in principle of its grant application still stands, but payment of the grant will depend on the satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures for the scheme.

Accident Statistics

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the average total cost to public funds of a nighttime fatality on an unlit stretch of motorway in 1984; and what was the average total cost for a lit stretch of motorway;

(2) what was the average total cost to public funds of a daytime fatality on a motorway in 1984.

Mrs. Chalker: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatalities there were in each of the past three years (a) on an unlit stretch of a motorway at night, (b) on a lit stretch of a motorway at night and (c) during daytime on a motorway.

Mrs. Chalker: The information is as follows:

Motorway fatalities by lighting conditions: Great Britain

	1982	1983	1984
Unlit, at night	62	54	61
Lit, at night	40	24	33
Daytime	104	109	117

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were killed on the United Kingdom's roads through the actions of drunken drivers in each of the past three years and to date in 1985.

Mrs. Chalker: Causes of accidents are not identified in accident reports. The numbers of deaths in road accidents, in which a driver was positively breath-tested or refused or failed to provide a sample of breath, were as follows:

Death in drinking and driving accidents: Great Britain

	Number
1982	451
1983	340
1984	388

Figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Channel Fixed Li[illegible]

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the implications of the ban on commercial vehicle movements during Sundays and bank holidays in France for the projected level of use of such a link by heavy goods vehicles, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to the reply, 9 December 1985, c. 450]: The Government's assessment of the fixed link of necessity takes account of this ban which presently affects the pattern of utilisation of the ferries. But I view this French restriction with great concern, and will be raising it with them in the context of the Channel fixed link.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Meals

16. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to seek to improve the nutritional content of school meals.

Mr. Chris Patten: The nutritional content of the school meals which they are responsible for providing is a matter for the individual local education authorities. An authority's school meals organiser can get advice from a wide range of authoritative sources. I believe they are well aware of the importance of the nutritional factor.

Youth Training Scheme

18. Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will next meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss the youth training scheme.

Mr. Chris Patten: There are regular contacts between the Department of Education and Science, the Department of Employment and the Manpower Services Commission at many levels about matters of mutual interest including YTS.

Freedom of Speech

21. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he is having with the authorities at universities and other educational institutions about measures they propose to take to ensure freedom of speech within their premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean).

Departmental Publications

22. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his Department's publication, "Selected National Education Systems: a Description of Six Countries as an Aid to International Comparisons."

Sir Keith Joseph: The Department makes various international statistical comparisons to aid policy evolution and publishes, periodically, statistical bulletins which summarise the work undertaken. Comparisons of this nature are never straightforward and the differences between the educational systems of the countries concerned need to be well understood. This booklet has been produced as an aid to all making such comparisons.

Teachers (Pay and Conditions)

23. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science which trade unions representing teachers have met him to discuss pay and conditions since the beginning of the current pay dispute in the teaching profession; how many meetings between him and these trade unions have taken place; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Since February 1985 I have had formal meetings with national representatives of all six school teacher unions, at their request, to discuss—but not negotiate upon—a range of matters touching upon pay and conditions. There have been, with one such union or another, 12 such meetings.

Teachers' Pay Dispute

24. Mr. Neillst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current teachers' pay dispute.

25. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

27. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

31. Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what expectation he has of an early settlement to the teachers' pay dispute.

34. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

37. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

38. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

52. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

54. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

56. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

66. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

67. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the present teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo), the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock), my hon. Friends the Members for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst) and for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Howarth), the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall) and my hon. Friends the Members for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Merchant), for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) and for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer).

45. Dr. Mawhinney asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate how many teacher-days teaching has been lost nationally in the current teachers' dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 22 November to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller). I regret that the information available centrally does not enable any reliable estimate to be made.

63. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the teachers' dispute; and if he has any plans to make more Government money available before Christmas as a contribution towards the resolution of the dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo), the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock), my hon. Friends the Members for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst) and for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Howarth), the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall) and my hon. Friends the Members for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Merchant), for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) and for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer).

The Government remain ready to see very substantial sums of additional money spent on teachers' pay in return for a bargain which would secure progress towards its objectives for better schools. So far, however, the unions have refused to seize the opportunity presented by the conditional investment of an additional £1,250 million over four years.

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether, in the light of the teachers' pay dispute, he will hold discussions with vice chancellors of universities and directors of polytechnics as to what effect this dispute may have on performance at A-levels in 1986 and on the position of potential students in places of higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Although the three teacher unions engaged in disruption claim that their action is not directed against pupils sitting public examinations in 1986, there can be no doubt that some pupils' preparation for those examinations has been disrupted. I consider that indefensible. I understand that it is normal practice for universities and polytechnics to take into account in considering admissions, any particular problems reported by head teachers as having affected a pupil's performance in GCE A-level examinations, and that this would apply to reports of industrial action.

Students (University Placings)

26. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many applicants, whose principal qualifications were Scottish Examination Board certificates, were refused admission to a first choice university place in England and Wales.

Mr. Walden: The Universities' Central Council on Admissions is not able to provide this information at present but may be able to in the future.

Class Sizes and Pupil-Teacher Ratios

28. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the average class size and pupil-teacher ratio in (a) 1979 and (b) the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The average size of classes taught by one teacher in maintained primary and secondary schools in England improved over the period 1979 to 1985; from 25.9 to 24.9 in primary schools and from 21.0 to 20.4 in secondary schools. Pupil to teacher ratios also improved: within primary schools from 23.1 to 22.2 and within the secondary schools from 16.7 to 16.1. The overall pupil to teacher ratio improved from 18.9 to 17.8. The Government recognise that their policies for better schools imply some further limited improvement in the overall pupil to teacher ratio but the extent and pace of this improvement will depend on future public expenditure plans, changes in the cost of employing staff, and the staffing decisions of individual local authorities.

Concessionary School Transport

29. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is satisfied with the working of current policies for concessionary school transport.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to amend the provisions on school transport in the Education Act 1944.

Open University

30. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will next meet the vice-chancellor of the Open university to discuss the level of student fees.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend met the vice-chancellor with the chairman of the university's council on 9 December. A range of issues was discussed including the level of student fees.

71. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received regarding the problems of admission of new applicants fo places at the Open university.

Mr. Walden: Four letters on this subject have been received from hon. Members, and the issue has also been raised in recent discussions with the Open university.

University Funding

32. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on current and projected funding for the university sector.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. Friend made on 12 November, at columns 104-108, in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley).

Selective and Non-Selective Systems (Comparisons)

33. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to him to compare the achievements of pupils and the cost of education in selective and non-selective systems.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department regularly collects data giving information on examination results for individual local authorities but not for individual schools. Reliable comparisons of achievements in selective and non-selective systems require data, which are not available, on the social background factors for pupils and their attainments on entry to individual schools. Data on costs for individual schools or school systems are not collected by the Department.

University Research Staff

35. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of university research staff are on short-term contracts.

Mr. Walden: This information is not collected centrally.

Higher Education

36. Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what comparisons are available to him of the proportion of young people entering higher education in the United Kingdom and other European Economic Community countries, respectively.

Mr. Walden: Readily available information is shown in the following table:

All new entrants to higher education as a percentage of the relevant young person's age group

	Year	*Age group	New entrants to higher education per relevant population†
United Kingdom	1983	18-20	‡30·1
Belgium	1981	18-20	‖12·9
Denmark	1982	—	35·3
France	1982	18-20	34·1
Germany, Federal Republic of	1982	19-21	27·8
Ireland	1982	—	24·6
Italy	1983	19-21	27·6
Netherlands	1982	18-20	26·1
Spain	1980	—	28·3

— Not available.
* Age group encompassing at least 80 per cent. of new entrants.
† New entrants (all ages) to full-time and part-time higher education as a percentage of the average population in the most relevant age range
‡ Part-time new entrants included to aid international comparisons. Overseas students are excluded, as are postgraduates and others with higher education qualifications. Excludes students studying for higher education qualifications outside of the public education system other than nursing and other paramedical students at DHSS establishments. If included the United Kingdom figure would be around 40 per cent.
‖ University only.

58. Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of 18-year-olds took up places in higher education in the last year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Walden: The Department's usual way of monitoring participation in higher education is the age participation index. This is defined as the number of full-time and sandwich home domiciled initial entrants to higher education aged under 21 expressed as a percentage of the average population of 18 and 19-year-olds. Initial entrants are those entering a higher education course for the first time. The age participation index for Great Britain in 1984 was 13·7.

59. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to meet the University Grants Committee to discuss the level of financial support for universities in the next five years.

61. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to meet the University Grants Committee to discuss their responses to the Green Paper, "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s," on the amount of research being undertaken by universities.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no meeting with the University Grants Committee arranged at present.

69. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the Green Paper on higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no plans to make a statement about responses to the Green Paper on higher education until the Government make the further statement of policy on higher education promised in the Green Paper itself.

City and Guilds Vocational Examination Schemes

39. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has yet met the new director general of City and Guilds to discuss new vocational examination schemes.

Mr. Chris Patten: No. The City and Guilds of London Institute is an independent body established by royal charter and is free to develop new vocational certification schemes to meet the needs which it identifies. Officers of the Department and Her Majesty's inspectors, however, have regular contacts with the institute at all levels; and the director-general is a member of the review group on vocational qualifications. Any request for a meeting from the chairman and director of the institute would, of course, be sympathetically considered.

Nordic Language and Culture

40. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is satisfied that there will continue to be adequate provision in British higher education for study and teaching of the language and culture of Nordic countries.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend knows of no special grounds for concern about the adequacy of provision in this area. Earlier this year the University Grants Committee invited universities to review the scope for rationalising small departments in all disciplines and offered guidance on the considerations involved. As a follow-up to that advice, and as part of its current planning exercise, the committee will be giving attention to future provision for Scandinavian and other less widely studied languages and cultures.

Nursery Schools, Liverpool

41. Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many nursery school places have been established in Liverpool during 1983-84 and 1984-85, respectively.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department does not have information in the form requested. In January 1984, there were 5,630 full-time and part-time pupils in nursery schools and classes maintained by Liverpool LEA; and in January 1985, 5,804.

Lunchtime Supervision (Funding)

42. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the capacity of local authorities to put to use the new money being made available for lunchtime supervision of schoolchildren.

Mr. Chris Patten: From discussions which the Department has had with representatives of the Association of County Councils and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities we expect that local education authorities will be able to take advantage of the additional resources being made available to assist them to introduce reliable and adequate arrangements for midday supervision. It is too early to predict the pace at which local education authorities will be able to introduce new arrangements.

Special Schools (Governing Bodies)

43. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the number of non-maintained special schools that are refusing to comply with the regulations on parental representation on governing bodies; and what action his Department takes when this happens.

Mr. Chris Patten: According to the available information, no non-maintained special school has refused to comply with the requirement that there should be a parent representative on its governing body.

Burnham Committee

44. Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the implications of the recent reconstitution of the Burnham committee teachers' panel for the prospects for a settlement of the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: In effecting this reconstitution my purpose was not to influence the conduct of the current pay negotiations but to ensure that the teachers' panel reflected the significant changes in union membership that had taken place over recent years.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

46. Mr. Jack Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the programme for the introduction of the new general certificate of secondary education is on schedule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Preparations for the introduction of the GCSE are proceeding according to the timetable set by my right hon. Friend in June 1984. The Secondary Examinations Council and the GCSE examining groups are well on course in their plans for the start of the national programme of in-service training in January next year.

Graduates (Projections)

47. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to meet the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the impact on industry of the projection of future graduates in the Green Paper; "The Development of Higher Education in the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The higher education Green Paper was discussed at a meeting of the National Economic Development Council on 5 November. My right hon. Friend and representatives of the CBI were present. The CBI is also planning to give my right hon. Friend a formal response to the Green Paper shortly.

Student Maintenance (Deeds of Covenant)

48. Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied with the operation of deeds of covenant in relation to students' maintenance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The operation of deeds of covenant are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. However, my understanding is that many parents choose to pay their parental contribution to their student child's grant by means of a deed of covenant, rather than direct to the child, because of the tax advantages of this method of payment. It is, of course, for each family to decide on the method of payment which is most beneficial in their particular circumstances.

Nutrition Courses

49. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to increase the number of in-service training courses on nutrition offered by his Department.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

16 and 17-year-olds (Financial Support)

50. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to extend financial support to 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 29 November 1985 at column 689.

Nutrition

51. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will earmark additional finance for local education authorities for publicising nutrition problems and promoting healthy eating in schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: No. The level of resources for the provision of education about nutrition and related matters is for local education authorities to determine within the total resouces available to them.

57. Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he intends to take to seek to ensure that local education authorities act on the findings of the recent reports by the National Advisory Committee on Nutrition Education and the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food.

Mr. Chris Patten: Earlier this year a discussion paper by Her Majesty's Inspectorate, "Home Economics from 5 to 16", was given wide circulation. It drew attention to the importance of developing healthy attitudes and behaviour in relation to nutrition and included reference to the dietary advice contained in the report of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (COMA). The Department has also drawn the attention of the school examining boards to the COMA report and asked that they take its recommendations into account in their home economics syllabuses. It is for individual local education authorities to determine their response to nationally-available guidance on nutrition.

University Staff-Student Ratio

53. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will indicate what average student academic staff ratio he expects for the university sector for the coming year.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister of State gave him on 12 December 1985.

Women Students

55. Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has of the trend in applications to universities or polytechnics by women students.

Mr. Walden: Over the last five years the numbers and percentages of women applicants to United Kingdom universities through the Universities' Central Council on Admissions scheme have been as follows:

Year of entry	Women applicants	Percentage women applicants
1981	66,723	39·9
1982	69,967	40·8
1983	71,072	41·1
1984	72,661	41·8
1985	75,110	42·5

Similar figures for polytechnics will be available in due course for students entering in 1986 and thereafter.

School Leavers (Statistics)

60. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of school leavers with three A levels continued on to a first degree course at a university or polytechnic in the last year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Walden: It is estimated that 65 per cent. of English school leavers in 1983-84 with three or more A-level passes intended directly to pursue a full-time degree course.

Pupils (Qualifications)

62. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many pupils in maintained schools left school with no qualifications in the most recent year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Chris Patten: It is estimated that 70,300 (9·9 per cent.) of all leavers from English maintained secondary schools in 1983-84 did not hold a graded result on GCE or CSE examinations.

Open University Student Association

64. Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Open university's student association to discuss funding of the university.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Universities (Funding Support)

65. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to seek to set any limit on the amount of private funds universities are allowed to raise.

Mr. Walden: No.

Parental Choice

68. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied with the operation of the Education Act 1980 in affording parents a choice of schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Yes.

Teachers Appraisal (Inner City Areas)

70. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to investigate problems of teacher assessment in inner city areas.

Mr. Chris Patten: I am very conscious that the appraisal of teachers' performance will have to have careful regard to the circumstances in which teachers work, including the age, ability, aptitude and social background of their pupils. This is one of a range of important questions which I would like to be under investigation now as part of an education support grant project into teacher appraisal. This project would have started in April had it not been blocked by the opposition of the teacher unions.

Business Skills and Taxation

72. Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to incorporate into the core curriculum practical knowledge of business skills and taxation.

Mr. Chris Patten: Detailed decisions on the school curriculum are for the schools themselves, but my right hon. Friend has made clear our view that it is desirable that all pupils should be equipped by the age of 16 with some economic awareness and understanding. We are continuing to encourage the development of links between schools and employers, a process which will be reinforced by the activities associated with Industry Year 1986.

Pupils (Special Needs)

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list in the Official Report a breakdown of pupils of compulsory school age with special educational needs being educated in mainstream schools under the headings (a) curriculum types and (b) aspects of disability as these appear on form 7, by listing the number of pupils in each category and the percentage of all children with special educational needs represented in each category (i) for England and (ii) for each local education authority in England at the latest date for which figures are available and for January 1984 if different; and if he will indicate whether the figures refer to pupils with statements under the 1981 Act or to pupils for whom statements are pending or appropriate.

Mr. Chris Patten: I shall write to the hon. Member.

ENERGY

Fuel Supplies

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Energy* what proportion of Britain's energy needs is met by (a) oil, (b) gas, (c) coal, (d) nuclear fuel and (e) other sources; and what were the figures in 1979, 1974, 1970, 1964 and 1959.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The following table gives the proportions of primary energy consumption met by each of the fuels, based on the volume of coal or coal equivalent. The use of fuels for non-energy purposes is included.

per cent

	1959	1964	1970	1974	1979	1983	1984*
Petroleum†	25·1	35·3	47·2	48·2	41·7	36·7	45·7
Natural gas	—	0·1	5·1	14·8	19·1	22·9	23·5
Coal‡	74·1	62·8	44·4	33·0	34·9	34·2	24·2
Nuclear electricity	0·2	1·1	2·7	3·4	3·7	5·5	6·0
Other	0·6	0·6	0·7	0·6	0·6	0·7	0·6

* The proportions for 1984 were affected by the coal industry dispute.
† Excluding petroleum for marine bunkers.
‡ Including other solid fuels.
Hydro-electricity, excluding pumped storage.

British Gas Corporation

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much has been paid into or out of the Exchequer in respect of (a) the British Gas Corporation and (b) the electricity supply industry in each year since 1975.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Payments of corporation tax and gas levy by the British Gas Corporation since 1981-82 are as follows. The electricity supply industry paid no corporation tax over the period from 1975-76 to 1984-85, and the British Gas Corporation paid neither corporation tax nor gas levy from 1975-76 to 1980-81.

British Gas Corporation

Financial Year	Corporation Tax £ million	Gas Levy £ million
1981-82	154	383
1982-83	196	471
1983-84	234	522
1984-85	131	500

In addition, the industries pay a range of general taxes levied by the Government on United Kingdom industry generally which are not separately indentifiable.

Net repayments of Government loans, and interest on outstanding loans, are as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Net repayment of Government loans		Interest on outstanding loans
	BGC	ESI	BGC	ESI
1975-76	77	(95)	136	272
1976-77	136	320	125	301
1977-78	510	110	106	281
1978-79	606	7	59	296
1979-80	109	(837)	7	274
1980-81	—	(296)	—	412
1981-82	—	449	—	464
1982-83	—	(25)	—	387
1983-84	—	857	—	379
1984-85	—	553	—	295

( ) represents additional borrowing.

Since the full repayment of Government loans in 1979-80, the British Gas Corporation has been investing funds surplus to its requirements on interest-earning deposit with the public sector. These remain in the ownership of the corporation.

Gas and Electricity

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the estimated income from standing charges for gas and electricity for each year since 1979.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The estimated incomes from standing charges for the British Gas Corporation and the electricity supply industry in England and Wales are some £600 million and £550 million, respectively, per year at present. Information in the detail requested is not readily available, and is a matter for the industries. I have therefore asked the chairmen to write to the hon. Member.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Falkland Islands

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the cost of building the new Falklands hospital per head of (a) the normal resident population of the Falkland Islands and (b) the total number of people who could use its facilities.

Mr. Raison: The cost of the new hospital will be about £4,500 per head of the civilian population. This figure taken in isolation is misleading, however, because the hospital has been designed to cater for the needs of both the civilian and military communities, and includes such facilities as an operating theatre and intensive care unit. The cost per head of the total number of people who could use its facilities cannot be given because it is the policy not to disclose information about force levels.

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Falkland Islands Company has been asked to contribute to the cost of the new hospital in Port Stanley.

Mr. Raison: No.

EMPLOYMENT

Temporary Employment and Training Schemes

Mr. Pendry asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers of persons in Tameside on temporary employment or training schemes.

Mr. Alan Clark: None of our employment or training schemes is temporary. Some 6,000 people were taking advantage of the opportunities provided by the measures in Tameside at the end of November.

British Dental Association

Mr. Weetch asked the Paymaster General whether the British Dental Association is registered as a trade union with the certification officer.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The British Dental Association is a listed trade union and has been issued with a certificate of independence.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General if he will list all parliamentary constituencies in which unemployment has been reduced by 5 per cent. or more since September 1984, giving the percentage reduction in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am sending a copy of a computer printout giving the requested information, which is also available from the Library. The printout shows those parliamentary constituencies where unemployment has been reduced by 5 per cent. or more between September 1984 and November 1985. The change will be affected by seasonal factors.

Castleford

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General (1) how many persons were employed in the Castleford travel-to-work area in the glass manufacturing industry in each of the last five years;

(2) many persons were employed in the Castleford travel-to-work area in manufacturing industries, excluding glass manufacture, in each of the last five years;

(3) how many persons were employed in the Castleford travel-to-work area in each of the last five years in the coal mining industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: Comprehensive employment statistics for travel-to-work areas are not available except for dates when censuses of employment are taken. In the six years from 1978 to 1984, these censuses have been taken triennially. The available information for the years 1978 and 1981 is given in the following table. More up-to-date employment figures for travel-to-work areas will become available following the publication of the 1984 census of employment in the spring of 1986.

Information for the glass manufacturing industry alone cannot be given without indirectly disclosing confidential information relating to individual undertakings. The table therefore gives figures for a broader group of industries comprising the manufacture of glass, bricks, fireclay and refractory goods, pottery, cement abrasives and other building materials.

Employees in employment in the Castleford travel-to-work area:
(thousands)

Industry and Order or Minimum List Heading (MLH) of the Standard Industrial Classification 1968	June 1978	September 1981
Coal mining (MLH 101)	12·3	12·4
Bricks, pottery, glass, etc. (Order XVI)	4·0	3·1
Manufacturing industries (Orders III-XIX) excluding Order XVI	14·1	12·7

As results of the 1978 census are not available for the new travel-to-work areas announced last year, figures are given for the travel-to-work areas as defined before last year's review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Tactical Options Manual

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether any advice was given by legal staff in his Department to the Association of Chief Police Officers before it produced the tactical options manual;

(2) if the tactical options manual prepared by the Association of Chief Police Officers is available to the Metropolitan police; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he has approved the tactical options manual prepared by the Association of Chief Police Officers for use in the Metropolitan police area;

(4) what legal advice and guidance he gives to police forces on possible police tactics (a) in the Metropolitan police area and (b) generally.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The tactical options manual was issued by ACPO in 1983 with the approval of my noble Friend Lord Whitelaw who was then Home Secretary. No legal advice was given to ACPO by the Home Office. The manual is available to the Metropolitan police as to other forces. The guidance it contains is subject to the overriding principle, set out in section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967, that the police shall use no more force than is reasonable in the circumstances.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list his responsibilities in relation to the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The purpose of the association is to protect the interests and co-ordinate the views of chief police officers. The costs of its secretariat are met from common police services funds, which are provided jointly by central Government and the police authorities. My right hon. Friend has no other responsibilities in relation to the association.

Advancement of Women

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he will take to implement paragraph 231 of the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for women;

(2) what steps he is taking following the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for women to establish national machinery to deal with violence against women, and to provide institutionalised forms of assistance to women victims.

Mr. Waddington: Paragraph 231 of the Nairobi declaration is concerned with violence against women and children. My right hon. Friend's primary responsibility in this connection is for the adequacy of the criminal law. There is a substantial body of law dealing with violent crime and the protection of women and children from unwanted sexual attention. During the past decade, much has been done to improve the law in this area; most recently, the Sexual Offences Act 1985 increased the maximum penalties for attempted rape to life imprisonment and for indecent assault on a female to ten years. We shall continue to keep the adequacy of the law under review.

Compensation is available from public funds to innocent victims of violent crime, who may also obtain advice and guidance from victim support schemes and, in cases of rape, from rape crisis centres. These voluntary schemes receive a measure of financial assistance from central and local government in various forms.

Immigration

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the effect on immigration of the new rules concerning maintenance and accommodation requirements.

Mr. Waddington: The immigration rules which came into force on 26 August strengthened and clarified the maintenance and accommodation requirements. Before a spouse or fiance(e) is admitted to this country, the entry clearance officer must be satisfied that the parties will be able to maintain themselves and their dependants adequately without recourse to public funds and that there will be adequate accommodation for the parties and their dependants without recourse to public funds in accommodation of their own or which they occupy themselves. For the purposes of the immigration rules, public funds means supplementary benefit, housing benefit, family income supplement and housing under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977.

The requirements are designed to prevent the admission of those who have no realistic prospects of supporting themselves without substantial recourse to public funds. At a time of restraint on public expenditure and strain on the country's resources, it is right to prevent the admission of those who would with their families become a serious burden on the state. The object of the tests is not, however, just to add another immigration hurdle for genuine applicants. We cannot yet say what the impact in terms of numbers of these requirements will be.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of the Metropolitan police towards disclosure to the Data Protection Registrar of the use of electoral registers in machine-readable form.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that use by the Metropolitan police of electoral registers in machine-readable form would be subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984 in the same way as any other machine-readable data held by the Metropolitan police, and would be registered accordingly.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will take steps to include on the form for registration as an elector a statement that the voter's personal data will be disclosed to any organisation which pays the appropriate fee.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he is giving to the police about whether the use of electoral registers in machine readable form should be disclosed to the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No specific guidance has been given to the police about whether the use of electoral registers in machine-readable form should be disclosed to the Data Protection Registrar. However, as I explained to the hon. Member in an answer to his earlier question on this matter on 28 October, if the police were to obtain copies of the electoral register in machine-readable form, the use of this data would be subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984 in the same way as any other data they hold.

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how many officers the establishment of Thames Valley police would need to be increased to bring the police to population ratio up to the national average.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The authorised police establishment of the Thames Valley police of 3,317 would need to be increased by 729 to bring the force's ratio of population per police officer up to the average, on 31 December 1984, of 454 to one for police forces outside London in England and Wales. The increase in establishment would need to be 1,148 to bring the forces's ratio up to the average of 411: 1 for all forces in England and Wales.

Police (Expenditure)

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have a lower net expenditure per thousand population than Thames Valley; and which have a higher net expenditure.

Mr. Giles Shaw: "Police Statistics 1984-85 Actuals", published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, show that the net expenditure of Thames Valley police per thousand of the population was £37,455 in the financial year 1984-85, the second lowest of 41 police forces in England and Wales. The expenditure figure for each of these forces is as follows. No figures were given for the Merseyside police and the West Yorkshire police.

Net expenditure per thousand population in 1984-85

	£
Avon and Somerset	44,967
Bedfordshire	43,025
Cambridgeshire	40,368
Cheshire	39,277
Cleveland	51,559
Cumbria	45,332
Derbyshire	41,298
Devon and Cornwall	43,161
Dorset	43,233
Durham	48,254
Dyfed Powys	40,548
Essex	38,991
Gloucestershire	44,674
Greater Manchester	54,278
Gwent	44,598
Hampshire	39,199
Hertfordshire	39,673
Humberside	49,508
Kent	41,042
Lancashire	46,719
Leicestershire	42,761
Lincolnshire	42,890
Norfolk	37,097
Northamptonshire	41,971
Northumbria	50,786
North Wales	42,339
North Yorkshire	43,367
Nottinghamshire	44,997
South Wales	49,751
South Yorkshire	44,788
Staffordshire	42,204
Suffolk	40,077
Surrey	43,614
Sussex	41,922
Thames Valley	37,455
Warwickshire	40,372
West Mercia	41,098
West Midlands	49,591
Wiltshire	41,147
City of London	57,649
Metropolitan	98,822

Police (Gas Spray Guns)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stocks are held by (a) the Metropolitan police and (b) other forces of the L9A1 gas spray gun and associated supplies; when these were first obtained; for what purposes; what tests have been carried out; in what circumstances they are intended to be used and with what safeguards; and who will have authority to authorise their use.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that the Metropolitan police does not hold any stocks of this equipment, and has not carried out any tests with it. I am not aware that any other force in England and Wales holds the equipment or has tested it.

Mrs. Cherry Groce

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the make and type of bullet used by the police in the shooting incident involving Mrs. Cherry Groce.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It would not be right for me to comment while this case is the subject of an investigation by a senior police officer under the supervision of the independent Police Complaints Authority.

Data Protection Tribunal

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of people who are members of the Data Protection Tribunal; and how many of them are women or belong to an Asian or Afro-Caribbean ethnic group.

Mr. Waddington: The Data Protection Tribunal consists of the chairman, two deputy chairmen and 28 lay members, of whom one is a woman. No information was sought about the ethnic origins of members of the tribunal before their appointment.

Police Computers

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has for each constabulary of the capital cost for the mainframe equipment used by that constabulary and the recurrent costs in maintaining that computer.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is not available centrally.

Broadcasting

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, following his answer of 9 December, if he will now take steps to keep detailed records of the outcome of contacts between the Broadcasting Department and the British Broadcasting Corporation and Independent Broadcasting Authority on the content and timetabling of programmes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I see no necessity for such a record to be maintained.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the content or timetabling of any programmes broadcast or projected under the aegis of the British Broadcasting Corporation or Independent Broadcasting Authority have been altered as a result of contacts between those bodies and the Broadcasting Department in the last month.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I am not aware of any alterations.

Probation Service (Clients)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when information on the ethnic origin of clients of the probation service will be available.

Mr. Mellor: We are carrying out a survey of the extent to which area probation services are collecting information about ethnic origin. Our next step will be to consult the probation service organisations about the means whereby accurate and useful national data could be collected.

Riot Damages Act 1886

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to seek to make amendments to the Riot Damages Act 1886 to provide protection for private motor vehicles parked in streets and buses belonging to public transport companies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No.

Sergeant Mark Parsons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, on why Sergeant Mark Parsons lied to Miss Patricia Jarrett of Tottenham on entering her mother's house; and what disciplinary measures have been or are to be taken.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The circumstances of the search of Miss Jarrett's mother's house are the subject of an investigation into complaints made by the family against officers of the Metropolitan police. The Director of Public Prosecutions is considering the investigation report. Depending upon his conclusion whether criminal charges should be brought against any officer, it will be for the Commissioner to decide on possible disciplinary charges. A decision by a chief officer not to prefer disciplinary charges following a complaint is subject to review by the Police Complaints Authority.

Mr. Floyd Jarrett

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, as to the legal status of Mr. Floyd Jarrett (a) at the time that his keys were taken from him and (b) at the time that they were used to enter his mother's home.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that Mr. Jarrett was under arrest throughout the period he spent at Tottenham police station.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, in rank order, the general level of payment made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for major injuries of various kinds.

Mr. Mellor: The compensation payable varies a good deal according to the individual circumstances of each case. Information concerning the amounts paid in respect of different kinds of injury is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The board published in its 20th report (Cmnd. 9399, paragraph 35) the "guideline figures" which it regards as the appropriate starting points for some types of injury, to be supplemented as necessary according to the seriousness of the particular case.

Drink-Driving

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were disqualified from driving following convictions for driving whilst incapable through drink in each of the past three years.

Mr. Mellor: The available information relates to the number of driving licence disqualifications imposed by the courts for offences of driving etc., after consuming alcohol or taking drugs and is published in table 10 of Home Office statistical bulletin 28/85 'Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales, 1984'. In 1982, 1983 and 1984 there were, respectively, about 64,000, 86,000 and 89,000 such disqualifications.

Foreign Visitors (Visas)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are any plans to introduce visa requirements for entrance to the United Kingdom by people from Bangladesh, Pakistan and India.

Mr. Waddington: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 5 December, at column 311.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to end visa requirements for entrance by people from Sri Lanka.

Mr. Waddington: We are keeping the visa requirement under review, but we have no plans to withdraw it at present.

Dr. Sathananthan

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the arrangements under which Dr. Sathananthan is enabled to prescribe heroin to registered addicts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 9 December 1985, c. 464]: The matter involves a number of important issues which we now have under review. I am afraid we can make no further comment at this stage.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Anglo-Irish Agreement

73. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what respects the wording of the Dublin version of the Anglo-Irish agreement differs from the London version, and why; and which text is authoritative.

Mr. Eggar: In accordance with standard international practice, precedence is given to the United Kingdom in the original retained in London and to the Republic of Ireland in the original retained in Dublin. In addition, and in line with long established precedent in bilateral treaties with the Republic, each country's original of the agreement uses its own nomenclature in reference to itself and to the other country. There are no substantive differences between the texts, both originals of which are authoritative.

EC Council of Ministers (Middle East)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council of Ministers will next discuss the problems of the middle east.

Mr. Rifkind: The Council of Ministers has no plans to discuss the problems of the middle east in the near future.

Angola-United States Talks

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on recent talks between the United States Government and the MPLA Government of Angola concerning Cuban troop withdrawal and Namibian independence.

Mr. Rifkind: A meeting between representatives of the Governments of the United States and Angola was held in Lusaka at the end of November. A further meeting is likely to take place shortly. The content of the discussions remains confidential.

Namibia (Political Parties)

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met with leaders of the Democratic Turnhalle party of Namibia, the Kavango Alliance party, Rehoboth Baster Veriging, South West Africa Peoples' Organisation. SWANU, South West Africa Peoples' Organisation-D, The Labour party of Namibia, and the Rehoboth Free Democratic party; and whether he has any plans to meet the leaders of these Namibian political parties in the future.

Mr. Rifkind: My right hon. and learned Friend met the leader of the South West Africa People's Organisation on 26 June. Her Majesty's Government are willing to have contact with all the parties to the United Nations plan for Namibia. Whilst he has not met the leaders of the other named political parties, we do keep in touch informally with all shades of political opinion in Namibia. My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to meet the leaders of any Namibian political parties in the near future.

Hong Kong

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report on Hong Kong will be laid before Parliament.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I shall be laying the annual report on Hong Kong before Parliament on 18 December. Copies of the Governor of Hong Kong's annual address to the Legislative Council, and the Financial Secretary's budget speech and half yearly economic review will also be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings his Department has had with representatives of the Polisario Front concerning diplomatic recognition of the Democratic Republic of the Western Sahara; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There has been occasional informal contacts between Polisario representatives and Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials. These do not denote any change in our neutral policy towards the Western Sahara dispute. We do not recognise the Democratic Republic of the Western Sahara.

Morocco

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on arms sales to Morocco from 1979 to the present time.

Mr. Renton: It is not the practice to publish details of defence sales. Most of Morocco's military equipment is of United States and French origin. United Kingdom arms sales in recent years have been modest.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the British embassy in Morocco is giving to United Kingdom companies involved in exploiting phosphate deposits in Morocco.

Mr. Rifkind: Moroccan phosphate deposits are exploited exclusively by the Moroccan Office Cherifien des Phosphates (OCP). Our posts at Rabat and Casablanca offer assistance to British companies wishing to do business with OCP and the full range of British Overseas Trade Board services is available.

Simonstown Naval Base

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the agreement with the Republic of South Africa on the Simonstown naval base is currently in operation; and whether the accompanying agreement to supply South Africa with arms has been abrogated in accordance with the decision of the United Nations Organisation to ban arms exports to that country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I have been asked to reply.

I assume that the hon. Lady is referring to the provision for South African purchase in the United Kingdom of certain naval vessels in the agreement on defence of the sea routes round southern Africa that was signed at the same time as the agreement relating to the transfer of the Simonstown naval base on 30 June 1955. Both agreements were terminated simultaneously by an exchange of letters which entered into force on 16 June 1975 and which were subsequently presented to Parliament in Cmnd. 6229.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Children's Homes and Hostels (Inquiry)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what preconditions Mr. Colin Wallace sought to impose before being interviewed by the committee of inquiry into children's homes and hostels in Northern Ireland; to what extent these were met; and what reasons Mr. Wallace gave for not taking part in the interview.

Mr. Needham: These are matters principally for the committee of inquiry I understand, however, that among other things Mr. Wallace sought permission to disclose to the committee material, including if necessary classified material, gained in the course of his employment with the Ministry of Defence. Mr. Wallace was given permission to disclose any such information relevant to the inquiry.

I understand that Mr. Wallace has recently indicated that he is prepared to meet the committee.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Hamilton (Grants and Loans)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the total amounts offered to firms in the Hamilton constituency under regional and industrial grants policy for each year of the last 10 years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I regret the information is not available for all regional and industrial grants because it would be too costly to transfer the historic records to the computer data base. For the same reason a manual search to match addresses is also ruled out. However, the new regional development grants are being recorded and regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act is available for past years. The details for RSA in the Hamilton constituency are:

	Value of offers £'000
1975-76	86
1976-77	40
1977-78	21
1978-79	122
1979-80	81
1980-81	1,499
1981-82	767
1982-83	1,205
1983-84	1,322
1984-85	225
1985-86*	1,144

* 1 April-30 November 1985.

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of the number of firms to whom offers of grants and loans have been made under the regional industrial policy referred to in his letter of 27 November to the hon. Member for Hamilton.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is not the practice to disclose details of financial assistance given to individual companies other than in accordance with the arrangements announced by the then Secretary of State for Industry on 31 July 1974. Details are also withheld where it is thought that an individual company could be identified prior to publication in British Business. However, the number and value of offers of regional selective assistance and the number of approvals and amount of new regional development grant in the Hamilton constituency were as follows in the period 29 November 1984 to 31 October 1985:

	Number	Value £'000
RDG II	40	1,781
RSA	4	644

Financial Services Bill

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the advice of the City fraud squad is being sought in the course of the preparation of the Financial Services Bill.

Mr. Howard: The police have had ample opportunity to comment on the Government's White Paper "Financial Services in the United Kingdom: a New framework for investor protection", on which the forthcoming Financial Services Bill is to be based. The Financial Services Bill will not deal with the powers of the police.

Tied Public Houses

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he intends to refer the licensed tied house system to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Howard: Reference to the Commission of the tied house system under the monopoly provisions of the Fair Trading Act, is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading.

Industrial Grants (Worsley)

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, of the £9,300 offered to firms in the Worsley constituency under the new industrial grants regime in the last year, how much of that total was actually taken up.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I can now update the figure given in my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State's letter of 27 November to £32,337 offered under the new regional policy between 29 November 1984 to 12 December 1985. All of this has been accepted by the applicants concerned.

Companies

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans for changing the present rules on the registration of company charges.

Mr. Howard: Yes. There is general agreement that the Companies Act provisions on registration of charges and the wider law of security over movable property are unsatisfactory. I have therefore asked Professor Aubrey Diamond to examine the need for reform and to make recommendation on the nature of any reforms required. In particular, he will consider whether there is still a case for a single system of registration applicable to all such interests on the lines proposed by the Crowther committee in 1971 and whether charges created by companies should be part of such a system or continue to be registered separately at the companies registration offices. I have asked Professor Diamond to report by the end of next year. Subject to his recommendations, the next stage will be to formulate detailed proposals for reform. We shall want to press ahead with this as quickly as possible but at this stage I cannot give any indication as to when legislation might be brought forward.

Company Law

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any specific proposals for the simplification of parts of company law.

Mr. Howard: Yes. My Department has received numerous representations suggesting that the ultra vires rule as applied to companies has outlived its usefulness and is an unnecessary burden on companies and creditors alike. I have therefore asked Dr. Dan Prentice of Oxford university to examine the legal and commercial implications of abolishing the rule as it applies to companies registered under the Companies Act and to make recommendations on legislative changes which may be necessary consequent on abolition. Dr. Prentice will start work shortly and will report by 31 May 1986. He will consult widely in the course of the study but once his report is available, my Department will, in any case, issue a consultative document inviting comments on any proposed changes. Subject to the outcome of the consultation, any necessary legislation will be brought forward at the first available opportunity. In addition, I am proposing to commission a similar study in relation to registration of company charges. I will make an announcement about this shortly.

Insolvency Act 1985

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make known his intentions for the implementation of the Insolvency Act 1985.

Mr. Howard: In exercise of the powers given to him by section 236 of the Insolvency Act 1985 the Secretary of State intends to make a number of commencement orders during the course of next year to effect the staged introduction of the new legislation.

Of the main provisions in the Act those relating to the disqualification and personal liability of directors will be brought into force in April 1986. We shall then start to set up the machinery for dealing with applications from insolvency practitioners for licences. Such licensing, including the ban on unlicensed practice, will take effect in December 1986 when the administrator procedure and all the other new and revised insolvency procedures relating to receivership, voluntary arrangements, winding-up and bankruptcy will be brought into force. The Department is about to begin consultations with insolvency practitioners and interested bodies on the proposed contents of rules and other secondary legisation without which those procedures cannot work. In addition, in April 1986 the Government intend to introduce a Bill to consolidate with the Insolvency Act 1985 the parts of the Companies Act 1985 that relate to receivership and winding-up. These parts have already been substantially amended by the Insolvency Act 1985 and we consider that their consolidation with the provisions in that Act will greatly aid coherent understanding of the legislation and related rules and will facilitate its better operation.

Westland plc

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress of discussions aimed at securing the future of Westlands as an independent helicopter manufacturer with its own research and development capacity.

Mr. Butcher: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 16 December.

European Regional Development Fund

Sir Peter Blaker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the proposed European regional development fund non-quota regulations have yet been approved by the Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement on the implications for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Council of Ministers has today adopted four regulations which complete the second and final set of non-quota measures under the fund.

One of the regulations concerns Ireland and Northern Ireland and the others concern certain areas affected by the decline in the textile, shipbuilding and fishing industries. The United Kingdom already benefits from non-quota aid to textile and shipbuilding areas, and the relevant new regulations extend this aid to certain areas in other member states.

The regulation which concerns Ireland and Northern Ireland extends the geographical scope of EC Regulation 2619/80 so as to include the whole of Northern Ireland except the urban area of Belfast. Activities eligible for aid are also extended so as to include investment aid to small firms, promotion of innovation and the setting up of economic promotion agencies. The new fisheries areas regulation provides in respect of the United Kingdom for aid to the travel-to-work areas of Hull, Grimsby and Blackpool (which includes Fleetwood). Activities in which the fund may participate include redevelopment of fishing ports and industrial and urban sites, investment aids to small firms, promotion of innovation and tourism.

The aid will be available in support of five-year programmes which will have to be prepared and then approved by the EC Commission before the fund contribution can be paid. The detailed arrangements have yet to be worked out.

I welcome this further expected contribution from the fund towards helping regional problems in the United Kingdom.

Morocco (Phosphate)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the amount of imported phosphate from Morocco from the year 1975 until the present time.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Tobacco Sales

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what information he has on the number of cigarettes, cigars and individual packets of other tobacco products which have been sold through retail outlets in Great Britain in each of the last 10 years; and if he will estimate what proportion of those sales may have been made to young people under the age of 16 years.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985]: I regret that detailed information on the quantity of sales through retail outlets, including estimates of the proportion of sales to young people under the age of 16 years, is not available. However, Customs and Excise statistics of the quantities released for consumption are as follows, and some information on the incidence of smoking by young people is given in the recent survey by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on "Smoking among secondary school children in 1984", a copy of which is in the Library.

Quantities Released for Consumption‡

	Cigarettes (millions)	Cigars (tonnes)*	Other tobacco† (tonnes)
1977	124,923	3,410	12,689
1978	125,686	3,410	10,399
1979	124,524	3,264	9,697
1980	121,975	3,181	9,482
1981	109,822	2,874	9,769
1982	102,449	2,695	9,580
1983	102,611	2,654	9,093
1984	99,864	2,540	8,492

Notes

* Information on the number of cigars released is not collected.

† This includes hand-rolling tobacco and other smoking and chewing tobacco.

‡ Covers both home manufactured and imported tobacco products. Data in the above form for 1976 and earlier years are not readily available.

Grant Aid (Worsley)

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount of grant aid paid to firms in the Worsley constituency, under the old rules, during the same period of time £9,300 was offered under the rules introduced a year ago.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 25]: No grant has been paid to firms in the Worsley constituency under the terms of the old regional policy, since the new schemes were introduced on 29 November 1984.

Regional Policy

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each constituency in the north-west region which lie within the assisted areas the total offered under the new regional industrial policy.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 717]: The figures quoted in the letter of 27 November of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State have been updated to take into account the last three weeks. There are a number of differences and the particularly large ones are noted at the end of his reply. The information the hon. Gentleman has requested is therefore as follows:

Constituency	Amount offers (£'000)
Ashton-under-Lyne	140·0
Birkenhead	449·0
Blackburn	525·0
Bolton, North East	208·0
Bolton, South East	91·5
Bolton, West	175·0
Bootle	722·7
Bury, North	137·0
Bury, South	40·0
Chorley	186·3
City of Chester	849·2
Crosby	143·0
Eddisbury	275·4
Ellesmere Port and Neston	152·9
Halton	1,406·5
Heywood and Middleton	385·0
High Peak	1,620·0
Hyndburn	368·0
Knowsley, North	605·7
Knowsley, South	8,500·0
Leigh	1,228·4
Littleborough and Saddleworth	468·0
Liverpool, Broadgreen	394·8
Liverpool, Garston	1,687·5
Liverpool, Mossley Hill	56·5
Liverpool, Riverside	1,036·0
Liverpool, Walton	583·7
Liverpool, West Derby	33·0
Makerfield	1,108·6
Manchester, Blackley	25·0
Manchester, Central	1,461·0
Manchester, Gorton	135·0
Oldham, Central 7 Royton	35·0
Oldham, West	1,194·2
Penrith and The Border	66·0
Rochdale	356·0
Rossendale and Darwen	357·5
Salford, East	118·0
Southport	362·1
St. Helens, North	912·3
St. Helens, South	1,588·2
Stalybridge and Hyde	71·0
Stretford	55·0
Wallasey	290·2
Warrington, South	30·0
West Lancashire	1,432·9
Wigan	755·8
Wirral, South	547·1
Wirral, West	248·3
Workington	684·9
Worsley	32·3

Some of these differences can be attributed to further RSA/RDG made offers between 28 November and the date of the latest computer printout, 12 December. Also my reply (unlike the Secretary of State's letter) does not include payments made under the transitional arrangements.

Particularly large differences are noted however in the cases of:

	Secretary of State	Draft PQ
City of Chester	292,500	849,200
Knowsley, North	447,100	605,700
Liverpool, Broadgreen	207,600	394,800
Liverpool, Riverside	653,800	1,036,000
Makerfield	984,000	1,116,600
Penrith and the Border	141,000	66,000
Southport	269,600	362,100
St. Helens South	1,335,700	1,588,200
Wallasey	162,600	290,200
Wigan	520,700	755,800
Wirral, South	321,000	547,100
Wirral, West	184,500	248,300
Workington	515,000	684,900
Worsley	9,300	32,300

In all cases except Penrith and The Border the figure is higher; in the case of Penrith and The Border the difference has arisen because it does not include an offer made under the transitional arrangements. Exclusion of transitional arrangements (since my answer refers only to payments made under the new regional industrial policy) also removes from the list reference to Copeland, Fylde, Lancaster and Wyre.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Rowe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the scale of equity investment under the business expansion scheme, and in small unincorporated businesses in particular; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give the latest numbers of businesses assisted through investment under the business expansion scheme.

Mr. Moore: In 1983-84 about £105 million was invested in 715 companies. The information for 1984-85 is not yet complete but information currently available shows that over £100 million was invested in more than 500 companies. Of these 500, about 100 also received investments in 1983-84. Relief under the business expansion scheme is available only in respect of purchases of shares in unlisted companies. Unincorporated businesses are therefore excluded.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of extending the 30 per cent. small companies rate of corporation tax to the first £100,000 profits of every company or, as the case may be, group so that on no profits the marginal tax rate exceeds the 35 per cent. standard rate.

Mr. Moore: Of the order of £30 million in a full year at the rates due for the 1986 financial year.

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will seek to exempt war widows from tax on the benefit from a child in a workplace nursery;

(2) how many individuals have been the subject of tax claims to date arising from a child in a workplace nursery; and how many of these have been (a) male and (b) female;

(3) how many employers to date have been approached by the Inland Revenue for details of their workplace nurseries, for taxation purposes;

(4) when the Board of Inland Revenue specifically decided to tax the benefit of workplace nurseries; when was the first occasion that a local tax office issued a tax claim on the benefit of a workplace nursery; and why this claim was issued;

(5) what is his estimate of the amount of tax to be collected each year through the taxation of the benefit of children in workplace nurseries.

Mr. Moore: Benefits in kind are a form of remuneration and it would not be appropriate to exempt a specific section of the community from tax on them. The benefit of an employer-subsidised nursery place, in common with other benefits in kind, has been taxable in the hands of directors and certain employees (currently those earning at a rate of £8,500 a year or more) since legislation was first introduced by the Labour Government in 1948. It is the employer's duty to return details of all benefits provided which are subject to tax to the Inland Revenue. The Inland Revenue taxes benefits as they are returned, but details of individual assessments or codings are not kept centrally. Nevertheless, in view of the uncertainty caused in the past by advice given in an Equal Opportunities Commission manual and in some editions of the Which? Tax Saving Guide, the Board of Inland Revenue announced on 24 April 1985 that tax would not be sought on this particular benefit for periods before 6 April 1985 and that any tax already collected would be repaid.

I regret that because this benefit is thought to be provided for only a small number of employees the detailed statistical information requested on the number of employers and employees concerned is not held centrally and it is therefore not possible to make a firm estimate of the tax yield.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to seek to create any categories of whole or partial exception from liability to tax on the benefit from a child in a workplace nursery.

Mr. Moore: No. Under existing law, employees earning at a rate of less than £8,500 a year (including the value of the benefit) are not subject to tax on the benefit of an employer-subsidised nursery place unless the employer provides the benefit by way of vouchers or meets costs directly incurred, and due from, the employee.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue in a full year from the imposition of value added tax at the standard rate upon supplies which are presently zero rated.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that the net additional full-year revenue, at 1985-86 prices, would be of the order of £6·9 billion.

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue in a full year from the imposition of value added tax at the standard rate on each of (a) children's clothing, (b) children's shoes, (c) fuel, (d) all food currently zero-rated, (e) books, (f) newspapers and periodicals and (g) new construction.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that the net additional full year revenue, at 1985-86 prices, would be of the following order:

	£ million
(a) Children's clothing	225
(b) Children's shoes	50
(c) Fuel	1,400
(d) All food currently zero-rated	3,500
(e) Books	90
(f) Newspapers and periodicals	300
(g) New construction	875

Income Tax Reliefs

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will estimate the revenue cost of the major income tax reliefs.

Mr. Moore: Estimates of the costs of all the main income tax reliefs are given in table 2.18 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1985-86 to 1987-88", Vol. ii (Cmnd. 9428-ii). The costs relate to 1984-85. Estimates for 1985-86 will be published in January.

Building Societies

Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 355, if he will outline if any steps will be taken to protect building societies which opt for company status from being taken over by foreign institutions or companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The consultative paper proposed that all individual or related shareholdings in a building society which converted to a company should, in normal circumstances, be less than 15 per cent. for the first five years of the new company's life. No special proposals are made for restricting the nationality or place of incorporation of shareholders in former building societies. Foreign ownership would not necessarily raise issues of public interest but if an acquisition did appear to give rise to public concern, it could be examined under the normal merger control provisions of the Fair Trading Act.

Mr. Portillo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he intends to seek to deter societies from anticipating the wider powers proposed for them in the Building Societies Bill.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It would be irresponsible and ultra vires for a building society to seek to steal a march on its competitors by anticipating Parliament passing the Bill and the latter coming into effect. The Government would take a serious view of jumping the gun in this way and I would hope that all societies would resist the temptation to do so. But in order to reassure societies that they will not be disadvantaged in relation to others by behaving responsibily, the Bill includes provisions which would penalise a society if it were to anticipate the powers being properly available to it.

Before a society can legitimately exercise any of the wider powers, it will have to pass the necessary special resolution in general meeting and register a memorandum adopting those powers. The society will have to support the application for registration of the memorandum with a statement by the chairman and chief executive, on behalf of the society, that in the previous 12 months it had not performed any functions which would be covered by the powers to be conferred by the mormorandum but which were not within the society's existing powers. Thus a society which anticipated one or more of the wider powers to be made available under the new legislation would then find that it could not properly adopt them until it ceased exceeding its powers, and allowed a year to pass in which it did not exceed them.

This provision will be supported by a provision for the Registry of Friendly Societies to challenge a memorandum sumbitted to it for registration, if it considers that there may have been anticipation of any new power, notwithstanding the certificate to the contrary, and by provisions for the Building Societies Commission to require a society to desist from an activity which is outside the powers which it has legally adopted.

Bingo

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many premises, not licensed under the Gaming Act 1968, have registered with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85, respectively in relation to bingo prize money or card money exceeding £400 in a day or £1,000 collectively in a week; and how much duty from the registration of premises with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in relation to bingo prize money or card money was received in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85, respectively.

Mr. Brooke: Separate statistics for licensed and unlicensed bingo clubs are not maintained, so that information in the form requested is not readily available. It is however known that the number of unlicensed clubs registered to pay bingo duty was 204 in September 1982, 288 in May 1983 and 350 in November 1985. The bingo duty currently paid by these clubs is estimated at £2·7 million per annum.

Customs Surveillance

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which customs surveillance was withdrawn from a Pakistani ship anchored in the Tyne in November which had previously been the subject of investigations into drug smuggling.

Mr. Brooke: I presume the vessel to which the hon. Member refers is the MV Tarbella which was berthed on the Tyne throughout the month of November. During the period of its stay the Tarbella was subjected to the degree of customs control consistent with perceived risk factors. In the interests of maintaining effective controls, it is not the policy of customs to disclose specific details of their operations.

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if sufficient resources are available for full customs surveillance of all ships entering ports in the north-east of England.

Mr. Brooke: Customs apply selective controls to all arriving goods, passengers and ships and no attempt is made to maintain full surveillance of all ships entering ports in the United Kingdom. In the north-east of England the number of ships arriving has decreased and the level of surveillance is well above the national average.

Customs Officers

Dr. David Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the numbers of customs officers in the north-east of England ports in each of the last five years.

Mr. Brooke: The numbers of customs officers in the north-east of England in each of the last five years were:

	Number
1981	153
1982	145
1983	145
1984	149
1985	154

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what steps he is taking to see that customs officers have adequate capital equipment, such as X-ray machines to assist in the detection of drug imports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 11 December 1985, c. 653]: About £10 million will be invested over the next three years in the development and provision of equipment to help in the detection and deterrence of drug imports.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Revenue Allocations

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, for each area or district health authority wholly or partly in Greater London including the special health authorities, the total revenue allocations they have received in each year since 1978-79 at 1979 prices.

Mr. Hayhoe: The table shows expenditure by area health authorities and boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals for the years 1978-79 to 1981-82, and by district health authorities, special health authorities and boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals for the years 1982-83 to 1984-85. The figures are expressed at 1978-79 price levels as measured by the gross domestic product deflator.

Revenue expenditure out-turns

Area Health Authorities	1978-79 £000	1979-80 £000	1980-81 £000	1981-82 £000	District Health Authorities	1982-83 £000	1983-84 £000	1984-85 £000
Barnet	33,681	34,395	37,723	37,716	Barnet	36,542	36,186	35,864
Brent and Harrow	43,366	44,590	48,695	49,922	Harrow	21,213	21,044	20,516
					Brent	27,498	28,084	27,695
Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow	76,165	76,569	82,168	85,711	Hounslow and Spelthorne	27,812	27,844	28,111
					Ealing	21,103	21,205	22,173
					Hammersmith and Fulham	27,185	27,056	27,819
Hillingdon	26,152	26,380	28,868	28,948	Hillingdon	28,348	28,337	29,197
Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster	89,844	90,047	97,011	98,997	Paddington	33,081	33,144	33,141
					Victoria	41,439	41,424	40,723
Barking and Havering	33,411	34,239	38,941	38,058	Barking/Havering/Brentwood	38,034	38,429	38,311
Camden and Islington	82,975	83,189	90,569	91,521	Hampstead	35,776	35,877	36,402
					Bloomsbury	65,828	65,786	65,478
					Islington	25,788	25,121	24,739
City and East London	92,218	91,432	99,042	101,285	City and Hackney	43,275	44,062	44,055
					Newham	18,714	18,891	19,137
					Tower Hamlets	36,961	37,568	36,252
Enfield and Haringey	37,989	38,248	41,949	41,148	Enfield	18,579	18,778	18,742
					Haringey	22,302	21,944	21,347
Redbridge and Waltham Forest	47,376	49,049	54,497	54,557	Redbridge	19,579	19,599	19,791
					Waltham Forest	34,029	33,410	33,074
Greenwich and Bexley	50,204	51,289	53,810	52,375	Bexley	18,667	18,822	19,286
					Greenwich	33,107	32,769	32,377
Bromley	27,090	27,519	29,879	30,064	Bromley	29,311	29,038	28,692
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham	125,568	126,072	136,292	138,623	West Lambeth	43,109	43,235	42,791
					Camberwell	35,123	35,266	34,400
					Lewisham and North Southwark	58,053	59,256	58,404
Croydon	28,085	28,548	31,577	31,345	Croydon	31,136	31,409	31,673
Kingston and Richmond	24,366	24,838	26,692	26,742	Kingston and Esher	21,954	21,968	21,871
Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth	91,192	93,374	99,715	101,573	Richmond/Twickenham/ Roehampton	18,815	19,342	18,583
					Wandsworth	49,407	49,311	48,916
					Sutton and Merton	35,193	35,776	35,665

Revenue expenditure outturns

Boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals	1978-79 £000's	1979-80 £000's	1980-81 £000's	1981-82 £000's	Special health authorities- boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals	1982-83 £000's	1983-84 £000's	1984-85 £000's
Hospital for Sick Children	13,936	13,918	15,680	16,227	Hospital for Sick Children	16,022	16,411	15,626
National Hospitals for Nervous Diseases	8,559	8,634	8,987	8,934	National Hospitals for Nervous Diseases	8,987	9,179	9,131
Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital	3,880	3,889	4,114	4,192		—	—	—
Moorfields Eye Hospital	6,372	6,372	6,917	7,030	Moorfields Eye Hospital	6,890	6,966	6,911
Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals	7,456	7,534	8,733	9,150	Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals	9,197	9,429	9,432
St. John's Hospital for Diseases of the Skin	1,496	1,399	1,567	1,677		—	—	—
National Heart and Chest Hospitals	12,947	12,841	14,273	14,771	National Heart and Chest Hospitals	14,672	15,374	15,481
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital	5,889	5,850	6,425	6,567		—	—	—

Boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals	1978-79 £000's	1979-80 £000's	1980-81 £000's	1981-82 £000's	Special health authorities-boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals	1982-83 £000's	1983-84 £000's	1984-85 £000's
St. Peter's Hospitals	3,550	3,479	3,565	3,910		—	—	—
Royal Marsden Hospital	9,676	10,054	10,614	11,202	Royal Marsden Hospital	10,660	11,189	11,138
					Hammersmith	17,758	18,299
Queen Charlotte's Hospital for for Women	4,921	5,135	5,724	5,624	Queen Charlotte's Hospital for Women	5,573	5,692	22,878
Eastman Dental Hospital	1,937	1,973	2,341	2,427	Eastman Dental Hospital	2,372	2,446	2,521

Notes:

1. The figures are derived from health authorities' summarised accounts. The figures for 1984-85 are provisional.

2. The 1982 reorganisation of the National Health Service resulted in substantial and complex boundary changes and changes in management responsibility, and it is therefore not possible to make direct comparisons between the pre- and post-1982 authorities. In addition to these changes there was a major restructuring of the boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals as follows:

(a) Bloomsbury health authority now manages the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear hospitals, the Royal National Orthopaedic hospitals and St. Peter's hospitals.

(b) West Lambeth health authority now manages St. John's hospital for diseases of the skin.

(c) Hammersmith hospital was given special health authority status.

Dental Services

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what allowance is given for laboratory expenses in the following items of the general dental service: fee scale, full upper and lower acrylic dentures, porcelain crown under item 10*(c), gold crown under item 10(a)(ii)(a)* and bonded crown under item 10*(d)*(i).

Mr. Hayhoe: The fee scale for items of treatment under the general dental service are determined following the recommendations of the dental rates study group. The detailed calculations underlying its recommendations are not published.

Pensions

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the amounts of flat rate earnings related pensions payable in April 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1988, 1993, 1998, 2003 and 2008, in the manner of, and using the same assumptions as in the reply of 5 July 1983 to the hon. Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) Official Report, column 52.

Mr. Major: The following table shows the amount of flat rate and earnings-related pension a contracted-in single man or woman retiring in April of each year with a full contribution record might have received under the state scheme under existing legislation. The amount of earnings-related pension is based on actual average earnings for full-time males and females from 1978-79 to 1984-85, derived from the new earnings survey. For those retiring in 1983, 1984 and 1985, allowance has been made for upratings in November of each year. For those retiring in 1986 and later, an estimate for average earnings in 1985-86 and the upper and lower earnings limits for 1985-86 have been used for all years, expressed in constant 1985-86 earnings terms. It is assumed that earnings remain constant throughout a person's working life.

These estimates reflect actual average earnings more closely than those given in the reply of 5 July 1983, at columns 51-53, to my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden).

£ per week

Earnings	Amounts of retirement pension (including flat-rate pension of £38·30)
	1983	1984	1985	1986	1988	1993	1998*
Men
¼ average	39·15	39·25	39·55	39·75	40·10	40·90	41·75
½ average	42·15	43·00	43·95	44·75	46·30	50·20	54·05
¾ average	45·15	46·70	48·40	49·80	52·55	59·45	66·35
Average	48·15	50·40	52·80	54·80	58·75	68·70	78·65
1½ average†	51·95	55·25	58·70	61·55	67·30	81·65	96·00
2 average†
Women
¼ average‡	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
½ average	40·00	40·35	40·85	41·25	41·95	43·75	45·55
¾ average	41·95	42·75	43·70	44·50	46·00	49·80	53·60
Average	43·85	45·15	46·55	47·75	50·05	55·85	61·65
1½ average	47·70	49·90	52·25	54·25	58·15	67·95	77·80
2 average	51·50	54·65	57·90	60·65	66·20	80·00	93·85

* The figures for 1998, 2003 and 2008 are identical.

† The figures for men on 1½ and 2×average earnings are identical, because they are above the upper earnings limit.

‡ Below lower earnings limit—no pension entitlement.

Non-psychiatric Services (Merseyside)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the capital investment in non-psychiatric services (a) in the St. Helens and Knowsley area health authority for the period 1975 to 1985 and (b) in each of the other Merseyside districts during the same period.

Mr. Whitney: Information is contained in the tables. Figures for 1974-75 to 1981-82 relate to the old area health authorities. The split between expenditure on the psychiatric and non-psychiatric services for this period is not available centrally.

Table I

Mersey Regional Health Authority Capital Expenditure 1974-75—1984-85

	St. Helens Area Health Authority	Sefton Area Health Authority	Liverpool Area Health Authority	Wirral Area Health Authority	Cheshire Area Health Authority	Regional Headquarters	Totals
1974-75	650,824	1,360,392	6,195,770	3,419,798	3,236,316	1,260,241	16,123,341
1975-76	989,985	1,188,378	6,336,586	4,859,288	5,356,560	1,574,062	20,304,859
1976-77	1,316,178	1,203,781	9,068,893	6,338,641	4,631,941	1,287,001	23,846,435
1977-78	826,921	779,409	9,148,890	5,637,805	5,478,950	1,388,824	23,260,799
1978-79	1,067,518	1,512,959	9,332,208	7,234,943	5,608,123	1,550,430	25,946,181
1979-80	940,018	2,061,856	6,271,238	4,674,837	9,723,158	2,839,391	26,510,498
1980-81	1,916,150	3,494,473	5,564,943	4,466,524	14,885,314	2,245,632	32,573,036
1981-82	1,730,781	3,523,589	4,382,775	6,064,255	17,816,694	2,518,681	36,036,775
Totals	9,438,375	14,764,837	56,301,303	42,696,091	66,737,056	14,664,262	204,601,924

	Southport and Formby	South Sefton	St. Helens and Knowsley	Liverpool	Wirral	Chester	Crewe	Halton	Macclesfield	Warrington	Regional Head Quarters	Totals
1982-83	1,891,776	1,833,672	3,829,097	4,570,359	3,045,476	4,533,118	2,435,743	3,527,313	6,070,539	2,200,594	2,673,226	36,610,913
1983-84	1,666,619	2,363,891	3,542,453	5,278,996	2,757,166	2,707,740	2,443,838	4,489,858	3,877,370	2,440,693	4,519,580	40,088,224
1984-85	3,626,031	1,227,612	2,398,495	8,931,466	3,293,953	2,076,999	3,063,006	3,650,610	2,460,601	1,986,544	7,205,726	39,921,043
Totals	7,184,426	5,425,175	9,770,045	18,780,821	9,096,615	9,317,857	7,942,587	11,667,781	12,408,510	6,627,831	14,398,532	112,620,180

1982-83 Transfer of Rainhill Hospital
To reconcile expenditure with the Psychiatric split, compare St. Helens and Liverpool expenditure in total.

Table II

Capital Expenditure

		1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
St. Helens & Knowsley	Psychiatric	669	928	714
	Non-Psychiatric	2,309	2,614	1,684
Southport & Formby	Psychiatric	201	36	53
	Non-Psychiatric	1,691	1,630	3,573
South Sefton	Psychiatric	—	6	61
	Non-Psychiatric	1,834	2,358	1,167
Liverpool	Psychiatric	1,036	149	631
	Non-Psychiatric	4,385	5,130	8,300
Wirral	Psychiatric	25	478	33
	Non-Psychiatric	3,019	2,279	3,261
Chester	Psychiatric	261	713	1,079
	Non-Psychiatric	4,273	1,995	998
Crewe	Psychiatric	8	142	390
	Non-Psychiatric	2,428	2,302	2,673
Halton	Psychiatric	205	202	427
	Non-Psychiatric	3,323	4,288	3,223
Macclesfield	Psychiatric	624	827	1,123
	Non-Psychiatric	5,447	3,050	1,338
Warrington	Psychiatric	1,254	1,474	1,013
	Non-Psychiatric	946	967	974
TOTALS	Psychiatric	4,283	4,955	5,524
	Non-Psychiatric	29,655	26,613	27,191

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the planned capital investment in non-psychiatric services (a) in the St. Helens and Knowsley area health authority for the next 10 years and (b) for each of the other Merseyside districts during the same period.

Mr. Whitney: Forecast capital expenditure on the psychiatric and non-psychiatric services over the next decade for the St. Helens and Knowsley health authority and the nine other districts within the Mersey regional health authority is set out in the table.

Mersey Regional Health Authority Forecast Capital Expenditure

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94	1994-95	Total
St. Helens and Knowsley
Psychiatric	620	814	1,202	1,092	2,309	2,257	1,696	416	—	—	10,406
Non-Psychiatric	683	1,372	2,262	946	262	260	520	988	1,040	1,040	9,373
GRAND TOTAL	1,303	2,186	3,464	2,038	2,571	2,216	1,404	1,040	1,040	1,040	19,779
Southport and Formby
Psychiatric	110	343	792	256	1,240	466	—	—	—	—	3,207

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94	1994-95	Total
Non-Psychiatric	5,116	8,637	6,228	3,505	3,372	2,818	1,508	219	—	250	31,653
GRAND TOTAL	5,226	8,980	7,020	3,761	4,612	3,284	1,508	219	—	250	34,860
South Sefton
Psychiatric	482	1,195	906	1,241	2,340	2,496	1,664	—	—	—	10,324
Non-Psychiatric	87	421	850	—	156	260	780	1,300	2,960	1,820	8,634
GRAND TOTAL	569	1,616	1,756	1,241	2,496	2,756	2,444	1,300	2,960	1,820	18,958
Liverpool
Psychiatric	2,062	1,403	1,091	1,546	1,924	2,111	1,956	1,383	624	416	14,525
Non-Psychiatric	4,610	8,622	7,694	3,422	1,664	572	790	936	1,071	1,404	30,785
GRAND TOTAL	6,672	10,025	8,785	4,968	3,588	2,683	2,755	2,319	1,695	1,820	45,310
Wirral
Psychiatric	51	—	—	—	156	364	988	1,456	1,248	156	4,419
Non-Psychiatric	2,600	4,209	1,890	1,439	1,051	1,352	416	780	520	156	14,413
GRAND TOTAL	2,651	4,209	1,890	1,439	1,207	1,716	1,404	2,236	1,768	312	18,832
Chester
Psychiatric	354	423	—	—	129	104	260	128	104	260	1,762
Non-Psychiatric	91	—	371	208	1,560	1,768	1,041	—	—	—	5,039
GRAND TOTAL	445	423	371	208	1,689	1,872	1,301	128	104	260	6,801
Crewe
Psychiatric	113	128	125	125	125	104	780	811	229	125	2,665
Non-Psychiatric	197	259	346	—	208	780	3,141	2,704	1,040	364	9,039
GRAND TOTAL	310	387	471	125	333	884	3,921	3,515	1,269	489	11,704
Halton
Psychiatric	180	189	230	1,180	1,300	372	404	416	—	—	4,271
Non-Psychiatric	1,015	—	—	—	—	260	780	2,080	1,820	260	6,215
GRAND TOTAL	1,195	189	230	1,180	1,300	632	1,184	2,496	1,820	260	10,486
Macclesfield
Psychiatric	796	1,794	1,401	731	156	520	676	1,144	1,144	416	8,778
Non-Psychiatric	173	—	—	—	260	1,768	2,912	1,779	4,670	3,922	15,484
GRAND TOTAL	969	1,794	1,401	731	416	2,288	3,588	2,923	5,814	4,338	24,262
Warrington
Psychiatric	639	143	—	447	—	208	—	1,071	208	—	2,716
Non-Psychiatric	33	1,773	2,334	1,998	85	364	1,976	1,820	1,300	1,040	12,723
GRAND TOTAL	672	1,916	2,334	2,445	85	572	1,976	2,891	1,508	1,040	15,439
TOTAL
Psychiatric	5,407	6,432	5,747	6,618	9,879	9,002	8,433	6,825	3,557	1,373	63,073
Non-Psychiatric	14,605	25,293	21,975	11,518	8,618	10,202	13,864	12,606	14,421	10,256	143,358
TOTAL District	20,012	31,725	27,722	18,136	18,297	19,204	22,297	19,431	17,978	11,629	206,431
RHA/DMRU
Regional RES	2,681	4,624	2,451	4,645	6,694	6,570	6,088	5,464	6,984	8,233	54,434
BLOCK	15,247	9,949	8,631	7,419	7,765	8,166	8,361	8,361	8,341	8,341	90,581
TOTAL	37,940	46,298	38,804	30,200	32,756	33,940	36,746	33,256	33,303	28,203	351,446

£3·3 million has been set aside from the Regional Reserve to develop a cook/chill production unit in St. Helens and Knowsley. Of this £2·4 million will be repaid by the District from savings achieved.

Anti-tuberculosis Vaccines

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the number of anti-tuberculosis vaccines necessary for use only by a selected group of patients at risk is sufficient to qualify for discounts from the manufacturers.

Mr. Whitney: The Department receives a discount on the price of the intradermal vaccine it provides centrally to the National Health Service. The supplier decides the terms on which percutaneous and isoniazid resistant vaccines are offered to other customers.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the minimum and maximum salary paid to audio-visual technicians and to senior audio-visual technicians in the National Health Service; what representations have been made since the re-organisation of the National Health Service in 1974 regarding the improvement of salary scales and career prospects of these staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The current salary scale for audio-visual technicians ranges from £4,700 to £5,205 and that for the senior grade from £5,655 to £6,516. Pay and conditions of service for audio-visual technicians are matters for negotiations within the professional and technical staffs B Whitney Council. The staff side of that council proposed in 1977 that all medical illustration staff, including audio-visual technicians, should be grouped together in one grading structure. I understand that the management side of that council found no need for such a change.

Benefit Statistics

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the proportion of couples referred to in is reply to the hon. Member for Kensington, 26 November, Official Report, columns 542-4, and in other publications by his Department, as married couples, who are in fact single men and women living in shared accommodation.

Mr. Whitney: The only information available on the proportion of couples who describe themselves as married but are not actually married to each other comes from the general household survey and relates only to couples in which the woman is under 50 years of age. For the years 1981-83 combined the proportions are as follows:

*Couples according to number of dependent children (a)	Percentage of couples with women under age 50 who are not legally married to each other† (b)
0	4·7
1	3·3
2	1·6
3 or more	2·7

Notes:

* Dependent children are those aged under 16, or 16 to 18 and in full-time education.

† Information about whether a couple are legally married is collected only from women. The figures cover divorced and widowed as well as single women.

Local Offices (Interviewing Boards)

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any guidelines are issued to interviewing boards for persons applying for posts in local Department of Health and Social Security offices.

Mr. Major: Comprehensive guidelines, issued by the Civil Service Commission, are given to members of local recruitment boards in the Department. Issues covered by the guidelines include personal preparation, the general principles of selection, aspects of interviewing and assessment and the importance of avoiding discrimination of any kind.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list in the Official Report those family practitioner committees which have been criticised by his Department's director of audit or other officials from his Department for having made insufficient provision for internal audit; whether he will estimate the annual expenditure necessary to remedy those identified shortcomings; and whether he will now revise his earlier view that internal audit for family practitioner committees should not attract additional Government funding.

Mr. Hayhoe: In their preliminary review of the accounts of family practitioner committees for the financial year 1985-86 statutory auditors have, to date, issued reports on the inadequate provision for internal audit at the following committees:

Oxfordshire FPC
Suffolk FPC
Cambridgeshire FPC
Norfolk FPC
Buckinghamshire FPC
Coventry FPC
Staffordshire FPC
Birmingham FPC
Walsall FPC
Solihull FPC
Dudley FPC
Warwickshire FPC
Wolverhampton FPC
Sandwell FPC
Shropshire FPC

Form F.ID

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time taken to process the form F.ID; and what is the average cost of such processing.

Mr. Major: It is estimated that the average staff time taken by local social security offices to process form F.ID is 45 minutes and that the average staff cost of such processing is £6·20.

Leeds General Infirmary

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the need for and cost of structure repairs at Leeds general infirmary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that such information on the state of individual hospitals is not held centrally.

Private Contractors

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, by district health authority areas, the number of private contractors, and the work on which they were engaged who have had their contracts terminated due to unsatisfactory standards of work since January 1982.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities engage contractors on a wide variety of work and full details of the termination of these are not collected within the Department.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of people on the waiting list for acute surgery in each London health district from November 1982 until the latest available date.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have the available information as soon as possible.

Primary Health Care (Expenditure)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the expenditure on primary health care per head of population for each year since 1979 in (a) the Islington health authority area, (b) Barnet and (c) Sutton Coldfield.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Middlesex Hospital

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received regarding the temporary closure of the Middlesex hospital.

Mr. Whitney: By 13 December we had received 20 representations about the Middlesex hospital. The whole hospital has not closed; 260 beds are available for emergency admissions between now and 12 January 1986. Outpatients and other services continue. The accident and emergency department remains open until January, the date of its scheduled amalgamation with the Department at University College hospital.

Drug Misuse

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement on the current position of the Government's drug misuse education and information campaign.

Mr. Whitney: The campaign of information and education about the misuse of drugs, and in particular heroin misuse, has been running since February. It features a set of leaflets for parents, two television commercials and a series of poster and press advertisements.

As the next stage, the Government have launched a video training package entitled "Working with Drug Users" for professionals likely to encounter drug misuse in the course of their work. The package consisting of almost three hours of video material with associated notes and handouts is designed for use in training courses. The primary objectives of this material are to demystify drugs and to encourage and assist professional workers such as general practitioners, social workers and probation officers to work with drug users. "Working with Drug Users" is intended to fill a significant gap in existing materials and will be available for loan or purchase anywhere in Great Britain.

An announcement about the next stage in the campaign will be made early in the new year.

Health Authorities

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how he proposes to distribute resources to health authorities in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: Current spending on the hospital and community health services in England will increase by £650 million to nearly £10·3 billion in 1986-87, an increase of 6·7 per cent., or 2·2 per cent. more than forecast inflation. I am today informing regional health authorities how this extra cash is to be shared out.

I am continuing the policy of redistributing resources between different parts of the country. Those regions which have historically received less than their fair share of resources or which have rapidly growing populations will receive the largest increases, ranging up to 8 per cent.

In addition, all regions will retain the benefits of their growing cost improvement programmes. These are planned to amount to £150 million in the current year, and we expect to see further increases in 1986-87. The Thames regions, with their higher unit costs, have delivered higher levels of cost improvement than elsewhere in the country and I expect them to continue to do so.

The capital allocations to regions will be 4·5 per cent. higher overall than this year, and will be distributed mainly under the RAWP process. Regions will be able to supplement this cash by the proceeds of sales of surplus land and property, which they will be able to retain. Receipts are already running at £50 million a year and we expect them to rise very substantially. Taken together, the cash increase and increased receipts from sales will enable health authorities to carry through major programmes of investment in hospitals and community services.

Regions' revenue increases and capital allocations under RAWP are shown in the table.

The decisions on 1986-87 allocations reaffirm our commitment to distributing resources more fairly across the country. Substantial progress has been made since the arrangements recommended by the resource allocation working party (RAWP) were introduced in 1977, and next year all but the two North Thames regions will be within 4 per cent. of their target share of resources. As regions move closer to their targets it becomes increasingly important that the targets are themselves a reasonably accurate measure of need. I have therefore asked the NHS management board to review the operation of the formula, in particular the way in which relative needs in different parts of the country are measured, taking account of such factors as the patterns of illness across the country, and the special problems of the inner cities.

Health Authority Resource Distribution 1986-87

Regional Health Authority	Revenue Increase Per cent.	Capital RAWP Share £ million
Northern	6·7	36·8
Yorkshire	6·8	49·5
Trent	7·7	55·1
East Anglian	7·7	22·1
North West Thames	5·7	37·0
North East Thames	5·7	43·0
South East Thames	5·8	43·6
South West Thames	5·8	33·7
Wessex	7·7	46·6
Oxford	7·3	25·1
South Western	7·0	45·5
West Midlands	8·0	76·5
Mersey	6·0	28·5
North Western	6·4	62·3
TOTAL	6·7	605·3

Notes:

1. The total capital allocation to regional health authorities in 1986-87 is £683 million, including dental hospital re-equipment; inner cities bias; strategic shifts; 35 per cent. teaching hospital support; and the health authority central fund.

2. Cash figures are subject to Parliamentary approval of the Department's estimates.

Vaccine Damage Payments

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has made any estimate of the cost of providing a scheme comparable to the industrial injuries scheme for all those who have received vaccine damage payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985]: To provide a weekly pension for all those who have received a vaccine damage payment at rates equivalent to industrial injuries disablement benefit would cost around £2·5 million a year. It is not possible to estimate the total cost of a scheme comparable with the industrial injuries scheme because of lack of information.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, for the financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85, for England, what were (a) the costs of producing and distributing literature about exemption from prescription charges, (b) the costs of inspection for fraud in claiming exemption from prescription charges and (c) the cost of administering the sale of pre-payment certificates.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 766]: Separate figures for England concerning the cost of producing literature about exemption from prescription charges are not available. The costs of producing the explanatory leaflet P11 for England, Wales and Scotland and the poster for display in England and Wales in the financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85 were £75,669 and £83,088, respectively.

The costs of distributing leaflets form part of the overall administration cost of the authorities which undertake this and are not separately identified.

The costs of inspection for fraud in claiming exemption from prescription charges and of administering the sale of pre-payment certificates are part of the overall administration costs of family practitioner committees and are not separately identified.

Trauma Research

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Eccles on 3 December, Official Report, column 211, if he will now indicate what research is being funded by his Department into the effects of trauma on patients who have surgery performed upon them in National Health Service hospitals; if he will give his estimate of the number of people who suffer from trauma following industrial injuries, accidents in the home, as well as road accidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 766]: The Department looks to the Medical Research Council, which is the main Government-funded agency carrying out biomedical research from its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science, to support research in this field.

Information available centrally on the number of people who suffer from trauma following industrial injuries, accidents in the home and road accidents relates to inpatients only and is given in the table.

Inpatient discharges (including deaths) of injury cases treated in National Health Service non-psychiatric hospitals in 1983, England

Place of accident	Estimated number
Road traffic	59,710
Home	81,140
Work	14,620
Other or unspecified	371,310
TOTAL	526,780

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 18 December 1985

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Spearing asked the Attorney-General how many senior and middle ranking posts are currently filled in the establishment of the Metropolitan police solicitors' department and provincial prosecuting offices; and how many equivalent posts there are in the reorganised Crown Prosecution Service.

The Solicitor-General: Local authorities employ a variety of different arrangements for grading staff in prosecuting solicitors' departments. Staff in the Metropolitan police solicitor's department enjoy the same terms and conditions as civil servants, although they are not in fact civil servants. For the purpose of this answer I have taken senior posts in the Crown Prosecution Service to be those at grade 5 in the Civil Service (the grade which will ordinarily be applicable to chief Crown prosecutors) and above; middle ranking posts are taken to be those at grade 6 (the grade which will ordinarily be applicable to branch Crown prosecutors).

It is anticipated that the Crown Prosecution Service will have 69 posts at grade 5 or above. There are at present 11 such posts in the Metropolitan police solicitor's department involving responsibility for work which will be transferred to the Crown Prosecution Service. In county prosecuting solicitors' departments 10 posts attract a salary on scales which, after abatement to take account of differences between Civil Service and local government pension schemes, have the same or a higher maximum salary than that for grade 5.

Comparable figures for grade 6 posts are not yet available on a national basis. However, in the metropolitan counties outside London there will be 36 posts at grade 6 (maximum salary £22,926). There are at present no posts in prosecuting solicitors' departments which, after abatement to take account of differences between Civil Service and local government, have the same of a higher maximum salary than that for grade 6 (other than those which will become grade 5 or above).

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Strang asked the Prime Minister when the Government expect to complete their study of the Australian Royal Commission's report on British nuclear tests.

The Prime Minister: The Royal Commission was appointed by and has presented its report to the Australian Government. Her Majesty's Government will be discussing with the Australian Government those recommendations which affect the United Kingdom, and cannot complete their study of the report without taking these discussions into account.

Mr. Strang asked the Prime Minister what arrangements the Government have made with the Australian Government to discuss the Royal Commission report on British nuclear tests and its recommendations which affect the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: The report has only just been published and we are, of course, studying it in detail. At his request, I have agreed with Senator Gareth Evans, Australian Minister for Resources and Energy, that discussions between officials should be held in Canberra shortly to discuss those recommendations which affect the United Kingdom.

Reprocessing Plant, Dounreay

Mr. Wallace asked the Prime Minister what representations Her Majesty's Government have received from foreign Governments regarding the proposed reprocessing plant at Dounreay.

The Prime Minister: None. The Norwegian and Japanese Governments have however asked for information about the proposed development and this has been supplied.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to transfer civil servants from the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Education and Science to augment the divisions in the Ministry of Defence with responsibility for the strategic defence initiative; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Yes. One civil servant from each of the Departments mentioned by the hon. Gentleman has already been transferred to the SDI participation office which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence recently set up within the MOD.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Cleaning and Maintenance

Mr. Greenway asked the Lord Privy Seal which Department of the House is responsible for the cleaning and maintenance of the gentlemen's and ladies' lavatories in the Palace; and what steps are being taken to improve the standard of hygiene and ensure that adequate supplies of toilet rolls, towels and soap are available.

Mr. Biffen: The Property Services Agency is responsible for the cleaning and maintenance of lavatories in the House of Commons. Routine cleaning is carried out on a regular basis, supplemented by occasional deep hygiene cleaning. The authorities of the House are responsible for supplies of toilet rolls, towels and soap. Certain problems have occurred recently, due to sickness among a high proportion of the directly employed labour staff, but steps are being taken to alleviate these problems. All the arrangements are kept under review.

SCOTLAND

NHS (Privatisation)

113. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has given to health board members about possible conflicts of interests arising from privatisation proposals.

Mr. John MacKay: The general obligation of chairmen and members to declare any interests related to specific contracts is set out in the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975. The standing orders of health boards also cover declarations of interest.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he requires health board chairmen to disclose to him particular financial interests which could lead to a conflict of interest when awarding contracts for hospital catering services;

(2) whether he requires health board members to dislose to him particular financial interests which could lead to a conflict of interest when awarding contracts for hospital cleaning services.

Mr. John MacKay: No, but under the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975 chairmen and members of boards are required, if they have any interest in a particular contract and if they are present at a relevant meeting of a board or one of its committees, to declare that interest and take no part in the discussions about the award of the contract.

Civil Servants

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants there are in his Department employed (a) in Scotland and (b) outside Scotland; and how many in each category were born in Scotland.

Mr. Younger: The number of Scottish Office staff in post (full-time equivalents) on 1 December 1985 comprised 9,849 based in Scotland and 31 outside Scotland. Information about place of birth would be disproportionately costly to obtain.

Ambulance Drivers

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the reasons for the lower level of pay received by a Scottish ambulance driver relative to his English and Welsh counterparts in recent years.

Mr. Younger: Ambulancemen and women in Scotland receive the same nationally agreed basic rates of pay as their English and Welsh counterparts. Within the single ambulance service which operates in Scotland a policy of employing reliefs means that the level of overtime working is not as high as it is in many services in England and Wales. Another factor contributing to lower earnings in Scotland is the absence of an up-to-date bonus scheme. Bonus schemes can be implemented by local agreement, and over 50 per cent. of the ambulance work force in England and Wales are covered by bonus schemes which can boost earnings considerably. The introduction of a current bonus scheme in Scotland has been unacceptable to the trade unions concerned because of the loss of jobs which would be required to finance it.

List D Schools

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many children and young people are liable to be displaced as a result of the closure of list D schools;

(2) if he will list the list D schools which will remain open after 1 April 1986;

(3) further to his reply of 20 November, Official Report, column 195, if he will give the number of children placed in list D schools as a condition of a supervision requirement imposed by a children's hearing.

Mr. Younger: Six hundred and sixty seven children are currently placed in list D schools following decisions by children's hearings.

Thirty one children are at present accommodated at two schools which intend to close by 31 March. The cases of those likely to remain at the time of closure will require to be brought before children's hearings for variation to the conditions of residence.

The following schools have indicated that they intend to remain open after 31 March 1986 and a further nine schools are at present discussing terms of agreements with local authorities:

Balnacraig
Balrossie
Kerelaw
Kibble
Oakbank
Rossie
St. Mary's Kenmure

Road Works (A92)

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much is to be spent on the A92 Bridge of Don to the Gordon district/Banff Buchan boundary between 1985 and 1990; and when he expects the major works to be started and completed.

Mr. Ancram: Expenditure on major road improvements for this section of A92-A952 trunk road between 1985 and 1990 is expected to amount to about £10 million. Work on the north Donside road roundabout will commence in the spring of 1986 and will take two to three months to complete. Schemes for Murcar-Balmedie, Tipperty, and Ellon bypass are expected to be ready to start in 1986-87 subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and the availability of finance. Each of these schemes will require a two-year contract.

Woodlands

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he proposes to control the destruction for agricultural purposes of woodlands in areas of outstanding natural beauty.

Mr. John MacKay: Since April 1984 the Forestry Commission, in considering applications for felling licences in areas of outstanding natural beauty and elsewhere, has operated a general presumption against the felling of woodland for the purpose of converting the land to agricultural use. No licence is granted for this purpose without the environmental impact of such felling being considered fully under the commission's consultation procedures.

Health Boards

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what criteria concerning other financial interests he applies when appointing health board chairmen;

(2) what criteria relating to outside financial interests he uses when appointing members to health boards.

Mr. John MacKay: In making appointments to health boards my right hon. Friend assesses the personal contribution and experience which individuals can bring to the work of boards and seeks to provide among the board membership as wide relevant experience, including that of financial matters, as he can.

Tayside Health Board

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now replace the chairman of Tayside health board.

Mr. John MacKay: No.

Shipping Services (Islands)

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance he proposes for shipping services to the Scottish islands in 1986-87.

Mr. Younger: I propose to give deficit grants of £7.4 million to Caledonian MacBrayne and £1 million to Orkney Islands Shipping Company. I am pleased to note that because of the company's increased efficiency and good trading position, the grant to Caledonian MacBrayne reflects its estimated deficit, which is lower than the funding requirement in the present financial year. I propose to continue the present level of rebates on fares and charges for P and O and the various bulk shippers with whom I have undertakings, and will make provision for grants of £3.8 million to P and O and £1.4 million to bulk shippers.

Total revenue support next year will amount to £13.6 million.

North of Scotland Hydro Electric Board

Mr. Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the external financing limit for the North of Scotland Hydro Electric Board in the current financial year.

Mr. Younger: I have made the following change to the external financing limit of the North of Scotland Hydro Electric Board in 1985-86:

	£ million
Previous limit	−19
Revised limit	−30
Change	−11

The new limit, which is consistent with the board's estimated outturn for the current year reflects a reduced demand for external finance due to the board's successful efforts to increase sales and contain costs.

National Health Service (Revenue and Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the revenue and capital expenditure in each year since 1974, expressing the figures (a) in money terms, (b) adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) adjusted by the movement of National Health Service pay and prices.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 53-54]: The tables give separately the current and capital expenditure on hospital and community health services by each health board on a cash basis and at 1985-86 prices as measured by the gross domestic product deflator. No separate record is maintained of pay and price movements within the NHS in Scotland. When measured by a pay and price index appropriate to current expenditure maintained for England by the Department of Health and Social Security, and by a construction price index for capital expenditure, spending on hospital and community health services in Scotland between 1974-75 and 1984-85 has increased by 17·7 per cent. It is not appropriate to revalue expenditure of individual health boards on hospital services by reference to a national index for pay and price movements because the composition of that expenditure may differ substantially from the national average.

Hospital and Community Health Services: Gross Capital Expenditure by Health Boards

Health Board	1974-75 £'000		1975-76 £'000		1976-77 £'000		1977-78 £'000		1978-79 £'000		1979-80 £'000
	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator	Cash	Adjusted by GDP Deflator
Argyll and Clyde	4,262	14,326	4,855	12,982	4,419	10,442	4,648	9,645	7,397	13,870	8,775	14,084
Ayrshire and Arran	3,118	10,480	3,406	9,108	3,026	7,150	4,068	8,441	4,643	8,706	4,113	6,601
Borders	391	1,314	719	1,923	950	2,245	1,073	2,226	1,250	2,344	1,085	1,741
Dumfries and Galloway	1,876	6,305	1,113	2,976	620	1,465	529	1,098	676	1,268	748	1,201
Fife	1,480	4,974	1,372	3,669	1,134	2,680	1,204	2,498	2,133	3,999	2,857	4,585
Forth Valley	557	1,872	1,002	2,679	961	2,271	1,069	2,218	1,841	3,452	1,855	2,977
Grampian	2,543	8,547	3,604	9,637	2,572	6,078	2,113	4,384	3,558	6,671	2,588	4,154
Greater Glasgow	5,654	19,003	8,711	23,293	8,969	21,194	8,934	18,538	11,648	21,840	16,263	26,102
Highland	437	1,469	1,423	3,805	1,348	3,185	1,756	3,644	2,336	4,380	3,830	6,147
Lanarkshire	4,122	13,854	5,251	14,041	5,053	11,940	3,060	6,350	2,508	4,703	3,314	5,319
Lothian	2,590	8,705	4,329	11,576	4,525	10,693	7,034	14,596	8,468	15,878	7,763	12,460
Orkney	51	171	88	235	50	118	116	241	278	521	73	117
Shetland	38	128	151	404	158	373	84	174	158	296	328	526
Tayside	3,498	11,757	2,803	7,495	2,763	6,529	2,148	4,457	3,645	6,834	3,730	5,987
Western Isles	102	343	378	1,011	239	565	328	681	645	1,209	309	496
Total	30,719	103,247	39,205	104,834	36,787	86,928	38,164	79,191	51,184	95,971	57,631	92,497

These figures include expenditure on centrally funded schemes and are therefore not readily comparable.

Hospital and Community Health Services: Gross Capital Expenditure by Health Boards

Health Board	1980-81 £'000 Cash	1980-81 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1981-82 £'000 Cash	1981-82 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1982-83 £'000 Cash	1982-83 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1983-84 £'000 Cash	1983-84 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1984-85 £'000 Cash	1984-85 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1985-86 £'000 Estimated Expenditure
Argyll & Clyde	8,138	10,994	12,889	15,815	13,313	15,257	17,814	19,542	14,251	14,964	13,810
Ayrshire & Arran	4,680	6,323	5,896	7,234	4,505	5,163	2,666	2,925	3,511	3,687	4,269
Borders	1,488	2,010	2,703	3,317	2,761	3,164	3,634	3,986	8,210	8,621	8,884
Dumfries & Galloway	807	1,090	1,232	1,512	1,360	1,559	1,288	1,413	2,028	2,129	2,447
Fife	3,012	4,069	5,938	7,286	7,564	8,668	5,968	6,547	6,170	6,479	5,013
Forth Valley	2,153	2,909	3,729	4,575	4,360	4,997	3,804	4,173	8,488	8,912	10,419
Grampian	4,148	5,604	4,474	5,490	4,787	5,486	5,064	5,555	5,370	5,639	7,240
Greater Glasgow	13,690	18,495	18,919	23,214	17,604	20,174	16,703	18,323	19,176	20,135	22,558
Highland	5,758	7,779	6,274	7,698	6,615	7,581	8,786	9,638	7,596	7,976	7,341
Lanarkshire	2,468	3,334	4,072	4,996	4,909	5,626	6,370	6,988	6,680	7,014	7,331
Lothian	6,892	9,311	12,028	14,758	17,441	19,987	17,320	19,000	16,757	17,595	20,390
Orkney	40	54	206	253	94	108	325	357	266	279	301
Shetland	377	509	340	417	1,705	1,954	897	984	535	562	685
Tayside	5,506	7,439	4,980	6,110	4,821	5,525	5,182	5,685	5,079	5,333	6,670
Western Isles	306	413	291	357	521	597	527	578	639	671	877
Total	59,463	80,333	83,971	103,032	92,360	105,846	96,348	105,694	104,756	109,996	*119,911

These figures include expenditure on centrally funded schemes and are therefore not readily comparable.
* Includes £1·676 million not allocated to individual Boards.

Hospital and community health services: gross current expenditure by health boards

Health board	1974-75 £'000 Cash	1974-75 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator	1975-76 £'000 Cash	1975-76 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator	1976-77 £'000 Cash	1976-77 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator	1977-78 £'000 Cash	1977-78 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator	1978-79 £'000 Cash	1978-79 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator	1979-80 £'000 Cash	1979-80 £'000 Adjusted by GDP deflator
Argyll and Clyde	22,525	75,707	30,756	82,242	34,486	81,490	39,046	81,020	45,201	84,752	55,349	88,835
Ayrshire and Arran	13,639	45,841	17,932	47,950	20,435	48,288	23,294	48,335	26,637	49,944	31,855	51,127
Borders	4,361	14,657	5,803	15,517	6,652	15,719	7,598	15,683	8,577	16,082	10,097	16,200
Dumfries and Galloway	7,482	25,147	10,535	28,171	12,370	29,230	13,444	27,896	15,199	28,498	18,618	29,880
Fife	14,218	47,787	19,212	51,373	21,674	51,216	24,539	50,918	27,862	52,241	33,522	53,803
Forth Valley	14,531	48,839	19,094	51,057	21,662	51,187	24,652	51,153	27,982	52,466	33,222	53,321
Grampian	27,220	91,486	35,805	95,743	40,901	96,649	46,848	97,210	53,239	99,823	64,095	102,872
Greater Glasgow	91,212	306,564	120,053	321,022	135,313	319,745	151,477	314,315	173,541	325,389	205,196	329,340
Highland	12,013	40,376	16,027	42,856	17,966	42,454	20,362	42,251	23,434	43,939	28,059	45,035
Lanarkshire	23,036	77,424	30,890	82,600	36,065	85,222	43,160	89,557	49,536	92,880	59,716	95,844
Lothian	52,812	177,501	70,034	187,271	79,511	187,884	90,733	188,271	102,554	192,289	121,822	195,524
Orkney	720	2,420	1,003	2,682	1,104	2,608	1,217	2,525	1,452	2,722	1,826	2,931
Shetland	840	2,823	1,147	3,067	1,330	3,143	1,519	3,152	1,770	3,319	2,353	3,777
Tayside	32,244	108,372	44,224	118,255	50,281	118,814	56,317	116,858	63,306	118,699	74,896	120,208
Western Isles	1,297	4,359	1,870	5,000	2,016	4,764	2,279	4,729	2,852	5,348	3,443	5,526
Total	318,150	1,069,302	424,385	1,134,808	481,796	1,138,413	546,445	1,133,873	623,142	1,168,391	744,069	1,194,231

Figures included expenditure by boards on associated services which does not form part of their current expenditure allocations.

Hospital and community health services: Gross current expenditure by health boards

Health Board	1980-81 £'000 Cash	1980-81 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1981-82 £'000 Cash	1981-82 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1982-83 £'000 Cash	1982-83 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1983-84 £'000 Cash	1983-84 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1984-85 £'000 Cash	1984-85 £'000 Adjusted by GDP Deflator	1985-86 £'000 Estimated expenditure 1985-86
Argyll & Clyde	68,464	92,495	78,131	95,867	83,257	95,413	86,963	95,398	91,524	96,100	99,428
Ayrshire & Arran	41,470	56,026	48,325	59,295	55,567	63,680	61,243	67,184	65,865	69,158	70,786
Borders	13,412	18,120	14,948	18,341	16,649	19,080	17,754	19,476	18,998	19,948	20,231
Dumfries & Galloway	24,233	32,739	26,702	32,763	29,145	33,400	31,319	34,357	33,743	35,430	35,569
Fife	43,017	58,116	49,036	60,167	53,454	61,258	58,066	63,698	62,960	66,108	66,415
Forth Valley	43,251	58,432	48,123	59,047	52,561	60,235	55,460	60,840	59,101	62,056	64,456
Grampian	84,934	114,746	92,446	113,431	99,472	113,995	107,105	117,494	114,708	120,443	121,540
Greater Glasgow	266,403	359,910	295,094	362,080	311,237	356,678	329,300	361,250	350,107	367,612	364,823
Highland	35,597	48,092	40,243	49,378	42,221	48,385	44,768	49,110	48,073	50,477	51,041
Lanarkshire	77,813	105,125	86,055	105,589	93,738	107,424	97,754	107,236	106,286	111,600	112,538
Lothian	154,960	209,351	179,496	220,242	188,687	216,235	197,748	216,930	209,335	219,802	220,797
Orkney	2,373	3,206	2,715	3,331	2,970	3,404	3,198	3,508	3,468	3,641	3,686
Shetland	3,068	4,145	3,414	4,189	3,703	4,244	4,027	4,418	4,390	4,610	4,619
Tayside	96,509	130,384	105,166	129,039	111,204	127,440	117,509	128,907	123,913	130,109	128,436
Western Isles	4,438	5,996	5,047	6,193	5,559	6,371	6,041	6,627	6,672	7,007	7,048
Total	959,942	1,296,882	1,074,941	1,318,953	1,149,424	1,317,240	1,218,260	1,336,431	1,299,143	1,364,100	*1,378,067

Figures included expenditure by boards on associated services which does not form part of their current expenditure allocations.
*Includes £6·654 million not allocated to individual boards.

WALES

Bone Marrow Transplant Unit

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now give the date when the building of the bone marrow transplant unit will start; and from what date he estimates that 20 transplants will be carried out each year.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The South Glamorgan health authority, which is responsible for providing the unit, has agreed that work will commence during the current financial year to provide facilities which will enable twenty transplants to be carried out during the financial year 1986-87 and therafter.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been (a) the total number of new hospital beds since May 1979 and (b) the total number of hospital beds closed, including those in hospitals which have been partially closed since May 1979 by authority.

Mr Mark Robinson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) on 22 July 1985 at column 321-34, which contains the available information for the period 1979 to 1984.

TRANSPORT

Motorway Safety Barriers

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the safety properties of concrete safety barriers on motorways and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: During 1985 concrete safety barriers have been the subject of two exchanges in the House and a small amount of correspondence. I shall be meeting a number of hon. Members shortly to discuss concrete safety barriers.

Airfields (Public Buildings)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, for all airfields in the United Kingdom licensed by his Department, all buildings which are frequently used or occupied by more than 1,000 members of the public for recreational purposes; and which are within two miles of the airfield perimeter.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Neither the Civil Aviation Authority (which is responsible for aerodrome licensing) nor the Department keep records in sufficiently comprehensive form to enable them to compile such a list: to create such records would be inordinately expensive.

Pilot Boat R Regulations

Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to bring into effect the Pilot Boat R Regulations dated October 1983.

Mr. Ridley: I am considering this matter, along with others on which the Transport Select Committee made recommendations in its report on marine pilotage, and will make an announcement in due course.

Public Transport Plan (Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department has received from the town clerk of Manchester under the heading public transport plan for 1986-87 to 1988-89; what reply he is sending; if he will publish the correspondence in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: My officials have received a letter from the town clerk of Manchester city council in support of the application by the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority for a redetermination of the expenditure level and have acknowledged receipt. No doubt the town clerk will be prepared to make a copy of his letter available to the right hon. Gentleman.

I expect to announce very shortly my decision on the application made by Greater Manchester passenger transport authority for the determination of its expenditure level.

Lighthouses

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state projected total staffing levels of lighthouses in (a) Northern Lighthouse Board and (b) Trinity House Lighthouse Service areas over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I am presently considering the boards' manpower forecasts for the years 1986-87 to 1988-89. I shall make an announcement on these in due course after the House resumes.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has decided the amount and distribution of the transport supplementary grant for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I have decided to accept for transport supplementary grant a total of £328 million of capital expenditure which local highway authorities estimate they will spend in 1986-87 on roads of more than local importance. A total of £164 million of grant will be paid at a flat rate of 50 per cent. on all accepted expenditure.

In deciding the distribution of the grant among the 108 authorities which will be eligible next year, I have considered carefully the transport policies and programmes submitted in the summer, particularly as they related to roads which carry heavy through traffic. Many of the more important local authority roads, such as those which form part of the primary route network and major urban roads, carry traffic similar in mix and density to that on national roads. I want to encourage local authorities to improve such roads to the standards which people expect of national roads. Improvements to these through routes are a sound investment with benefits to the economy as well as to local people and industry. TSG represents the Government's share in this investment. I have, therefore, looked for road schemes which benefit longer distance traffic, which take heavy lorries away from places where people live and shop, and which provide good value for money. The amount of grant available to each authority depends upon the stage which their road building plans have reached and what can reasonably be achieved in 1986-87.

This settlement supports 310 major road schemes, of which 151 are bypasses on the primary route network. Sixty-three are bypasses and relief roads on other routes — many of these are in urban areas where authorities still face severe traffic problems, and where the costs and difficulties of road building are daunting, but the benefits considerable. The settlement recognises the value of local road investment in our cities as much as between cities. I welcome the determination of the metropolitan district councils to press on with the programmes they will take over next April and the readiness of London boroughs to bring forward schemes which have not flourished under the GLC.

The amount of accepted expenditure and the amount of grant for each council is shown in annex N to the "Rate Support Grant Report (England) 1986-87" made to the House today. Councils are being informed individually today of their own figures.

The amount of expenditure accepted for TSG is not intended to cover the whole of each council's capital highways programme. Within the resources available to them councils should be able to undertake some £200 million of additional works to improve their roads.

Manchester International Airport Company

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report his Department's letter of 19 November to the town clerk of Manchester concerning the establishment of a Manchester international airport company and the town clerk's reply of 9 December; and what is his reaction to the shadow board's decisions as conveyed by the town clerk's letter.

Mr. Ridley: If the town clerk of Manchester city council is willing to make a copy of his letter of 9 December available to the right hon. Gentleman, I would have no objection to him also making available my Department's letters of 19 November and 16 December, the last of which replies to the town clerk's letter of 9 December.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Manpower

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the effective loss of police manpower at the rank of sergeant as a result of the custody officer requirements of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (a) in England and (b) in Thames Valley.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The 1984 Act is intended to be broadly neutral in resource terms, and although extra sergeants may in some instances be required to ensure that the custody officer functions are properly carried out, there will be scope for offsetting savings. For example, some custody officers may be able to combine responsibility for the detention and treatment of arrested persons with other supervisory or administrative duties, and it may be possible to transfer to constables some duties hitherto carried out by sergeants. Police authorities and chief officers are aware that consideration will be given to any applications for adjustments in police establishments to help them meet the custody officer requirements. My right hon. Friend and I are today meeting representatives of the Thames Valley Police Authority and the chief constable to discuss the authority's recent application for an increase in the establishment of the force.

AIDS

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he is making for medical and counselling care to be provided in the prison acquired immune deficiency syndrome unit.

Mr. Mellor: It is planned to convert part of the hospital complex at Brixton prison to use as an isolation unit for the care of patients suffering from infectious disease, including AIDS. The unit will draw upon the medical nursing and other specialist resources already available to the establishment.

Prison Population

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the results of the ethnic monitoring of the prison population will be published.

Mr. Mellor: It is expected that information on the ethnic origin of persons received into prison department establishments will be published in the early months of the new year; corresponding information on the prison population will not become available until some time later. Publication has been delayed because priority was given to analytical work associated with the rapid rise in the prison population earlier in 1985.

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were in custody in Her Majesty's prisons at the latest date for which figures are available; and how many of these prisoners were held on remand awaiting trial.

Mr. Mellor: On 31 October 1985 about 46,900 persons were held in prison department establishments in England and Wales, of whom about 8,150 were untried. Information on how many were awaiting commencement of their trial is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoner Costs

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average weekly cost of keeping a prisoner in H Wing at Durham prison.

Mr. Mellor: In the financial year 1984-85 the average weekly cost of keeping a person in custody in Durham prison was £226. Cost information for particular locations within a prison is not available.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of keeping (a) a male and (b) a female in custody in the financial year 1984-85.

Mr. Mellor: The average costs of keeping a male and a female in custody during the financial year 1984-85 were £13,183 and £18,902 respectively.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the average length of time taken to review life sentence prisoners for release on licence in any recent convenient period.

Mr. Mellor: The average time at present taken between consideration of a case by the local review committee at the prison to consideration by the Parole Board is about 10½ months.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the average length of time between a decision in favour of release on licence and the actual release of a life sentence prisoner in any recent convenient period.

Mr. Mellor: The decision to release a life sentence prisoner is taken by my right hon. Friend on the recommendation of the Parole Board and after consultation with the Lord Chief Justice and, if available, the trial judge. When release is authorised, a provisional release date is fixed some time ahead — usually 12 months, though the period may be longer or shorter in the light of circumstances of the individual case. In all cases, release is dependent upon the prisoner's continued good behaviour, upon suitable arrangements being made for his resettlement and, in most cases, upon the satisfactory completion of periods in open conditions and—or the pre-release employment scheme. Failure to observe these conditions can lead to the deferment or cancellation of the provisional release date.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently serving life sentences in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: According to the records held centrally, which are approximate, on 31 October 1985 about 2,070 persons in prison department establishments in England and Wales were serving life sentences, including custody for life and detention during Her Majesty's pleasure or for life under section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933.

Plastic Bullets

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the guns used for discharging baton rounds held by the Metropolitan police have on any occasion operated defectively; if on any occasion the metal casing has remained on the rounds after discharge; and if he is taking steps to replace the converted Very pistols now in use.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This equipment has been used only in training. We understand that there have been occasional minor malfunctions, including one or two where the metal end-cap has not dropped off immediately after discharge. There are no present plans to replace the baton round discharger, but the Commissioner is reviewing the range of public order equipment following the riots at Brixton and Tottenham.

Prison Statistics

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the budget at each penal establishment for medical services for each individual prisoner imprisoned during a year.

Mr. Mellor: Only a small proportion of expenditure on medical services is budgeted at establishment level. Across the prison service as a whole medical services are estimated to have cost £31·8 million in the 1984-85 financial year; as the average inmate population during that period was about 43,400, the average cost of providing medical services per inmate was about £733.

Police, Fire and Civil Defence Authorities

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has redetermined the expenditure levels for the new joint police and fire and civil defence authorities for the financial year 1986-87.

Mr. Hurd: I am today notifying these authorities of my decisions on redetermination of their expenditure levels which are as follows:

	Police £ million
Greater Manchester	83·687
Merseyside	59·808
Northumbria	43·431
South Yorkshire	35·412
West Midlands	80·831
West Yorkshire	63·269

	Fire and Civil Defence £ million		Fire £ million	Civil Defence £ million
Greater Manchester	40·139	These figures comprise	40·056	0·083
Merseyside	26·884		26·804	0·080
South Yorkshire	20·059		19·987	0·072
Tyne and Wear	19·992		19·921	0·071
West Midlands	36·374		36·290	0·084
West Yorkshire	32·388		32·305	0·083
London	147·383		147·067	0·316

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the contract to provide premises for the Metropolitan police at Drummond Gate, Rampayne street, Pimlico.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Metropolitan police occupy two office buildings on the site between Drummond Gate and Rampayne street, Pimlico, on leases from the Crown Estates Commissioners. These buildings have been in use by the force since they were completed in 1983 and 1984. There are no plans for additional police accommodation on this site.

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recommendations he has now received from Sir Kenneth Newman in regard to training, strategy, tactics and equipment as a result of the Metropolitan police review group's fresh examination of the police response to serious spontaneous public disorder in the light of events since the riots in Brixton and Tottenham.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The review is not yet complete.

Police, Fire, and Civil Defence Authorities (Precepts)

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what maximum precepts he proposes to prescribe in respect of 1986-87 for the new joint police and fire and civil defence authorities.

Mr. Hurd: My proposals for the maximum precept levels of these authorities for 1986-87 are as follows:

Police

	Pence in the £.
Greater Manchester	16·52
Merseyside	25·62
Northumbria	13·01
South Yorkshire	17·12
West Midlands	12·67
West Yorkshire	20·81

Fire and Civil Defence

	Pence in the £.
Greater Manchester	9·09
Merseyside	6·42
South Yorkshire	10·84
Tyne and Wear	10·98
West Midlands	6·17
West Yorkshire	11·20
London	7·50

Formal notification of the proposed maximum precepts has been served on the authorities today. I have asked the authorities to let me know by 15 January whether they accept the proposed maximum precepts.

Inner City Disturbances

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what study he has made of the effect of public street lighting on the recent inner city disturbances.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We know of no conclusive research evidence to show that improved street and estate lighting can deter crime, but experience from the Department of the Environment's priority estate project suggests improved lighting can deter crime and reduce tenants' fear of crime. The background set out in the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Tottenham (Mr. Atkinson) on 14 February, at column 234, is still relevant.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government policy on psychological and behavioural experiments on animals in the light of the evidence sent to his Department on 9 May and 14 August by the Mobilisation for Laboratory Animals organisation.

Mr. Mellor: The Advisory Committee on Animal Experiments has been reviewing experimental work in psychology and behavioural science. As my noble Friend said in another place on 12 December 1985, at column 413, we are awaiting with interest the report of the committee's consideration of the subject.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Stretford on 9 December, Official Report, column 462, if he will give the reasons for not allowing friends, relatives or representatives to remain with travellers during interviews at the port of arrival; if he will indicate the regulation under which this procedure was established; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: A person seeking entry for a purpose for which an entry clearance is not required must himself satisfy the immigration officer that he qualifies for entry under the immigration rules. In practice most passengers are granted leave to enter after a brief initial interview and the presence of friends, relatives or representatives at the intitial stage would be likely to hinder the rapid and efficient clearance of passengers through the control.

The relevant legal provisions include paragraph 2(1) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971, which provides that an immigration officer may examine any persons who have arrived in the United Kingdom for the purpose of determining whether leave should be granted or withheld and paragraphs 4(1) and (2) which place an obligation on the person so examined to furnish to the person carrying out the examination all such information as that person may require for the purpose of his functions under paragraph 2. It is an offence under section 26(1) of the Act if the passenger refuses or fails to furnish information without reasonable excuse. Paragraphs 26 and 27 of Schedule 2 give powers to the Secretary of State to specify the conditions and restrictions (if any) to be observed in a control area designated for the embarkation or disembarkation of passengers at any port.

Fire Precautions

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought and how many have been successful for non-compliance with the requirements of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 and Statutory Instrument 1972 No. 238.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information available to me which may be incomplete is given in the table. The number of prosecutions may reflect the nature of fire prevention activity rather than the extent of offending.

Defendants proceeded against in magistrates' courts and found guilty at all courts of offences under the Fire Precautions Act 1971—England and Wales

	Number of defendants
Year	Proceeded against	Found guilty
1975	34	33
1976	53	47
1977	25	25
1978	15	12
1979	22	18
1980	43	38

Year	Number of defendants
	Proceeded against	Found guilty
1981	44	38
1982	38	35
1983	33	30
1984	89	57

Greater Manchester Police Board

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be replying to the letter sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, on 12 October, concerning the composition of the Greater Manchester police board.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend will be writing to the right hon. Member shortly.

Premises (Lighting Standards)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to chief fire officers on the standards of external and internal lighting of premises which they inspect for the purpose of licensing.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Chief fire officers are aware of relevant British standards and the regulations for electrical installations issued by the Institution of Electrical Engineers with respect to normal and emergency lighting for premises used by the public which are required to have a licence. Specific guidance on lighting in cinemas for licensing authorities and licensees is contained in the Guide to the Cinematograph (Safety) Regulations 1955 currently under review. A guide to fire precautions in other places of entertainment which will include recommendations on the standards of lighting is currently being prepared.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he takes to provide advice on external lighting as a crime prevention measure to those responsible for the design of new housing.

Mr. Giles Shaw: At the request of the Home Office, the British Standards Institution has prepared a guide for architects and planners on the security of new dwellings. This is to be published shortly and which will include advice on lighting as a crime prevention measure. Advice is also available for police force crime prevention officers and architect liaison officers to provide advice on external lighting as a crime prevention measure to architects, tenants' and community associations, and other interested bodies.

Sports Grounds (Safety Certificates)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take to reduce the administrative procedures involved in the granting of safety certificates to sports grounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The issue of a safety certificate under the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975 is the responsibility of the appropriate local authority which has a statutory duty to consult the chief officer of police and the building authority about the terms and conditions to be contained within it. The operation of the Safety of Sports Grounds Act has been the subject of a review by the committee of inquiry into crowd safety and control at sports grounds, whose final report is expected to be published soon.

Immigration

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response has been received from those hon. Members referred to in his statement on Tuesday 29 October about representations made by right hon. and hon. Members in immigration cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: My hon. and learned Friend wrote to 23 hon. Members. Only two have replied giving express consent to make the correspondence public. In these circumstances, I do not believe that it would be right to name any of the hon. Members or publish any of the correspondence.

Individual replies have been received from 12 hon. Members out of the 23. Four of these have objected to publication; one has written but has not made his position clear; and one has asked for further information. Four hon. Members have agreed to their names being published—but not the correspondence—in the context of a debate. Three of these hon. Members have drawn attention to a statement issued following a meeting of hon. Members of the Parliamentary Labour party concerned with immigration and entry procedures making the same point. A letter in similar terms has been received from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) in his capacity as chairman of the Parliamentary Labour party's home affairs group.

I think it would now be sensible to proceed to hold discussions referred to in my statement to the House on 29 October. The aim of these discussions should be to agree upon a code of practice which can be applied to the general run of immigration cases and which achieves a sensible balance between the rights and privileges of hon. Members to make representations on behalf of their constituents and the need to maintain an efficient and effective immigration control in accordance with the Immigration Act 1971 and the immigration rules, which have been endorsed by Parliament.

Local Voluntary Sector (Paper)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what was the response to the paper entitled "Strengthening the Local Voluntary Sector" on which his Department invited comments in June 1985.

Mr. Hurd: I am glad to say that the proposals in this consultation paper were generally welcomed.

In the light of this response, it has been decided to establish a development fund with the objective of strengthening the voluntary sector at a local level. The fund will enable grants to be made to help start or strengthen local "generalist" voluntary organisations whose function is to provide support and services to other voluntary bodies in their areas, to stimulate volunteering, help develop new voluntary projects and promote collaboration with statutory agencies. Typical recipients might be local councils for voluntary service or volunteer bureaux. The fund will have available the sum £1 million for three years from April 1986 which will be provided jointly by my Department, the Department of the Environment, the Department of Health and Social Security and the Department of Transport. It will be administered by a committee composed of representatives of national voluntary organisations, with an independent chairman. The committee will also have both central or local government participation. It will be serviced by the National Council for Voluntary Organisations.

Prison Design

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the study of United States prison designs announced by his predecessor has yet been completed.

Mr. Hurd: The study of recent developments in the design of prisons in the United States has been conducted by a working group of officials from the Home Office an Property Services Agency under the chairmanship of the director of regimes and services in the prison department. The group's report is published today by Her Majesty's Stationery Office under the title "New Directions in Prison Design". A copy has been placed in the Library.

The study was commissioned following a review of control problems in the long-term prison system. The report describes and analyses the design features of a number of the "new generation" prisons visited by members of the group. It emphasises that prison designs need to be related to a clear management philosophy, and that therefore designs developed in the context of one penal system cannot simply be transposed to another system in the expectation that they will be equally appropriate. Nevertheless, the study concludes that "new generation" concepts appear to offer significant benefits in the context of our own prison system. The group considers that, given the right management practices and staffing levels, new generation prisons need not be more costly than conventional prisons of equivalent size. The group also considers that "new generation" concepts may be of particular value in application to local prisons, and that while high-rise development does not form part of the Home Office's immediate plans, such development should not be ruled out for local prisons as it may permit the use of smaller urban sites with consequent advantages in terms of staffing and access to courts. The present building programme gives us the opportunity to consider the applicability of new generation concepts to specific projects and the opportunity is being taken to study the feasibility of new generation designs at two of the local prisons in the programme, at Milton Keynes and Doncaster. The final decision on the design of these prisons will, of course be subject to full consideration of the financial and planning implications.

I welcome this report and hope that it will serve to stimulate a wide-ranging and informed discussion on the future design of prisons in England and Wales.

Civil Defence Adviser

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the responsibilities of his civil defence adviser, Mr. Eric Alley.

Mr. Hurd: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas) on 4 December, at columns 246-47. Mr. Alley discharges his main responsibility relating to the civil defence functions of local authorities by advising my right hon. Friend on the implementation of the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 as a result of visiting local authorities to monitor their progress, and discuss and offer guidance to them on their difficulties; preparing assessments of the level of local authority preparedness; and identifying measures on how best to help local authorities with, and ensure their implementation of, the regulations.

Police Manpower

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have a lower ratio of police to population than Thames Valley; and which have a higher ratio.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The police/population ratios which are calculated centrally for police forces in England and Wales show the population per police officer and are published for 31 December each year in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary. On 31 December 1984 the Thames Valley police had a ratio of 562 population per police officer, which was the highest of any police force in England and Wales on that date. The ratio for each police force in England and Wales was as follows:

*Population per police officer on 31 December 1984

Area	Number
Avon and Somerset	454
Bedfordshire	513
Cambridgeshire	527
Cheshire	506
Cleveland	383
Cumbria	428
Derbyshire	516
Devon and Cornwall	514
Dorset	515
Durham	447
Dyfed Powys	478
Essex	534
Gloucestershire	435
Greater Manchester	374
Gwent	450
Hampshire	525
Hertfordshire	527
Humberside	433
Kent	517
Lancashire	436
Leicestershire	499
Lincolnshire	468
Merseyside	326
Norfolk	559
Northamptonshire	526
Northumbria	431
North Wales	476
North Yorkshire	501
Nottinghamshire	439
South Wales	417
South Yorkshire	456
Staffordshire	484
Suffolk	540
Surrey	484
Sussex	478
Thames Valley	562
Warwickshire	517
West Mercia	532
West Midlands	398
West Yorkshire	399

Area	Number
Wiltshire	511
City of London	8
Metropolitan	266

Note
* Based on the authorised police establishment of each force.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

UNESCO

107. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has yet reached a final decision on continued United Kingdom membership of UNESCO.

111. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has yet reached a final decision on whether Britain should leave the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

Mr. Raison: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to my statement of 5 December at columns 448-49.

108. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received on British membership of UNESCO.

109. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received on Government policy towards the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) on 12 December at column 707.

110. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with Commonwealth Governments over the future of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

Mr. Raison: I discussed UNESCO's problems with Commonwealth high commissioners in London on 26 November.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plessey-GEC (Merger)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission the proposed merger of Plessey and General Electric Company.

Mr. Howard: I understand that no formal offer has yet been made. My right hon. and learned Friend will make a decision on reference at the appropriate time, in the light of advice from the Director General of Fair Trading.

Job Creation

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 439-42 to the hon. Member for Swansea, West giving the number of grant-related jobs in each constituency, if he will break that table down into jobs created and jobs preserved.

Mr. Brittan: The information requested is as follows:

	Estimated new	Employment safeguarded
Aberavon	881	1,768
Aldridge-Brownhills*	32	70
Alyn & Deeside*	724	0
Angus East	362	80
Ashton under Lyne	33	0
Ayr	839	565
Barnsley East	11	8
Barnsley West & Penistone	20	0
Batley & Spen	95	0
Berwick-upon-Tweed	54	124
Beverley	26	0
Birkenhead	148	45
Birmingham Erdington	77	50
Birmingham Hall Green	15	0
Birmingham Ladywood	164	30
Birmingham Northfield	18	0
Birmingham Selly Oak	30	0
Birmingham Small Heath	70	35
Birmingham Sparkbrook	47	3,800
Birmingham Yardley	34	0
Bishop Auckland	1,137	0
Blackburn	370	0
Blaenau Gwent	601	0
Blaydon	95	0
Blyth Valley	436	0
Bolton North East	4	209
Bolton South East	12	65
Bolton West	113	0
Boothferry	132	0
Bootle	184	286
Bosworth	182	40
Bradford North*	343	53
Bradford South	70	0
Bradford West	190	0
Brecon & Radnor	214	0
Bridgend	445	0
Bridlington	466	1,257
Brigg & Cleethorpes	279	817
Bromsgrove	30	0
Bury North	46	0
Bury South	24	0
Caernarfon	61	0
Caerphilly	182	0
Calder Valley	25	0
Cannock & Burntwood	37	4
Cardiff Central	122	0
Cardiff North	266	0
Cardiff South & Penarth	206	0
Cardiff West	116	0
Carmarthen	46	0
Carrick Cumnock & Doon Valley	177	11
Central Fife	454	331
Ceredigion & Pembroke	61	14
Chorley	29	29
City of Chester	96	0
City of Durham	115	50
Clackmannan	132	10
Clwyd North West	87	0
Clwyd South West*	133	0
Clydebank and Milngavie	370	187
Conwy	7	0
Copeland	45	0
Corby	1,885	0
Coventry North East	32	0
Coventry South East	35	100
Coventry South West	268	2
Crosby	52	0
Cumbernauld and Kilsyth	1,088	813
Cunninghame North*	613	0

	Estimated new	Employment safeguarded
Cunninghame South*	766	202
Cynon Valley	421	50
Darlington	252	0
Delyn*	805	6
Don Valley	156	0
Doncaster Central	22	0
Doncaster North	60	0
Dudley East	46	0
Dudley West	183	0
Dumbarton	57	0
Dundee East	369	128
Dundee West*	554	1,965
Dunfermline East	1,616	7
Dunfermline West	723	609
Easington	458	85
East Kilbride	654	9
East Lindsey	24	0
East Lothian	95	0
Eastwood	74	0
Eddisbury	56	0
Ellesmere Port and Neston	48	0
Falkirk East	176	150
Falkirk West	34	36
Falmouth and Cambourne	155	9
Fylde	5	0
Gainsborough and Horncastle	391	0
Galloway and Upper Nithsdale	94	283
Gateshead East	495	0
Glanford and Scunthorpe	1,340	0
Glasgow Cathcart	183	200
Glasgow Central*	605	49
Glasgow Garscadden	182	0
Glasgow Govan*	108	0
Glasgow Hillhead	1,131	92
Glasgow Maryhill*	271	44
Glasgow Pollok	98	41
Glasgow Provan	214	0
Glasgow Rutherglen	165	169
Glasgow Shettleston	218	353
Glasgow Springburn	67	0
Gower	30	0
Great Grimsby	89	0
Greenock and Port Glasgow	785	30
Halesowen and Stourbridge	42	807
Halton	385	0
Hamilton	764	0
Hartlepool	352	0
Hexham	29	0
Heywood & Middleton	152	0
High Peak	200	180
Houghton & Washington	730	45
Hyndburn	93	65
Inverness Nairn & Lochaber	90	0
Islwyn	191	0
Jarrow	82	0
Kilmarnock & Loudoun	443	0
Kingston upon Hull, East	52	0
Kingston upon Hull, North	125	0
Kingston upon Hull, West	80	0
Kirkcaldy	256	0
Knowsley, North	220	0
Knowsley, South	0	585
Lancaster	0	30
Langbaurgh	32	0
Leigh	400	0
Linlithgow*	1,359	175
Littleborough & Saddleworth	120	0
Liverpool, Broadgreen	50	20
Liverpool, Garston	204	123
Liverpool, Mossley Hill	16	0
Liverpool, Riverside	244	50
Liverpool, Walton	78	94
Liverpool, West Derby	11	0
Livingston*	2,968	0
Llanelli	138	7
Ludlow	26	0
Makerfield	130	220
Manchester, Blackley	5	0
Manchester, Central	336	0
Manchester, Gorton	43	0
Meriden	44	13
Merthyr Tydfil & Rhymney	733	150
Mid Worcestershire	300	43
Middlesbrough	434	0
Monklands, East	513	0
Monklands, West	211	0
Monmouth	223	0
Motherwell, North*	270	160
Motherwell, South	244	0
Neath	192	45
Newcastle upon Tyne, Central	43	0
Newcastle upon Tyne, East	106	0
Newcastle upon Tyne, North	96	38
Newport*	728	25
Newport, West*	270	60
North Cornwall	395	19
North Devon	134	19
North Durham	104	0
North-East Derbyshire	6	6
North Warwickshire	19	8
North-West Durham	355	122
Northavon	18	0
Nuneaton	116	502
Ogmore	136	110
Oldham Central & Royton	12	0
Oldham West	223	0
Paisley North	595	0
Paisley South	532	315
Pembroke	425	20
Penrith & The Border	35	0
Perth & Kinross	82	0
Plymouth Devonport	91	0
Plymouth Drake	187	0
Plymouth Sutton	284	0
Pontypridd	1,002	430
Pudsey	228	0
Redcar	122	0
Renfrew West & Inverclyde	160	0
Rhondda	202	189
Richmond (Yorks)	15	0
Rochdale	171	0
Rosss Cromarty & Skye	0	1,200
Rosendale & Darwen	187	0
Rother Valley	274	0
Rotherham	759	5
Rutland & Melton	15	0
Salford East	79	0
Scarborough	133	0
Sedgefield*	394	0
Sheffield Attercliffe	7	0
Sheffield Brightside	34	0
Sheffield Central	71	21
Sheffield Hillsborough	7	0
Shipley	231	70
Solihull	19	0
South East Cornwall	13	0
South East Staffordshire	187	0
South Hams	61	0
South Shields	194	0
South Staffordshire	295	0
Southport	101	0
St. Helens North	140	70
St. Helens South	323	300
St. Ives	202	0
Stalybridge & Hyde	21	0
Stirling*	36	118
Stockton North	368	3
Stockton South	304	100
Stratford-on-Avon	28	0
Strathkelvin & Bearsden	163	0
Stretford	15	0
Sunderland North	187	240

	Estimated new	Employment safeguarded
Sunderland South	185	0
Sutton Coldfield	19	0
Swansea East*	69	3
Swansea West*	108	0
Tatton	16	0
Teignbridge	26	0
The Wrekin	522	27
Torfaen	762	2,818
Torridge and West Devon	50	0
Truro	131	0
Tyne Bridge	352	284
Tynemouth	484	0
Vale of Glamorgan	173	409
Wallasey	85	0
Wallsend	356	0
Walsall North	52	47
Walsall South	757	235
Wansbeck	521	0
Warley East*	58	368
Warley West	312	111
Warrington South	10	0
Wentworth	227	0
West Bromwich East	80	0
West Bromwich West	214	1,000
West Gloucestershire	1,061	204
West Lancashire	378	0
Wigan	248	0
Wirral South	104	0
Wirral West	74	0
Wolverhampton North East	23	0
Wolverhampton South East	34	5
Workington	280	0
Worsley	6	0
Wrexham*	1,306	0
Wyre	20	0
Wyre Forest	180	0
Ynys Môn	172	0

* The figures for these constituencies have been updated and do not correspond with those in columns 439-42 of the Official Report.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the rights of United Kingdom companies to commercial spin off, in relation to strategic defence initiative research.

Mr. Brittan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence stated in this House on 9 December that the clearest guidance regarding the legitimate protection of intellectual property will be given to companies, research organisations and universities when they ask the Government for guidance about the sort of contracts into which they can enter.

Insider Trading

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the five cases of alleged insider trading reported to Her Majesty's Government by the Stock Exchange in which prosecutions have ensued; and if he will list the 75 other cases reported in which prosecutions have not ensued, with the reasons in each case.

Mr. Howard: Particulars of the five cases in which prosecutions ensued are as follows:

Defendant	Relevant share	Outcome
John Bryce	Winterbottom Trust Ltd.	Guilty
John and Joyce Titheridge	Joseph Stocks & Sons (Holdings) Ltd.	Guilty
John Allen Crump Dickenson	Harris & Sheldon Group Ltd.	Guilty
Colin Kettle and Neil Thorneywork	Blockley plc.	Acquitted
Ronald John Hancock	Suter Electrical Ltd.	Acquitted
David John Brooks	Suter Electrical Ltd.	Awaiting trial

I am not prepared to disclose details of cases where prosecution did not ensue.

Insolvency Act 1985

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to publicise the provisions of the Insolvency Act 1985.

Mr. Howard: Copies of the Insolvency Act 1985 are now available and I have issued a simplified guide to its main provisions. Further explanatory notes will be issued when details of the secondary legislation are published and when the various sections of the Act come into force. I have arranged for copies of the guide to be placed in the Library.

A copy of the guide can be obtained from Insolvency Service, Branch 2, room 514 Sanctuary Buildings, 16-20 Great Smith street, London SW1P 3DB, until the end of 1985 and thereafter from Insolvency Service 2-14 Bunhill row, London EC1Y 8LL.

Multi-Fibre Arrangement

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will be seeking to make any changes in the draft European Economic Community negotiating mandate for the multi-fibre arrangement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 24]: I intend to press for the policy I outlined to the House on 9 May 1985 at column 915.

Morocco (Phosphate)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the amount of imported phosphate from Morocco from the year 1975 until the present time.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1985, c. 138]: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom imports of phosphate from Morocco
(000s Metric Tonnes)

Year	Weight
1975	1,149
1976	1,262
1977	916
1978	794
1979	839
1980	823
1981	986
1982	803
1983	952
1984	831
1985*	699

* (January-October)

Source:

United Kingdom Overseas Trade Statistics (SITC/R2 sub-group 271.3, 523.22 (part), 523.29 (part), 562.22 and 562.29.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Education Welfare Officers

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that the necessary training is made available for education welfare officers for them to take on the supervision of children, as proposed in the child care law review.

Mr. Chris Patten: As stated in the Government's White paper "Better Schools," my right hon. Friend intends to set in hand national consultations on the training of education welfare officers. These will bear in mind possible new responsibilities for them in administering supervision orders in school attendance cases.

Inner London Education Authority

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has proposed a maximum precept for the Inner London education authority for the financial year 1986-87.

Sir Keith Joseph: I am today informing the Inner London interim education authority that I propose to prescribe a maximum precept for the ILEA for 1986-87 of 76·5p in the pound. This precept would be a reduction of about 1 per cent. on that levied by the existing ILEA for 1985-86. I have asked that the interim authority should inform me by 15 January 1986 of whether it accepts the proposed maximum precept.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prisoners (Strip Searches)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons and in what circumstances male and female prisoners are strip-searched in Her Majesty's prisons in Northern Ireland: and what contribution such searches make to prison security.

Mr. Scott: Strip searching aids both the maintenance of security of the prison and the safety of prisoners and staff. It is carried out on both male and female prisoners on reception into prisons, discharge from prison and on other occasions determined by the governor to be operationally necessary.

It makes a significant contribution to prison security both in its deterrent effect and by the detection of items such as drugs and weapons which can be concealed easily about the person and may not be detected by other methods of searching.

Construction Industry (Subcontractors)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many self-employed labour-only subcontractors were employed in the construction industry in the Province in each of the past six years.

Dr. Boyson [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 42]: The 1981 census of population (the latest data available) showed 8,350 self-employed persons in the Northern Ireland construction industry. However, it is not known how many of these were labour-only subcontractors.

EMPLOYMENT

Wolverhampton

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what plans he has to extend to the Wolverhampton area the pilot schemes which have been initiated by his Department to assist the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have no plans at present to extend the pilot schemes to the Wolverhampton area.

Mrs. Renée Short asked Paymaster General what specific courses will be provided within the framework of the pilot schemes which have been initiated by his Department for assisting the long-term unemployed in improving their technical skills; where these will take place; and which people will be employed within jobcentres to advise participants in these schemes on interview techniques.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Manpower Services Commission already operates a number of training programmes open to the long-term unemployed, including the wider opportunities training programme, the job training scheme and the enterprise training. In addition to these programmes, the long-term unemployed in the pilot areas will be able to take up places on an entirely new short training course designed specifically with their needs in mind. These courses will be provided within reasonable distance of the trainee's home. Full travelling expenses will be paid. Some courses will use MSC facilities. Others may take place in colleges or be provided by chambers of commerce or other organisations. The courses will last one to two weeks and will aim to help participants reassess their strengths and skills and improve their techniques for looking for and applying for jobs. Experienced jobcentre staff have been assigned to each pilot area to carry out the counselling interviews at which the training needs of the long-term unemployed will be identified. Job clubs will also operate in each pilot area to help the long-term unemployed maintain the momentum of their job search.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General which youth training schemes Ministers in his Department have visited for each year since the inception of the youth training scheme; and which they so far have plans to visit for the coming year.

Mr. Trippier: Ministers in this Department have visited a large number of youth training schemes since it commenced in April 1983 and I and my ministerial colleagues intend to continue to pay regular visits to schemes throughout Great Britain. Last week, for example, I visited two schemes in the Merseyside area, and early next year my right hon. and learned Friend will be officially opening the Longbridge ITeC.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General what level of monetary contribution he expects employers to make towards the funding of the new two-year youth training scheme, in total and per employer; how he intends to encourage them to contribute; and whether any of these funds will be directed towards non-employer-based schemes.

Mr. Trippier: The difference between Government funding for places under the two-year youth training scheme and the actual costs involved will be made up by training providers, as happens at present with mode A places. As these costs will vary from case to case, it is not certain how much employers will have to contribute, but generally they will have to put more into the two-year scheme than they do into the present one. It will be open to non-employer based schemes to seek contributions from their work experience providers and we expect many will do so.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General what account he has taken of the quality of individual youth training schemes already existing in deciding overall funding levels and target numbers of employer-based and premium places for the new two-year youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The two-year youth training scheme has been designed to provide quality training for young people with differing needs and in different parts of the country. In doing this we have taken the experience of the present scheme, including the quality of provision both at the individual scheme level and overall, fully into account.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General what are the latest figures for the percentage of trainees leaving the youth training scheme to enter employment; and how many of those trainees are still employed one month after starting work.

Mr. Trippier: The results from the Manpower Services Commission's regular survey of young people leaving the youth training scheme are placed in the Library. The survey does not provide information in the precise form requested. However, the latest set of results, covering young people who left the scheme between 1 April and 30 June 1985, shows that 60 per cent. went straight into work on leaving and 89 per cent. of these were still in work some three months later. Overall, 61 per cent. of leavers were in work some three months after leaving the scheme.

Victims Support Scheme (Kirkby)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the application for a co-ordinator, to be paid for by the Manpower Services Commission, of the Kirkby victims support scheme.

Mr. Alan Clark: No such application has been received by the Manpower Services Commission.

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Paymaster General what were the number of (a) factory inspectors (b) those who are actively engaged in factory inspections and (c) workplaces in the three Health and Safety Executive areas in the north-west in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: On 1 December 1979 there were 107 factory inspectors in the Health and Safety Executive's Manchester, north-west and Merseyside areas. On 1 December 1985 there were 93. These figures include specialist factory inspectors in a field consultant group based in Manchester.

Inspectors based in the field are actively involved in inspection, except the director of each area.

On 1 December 1979 there were 43,622 establishments registered with the Factory Inspectorate in the three areas. There is known to have been under-recording at that date. On 1 December 1985 there were 49,959.

Copeland

Dr. Cunningham asked the Paymaster General if he will give a detailed breakdown of unemployed claimants in the Copeland parliamentary constituency using the most recent figures of 14 November, analysed by sex and by the age of the unemployed and duration of unemployment.

Mr. Alan Clark: Analyses of unemployment by age and duration are made quarterly. I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 19 November at columns 113-14 for the most recent figures.

Labour and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Evennett asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the European Community Labour and Social Affairs Council held in Brussels on 5 December.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science represented the United Kingdom. The Council agreed the noise directive and two European social fund matters, and agreement in principle was reached on the COMETT programme.

I welcome the agreement on a directive which will oblige member states to implement common basic requirements to protect workers from noise liable to damage their hearing. The provisions of the directive will improve the level of protection of workers against hearing loss without imposing unnecessary burdens on business. They are therefore fully acceptable to the Government, and the Health and Safety Commission will now be working to conclude the work of producing regulations in line with the directive.

The COMETT programme has been settled in principle on terms wholly acceptable to the United Kingdom. We welcome the intention of establishing this programme of co-operation between higher education and industry in the field of advanced training.

The Council agreed, subject to the opinion of the European Parliament, on amendments to the social fund rules relating to super-priority regions to take account of the accession of Spain and Portugal. Agreement was also reached that schemes encouraging self-employment should be eligible for fund support from 1986 onwards. The Government measure which should benefit in particular from this agreement on encouraging self-employment is the enterprise allowance scheme, which is proving extremely effective in immediate job creation. I am satisfied that the agreements we reached on the social fund will provide a worthwhile level of support for measures to improve employment prospects.

The Council also discussed the Commission's memorandum on youth policies and the draft parental leave directive. On the parental leave directive, a number of member states expressed reservations and the President concluded that it was not possible for the Council to reach agreement. I maintained the Government's objection in principle which was endorsed by the House on 26 November. I proposed that this directive might in due course be considered by the new unit of the Commission which will appraise the impact of new regulations on small and modern size businesses. This proposal will no doubt be considered when the new unit is established and if a forthcoming Presidency wishes to resume discussion of the proposal in the Council of Ministers.

THE ARTS

Greater Manchester

Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister for the Arts how much of the additional funds for the arts, after the abolition of the metropolitan county councils, applies to the Greater Manchester council area.

Mr. Luce: For the performing arts, it will be for the Arts Council to determine a figure, in negotiation with the successor authorities and the Regional Arts Association.

For museums, I announced a grant of £1·075 million in 1986-87 for the Greater Manchester museum of science and industry in my reply to the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Dormand) on Monday 16 December, at columns 35-38, and the University Grants Committee will be making additional sums available to the Manchester University museum and Whitworth gallery, amounting to over £300,000 next year.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure

Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of public expenditure, adjusted for asset sales, in each year since 1978-79, as a proportion of gross domestic product.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to table 2.4 in the autumn statement.

PSBR, Assets Sales and Oil Revenue

Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of (a) the public sector borrowing requirement, (b) asset sales including sales of housing and land and (c) revenue from taxes on oil production, in each year since 1978-79, as a proportion of gross domestic product.

Mr. MacGregor: The information is as follows:

*Percentage of gross domestic product

	PSBR	Asset sales†	Taxes on Oil production‡
1978-79	5·3	0·3	0·3
1979-80	4·8	0·6	1·1
1980-81	5·4	0·7	1·6
1981-82	3·3	1·0	2·5
1982-83	3·1	1·2	2·8
1983-84	3·2	1·2	2·9
1984-85	3·1	1·4	3·7

* Average estimate at current market prices.
† Including sales of housing and land.
‡ Royalties, petroleum revenue tax (including advance payments), and corporation tax from North sea oil and gas production (before advance corporation tax set off).

Fraud

Mr. Soley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the total estimated amounts defrauded from Her Majesty's Inspector of Taxes for each year from 1979.

Mr. Moore: It is not possible to estimate the tax lost through undetected evasion.

Income Tax

Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the increase in the net pay of a person earning £140 per week, if the standard rate of income tax was reduced to 28 per cent.

Mr. Moore: £1·90 per week for a single person or working wife and £1·39 for a married man in 1986-87, based on the illustrative allowances shown in the autumn statement.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Baldry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the trend in unemployment over the last six months.

Mr. MacGregor: Over the last six months adult unemployment has fallen, on average, by 2,000 a month. The trend is now broadly stable and should continue to be more favourable than over the last two years.

Customs Officers (North-East)

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why one of the two customs mobile rummage crews in the north-east region has been disbanded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: It is proposed to disband one of the customs mobile rummage crews in north-east England because the staff can be more usefully employed on other Customs work. The situation will be kept under review.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy for allocating customs staff in the north-east region to combat drugs smuggling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The policy for the allocation of customs staff to combat drugs smuggling in north-east England is the same as it is throughout the rest of the United Kingdom. The available resources are allocated in accordance with the perceived risk.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the reduction in the number of customs officers employed in the north-east region's ports and airports since 1979.

Mr. Brooke: The number of customs officers employed in the north-east region's ports and airports has reduced from 197 in 1979 to 154 in 1985.

Non-Residents (Taxation)

Mr. William Powell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a consultative document on the taxation of non-residents operating in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moore: After careful consideration of the law and practice in this area, I have concluded that general changes to the regime would not be appropriate at the present time. We will, however, continue to keep matters under review.

We are taking this opportunity to tidy up one minor matter relating to United Kingdom interest arising to non-residents. The purpose of this is to preserve a long-standing exemption from assessment of interest paid to a non-resident through an agent who does not have control of the interest. Recently legal doubts have arisen as to whether this exemption is due under the law. We are extending an existing extra-statutory concession to make it clear that the exemption will continue to be given. I am instructing the Inland Revenue to issue a press release tomorrow containing full details.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Turkey

12. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he intends to meet Turkey's Foreign Secretary to discuss political prisoners.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has no immediate plans to meet the Turkish Foreign Minister although they meet frequently in the course of international conferences. On such occasions the question of human rights is frequently addressed, most recently in New York on 25 September. The Turkish Government is in no doubt of our position on this score.

Foreign Ministers Meeting (Luxembourg)

17. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent meeting of Foreign Ministers from the European Economic Community, Central America and the Contadora countries in Luxembourg.

Mr. Eggar: As I told the hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Dixon) on 20 November, the Luxembourg meeting was a practical demonstration by the members of the European Community of support for the Contadora peace process. Political and economic agreements with the central American states were successfully concluded. The European Community agreed to increase substantially aid to promote economic co-operation in the region.

Falkland Islands

19. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy in the light of the recent United Nations vote on negotiations between the United Kingdom and Argentina over the Falkland Islands.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have made all the running in seeking to normalise relations between Britain and Argentina. We have taken a series of initiatives since 1982. We shall continue to seek every opportunity to encourage the Argentine Government to take a more realistic approach and to match our readiness to rebuild confidence. The United Nations vote has not caused us to change this approach. Nor is our commitment to the Falkland Islanders affected.

46. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if European Economic Community political co-operation covers the issue of the future of the Falkland Islands.

92. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with other European Economic Community countries concerning the future of the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Eggar: Our EC partners are briefed, as appropriate, on the international aspects of our Falklands policy both bilaterally and within the framework of European Political Co-operation.

Questions concerning the internal affairs of dependent territories of member states are not discussed in European political co-operation.

British Council

20. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received advocating an extension of the work of the British Council.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East (Mr. Freud) earlier today.

British Subjects (Arab Gaols)

21. Dr. M. S. Miller asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those British subjects who are presently in Arab gaols and what information he has about which of them have suffered inhuman punishments such as lashing or torture.

Mr. Renton: There are currently 33 British citizens imprisoned in Arab countries. It is not our practice to reveal names of persons detained abroad without their consent. Three have been sentenced to strokes of the cane. One claimed that he had been tortured and we raised his allegations with the authorities concerned but they have denied them.

Middle East

22. Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on progress towards peace in the middle east.

25. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in the middle east.

42. Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now give details of his policy reassessment towards the Arab-Israeli dispute.

18. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there have been any further developments in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the conflict in the middle east following the cancellation of the joint Jordanian/PLO delegation visit to Britain in the autumn.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest situation in the middle east.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham), and Leominster (Mr. Temple-Morris).

28. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he intends to seek to visit the middle east.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend is planning to visit a number of states in the Arabian peninsula early in the new year. Details are now being settled.

56. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Israeli Government about the welfare of the inhabitants of the West Bank and Gaza under the continued occupation.

Mr. Renton: We maintain a regular and frank dialogue with the Israeli Government about conditions in the occupied territories.

67. Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in the light of the abortive visit of the joint Jordanian/Palestinian delegation to London and the explicit rejection by the Palestine Liberation Organisation in Baghdad of United Nations resolutions 242 and 338, he will make a statement on his policy towards the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Mr. Renton: The final statement of the PLO central council meeting in Baghdad does not mention United Nations Security Council resolutions 242 and 338. Our policy remains to support realistic moves towards peace negotiations.

83. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visit of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) to the middle east.

Mr. Renton: I visited Syria, Lebanon and Israel from 9 to 16 December. I had useful talks with the governments in each country on bilateral relations and regional and international issues. I also met Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza.

Council of Ministers

23. Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposals for increased majority voting within the European Community Council of Ministers.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The agreement reached at the European Council will contribute to early completion of the common market and will benefit United Kingdom firms selling goods and services in Europe.

USSR

24. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he expects to meet the Soviet Foreign Minister; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Mr. Shevardnadze has accepted my invitation to pay a visit to the United Kingdom. Dates have not yet been agreed.

Strategic Defence Initiative

26. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are his Department's conditions for United Kingdom participation in the United States of America strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Renton: United Kingdom participation in the United States strategic defence initiative research programme, details of which were announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 6 December, will be in conformity with the four points agreed between my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the President of the United States in December 1984 at Camp David.

47. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received since his speech to the Royal United Services Institute regarding the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations. Most have been in support of the speech which was made in conformity with the four points agreed between my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Reagan in December 1984.

65. Mr. McKelvey asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to have talks with United States Defence Secretary Weinberger on foreign policy implications of the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no current plans to do so. He most recently saw the United States Secretary of State on 10 December when they discussed a whole range of issues including strategic questions.

South Africa

27. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community will next consider its policy towards South Africa.

57. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council will next consider its policy towards South Africa.

105. Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council of Ministers will next consider relations with South Africa.

Mr. Rifkind: The Council of Ministers has no plans to consider policy towards South Africa in the near future.

30. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's recent relations with South Africa.

86. Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current relations between the United Kingdom and South Africa.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement about the implications for relations between the United Kingdom and South Africa of the latest situation in South Africa.

Mr. Rifkind: The South African Government are fully aware of our deep concern at the internal situation in South Africa. We shall continue to use our contacts with the South African Government to press for fundamental reforms and to urge on them the need for the widest possible dialogue about the political future of South Africa.

34. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council will next consider sanctions on South Africa.

Mr. Rifkind: There is no current proposal that the Council should consider sanctions against South Africa.

58. Mr. Ian Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the criteria employed by his Department to distinguish between scientific agreements between the United Kingdom and South Africa which do, and those which do not, support apartheid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Scientific agreements with South Africa will be considered on a case-by-case basis in the light of all available information.

61. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will reconsider Her Majesty's Government's policy of refusing to meet representatives from dissident groups from South Africa including exiled organisations except under certain pre-conditions.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We are ready to meet representatives from any South African group working for peaceful change. We believe that the support of dissident groups for a suspension of violence as called for in the Commonwealth Accord would help to promote dialogue within South Africa and with others, like ourselves, who seek a peaceful solution to that country's problems.

76. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the conclusions of, and results obtained from, the measures taken by Ministers of the European Economic Community, acting in political co-operation, concerning sanctions against South Africa.

Mr. Rifkind: In September Ministers of the Twelve agreed to implement a number of positive and restrictive measures in relation to South Africa. We believe that these measures have sent a clear political signal to the South African Government of the need for urgent and fundamental reform.

77. Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy with regard to the attendance by members of the staff of Her Majesty's embassy in South Africa of the funerals of victims of the current unrest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Members of the staff of Her Majesty's embassy in South Africa will attend funerals and other occasions in their official capacity where representation is felt to be appropriate. Each case is considered on its merits.

91. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will make a statement on progress of sanctions agreed at the Nassau Commonwealth conference.

Mr. Rifkind: The majority of the measures agreed at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in October have been in effect in Britain for some time. We have implemented, or are considering ways of implementing, the further measures agreed at Nassau.

99. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the specific impact on black employment in South Africa and the surrounding countries of the imposition of full economic sanctions on South Africa.

Mr. Rifkind: We have not carried out a detailed assessment but the work which we and others have done on the subject leaves us in no doubt that full economic sanctions would have a very serious effect on black employment both in South Africa and the surrounding countries.

Chemical Weapons

29. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likelihood of progress in the Geneva negotiations on chemical weapons.

Mr. Renton: We warmly welcome the recent agreement by President Reagan and Secretary-General Gorbachev to accelerate efforts to conclude an effective and verifiable ban on chemical weapons. We hope this will provide an impetus to the negotiations at the conference on disarmament. The extent to which substantive progress will be possible will depend critically on whether the Soviet Union is now willing to negotiate seriously on the key verification issues. The United Kingdom will chair the chemical weapons committee in 1986 and will actively look for progress.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

31. Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by Her Majesty's Government to resume trilateral negotiations with the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty under article VI of the non proliferation treaty.

Mr. Renton: We shall continue to seek progress towards a comprehensive test ban treaty. We hope that the conference on disarmament in Geneva, when it resumes in February, will be able to address the problems of verification which still stand in the way of a treaty.

45. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the latest prospects for a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty.

78. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in promoting a comprehensive nuclear test ban agreement, with particular reference to an effective verification procedure.

Mr. Renton: In my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) on 25 November at column 418 I outlined the steps the United Kingdom had taken to resolve the outstanding difficulties in the way of a comprehensive test ban treaty. While we remain committed to progress towards a comprehensive test ban treaty, we see little hope of progress until these difficulties are resolved.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what studies have been undertaken by his Department into the effects of a comprehensive test ban treaty upon the development of the United States strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Renton: None.

European Community (Political Union)

32. Mr. David Young asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if European Economic Community political union will be on the agenda for the next meeting of the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Rifkind: No.

54. Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards European Economic Community political union since the Milan summit.

Mr. Rifkind: The subject of political union has not been under discussion. The Luxembourg European Council agreed on a treaty on co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy, on the basis of a United Kingdom draft, as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister reported to the House on 5 December at column 429-30. On 17 December Ministers agreed the text of a European Act covering both the agreed amendments to the EC treaty and the new, separate treaty on co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy.

72. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the objectives of European Economic Community political co-operation will be better served by incorporating them into the European Economic Community treaty.

Mr. Rifkind: The treaty on European Co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy agreed at the Luxembourg European Council will remain legally separate from the Treaty of Rome and the other Community treaties. There is no question of incorporating it into those treaties.

85. Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what benefits he expects to gain from the European Economic Community commitment to increased political co-operation.

Mr. Rifkind: The draft treaty on European co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy will formalise current practices of European Political Co-operation. Regular consultation on matters of foreign policy, reaching common positions and taking joint action wherever possible, strengthens the Community's voice in the world, and, through it, Britains influence on international issues.

95. Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on increased political co-operation by European Economic Community Governments.

Mr. Rifkind: A draft treaty on European co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy was agreed in principle at the European Council in Luxembourg. This treaty formalises the current practices of European political co-operation and makes binding the commitment to consult among the twelve on matters of foreign policy of interest to all member states. The treaty is based on the United Kingdom draft tabled in June.

Philippines

33. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current relations between the United Kingdom and the Philippines.

Mr. Renton: We enjoy good relations with the Philippines. We hope that their present economic and political difficulties will soon be resolved and that the Presidential elections due in January will be free and fair. The United Kingdom is the third largest investor in the Philippines; our visible exports are increasing and will be worth about £100 million in 1985.

37. Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to seek to make an official visit to the Philippines.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has at present no plans to do so. But the United Kingdom as president of the European Community will be appropriately represented at the annual dialogue meeting between the European Community and the Association of South East Asian Nations to be held in Manila in mid 1986.

Argentina

35. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now propose to Argentina the immediate resumption of diplomatic relations.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We want to secure more normal relations with Argentina. Since 1982 we have taken a series of initiatives to achieve this, but the Argentine Government have failed to respond constructively. The best way forward is through co-operation on practical matters of interest to both countries.

55. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times since 1982 Her Majesty's Government have entered into negotiations with the Argentine Government; on each occasion who initiated such talks; and, on each occasion, who was responsible for breaking off such talks.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have taken a series of initiatives since 1982 designed to lead to discussions with Argentina on practical issues of interest to both countries. We took steps at the International Monetary Fund meeting in Toronto in September 1982 to reach agreement with the Argentine Government on reciprocal lifting of financial restrictions. Argentina has still not fully implemented that agreement. We also repeatedly proposed the mutual lifting of trade restrictions and took the initiative in arranging the Berne talks in July 1984. At those talks the Argentine representatives departed from the arrangements specifically agreed in advance for dealing with the sovereignty issue. The talks therefore came to an end.

98. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations with the Argentina.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have since 1982 taken a series of initiatives designed to open the way to more normal relations with Argentina. The Argentine Government have yet to respond constructively. But have maintained their insistence that we agree to discuss sovereignty over the Falklands before they will discuss any aspect of our bilateral relations.

103. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards resuming full diplomatic and trade links with Argentina.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have taken a series of initiatives since 1982 intended to secure more normal relations with Argentina. These included repeated proposals for the mutual lifting of trade embargoes. Following Argentina's persistent refusal to respond constructively we lifted unilaterally our restrictions on Argentine imports to the United Kingdom in July 1985. Argentina has not yet reciprocated.

Disarmament

36. Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to discuss disarmament questions with the United States' Secretary of State.

Mr. Renton: There is a regular dialogue between the United Kingdom and the United States, at all levels, on this subject. My right hon. and learned Friend last discussed disarmament questions with Mr. Shultz on 10 December. They also saw each other at a meeting of the North Atlantic Council in Brussels on 12 and 13 December. They have no firm plans for further discussions in the near future.

Chile

Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now impose a total embargo on all military co-operation with Chile.

Mr. Eggar: A total embargo on sales of arms to Chile would be ineffective. But we shall continue not to approve the supply of items, which in our view, are likely to be used for internal repression.

Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to seek to ensure an end to human rights violations in Chile.

Mr. Eggar: On 6 December we voted in favour of a United Nations General Assembly resolution calling upon the Chilean authorities to end human rights violations and supporting the special rapporteur's mandate to visit Chile. We shall continue to encourage the Chilean Government towards restraint, and dialogue with the democratic opposition.

Zimbabwe

39. Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of Her Majesty's Government's relations with Zimbabwe.

Mr. Rifkind: Relations between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Zimbabwe continue to develop in a friendly and constructive way in a number of fields.

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet President Mugabe to discuss Anglo-Zimbabwean relations.

Mr. Rifkind: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to meet Prime Minister Mugabe.

Latin American Governments

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with Latin American Governments over their foreign debt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: We remain concerned by the heavy debt burden borne by many Latin American countries. This is a subject frequently discussed in the course of our contacts with their Governments.

Iraq

43. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, when meeting the Foreign Minister of Iraq earlier this month, he expressed Her Majesty's Government's abhorrence of terrorism.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Yes. I emphasised our determination to promote international cooperation against terrorism during my discussion with the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Mr. Tariq Aziz.

European Parliament

44. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new powers are to be given to the European Parliament as a result of the European Economic Community Luxembourg summit meeting; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: It was agreed that the European Parliament should be consulted on the Council's initial view of Commission proposals for legislation in a limited number of areas. The last word on all such legislation would remain with the Council. The European Parliament's assent would be required for new accessions to the Community and for new association agreements with third countries of groups of countries.

Nicaragua

48. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps European Economic Community member countries and institutions are taking to help Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: On 12 November in Luxembourg the European Community concluded a co-operation agreement with the Central American States and Panama designed to promote economic relations and agreed to increase substantially aid to the region. The agreement was multilateral and designed to benefit all the central American states.

European Community (Majority Voting)

49. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what amendments have been agreed to the treaty of Rome to extend the scope of majority voting.

60. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement explaining the nature of the changes in the scope for majority voting in the Community which have been referred to the intergovernmental conference by the Council in Luxembourg on 2 and 3 December; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Majority voting is already possible under some 40 articles of the treaty. The changes agreed, subject to reserves by Italy and Denmark, would extend majority voting to:

(a) Some of the internal market issues for which Article 100 currently requires unanimity (subject to specific exceptions for taxation, free movement of persons and measures affecting the rights and interests of employees, as well as a number of additional safeguards, set out in the text, which cover human, animal and plant health);
(b) Other Articles related to the internal market (28, 57(2), 59(2), 70(1) and 84);
(c) Specific programmes in the field of technology;
(d) Fields of environment policy which the Council unanimously decides are to be covered by qualified majority.

69. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on developments on the proposals agreed to at the intergovernmental conference in Luxembourg.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement I made earlier today.

81. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the abolition of the right of a member state to veto proposals put to the European Community's Council of Ministers.

Mr. Rifkind: Our policy towards the right of veto continues to be based, as it always has been, on the Luxembourg compromise, under which, where majority voting rules apply, a member state which considers that a very important interest is at stake may ask that discussion continue until unanimous agreement is reached.

104. Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what way he proposes to bring before Parliament the amendments to the treaty of Rome agreed at the European Economic Community Luxembourg summit.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Government will introduce a Bill as soon as reserves are lifted and the texts are available in treaty form.

64. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effect he anticipates the role recommended for the European Parliament by the Luxembourg European Council will have on the speed and quality of European Economic Community policy-making.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The time limits for consulting the European Parliament laid down under the new co-operation procedure should enable the European Parliament to play a serious and constructive role in Community decision-taking without slowing it down.

El Salvador

50. Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects officers from El Salvador to begin military training in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: The arrangements have not yet been finalised.

European Community Budget (Foreign Ministers Council)

51. Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have been held by European Economic Community Foreign Ministers on the 1986 budget.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: There has been no formal discussion of the 1986 Budget in the Foreign Affairs Council. This is primarily a matter for the Budget Council, on which my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Treasury made a statement on 29 November at column 665-66 in reply to the hon. Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham).

Sri Lanka

52. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed when he last met the high commissioner of Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has met his excellency the High Commissioner of Sri Lanka on a number of occasions during his residence in this country, most recently at the luncheon my right hon. and learned Friend hosted on 2 October for Commonwealth High Commissioners in London. Their discussions were of course confidential.

Palestine Organisations

53. Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he intends to meet members of the Palestine organisations.

Mr. Renton: I met Palestinian representatives in the occupied territories during my recent visit to the Middle East. My right hon. and learned Friend has at present no plans for further meetings.

Yugoslavia

59. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with Yugoslavia.

Mr. Rifkind: We enjoy close and substantial relations with Yugoslavia in all fields.

Arab Countries (Visitors)

62. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what warnings are given to British subjects travelling to Arab countries about restrictions on celebrating Christmas and the new year; and what efforts he has made to seek to have these restrictions lifted.

Mr. Renton: The problem is not a widespread one. However, the Department of Trade and Industry advises on living conditions in its booklet "Hints to Exporters". The Consular Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office issues a brief guide and British Consulates in Arab countries also respond to enquiries.

We are concerned that British subjects in all countries should be able to worship privately in accordance with their conscience. Where problems may occur, the embassy monitors the situation closely and endeavours to ensure that suitable arrangements are made.

Syria

63. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's current relations with Syria.

Mr. Renton: We seek to maintain a constructive dialogue with the Syrian Government on bilateral and international issues. I had useful talks with Syrian Ministers during my visit to Damascus from 9 to 11 December.

Arms Control

66. Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for arms control in the light of the meeting between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev.

Mr. Renton: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) on 12 December at columns 708-9.

Exports

68. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has plans to encourage commercial officers to visit the regions to explain to potential exporters the services which they have on offer.

Mr. Rifkind: About 200 diplomatic service and senior locally-recruited commercial officers undertake programmes of visits and speaking engagements in Britain every year. This number represents 35 per cent. of all officers engaged wholly or mainly on commercial work overseas and their visits are as many as resources will allow.

We are currently considering further steps to let existing and potential exporters know of the support available to them from the diplomatic service.

European Parliament (Elections)

70. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with European Economic Community Foreign Ministers about the implementation of the common electoral system for elections to the European Parliament.

Mr. Rifkind: There has been no discussion of a uniform procedure for European Parliament elections at Ministerial level this year.

Intermediate Nuclear Forces (Europe)

71. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards an interim agreement on intermediate nuclear forces in Europe.

Mr. Renton: We regard the recent agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union at the Geneva Summit that they should work towards an interim intermediate nuclear forces agreement as a positive step. We continue to support the United States proposals which are based on agreed alliance criteria, offering a detailed framework for progress on the basis of equal and global limits.

Afghanistan

73. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Afghanistan.

Mr. Eggar: As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 19 November. We have no substantive relations with Afghanistan. Following the Soviet invasion in December 1979, we withdrew Her Majesty's ambassador in Kabul and suspended our aid programme to Afghanistan.

Third World (Debt)

74. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to seek to alleviate the problem of debt in the Third world.

Mr. Rifkind: We are continuing to work with other Governments, international institutions and banks to help individual debtor countries to tackle their debt problems flexibly and effectively.

Saudi Arabia

75. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom and Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Renton: Relations with Saudi Arabia are excellent. There have been a number of Ministerial visits in both directions in the last year, and we expect to exchange further Ministerial visits in 1986.

Contadora Process

79. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with the United States of America over the future of the Contadora process.

90. Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the United States of America over their military involvement in Central America.

Mr. Eggar: We regularly discuss all important issues, including the situation in Central America, with the United States Government at a number of levels. They are fully aware of our views.

Japan

80. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he expects to meet the Foreign Minister of Japan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to hold talks with Mr. Abe, the Japanese Foreign Minister in the New Year. These will form part of the regular pattern of Anglo-Japanese exchanges between Foreign Ministers.

Namibia

82. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the future of Namibia.

Mr. Rifkind: We shall continue to press South Africa to fulfil her formal commitment to bring Namibia to independence in accordance with the UN Plan. We believe that a prospect for achieving early implementation of that Plan currently lies with the US-led negotiations. We welcome the recent resumption of talks between the United States and Angola.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the changes which have taken place inside Namibia since 17 June designed to eliminate racial discrimination; and if they enable him to reassess the United Kingdom's attitude towards the basis of Namibian independence.

Mr. Rifkind: Although minor changes have taken place inside Namibia, key features of racial discrimination, including the second tier authority system of separate health, education and personal taxation on ethnic grounds, remain. We continue firmly to believe that Namibia should be brought to early independence on the basis of the United Nations plan.

USSR (Emigré Groups)

87. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, following the Geneva summit, he will make a statement on his policy towards Russian emigré groups.

Mr. Rifkind: The activities of such groups within this country are primarily a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, but, so far as they make their views known on matters concerning foreign policy, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office listens to their views and, as appropriate, takes note.

BBC External Services

88. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make extra provision for transmitters for the British Broadcasting Corporation external service to combat jamming in eastern Europe, Iraq and elsewhere.

Mr. Eggar: We are spending over £100 million this decade to improve the audibility of the BBC external services overseas and to combat both intentional and unintentional interference. Provision has been made for new transmitters within this programme to strengthen the signals to both eastern Europe and the Middle East. New satellite links have already improved signals from the overseas relay stations.

93. Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to make the external services of the British Broadcasting Corporation available by means of satellites to provide a worldwide television news and educational service.

Mr. Eggar: We shall be discussing with the BBC External Services in January 1986 the feasibility of their mounting an external television service concentrating initially on news and current affairs. There are formidable technical and funding problems which will need to be overcome before such a service can be introduced.

EC (Policy Development)

89. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he intends to place before his European Community partners for the development of Community policies.

Mr. Rifkind: We will continue to work for early completion of the common market, improvements in world trade rules, reform of the common agricultural policy and strengthened co-operation in foreign policy.

Israel

94. Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, during his recent trip to Israel, any discussions took place with the Israeli Government concerning the possibility of lifting the embargo on the sale of military equipment to Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: This issue was not raised with me by the Israeli Government during my recent visit to Israel.

Iran-Iraq War

96. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he is considering to assist the United Nations in its attempts to bring an end to the Gulf war.

112. Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to seek an end to the Iran-Iraq conflict; and what measures he has suggested for finding an urgent solution to that conflict.

Mr. Renton: During the recent visit to the United Kingdom by the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend and I were glad to be able to reiterate our support for efforts by the United Nations, and particularly those of the Secretary General, to bring an end to this tragic conflict. We will continue to support any peace initiatives which have a realistic chance of success.

Terrorism

97. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's role in international co-operation against terrorism, including hijacking.

Mr. Eggar: As my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, Lord Glenarthur, said in another place on 9 December, our strategy is to promote an acceptance among like-minded countries that we have a common interest in fighting terrorism; to create an international climate in which state-supported terrorism and the abuse of diplomatic immunity are unacceptable; to ensure that it is difficult for terrorists to operate, that no substantive concessions are made to their demands, and that they are apprehended and brought to justice; to ensure that effective measures are taken to prevent hijacking; and to promote full co-operation and exchange of information and intelligence among friendly countries.

GCHQ, Cheltenham

100. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has submitted to the European Court of Human Rights on trade union membership of employees at the Government Communications Headquarters.

Mr. Renton: The European Commission of Human Rights has asked for our observations on the admissibility of the application by the Council of Civil Service Unions and others, concerning the revised terms and conditions of service at Government communications headquarters. These will be submitted in due course.

EC Budget (Portugal)

101. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he expects Portugal to become a net contributor to the European Community budget.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: It remains the Community's intention that Portugal should be a modest net beneficiary from the Community budget.

Honduras

102. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Honduras about violations of refugee status there.

Mr. Eggar: The Honduran authorities are well aware of our concern about the need to respect the status of the refugees.

Budapest Cultural Forum

106. Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals emerged from last month's Budapest cultural forum; and what provision has been made for their implementation.

Mr. Eggar: During the proceedings of the Budapest Cultural Forum, a total of 115 official (that is, Government sponsored) proposals were made. There were also 132 unofficial proposals circulated by cultural personalities attending the forum. Participants at the Budapest cultural forum did not agree a concluding document. That does not mean, however, that the many proposals made at the forum cannot be taken up as appropriate at the CSCE Vienna follow-up meeting. It will also be open to Governments to take whatever action they judge fit on individual proposals.

Africa (Democratic Institutions)

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he takes, within programmes for which he is responsible, to promote democratic institutions in African countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: We naturally welcome and seek to promote the growth of democratic institutions throughout the international community.

Women's Rights

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, following the United Nations meeting in Nairobi and the adoption of a forward-looking strategy for the advancement of women, he will raise with the Foreign Ministers of Arab countries the effect on the situation of women in those countries of the recent rise in Islamic fundamentalism.

Mr. Renton: We shall continue to monitor the performance of particular countries in the field of human rights, including safeguarding of the rights of women in Islamic countries, and to press for an improvement where those rights enshrined in the universal declaration, the international covenants on Human Rights and other relevant instruments are not enjoyed.

Space Weapons (Treaties)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those treaties to which the United Kingdom has agreed which prohibit the development of directed energy weapons in space.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom is party to the 1963 treaty banning nuclear weapon tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and under water, and the 1967 treaty on principles governing the activities of states in the exploration and use of outer space, including the moon and other celestial bodies. Neither of these treaties prohibits the development of directed energy weapons in space.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Quotas

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the current operation of milk quotas in the European Community.

Mr. Gummer: In the first year of the system, 1984-85, deliveries of milk in the European Community were reduced by about 4 per cent. to the level of the quota. Only the Republic of Ireland and the Netherlands exceeded their quotas, and both member states paid the required levy. If present trends continue, deliveries in the Community this year may slightly exceed quota, and the Commission has urged those member states where the quota may be exceeded to warn their producers that levy will be payable unless production is cut back.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Foulkes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much of the assistance to farmers to compensate for the bad summer weather has actually been paid to the farmers concerned in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) Scotland; what percentage of the total allocated this represents in each case; what arrangements he has for further payments to be made by the end of the year; and when he expects the process to be completed.

Mr. Jopling: So far as England is concerned, farmers have until 13 January to submit their claims but a considerable number have already been received. The processing of these is well advanced and we hope to be in a position to pay about 70 per cent. of the total due by the end of the year.

So far as the position in the other countries is concerned, this is a matter for the appropriate Secretaries of State.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Prescott asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the radioactive inventory and volume of waste disposed of at sea for each year from 1955 to 1982.

Mr. Gummer: Information on the total weight and activity of the radioactive wastes disposed of at sea by the United Kingdom in each year from 1955 to 1982 is as follows. Packaging normally accounts for about 90 per cent. of the weight of each consignment.

Sea disposal of low-level radioactive waste by the United Kingdom, 1955-82

Year	Weight (tonnes)	Activity (a) alpha	curies (b) beta/ gamma*
1955	2,617	47	77
1956	1,038	44	33
1957	5,941	1,064	969
1958	3,705	753	1,142
1959	1,198	4	74
†1960	2,551	74	218
1961	6,327	583	1,938
‡1962	1,697	22	239
1963	7,352	371	7,115
1964	4,392	444	15,090
1965	1,759	114	13,754
1966	1,044	78	2,742
1967	722	91	1,682
1968	3,164	731	74,837
1969	1,878	390	17,590
1970	1,674	233	20,224
1971	1,434	323	8,615
1972	1,885	674	19,049
1973	1,453	739	11,641
1974	1,256	399	94,126
1975	1,350	704	52,481
1976	2,269	789	49,777
1977	2,140	930	74,830
1978	2,080	814	69,307
1979	2,014	1,381	81,080
1980	2,693	1,791	106,079
1981	2,517	2,032	104,709
1982	2,697	1,264	101,512

* including tritium.
† includes 289 tonnes from Belgian sources.
‡ includes 438 tonnes from Belgian sources.

Butter

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, for each calendar year since 1977, he will give (a) the tonnage of New Zealand butter imported into the United Kingdom, (b) the tonnage imported into bonded stores in the United Kingdom, and (c) the tonnage released from bonded stores in the United Kingdom; and whether in his enforcement of the tonnage of New Zealand butter permitted to be imported into the United Kingdom each year under protocol 18 of the treaty of accession to the European Economic Community, he has regard to the quantity imported into bonded stores in the United Kingdom, or to the total released from bonded stores within the United Kingdom plus any tonnage imported into the United Kingdom from New Zealand without passing through bonded stores.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Priorities Board

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received the report of the Priorities Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling The Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food has now delivered its first report to Agriculture Ministers and the Chairman of the Agricultural and Food Research Council. We are most grateful to Sir Kenneth Durham and the board for the work which they have undertaken.

The report considers the whole of the publicly funded research and development programme for agriculture and food in the United Kingdom and makes recommendations to the sponsors about future resources allocations and priorities. We are agreed that the broad thrust of the board's advice should guide us in the formulation of the future research programme and the allocation of resources. Detailed discussions will now be held between the sponsors to establish how the recommendations are to be implemented.

On this occasion I am making arrangements for the report to be published and copies are being placed in the Library of the House. Copies will be made available for information to all those organisations and individuals who submitted material to the board in the course of its deliberations and those who have been involved in the consultations with the Agriculture Departments on industry funding of research and development. Additional copies will be available from the Ministry's publications unit at Alnwick shortly.

DEFENCE

British Army of the Rhine

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the gross annual cost of maintaining the British Army of the Rhine; and how much is reimbursed by the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Stanley: As stated in table 2.3 in volume II of the "Statement on Defence Estimates 1985" the cost of the British Army of the Rhine is estimated to be some £1,899 million in 1985-86 at 1985-86 Estimates prices. The final bilateral offset agreement with the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany expired in March 1980. The Government of the Federal Republic do, however, make available rent-free a large proportion of the accommodation occupied by both the British Army of the Rhine and RAF Germany.

L9A1 Gas Spray Gun

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what stocks are held by the armed forces of the L9A1 gas spray gun and associated supplies; when these were first obtained; for what purposes; what tests have been carried out; in what circumstances they are intended to be used and with what safeguards; and who will have authority to authorise their use.

Mr. Lee: The L9A1 is a hand-held aerosol dispenser, which releases a small quantity of irritant solution designed to deter dogs from harassing military patrols. It was introduced in 1979. Only a limited number are held for use against dogs at close range in circumstances where no innocent bystander is likely to be affected. The irritation wears off after 10 minutes and tests have shown that there are no lasting ill-effects.

Seismological Research Group

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the current work of the seismological research group.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the defence seismological centre at Blacknest, Berkshire, an outstation of the atomic weapons research establishment.

The centre is currently undertaking work on methods of detecting and identifying seismic disturbances including the operation of seismometer array stations in the United Kingdom. The centre also provides advice to the Government on seismological monitoring, and the results of much of its work are published from time to time in scientific journals.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to pay an official visit to the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Heseltine: No.

HTLV III Virus

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to test members of the armed forces for the HTLV III virus.

Mr. Lee: Blood donated by members of the armed forces for transfusion purposes is screened for the presence of antibody to the HTLV III virus in accordance with the guidelines issued by DHSS. At present there are no plans to extend the screening procedures.

Trident

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence at what time, how many and what yield of nuclear tests will be necessary by the United Kingdom to test the Trident D5 missile.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is not in the national interest to identify the specific purpose of any joint United Kingdom/United States underground nuclear test or the weapon programme it supports.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimated cost of the Trident programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced an estimate of cost of Trident of £9,285 million at 1984-85 prices and at an exchange rate of £1=$1·38 on 29 January at columns 134-37.

South Africa

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the units of Her Majesty's forces that have passed through South Africa on their way to neighbouring countries, naming the countries concerned, the purpose of the visit, and the date and length of stay in each case;

(2) further to the answer on 9 December, Official Report, columns 545-46, which neighbouring countries British service men have been en route for when they passed through South Africa.

Mr. Stanley: It is not our practice to give specific details of the military training we provide for foreign Governments or the units of the British service men involved. The length of training may vary from a few days to several years. Because of airline routeing considerations, British service men engaged in overseas training in countries such as Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland may pass through South Africa.

Foreign Forces (Training)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what number of training places have been offered to Moroccan military personnel in Britain.

Mr. Lee: None in the recent past.

Royal Air Force Police (Public Displays)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards individuals acting as criminals at public displays by the Royal Air Force police being dressed for the purpose of the display in clothing carrying CND symbols; on how many occasions this has happened; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is not the Ministry of Defence's policy to permit such individuals to wear CND insignia. I am aware of one case of an individual airman sporting a CND emblem without official knowledge and corrective action has been taken.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the detailed rules under which British companies working on strategic defence initiative related contracts will have to operate in importing technology from the United States of America.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The detailed arrangements for United Kingdom participation are contained in a secret memorandum of understanding. British companies are being suitably informed of provisions that affect their interests.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the value of a strategic defence such as that envisaged in strategic defence initiative research against tactical low trajectory missiles, such as those deployed by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics against European targets.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It would be premature at this stage to form judgments about the feasibility of defences against low trajectory ballistic missiles.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the ownership of the rights to the technology that emerges from any United Kingdom-United States of America collaboration on strategic defence initiative-related research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The matter of protection of intellectual property generated in the United Kingdom is fully covered in the arrangements that have been agreed.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement he has reached with the United States Secretary for Defence on the protection of British interests in relation to strategic defence initiative research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am satisfied that the arrangements that have been agreed fully protect British interests.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations he had from scientists opposed to Her Majesty's Government's policy of promoting strategic defence initiative-related research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: None since the announcement of the Government's instruction to conclude a memorandum of understanding with the United States on this subject.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the terms of his advice to British industry concerning the scope offered by the strategic defence initiative agreement to British companies for dollar contracts and the conditions which would have to be fulfilled if such contracts are to be obtained;

(2) what examination he has made of the implications for patent law of sales by British universities of the product of strategic defence initiative-related research; and what steps he has taken to ensure that the agreement with the United States on strategic defence initiative safeguards the patent law interests of United Kingdom companies in relation to United States companies;

(3) what detailed steps he is taking to protect intellectual property in relation to strategic defence initiative initiatives;

(4) what detailed undertakings he has reached with the United States Administration about eliminating delay in the granting of permits for importing and exporting strategic defence initiative-related technology.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the answer I have already given earlier today.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the areas he has identified in which British scientists have special expertise of interest to the strategic defence initiative, including lasers, advanced materials and electro-magnetic guns.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A list of 18 potential work areas has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence in what areas the strategic defence initiative office will carry out its own research to find opportunities for British participation in strategic defence initiative programmes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The SDI participation office will seek actively with its United States counterpart and British interests to identify opportunities for British participation in SDI research programmes.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to which British companies have already negotiated contracts related to the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am aware of several opportunities which have reached an advanced stage, but not of any that have yet been concluded.

Defence Contracts (Excess Profits)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what financial payment his Department is making to Mr. Jim Smith following disclosures by him to the Department which led to £400,000 excess profits being recovered by the Department in respect of defence contracts placed with his then employer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The recovery by the Ministry of Defence of a sum of £421,000 followed from post costing of contracts initiated by the Ministry as part of its normal procedures and as the result also of information provided by the company concerned. No question of any payment to Mr. Smith arises. On the general question of rewards to informants, I have nothing to add to the Treasury minute (Cmnd. 9638) in reply to the 25th report from the Committee of Public Accounts, Session 1984-85, or to the evidence given to the Committee of Public Accounts by Ministry of Defence officials in open session on 18 November 1985. The minutes of evidence are to be published shortly.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of communications exchanged between Mr. Jim Smith and his Department in relation to excess profits charged by Aish Ltd. on defence contracts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am prepared to place in the Library copies of communications exchanged with Mr. J. Smith about additional profits secured by Aish and Company on defence contracts, provided that the hon. Member is satisfied that Mr. Smith would have no objection to publication of this correspondence.

Royal Navy

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to deploy a Royal Navy task group beyond the NATO area.

Mr. Stanley: I am glad to say that we plan to deploy a Royal Navy task group to the north Pacific, far east, Australasian and Indian ocean areas next April. The group, which will be led by HMS Illustrious, will spend some eight months on deployment before returning home to the United Kingdom next December.

Spare Munitions

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received any representations from Royal Ordnance factories concerning spare munitions capacity.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 22 November 1985, c. 357]: Representations have been received by my Department from Royal Ordnance plc concerning reserve capacity. Discussions are taking place between senior officials in the Ministry of Defence and the company's management.

Service Personnel (Signals Regiments)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 50 service men of 14 Signals Regiment, who have been discharged prematurely since 3 February 1984, have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for not completing their engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1985, c. 594]: Nineteen.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 83 service men of 9 Signals Regiment, who have been prematurely discharged since 3 February 1984, have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for not completing their engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1985, c. 594]: Sixteen.

Retirements and Redundancies

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing, for (i) the Ministry of Defence and (ii) the royal dockyards, for calendar years 1978 to 1984, the number of non-industrial civil servants by grade and age who have (a) taken early retirement and (b) been made redundant.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 22 November 1985, c. 360]: The information is not held in the form requested and could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the dates, yield and weapon tested for each nuclear weapon test carried out by the United Kingdom since 1970.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The United Kingdom, jointly with the United States of America, has conducted 14 nuclear weapons tests since 1970. They have all been conducted underground at the Nevada test site and were announced at the time. The following list detail dates, yield range and event name. The tests were required in order to maintain the effectiveness of our nuclear capabilities. It is not in the national interest to identify the specific purpose of each test.

Joint United Kingdom/United States Underground Nuclear Tests Conducted Since 1970

Date	Yield (Kilotons)	Event Name
23 May 1974	20-200	Fallon
26 August 1976	20-150	Banon
11 April 1978	20-150	Fondutta
18 November 1978	20-150	Quargel
29 August 1979	20-150	Nessel
26 April 1980	20-150	Colwick
24 October 1980	Low (less than 20)	Dutchess
17 December 1980	20-150	Serpa
12 November 1981	20-150	Rousanne
25 April 1982	20-150	Gibne
22 April 1983	Low (less than 20)	Armada
1 May 1984	20-150	Mundo
9 December 1984	20-150	Egmont
5 December 1985	20-150	Kinibito

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether Her Majesty's Government have now started discussions with the Australian Government on the recommendations of the Royal Commission on nuclear tests;

(2) what action Her Majesty's Government are taking on recommendation 6 of the report of the Australian Royal Commission into British nuclear tests, relating to the clearing up of Maralinga, Emu and the Monte Bello islands;

(3) if he will now make a statement on the report of the Australian Royal Commission on nuclear tests.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang).

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Expenditure, London

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the expenditure on housing in the area covered by the Greater London council in each of the years 1979 to 1985 in total net expenditure, total gross expenditure and gross capital expenditure.

Sir George Young: Most expenditure on housing is in the private sector, but statistical information for Greater

London is available only for the public sector. There is no appropriate definition of 'net' current expenditure, as there is a statutory requirement on local authorities that their housing revenue accounts must balance. Total current expenditure and gross capital expenditure in the public sector are given in the following table:

	1979/80	1980/81	1981/82	1982/83	1983/84	1984/85*
Total current expenditure by local authorities	1,148	1,466	1,537	1,671	1,723	1,843
Gross expenditure by the Housing Corporation	112	142	143	202	190	195
Gross capital expenditure by local authorities	863	777	598	708	831	895

* Estimated

Sources:

1. For current expenditure by local authorities, Housing Revenue Account statistics compiled by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy.
2. For Housing Corporation expenditure, estimates provided by the Corporation.
3. For gross capital expenditure by local authorities, Housing Investment Programme submissions (from HIP 2).

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he takes of the capacity of the private sector to provide rented accommodation when determining a local authority's housing investment programme allocation.

Sir George Young: The methodology for distributing housing investment programme allocations to regions and to individual local authorities is decided each year after consultation with the local authority associations. The practice has been to distribute 50 per cent. of the regional totals (40 per cent. in Greater London) on the basis of the generalised needs index and the remainder on the basis of the housing investment programme submissions made each year by local authorities, and the Government's general housing policies. A description of the method ology for 1986-87 will be placed in the Library when the individual allocations are announced.

Council Accommodation (Costs of Provision)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the average cost of providing a new council dwelling to let, in terms of the first year debt charges on the loan and the general management costs for a year for a one, two and three-bedroomed non-sheltered dwelling in (a) Cheltenham, (b) Greater London, (c) England and (d) Great Britain.

Sir George Young: The information requested about costs of provision is not readily available from project control forms, except as averages for all sizes of dwellings. The average cost to a local authority in 1984 of providing a non-sheltered dwelling for rent was £30,500 in England and £42,000 in Greater London. The first-year debt charges on these costs, assuming an average interest rate of 11 per cent., would be £3,355 and £4,620 respectively. Separate figures for Cheltenham are not available. The average management and maintenance cost for all local authority dwellings in 1984-85 was £475 in England, £756 in Greater London and £479 in Cheltenham. Comparable information is not available for Great Britain as a whole.

Dogs

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will implement section A of appendix A to the report of the working party on dogs published in 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Our consultation paper, issued last year, covered a number of proposals on dog licensing including those contained in section A of appendix A of the report of the working party on dogs. We will announce our conclusions on the subject as soon as possible. I understand that some 190 local authorities in Great Britain now have a dog warden service as recommended by the working party.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the applications for grant aid received by the Nature Conservancy Council for the current financial year, under section 38 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, which have either been turned down, or where the grant sought was not met in full by the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that it is not their policy to publish details of grants refused. The other information is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

To date 47 land purchase grants have been offered of which only one was at a lower rate than sought. Nine applications have been refused. 332 project grants have been offered, 82 have been rejected. A further 339 are currently the subject of consultation and determination.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the numbers of dwellings in local authority ownership that were vacant for (a) over three months, (b) over six months, (c) over nine months and (d) over 12 months for the most recent date available in respect of (i) England, (ii) York, (iii) Leeds, (iv) Darlington, (v) Middlesbrough, (vi) Durham, (vii) Sheffield and (viii) Hull.

Sir George Young: Information about vacant dwellings owned by local authorities and about those vacant for more than a year and for more than two years (but not for other lengths of time) was collected in the authorities' 1985 housing investment programme returns. The figures for 1 April are listed in columns A19, A29 and A39, respectively, of the "HIP4(1985) all items print" which is available in the Library. Based on the returns and including estimates for local authorities which were unable to provide figures, there were 116,500 local authority dwellings vacant (including dwellings that had been closed) in England at 1 April 1985, of which 26,100 had been vacant for more than a year and 13,500 for more than two years.

GLC (Stress Boroughs Programme)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will issue his decision on applications made by the Greater London council for his consent under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 in respect of payments under the council's stress boroughs programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My Department has today written to the GLC to indicate that my consent has been given under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 to some payments which the council proposes to make to certain London boroughs. I have also considered the information that the council has provided about assistance that it has given during the 1985-86 financial year without my consent under section 91. The Department's letter indicates those individual payments where I have decided that I would not wish to exercise my discretion to direct the London residuary body to recover the value of the assistance from the authority concerned, together with those cases to which I will give further consideration in the light of any additional information provided by the GLC and the London boroughs. I am awaiting further information from the GLC in respect of payments made in 1984-85.

In issuing these decisions, I have made it clear that I am concerned about the continuing financial assistance proposed to be given by the GLC to individual boroughs on a selective basis, particularly where this involves funding activities continuing beyond abolition. I take the view that, with the approach of abolition, there is in general little justification for the GLC/MCC seeking at this stage to fund post-abolition activities from ratepayers' money. Decisions as to such funding are primarily the province of successor authorities. I shall therefore wish to look very closely at any further applications for my consent to such assistance under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985. I wish to make it clear beyond doubt that if payments are made henceforth to selected borough or district councils without my consent, or if my consent is refused I will not hesitate to direct the appropriate Residuary Body to seek recovery of the money in every case where this appears to be justified.

Rate Limitation

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which authorities selected for rate limitation in 1986-87 have applied for a redetermination of their expenditure level under section 3 of the Rates Act 1984; and what decisions he has reached on those applications.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I received applications for a redetermination of the expenditure level from seven authorities. I have considered all the applications carefully, together with any other information I thought relevant, and in each case I have revised the expenditure level upwards as follows:

	Original EL £ million	Redetermined EL £ million
Camden	133,669	136,919
Greenwich	88,629	95,228
Hackney	119,422	128,572
Lambeth	144,068	152,309
Lewisham	112,062	115,594
Liverpool	265,070	274,550
Newcastle-upon-Tyne	151,252	154,652

Water Supplies (Leeds)

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the recent dislocation of water supplies experienced in the central areas of Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: On 10 December 1985 a 42in water main, laid in 1871 from sources north of Leeds to Headingley, burst. The Yorkshire water authority had to close down two other parallel mains to allow repair, which proved to be unusually difficult. It was completed early on 13 December. Temporary loss of 40 per cent. of supplies to Leeds meant that up to 200,000 pople were without normal supplies which could not be restored fully until 15 and 16 December because it was necessary to recharge the system very slowly. Emergency supplies from water tankers and standpipes were provided with military assistance from 11 to 16 December. Co-operation between the Yorkshire water authority, the armed forces, Leeds city council, the emergency services, the area health authority and neighbouring water authorities was very good and all the agencies concerned deserve credit for their efforts to overcome this unusual emergency. An internal inquiry by board members and the chairman of the central division consumer consultative committee is being mounted immediately into the cause of the burst and the measures taken to deal with it. The findings will be made public.

London Docklands

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his statement on 11 December that 4,700 jobs have been created in the London docklands, Official Report, column 944, he will tabulate in the Official Report for each of the three London boroughs concerned, together with respective totals, the permanent jobs in the area of the London Docklands Development Corporation that have been (a) transferred from outside and (b) created within the area since the establishment of the corporation.

Sir George Young: As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 29 January 1985 at column 128, this information is not collected.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the respective safety criteria in terms of man/sieverts used for the management of low and intermediate levels of solid radioactive waste according to (a) his Department's report, "Assessment of Best Practicable Environmental Options" and (b) the International Commission on Radiological Protection; and what is the basis for the difference between those criteria.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Department's assessment of best praticable environmental options is based on levels of radiation protection in line with the safety principles for nuclear chemical plant issued by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and with the principles for the protection of the human environment issued by Government Departments responsible for authorising waste disposal. These include a maximum of 5 mSv a year as the average radiation dose for the work force on storage and disposal sites. After disposal, no member of the public should be subjected to a persistent exposure of more than 0·1 mSv per year. In both cases, the level is one tenth of the annual limit recommended by ICRP. The difference reflects our concern that all doses should be as low as reasonably achievable and leaves a safety margin for possible exposure pathways and health effects not at present recognised.

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the internationally recommended limits of radiation exposure in man sieverts; and what assessment he has made of the risks to seamen and dockers involved in the disposal at sea of radioactive waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: The International Commission on Radiation Protection has recommended a limit of 50 mSv for the annual occupational radiation dose. An assessment has been made of doses to dockers and seamen involved in the disposal of radioactive waste at sea. This assessment was undertaken by the National Radiological Protection Board and published by them in June 1985 (ref DOE/RW/85-078). The highest actual dose recorded as being received by any individual was 12 mSv; most were under 2 mSv.

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitorings of the radioactive effect upon dockers and seamen were conducted during the disposal at sea of radioactive waste and how many dockers and seamen were involved, during each year since 1955.

Mr. Waldegrave: From 1977 to 1982, all the dockers and seamen involved in handling radioactive waste for disposal at sea were issued with film badges to facilitate the monitoring of dose levels. No information is available on the numbers of workers involved or for the period prior to 1977.

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list and describe the individual maximum permitted radiation exposure levels in milli sieverts for dockers and seamen, respectively, involved in disposal at sea of radioactive waste, for each year between 1955 and 1976.

Mr. Waldegrave: The maximum permitted dose to workers occupationally exposed to radiation is 50 milli sieverts per year. This limit applies to both dockers and seamen, and it remained unchanged throughout the period from 1955 to 1976.

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the levels of radiation dockers and seamen were exposed to in the disposal at sea of radioactive waste in each year since 1955; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Levels of radiation dose to dockers and seamen associated with the disposal at sea of radioactive waste between 1977 and 1982 are set out in a report published by the National Radiological Protection Board in June 1985 and entitled; "A Review of the Radiation Exposure of Transport Personnel" during the radioactive waste disposal operations from 1977 to 1982 (ref. DOE/RW/85-078). No information is available on levels of radiation exposure to United Kingdom dockers and seamen before 1977, and no sea disposals have taken place since 1982.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table, showing for the most recent available year, an analysis by local planning committee area, of the number of planning appeals under section 36 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 made to him, from each such area, together with the number of appeals upheld and rejected, respectively, for each such area.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on 25 November at column 366.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning decisions by local planning authorities in England were reversed on appeal to his Department during the last 12 months period for which figures are available; and how this compares with similar figures for each of the preceding five years.

Mr. Tracey: There were 14,150 planning appeals decided in the 12 months between October 1984 and September 1985. Of these, 5,041 were successful. Published figures for the last five calendar years are as follows:

Year	Number decided	Number allowed
1980	13,130	4,044
1981	14,451	4,721
1982	12,915	4,003
1983	11,221	3,633
1984	11,643	3,773

Local Government Reform

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the balances of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils after abolition.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have today published a consultation paper. Copies are available in the Library.

I understand that some of the outgoing authorities, and the GLC in particular, have significant resources available to them which will not be required for the discharge of their functions during their remaining period of existence. Now that abolition is less than four months away I consider that it would not be appropriate for the outgoing authorities to incur significant expenditure on major new initiatives without the express support of all successor authorities in the area.

The benefit of the cash book balances of the outgoing authorities should be returned to local people. I am proposing that this should be achieved by distributing the balances through the residuary bodies to the boroughs and districts in the proportion in which their ratepayers contributed, that is to say pro rata to rateable value. There will be special arrangements for certain of the new authorities to receive a share, notably the Inner London education authority. I hope that in most areas the residuary body will be able to make a first distribution very shortly after abolition day. A final distribution will be made once the accounts of the outgoing authorities have been closed, taking account of the best available estimate of the outstanding amounts owed to creditors and due from debtors.

My intention continues to be that the residuary bodies should in general distribute in full the cash associated with capital receipts, mainly to the boroughs and districts, and that the receipts should also serve to increase those authorities' permitted levels of capital expenditure. But I am proposing one change. I believe there is a good case for allowing the residuary bodies to retain the proceeds of repayments of principal on mortgages, so that they can follow the normal local authority practice of using such repayments to redeem debt. The associated spending permission would still be passed to the boroughs and districts.

These are my proposals. I shall consider carefully the responses to the consultation paper before taking final decisions.

Pollution

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made with the monitoring of bathing waters which was proposed in paragraph 33 of the Government's response to the 10th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution.

Mr. Waldegrave: A list of over 350 bathing waters in the United Kingdom has been agreed with the authorities concerned. It includes all the more important resorts and other bathing places. The waters will be monitored over two years according to the regime given in the bathing water directive (76/160/EEC). I expect to publish the results. The list of bathing waters, which includes those identified for the purposes of this Directive, follows.

LISTS OF BATHING WATERS TO BE INCLUDED IN THE SURVEY

North West Water Authority (30 waters)

Cleveleys
Fleetwood
Blackpool, Squires Gate to South Shore
Blackpool, South Shore to Central Pier
Blackpool, Central Pier to North Shore
Blackpool, North Shore to Cleveleys
Morecambe, West End Pool to Sandylands Pool
Morecambe, West End Pool to Leisure Park
Morecambe, Bare Pool to Town Hall Slipway
Morecambe, Town Hall to Leisure Park
Heysham
Pasture Road, Moreton
Dove Point, Meols
New Brighton
St. Annes
Walney Island, West Shore
Askam-in-Furness
Walney Island, Sandy Gap
Walney Island, Biggar Bank
Roan Head
St. Bees
Seascale
Haverigg
Silecroft
Silloth
Allonby
Bardsea
Ainsdale
Southport
Formby

Northumbrian Water Authority (15 waters)

Whitley Bay
Tynemouth
Redcar
Saltburn
Whitburn, Roker
South Shields
South Beach, Seaton Sluice
Seaton Carew
Newbiggin
Druridge Bay
Crimdon
Warkworth
Bamburgh, Seahouses
Alnmouth
Beadnell

Yorkshire Water Authority (21 waters)

Filey
Whitby
Skipsea
Withernsea
Cayton Bay
Sandsend
Robins Hood's Bay
Hornsea
North Landing, Flamborough
Reighton Sands
Runswick Bay
Wilsthorpe
Fraisthorpe
Earle's Dyke
Turstall
Barmston
South Landing, Flamborough
Scarborough, North Bay
Scarborough, South Bay
Bridlington, North Beach
Bridlington, South Beach

Anglian Water Authority (29 waters)*

Skegness
Ingoldmells
Chapel St. Leonards
Anderby Creek
Moggs Eye
Mablethorpe, Sutton-on-Sea
Cleethorpes
Hunstanton
Heacham
Yarmouth (three waters)
Lowestoft (two waters)
Cromer
Sheringham
Felixstowe (two waters)
Wells
Mundesley
Southend, Thorpe Bay
Southend, Westcliff
Clacton
Walton
Dovercourt
Frinton
Jaywick
Brightlingsea
Holland

* Consultations have not been completed and there may be a few changes to this list.

Southern Water Authority (65 waters)

Ventnor
Bembridge
St. Helens
Cowes
Compton Bay
Whitecliffe Bay
Totland Bay
Seagrove
Colwell Bay
Gurnard
Margate
Ramsgate
Broadstairs
Folkestone
Camber Sands
St. Mildreds Bay
Herne Bay
Hythe
Joss Bay
St. Margarets Bay
Sandgate
West Beach
Minnis Bay
Deal Castle
Sandwich Bay
Littlestone
St. Marys Bay
Dymchurch
Leysdown
Margate
Ryde
Sandown, Esplanade
Sandown, Shanklin Chine
Southsea, South Parade Pier
West Hayling
West of Eastoke
Stokes Bay
Lee-on-Solent
Eastney
Highcliffe
Milford-on-Sea
Calshot
Lepe
Christchurch Bay, Barton-on-Sea
Brighton
Eastbourne
Hastings
Hove
Bognor Regis
Pevensey bay
Littlehampton
Worthing
Bexhill
Rottingdean and Saltdean
Middleton on Sea
Bracklesham
Norman's Bay
Selsey
West Wittering
Southwick
Seaford
Winchelsea
Newhaven
Shoreham
Pagham

Wessex Water Authority (37 waters)

Clevedon (beach near the swimming pool)
Weston-super-Mare extension (between River Axe and existing classified bathing water)
Sand Bay
Berrow
Burnham on Sea
Brean } continuous beach Brean Down to river Brue
Blue Anchor
Dunster
Minehead
Porlock Weir
Charmouth
Seatown
Eypemouth
West Bay (west)
Portland Harbour
Weymouth Extension
Church Ope Cove
Bowleaze Cove
Ringstead
Durdle Door (east and west)
Lulworth Cove
Kimmeridge
Studland
Shell Bay
Poole Harbour, Lake
Poole Harbour, Rockley Sands
Poole Harbour, Shore Road
Hengistbury Head (east)
Mudeford Sandbank (west)
Friarscliffe
Highcliffe
Christchurch
Bournemouth
Poole
Swanage
Weymouth
Weston-super-Mare

South West Water Authority (101 waters)

Lyme Regis
Seaton
Beer
Sidmouth
Budleigh Salterton
Sandy Bay
Exmouth
Dawlish Warren
Dawlish
Teignmouth
Shaldon
Ness Cove
Maidencombe
Watcombe
Babbacombe
Redgate
Hollicombe
Shoalstone
St. Mary's
Dartmouth Castle and Sugary Cove
Stoke Fleming, Blackpool Sands
Slapton Sands
Millbay
Salcombe, North Sands
Salcombe, South Sands
Hope Cove
Thurlestone
Bantham
Bigbury
Challaborough
Mothecombe
Wembury
Bovisand
Plymouth Hoe
Seaton
East Looe
Readymoney
Polkerris
Par and Spit
Crinnis, Carlyon Bay
Charlestown and Duporth
Porthpean
Pentewan
Polstreath
Port Mellon
Gorran Haven
Portluney
Pendower

Gyllyngvase
Swanpool
Maen Porth
Portholiow
Porthoustock
Coverack
Kennack Sands
Mullion Cove
Polurrian Cove
Poldhu Cove
Gunwalloe Cove
Porthleven
Praa Sands
Marazion and Mounts Bay
Porthcurno
Carbis Bay and Port Kidney
The Towans, Hayloe to Gwithian
Portreath
Porthowan
Trevaunance Cove
Perranporth
Holywell Bay
Crantock
Watergate
Mawgan Porth
Treyarnon Bay
Trevone Bay
Harlyn Bay
Rock
Daymar Bay
Polzeath
Widemouth Sand
Bude
Hartland Quay
Westward Ho!
Instow
Saunton Sands
Croyde Bay
Woolacombe Sand
Ilfracombe
Combe Martin
Lynmouth
Torquay, Oddicombe
Torquay, Meadfoot
Torquay, Torre Abbey
Paignton, Paignton Beach
Paignton, Goodrington
Paignton, Broadsands
Penzance, Sennen
St. Ives, Porthmeor
St. Ives, Porthminster
Newquay, Fistral
Newquay, Towan

Welsh Water Authority (40 waters)

Barry
Southerndown
Trecco Bay
Sandy Bay
Rest Bay
Aberavon
Swansea Bay
Bracelet Bay
Caswell Bay
Limeslade Bay
Langland Bay
Oxwich Bay
Port Eynon Bay
Rhossili Bay
Pembrey
Pendine
Amroth
Saundersfoot
Tenby
Broadhaven
Newgale
Whitesands Bay
Newquay
Aberystwyth
Borth
Tywyn
Fairbourne
Barmouth
Llandanwg
Harlech
Morfa Bychan
Criccieth
Pwellheli
Abersoch
Trearddur Bay
Llandudno
Colwyn Bay
Kinmel Bay
Rhyl
Prestatyn

Northern Ireland (11 waters)

Benone, County Londonderry
Castlerock, County Londonderry
Portstewart, County Londonderry
Portrush, County Antrim
Helen's Bay, County Down
Crawfordsburn, County Down
Bangor (Ballyholme), County Down
Groomsport, County Down
Millisle, County Down
Newcastle, County Down
Cranfield, County Down

Scotland (20 waters)

Nairn
Aberdeen
Cullen
Fraserburgh
Arbroath
Carnoustie
St. Andrews
Aberdour
Gullane
Kinghorn
North Berwick
Yellowcraigs
Pease Bay
Sandyhills
Ayr
Girvan
Irvine-Gailes
Prestwick
Saltcoats, Ardrossan
Troon (south)

SOCIAL SERVICES

Post Office (Lost Business)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what business he plans to offer to the Post Office to replace that lost by the transfer of benefit payments to automated credit transfer; and what account he has taken of representations on this matter, received subsequent to the 1979 Rayner report from bodies representing rural interests.

Mr. Major: We have already transferred the issue of milk tokens to the Post Office and will continue to offer it business provided it is an efficient way of meeting the requirements of the Department and the needs of beneficiaries. Our aim is to provide a cost-effective payment service whilst keeping under review the effect on the Post Office of the growth in payments by automated credit transfer and the needs of beneficiaries in rural areas.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of consultative documents concerning proposals to close wards or hospitals or to make changes in the use of hospital services which have been published since 1979 by district health authorities within the four Thames regional authorities; how many decisions have been made; and, of these, how many decisions differed from the proposals originally made.

Mr. Hayhoe: Departmental records show that from May 1979 up to the end of June 1985 there were 208 proposals for closure or change of use of entire hospitals or parts of hospitals. A final decision had been reached on 167 of them and many proposals where the decision was to proceed have been modified, sometimes very extensively: detailed information is not, however, collected centrally. Eighteen proposals were not proceeded with.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of (a) single claimants and (b) couples were interviewed in connection with their claims for Department of Health and Social Security payments at home nationally and in the Sheffield district in the last three years.

Mr. Major: The information requested is not available. Statistics kept on home visits do not differentiate between single claimants and couples. However, the total numbers of effective visits made in the last three years were as follows:

Year ending	Nationally	The four Sheffield Offices
April 1983	3,370,575	40,880
April 1984	3,515,234	38,413
April 1985	2,999,693	34,398

Students

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to lay revised regulations to safeguard the social security position of students receiving income from their parents through covenants; and if he intends to make any other changes affecting students.

Mr. Newton: Regulations will be brought before the House in the early part of next year to restore, in time for the 1986 summer vacation, the Government's policy on the treatment of students' covenanted income for supplementary benefit purposes. The intention is that the parental or spouses' contribution to the student grant will be attributed to the grant-aided period only; if the student has no grant the amount attributed will be equal to the maximum ordinary maintenance grant appropriate to his case. Any excess will be taken into account over the full year. Provision will also be made for the treatment of covenanted income for housing benefit purposes.

There will be consultation on these draft regulations with the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations. This will form part of the consultation on wider proposals for modifying the social security system as it affects students, and for making some adjustments in student grant arrangements, which were foreshadowed in paragraph 3.34 of the social security White Paper published on Monday.

As the earlier social security Green Paper made clear, the Government's long-term aim is to return to the former position where students were helped by grants, by their families and by their own vacation earnings. Meanwhile, however, we consider it would now be right to make some limited changes — which will apply to all students whether grant aided or not — to tackle the least appropriate and most wasteful aspects of the present arrangements. These include the payment of supplementary benefit and UB in the short vacations, which result in benefit payments of only about £4 million of benefit at an administrative cost of some £2 million; and the payment of housing benefit to those in halls of residence, which results in benefit payments of only about £5 million at an administrative cost of some £3 million. Other housing benefit provisions will be changed to bring the treatment of students into line with that of other claimants; to prevent payment for accommodation which they are not using during the long vacation; and to simplify administration for local authorities which at present have to reassess student claim six times a year.

Accordingly, the Government propose to exclude full-time students from supplementary benefit and unemployment benefit in the short vacations; to exclude students in halls of residence from housing benefit; and to make a number of other changes in the housing benefit arrangements, including a limitation on payment for accommodation from which students are absent in the long vacation. We do not, however, propose at present to make any changes in students' entitlement to supplementary benefit or unemployment benefit in the long vacations.

Apart from the provisions relating to covenants and to housing benefit in the long vacation, which we aim to bring into effect earlier, the intention is to implement these proposals from the start of the 1986-87 academic year. At the same time, we shall make improvements in the housing benefit disregards for books and travel costs to bring them into line with present supplementary benefit disregards; and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science will be making increases in the grants paid to students living away from home and improvements in the students' dependants hardship scheme.

Details of the proposals will be set out in a consultation paper early in the new year, when draft regulations will also be sent to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations.

North-East Thames RHA

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all the members of the North-East Thames regional health authority, together with their occupational background and the expiration dates of their appointments.

Mr. Hayhoe: The occupational background of potential members is only one of the factors taken into account when considering appointments. We have not therefore considered it necessary to update this particular information in our records and these details could now be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The other information requested is as follows:

Member	Appointed until
Cllr. Mrs. Sonia Anderson	30 September 1986
Cllr. Mrs. Nora Dain	30 September 1986
Cllr. Mrs. Jean Frost	30 September 1986
Dr. John Hamblin	30 September 1986
Dr. Silvain Josse, OBE	30 September 1986
David Hague Esq.	30 September 1986
Mrs. Frances Heidensohn	30 September 1986
John Marks Esq.	30 September 1986
Frank Hencher Esq.	30 September 1986
Richard Brew Esq., CBE	30 September 1988
Donald Hoodless Esq.	30 September 1988
Dr. Ian Kelsey Fry	30 September 1988
Martin Easteal Esq.	30 September 1988
Rodney Bass Esq.	30 September 1988
John Quinton Esq.	30 September 1988

Lipoflavanoid

Mr. Parris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the review committee on National Health Service drugs has yet considered whether to recommend that Lipoflavanoid be added to the list of drugs which can be prescribed within the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs as not yet considered Lipoflavanoid. A submission from the manufacturers is awaited.

Clinical Complaints

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on how many occasions in the last five years for which figures are available health authorities have been sued by patients complaining about clinical judgment; in what proportion of these cases an out of court payment was made; and in what proportion a payment followed a court case;

(2) in how many cases, after a clinical complaints procedure had been carried out, an ex gratia payment was made to a complainant in the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will categorise the reasons why some cases referred to the clinical complaints procedure were found unsuitable for review.

Mr. Whitney: Cases have been found unsuitable for review because the complaint was not of a substantial nature or was likely to be the subject of action by the health authority or through the courts; or because the length of time which had elapsed since the actions giving rise to the complaint made a review impracticable.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to changes in the number and proportion of cases of complaint made to the Health Service Commissioner which he had to reject because they involved clinical judgment since the introduction of the clinical complaints procedures in 1981.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not available in the form requested. The following is taken from the annual reports of the Health Service Commissioner:

Period (1 April to 31 March)	Total cases		Clinical judgment rejections
	Concluded	Rejected	Total	Percentage of all rejections
1979-80	570	418	115	27·5
1980-81	676	517	128	24·8
1981-82*	699	561	145	25·9
1982-83	786	671	220	39
1983-84	889	584	222	38
1984-85	798	445	150	34

* The clinical complaints procedure was introduced on 1 September 1981.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many written complaints have been made to hospital authorities in the last three years for which figures are available; how the complaints were investigated; and what proportion involved clinical judgment.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is given in the table.

Written complaints relating to NHS hospital services, England

Type of complaint	Number of Complaints 1982	1983	1984 (provisional)
Total number of written complaints	16,218	19,255	22,354
Proportion of written complaints wholly or partly clinical	43·2	42·5	42·1
Method of investigation:
By health authority officers	16,014	19,033	22,137
Referred to health authority members:
*Further action unnecessary	103	80	78
†Investigation by members	33	58	27
‡Independent inquiry	4	11	13
‖Investigation by two independent consultants	¶32	59	69
Method yet to be decided	32	14	30

* "Further action unnecessary" refers to complaints reported to the Authority (or an appropriate Sub-Committee) for decision as to further action, where the decision was that further investigation was unnecessary.
† "Investigation by members" means the procedure in para 7(111) (a) of HM(66) 15, modified by the co-option of one or more persons independent of the Authority concerned. (Recommended in Department's letter "Arrangements for ad hoc Committees of Enquiry" of 9.12.66).
‡ "Independent inquiry"—the procedure in para 7(111) (b) of HM(66)15.
‖ Investigation of complaints concerning clinical judgement (as set out in Part III of HC(81)5).
¶ Cases investigated 1.9.81 to 31.12.82.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the representations he has received, and their sources,, which have recommended that the Health Service Commissioner should be allowed to consider complaints involving clinical judgment.

Mr. Whitney: I am aware of only one such representation since the introduction of the clinical complaints procedure in September 1981. This was made by the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) in May 1985.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each year for which figures are available since the clinical complaints procedure was started, the figures for (a) the number of complaints referred to regional medical officers, (b) the number and proportion which were given independent reviews, (c) the number and proportion thought to be unsuitable for independent reviews, (d) the number and proportion withdrawn voluntarily, (e) the number and proportion completed and (f) the number and proportion in which it was found that there was some failure of clinical judgment.

Mr. Whitney: The available information is as follows:

Clinical Complaints, England
Referrals to RMOs 1 September 1981 to 31 December 1984

	Total	Cases completed: Rejected/ Withdrawn	Resolved locally*	Independent review	Cases pending at end of period
1981-82†	108	50	26	32	76
1983	146	60	27	59	38
1984	190	77	45	69	89

* Resolved at stage 2 of the procedure laid down in part III of the annex to HC(81)5.
† Procedure came into operation 1 September 1981.

Leeds General Infirmary

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if the Yorkshire regional health authority has sent him a copy of the report it has received from the Leeds western district health authority on the conditions at Leeds general infirmary; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the state of the fabric at Leeds general infirmary; and if he will make extra resources available to the Yorkshire regional health authority for the improvement of conditions at Leeds general infirmary.

Mr. Whitney: We do not hold any detailed information on conditions at Leeds general infirmary. It is for the regional health authority to allocate resources to its districts in the light of its judgment of competing priorities. The regional health authority is aware of the Leeds western district health authority's aspirations and has proposed a new joint initiative to review the perceived problems and possible means of addressing the issues. I am sure that the district health authority will wish to welcome such an initiative.

Nurses (Uniforms)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why his Department has decided not to make the nurses national uniform out of fire resistant material;

(2) what is the cost of a national nurses uniform in the current material;

(3) what would be the cost of a national nurses uniform made out of the fire resistant material considered by his Department.

Mr. Hayhoe: Following the circulation of the report on a "Trial of Nurses Dresses in Various Fabrics", the Health Service supply council consulted within the National Health Service and confirmed the Department's view that there was no reason for nurses to have a uniform dress with special flammability characteristics except in special circumstances where nurses are exposed to particular fire hazards.

The Department cannot disclose individual contract prices, but the annual value of national contracts for nurses dresses is currently £615,000. This figure does not take account of purchases negotiated separately by health authorities. A change of material to flame retardant polyester would increase costs by over 30 per cent.

Hospital Fires

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many fires have occurred in National Health Service hospitals in each year since 1979.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Health Services (London)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to decide whether or not to authorise the National Health Service information package on a London's health services.

Mr. Hayhoe No such information package exists or is under preparation.

NHS (Capital Schemes)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of building and when building works were completed on the Queens medical centre, Nottingham, phase 3, Queen Mary's, Roehampton, phase 1, Southampton general hospital, phase 5, Derriford district general hospital, phase 1, New Cross Wolverhampton wards and theatres, Stafford district general hospital, phase 4, and Royal Liverpool hospital, respectively, referred to in the answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 614.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is as follows:

	Cost £ million	Completion date
Queens medical centre, Nottingham, phase 2	18·5	August 1980
Queen Mary's, Roehampton, phase 1	3·1	April 1984
Southampton general hospital, phase 5, west ward block	6·4	December 1981

	Cost £ million	Completion date
Derriford district general hospital, phase 1	9·2	February 1980
New Cross Wolverhampton, wards and theatres	2·0	June 1983
Stafford district general hospital, phase 4	11·4	November 1982
Royal Liverpool hospital, phases 2 and 3	11·8	December 1979

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which English regions were not included in the returns on earnings referred to in his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 613.

Mr. Whitney: Yorkshire, South Western, North-West Thames and South-East Thames regions. The system of data collection from payroll information is being progressively improved by the inclusion of additional regions. Yorkshire has been included in respect of data after April 1985.

NHS (Patient Care)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any National Health Service ancillary staff are involved directly in patient care.

Mr. Whitney: The duties allocated to individual National Health Service ancillary staff are a matter for the health authority and local management to determine subject to the terms and conditions of service agreed by the Ancillary Staffs Whitley council. While the duties of some ancillary staff are associated with patient care, they should be undertaken only under the supervision, direction and control of the professional staff responsible for treatment.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any National Health Service administrative staff are involved directly in patient care.

Mr. Whitney: The category of administrative and clerical staff used in National Health Service staffing statistics includes staff working in departments which provide direct patient care. Examples are medical secretaries, receptionists in clinics and outpatient departments and ward clerks.

Inpatients

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence his Department has on the consequences to the health of patients of the reduction in inpatient average stays for hospital maternity services, acute surgical and geriatric services, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: The length of stay is a matter for the clinical judgment of the consultant responsible for the individual patient, taking all the circumstances into account. We have no evidence that the reduction in average length of stay has had a detrimental effect on patients. Indeed, patients may benefit from an early return home if the necessary services can be provided in the community.

NHS Staff (Disciplinary Proceedings)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many disciplinary proceedings against hospital medical and dental staff under HM (61) 112 have been commenced in each year since 1975 by each National Health Service region, respectively; and what was the outcome in each case;

(2) what has been the total cost for each National Health Service region, respectively, of disciplinary proceedings under HM (61) 112 in each year since 1975.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information requested is not collected centrally.

Private Contractors (Standards)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what procedures are followed by district health authorities, regional health authorities and his Department in the event of a contractor failing to achieve the standards laid down in a privatised cleaning, laundry or catering contract; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions in the last year Ministers have been involved in dealings with contractors or holding companies of contractors failing to achieve standards laid down in privatised contracts; and which were the companies concerned.

Mr. Hayhoe: There have been only one or two occasions and the discussions were confidential.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any company has lost a cleaning, catering or laundry contract with a health authority in the last year for failing to achieve standards laid down in the contract.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am aware of only one case.

NHS (Private Contractors)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received by letter, telephone and conversation, respectively, from hon. Members about the privatisation of particular contracts in the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: A record of all such representations is not kept.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last had contact with directors, staff or consultants of Hospital Hygiene Services, Crothall's, Office Cleaning Services, Pritchards, Brengreen or any of their subsidiaries, respectively, concerning the contracting out of hospital services.

Mr. Hayhoe: Officials of my Department have frequent contact with contractors concerning competitive tendering.

Patients (Special Beds)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will issue a circular to all health authorities asking them not to discharge any patients from hospital if special beds necessary for their care at home are not available at the time of their discharge.

Mr. Whitney: I have no plans to do so. A patient's readiness for discharge is a matter for the clinical judgment of the responsible consultant. I would, of course, expect him to satisfy himself that any necessary provision would be made to care for the patient on his return home.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 612, on what evidence he bases his conclusion that boroughs and districts will be able to support worthwhile voluntary sector activity following the abolition of the metropolitan county councils and the Greater London council; and what representations he has received.

Mr. Whitney: We believe that it will be possible for worthwhile voluntary activity to continue to be supported when account is taken of the provisions of the Local Government Act 1985, the arrangements for transitional funding announced during the passage of that legislation, and the assurance then given about the adjustment of rate support grant. These measures, together with the scope available to most local authorities for cost improvement in the exercise of their main functions, will provide adequate resources. General representations on this subject are a matter for the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total sum paid each year since 1979 by the metropolitan county councils and the Greater London council to voluntary organisations in health and social services.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not held centrally.

Child Health

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make a statement on the condition of child health in each year since 1979 as revealed by the child health surveillance programme;

(2) what was the total number of children seen by school nurses during the child health surveillance programme in 1978 and each year since.

Mr. Whitney: The available information about the number of pupils seen by nurses is shown in column I of the table. We do not collect centrally information about the overall condition of children's health, but the proportion of pupils referred on for medical examination or treatment is shown in column II of the table, and although there are fluctuations, is broadly constant.

School Health Service in England. Health surveillance by nurses

Year†	I Pupils seen by nurses (Thousands)*	II Pupils referred for medical examination or treatment as percentage of pupils seen by nurses
1979	4,027	4·9
1980	4,533	5·4
1981	4,579	5·5
1982	4,621	5·6
1983	4,492	5·2
1984	4,450	5·6

* Not including hygiene inspections.
† Information not collected before 1979.

Cost Improvement Programmes

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any district health authorities have made representations to him about the scope for savings in cost improvement programmes in 1985-86 compared with 1984-85.

Mr. Hayhoe: No such representations have been received.

Budget Spectacles

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the general information collected by his Department on the market price of budget spectacles.

Mr. Hayhoe: The collection of general information is keeping pace with the developing position in the competitive market for budget spectacles.

NHS (Resources)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the process by which his Department decides on the adequacy of resources for the National Health Service in absence of figures such as the number of patients awaiting cardiac bypass treatment or the number waiting for hip joint replacements.

Mr. Whitney: The Government reach their view about the level of resources required for the National Health Service taking into account on the one hand what is affordable within their overall public expenditure objectives and the ability of the service to improve the efficiency with which it uses resources, and on the other hand the broad pressures which the service faces from demographic change and medical advance and to make improvements in priority areas. Within the total resources available, the expectation is that health authorities will meet all pay and price increases and demographic change and that they will improve services, including areas such as heart surgery and hip joint replacements. What is actually achieved will depend on the actual levels of pay and price increases, and on decisions of health authorities locally on specific service developments.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when his Department's questionnaire about cervical cancer provision was sent to each health authority; by what date they were asked to reply; and whether he intends to publish the outcome.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress of discussions with health authorities on improving the effectiveness of laboratory facilities for processing cervical smears.

Mr. Hayhoe: In the course of the normal annual notification to health authorities of service priorities for planning purposes they will be asked to give priority within their available resources to improving their cervical screening programmes including ensuring that laboratories can meet demand. It will be for each health authority to decide what action is needed to achieve the latter objective in the light of local circumstances. No specific discussions on this issue are now proposed.

Share Fishermen

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why periods of less than seven consecutive days of unemployment are now being disregarded when calculating the duration of the off-season in the application of the seasonal workers' regulations to share fishermen.

Mr. Newton: The seasonal workers regulations reflect recommendations made in a National Insurance Advisory Committee report published in 1952. This suggested that, in the interests of common sense and administrative economy, short periods of less than one week when a person was not working, should be ignored as inconsiderable in reckoning his off-season. The report also recommended that share fishermen should be classed as seasonal workers where their employment is of a seasonal nature and that their title to unemployment benefit during their off-season should be decided upon the same lines as adopted for other seasonal workers. There have been no recent changes to these regulations.

Board and Lodging

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the Minister of State the hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) has anything to add to his statement to the House of 17 December regarding the number of board and lodging claimants who have been paid arrears of benefit in respect of the suspension of time limits following the High Court judgment in the Cotton case in July and regarding the costs of those payments.

Mr. Newton: I would like to correct one point I made in reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 17 December 1985, at column 170. While I correctly indicated that, following the original Cotton judgment by the High Court on 31 July 1985, arrears of benefit have been paid to some 8,500 claimants, the total amount of money involved was about £750,000, not £250,000 as I inadvertently said.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 19 December 1985

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

UNESCO

Mr. Budgen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of programmes which will benefit from the money saved by withdrawal from UNESCO.

Mr. Raison: We intend to allocate through the aid programme in the next financial year the amount saved from the UNESCO contribution of about £6·4 million to the following activities: the ODA technical co-operation training programmes; a joint scheme to provide scholarships in the United Kingdom for Chinese students; the ODA shared scholarship scheme; the Key English language teaching programme, particularly in Francophone Africa; a distance learning programme among academic institutions in the Commonwealth; a Commonwealth training scheme for black South Africans at post-graduate level; the Foreign and Commonwealth Office scholarships and awards scheme; participation in the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the international geological correlation programme, in international hydrology and environmental sciences through the Natural Environment Research Council and research in arid Commonwealth Africa; dissemination of results of research at universities and other bodies and an increased grant to the Commonwealth Africa; dissemination of results of research at universities and other bodies and an increased grant to the Commonwealth media development fund.

I shall be responsible for the above programmes with the exception of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office scholarships and awards scheme. The diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will be responsible for our bilateral relations with UNESCO as from 1 January 1986.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Letter Post Service

Mr. Lightbown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made by the Post Office on the implementation of the recommendations made in the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the letter post service of the Post Office in the head post office areas of Glasgow, Belfast and Cardiff and in the numbered London postal districts, published on 12 September 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: I stated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Terlezki) on 28 February, at column 241, that I had received the initial response of the Post Office to the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, published in September last year, and that my Department had begun discussions with the Post Office on the commission's recommendations. Subsequently a detailed implementation plan, with provision for progress checks and a timetable for full and rapid implementation of those recommendations accepted by the Post Office, was agreed.

I have now received from the Post Office a report on progress in the year to September 1985. I am placing copies of the report in the Library of the House.

I am glad to say that the report indicates that the Post Office is working to the implementation plan and that good progress is therefore being made in implementing the commission's recommendations. A number of these had major industrial relations implications and it is therefore significant that the Post Office has successfully negotiated a far-reaching business efficiency package with the Union of Communication Workers (UCW). A prime aim of the agreement (when fully implemented) is to reduce the dependence of the mails business on voluntary overtime, which will be achieved mainly by using part-time and casual labour to cover work peaks. In addition, there are further improvements in productivity schemes and incentives. The agreement also provides for the speedy introduction of new technology, and the UCW has lifted its embargo on the extension of mechanised sorting of inward mail. The Post Office's report points out that the local implementation of this agreement has led to a number of unofficial industrial disputes, but the board remains committed to securing the improvements agreed with the UCW, even at the cost of temporary setbacks in quality of service.

The Post Office report indicates that progress is continuing to be made on the commission's recommendations for improving budgetary control and forecasting methods, and developments in financial control are being supported by the increased recruitment of qualified accountants at head post offices. The team of mails network inspectors is being trained for full introduction by March 1986, and the innovation of dedicated "matrix" transport systems has begun to make an impact on mails performance, with the national first-class delivery performance in August coming to within 0·5 per cent of its target of 90 per cent. of first-class letters delivered the working day following collection.

Although the Post Office has made good progress towards implementing almost all of the commission's recommendations, there is still more to be done, and my Department will be continuing to monitor the Post Office's adherence to the implementation plan.

I should like to take this opportunity to convey the Government's thanks to the commission for its wide-ranging and stimulating investigation.

Grain Exports

45. Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current level and scope of export credits for sales of British grain.

Mr. Channon: ECGD support for sales of British grain is available. Normally such support would be restricted to sales on credit terms of up to 180 days but consideration can be given to support of extended credit to public buyers in certain markets to match foreign competition.

Associated British Foods

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether he will prosecute Associated British Foods under section 243 of the Companies Act for failing to deliver full accounts for the year 1984-85;

(2) whether he will require Associated British Foods under section 447 of the Companies Act 1985 to produce to him all documents relating to its contributions to the Irish Republican Army in 1984;

(3) whether he will prosecute Associated British Foods under section 393 of the Companies Act in relation to information supplied to the company's auditors covering the contributions to Irish Republican Army funds in 1984;

(4) whether he will appoint inspectors under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate the affairs of Associated British Foods in respect of illegal contributions to the Irish Republican Army.

Mr. Howard: I have no evidence that full accounts have not been delivered or that false information has been provided to the auditors. I know of no reason to appoint inspectors or to require the production of documents but shall consider any information that the hon. Member may have about the company.

Distribution and Media Sales (UK) Ltd.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will appoint an inspector under section 432(2) of Companies Act 1985 to inquire into the affairs of Distribution and Media Sales (UK) Ltd. on the grounds that the affairs of the company may have been conducted with intent to defraud its creditors.

Mr. Howard: I know of no reason for doing so but shall consider any information which the hon. Member may have about the company.

Small Businesses

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses he has received to his Department's consultation document on the accounting and audit requirements for small companies; what proportion favoured change and what proportion favoured the retention of the status quo; and when he expects to make a statement of Government policy on this matter.

Mr. Howard: We have received a total of 204 resonses. Overall, views on the audit requirement are more or less evenly divided, though most of those arguing for its abolition would either limit it to "shareholder managed" companies or introduce in its place new rules relating to the preparation or certification of accounts. On accounting requirements, there is a clear majority for simplification, though a significant minority believe present requirements should be maintained and, in some cases, strengthened. Our analysis of the responses is now virtually complete and I would expect to announce the outcome in the course of the next few weeks.

Westland plc

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the implications of the proposed Westland deal with United Technologies for Her Majesty's Government's policy on the retention by avionics companies supplying technologically advanced products to Her Majesty's Government of a full research and development capability.

Mr. Pattie: I believe the continuation of helicopter design, development and production at Westland will be good for the business of United Kingdom avionics companies and will thus help them to maintain a full research and development capability.

Office of Fair Trading

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to increase the cash limit for the Office of Fair Trading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Class IV, Vote II (Office of Fair Trading) will be increased by £800,000 from £7,479,000 to £8,279,000 to meet the increased costs of computerising the consumer credit licensing operation. The additional amount will be charged to the reserve, and so will not add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Council of Ministers (Research)

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress was made at the meeting of the Research Council of European Community Ministers on 10 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Community's Council of Ministers (Research) met on 10 December 1985 in Brussels: I represented Her Majesty's Government.

The Council reached agreement in principle on the financial resources for and technical content of two research programmes proposed by the Commission in the fields of the environment and materials. The formal adoption of these programmes by Council is subject to the opinion of the European Parliament.

The environment programme will cover research into environmental protection, climatology, including a small element on earthquakes, and major techonological hazards and has been allocated a total of 75 million ecu (£45,525,000 sterling) over a five-year period 1986 to 1990.

The materials programme will cover research into primary and secondary raw materials, advanced materials, which will form nearly one half of the programme, and wood and has been allocated a total of 70 million ecu (£42,490,000 sterling) over a four-year period 1986 to 1989.

The Council also held a discussion on the 1984-87 budget of the Community's joint research centre and noted the Commission's intention to find savings of 20 million ecu (£12,140,000 sterling) during 1986 and 1987.

The Council also agreed the 1986 work programme for the European strategic programme of research on information technology (ESPRIT), subject to a United Kingdom parliamentary reserve (which has been subsequently lifted); invited the Commission to consider integrating into the existing science and technology for development programme a proposal for the development of endogenous scientific and technical research capacity in developing countries; and discussed an Italian proposal on an initiative for research in informatics applied to society (IRIS).

Trade Descriptions (Origin Marking)

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government have come to a decision as to the future of the Trade Descriptions (Origin Marking) (Miscellaneous Goods) Order 1981 following the judgment of the European Court of Justice delivered on 25 April in the current year.

Mr. Howard: After consulting organisations representing those interests most likely to be affected, and having taken into account all the views expressed, it has been decided that the only sensible course is to revoke the 1981 order in its entirety. I propose to make an order to that effect early in the new year.

Gas Appliances (Exhibition)

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will arrange for an exibition relating to gas appliances and safety to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall from 3 to 7 February 1986.

Mr. Howard: Arrangements have been made for such an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall to take place from 3 to 7 February 1986.

Securities and Investments

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he has received from the Securities and Investment Board and the Marketing of Investments Board Organising Committee concerning their future operations.

Mr. Brittan: The chairmen of these two bodies have written to me proposing that the effectiveness of the regulatory system put forward in the Financial Services Bill will best be served if responsibility were to be placed in the hands of a single authority. I accept their view, which I know to reflect opinion both of practitioners and consumers and to command much sympathy in the House. I look forward to receiving detailed proposals at the appropriate time in 1986. When the new body is formed, it is intended that its chairman should be Sir Kenneth Berrill and its deputy chairmen should be Mr. Mark Weinberg and Sir Martin Jacomb.

DEFENCE

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the new training procedures for the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 102]: I regret that the original answer given was incomplete. The full answer should read:

"Training in all branches of the armed forces is kept under review in an effort to identify possible improvements and a number of such improvements in the training of the UDR have either recently been set in hand or are about to be introduced, as follows:

a. The basic training of part-time members of the regiment is to be increased from nine to 14 days. The extra five days will be completed within the recruits' first three months of service.

b. Until now UDR officers, full or part-time, have attended a two week course at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, but from next year selected permanent cadre officers will be eligible to attend the six-month standard military course taken by potential officers in the Regular Army.

c. UDR officers and NCOs already attend some courses in Great Britain in company with affiliated regular battalions and it is planned to extend this with a scheme of voluntary attachments of up to six weeks to infantry battalions in Great Britain.

d. A number of additional training posts are also being created within the UDR itself. There will be a new post at HQ UDR with specific responsibility for training throughout the regiment which will be filled by a lt.-col. reporting direct to Commander UDR. A senior NCO from the Regular Army will be attached to each UDR battalion to assist with training and also to the regiment's training centre at Ballykinler. These NCOs will assist both with the additional recruit training mentioned above and with training generally.

Trident Missile

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest expected deployment date of the Trident missile system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The United Kingdom Trident force is planned to enter service in the mid-1990s.

Widows (Pensions)

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many widows of service men have been granted pensions or special payments in the following circumstances: (a) where a widow has lost her service pension on remarriage and has then been widowed a second time and (b) where a woman marries her serviceman husband after his retirement and is then widowed; and what are the criteria upon which the decision is made and the amount assessed.

Mr. Lee: The number of widows pensions awarded in categories (a) and (b) could be provided only at quite disproportionate cost.

The conditions governing awards of pension and determination of amount in these categories are:

Category (a). A service pension may be restored to a widow on second widowhood if she is worse off after her second husband's death; that is if her income from all sources excluding DHSS benefits is lower than the income, including the service widow's pension, she was receiving after her first husband's death. The restored pension is enhanced by all the appropriate pension increases awarded since her first husband's death.

Category (b). The armed forces pension scheme provides a pension for a widow who married her husband after his retirement from the armed forces if service was given on or after 6 April 1978. The pension is calculated on the length of service given only since that date.

Exceptionally, an ex-gratia award of one half of the normal rate of widow's pension may be made in the case of a widow who did not marry her husband until after his retirement from the service but lived with him before his retirement provided there is evidence to show that the relationship was indistinguishable from a legal marriage, the couple were prevented from becoming legally married by reasons outside their control and they were legally married as soon as they were free to do so.

Mr. Seamus Mallon

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Defence why Mr. Seamus Mallon was questioned last week by the Ulster Defence Regiment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: On 12 December Mr. Seamus Mallon was by a patrol of the Ulster Defence Regiment carrying out vehicle check point duties. The patrol carried out routine checks as empowered by the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. Nothing untoward was found and Mr. Mallon was allowed to continue his journey.

VC10 Tankers

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the Super VC10s and VC10s were purchased for the Royal Air Force for conversion to tanker aircraft;

(2) what is the total cost of the conversion programme for the Royal Air Force VC10s and Super VC10s;

(3) what is the length of the conversion programme for the Royal Air Force VC10 tankers;

(4) when the programme for conversion of the VC10s and Super VC10s purchased by the Royal Air Force began.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 98]: Standard and Super VC10s were purchased for the Royal Air Force in 1978 for conversion to tanker aircraft, and conversion began the same year. The total cost of the programme has been some £160 million at outturn prices. The last aircraft is due to be delivered to the service next year.

Procurement Contracts and Projects

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which current procurement contracts and projects have not been completed within the due period;

(2) with which contractors his Department is negotiating in respect of overdue procurement contracts and projects;

(3) if he will list the current procurement projects and contracts whose terms and conditions he is reviewing.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 9 December 1985, c. 546]: At any one time the Ministry of Defence has approximately 100,000 headquarters contracts in operation. To review them all in order to answer the issues raised would require disproportionate time and administrative effort. If the hon. Member has any particular instance in mind, I shall be happy to write to him.

ENERGY

Coalminers (Redundancy)

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will make a statement on redundancy terms for mineworkers following the expiry of the present redundant mineworkers' payment scheme on 29 March 1986.

Mr. Peter Walker: The generous benefits available under the redundant mineworkers payments scheme have enabled the National Coal Board to maintain its policy of not making redundant men who wish to continue to work in the coal industry, while carrying through the extensive restructuring that is needed to secure the industry's future viability. The coalminers' dispute, in addition to the other damage which it inflicted on the industry, delayed that necessary restructuring. Against that backgroud, I have concluded that it would be right for the present to maintain broadly the present level of scheme benefits. I have also concluded that it would be right to make available additional weekly benefits to men aged 50 or over on redundancy whose total weekly benefits would otherwise be seriously reduced by their failure, through deficient national insurance contribution records in 1984-85, to qualify for unemployment benefit or sickness benefit at the standard rate. Men who receive this additional weekly benefit will, however, have their lump sum benefits under the scheme reduced in recognition of their having failed to pay full national insurance contribution.

In summary, my proposals are as follows.

Weekly basic benefit and pension supplement paid to men aged 50 or over on redundancy will continue as under the present scheme; there will be a new basic benefit table, calculated as in previous years. It will continue to be a condition for receipt of these benefits that the beneficiary is unemployed or sick; but it will no longer be a requirement that he qualifies for unemployment benefit or sickness benefit.

Redundant mineworkers who qualify for less than the standard rate of unemployment benefit or sickness benefit as a result of a deficient national insurance contribution record for 1984-85 will, subject to certain conditions, be eligible for a sum equal to the difference between benefit at the standard rate and the benefit, if any, to which they are actually entitled. The equivalent of unemployment benefit will continue to be paid under existing rules to men aged 50 or over on redundancy after they have exhausted their entitlement to unemployment benefit.

Lump sums payable to men aged 50 or over will be calculated as under the present scheme, but they will be reduced by £600 for those who qualify under the new provisions outlined above for additional weekly scheme benefits at the standard rate of unemployment benefit or sickness benefit, and by £550 for those who qualify for additional weekly scheme benefits at a lower rate.

Lump sums payable to men aged under 50 on redundancy will continue to be calculated as under the present scheme.

Intitlement to contributory benefits under social security legislation or to statutory redundancy payments under employment legislation will not be affected by these proposals.

I shall in due course lay before the House for approval a draft order incorporating these proposals. They do not affect the operation of the present scheme, which expires on 29 March 1986.

Fuels (Capital Investment)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the level of capital investment in the United Kingdom in the production and supply of (a) oil, (b) gas, (c) coal, (d) nuclear fuels for energy purposes.

Mr. Peter Walker: In 1984 gross domestic fixed capital formation (capital expenditure on fixed assets) in United Kingdom energy industries was:

	£ million
Extraction of mineral oil and natural gas*	3,223
Mineral Oil processing	201
Gas supply	651
Coal and coke	394
Electricity	1,700
Nuclear fuel Production† (all aspects)	380

* Separate figures are not available due to the joint production of oil and gas from several fields.
† 1984-85.
Source: Mainly Table 10.8 United Kingdom National Accounts 1985 Edition.

North Sea Rigs

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to the number of personnel working on rigs in the North sea and as to the numbers of British nationals, EEC nationals and others involved.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The numbers requested are as follows:

Personnel at 30 September 1984

Nationality	On fixed Platforms	On Floating Platforms and Supply Boats
British	14,683	11,921
Other EC	207	986
Non-EC	443	3,039
Total	15,333	15,946

The above figures are derived from the Inland Revenue's annual "Survey of Offshore Personnel" taken on 30 September 1984 and are the most recent available.

Nuclear Installations (Incidents)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will name, list and describe the various categories and classifications used by his Department in recording accidents, incidents and untoward occurrences of varying severity, including events without any radiological consequences, at (a) licensed nuclear sites and (b) Atomic Energy Authority sites; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will name, list and describe what information is held by his Department in regard to an event in the nature of an accident, incident or untoward occurrence of any type at (a) a licensed nuclear site and (b) an Atomic Energy Authority site, identifying by name the different categories or classifications of events for which certain information is held; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will name, list and describe what information is held by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in regard to an event in the nature of an accident, incident or untoward occurrence of any type at (a) a licensed nuclear site and (b) an Atomic Energy Authority site, identifying by name and different categories or classifications of events for which certain information is held; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Mr. Moore), to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 26 July 1982, at column 374. The reporting procedures set out therein apply to both licensed nuclear sites and those operated by the Atomic Energy Authority.

Iranian Oil (Imports)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state the amount in millions of barrels of oil per day imported from Iran for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The published annual volumes of Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom give imports from Iran in tonnes. These figures converted to millions of barrels per day, are as follows:

Oil imports from Iran

	Million barrels per day
1975	0·34
1976	0·39
1977	0·25
1978	0·18
1979	0·06
1980	0·02
1981	0·02
1982	0·03
1983	0·01
1984	0·04

North Sea Oil Development

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what technology agreements have been concluded with overseas companies engaged in oil development in the Scottish sector of the North sea; and what is their worth.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I have not made any technology agreements with overseas companies engaged in oil development on the United Kingdom continental shelf, nor do I have any plans to do so. I am encouraging the anchoring in the United Kingdom of new technology developed for the UKCS, but the means which may be used are for the commercial parties involved.

NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will arrange for an exhibition relating to the activities of NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Peter Walker: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 20 January 1986 to Friday 24 January 1986.

Health and Safety

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) injured in the nuclear industry in each year since 1960.

Mr. Goodlad: The information requested is not readily available, but I hope to provide it shortly.

Mr Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) injured in coal mining in each year since 1960.

Mr. David Hunt: The figures requested for the National Coal Board are as follows:

Year	Fatal	Serious reportable or major injuries
1960	316	1,553
1961	234	1,464
1962	255	1,541
1963-64	236	1,325
1964-65	181	1,276
1965-66	217	1,156
1966-67	145	1,000
1967-68	130	975
1968-69	115	788
1969-70	82	672
1970-71	92	599
1971-72	58	578
1972-73	78	569
1973-74	60	461

Year	Fatal	Serious reportable or major injuries
1974-75	56	576
1975-76	59	538
1976-77	28	515
1977-78	48	520
1978-79	72	480
1979-80	31	456
1980-81	39	*601
1981-82	34	826
1982-83	44	807
1983-84	22	746
1984-85	12	213

Note: * The definition of major injuries became wider during this year.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Shops Bill

Mr. Best asked the Attorney-General what means exist for enforcing the current legislation on Sunday trading hours; if any changes are proposed to the system in the light of the proposals contained in the Shops Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Shops Act 1950 provides that, save for certain authorised transactions, every shop in England and Wales is to be closed for the serving of customers on a Sunday. Breach of those provisions is a criminal offence, and the Act makes it the duty of every local authority to enforce within their districts the provisions of the Act, and for that purpose to institute and carry out such proceedings in respect of contraventions of the provisions as may be necessary to secure observance of them: see section 71.

That duty and the way in which its discharge should be approached were considered by the House of Lords in the case Stoke-on-Trent City Council v. B & Q (Retail) Limited [1984] AC 754. In that case Lord Roskill adopted a passage from the judgment of Mr. Justice Webster in an earlier case as to the manner in which a local authority was to approach its duty, and Lords Diplock, Fraser of Tullybelton and Templeman all agreed. That passage is as follows:

"The duty of that authority under Section 71(1) is first of all to consider—and these matters may have to be done at the same time, but not necessarily—whether that conduct prima facie constitutes a contravention of the provisions of the Act. If so, then they have to consider whether it is necessary to institute and carry on proceedings in respect of that prima facie contravention in order to secure the observance of provisions of the Act. If they decide that it is necessary to do so, then they have a duty to institute and carry on these proceedings."

Lord Roskill further stated that when considering whether it was necessary to institute and carry on proceedings he saw no reason why the local authority was not entitled to have regard, in relation to the particular case or cases in question, to the financial consequences to it of any suggested action.

I consider it accordingly clear that Parliament has placed upon each local authority in England and Wales a duty to consider fully any alleged contravention of the law relating to Sunday trading which is brought to its attention.

Local authorities have further powers under section 222 of the Local Government Act 1972.

In Stoke-on-Trent v. B & Q (Retail) Limited [1984] AC 754 the House of Lords held that the council was entitled to use those powers to institute proceedings for injunctive relief where it was satisfied and that such relief was the only way to stop deliberate and flagrant flouting of the provisions relating to Sunday trading in its area.

This statutory power may be exercised only where the authority considers it expedient for the promotion of protection of the interests of the inhabitants of its area: see section 222(1). I understand from my rt. hon. Friend the Home Secretary that a substantial number of local authorities have used this power, and have obtained injunctions against such offenders.

Section 222 does not deprive the Attorney-General of his general power to enforce obedience to public law by proceedings ex officio or by relator action. Nevertheless, the court in the Stoke-on-Trent council case was advised on behalf of the Attorney-General that in his view section 222

"was clearly designed to confer a substantial measure of autonomy on local authorities in respect of law enforcement within their areas. The Attorney-General welcomes that autonomy in regard to the control of those activities generally associated with local authority jurisdiction."

My right hon. and learned Friend adheres to that view, considering that a local authority will generally be in a better position than the Attorney-General to judge whether it is expedient for the promotion or protection of the interests of the inhabitants of its area that proceedings for an injunction should issue to restrain the breach of the Sunday trading provisions of the Shops Act 1950.

The proposals in the Shops Bill [Lords] will, if enacted, remove the current restrictions on Sunday trading hours. consequently, the need for the enforcement of those restrictions will be removed.

Ms. Adebola Makenjuola

Mr. Cohen asked the Attorney-General if, pursuant to the answer of 14 November, Official Report, column 266, regarding the investigations of an alleged serious sexual assault on Ms. Adebola Makenjuola, the Director of Public Prosecutions has now completed his consideration of the police report; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The matter is still under consideration.

Associated British Foods

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General whether he will prosecute Associated British Foods under section 10(2) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 1984 for making a £2 million payment to the Irish Republican Army.

The Attorney-General: I at present have no evidence which would justify the action suggested by the hon. Member, but if he would let me have the information on which his question is based I should be happy to examine it and, if appropriate, ask the Director of Public Prosecutions to invite the police to investigate it and to report the result to him.

Fraud (Member's Correspondence)

Mr. Dobson asked the Attorney-General when he expects to reply to the question about fraud tabled by the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras and to which the Solicitor-General gave a holding reply of 9 December, Official Report, column 426.

The Solicitor-General: I wrote to the hon. Member on 18 December 1985.

Legal Aid

Mr. Sheerman asked the Attorney-General what guidance is issued by his Department or the Law Society on the application of regulation 33 of the legal aid regulations; and how many cases are determined by area committees each year in which regulation 33 is applied, broken down according to area and to different types of case.

The Solicitor-General: Regulation 33 of the Legal Aid (General) Regulations 1980 concerns the grant of legal aid for proceedings in which others beside the applicant himself have the same interest. Guidance on the interpretation of the legal aid regulations is issued by the council of the Law Society and is published in the "Legal Aid Handbook". A copy of the most recent (1984) edition is in the Library. Guidance on regulation 33 appears on pages 214 and 216. No statistics are kept of the numbers of legal aid applications determined under individual regulations, and the information requested, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Law Centres

Mr. Sheerman asked the Attorney-General what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the report of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal aid calling for financial support to those law centres whose funding is threatened.

The Solicitor-General: The Government's general position on law centres has been made clear; there are no plans to withdraw or reduce the funding currently provided by the Lord Chancellor's Department to seven law centres, nor to extend that commitment to other centres.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the future funding of law centres.

The Solicitor-General: The Government have acknowledged that law centres may have a part to play in the provision of legal services, as a supplement to the legal aid and advice schemes, where this suits local circumstances. Such centres are seen as essentially matters for local decision and initiative. Central Government support continues to be provided through the urban programme, in accordance with its general principles and procedures, and the Lord Chancellor's Department continues to provide funding to seven law centres.

Fraud Investigation

Mr. Budgen asked the Attorney-General whether he is yet in a position to make any announcement about the resources available to the Director of Public Prosecutions for fraud investigation work.

The Solicitor-General: I told the House on 2 December at column 12, that the resources available to the fraud investigation group of the Director of Public Prosecution's department were being reviewed. My right hon. and learned Friend has arranged to recruit nine professional officers to the fraud divisions to add to the 15 now employed there. There will also be corresponding increases in non-professional support staff. My right hon. and learned Friend will not hesitate to provide further staff for the Director if that is necessary.

ENVIRONMENT

Smith Houses

Sir Reginald Eyre asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take to help owners of Smith houses in the Birmingham area whose houses also suffer from use of shale fill in their foundation.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has now reached a decision on the designation of Smith houses under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Government have decided that Smith houses should be designated under the Housing Defects Act. As my hon. Friends are aware, the Building Research Establishment has recently carried out a study of Smith houses in Sandwell. The BRE found vertical splitting and cracking, caused by deterioration of the steel handling reinforcement bars. BRE's advice is that this defect can be expected to manifest itself in all Smith houses at some stage. We are therefore satisfied that it is a defect of design or construction with effects on value sufficiently serious to warrant designation of all Smith houses. The BRE's report is being published today and I am placing copies in the Library. Copies are being sent to those authorities which have reported that they own Smith houses.

The Government are also aware of the particular problems faced by owners in the Birmingham area, where colliery shale fill has been used in the foundations of some Smith houses. My Department will be seeking urgent discussions with Birmingham city council, to explore whether any further measures are needed to assist such owners, including whether the council might wish to make a local designation under the Act in respect of those properties.

Under the Act a local designation in respect of a building has to precede any national designation applying to that building.

In order to provide time for the discussions with Birmingham city council (and any other council that believes there may be Smith owners in that position) the formal national designation will not be made straight away. But I can assure Smith home owners that their position will be protected: the designation, when made, will specify today as the "cut-off-date" for assistance under the Act. This means that owners who bought before today's announcement will be within the scope of the Act. They will of course need to satisfy the other requirements of the Act, notably that the house concerned must have been sold, at some stage, by a public sector authority.

I very much recognise the anxieties and concerns Smith home owners have experienced over the last year. I hope that this announcement will help to put their minds at rest, and that they can now look forward to the assistance to which they will be entitled under the Act. I recognise that most owners will wish to have their house repaired. To that end, we will be discussing with the National House Building Council an extension of its approval and warranty scheme for repair methods (operated by its subsidiary, PRC Homes Ltd.) to Smith houses. I hope that repair methods for Smith houses will therefore emerge quickly and that local authorities will be able to offer reinstatement grant wherever repair is the appropriate solution.

The Secretary of State for Wales is taking similar action, in relation to Smith houses in Wales.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide details of the allocation to local authorities for housing investment programme for 1985-86.

Mr. John Patten: The allocations for 1985-86 were announced on 20 December 1984. My right hon. Friend announced on 20 November 1985 that gross provision for capital expenditure by local authorities on housing in 1986-87 is £2,532 million, and the total available for allocations to local authorities is £1,465 million. In setting the allocation total, account was taken of the need to bring actual expenditure into line with provision, of spending power from capital receipts and of the increasing use local authorities are making of other opportunities for capital expenditure. The gross provision figure includes £26 million, and the allocation total includes £23½ million, for the homes insulation scheme. This is expected fully to meet total demand, though my right hon. Friend will bear in mind Energy Efficiency Year in considering any applications from individual authorities for additional allocations.

From the allocation total, a sum of £50 million has been reserved for the first time for projects identified by local authorities in conjunction with the urban housing renewal unit of my Department. The unit has been set up to help local authorities to develop imaginative options for tackling the problems of their rundown, difficult-to-let estates. A reserve of £2½ million is also being established from which further allocations for the homes insulation scheme can be made in accordance with demand. The total available for initial allocations is therefore £1,412·5 million, of which, as in the current year, £21 million is for the homes insulation scheme. Each local authority is today being informed of its own allocation for 1986-87. Copies of the letter to authorities and the schedule of initial allocations have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

The methodology for distributing the allocations has been modified this year in order to place greater emphasis on the needs for expenditure in renovating the local authority housing stock, the incidence of homelessness, the housing needs of the inner cities, and the obligations of local authorities under the Housing Defects Act 1984. and £30 million will be chanelled direct to those regions, such as the south-west and the south-east, in which certain authorities are expected to have particularly large obligations under the Housing Defects Act. A detailed description of the methodology has been placed in the Library.

Nitrate Levels

46. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the most recent figures for the nitrate levels found in public drinking water supplies in East Anglia, compared with the acceptable standard.

Mr. John Patten: Nitrate levels in public water supplies are within acceptable limits. In East Anglia (that is Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire) water containing less than 50 mg nitrate per litre, which is the standard in the EC drinking water directive, was supplied to 1½ million people between July and September this year. Water supply containing between 50 and 67 mg nitrate per litre was supplied to 200,000 people. Water from one small source serving 430 people contained greater concentrations of nitrate and the source has now been abandoned.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the London borough of Newham concerning the future ownership of land at the northern end of the Thames barrier, currently in the ownership of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: The London borough of Newham has requested that surplus GLC-owned land at the northern end of the Thames barrier should be transferred to the borough council at abolition. That request is being considered against the background that the general principles of the proposed property transfer order would result in the land passing initially to the London Residuary body.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list separately for (a) the six metropolitan county councils and (b) the Greater London council, the number of civil servants working in his Department on duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985, listing in each case the numbers and ranks of officers and the estimated cost per year of each group.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 15]: The information the hon. Member requested is as follows.

It has not been possible in all cases to divide staff effort on implementation of the Act between effort in relation to the GLC and MCCs. Staff whose duties fall into this category are listed under "general implementation".

The cost, including accommodation, of employing these staff for a full year would be approximately £2·95 million (1985 prices), including £340,000 for the staff whose work relates wholly to the GLC and £320,000 for the staff whose work relates wholly to the MCCs.

Grade	Estimated Full Time Equivalents
	GLC	MCC's	General Implementation
Grade 2	—	—	0·2
Grade 3	0·1	0·8	1·4
Grade 5	1·0	0·7	7·8
Grade 6		—0·4	0·3
Senior Legal assistant	—	—	4·0
Principal	2·9	4·1	11·8
Principal information officer			0·1
Principal Planning officer	—	—	0·4
Principal research officer	—	0·5	—
Principal professional and technical officer	—	0·1	—
Senior executive officer	0·9	0·9	6·6
Senior research offecer	—	0·6	—
Higher executive officer/HEO(D)	3·0	3·0	11·2
Executive officer/administration trainee	2·6	1·8	8·3
Clerical officer	1·1	1·2	4·0
Clerical assistant	0·2	1·3	0·9
Senior personal secretary	0·1	0·2	0·1
Personal secretary	1·0	0·1	5·1
Typist	—	—	2·6
Total	12·9	15·7	64·8

Rent Arrears

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the level of rent arrears in respect of council house accommodation for each year since 1979 for (a) England, (b) York, (c) Leeds, (d) Darlington, (e) Middlesbrough, (f) Durham, (g) Sheffield and (h) Hull.

Sir George Young: Provisional figure for gross rent arrears on 31 March in each of the years since 1979 were as follows:

£ million

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
England (all authorities)	54·39	97·6	97·1	126·61	161·81	183·0	203·7
York District Council	0·01	0·006	0·04	0·06	0·07	0·14	0·09
Leeds Metropolitan District Council	0·97	0·66	1·82	1·18	2·56	3·24	3·10
Darlington District Council	0·06	0·09	0·16	0·16	0·17	0·12	0·10
Middlesbrough District Council	0·12	0·25	0·37	0·73	0·90	0·84	0·91
Durham District Council	N/A	0·006	0·007	0·02	0·03	0·03	0·04
Sheffield Metropolitan District Council	0·75	0·65	0·86	1·53	1·94	3·63	9·65
Kingston-upon-Hull District Council	0·30	0·32	0·62	0·63	0·79	0·72	0·82

Pollution

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be in a position to publish the proposed Green Paper on the control of atmospheric pollution.

Mrs. Rumbold: I expect to publish a consultation paper on this subject in the new year.

Thamesmead Community Trust

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends that the Thamesmead community trust should take over responsibility for the assets of Thamesmead from the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: On 2 April 1986, or as soon as practicable thereafter.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the first elections for the Thamesmead community trust to take place; who will be responsible for supervising the election; what qualifications will be required of prospective candidates; and who will determine the electoral areas.

Sir George Young: I expect the elections to be held in late February 1986, supervised by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. An offer from the London borough of Bexley to conduct the ballot is being considered. Candidate qualifications and electoral areas are being discussed with a steering group drawn from existing local community organisations.

Willowbrook Estate, Peckham

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has refused permission for the improvements on the Willowbrook estate in Peckham; if he will reconsider the matter; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: This scheme is being allowed to proceed, subject to the normal reappraisal at tender stage.

Council House Sales

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of council homes sold since the introduction of the right-to-buy legislation for each local authority district; what percentage this is of the local authority housing stock; if he will also provide the relevant figures for (a) houses on which options to buy have been granted to tenants and not yet taken up and (b) houses on which options have been taken up but where the sale has not yet been completed; and if he will express all these figures as a percentage of the national total.

Sir George Young: I am placing in the Library the latest version of the regular table showing sales completed by local authorities in England up to September 1985.

The term "options to buy" is not used in the right-to-buy legislation. The table shows the available figures of numbers of claims made by tenants and, of these, the numbers where the right to buy has been admitted by the authority.

Between October 1980 and September 1985 an estimated total of 885,300 claims under the right to buy had been made to local authorities in England and 496,450 sales had been completed. No authority has received more than 3 per cent. of the national total, and most of the 367 local housing authorities accounted for less than 1 per cent. of the total.

Urban Programme

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why the nine authorities listed in his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 18, which do not appear in the comparison of key indicators of deprivation, have been invited to bid for traditional urban programme new approvals for 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The table given in my reply of 16 December compared authorities in terms of the intensity of need on key indicators. In deciding which authorities should be invited to bid for new approvals under the traditional urban programme in 1986-87 account was also taken of the scale of need, and of changes in unemployment since the census.

Superstore Development, Cippenham

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his decision on the planning application in respect of the proposed superstore development at Cippenham in Slough.

Mr. Tracey: Consideration of the inspector's report of the inquiry into this appeal is well advanced and I expect the decision to be issued early in the new year.

Water and Sewerage Charges

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about the implications of the Government's financial targets for the prospective water supply and sewerage charges by North West water from 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have received representations from the chairman of the authority and comments by the Confederation of British Industry have been sent to me. The rise in charges will be about 10 per cent., which is less than the confederation had feared.

Richmond Terrace

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make the offices in Richmond terrace available to hon. Members when the rehabilitation work is completed.

Sir George Young: No. It is intended to use the accommodation in the Richmond terrace redevelopment as Government offices. More offices for Members will become available, though, when phase I of the new parliamentary accommodation in Parliament street is completed in 1990.

Law Centres

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to support those law centres whose funding may be affected by the abolition of the Greater London council and metropolitan counties.

Sir George Young: After abolition, the responsibility for making local authority grants to voluntary organisations, including law centres, will pass entirely to borough and district councils. The Government have made provision to enable local authorities collectively to fund countywide projects, and are making grant-aid available for a transitional period to help individual boroughs and districts take on grants for local groups.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has decided the breakdown of the Housing Corporation's approved development programme for 1986-87.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend announced on 20 November that the gross provision for the Housing Corporation in 1986-87 was £685 million. This figure comprises an allocation of £585 million, plus an estimated £100 million of capital receipts. Of the gross provision of £685 million, £521 million will be needed to meet existing commitments on fair rent and hostel projects, and £82 million to meet commitments on low cost home ownership projects.

The balance of the provision will be used largely to finance new projects for rent, and low cost home ownership, including provision of £26 million for the scheme for tenants of charitable housing associations. At my right hon. Friend's request, resources for new fair rent and shared housing projects are being concentrated particularly on meeting special housing needs in inner city areas. The detailed breakdown of the programme is as follows:

Housing corporation—Approved development programme 1986-87

		£ million*	£ million*
Net allocation (cash limit)			585
Receipts			100
Gross allocation			685
Memorandum of Authorisation:
Programme heads
Existing fair rent and hostel projects
1. Contracted expenditure (Block 1)			420
2. New tenders approved (Block 2)			101
3. New fair rent and shared housing projects (Block 3)			46
Other tenures
4. (a) Improvement for sale (b) Leasehold schemes for the elderly (c) Shared ownership	Committed expenditure	82	104
(d) Home-ownership for tenants of charitable housing associations	New projects	22
5. Major repairs			10
6. Mini HAG (for short-life properties)			2
			683
7. Right to buy mortgages			2
			685

* All figures expressed in estimated 1986-87 outurn prices.

Notes:

1. Included in blocks 2 and 3 (fair rent) and other tenures is an addional amount of £8·6 million provided by the Secretary of State to cover the cost of certain projects to be undertaken on Merseyside.

2. In addition to provision for low cost home ownership within the ADP a proportion of expenditure on committed and new projects is to be met by the use of index-linked private finance.

3. New fair rent and shared housing projects. The allocation of funds under this head will initiate projects to a total cost of some £430 million to be completed over the next three to four years.

Efficiency Scrutinies

Mr. Knowles asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions he has come to on recent efficiency scrutinies carried out in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I have today placed copies of the scrutinies of the identification and development of internal talent, and of the management of office accommodation, incorporating our response, in the Libraries of both Houses. These two scrutinies were carried out jointly with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport's Department. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport.

London Marathon

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions his Department has had with the organising committee of the London marathon regarding assistance from his Department for the 1986 marathon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: None, except that I have been in correspondence with the London marathon organisation about the effects of the GLC's abolition on their use of County Hall buildings. I understand that, as a result, the organisers have had discussions with the London Residuary Body, to which County Hall will pass on 1 April 1986.

Homes Insulation Programme

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount paid to each local authority in each of the last five years under the homes insulation programme; and what is the amount allocated for 1985-86.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Empty Dwellings

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the percentage of empty dwellings in (a) the public sector, (b) the voluntary sector, (c) the private sector and (d) those owned and controlled by Her Majesty's Government, giving the numbers represented by the percentage.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 60]: The available estimates for April 1985, derived from English local authorities' housing investment programme returns, are as follows:

	Vacant dwellings
	Number	Percentage of stock
Local authorities	109,500	2·4
Housing associations	15,400	3·5
Other public sector	19,200	6·6
Total public sector	144,100	2·7
Private sector	545,000	4·1
All sectors	689,000	3·7

In addition, local authorities owned 7,000 further dwellings which were closed making a total of 116,500 in all.

The "other public sector" figures in this case include local authorities' overspill estates (but not GLC housing, which has been included in the local authorities' figures), in addition to housing owned by new towns, county councils (for example, police houses), Government Departments and nationalised industries and other public agencies. Many of these dwellings are vacant because of operational requirements, notably those owned by the Ministry of Defence, and others have been acquired for demolition, for example by the Department of Transport. The Government are encouraging the sale of housing which is not required and many of those that are vacant are in the process of disposal.

Housing associations' acquisitions of dwellings for rehabilitation inflate the numbers which are vacant.

Vacant dwellings in the private sector include those which are in severe disrepair, those undergoing renovation or awaiting demolition, those which are empty while being sold or between lettings, and those whose owners do not wish to occupy or sell them but are deterred from letting by the Rent Act.

PRIME MINISTER

North Yorkshire

Q11. Mr. Gregory asked the Prime Minister when she intends to make an official visit to north Yorkshire.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Private Office

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister what has been the cost of maintaining her Private Office since May 1979.

The Prime Minister: The cost to date of running No. 10 Downing street and all other costs associated with the Office of the Prime Minister (including the full costs for the financial year 1979-80) is £16,008,120.

Foreign Tours

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister what has been the cost of her foreign tours since May 1979.

The Prime Minister: The latest estimate of the cost to the Prime Minister's Office of foreign visits during the period May 1979 to December 1985 is £2,165,852. This figure corrects an over-estimate of 1984-85 costs which was included in the answer given on 9 May 1985.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister what has been the cost of official entertaining at (a) Chequers and (b) Downing street (i) since May 1979 and (ii) since June 1983.

The Prime Minister: The latest figure for the cost of official entertainment during the period since May 1979 is £110,329. The latest figure for the period since June 1983 is £48,366. These figures cover entertainment at both Chequers and No. 10 Downing street; the information is not available by location.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 December.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 December.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 December.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 December.

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Prime Minister if she list her official engagements for Thursday 19 December.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what representations she has had from the scientific community on strategic defence initiatives.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of letters on this subject over the last year, but none from persons writing on behalf of scientific institutions.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make a statement on the response to date in the Province to the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: As at 17 December 1985 the Prime Minister and I had together received letters and messages from 475 individuals and organisations in northern Ireland in response to the Anglo-Irish Agreement. The majority of these expressed reservations about or opposition to the agreement. There have also been responses by other organisations and individuals, some in favour of the agreement, some opposed, which cannot be accurately counted.

Security

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent the principle that the armed forces in Northern Ireland operate only in support of the civil power has been breached during the past 12 months; and to what extent, during the same period, there has been no police presence in operations which involve direct contact with the community.

Mr. Tom King: The armed forces have at all times in the past 12 months acted in support of the civil power and will continue to do so. That is the foundation of our security policy. Records are not kept in a form which would allow an assessment of the extent to which over the last 12 months there has been no police presence in operations by the armed forces involving direct contact with the community.

Hospitals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been (a) the total number of new hospital beds since May 1979 and (b) the total number of hospital beds closed, including those in hospitals which have been partially closed, since May 1979 by health board.

Mr. Needham: The information is not held centrally in the precise form requested. For the period in question the net change in hospital bed numbers was:

Health and Social Service boards
Hospital beds

Northern	+24
Southern	−55
Eastern	−145
Western	−231
All Boards	−407

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all new hospitals which have opened since May 1979 or are due to open over the next 18 months, indicating the first date on which approval for each scheme was given.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

*Major Hospital Developments	Year of Approval
New Belfast City Hospital	1960
Daisy Hill Hospital Phase 2	1970
Altnagelvin Area Hospital Cluster 1	1977
Altnagelvin Area Hospital Cluster 2	1983

* Developments costing over £2 million.

Rally (Belfast)

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what photographic surveillance was used by Her Majesty's security forces for the purpose of estimating the size of the rally which took place in Belfast city centre on Saturday 23 November; and what was the resulting estimate.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Farm Aid

Mr. Parris asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the funding of the farm aid package for Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on 28 November at columns 1033-41, details of a package giving increased rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances and emergency aid to livestock farmers affected by the exceptionally severe weather earlier this year.

The total aid package amounts to £25.3 million of additional expenditure in the United Kingdom: £20 million will be a charge on the reserve, with the balance of £5.3 million being found from offsetting savings in the agriculture and territorial programmes. The package will not therefore lead to an increase in public expenditure. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland announced on 28 November that Northern Ireland farmers would benefit by £5.5 million.

The contribution from Northern Ireland to the offsetting savings of £5.3 million referred to above is some £0.5 million. This amount has been found from savings from various sources in the agriculture cash limit programme. The cash limit for Northern Ireland departmental services NID 1 will be reduced by £0.5 million from £2,189.2 million to £2,188.7 million.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the implications for Northern Ireland public expenditure programmes of the autumn statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 12 November.

Mr. Tom King: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 12 November, at columns 431-43, announced total public expenditure planning figures for the Northern Ireland programme as follows:

Year	£ million
1986-87	4,520
1987-88	4,690
1988-89	4,820

The figure for 1986-87 represents an increase of some £250 million on the forecast outturn for 1985-86 and £60 million on the previously planned total for 1986-87 in the 1985 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9428), adjusted for Budget measures. The figures for 1987-88 and 1988-89 have now been adjusted for technical reasons to £4,680 million and £4,810 million respectively. The former represents an increase of some £80 million on previously published plans.

I have decided on the following cash allocations to individual programmes (rounded to the nearest £5 million for 1986-87 and to the nearest £10 million for 1987-88 and 1988-89 — figures may not sum to totals because of roundings).

Programme	1986-87	1987-88	£ million 1988-89
Agriculture, fisheries, food and forestry	80	90	90
Industry, energy, trade and employment	465	460	460
Transport	120	120	130
Housing	355	360	360
Other environmental services	170	170	170
Protective services	20	20	20
Education and science, arts and libraries	665	680	700
Health and personal social services	740	770	800
Social security	1,360	1,450	1,510
Other public and common services	75	80	80
Total Northern Ireland Departments	4,055	4,210	4,320
Northern Ireland Office
Law, order, protective and miscellaneous services	465	470	490
Total Northern Ireland	4,520	4,680	4,810

The planning figure for 1986-87 will form the basis for preparation by Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office of Main Estimates for the coming year, which will be presented to Parliament in due course.

The allocations reflect my assessment of how best to distribute the Northern Ireland public expenditure total in response to local needs and circumstances. Copies of a more detailed statement on these allocations have been placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

National Health Service (Revenue and Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give for each health and social services board the revenue and capital expenditure on National Health Service services in each year since 1974, expressing the figures (a) in money terms, (b) adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) adjusted by the movement of National Health Service pay and prices.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 46]: The following tables show revenue and capital expenditure on health services by health and social services boards in each year from 1974-75 to 1984-85.

The national movement in Health Service pay and prices has been applied to the combined total of board expenditure, as if might be misleading to apply it to the differing composition of the expenditure of individual boards.

Revenue and Captial Expenditure on Health Services by Health and Social Services Boards in Northern Ireland (see notes (1) to (3))
(a) Expressed in cash terms (£m)

Board	Northern		Southern		Eastern		Western
Year	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital
1974-75	19·2	0·5	18·4	1·6	65·4	4·7	17·7	1·2
1975-76	25·4	0·6	24·5	2·2	86·2	7·0	23·6	2·3
1976-77	30·0	1·1	28·6	2·2	101·9	8·6	28·9	2·2
1977-78	33·7	2·0	32·5	2·3	113·4	9·9	32·0	1·6
1978-79	39·0	2·4	36·8	2·4	129·2	11·9	36·5	1·7
1979-80	47·8	2·8	45·7	2·0	158·9	12·8	44·1	2·9
1980-81	62·2	3·6	58·2	2·1	201·7	13·8	55·9	2·4
1981-82	70·3	4·2	66·0	1·9	223·6	13·8	63·8	2·7

Board	Northern		Southern		Eastern		Western
Year	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital
1982-83	76·3	3·5	72·7	1·8	245·1	12·9	69·3	2·5
1983-84	83·2	3·1	78·2	1·5	261·9	14·7	74·8	3·6
1984-85	88·7	2·6	83·4	1·6	277·6	15·7	79·2	3·7

(b) Expressed in cash terms adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator to a 1983-84 base

Board	Northern		Southern		Eastern		Wstern
Year	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital	Revenue	Capital
1974-75	58·8	1·5	56·4	4·9	200·3	14·4	54·2	3·7
1975-76	61·9	1·5	59·7	5·4	210·0	17·1	57·5	5·6
1976-77	64·6	2·4	61·6	4·7	219·4	18·5	62·2	4·7
1977-78	63·8	3·8	61·4	4·3	214·4	18·7	60·5	3·0
1978-79	66·7	4·1	62·9	4·1	220·8	20·3	62·4	2·9
1979-80	69·9	4·1	66·8	2·9	232·4	18·7	64·5	4·2
1980-81	76·6	4·4	71·7	2·6	248·3	17·0	68·8	3·0
1981-82	78·6	4·7	73·8	2·1	250·0	15·4	71·3	3·0
1982-83	79·7	3·7	75·9	1·9	256·1	13·5	72·4	2·6
1983-84	83·2	3·1	78·2	1·5	261·9	14·7	74·8	3·6
1984-85	84·9	2·5	79·8	1·5	265·6	15·0	75·8	3·5

(c) Expressed in cash terms adjusted by the movement of National Health Service Pay and Prices to 1983-84 base (see Note 3)

Year	All boards
1974-75	417·4
1975-76	432·1
1976-77	450·2
1977-78	461·7
1978-79	480·9
1979-80	487·1
1980-81	481·1
1981-82	497·4
1982-83	508·1
1983-84	521·0
1984-85	522·6

Note:

(1) In Northern Ireland health and social services boards provide health services and personal social services. Accordingly, the figures shown above include an apportionment of common administration expenditure and both revenue and capital.

(2) The expenditure on capital includes major schemes undertaken by the Department of Health and Social Services on behalf of boards.

(3) Table (c) shows the combined expenditure (capital and revenue) of all boards adjusted by nationally derived factors (DHSS-London) to reflect the movement in NHS pay and prices.

RUC (Code of Conduct)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the new code of conduct of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 42]: I understand that the Chief Constable hopes to introduce a code of conduct as soon as possible in 1986. Its publication will be a matter for his decision.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Peremptory Jury Challenge

Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment Her Majesty's Government make of the effect on the operation of the courts of the existence of the right of peremptory jury challenge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to what I said in the debate on jury challenges following the Consolidated Fund Bill yesterday.

Plastic Bullets (Police)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the discussions which took place recently between officials of his Department, the chief constable of the west midlands and the chairman of the West Midlands county council police committee about the use of plastic bullets; and what is his policy towards the borrowing of plastic bullets from the Metropolitan police by constabularies outside the London area.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In reply to a question by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Lyell) on 26 November at cols. 515-16, my right hon. Friend said that, where a chief constable concluded that he required plastic baton rounds, and this was endorsed by Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary, he regarded it as essential that the equipment should be available to the force concerned. The purpose of the meeting with officials on 5 December, which was attended by the police authority chairmen and chief constables of Greater Manchester, West Midlands, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire, was to work out how such a requirement was best met.

At the meeting the chairmen of the police authorities explained the position in their particular authorities. The chief constables expressed the view that there was a need for their forces to have plastic baton rounds available. None of the four police authorities had yet agreed to their purchase. The Department's officials stressed that it was my right hon. Friend's wish that all parties should consult and proceed in co-operation, if possible. It was made clear, however, that, if necessary, the equipment and training in its use would be provided through central facilities under Home Office auspices.

Arrangements for the loan of items of equipment between forces are, in the first instance, a matter for the chief officers of police concerned.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will advise the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to increase the awards made to victims of rape or serious sexual attack.

Mr. Mellor: It is the practice of the board to review from time to time the guidelines it uses on compensation in particular classes of case, having regard to the current level of damages awarded in civil proceedings and the terms of the criminal injuries compensation scheme. This is not a process in which my right hon. Friend would think it right to intervene.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allocate more resources and manpower to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. Mellor: Financial provision for the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in 1986-87 will allow for an increase in staff and in compensation.

Victims Support Scheme (Kirkby)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allocate funds to the Kirkby victims support scheme.

Mr. Mellor: We have no funds available for this purpose during the current financial year.

10 Downing Street (Intruder)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the circumstances in which a man was apprehended on the roof of 10 Downing street on Friday 13 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the circumstances surrounding the apprehending and subsequent release of an unnamed man on the roof of 10 Downing street during the night of Friday 13 December.

Mr. Hurd: I have now received a report from the Commissioner. At 8.13 pm on Friday 13 December, a security alarm system was activated at 10 Downing street. Officers of the Metropolitan police on duty there chased a man found on the roof. The man climbed down to Horse Guards parade where he was arrested at 8.16 pm.

The Metropolitan police conducted a thorough search of the roof area of 10 Downing street and adjacent buildings, as well as neighbouring streets and open spaces. Nothing was found.

In the absence of any evidence that any criminal offence had been committed and after police inquiries about the individual concerned and into the incident generally, the man was released without charge at 7.50 pm on 14 December.

Although the alarm system and the police response were effective, it is a matter of concern that the man was able to reach the roof of 10 Downing street. It would not be right on security grounds to go into detail about the arrangements to protect that building, but I have set in hand an urgent review of this incident in order to ensure that any necessary improvements are undertaken immediately, and that the security arrangements for the complex of buildings adjoining 10 Downing street, which are occupied by several Departments, are adequately co-ordinated.

Dr. Nazemi

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to announce a decision on Dr. Nazemi, ref. No. 97047, and his ability to take up an academic post which is on offer for 1 January 1986.

Mr. Waddington: Dr. Nazemi was interviewed on 17 December. A decision on his application will be taken as soon as possible when the report of the interview has been considered.

Civil Defence

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what civil defence grant allocations were made to county councils and the Greater London council for 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The total initial allocations made to county councils, the GLC and police authorities for civil defence grant-eligible expenditure were as follows:

	£'000s
1983-84	10,456
1984-85	10,877
1985-86	12,418

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department where training courses, for which civil defence grant was paid, were held since 1 December 1983.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what grants have been made to county councils and to the Greater London council for the attendance on any civil defence training course of members of those authorities since 1 December 1983; and in what year;

(2) what grants have been made to county councils and to the Greater London council for the attendance on any civil defence training course of members of their staff pursuant to regulation 4(1)(d) of the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year;

(3) what grants have been made to county councils and to the Greater London council for the training of their own staff and the staff of district or borough councils in their area pursuant to regulation 4(1)(c) of the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grants were made under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations in each of the years 1980-81 to 1984-85 inclusive to (a) police authorities, (b) fire authorities, (c) county councils and the Greater London council, other than in their role as fire or police authorities, (d) district councils, London boroughs and the City of London and (e) any other bodies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grants were made for civil defence purposes other than under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations to any body or organisation other than a local or police authority in each of the years 1979-80 to 1984-85, inclusive.

Mr. Giles Shaw: None.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grants have been made to county councils and to the Greater London council for the purpose of enabling persons to undertake to serve as civil defence volunteers pursuant to regulation 4(1)(f) of the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information is not available. Local authorities do not itemise such costs in their civil defence grant estimates or claims.

Immigration Statistics

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will supply the statistics relating to passenger admissions and refusals at Newcastle airport categorised according to old Commonwealth, new Commonwealth and Pakistan, and so on.

Mr. Waddington: The numbers of passengers admitted into the United Kingdom at Newcastle airport during the 12 months ending November 1985 are given in the following table. During this period, eight passengers who had been refused leave to enter were removed.

Admissions at Newcastle Airport, December 1984-November 1985

Nationality	Admissions
Old Commonwealth	1,090
New Commonwealth and Pakistan	470
Western Europe (excluding European Community)	8,880
Rest of World (including Cyprus and Malta)	2,270

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people refused entry under the primary purpose rule (a) have appealed against the decision and (b) have succeeded in winning their appeal.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that the statistics available about appeals and their outcome do not enable this precise information to be provided.

Police

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a statement of, respectively, central Government and total public expenditure on the police, broken down according to the principal items of expenditure, indicating (a) intended expenditure for the current financial year, as stated in Cmnd. 9428, (b) the expected outturn of expenditure for the current financial year and (c) planned expenditure for 1986-87.

Mr. Hurd: The information in respect of England and Wales is as follows:

	£ million cash
	(a) 1985-86 plans Cmnd 9428	(b) 1985-86 estimated outturn	(c) 1986-87 plans
Central government expenditure:
current	50	52	55
capital	34	28	33
Local authority expenditure:
current	2,655	2,770	2,880
capital	104	94	92
Total	2,843	2,944	3,060

The Government are examining how to ensure that adequate resources continue to be available to enable the police service to discharge its increasing commitments.

Fire Service Equipment

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what tests his Department is planning in respect of the new fire and smoke escape masks against existing fire service equipment; what criteria are being used in the tests; who is to fund the tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The British Standards Institution is preparing a British standard for respirators for escape from fire. This will constitute a performance specification for such devices and give guidelines on the limited circumstances in which they might be safely used. In order to validate some of the test methods proposed in the draft standard, the BSI technical committee is planning an experimental programme using a range of existing products. The Department of Trade and Industry has offered to make a grant towards the costs of this programme. It would not be appropriate to test the devices against existing self-contained breathing apparatus as used by the fire service.

Hostile Attacks (Monitoring)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken to enable the United Kingdom Warning and Monitoring Organisation, and the Royal Observer Corps to distinguish between different forms of hostile attack; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Initial warning of air attacks does not distinguish between the different forms it could take. The national warning organisation is equipped with instruments to detect, monitor and give warning of the effects of nuclear weapons. Studies are being conducted into ways of detecting and monitoring the effects of chemical attack and issuing appropriate public warning.

Shotgun Certificates

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has completed his review of the procedures relating to the cost of issuing shotgun certificates.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are considering the outcome of the review of firearms fees and hope to be in a position to publish the results in the new year.

Women (Violence)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the absolute and percentage increase in violent offences against women recorded in the Metropolitan police district between 1979 and 1984; and what new and additional resources have been used to tackle this problem.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1985, c. 583]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information is as given in the table. In the period 1979 to 1984 the establishment of the Metropolitan police increased from 22,786 to 26,844 officers. It is part of their duty to investigate violent offences against women, as all other criminal offences. Measures designed specifically to assist with the investigation of serious sexual offences against women include the provision of special training in sexual investigation techniques, the establishment of victims' examination suites, which are shortly to be opened and arrangements for interviewing by women police officers and, when requested, by women police surgeons. The number of women police officers in the Metropolitan police increased by 42 per cent., from 1,748 to 2,484 between 1979 and 1984.

Offences of violence against females recorded by the police, 1979-84
Metropolitan Police District
Numbers and percentages

	Absolute increase 1979-1984	Percentage increase 1979-1984
Violence against the person	849	22
Rape	118	48
Robbery	2,278	96

Advertising

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on advertising in national and local newspapers, on television and in other printed journals during the financial year 1984-85; and what is the amount budgeted and spent to date in 1985-86.

Mr. Hurd [pursuant to his reply, 6 December 1985, c. 357]: The information requested is as follows:

Expenditure on advertising	Press	TV	Total (£'000)
1984-85	813	2,227	3,040
1985-86 (Budget)	571	2,607	3,178
1985-86 (Spent to date)	366	373	739

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Additives

6. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to amend the regulations governing the use of additives in food; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: There are no immediate plans to do so. Food additive regulations are amended when necessary following the advice of the Food Advisory Committee and after consultation with all interests.

30. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to discuss food additives with United Kingdom food manufacturers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The Ministry is in regular contact with food manufacturers and with many other interests concerned with food additives.

38. Mr. Eastham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about the effects of additives in food for human consumption.

Mrs. Fenner: My Ministry regularly receives a great variety of correspondence on all matters concerning food, including the use of additives.

42. Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the additives currently added to British food are not approved by the European Economic Community.

Mrs. Fenner: Community directives have been developed for only a limited number of food additives. United Kingdom legislation applies those directives and additionally controls many more food additives.

Cereals

17. Mr. Yeo asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the latest estimate of cereal production in 1985.

Mr. Gummer: United Kingdom production of cereals in 1985 is estimated at 22·3 million tonnes.

37. Mr. Jackson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he will be having with his European colleagues on measures to deal with the cereals surplus.

Mr. Gummer: I am my European colleagues have already begun discussions on the Commission's memorandum on cereals policy.

39. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the 1985 cereal harvest; and what is the likely carry over of that harvest.

Mr. Gummer: United Kingdom production of cereals in 1985 is estimated at 22·3 million tonnes. It is not possible to forecast the likely level of carry over stocks at the end of the season, as this will depend on home and export market developments.

41. Mr. Hunter asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals Her Majesty's Government have submitted to the European Commission for reducing the level of cereal production; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In recent months the Government have made it very clear to the Commission and our European partners that we regard price policy as the essential element in bringing the cereals sector into better balance. We will continue to make this clear in the discussion in the Council following the Commission's presentation of its memorandum on this subject.

Food Surpluses

19. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the present food surpluses of the European Economic Community and the cost of storage of these items to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of United Kingdom and Community intervention stocks, including those of foodstuffs, on the latest available dates is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly.

The storage, handling and related technical costs of intervention products in the United Kingdom (including barley and feedwheat) in 1984 were £46·4 million. The net cost to the United Kingdom was £18·5 million. The United Kingdom contribution to the cost of storage, handling and related technical costs of intervention products in other member states was £61·5 million.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has made to the European Commission about stocks of surplus food.

Mr. Gummer: The Government press the Community at every opportunity to tackle the underlying problem of surplus production by reducing the effective support levels.

Food Labelling

20. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce legislation to compel the listing of contents of food products to enable purchasers to be aware of the percentage fat content and the nature of the additives within such products.

Mrs. Fenner: It is our intention to introduce legislation to require the labelling of foods with their fat content. We expect to issue detailed proposals shortly. The Food Labelling Regulations 1984 already require food additives to be indicated on the ingredients lists on food by the category of function they perform in the food as well as the specific name or serial number, or both.

Protein Crops

21. Mr. Charles Morrison asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent he is encouraging an increase in the output of protein crops in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: The Government actively support Community action to encourage the protein sector, which includes the payment of a subsidy on dried peas and field beans production. In 1982 we pressed successfully for this scheme to be extended to human consumption products, as well as those for animal feed. Earlier this year we secured the introduction of monthly increments in order to assist orderly marketing of this expanding crop. The Government have maintained their funding of research designed to produce improved varieties of these protein crops and advice to growers is available from ADAS.

Food Quality

22. Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new initiatives he proposes to take to improve the quality of food.

Mrs. Fenner: Comprehensive legislation already exists regulating the safety, quality and labelling of food. Regulations are kept under review so that appropriate initiatives can be taken in response to new developments.

Agriculture Policy

23. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a White Paper setting out Her Majesty's Government's future policy on agriculture.

Mr. Gummer: The farming industry faces a difficult period of change and the Government will continue to give the industry the guidance it needs as the situation develops.

Dairy Products

24. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to rectify current deficiencies in the food production of dairy products.

Mr. Gummer: I am not clear what deficiencies the hon. Member has in mind. It is in the industry's own interest to meet its customers' needs. I shall be happy to consider any particular point that the hon. Member wishes to make.

Common Agricultural Policy

25. Mr. Baldry asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if Her Majesty's Government have put forward any recent proposals for the reform of the common agricultural policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister gave him on 20 November 1985.

Horticulture Industry

26. Mrs. Roe asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what transitional arrangements have been made to protect the horticulture industry after the accession to the European Economic Community of Spain and Portugal.

Mrs. Fenner: The transitional arrangements for fresh fruit and vegetables have been designed to give a long period of gradual adjustment and to minimise the risk of disruption of markets. For Spain the transition period will be divided into two phases of four and six years. During the first phase, the gradual reduction of tariffs over the full 10-year period will begin. During the second phase, starting on 1 January 1990, there will be a progressive dismantling of the Community's system of minimum import prices (reference prices) on trade with Spain. During this phase the supplementary trade mechanism, under which trade levels will be monitored to ensure that markets are not disrupted by too rapid a rise, will operate.

For trade with the Canary Islands, where the common agriculture policy will not operate, separate arrangements will apply. Tariffs on some products, including tomatoes and cucumbers, will be phased out but only within quotas based on traditional trade flows; reference prices will continue to apply.

For Portugal the arrangements for fruit and vegetables will be similar to those for Spain, although there is provision for variation of the length of each phase within a 10-year period.

For ornamental horticultural products, tariffs will be phased out in equal stages over seven years.

Sugar

28. Mr. Lyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline future arrangements in the United Kingdom for industrial uses of sugar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Commission has proposed to make quota sugar available to the Community's chemical industry with the aid of a production refund corresponding broadly to the production levy on B quota sugar. My right hon. Friend and I have urged that this proposal be amended so that our chemical industry has access to sugar broadly on the same basis as it is available to its competitors outside the Community with access to world-priced raw materials.

Butter

29. Mr. Budgen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on European Commission proposals to reduce surplus European Economic Community butter stocks.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply recently given to the right hon. Member for Halton (Mr. Oakes) on 9 December at column 485.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, for each calendar year since 1977, he will give (a) the tonnage of New Zealand butter imported into the United Kingdom, (b) the tonnage imported into bonded stores in the United Kingdom, and (c) the tonnage released from bonded stores in the United Kingdom; and whether, in his enforcement of the tonnage of New Zealand butter permitted to be imported into the United Kingdom each year under protocol 18 of the treaty of accession to the European Economic Community, he has regard to the quantity imported into bonded stores in the United Kingdom, or to the total released from bonded stores within the United Kingdom plus any tonnage imported into the United Kingdom from New Zealand without passing through bonded stores.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 18 December 1985, c. 210]: For enforcement purposes, the limitation on imports of New Zealand butter into the United Kingdom at a reduced rate of levy under the arrangements stemming from protocol 18 of the treaty of accession applies to the amounts entering into free circulation (either directly on import or from bonded stores) rather than to the quantities physically entering the country in any one year. The levels of the quotas, the amounts entering into free circulation under these arrangements, and the total quantities of butter imported from New Zealand are shown in the table for the period requested.

The figures for total imports of New Zealand butter include quantities of butter outside the scope of the arrangements, such as those imported under inward processing relief, and into bond. Figures on the amount of New Zealand butter imported into and released from bond in the United Kingdom are not readily available.

	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	Tonnes 1984
Quantity of butter which the United Kingdom is entitled to import from New Zealand at a reduced rate of levy	138,176	125,000	120,000	95,000	94,600	92,000	87,000	83,000
Quantity of New Zealand butter entering free circulation against entitlement	137,756	125,000	120,000	95,000	93,998	91,999	87,000	83,000
Total quantity of butter imported into the United Kingdom from New Zealand	129,016	129,968	119,878	107,972	99,422	99,152	93,760	89,110

Intervention Stores

31. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total tonnage of food in private and public intervention stores in the European Economic Community; and what was the comparable total five and 10 years previously.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of Community intervention stocks and private storage stocks, including those of foodstuffs, on the latest available dates is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly. Information on stock levels in previous years (including 1975 and 1980) is contained in the table published in Hansard, volume 71, column 452.

Agricultural Development and Advisory Service

32. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total number of employees of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service as at 1 April; and what changes he expects to see by 1 April 1986 and 1 April 1987.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister gave to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 3 December 1985 at column 193. The total number of ADAS staff is expected to change from 4,786 at 1 April 1985 to about 4,700 at 1 April 1986 and around 4,300 at 1 April 1987, the exact figures depending upon arrangements consequential on the measures my right hon. Friend announced on 11 October and 7 November.

33. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the main sources of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service's income in 1986-87; and if he will provide a breakdown according to the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service's main areas of activity.

Mrs. Fenner: ADAS currently generates annual receipts of over £7 million. For 1985-86, current estimates of the principal receipts are £4,343,000 for sales of produce and other receipts at experimental centres; £1,257,000 for services provided under the agricultural services scheme; £554,000 for fees from the National Coal Board for work on restoration of land subjected to opencast mining; and £424,000 for supplies of other goods. The Supply Estimates for 1986-87 will be presented to Parliament in March 1986.

Milk Quotas

34. Mr. Temple-Morris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether progress is being made towards greater flexibility in the transfer and acquisition of milk quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 21 November at columns 409-410 to my hon. Friends the Members for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) and for Wealden (Sir G. Johnson Smith).

Untreated Milk

35. Mr. Nicholls asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what conditions he proposes to attach to new licences for the sale of untreated milk by producer-retailers.

Mr. Gummer: The Milk (Special Designation) (Amendment) Regulations 1985 (SI No. 530) lay down certain additional conditions which apply from 1 November 1985 to licences authorising the sale of untreated milk by producers. I am sending my hon. Friend an extract from the relevant provisions.

Farm Incomes

36. Mr. Bruce asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for raising farm incomes in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Farm incomes will be one of a number of factors to be taken into account when decisions are taken on the European Commission's proposals for prices and other measures for the 1986-87 year. These proposals will also affect consumers and taxpayers; and the Government are very conscious of the need to secure a better balance in the markets for commodities in surplus and to ensure that the financial guideline is respected.

43. Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average increase in the net income of farmers in 1984-85; and by what proportion he expects this income to rise in 1985-86.

Mr. Gummer: Details of farming income are given at table 23 of the "Annual Review of Agriculture 1985" White Paper (Cmd. 9423) which shows that farming income rose from £1,502 million in 1983 to £1,826 million in 1984. It is expected that income in 1985 will be at well below the record level achieved in 1984. A forecast will be published in the forthcoming annual review White Paper.

Horses, Ponies and Donkeys

40. Mr. Amess asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the abandonment in the countryside of horses, ponies and donkeys on agricultural wasteland.

Mrs. Fenner: I have received some representations concerning this matter.

The welfare of horses, ponies or donkeys considered to be livestock on agricultural land is protected by the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 which makes it an offence to cause unnecessary pain or unnecessary distress to such livestock. More generally these animals, like all domestic and captive animals, have protection under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and the Abandonment of Animals Act 1960 which are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Common Fisheries Policy

44. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the December meeting of the European Council of Fisheries Ministers, with specific reference to the share-out of North sea herring between the European Community and Norway.

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Fisheries Ministers' meeting in Brussels on 16 and 17 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to the statement which I made in the House this afternoon.

Farmers (Debts)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the farming industry concerning the current level of indebtedness of farmers.

Mrs. Fenner: My right hon. Friend has had no specific discussions recently with representatives of the farming industry on farmers indebtedness. However, he is in constant touch with farmers and their representative bodies and in such contacts this is one of the subjects discussed.

European Commission (Environmental Protection)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the European Commission's proposals to regulate and control practices harmful to the environment, as laid out in paragraphs 8-11 of Part IV of the Commission's Green Paper "Perspectives for the Common Agriculture Policy."

Mr. Gummer: I found the references in the Green Paper to agriculture and the environment to be thoughtful and constructive. They clearly reflect the Commission's acceptance that the development of the community's agricultural policies must have due regard to environmental considerations. These policies must also take full account of the need to retain a viable industry and to avoid unreasonable restrictions on farmers.

However, I believe we need to adopt a cautious approach in relation to extensive programmes of action at Community level. In my view, the emphasis should be on national measures based on the best practicable environmental options appropriate to each member state, taking account of their often differing economic, ecological and structural circumstances.

Intervention Storage (Grain)

Mr. Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been received in the last 12 months out of the European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund to pay for the storage of grain in intervention.

Mr. Gummer: During the period December 1984 to November 1985, £35·263 million was received by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce for storage of grain in intervention.

Apralan

Dr. Cunningham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what work has been commissioned by, or done in, his Department into the effect of administering the drug Apralan on calves; and what work has been undertaken by the medicines unit of the Central Veterinary Laboratory, Weybridge, into the effects of the drug Apralan on calves and livestock in general.

Mrs. Fenner: Several formulations of the drug Apralan are currently licensed under the Medicines Act 1968 for administration to calves and pigs.

Licences are issued only after a thorough evaluation of data submitted by the applicant demonstrating the safety, quality and efficacy of the product. The assessment of safety includes the safety of the consumer of meat, milk or eggs from treated animals and of persons handling or administering the product as well as the safety of the target animal. In the case of antimicrobial products it also includes an assessment of the likelihood of the development of resistant strains of bacteria which may pose a hazard to human health. In licensing veterinary products, we are advised by the Veterinary Products Committee, a statutory committee of independent experts in human and animal health.

The central veterinary laboratory of my Department undertakes routine monitoring for antibiotic resistance which covers resistance to apramycin, the active ingredient of Apralan.

Brucellosis

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been slaughtered in each of t he last five years under the provisions of his scheme to eradicate brucellosis.

Mrs. Fenner: The numbers of cattle slaughtered in Great Britain in each of the last five years under the brucellosis eradication scheme analysed between reactor animals and those taken as dangerous contacts are as follows:

Year	Number of brucellosis reactors slaughtered	Number of dangerous contacts slaughtered	Total cattle slaughtered
1980	6,305	7,658	13,963
1981	1,886	4,723	6,609
1982	548	2,383	2,931
1983	688	3,228	3,916
1984	510	5,609	6,119

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many outbreaks of brucellosis among cattle have been reported in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Fenner: The numbers of new herd breakdowns due to brucellosis disclosed in each of the last five years are as follows:

Year	Number of new herd breakdowns
1980	1,397
1981	686
1982	207
1983	162
1984	94

WALES

Hospitals (Children)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what proportion of children in hospitals in Wales were accommodated in adult wards at the most recent date for which figures are available;

(2) what was the number of children in hospitals in Wales who were accommodated in adult wards at the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is not available centrally. On 27 March 1985 there were 905 patients aged under 16 years in non-psychiatric hospitals in Wales, of which 435 (48 per cent.) were either in special care baby units or were paediatric cases.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil servants there are in his Department employed (a) in the Principality and (b) outside the Principality; and how many in each category were born within the Principality.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: At 1 December 1985 the number of permanent civil servants employed in my Department in the Principality was 2,258 and outside the Principality was 35. Information about place of birth could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Hospitals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all new hospitals which have opened since May 1979 or are due to open over the next 18 months, indicating the first date on which approval for each scheme was given.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information on new hospital developments in Wales in given in the following table:

Hospital	Approval date	Date of opening
Ysbyty Glan Clwyd	November 1966	May 1980
Royal Gwent scheme 5	February 1970	October 1979
Ysbyty Gwynedd	June 1971	July 1984
St. Woolas scheme 1	October 1976	March 1983
Mold community hospital	August 1978	April 1984
The Princess of Wales hospital, Bridgend	December 1976	October 1985
Morriston hospital, Swansea	December 1976	October 1985
Ystradgynlais community hospital	July 1980	February 1986*
Wrexham (Maelor) DGH	December 1976	April 1986*

* Anticipated.

Job Losses

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of manufacturing jobs lost in Wales since June 1977; and what is the proportion of employees employed in manufacturing at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Comprehensive information is not available on job losses. Estimates prepared by my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment show that in June 1985 204,000 persons, 22·6 per cent. of all employees in employment, were engaged in manufacturing industry. This compares with 308,000 so employed in June 1977.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the proportion of the population in Wales living in households of social class I or II.

Mr. Mark Robinson: At the time of the 1981 census, 20·3 per cent. of the population of Wales lived in private households where the economically active head was of social class I or II.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the change in population in Wales between 1961 and 1983.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The population of Wales increased from 2,635,000 in 1961 to 2,807,800 in 1983, that is by 172,800. (Source — OPCS mid year estimates).

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the ratio of registered unemployment to notified vacancies in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of unemployed claimants in Wales as at 14 November 1985 was 180,853. The number of unfilled vacancies at job centres in Wales (including the community programme) as at 8 November was 9,458 giving a ratio of 19:1.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on the sale of school playing fields in Wales for housing purposes.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The Government believe that all surplus land held by public authorities should be disposed of. It is for local authorities themselves to decide in each case whether land used for educational purposes is surplus to requirements.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what acreage of school playing fields in Wales has been sold for development in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not collected by the Department.

Wales Tourist Board

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has yet decided what resources he intends to allocate to the Wales Tourist Board for 1986-87.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Subject to parliamentary approval I intend to allocate nearly £8 million to the Wales Tourist Board for 1986-87. This includes a continuation of the exceptional addition of £½ million for grants and loans to the tourist industry which I was able to make available to the board this year from savings achieved elsewhere. It represents a 25 per cent. increase in funds available for assisting tourism projects in Wales and a 9 per cent. increase overall on the position at the start of the present financial year.

Small Firms Service

Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what conclusions he has reached following his review of the small firms service in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The purpose of the review of the small firms service in Wales, which was guided by an independent report by consultants, was to determine how best the service should be organised in future. I have decided, in line with the recommendation in the consultants report that the overall effectiveness of the small firms service in Wales and the service it provides to the small firms sector will be enhanced if the two arms of the service—the counselling service in Wales, which is administered by the Welsh Development Agency, and the small firms centre, which is the responsibility of my Department—are in future combined in a single unit. Therefore responsibility for my Department's small firms centre will be transferred to the Welsh Development Agency on 1 January 1986.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Plant Breeding Institute, Cambridge

48. Mr Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what bids have been received for the sale of the Plant Breeding Institute at Cambridge.

Mr. Walden: My noble Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on 28 November in another place that the Government were considering the possibility of privatising applied plant breeding at the Plant Breeding Institute. No decisions have yet been taken. A number of private sector companies have expressed interest in acquiring that part of the PBI. It could be prejudicial to possible future negotiations to give further details.

National Advisory Council for the Youth Service

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the members of the National Advisory Council for the Youth Service, their ages, the organisations they represent and the criteria that were used in deciding membership.

Mr. Dunn: The members of the National Advisory Council for the Youth Service, and the position each currently holds, are as follows:—

Professor Walter James, CBE—Chairman
Mr. Wally Brown — District Co-ordinator for Community Education, Manchester Education Authority
Miss Lynda Carr—Principal Officer, Education Department, Equal Opportunities Commission
Miss Ann Davies — Development Officer, Young Farmers Clubs Movement, Wales
Mr. Michael Edwards — County Education Officer, Norfolk County Council
Mr. Harold Haywood — Director, the Royal Jubilee and Prince's Trusts
Mr. Geoffrey Jones—County Adviser, Youth Education, West Glamorgan County Council, and Vice-Chairman of International Youth Year (Wales)
Ms Sushila Khoot — Neighbourhood Development Worker, Youth and Community Service, London Borough of Brent
Mr. Anthony Lawton—Chief Project Officer, Commonwealth Youth Programme, Commonwealth Secretariat
Ms Mary Marken — Assistant Education Officer, Sheffield Youth and Community Service
Mr. John Naylor — National Secretary, National Council of YMCAs, and Vice-Chairman, National Council for Voluntary Youth Services
Mr. Mike Nichol — Director of Education, Wirral Local Education Authority, Member of the Executive Committee, Society of Education Officers
Mr. David Owen—Group Chairman, Rubery Owen Holdings Ltd.
Mr. Michael Richardson — Pro Vice-Chancellor (Continuing Education) at The Open University. Chairman-elect of the Council for Education and Training in Youth and Community Work (CETYCW)
Mr. Malcolm Ryan—Chairperson, British Youth Council
Mr. Gavton Shepherd — Principal Race Relations Adviser, London Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham
Miss Elizabeth Smith—Headmistress of St. Joseph's (Aided) Primary School, Newton Abbot, Devon. Member of the Girl Guides Association
Ms Janice Smith — Chairperson, International Youth Year Committee for England. Member of the Executive Committee for the Boys Brigade
Mr. Linbert Spencer — Chief Executive, Project Fullemploy, and a member of the In-Service Training Panel of the CETYCW
Mr. Alan Sutton — Head of the School of Teaching and Community Studies, Bradford and Ilkley Community College. Member of the Initial Training Panel of the CETYCW
Mr. Phil Treseder — Member of the British Youth Council Executive Committee, and of the IYY (Wales) Committee. Student at the Polytechnic of North London
Mrs. Madeline Webster — Deputy Principal Youth Officer, Inner Education Authority
Mr. Ivor Widdison—Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Youth Bureau, and Adviser to the Joint Negotiating Committee for Youth Workers and Community Centre Wardens. Principal Administrative Assistant, Council of Local Education Authorities.
The Rev. David Winwood — National Secretary, The Methodist Association of Youth Clubs.

In determining invitations to be in membership of the council, the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Wales had regard to the wide range of interests in the youth service field. Individual members have, however, been appointed in a personal capacity according to the contribution each can make to the work of the council. I shall write to the hon. Member about the ages of council members in due course.

Religious Education

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the number of specialist teachers of religious education required in the secondary sector to ensure that teaching of religious education is conducted primarily by appropriately qualified specialists; what assessment he has made of the number of such specialist teachers who should be undergoing training at any one time in order to maintain an adequate supply of qualified teachers; and how many are currently undergoing such training.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1984, 16,900 full-time teachers in maintained secondary schools in England reported that they held a higher education qualification with religious education as a main or subsidiary subject. If all schools were to give first priority to ensuring that religious education was taught by appropriately qualified staff, the supply of such teachers nationally would be more than sufficient to meet their needs. In practice, schools have thought it necessary to assign many of those teachers for some or all of their time to teach other subjects in which they are qualified, and many teachers without a qualification in religious education have been asked to teach the subject for a few periods a week. It is for local education authorities and head teachers to consider the scope for managing the teacher force so as to allow a closer match between qualifications and assignments. Target intakes to initial teacher training in England and Wales in religious education have been set so as to meet anticipated demand from the schools for teachers qualified in the subject: in 1985, 259 students were admitted to PGCE courses, and 45 to BEd courses, against targets of 249 and 105 respectively. The increased emphasis on the one year PGCE courses from 1986 in preference to the BEd should allow output to increase in the next few years.

Initial Teacher Training (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he has asked the National Advisory Board to give further consideration to initial teacher training courses in Portsmouth.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend considered that the proposals submitted to him by the National Advisory Body in September on 1986 to 1989 intakes to courses of initial teacher training in the public sector were insufficient to realise the full potential for securing a high quality, cost-effective system of initial teacher training. He therefore asked the NAB to give further consideration to intakes to all such courses.

Children (Special Education Needs)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has yet received the transcript of the judgment of Mr. Justice Taylor on the education of a dyslexic child, referred to in his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 628; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has not yet received the transcript.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how the pupil-teacher ratio in (a) Amber Valley and (b) Derbyshire at the latest available date compares with the figures for 1979.

Mr. Dunn: The pupil-teacher ratio in Amber Valley is not available centrally. The pupil-teacher ratio in Derbyshire in 1979 was 20·2; in January 1985, the corresponding figure was 18·3.

Education Support Grants

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the expenditure to be supported through education support grants in 1986-87.

Sir Keith Joseph: On 22 May I announced the Government's intention to increase the expenditure supported through education support grants in the financial year 1986-87 up to around £40 million of expenditure by local education authorities in England. Of this sum, £18·6 million is committed to projects which began in 1985-86, including £1 million held in reserve for projects concerning the management and appraisal of school-teachers. Local education authorities were therefore invited to bid for new starts in 1986-87 amounting in value to £21·5 million.

The programme of new starts next year will consist of 12 activities, five newly introduced, and seven which were in the 1985-86 programme and have further starts in 1986-87. All 96 local education authorities in England have bid for grant support. For each of the 12 activities the total of bids exceeded the expenditure which could be supported.

In respect of 11 of the 12 activities, the Department will shortly inform local education authorities of the levels of expenditure for each activity which I have approved for 1986-87. Bids for the remaining activity (pilot projects to meet the educational needs of ethnic minorities) are being considered alongside educational bids under the urban programme. I shall announce approvals for that activity in the early spring.

Subject to the passage of the necessary legislation, a further activity will be added to the 1986-87 programme securing the supervision of pupils in schools at midday. Approvals will be announced later.

The table sets out for the 11 activities which are the subject of the present approvals the level of expenditure to be supported in the financial year 1986-87 and the number of authorities for whom I have approved projects.

Split of expenditure between activities
£ million at 1986-87 prices

Activity	Total allocation	Number of LEAs to be supported
I: The teaching of science and technology as part of primary education.	2·5	55
II: Pilot projects to improve the quality or range of the curriculum provided in primary schools in rural areas.	0·5	7
IV: The provision of retraining and updating courses directed towards the needs of industry and commerce (PICKUP).	1·6	37
V: The development of the use of information technology in further education.	9·0	96
VI: The planning, development and coordination of provision to meet the educational needs of the unemployed.	1·6	40
VII: The provision of data processing equipment for use in the management of further education establishments.	1·0	70
VIII: The development, provision and appraisal of courses of initial training for school governers.	0·1	10
IX: The provision of services to support parents in the teaching of children under five with special educational needs.	1·2	44
X: The provision of computerised learning aids at further education establishments for use by students with special educational needs.	0·5	32
XI: The strengthening of college employer links to improve the quality and relevance of NAFE provision.	0·5	22
XII: Action within the education service to combat the misuse of drugs.	2·0	96
Total	20·5	508

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Sexual Offence Trials (Evidence)

Mr. Malone asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland when it is intended to bring into force the provisions in section 36 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1985 dealing with evidence in sexual offence trials.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has made a commencement order under section 60(3)(b) of the 1985 Act bringing section 36 into force on 1 January 1986. The Act contains a transitional provision in paragraph 1 of schedule 3 to the effect that the new evidential rules will apply to all trials commencing after that date.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to resume trilateral negotiations with the United States and Soviet Union on a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty following the requirement in the final consensus document of the third review conference of the non-proliferation treaty that the nuclear weapon states party to the non-proliferation treaty begin trilateral negotiations before the end of 1985.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave yesterday at column 196, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas).

Overseas Missions (Security)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there have been any changes in the cash limits for his Department's Votes in so far as they affect security arrangements at missions overseas.

Mr. Eggar: A spring Supplementary Estimate will be presented to Parliament inviting the provision of funds needed for overseas expenditure, including security expenditure, as a result of movements in overseas prices in accordance with the arrangements set out in Cmnd. 9367. Priorities have been adjusted to meet the most immediate requirements of recent studies on the security of missions and personnel overseas. Planning is under way to ensure that the full implications can be handled.

Entry Clearance Fees

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there will be any change in entry clearances fees for 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. With effect from 1 January, entry clearance fees will be increased and amended as follows:

	£
Visitors (including students, passengers in transit, working holidaymakers and au pairs)	12
Multiple entry clearances in the above categories	24
Applications lodged on behalf of those applying for settlement or long-term stay in the United Kingdom	25

The last fee will be non-refundable.

Transit visas will be subsumed into the visitors grouping.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. Alton asked the Lord Privy Seal how many times since June 1983 departmental Select Committees have not proceeded to business because a quorum was not present; how many times proceedings of departmental Select Committees have been suspended or adjourned because a quorum was not present; and if he will list the occasions by date and by committee.

Mr. Biffen: Since June 1983, none of the main departmental Select Committees has been unable to proceed to business due to the lack of a quorum. The Treasury and Civil Service Sub-Committee could not proceed to business for this reason on 19 December 1984. Committee proceedings have been adjourned twice due to the lack of a quorum. The Scottish Affairs Committee was so adjourned on 13 February 1985, and the Employment Committee was so adjourned on 17 July 1985.

SCOTLAND

Blood Products

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when Scotland and Northern Ireland became self-sufficient in blood products.

Mr. John MacKay: Scotland has been virtually self-sufficient in blood products since the end of 1983. From time to time imported blood products are prescribed on clinical grounds.

The position in Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, and I have asked my right hon. Friend to write to the hon. Member.

Motorways (Lighting)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of the M8 motorway between Edinburgh, Glasgow and Bishopton are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections.

Mr. Ancram: Approximately 31 miles of the M8 motorway are unlit. The unlit sections are as follows:

	Miles
Newbridge roundabout (junction 2)—Dechmont (junction 3)	6
Approximately 1½ miles west of Dechmont—Newhouse (junction 6)	18
St. James interchange (junction 29)—West Ferry (junction 31)	7
	31

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of the M9 motorway between Edinburgh and Dunblane are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections.

Mr. Ancram: Two short sections, totalling half a mile, at the Newbridge and Kirkliston junctions, are lit. The remaining 34 miles of the M9 motorway are unlit.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 25 November, Official Report, columns 429-32, if he will make a statement concerning the £28,774 written off by the Lothian health board in 1984-85.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall reply fully to the hon. Member when inquiries of Lothian health board about the sum in question are completed.

Civil Defence

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what grants were made under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations in each of the years 1978-79 to 1984-85 inclusive to (a) police authorities, (b) fire authorities, (c) regional councils, other than in their role as fire or police authorities and (d) district councils.

Mr. John MacKay: The following table shows the grants made to local authorities in Scotland under the Civil Defence (Grant) (Scotland) Regulations 1953 in respect of the years in question. Normally grants are made to regional councils without distinguishing between their police, fire and other functions; but payments are made direct to joint boards/committees as shown.

	Regional Councils £	Joint Fire Boards £	Joint Police Committees £	District Councils £
1978-79	254,434	91	13,359	228
1979-80	313,802	105	15,576	1,482
1980-81	441,313	68	17,115	985
1981-82	502,895	34	20,255	1,606
1982-83	616,702	47	33,363	1,107
1983-84	657,911	91	32,263	462
1984-85	700,130	—	38,000	820

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what grants were made for civil defence purposes other than under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations to any body or organisation other than a local or police authority in each of the years 1979-80 to 1984-85, inclusive;

(2) what grants were made under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations to any body or organisation other than a local police authority in each of the years 1979-80 to 1984-85, inclusive.

Mr. John MacKay: None.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what civil defence grant allocations were made to regional councils for 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish Home and Health Department has not been in the practice of making allocations of civil defence grant to regional councils.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what grants have been made to regional councils for the purpose of enabling persons to undertake to serve as civil defence volunteers pursuant to the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) (Scotland) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year;

(2) what grants have been made to regional councils for the attendance on any civil defence training course of members of their staff pursuant to the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) (Scotland) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year;

(3) what grants have been made to regional councils for the training of their own staff and the staff of district councils in their area pursuant to the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) (Scotland) Regulations 1983 since 1 December 1983; and in what year.

Mr. John MacKay: As the grant applications from regional councils do not distinguish these activities in detail, the information requested is not centrally available.

Hospital Catering Services

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he requires health board members to disclose to him particular financial interests which could lead to a conflict of interest when awarding hospital catering services;

(2) whether he requires health board chairmen to disclose to him particular financial interests which could lead to a conflict of interest when awarding contracts for hospital cleaning services.

Mr. John MacKay: Under the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975, chairmen and members of boards are required, if they have any interest in a particular contract and if they are present at a relevant meeting of a board or one of its committees, to declare that interest and take no part in the discussions about the award of the contract.

Mr. Donald Grant

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he was aware of Mr. Donald Grant's business interests when he appointed him as chairman of Tayside health board.

Mr. John MacKay: Yes.

Jordanhill College School

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future of Jordanhill college school.

Mr. Younger: My Department wrote on 18 December to the governing body of Jordanhill college of education about the administration and funding by the college of Jordanhill college school. The letter seeks the views of the governing body on whether the school is still required for the exercise by the college of its functions under part II of the Teachers (Colleges of Education) (Scotland) Regulations 1967. It makes the point that I hold the school in high regard; and it indicates that, if the school is no longer required for the discharge of the functions of the college, my objective would be to secure the establishment of new arrangements which would involve as little disruption as possible for pupils and staff.

Ravenscraig

Mr. Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has made to the representations made to him on 31 October by the Ravenscraig trade union committee.

Mr. Younger: I am arranging to place in the Library a copy of a letter which has been sent to the committee, together with a copy of a letter to me from the chairman of the British Steel Corporation, and the corporation's comments on the committee's representations.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now give details of the effects of the recently-announced increases in hill livestock compensatory allowances, on the graded supplements paid to farmers in the Highlands and Islands Development Board area.

Mr. Younger: Yes. The existing rates of supplement are £2·50, £9·50 and £13 per eligible cow on land classified A, B or C respectively, and 55p per eligible hill sheep.

I have today made a scheme under the powers contained in section 4 of the Congested Districts Act 1897 which, subject to clearance by the European Commission, will increase these supplements in line with those awarded in the less-favoured areas generally. However, because of the payment limit imposed by the European Council regulation EC 797/85, the supplements on cows on B and C class land will be limited to £7·98 a cow which, when added to the new HLCA rate for cows on severely disadvantaged land of £54·50, will give a total payment of £62·48, the maximum permitted by the EC regulation. The new rate of HLCA supplement for cows on A class land will be raised to £3·05, and for all eligible hill sheep to 58p. The increases will apply from 1 January 1986 and their cost will be covered by the provisions already made for such supplements within the Vote for agricultural support in Scotland (Class XV, Vote 1).

TRANSPORT

Traffic Statistics (A45)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report a table of the number of heavy goods vehicles, other commercial vehicles and cars estimated to have travelled along the A45 between Felixstowe and the A11, A12 and A604 roads in the years 1970, 1980 and each of the years since then.

Mrs. Chalker: The Department cannot provide data for the years 1970 to 1982 inclusive. The data for 1983 to 1985 are as set out:

Thousand Vehicles per year

	1983	1984	1985
A45, Between Felixstowe and A12
Cars and Taxis	4,234	4,428	4,599
Heavy Goods Vehicles	1,022	805	840
Other Commercial Vehicles (Light Goods Vehicles)	292	256	256
A45, Between A12 and A11
Cars and Taxis	4,270	4,418	4,563
Heavy Goods Vehicles	1,132	1,244	1,278
Other Commercial Vehicles (Light Goods Vehicles)	438	403	438
A45, At the point where A11 and A45 are the same road
Cars and Taxis	6,205	6,222	6,570
Heavy Goods Vehicles	1,971	2,013	2,081
Other Commercial Vehicles (Light Goods Vehicles)	548	549	584
A45, Between A11 and A604
Cars and Taxis	4,818	4,721	4,891
Heavy Goods Vehicles	1,314	1,391	1,460
Other Commercial Vehicles (Light Goods Vehicles)	365	330	365

A127 (Crash Barriers)

Sir Bernard Braine asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many car accidents involving death or serious injury occurred on the A127 in 1984 and in 1985 to date; in how many cases these were cross-over accidents; and what action he is taking to ensure that crash barriers are installed without further delay in the most vulnerable areas.

Mr. Ridley: The number of car accidents involving death or serious injury on the A127 and the number of these which were cross-over accidents, is as follows:

	1984	1985*
Car accidents	52	18
of which
Cross-over accidents	5	0

*First six months.

It is my intention to install safety barriers along all of the A127 in the eastern region. Some work has already been completed. A contract for the installation of remaining sections will be let in the next financial year. My engineers are assessing the provision of safety barriers along sections of the A127 in London.

Roads (Lighting and Signs)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many miles of the M4 motorway between London and Pont Abraham are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(2) how many miles of the M5 motorway between Birmingham and Exeter are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(3) how many miles of the M3 motorway between London and Southampton are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(4) how many miles of the M2 motorway between Rochester and Faversham are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(5) how many miles of the M62 motorway between Liverpool and Wakefield are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(6) how many miles of the M62 motorway between Hull and Wakefield are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(7) when the advance sign direction on the A1 northbound approaching junction B6275 will be replaced;

(8) when the advance direction signs on the A66 junction with the A66 will be replaced;

(9) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between junctions 26 to 29;

(10) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between Newport Pagnell and junction 18;

(11) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between junction 17 and junction 24;

(12) how many miles of the M6 motorway between Rugby and Carlisle are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(13) how many miles of the M26 between Sevenoaks and Wrotham Heath are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(14) how many miles of the M27 between Cadnam and Portsmouth are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(15) how many miles of the M25 orbital motorway are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(16) how many miles of the M32 between Bristol and Parkway are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(17) how many miles of the M40 between Denham and Oxford are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(18) how many miles of the M10-St. Albans bypass are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(19) how many miles of the M11 between London and Cambridge are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(20) how many miles of the M18 between Rotherham and Goole are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(21) how many miles of the M20 between London and Folkestone are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(22) how many miles of the M23 between Hooley and Pease Pottage are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections.

Mr. Ridley: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost to my Department.

Motorways (Delays)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now take steps to ensure that figures relating to delays of over 30 minutes on the motorway system and their general distribution are published annually by him or the Transport and Road Research Laboratory.

Mrs. Chalker: I have no plans to publish such information for the reasons given in my previous replies to the hon. Member on 6 December 1985 at column 388 and 13 December at column 803.

A19 (Defects)

Mr. Wigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet completed his consideration of the reports of Cleveland county council and the independent consultants into the defects of the A19; what conclusions he has drawn; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The reports have been received. I will make a statement as soon as possible.

British Rail

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance is given by his Department to the British Railways Board about maintaining power on the system and its use of electricity for power, signalling, lighting and other operational matters on days when no services are operated such as Christmas Day.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. These operational matters are the responsibility of the British Railways Board.

Manchester International Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about the future ownership and control of Manchester international airport; and what replies he has sent or will be sending.

Mr. Ridley: Apart from my Department's correspondence with the town clerk of Manchester city council (to which I referred in the answer I gave the right hon. Member on 18 December) I have received a number of letters from hon. Members and others about the future ownership and control of the airport, nearly all of which express opposition to Manchester city's proposals for an airport company. In reply we have generally pointed out that these proposals are, in the first instance, a matter for agreement between the Greater Manchester district councils.

Cars (Spare Wheels)

Mr. Conlan asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what tests have been carried out by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory on skinny, non-standard motor car spare wheels; and what conclusions the laboratory has arrived at;

(2) if he has had any discussions with the Commission of the European Economic Community on the use of skinny, non-standard motor car spare wheels; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations he has received on the use of skinny, non-standard motor car spare wheels; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what estimates have been made of the number of cars currently in use in the United Kingdom that are equipped with skinny, non-standard spare wheels.

Mrs. Chalker: We estimate there are 60,000 cars on our roads supplied with a temporary use spare wheel/tyre. The Transport and Road Research Laboratory has carried out tests which have shown a car's braking and cornering abilities remain satisfactory under normal conditions, but if the car is driven at its limits of braking or cornering it could be more difficult to control than if fitted with a normal wheel.

The European Commission has not to our knowledge held any recent discussions on this subject. Recent international work has taken place under the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe which has now published regulation 64 containing safety requirements for temporary use spare wheels.

In the near future we shall be consulting on draft regulations which would permit the temporary use of these spares on our roads providing the vehicle is not driven at a speed exceeding 50 mph. New vehicles supplied with a temporary use spare wheel would have to meet the safety requirements of ECE regulation 64. Some representations have already been received, but this consultation exercise will allow all the organisations concerned to study our proposals in full and to make representations.

Efficiency Scrutinies

Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions he has come to on recent efficiency scrutinies carried out in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Copies of the scrutiny of marine examinations and the certification of seamen, incorporating our response, have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies of the scrutinies of the identification and development of internal talent, and of the management of office accommodation, again incorporating our response, have also today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The latter two scrutinies were carried out jointly with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment's Department. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General how much money has been directed towards the funding of the youth training scheme from the European social fund.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The youth training scheme has been allocated the following amounts from the European social fund since its introduction in 1983:

Year	Period covered	Social fund allocation £
1983	1 September 1983 to 31 March 1984	70,866,334
1984	1 April 1984 to 31 December 1984	137,949,591
1985 (to date)*	1 January 1984 to 31 December 1985	90,132,802

* A further allocation of about £3·6 million for 1985 is expected.

Information Technology

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what action he is taking to increase the facilities for information technology training in the north-west.

Mr. Trippier: Precise information about provision in the north-west is not readily available, but I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and will place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Self-Employment

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he will ensure that statistics about self-employment are made available at more regular intervals than at present; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Firm estimates of the numbers in self-employment are based on the censuses of population, the latest of which was for 1981, updated by annual results from the labour force survey. Quarterly totals for Great Britain are derived by interpolation or extrapolation. The next firm estimates, for 1985, will be available in the spring when the results of the 1985 labour force survey become available. My officials are examining ways in which the range and quality of the estimates of self-employment might be improved.

Job Creation

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what proportion of new jobs created in the past two years have been in Greater London and the south-east region.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information about job gains and job losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

Between June 1983 and June 1985 (the latest date for which figures are availabale) the civilian employed labour force in the south-east region grew by 332,000; equal to 51 per cent. of the net increase in the civilian employed labour force in Great Britain.

Comparable figures are not available for Greater London but over the same period the number of employees in employment in the area rose by 6,000; equal to 2·5 per cent. of the net increase in the number of employees in employment in Great Britain.

The net increases in the civilian employed labour force and employees in employment in Great Britain between June 1983 and June 1985 were the result of increases in some regions, including the south-east, and decreases in others.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Paymaster General how many of those in Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire and the Thames Valley who have voluntarily withdrawn their claims to unemployment benefit as a result of the recent benefit fraud exercise were previously registered as unemployed in the Hertfordshire, West constituency.

Mr. Alan Clark: Twenty nine people who were claiming unemployment benefit within the Hertfordshire, West constituency voluntarily withdrew their claims to benefit as a result of the recent fraud exercise in Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire.

Mr. Meacher asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to the proportion and number of (a) male and (b) female full-time workers (i) nationally and (ii) in each standard ecomomic planning region who earned (1) with overtime and (2) without overtime less than (x) £60 per week in 1979 and (y) £110 per week in 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information relating to full-time adult employees in the new earnings surveys for April 1979 and April 1985 is as set out:

	Percentage earning less than:
	£60 per week in 1979		£110 per week in 1985
	†Males	‡Females	‖Males	‖Females
Gross weekly earnings*
South East	6·4	41·8	9·0	32·9
East Anglia	10·7	59·3	13·1	51·4
South West	11·8	60·5	14·9	51·1
West Midlands	7·0	56·6	12·8	52·9
East Midlands	8·4	59·8	13·9	55·1
Yorkshire & Humberside	8·6	61·0	13·6	48·6
North West	8·7	58·2	13·0	48·6
North	8·1	60·2	13·1	52·0
England	7·9	52·4	11·8	44·0
Scotland	9·3	59·5	14·2	51·5
Wales	9·9	56·8	14·4	49·9
Great Britain	8·1	53·3	12·1	45·0

	Percentage earning less than:
	£60 per week in 1979		£110 per week in 1985
	†Males	‡Females	‖Males	‖Females
Gross weekly earnings (excluding overtime)*
South East	10·1	44·1	12·9	35·1
East Anglia	19·3	61·2	21·7	53·7
South West	17·4	62·4	21·3	54·0
West Midlands	11·4	58·8	18·7	55·2
East Midlands	14·6	62·6	21·6	57·8
Yorkshire & Humberside	14·4	63·3	20·0	55·2
North West	14·1	60·4	18·5	51·5
North	12·6	62·3	18·0	54·4
England	12·8	54·6	17·1	46·5
Scotland	14·9	62·2	20·7	54·5
Wales	14·5	58·7	19·7	51·7
Great Britain	13·0	55·6	17·6	47·5

*Where earnings were not affected by absence.
†Aged 21 and over.
‡Aged 18 and over.
‖On adult rates.

The numbers corresponding to the percentages for Great Britain are estimated to be:

Millions

	Males	Females	Males	Females
Gross weekly earnings	0·9	2·8	1·3	2·1
Gross weekly earnings (excluding overtime)	1·5	2·9	1·8	2·2

Mr. Meacher asked the Paymaster General what was the number and rate per 1,000 of the population of people unemployed (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region in each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table shows the available information, which is also in the Library. Figures are given for the United Kingdom and the standard economic planning regions for November of each year since 1979. They are adjusted for discontinuities and relate to unemployed claimants, seasonally adjusted excluding school leavers. Unemployment rates are the number of unemployed expressed as a percentage of employees in employment plus the unemployed. Precise unemployment figures for social security regions are not available except at disproportionate cost.

Unemployed claimants—seasonally adjusted excluding school leavers—November each year

Thousands

	1979		1980		1981		1982		1983		1984		1985
	Number	Rate	Number	Rate	Number	Rate	Number	Rate	Number	Rate	Number	Rate	Number	Rate
United Kingdom	1,145·7	4·7	1,844·6	7·6	2,503·8	10·3	2,780·0	11·5	2,947·2	12·3	3,097·1	12·8	3,165·2	13·1
South East	225·0	2·9	380·9	4·9	565·7	7·3	643·2	8·3	698·1	9·0	744·1	9·4	764·5	9·7
East Anglia	27·0	3·7	45·0	6·1	60·9	8·2	71·3	9·6	73·6	9·7	75·7	9·9	80·3	10·5
South West	76·7	4·6	114·7	6·8	152·3	9·0	167·4	9·9	180·0	10·7	194·4	11·4	201·2	11·8
West Midlands	109·4	4·7	201·4	8·6	290·7	12·5	320·3	14·0	329·5	14·6	335·2	14·9	335·9	14·9
East Midlands	62·0	3·8	112·1	6·9	150·2	9·3	166·5	10·3	179·5	11·3	192·3	12·0	195·8	12·3
Yorkshire & Humberside	98·7	4·7	171·7	8·2	231·7	11·1	257·3	12·5	267·6	13·1	285·0	14·0	294·2	14·5
North West	168·2	5·9	265·3	9·3	356·2	12·7	394·7	14·2	419·0	15·1	429·9	15·5	433·8	15·6
North	99·9	7·3	143·8	10·7	184·3	14·1	199·4	15·4	211·2	16·7	225·6	17·9	225·9	17·9
Wales	68·8	6·2	112·4	10·3	142·0	13·2	154·7	14·5	159·1	15·0	170·8	16·0	172·8	16·2
Scotland	154·3	6·8	217·9	9·6	277·0	12·2	300·1	13·2	313·9	14·0	325·9	14·4	336·7	14·9
Northern Ireland	55·6	9·6	79·3	13·6	92·8	16·0	105·1	18·2	115·7	20·0	118·2	20·3	124·0	21·3

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what was the distribution of loans on the loan guarantee scheme by (a) amount loaned, (b) number of employees in the company and (c) turnover of the company to which money has been loaned for each year since the introduction of the scheme in 1981.

Mr. Trippier: The following information is available:

A. Loans covered by the loan guarantee scheme since its inception in 1981 broken down by size of loan

Amount of loan £	Number of loans	Percentage of total
0 to 15,000	5,558	30
15,001 to 30,000	5,368	29
30,001 to 45,000	2,434	13
45,001 to 60,000	2,101	11
60,001 to 75,000	2,880	16

Notes:

(a) The maximum size of loan under the scheme has been £75,000 throughout the period.

(b) A business may obtain more than one loan (up to a cumulative maximum of £75,000). The figures given are for the number of loans.

B. Employment data are collected from time to time in sample surveys of firms receiving loans under the scheme. The following information is derived from the latest survey data on loans issued in the stated period

Number employed	Percentage of firms in size categories
	1981	1982	1983	mid 1984-85
0 to 5	24	25	26	47
5½ to 10	38	33	38	22
10½ to 15	11	18	15	10
15½ to 20	11	4	7	9
Over 20	16	20	24	12

Notes:

(a) Part-time employees are counted as ½.

(b) Data relates to loans in force and employment at the time of the survey.

C. The following information on turnover is on the same basis as the employment information in B above

Turnover range £	Percentage of firms in size categories
	1981	1982	1983	mid 1984-85
Up to 100,000	22	27	22	29
100,001 to 200,000	30	25	19	31
200,001 to 300,000	14	6	11	10
300,001 to 400,000	19	8	17	8
400,001 to 500,000	11	4	9	8
500,001 to 750,000	3	12	13	6
750,001 to 1 million	0	12	2	7
Over 1 million	3	6	7	7

Note:

Figures give estimated annual turnover at the time of the survey.

Business (Safety Regulations)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what changes in safety regulations for businesses have been implemented since the publication of "Burdens on Business".

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Since the report "Burdens on Business" was published in March 1985, the following regulations have been made under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974:

The Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1985.

The Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Amendment Regulation 1985.

The Explosives (Licensing of Stores and Registration of Premises) Fees Regulations 1985.

The Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985.

The Baking and Sausage-Making (Christmas and New Year) Regulations 1985.

Community Programme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General what is the minimum number of job hours per week that must be available in order for a part-time community programme place to be included as a vacancy in the monthly unfilled vacancy totals.

Mr. Alan Clark: Community programme jobs must be for at least two days or 16 hours if spread over more than two days.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many of the 24,000 community programme places listed as unfilled vacancies for November 1985 were for part-time jobs.

Mr. Alan Clark: There were about 18,000 unfilled part-time community programme vacancies on 8 November. Part-time jobs on the programme are defined as those involving work for less than 35 hours per week.

Business (Deregulation)

Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Paymaster General what progress has been made in deregulation since the publication of the White Paper, "Lifting the Burden."

Mr. Trippier: We have made good progress on deregulation and a number of the proposals set out in the White Paper "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571) are being implemented. My right hon. and noble Friend has set up the enterprise and deregulation unit reporting directly to him, and procedures for monitoring the impact of new regulations on business have been introduced.

Steps so far taken to reduce burdens on business include the extension to two years of the qualifying period in unfair dismissal cases, the introduction of new building regulations, the publication of a review of the use classes order and proposals for amending legislation on wages councils and women's hours of work.

My right hon. and noble Friend has announced the Government's intention to publish a second White Paper on deregulation in the spring.

Small Firms

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Paymaster General what is the estimated number of people employed in small firms.

Mr. Trippier: While accurate information on employment in small firms is not available, small firms probably provide employment for over one quarter of the employed labour force. The Department is investigating possible methods of improving the quality of information on the level of employment in small firms without increasing the burdens on small businesses.

Local Enterprise Agencies

Mr. Evennett asked the Paymaster General if he will seek to encourage local authorities to become more involved in local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Trippier: I am anxious to see local authorities support their local enterprise agencies, but this is a decision which rests with them. I would not like to see local authorities reduce their support as a result of the recently announced new funding scheme for local enterprise agencies. The strength of the local enterprise agency movement lies in the fact that they are a partnership of local interests both private and public. This is the reason why they are so successful.

Trade Unions (Ballots)

Dr. Twinn asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to the manner in which trade unions are fulfilling the obligations laid upon them by recent legislation concerning the maintenance of political funds and the holding of ballots of their memberships.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Twenty seven of the unions which will have to hold ballots before 31 March 1986 if they wish to retain their political funds have already done so. These ballots have been held under rules approved by the certification officer and have generally been free from complaint about the ballot procedures.

The campaign that the TUC has been co-ordinating has been less honest. Some unions have failed to make it clear that they need a political fund only if they wish to spend money on party political or electoral matters. They have misrepresented the changes made by the Trade Unions Act 1984 to the definition of "political objects". That legislation did no more than clarify and bring up to date the definition provided by the Trade Union Act 1913. They have argued misleadingly that unions' ability to campaign on their members' behalf will be constrained without a fund. They have omitted to tell their members how much of their political funds go directly to the Labour party.

All the unions conducting political fund review ballots have an obligation under the 1913 Act to advise members of their right not to pay the levy. Most have adopted rules which oblige them to notify members individually. I hope they will do so and that thereafter they will comply with the TUC's undertaking to ensure that all members are freely and effectively able to exercise their right to contract out of payment.

THE ARTS

Liverpool Empire and Philharmonic Halls

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts if he will take steps to seek to ensure that the Liverpool Empire and Philharmonic Halls do not lose grant as a result of the abolition of Merseyside county council, following the decision of the Arts Council not to fund them in 1986.

Mr. Luce: Grants to individual arts bodies are a matter for the Arts Council to determine. It has long been the policy of the council to support artists rather than buildings and on this basis it announced recently that it did not feel able to use any of the £25 million post-abolition funding allocated to it by the Government to fund receiving theatres such as the Liverpool Empire and Philharmonic Hall in the abolition areas.

The council has, however, made clear that it is prepared to take into account any increase in funding for these theatres from the successor authorities, when it considers the funding of the other arts organisations in the areas affected. I hope that the successor authorities will now enter into serious discussions with the Arts Council and regional arts associations with a view to devising suitable joint funding arrangements which will safeguard all the arts organisations in their areas.

NATIONAL FINANCE

MO (Percentage Rise)

Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what percentage MO rose in the 12-month periods to the beginning of each month since May 1979.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Figures are not available for the beginning of each calendar month. The figures for 12-month increases are derived mainly from the average of the levels for the Wednesdays of each banking month.

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
January		12·6	4·7	5·8	2·9	6·0	5·4
February		10·3	6·1	3·9	3·4	6·3	5·4
March		10·0	6·5	2·7	5·3	5·7	5·3
April		9·7	7·1	1·7	6·1	4·9	6·0
May	14·4	8·8	7·4	0·3	6·7	5·2	5·4
June	12·5	9·5	4·8	2·8	6·4	5·5	5·2
July	11·1	8·7	6·3	1·3	6·3	5·8	5·1
August	12·3	8·4	4·7	1·8	6·6	5·4	4·5
September	12·4	8·0	5·1	2·3	6·4	5·3	4·2
October	13·0	6·5	5·3	2·6	6·7	5·5	3·4
November	13·3	5·3	4·4	3·4	6·4	5·6
December	12·1	5·6	4·4	4·0	6·5	6·5

Full details of the average month series for MO are given in the March 1984 Bank of England "Quarterly Bulletin" (pages 78 and 80).

Value Added Tax

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current turnover for value added tax; and what are the equivalent figures for the other member states of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke: The current United Kingdom VAT registration threshold is £19,500 taxable turnover per annum. The sterling equivalents of the thresholds in other member states are:

Member State
Belgium	Nil
Denmark	£ 739	taxable turnover
France	£ 118	tax liability
Germany	£ 5,362	taxable turnover
Ireland	£20,636	Taxable turnover where 90 per cent. of turnover is derived from goods;
		or
	£ 9,905	for other traders
Italy	Nil
Luxembourg	£ 2,645	taxable turnover
Netherlands	£ 546	tax liability

Note:
Exchange rates as at 25 November 1985. Greece has not yet introduced VAT.

Public Borrowing

Mr. Beith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the projected level of public borrowing in 1986-87.

Mr. MacGregor: Various differing suggestions have been made.

Johnson Matthey Bankers

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the City on the proposed sale of Johnson Matthey Bankers.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None. The sale of Johnson Matthey Bankers is a matter for the Bank of England.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Merchant asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the present level of manufacturing exports compares with the level in 1978.

Mr. MacGregor: The value of manufactured exports in 1984 was £47 billion compared to £28 billion in 1978.

Family Taxation

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the level of indirect taxation, as a percentage of income, levied on a married man with two children earning (a) £8,000 and (b) £20,000 per annum in 1979 and the latest year for which figurs are available.

Mr. Brooke: Estimates of indirect tax payments cannot reliably be made at earnings levels as high as £20,000 in 1979-80. Estimates for a married man with two children earning £8,000 in 1979-80 and the same amount in real terms in 1985-86 are as follows:

Indirect taxes as a percentage of gross income

	Percentage
1979-80	10·6
1985-86	11·0

Energy Efficiency Projects

Mr. Wallace asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is considering any fiscal incentives for industry to invest in energy efficiency projects.

Mr. Moore: Our tax policy is designed to provide adequate incentives for all worthwhile projects, including those directed at improved energy efficiency.

European Monetary System

Mr. Livsey asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has recently received concerning joining the European monetary system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The United Kingdom is already a member of the European monetary system but does not participate in the exchange rate mechanism, regarding which the position is kept under regular review. My right hon. Friend has received representations on this subject from the CBI and a number of others.

Stamp Duty

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received representations concerning the thresholds for stamp duty.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations concerning the stamp duty threshold.

Oil Revenue

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his estimates for oil revenue for the year 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: I have nothing to add to my right hon. Friend's opening remarks in the debate on the autumn statement on 12 December 1985 at column 180.

Double Taxation (Canada)

Mr. Dover asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what concessions he was able to obtain from Canada in relation to the Double Taxation Relief (Taxes on Income) (Canada) Order 1985.

Mr. Moore: The provisions of double taxation agreements represent a package of measures which both countries are able to accept as part of a fair and balanced treaty. Among the changes of benefit to the United Kingdom in the new Canadian agreement are the reductions in the Canadian withholding tax on dividends from direct investment in Canada, in the Canadian branch profits tax, and in the withholding tax on interest. In addition, there are provisions which will benefit United Kingdom pensioners living in Canada.

Mr. Dover asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he had regarding the provisions of Article 27A of the Double Taxation Relief (Taxes on Income) (Canada) Order 1985.

Mr. Moore: The usual press release was issued announcing that negotiations would take place on possible changes to the existing United Kingdom/Canada double taxation convention and inviting representations from interested parties. No detailed consultations took place on individual articles.

Mr. Dover asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he has not exempted existing contracts from the provisions of the Double Taxation Relief (Taxes on Income) (Canada) Order 1985.

Mr. Moore: It would not be normal practice to include an open-ended exemption of this kind in a double taxation agreement.

Inland Revenue (Waste)

Mr. Higgins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why five income tax assessments were sent from the same Inland Revenue office to a constituent of the right hon. Member for Worthing on the same day in separate envelopes; and what steps he proposes to take to avoid such waste of public funds and resources.

Mr. Moore: Tax districts have instructions to make arrangements to ensure that, as far as possible, all notices of assessment are issued in the same envelope. Without details of my right hon. Friend's constituent I cannot comment specifically on his case.

Sub-Saharan Africa (Government Debt)

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of the amount of outstanding Government debt to countries in sub-Saharan Africa and if he will give a breakdown by country.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 3 December 1985, c. 176]: Capital repayments outstanding on loan disbursements from the official United Kingdom aid programme and by the Commonwealth Development Corporation to developing countries in sub-Saharan Africa totalled £132 million and £281 million, respectively, at the most recent dates for which the information is available (31 March or 30 September 1985 for the former, and 30 September 1985 for the latter). Interest already due on these disbursements but not yet received by the same dates amounted to £2 million on the aid programme loans and £5 million on the CDC loans. A breakdown of the total capital repayments and interest by country is as follows.

Outstanding principal due under contracts with sub-Saharan African countries guaranteed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department totalled £2,608 million at 30 September 1985. Past interest already due but not yet received and future interest related to the outstanding amount totalled £573 million at the same date. It has been the practice of successive Administrations not to make public ECGD's involvement with particular countries.

	United Kingdom Aid Programme	Commonwealth Development Corporation
Botswana		18·5
Cameroon	0·2	24·8
Gambia		0·8
Ghana	0·8	2·5
Ivory Coast	0·2	15·1
Kenya		47·6
Lesotho		1·9
Liberia	0·1	7·1
Malawi		39·3
Mauritius	11·1	2·9
Nigeria	9·8	6·9
Senegal	1·1
Seychelles	9·6	1·8
Sierra Leone		1·6
Sudan		1·2
Swaziland	13·7	23·0
Tanzania		23·2
Uganda		2·1
Zambia	42·6	51·1
Zimbabwe	44·7	15·1
Total	*133·7	286·5
Capital	†131·7	281·4
Interest	2·0	5·1

* Total does not add up due to roundings.

† This includes a very small amount of interest that cannot be separated.

Taxation Revenue

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the additional income to the Exchequer if (a) all present tax allowances and (b) those tax reliefs for which estimates can be made are set against the standard rate of tax only.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 9 December 1985, c. 542]: The cost at 1985-86 levels of income of allowing personal tax allowances at rates in excess of the basic rate of income tax is estimated to be about £490 million. Information on the similar cost of other income tax reliefs is available only in respect of mortgage interest, retirement annuity premiums and employees' superannuation contributions; in total it is about £530 million. It is not possible to estimate precisely the combined yield from restricting these reliefs and personal allowances to the basic rate, but it is thought to be about £1,150 million.

Mutual Organisations (Recognition)

Mr. Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of the Bank of England towards granting recognition under the Banking Act to mutual organisations.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985, c. 806]: Under the terms of the Banking Act 1979, the Bank of England may only authorise a United Kingdom organisation as a recognised bank or licensed deposit-taker if that organisation is a body corporate or a partnership meeting the other minimum criteria specified in the Act.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Food (Irradiation Techniques)

47. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any recent representations about the use of irradiation techniques in respect of food for domestic consumption; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: A few representations about food irradiation have been received recently from hon. Members, organisations and members of the public. We expect to publish the forthcoming report on the subject by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods early in 1986 for public comment. The representations already received will be fully considered in the light of the report, along with other comments received on it.

Social Security

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the further consultative papers foreshadowed in his White Paper on social security.

Mr. Newton: The Department has issued two consultation papers today seeking views on proposals for a statutory maternity allowance scheme and changes to the industrial injuries scheme as foreshadowed in paragraphs 5.22 and 5.9 of the recent White Paper on social security.* Comments on both papers have been requested by 15 February 1986. I am arranging for copies of the papers to be placed in the Library and in the Vote Office.

As I informed the House yesterday in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley) at columns 229-30, a consultation paper on proposed changes in benefits for students, along the lines indicated in paragraph 3.34 of the White Paper, will be published early in the new year.

* Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action (Cmnd. 9691.)

McColl Report

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he now expects to publish the McColl report on artifical limb and appliance centres.

Mr. Newton: I regret to say that it has not proved practicable to publish the report before Christmas, as we originally expected. We therefore intend to publish it as soon as possible after the forthcoming recess.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many kidney transplants took place in 1984; and how that compares with the three previous years.

Mr. Whitney: According to data supplied by the United Kingdom transplant service, the number of cadaveric renal transplant operations performed in the United Kingdom in 1984 was 1,443. This compares with 1,144 such operations performed in 1983, 1,070 in 1982, and 905 in 1981.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to find out how many patients with chronic renal failure might benefit from treatment.

Mr. Whitney: The assessment of whether individul renal patients would benefit from treatment is a matter for the clinical judgment of the doctors involved. The most recent formal study in 1978 indicated that each year between 45 and 50 new chronic renal failure patients per million population might benefit from treatment. Although the incidence of renal failure has not changed since then, improving techniques are making it possible to extend the range of patients who can be successfully treated.

NHS Privatisation

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services pursuant to the answer of 25 November, Official Report, columns 499-502, whether the figures quoted for estimated annual savings from putting services out to tender were all calculated following a standard procedure.

Mr. Hayhoe: This information is extracted from returns submitted by health authorities giving their estimates of the savings which will be made.

Private Practice

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 9 December, Official Report, columns 499-506, why the number of authorised amenity beds fell between 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Hayhoe: Authorisation of amenity beds is delegated to health authorities. The total number decreased between 1983 and 1984 because that was the net effect of authorities' decisions.

Health Authorities (Revenue Allocations)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now reply to the question No. 70 of the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras tabled for answer on 4 December concerning revenue allocations to London health authorities.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 17 December at columns 145-48.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what the chairmen of the Bloomsbury, City and Hackney, Lewisham and North Southwark, West Lambeth and Lambeth social health districts have represented to him about the adequacy of funding of their health authorities in the talks he had with them in the current year.

Mr. Hayhoe: There have been no such talks this year with the chairmen of these district health authorities. Funding by district health authorities is a matter for the regional health authorities concerned.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will bear in mind any sponsorship arrangements when allocating funds to regional health authorities; and whether he expects regional health authorities to bear sponsorship funds in mind when allocating funds to districts.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

NHS (Consultants)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the health authorities which have instituted formal arrangements to monitor consultants' commitment to National Health Service work;

(2) if he will list the health authorities which have instituted disciplinary proceedings against consultants in relation to their commitment to National Health Service work.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the present monitoring by health authorities of consultants' commitment to National Health Service work.

Mr. Hayhoe: Consultants' sessional commitments to National Health Service work depend upon their individual contracts. It is for their employing authorities to satisfy themselves that the terms of those contracts are being met and, where this is not the case, to take appropriate action. If prima facie evidence of the failure of a consultant to meet the terms of his contract were to come to my notice, I would ensure that it was drawn to the attention of the employing authority.

Teaching Hospitals

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each region and for England in 1985-86 (a) the revenue allocation, (b) the growth addition in revenue over 1984-85 after allowing for movements in National Health Service pay and prices, (c) the service increment for teaching, (d) the capital allocation, (e) the percentage share of their weighted population entitlement and (f) the central capital contribution to major teaching hospital schemes.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the index for the movement of National Health Service pay and prices since 1970, expressing 1970 costs as 100; and whether separate indices are used to deflate health service costs in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NHS (Staff)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 1978-79 and for 1984-85 the average pay levels for the following categories of National Health Service staff (a) nursing and midwifery, (b) medical and dental, (c) professional and technical, (d) works, (e) maintenance, (f) administrative and clerical and (g) ancillary, expressing the figures for 1984-85 both in money terms and in 1978-79 terms, as deflated by the retail prices index.

Mr. Whitney: Figures for 1978-79 are not available in any form. The following average gross weekly earnings for full-time staff in 1984-85 are estimated from returns supplied by 10 English regions.

	(1) Average gross weekly earnings 1984-85	(1) Col (1) deflated by RPI to show 1978-79 equivalent
	£	£
a. nursing and midwifery	128.14	72.48
b. medical and dental	[Reliable estimates not available]
c. professional and technical	146.36	82.78
d. works	221.73	125.41
e. maintenance	159.42	90.17
f. administrative and clerical	123.92	70.09
g. ancillary	111.67	63.16

Amenity Beds

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each regional health authority and for England as a whole the number of authorised amenity beds, the average daily number of occupied amenity beds, the number of discharges and deaths of amenity patients and the income under section 63 of the National Health Service Act 1977 for each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested is given in the tables.

Table 1 Number of authorised amenity beds on 31 December each year in NHS hospitals

*Region	1979	1980	1981	1982*	1983	1984
Northern	216	230	219	215	218	212
Yorkshire	262	264	282	256	309	289
Trent	283	306	280	288	198	175
East Anglian	49	59	50	53	54	47
North West Thames*	88	111	108	92	96	109
North East Thames*	163	127	127	116	86	94
South East Thames*	140	143	189	160	183	164
South West Thames*	328	190	167	173	110	105
Wessex	177	157	146	144	144	144
Oxford	103	79	85	79	79	75
South Western	136	131	200	129	118	123
West Midlands	291	207	203	177	173	159
Mersey	200	198	223	185	172	137
North Western	194	169	167	122	115	118
Special Health Authorities and Boards of Governors*	49	55	58	54	36	27
England†	2,679	2,426	2,504	2,243	2,091	1,978

* Because of NHS restructuring in 1982 the regional figures are not strictly comparable over the whole period.
† Regional figures may not sum exactly to the England total because of rounding.

Table 2 Average daily number of beds occupied by amenity patients in NHS hospitals

*Region	1979	1980	1981	1982*	1983	1984
Northern	8·7	12·5	17·2	9·0	7·8	8·5
Yorkshire	55 7	51·1	54·4	39·5	35·8	30·9
Trent	25·8	34·2	17·6	17·5	10·5	5·9
East Anglian	3·0	1·8	5·0	1·2	1·1	5·6
North West Thames*	11·1	26·8	21·3	4·9	13·2	8·3
North East Thames*	29·1	10·0	11·2	20·9	11·5	5·8
South East Thames*	8·5	7·9	3·1	2·6	4·4	14·7
South West Thames*	53·4	58·4	35·5	52·9	27·8	17·0
Wessex	15·1	11·5	11·6	10·5	8·5	8·7
Oxford	12·6	4·6	7·1	5·6	4·0	3·6
South Western	8·7	11·4	5·6	5·3	5·2	4·1
West Midlands	8·4	8·7	9·4	4·1	4·0	2·1
Mersey	16·9	15·8	13·4	9·8	9·6	7·7
North Western	12·1	19·3	20·3	12·3	9·4	7·5
Special Health Authorities and Boards of Governors*	10·5	12·3	12·9	7·7	7·5	2·4
England†	279·6	286·3	245·6	203·8	160·3	132·8

* Because of NHS restructuring in 1982 the regional figures are not strictly comparable over the whole period.
† Regional figures may not sum exactly to the England total because of rounding.

Table 3 Discharges and deaths of amenity patients in NHS hospitals

*Region	1979	1980	1981	1982*	1983	1984
Northern	444	625	484	516	414	431
Yorkshire	1,485	1,495	1,638	1,280	1,311	1,104

Region*	1979	1980	1981	*1982	1983	1984
Trent	272	299	265	202	279	124
East Anglian	125	119	108	85	71	73
North West Thames*	467	580	743	375	360	378
North East Thames*	1,180	470	547	463	283	370
South East Thames*	271	277	152	166	235	1,017
South West Thames*	512	613	394	640	462	497
Wessex	411	429	412	338	293	276
Oxford	247	218	266	206	171	158
South Western	358	337	204	269	264	196
West Midlands	233	255	247	205	230	181
Mersey	657	645	595	489	447	449
North Western	735	1,128	1,375	879	723	628
Special Health Authorities and Boards of Governors*	475	530	542	492	501	363
England†	7,872	8,020	7,972	6,605	6,044	6,245

* Because of NHS restructuring in 1982 the regional figures are not strictly comparable over the whole period.
† Regional figures may not sum exactly to the England total because of rounding.

Income under section 63 of the National Health Service Act 1977

Table 4

Region	1979-80 £	1980-81 £	1981-82 £	1982-83 £	1983-84 £	1984-85 £
Northern	11,488	13,345	17,177	22,996	27,118	26,997
Yorkshire	32,433	34,461	36,607	62,102	66,623	55,746
Trent	25,916	22,638	16,962	27,239	21,728	18,727
East Anglian	3,099	2,308	3,167	6,075	4,235	4,564
North West Thames*	10,356	15,769	8,495	*17,205	24,180	18,023
North East Thames*	17,368	14,414	14,794	*17,379	26,082	18,285
South East Thames*	9,936	7,540	6,118	*15,631	27,146	34,319
South West Thames*	23,427	21,334	17,040	*35,197	27,459	35,870
Wessex	14,443	29,533	40,150	33,532	28,096	26,671
Oxford	8,326	7,367	9,006	16,063	12,278	10,599
South Western	11,476	12,156	8,015	20,527	17,281	16,630
West Midlands	7,552	8,626	6,977	11,441	14,714	12,171
Mersey	16,779	17,531	18,781	23,494	25,604	23,607
North Western	22,203	25,756	29,330	36,956	46,013	33,300
London SHAs*	8,833	5,940	8,680	*22,850	20,780	10,060
Total (England)	223,635	238,718	241,299	368,687	389,337	345,569

* Because of NHS restructuring in 1982 the regional figures are not strictly comparable over the whole period.

Nicorette

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he is not prepared to allow Nicorette and other such substitutes to be supplied on a National Health Service prescription.

Mr. Whitney: The advisory committee on borderline substances which considers anti-smoking preparations has consistently advised that Nicorette and similar preparations should not be prescribed by general practitioners.

Single Payments

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to continue making single payments for draught-proofing under his proposed social fund.

Mr. Newton: We are considering future arrangements for help with draught-proofing with the other Government Departments concerned, in the context of the overall help available to people on low incomes with energy conservation measures.

Families (Disabled Children)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the number of families with more than one disabled child.

Mr. Newton: I regret that information is not available centrally to enable us to make any reliable estimate of the number of families with more than one disabled child.

Funeral Expenses

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he will make to help with funeral expenses following the proposed abolition of the death grant in April 1987 and before the full implementation of his proposed social fund in April 1988.

Mr. Newton: The new arrangements for funeral expenses from 1987 will be consistent with the approach we shall adopt when the full social fund is implemented, as outlined in chapter 4 of the White Paper.

Death Grant

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what savings he estimates will be made in one year as a result of the abolition of the death grant and the introduction of help with funeral expenses under the social fund.

Mr. Newton: The financial effect of replacing the death grant and supplementary benefit single payments for funeral expenses with help under the social fund will depend on a number of factors, including local funeral prices and the extent of recovery from estates under the new scheme, and reliable estimates of the net effect are not available.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the amount of money to be saved in the first full year after transitional arrangements from the housing benefit proposals contained in Cmnd. 9691, showing the amounts to be saved (a) in applying his 20 per cent. contribution requirement for rates, (b) in help with rents and (c) in help with rates, other than the allowance for a 20 per cent. contribution.

Mr. Newton: The White Paper shows that expenditure on housing benefit is expected to be of the order of £450 million less, on the basis of the illustrative assumptions, than if no changes were made to the current scheme. About three quarters of the reduction in expenditure would arise from the 20 per cent. contribution towards domestic rates. Nearly all of the remaining savings would be in housing benefit expenditure on rents.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the cost of housing benefit in (a) 1985-86, (b) 1986-87, (c) 1987-88, (d) 1988-89 and (e) 1989-90, respectively.

Mr. Major: The figures for the total cost of housing benefit underlying the last public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9428) published in January 1985, are £4,330 million in 1985-86, £4,500 million in 1986-87 and £4,600 million in 1987-88 including rate rebates which do not count as public expenditure. Up to date estimates for those years, and an estimate for 1988-89 will be included in the next public expenditure White Paper to be published in January.

Income Support

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much an unemployed single person, aged 24 years and who receives (a) heating additions and (b) the average amount of single payment per annum, will lose in benefit following the introduction of income support, using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), and calculated on (i) a weekly and (ii) a yearly basis;

(2) how much a 60 to 79-year-old single pensioner who currently receives (a) diet, (b) clothing, (c) heating additions and (d) the average single payment help will lose under his new income support scheme, using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691);

(3) how much a pensioner couple who both currently receive (a) diet, (b) clothing, (c) heating additions and (d) the average single payment help and are aged between 60 and 79 years will lose under his new income support scheme using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691);

(4) using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who currently receive supplementary benefit will receive no help under the new income support scheme;

(5) using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who now receive housing benefit will receive no help under the new income support scheme.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what deduction he proposes in income support for the families of workers engaged in industrial disputes.

Mr. Newton: Section 6(1)(b) of the Social Security (No. 2) Act 1980 requires a deduction, now £17, to be made from any supplementary benefit otherwise payable for the dependants of a person involved in a trade dispute. We intend to make similar provision in the income support scheme; and meanwhile, of course, the deduction will continue to be uprated in accordance with section 6(2) of the same Act.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) in his assumption of the pensioner premium for income support in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), what allowance is made for heating additions currently paid;

(2) how allowances for heating will be made under the new income support scheme;

(3) on what basis the assumptions of the basic income support and premium rates for (a) a single pensioner aged under 80 years, (b) a single pensioner over 80 years and (c) a lone parent in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), were calculated.

Mr. Newton: The illustrative assumptions take account of pressures faced by different groups and the present pattern of help, including heating additions.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how exceptionally severe weather allowances will be paid under the new income support scheme.

Mr. Newton: The income support scheme, like the present supplementary benefit scale rates and weekly additions, is designed to make regular weekly payments, not single payments of the kind to which the hon. Member refers.

Child Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what rate of child benefit is assumed in the calculation of gainers and losers in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691).

Mr. Newton: For those tables illustrating the effect of structural reform, the current child benefit rate of £7 is assumed. As for other benefit rates, an uprating factor of 3·25 per cent. in April 1988 is assumed for the tables showing the cash position at the point of change.

Rates and Rent

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many claimants will receive less money in housing benefit as a result of his proposed taper for help with rates;

(2) how many claimants will receive less money in housing benefit as a result of his proposed taper for help with rents.

Mr. Newton: The illustrative tapers form only one element of the basic structural reform of the housing benefit scheme. It is therefore not possible to estimate their separate effects.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the combined cost of single payments, death grant and maternity grant in (a) 1985-86, (b) 1986-87 and (c) 1987-88, respectively.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Social Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the budget for the social fund for its first year of operation.

Mr. Newton: Final decisions have not been taken on the size of the budget.

Public Life (Standards of Conduct)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what advice he has issued to regional health authorities and district health authorities on compliance with the recommendations of the Salmon committee on standards of conduct in public life with reference to interests of members, officers, employees and consultants of authorities and representations received from others, including Members of Parliament;

(2) whether the recommendations of the Salmon committee on standards of conduct in public life apply to the Health Services Board.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how he proposes to provide special protection (a) for women with breaks in work to bring up families, (b) for those who become disabled and (c) for those looking after disabled people, following the proposed abolition of the best-20-years rule in SERPS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services under the proposals in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), on the basis of what number of years life-time average earnings will be calculated for (a) men and (b) women, for the purposes of obtaining full pension entitlement.

Mr. Newton: For people reaching state pensionable age after 4 April 1999, when the 20 best years rule would have come into effect, state earnings related pensions will be calculated on the basis of earnings in all the tax years in their working life between 1978-79, or the tax year in which their 16th birthday falls if later, and the tax year in which a woman reaches age 59 or a man age 64. Years from 1978-79 in which a person does not have sufficient earnings to qualify for basic pension will be excluded from the calculation (provided they do not reduce the total left in the working life to less than 20) if any of the following conditions are satisfied:

(i) they were entitled to home responsibilities protection because they were looking after a child or a disabled or elderly person, or

(ii) they were entitled to national insurance contribution (NIC) credits because of their own incapacity for work, or

(iii) they qualified for NIC credits with invalid care allowance.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the guaranteed minimum level of contributions towards contracted out occupational or personal pension schemes proposed in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), will include both employer and employee contributions.

Mr. Newton: Paragraphs 2.48 to 2.50 of the White Paper explain how guaranteed minimum contributions will be paid to personal pensions. These contributions will include both employers' and employees' shares of the contracted-out national insurance contribution rebate.

The test for a contracted-out money purchase occupational scheme will be that the employer make contributions to the scheme at least equal to the total contracted-out rebate. But he will be entitled to recover up to the employee's share of the rebate from scheme members. This arrangement will leave employers, who choose to do so, free to operate schemes in which employees are not required to make any contributions.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish versions of tables P1-P6 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security," (Cmnd. 9691), showing projections based on current SERPS provisions.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services under the proposals in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), if all employees will have the right to choose between (a) SERPS, (b) occupational pensions and (c) personal portable pensions.

Mr. Newton: All employees will have the right to take an approved personal pension rather than staying fully in the state earnings — related pension scheme or an occupational pension scheme. An employee will have access to an occupational scheme only if his employer operates a scheme which he is eligible to join. The White Paper also makes it clear that once someone has left an occupational scheme to take a personal pension it will be up to his employer whether or not he can rejoin the scheme later on. Any employee, with sufficient earnings to make him eligible, will continue to be fully in SERPS, if he is not in a contracted-out occupational or personal pension scheme.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, under the proposals in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691); if all employees will be able to make additional contributions towards SERPS pensions as well as to occupational and personal pensions.

Mr. Newton: No.

Supplementary Benefit (Statistics)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the number and rate per 1,000 of each category of single payments in the years 1978 to 1985 inclusive;

(2) what was the number and rate per 1,000 of the population of people on supplementary pension (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date;

(3) what was the number and rate per 1,000 of the population of people on supplementary benefit (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date;

(4) what was the number and rate per 1,000 claimants of people who received single payments (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date in 1985 with the average payment; and what proportion were (i) pensioners and (ii) families with children;

(5) what was the ratio of claimants to staff in local offices of his Department (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Hypothermia

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of people who have died each year from 1979 to the latest available year from hypothermia (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not readily available in the exact form requested. However, the number of deaths with a mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, regardless of whether it did or did not appear as the underlying cause of death is shown in the table for England and Wales, and the standard regions for 1979 to 1984, the latest available full year.

Hypothermia deaths: number of mentions, England and Wales and Standard Region of usual residence—1979-1984

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
England and Wales*	862	596	686	664	539	554
Wales	50	34	40	47	24	25
North	73	41	67	57	53	65
Yorkshire and Humberside	146	111	97	103	63	66
East Midlands	74	53	56	48	39	55
East Anglia	94	54	74	76	61	51
South East	52	34	44	33	27	25
South West	240	182	187	200	198	185
West Midlands	60	46	64	47	45	44
North West	73	41	57	53	29	37

* Figures may not cast because of deaths of residents from outside England and Wales.

Mr Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why more people died of hypothermia in the first six months of the current year than in the whole of the previous year.

Mr Whitney: The OPCS records kept on this since 1971 show that the largest number of deaths occurs in the March quarter each year, and in the first quarter of 1985 there were of course two periods of exceptionally cold weather. I have, however, asked officials to analyse recent statistics on deaths where hypothermia was shown as a contributory cause of death, and to let me have a report.

NHS Employees

Mr Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number and rate per thousand of the population of whole time equivalent (a) nurses, (b) midwives, (c) doctors, (d) dentists and (e) health visitors employed in each year from 1978 to 1985 (i) nationally, (ii) in each district health authority and (iii) in each regional health authority.

Mr Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Health Statistics (Amber Valley)

Mr Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how hospital waiting lists in (a) Amber Valley and (b) Derbyshire for 1985 compare with those for 1979.

Mr Whitney: On 31 March 1985, the latest date for which information is available centrally, there were 9,810 hospital inpatient waiting list cases in north and southern Derbyshire district health authorities. The corresponding figure on 31 March 1979 was 10,952. Waiting list information is not available centrally by parliamentary constituency. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairman of the southern Derbyshire district health authority which may be able to provide information relating to Amber Valley.

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the change in the number of doctors, nurses and midwives in (a) Amber Valley and (b) Derbyshire between 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Hayhoe: Figures for Amber Valley are not centrally available. To obtain information to this level of detail the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the south Derbyshire district health authority.

In my reply to my hon. Friend on 13 November, at column 208, I provided figures for doctors, nurses and midwives in Derbyshire for 30 September 1979, 1981 and 1984. The September 1984 figures are the latest available to this level of detail. However, a figure for nurses and midwives combined is available for June 1985. The table shows the changes.

NHS Staff in Derbyshire†‡‖ Whole Time Equivalent‡

	Change
	1979 to 1984 (September 30)	September 1979 to June 1985
Doctors¶—excluding consultants and senior registrars	30	*
Nursing staff‖	540	*
Midwifery staff‖	10	*
Total nursing and midwifery staff‖	550	590
Total doctors,¶ nursing and midwifery staff	580	*

Notes:
* Not available.
† Staff in health authorities covering the county of Derbyshire.
‡ Figures are whole-time equivalent rounded to nearest 10 (Ten). Change is calculated from un-rounded figures.
‖ In 1980 the working week for nursing and midwifery staff is directly attributable to this change.
¶ Includes hospital practitioners, paragraph 94 appointments and locums.

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many new hospitals have been built in (a) Amber Valley, (b) Derbyshire and (c) the east midlands since 1979.

Mr. Whitney: Hospital building schemes completed since 1979 are as follows:

(a) Amber Valley
Nil

(b) Derbyshire
Chesterfield DGH/Phase 1

(c) East Midlands
Glenfield DGH/Phase 1
Kilton (Bassetlaw) DGH/Phase 1
Leicester General/Mental Illness Unit
Leicester Royal Infirmary/Phase 3
Lincoln County/Phase 1
Queens Medical Centre Nottingham/Phase 2

External Consultants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to his answer of 13 December to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras, what was the breakdown between health, social security and social services of the expenditure from 1979 to 1980 to 1984-85 on external consultants.

Mr. Fowler: Expenditure on external consultancies was split between (a) health and personal social services, and, (b) social security as follows:

(£'000, 1984-85 prices)

	Health and Personal Social Services	Social Security
1979-80	59	567
1980-81	46	456
1981-82	76	778
1982-83	125	1,312
1983-84	324	3,460
1984-85	698	7,028

A division of expenditure between health and personal social services is not available.

Hospitals (Staff Sickness)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether his Department is keeping details of hospital and ward closures caused by staff sickness during the current winter.

Mr. Whitney: No. It is for health authorities to deal with the consequences of staff sickness.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people will lose all benefit under the White Paper, "Structural Reforms", taking 20 per cent. rates contribution into account; and what is their client group and family status.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Cervical Cancer Screening

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services further to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, columns 490 and 491, to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras, if he will list those authorities which are running call and recall schemes for cervical cancer screening and those which plan to provide them.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information is as follows:
Aylesbury Vale
Barnsley
Bristol and Weston
Camberwell
Central Manchester
Cheltenham and District
Chichester
Croydon
East Berkshire
Enfield
Exeter
Gloucester
Harrogate
Isle of Wight
Kettering
Mid-Downs
Milton Keynes
Northampton
North Bedfordshire
North Derbyshire
North Devon
North Manchester
North Staffordshire
North Tees
Plymouth
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire
Rochdale
Rotherham

Salford
South Bedfordshire
South Manchester
South Tees
Stockport
Torbay
Winchester
Worthing
Wycombe

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available within his Department on times taken by pathology laboratories to process cervical smears.

Mr. Hayhoe: Very little, as this is a matter for local management.

General Practitioner Surgeries

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people attended general practitioner surgeries in 1979 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Hayhoe: Data are not collected in the form requested. According to the general houshold survey, patients visit their doctors on average about three times per annum.

Post-operative Infection

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the sample information on post-operative infection held by his Department.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Stanley Royd Hospital (Inquiry)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he now expects that the report of the inquiry into the deaths at Stanley Royd hospital will be published.

Mr. Fowler: I have now received the report of the committee of inquiry into the outbreak of food poisoning at the Stanley Royd hospital, Wakefield. I intend to publish the report early in the new year and a full statement will be made at that time. I am most grateful to the chairman and members of the committee for giving up so much of their time to inquire into this outbreak and its tragic consequences.

Cardiac Bypass Treatment

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to take steps to find out how many patients are awaiting cardiac bypass treatment.

Mr. Whitney: No. Waiting list information is collected centrally by consultant specialty and not by type of operation.

Fertility Clinics

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether it is his policy that each National Health Service region should have a clinic providing artificial insemination by donor and in vitro fertilisation, respectively.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) on 10 December, at column 604. This applies also to provision of artificial insemination by donor.

Cost Improvement Programmes

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the money anticipated to be saved by cost improvement programmes in 1986-87.

Mr. Hayhoe: I expect to see an increase on the total of some £150 million which health authorities plan for 1985-86. Regional health authorities will set out their detailed plans in their 1986-87 short-term programmes, which they will be submitting to the Department shortly.

AIDS

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when his Department first became aware that blood products imported from the United States of America might be affected by acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bolton, South-East (Mr. Young) on 10 December, at column 616.

Regional and District Managers

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have been appointed regional or district general managers.

Mr. Hayhoe: Six. One at regional and five at district level.

Nursing Management

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about the post-Griffiths reorganisation of the management of nursing functions.

Mr. Hayhoe: A few letters from hon. Members and others have been received in the last three months.

Hospital (Peterborough)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any representations from the Peterborough health authority about the level of revenue funding in the current year and the proposed level of revenue funding for the new hospital being built there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I have received no such representations from the Peterborough health authority. The allocation of revenue funds to the Peterborough health authority is a matter for the East Anglian regional health authority and the hon. Member may care to contact the regional chairman direct for further details.

Spectacle Frames

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the Minister of State's answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 490, if he will name the companies which have ceased or limited, respectively, production of National Health Service frames; and how many fewer such frames are consequently being produced.

Mr. Hayhoe: Companies manufacturing National Health Service frames are not required to report their production figures, nor are they obliged to advise my Department when they discontinue manufacture.

However, formal and informal contacts indicate that the manufacture of National Health Service frames is now concentrated mainly on the largest companies.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 20 December 1985

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Magistrates (County Palatine)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will enumerate magistrates in the county palatine under the following categories (a) sex, (b) age groupings, (c) occupation, (d) social background, (e) resident or non-resident within their petty sessional area and (f) any political viewpoint or affiliation they have acknowledged.

Mr. Tebbit: This information is not held centrally and could therefore only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. But if the hon. Member would care to write to me about any particular bench, I would do my best to provide the information for which he asks.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Africa (Food Aid)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received advocating using European Economic Community food mountains to relieve starvation in Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: I have received numerous representations on the subject from hon. Members, voluntary organisations and from the general public.

It is not a primary purpose of the food aid programme to reduce EC food surpluses. But the European Community does draw on them as part of a food aid programme which cost about £420 million last year, the United Kingdom share being £91 million. As I have said on a number of occasions, the Government believe the first priority for this programme should be the provision of food aid for the relief of famine.

Between December 1984 and October 1985 about 1·44 million tonnes of cereals were delivered by the Community and its member states to the African countries* worst affected by famine.

*Ethiopia, Sudan, Mali, Mauritania, Chad, Niger, Angola, Mozambique.

ENERGY

National Coal Board

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many establishments other than pits and workshops have been closed by the National Coal Board since the end of the dispute in March; and if he will list them.

Mr. David Hunt: The only establishments other than collieries covered by the provisions of the coal industry's review procedures and closed since the end of the strike are the Caerphilly tar plant of Thomas Ness Ltd. and Derwenthaugh coking works of National Smokeless Fuels Ltd. The closure of other establishments are matters for the National Coal Board's local management on which information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many workshops have been closed by the National Coal Board since the end of the dispute in March; and if will list them.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand from the National Coal Board that seven workshops have closed since the end of the strike in March. They are:

Whitburn
Carcroft
Elsecar
Birdwell
Blackwell
Kirkless
Tondu

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many pits have been closed by the National Coal Board since the end of the dispute in March; and if he will list them.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand from the National Coal Board that 23 collieries have closed since the end of the strike in March. They are:

Brenkley
Herrington
Sacriston
Ackton Hall
Savile
Yorkshire Main
Cortonwood
Brookhouse
Fryston
Moorgreen
Pye Hill
Wolstanton
Bold
Haig
Bedwas
Celynen South
Markham
Treforgan
Penrikyber
Aberpergwm
Abertillery
St. Johns
Garw

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many mineworkers have been redeployed by the National Coal Board from establishments closed since the end of the dispute in March; and how many have opted for voluntary redundancy.

Mr. David Hunt: The redeployment of mineworkers is a matter for the National Coal Board. Between 9 March 1985 and 30 November 1985 some 18,500 men from colliery books took redundancy. The proportion of these who came from establishments closed since the end of the dispute could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Energy Efficiency Year

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what are the targets and plans established for domestic sector activity in Energy Efficiency Year.

Mr. David Hunt: The purpose of Energy Efficiency Year is to increase awareness and up-take of appropriate measures as a contribution to the energy efficiency office's objective of a 20 per cent. improvement in energy efficiency by 1995. Present Government programmes relevant to the domestic sector will continue through the year: these include the homes insulation scheme; a review of the thermal insulation standards for new dwellings; demonstration projects for energy efficiency measures in new and existing (including rehabilitated) dwellings; and financial support for the voluntary insulation projects. The office's domestic publicity campaign includes an information pack for householders as a response to enquiries resulting from national advertising, and part-sponsorship of a win-a-house competition. In addition, the fuel utilities, energy efficiency industries and other bodies are organising events, many of them aimed at the domestic sector. The Office's information pack on "Monergy '86" included the initial list of such events, and further events are being organised.

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of expenditure in energy efficiency will be committed to the domestic sector; and what is the total amount to be spent.

Mr. David Hunt: I will reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what plans he has to brief systematically consumer and voluntary organisations on his plans for Energy Efficiency Year.

Mr. David Hunt: Several thousand information packs on Energy Efficiency Year have been distributed to organisations interested in energy efficiency. Five hundred packs were sent to neighbourhood energy action, the national coordinating body for voluntary insulation projects for distribution to voluntary groups.

WALES

Member's Correspondence

Mr. Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now reply to the letter sent to him on 24 October by the hon. Member for Gower concerning the status of approved Welsh Office schemes for the repair of Cornish-unit type houses.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A reply was sent on 18 December.

Capital Investment

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has anything to add to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, columns 654-6, concerning gross capital expenditure in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I regret that, due to an error in compiling the table, the figures in cash terms for local environmental services (including the urban programme) were wrongly quoted for the years 1980-81, 1984-85 and 1985-86. The correct figures are £63 million, £77 million and £97 million respectively.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Timber

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total value of (a) imports and (b) exports of (i) hardwood and (ii) softwood timber in each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984; and if he will also give details of the value of home-produced timber (1) hardwood and (2) softwood for each of these years and show in each case the total used on the home market.

Mr. Channon: The information is as follows:

Value £ million

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
(i) Hardwood
United Kingdom imports (cif)	143	114	133	136	213	228
United Kingdom exports (fob)	8	9	8	7	8	8
Homegrown hardwood*	80	60	50	55	55	45
Homegrown hardwood* used on home market	70	50	45	50	50	35
(ii) Softwood
United Kingdom imports (cif)	593	563	464	529	716	767
United Kingdom exports (fob)	4	6	18	20	14	15
Homegrown softwood*	50	85	70	85	95	105
Homegrown softwood* used on home market	45	80	55	65	80	90

* Approximate.

Source: The following SITC/R2 headings in the United Kingdom Overseas Trade Statistics; for hardwoods sub-groups 247.2, 247.9 (part) and 248.3 and item 246.01 (part); for softwoods sub-groups 247.1, 247.9 (part) and 248.2 and item 246.01 (part).

Iran

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the volume of the United Kingdom's trade with Iran for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Channon: The information is as follows:

Value £ million

	Imports (cif)	Exports (fob)
1975	701	495
1976	1,047	515
1977	787	658
1978	527	751
1979	243	232
1980	107	393
1981	154	403
1982	226	334
1983	101	631
1984	369	703

Note: Figures shown are on a current statistical basis.
Source: Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom.

Regional Aid

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing for each regional area in (a) cash terms and (b) at 1985 prices (i) the amount of money paid in regional development grants and selective regional assistance and (ii) the total investment in manufacturing industry in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Pattie: The latest year for which figures are available is 1984 in respect of payments of regional development grant and regional selective assistance, and 1983 in respect of investment in manufacturing industry. Tables 1 and 3 provide the information requested. In addition table 2 sets out regional development grant and regional selective assistance figures for 1983 in order to provide a basis for comparison between the categories of information supplied for the years 1979 and 1984. Figures for investment in manufacturing industry for 1984 are not available:

TABLE 1
1979

	RDG		RSA		*Investment in manufacturing industry
	A†	B‡	A†	B‡	A†	B¶
Region
Scotland	81·5	135·3	12·9	21·4	589·0	918·0
Wales	62·0	103·0	24·6	40·9	472·1	735·8
Northern	129·0	214·2	11·9	19·8	613·3	955·8
North West	61·2	101·6	27·0	44·8	971·2	1513·6
Yorkshire and Humberside	21·4	35·5	6·2	10·3	625·0	974·1
East Midlands	2·4	4·0	·8	1·3	478·3	745·4
West Midlands	0·026	0·043	0·03	0·05	705·3	1099·2
South West	6·0	10·0	3·1	5·1	377·1	587·7
East Anglia●	—	—	—	—	210·5	328·1
South East●	—	—	—	—	1581·1	2464·2

TABLE 2
1983

	RDG		RSA		Investment in manufacturing industry
	A	B	A	B	A	B
Region
Scotland	246·9	270·7	23·9	26·2	490·6	542·3
Wales	74·6	81·8	13·8	15·1	353·2	390·4
Northern	95·3	104·5	15·6	17·1	392·8	434·2
North West	81·1	88·9	13·4	14·7	837·7	926·0
Yorkshire and Humberside	24·3	26·6	9·6	10·5	499·1	551·7
East Midlands	8·2	9·0	7·9	8·7	455·0	502·9
West Midlands	—	—	—	—	598·5	661·6
South West	7·4	8·1	2·2	2·4	434·7	480·5
East Anglia	—	—	—	—	226·4	250·3
South East	—	—	—	—	1626·7	1798·1

TABLE 3
1984

	RDG		RSA		Investment in manufacturing industry
	A	B	A	B	A	B
Region
Scotland	115·4	121·3	26·0	27·3	n/a	—
Wales	80·8	84·9	18·3	19·2	n/a	—
Northern	89·5	94·0	15·5	16·3	n/a	—
North West	81·9	86·1	11·0	11·6	n/a	—
Yorkshire and Humberside	21·2	22·3	8·9	9·4	n/a	—
East Midlands	4·8	5·0	7·9	8·3	n/a	—
West Midlands	—	—	—	—	n/a	—
South West	8·1	8·5	1·8	1·9	n/a	—
East Anglia	—	—	—	—	n/a	—
South East	—	—	—	—	n/a	—

* Manufacturing investment comprises net capital expenditure by manufacturers in classes 2 to 4 of the standard industrial clasification 1980 (source: annual census of production).

† columns headed "A" in all tables show current prices.

‡ columns headed "B" under RDG and RSA in all tables show current prices adjusted to 1985 prices by use of the implied market price GDP deflator.

¶ columns head "B" under "Investment in manufacturing industry" in all tables show current prices adjusted to 1985 prices by use of the implied manufacturing investment deflator.

‖ West midlands ceased being an assisted area on 1 August 1982 under earlier regional measures but was designated an assisted area (with intermediate area status) under the measures which became effective on 29 November 1984.

● East Anglia and the south east have never been designated as assisted areas.

Takeovers and Mergers (Code of Practice)

Mr Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has plans to introduce legislation to give statutory backing to the City code on takeovers and mergers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Howard: The Government have decided not to include provisions on the regulation of takeovers in the Financial Services Bill. In reaching this decision we have considered carefully the views which the panel, the Bank of England, the Securities and Investments Board Ltd and others have put to us. The Government believe that the panel is doing a good job in regulating takeovers on a non-statutory basis, that it injoys the support of the City, and that no change is desirable at present in the status of the panel and the take-over code.

Crown Suppliers (Commission)

Mr Speller asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any representations regarding the implications for British firms in the home market of the recent increase in commission charged by the Crown Suppliers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

The Crown Suppliers has received two approaches about the increase in commission rates. One from G F E Bartlett & Sons Ltd which manufactures catering equipment and one from the Catering Equipment Manufacturers Association. Total sales of all products subject to increase in commission rates were 20 per cent. higher in the first quarter of 1985-86 than in the corresponding quarter last year. The increases were to ensure that the contracts make a full economic return for the resources employed.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Business Schools

Mr Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy on the maintenance of business schools within the university sector in the light of the Institute of Economic Affairs' paper, "Whose Business," a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr Walden: My right hon. Friend is reviewing his policy for postgraduate management education in the light of consultation with relevant interests about the analysis and recommendations in the Institute of Economic Affairs paper. He hopes to make a policy statement on this subject in 1986.

University Teaching Staff

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the scale of salaries for university teaching staff and the hours they are contracted to work.

Mr. Walden: The current (1 April 1984) pay scales for university non-clinical academic staff are as follows:

Assistant Lecturer and Lecturer
£	£
7,520	11,205
7,980	11,675
8,450	12,150
*8,920	12,635
9,390	13,120
9,860	13,625
10,330	14,135
10,720	14,925
Senior Lecturer/Reader
14,135	16,170
14,775	16,675
15,150	17,190
15,665	17,705
Professor—Mininum Average
18,070	21,235

*Minimum point for those aged 27 and over

There is no national agreement on hours of work. Conditions of service are negotiated locally.

Agriculture Food Research Council

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what will be the grades of the new posts of the director of research and the site directors of the new animals and grassland research institute of the Agriculture Food Research Council; what will be the preferred specialisation of the successful candidates.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 13 December to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) at column 790.

Welsh Plant Breeding Station (Overseas Students)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the numbers of overseas students pursuing studies for higher degrees at the University College of Wales of the Welsh plant breeding station, giving an indication of the broad areas of work involved; and what comparable data are available in respect of 1979-80.

Mr. Walden: I refer to my reply of 13 December to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) at column 788.

Higher Education (Graduates)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the subsequent career of those who graduated from institutions of higher education in England and Wales over the past five years.

Mr. Walden: Regular information on the subsequent career of those who graduated from institutions of higher education is limited to surveys of the first destination of graduates and diplomates as at 31 December of the year in which they graduated.

The position for the years 1980 to 1984—the latest year for which data are available — for first degree graduates only is as follows. A statistical bulletin is to be published shortly on this subject and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

First destination of graduates 1980 to 1984 (6 months after graduation)

Numbers (Thousands)

	Permanent home employment	Temporary home employment	Full-time education or training	Believed unemployed	Others*	Total of known destination	Destination unknown	All graduates
1980
Universities (Great Britain)	29·8	1·4	16·9	5·0	6·4	59·5	6·3	65·8
Polytechnics (England and Wales)	7·8	0·9	3·1	1·8	1·8	15·4	4·0	19·4
1981
Universities (Great Britain)	28·4	1·6	17·7	6·4	7·5	61·5	6·5	68·0
Polytechnics (England and Wales)	7·5	0·9	3·3	2·4	2·2	16·3	4·2	20·5
1982
Universities (Great Britain)	29·4	1·5	17·3	7·8	6·9	62·9	7·2	70·1
Polytechnics (England and Wales)	7·8	0·9	3·0	2·6	2·1	16·4	5·0	21·4
1983
Universities (Great Britain)	32·3	1·9	17·3	6·9	6·1	64·5	7·7	72·2
Polytechnics (England and Wales)	9·2	0·9	2·9	2·6	1·9	17·5	†6·1	†23·5
CHE's‡ (England and Wales)	4·1	0·4	1·2	1·0	0·5	7·2	0·9	8·1
1984
Universities (Great Britain)	33·8	1·8	16·2	5·7	6·2	63·7	7·5	31·2
Polytechnics (England and Wales)	12·0	1·2	3·5	2·9	1·8	21·3	5·4	26·7
CHE's‡ (England and Wales)	4·6	0·4	1·3	0·9	0·5	7·8	1·2	9·0

* Employment overseas, overseas students leaving the United Kingdom, not available for employment.
† Including an estimated 1,300 graduates for one polytechnic which did not submit data in 1983.
‡ Comparable data for colleges of higher education (CHE's) was collected for the first time in 1983.

Information on the subsequent careers of graduates is not collected on a regular basis. However, the 1981 Census of Population qualified manpower tables provide considerable detail about the industries and occupations of graduates. The Department of Education and Science is also sponsoring, in conjunction with the Department of Employment, a special survey of the subsequent careers of those who graduated in 1980.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) whether any changes are envisaged in the recognition of educational psychologists; if existing students on recognised courses will be protected; if additional time with children will be required; and if he will make a statement on any changes envisaged in the qualification, training or standards for educational psychologists;

(2) if he will indicate the minimum qualification to be recognised as an educational psychologist; if he will give the minimum period of training or experience required for full recognition in such a post; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend does not determine these requirements. The qualifications, training and experience normally required by local education authorities for educational psychologists in their employment are published in the "Report of the Committee on Salary Scales and Service Conditions of Inspectors, Organisers and Advisory Officers of Local Education Authorities." I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library. My right hon. Friend is not aware of any plans to change those requirements.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the local education authorities that are short of educational psychologists; if he will give the number in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The complement of educational psychologists employed by local education authorities is a matter for individual authorities to determine. The Department has no information about authorities that are below their complement of educational psychologists; this information is not collected centrally.

Higher and Advanced Further Education

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now announce his decisions on public sector higher education provision in 1986-87 and on the distribution of the advanced further education pool and voluntary sector quantum for 1986-87; and if he wil make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: I have today written to the chairman of the committee of the National Advisory Body for public sector higher education (NAB) in response to its advice on the planned disposition of academic provision and of students in public sector higher education in 1986-87, and on the basis for distributing the advanced further education quantum of £661 million and the voluntary sector quantum of £45·4 million for the financial year 1986-87, which I announced in the House on 12 November 1985 at columns 104-108. I have accepted its advice in its entirety, with the exception of recommendations bearing on intakes to part I architecture courses in 1986-87.

NAB's plans provide for overall student numbers to remain roughly stable compared with the targets set for 1985-86 and for the continuation of the policies reflected in those targets, notably, the preservation of student access. They also offer a continuing incentive to institutions to maintain provision in science, engineering and other vocational disiplines and provision for sub-degree and part-time students.

In relation to architectural education, I have accepted NAB's recommendation that intakes to public sector courses in England should be reduced so as, with parallel reductions in universities and Scottish provision, to stabilise the size of the architectural profession at the level reached when students at present on course qualify. I have not been able however to accept NAB's advice that this reduction should be accomplished with the closure alone among the 18 public sector schools in England of the Department at the North East London polytechnic. Accordingly, I propose to consider further the pattern of provision in 1986, consulting as appropriate with institutions, before coming to a final decision in one to two months. In the meantime, in order to avoid pre-empting my final decision, I have determined intakes for the purpose of financial allocations in 1986-87 so as to allow for possible intakes at all the existing public sector schools, including NELP.

In 1986-87 the greater part of the local authority quantum and the whole of the voluntary sector quantum are being allocated to local education authorities and voluntary colleges in relation to target student numbers by institution, mode of attendance and subject. The allocations have been made so as to allow every institution a standard teaching unit of resource for each weighted student. This is supplemented in the case of institutions where advanced provision exceeds 25 per cent. of the total in recognition of the higher costs associated with predominantly higher education work. The effect of this is to continue the pressure on high spending institutions to reduce their costs and to afford increased protection to the more economical institutions.

The allocations announced today also include for a few selected local authority institutions sums to a total of £2·5 million to continue the selective support of research and £451,000 for further support of the biotechnology initiative, both of which began last year. A further £648,000 is included in respect of the recurrent costs in 1986-87 to the institutions selected for participation in phase 2 of the engineering and technology programme. This assumes that the institutions concerned will be able to demonstrate satisfactory support for their approved courses from industry.

Letters are today being sent to local education authorities and institutions notifying them of my decision. Copies of my letter to the NAB committee chairman and of a note explaining the method by which the two quanta for 1986-87 are being distributed, together with full details of the allocations, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Voluntary Schools

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent consultations he has had with providing bodies about the voluntary schools sector.

Sir Keith Joseph: There have been a number of meetings following the publication of "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469); in addition I have recently invited the voluntary bodies and the local authority associations to consider with the Department how I can achieve a closer match between capital expenditure at aided and special agreement schools and what is voted annually for this purpose.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast Rally (Photographic Surveillance)

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what photographic surveillance was used by Her Majesty's security forces for the purpose of estimating the size of the rally which took place in Belfast city centre on Saturday 23 November; and what was the resulting estimate.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985]: Photographic surveillance was not used to estimate the size of the crowd attending the rally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Experimental Projects

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding is available for experimental crime prevention projects involving the use of television cameras as a means of surveillance and countering vandalism in town and city centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The funding and installation of closed circuit television systems in town and city centres for experimental crime prevention projects is a matter for local authorities and other relevant local agencies, including the owners of private shopping centres, in consultation with the police.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of his Department's budget is spent on experimental projects of all types; if he will list the projects concerned; and if he will indicate in each case the costs so far incurred and the date the project started.

Mr. Hurd: Detailed information in the form requested is not readily available. The Home Office spends 1·8 per cent. of its central budget on research and development. The expenditure is allocated between main subject areas as follows:

Subject area	1985-86 £ million
Equal opportunities	0·3
Law services	2·2

Subject area	1985-86 £ million
Race relations	0·1
Prison security	0·3
Civil defence	0·9
Police research	5·7
Forensic science	1·6
Fire research	1·1
Telecommunications	2·1
Research into the voluntary sector	0·1
Sex discrimination and equality	0·2
Other costs	0·4
Total	15·0

Mr. P. Reid

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to answer the letter of the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside of 18 October concerning Mr. P. Reid.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend will reply very soon.

Police

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a statement with appropriate statistics, explaining the basis on which expenditure on the police is budgeted to increase by 6 per cent. in 1986-87, and by 2 per cent. in real terms, over what was scheduled to be spent in that year, as stated by the hon. Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor) on 5 December, Official Report, column 419.

Mr. Hurd: The basis for the reply of my hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor) on 5 December was as follows.

Planned expenditure on the police in 1985-86, as given in the 1985 public expenditure White Paper, was £2,843 million. Planned expenditure on the police for 1986-87 was given in a reply to a question from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 18 November at columns 15-16 as £3,025 million. Those figures would represent increases in planned provision for police expenditure between 1985-86 and 1986-87 of just over 6 per cent. in cash terms and nearly 2 per cent. in real terms. In fact planned expenditure on the police in 1986-87, to be published shortly in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, is £3,060 million. The planned increases are therefore nearly 8 per cent. in cash terms and 3 per cent. in real terms. I regret that the figure for 1986-87 given on 18 November was incorrect.

Sentencing Policy

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes in the guidelines on sentencing powers and principles relating to violent crime he proposes to incorporate in the new edition of "The Sentence of the Court."

Mr. Giles Shaw: The previous edition of "The Sentence of the Court" was published in 1978. The new edition will reflect the many changes in courts' statutory powers since then, including the revised custodial sentences for young offenders introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 1982 and the criteria, set out in the Act, for imposing them. It will also refer to sentencing guidance given by the Court of Appeal during the same period, including that concerning the need for substantial prison terms for serious violence.

Immigration

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Billericay about visitors from the New Commonwealth and Pakistan to which he gave a holding answer on 29 November.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that I am not yet able to do so since the information requested has not been produced routinely hitherto and a detailed analysis of computer records is required. I shall reply as soon as possible.

Visas

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce a visa requirement for visitors from the Indian sub-continent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 5 December at column 311.

Brixton Prison (Women)

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women in addition to Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer are currently being held in Brixton prison.

Mr. Mellor: One.

Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer, currently being held in Brixton prison, are being checked on up to four times an hour during the night.

Mr. Mellor: Standard security procedures require frequent checks to be made on category A inmates during the night.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an inquiry into the conditions in which Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer are being held in Brixton prison.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on how many occasions on each day in November a strip search was carried out on Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer in Brixton prison;

(2) on how many occasions in November (a) Martina Anderson and (b) Ella O'Dwyer, currently held in Brixton prison (i) made a court appearance, (ii) received a visit, (iii) made a cell change and (iv) was involved in a wing or cell search.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend is writing to the hon. Member.

French Girls (Arrest)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the arrest of two French girls, Jamila Majid and Sylvia Thomarin, on 20 November and on the subsequent strip-searching of one of the girls.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis will require further information before it is possible to trace the details of the arrest of a Jamila Majid and a Sylvia Thomarin.

Mr. Billy Monteith

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department with what offence Mr. Billy Monteith, arrested on 20 November, has been charged.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Further information is necessary before the police can trace the details of the arrest of a Mr. Billy Monteith.

Tottenham Riot (Inquiry)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Metropolitan police have refused to collaborate with the inquiry to be established by Haringey council into the Tottenham riot on 6 October which was to be chaired by the hon. Mark Bonham Carter.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Metropolitan police are preparing a report on the Tottenham riot for the next meeting of the Haringey police community consultative group. An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Jarrett is being carried out under supervision of the Police Complaints Authority. We understand that the commissioner took the view, which we strongly share, that his participation in an inquiry conducted by the Haringey council would not usefully add to the action already being taken.

Prison Officers

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prison officers, both male and female, died in service from January 1982 to November 1985, inclusive;

(2) how many prison officers from the rank of chief officer downwards, both male and female, have retired from the service in the period January 1982 to November 1985, inclusive;

(3) how many prison officers from the rank of chief officer downwards, both male and female, resigned the service in the period January 1982 to November 1985, inclusive.

Mr. Mellor: From 1 January 1982 to 30 November 1985 there have been 943 male and 51 female retirements, 420 male and 195 female resignations and 143 male and one female deaths in service from all grades of prison officer.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many male officers and how many female officers have been recruited into the prison service during the period January 1982 to November 1985.

Mr. Mellor: From 1 January 1982 to 30 November 1985, 2,365 male and 325 female officers were recruited.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the overall net gain or loss in the prison officer establishment for the period January 1982 to November 1985, inclusive.

Mr. Mellor: From 1 January 1982 to 30 November 1985 there was a net gain in prison officer establishment of 1,509 male (9 per cent.) and 126 female (14 per cent.) officers.

Wilson and Farbridge (Metropolitan Police)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis proposes to take in the light of the case of Wilson and Farbridge and the Metropolitan Police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A complaint was made by Miss Farbridge in 1982 which was investigated and referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions, who was satisfied that there was insufficient evidence to justify criminal proceedings. The papers were then referred to the Police Complaints Board, as it then was, under the procedures established by the Police Act 1976. The board decided to defer consideration until after the civil proceedings had been completed. The commissioner is reporting the outcome of the civil action to the Police Complaints Authority, as successor to the board, which will decide what action should now be taken in the light of the court's decision.

Fraud

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people received sentences of immediate imprisonment for (a) fraud from Her Majesty's Inspector of Taxes and (b) fraud from the Department of Health and Social Security for every year since 1979.

Mr. Moore: I have been asked to reply.

(a) The number of people who received immediate prison sentences for Inland Revenue fraud was as follows:

Year ending 31 March

	Number
1979-80	30
1980-81	27
1981-82	21
1982-83	27
1983-84	32
1984-85	41

Criminal prosecutions are undertaken in only a small number of cases because the Inland Revenue deals mainly with tax offences by imposing money penalties graded according to the gravity of the offence rather than by prosecution. These penalties amounted to £371·4 million in the year to 31 March 1984.

(b) The number of people who received immediate prison sentences for social security benefit fraud was as follows:

Year ending 31 March

	Number
1979-80	585
1980-81	868
1981-82	580
1982-83	601
1983-84	580
1984-85	433

TRANSPORT

Seat Belts

Mr. Hubbard-Miles asked the Secretary of State for Transport what decision he has taken on the regulations to require the fitting of rear seat belts.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. Friend has now made regulations which will make rear seat belts or child restraints a legal requirement for all new cars manufactured from 1 October 1986, and first registered from 1 April 1987. The regulations allow for different types of belt or restraint to be fitted in order to meet our European Community obligations and also allow individuals to choose the most suitable type of belt for themselves or restraint for their children. The regulations also require a seat belt to be fitted in the centre front seat of cars and light vans where such a seat is provided. I am particularly anxious that car owners should have the freedom to choose the seat belts that best suit their needs. There are no plans to introduce the compulsory wearing of seat belts in the rear of cars.

Tourism

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce a new system of traffic signs for tourist attractions following Lord Young's report, "Pleasure, Leisure and Jobs—The Business of Tourism", and the experiments in Kent and Nottinghamshire.

Mrs. Chalker: I have recently issued a consultation document to a wide range of interested organisations setting out our proposals for introducing a new system of distinctively coloured white on brown traffic signs for tourist attractions in England. Consultees have been asked to submit their comments by the end of February 1986 so that arrangements can be introduced in time for the 1986 summer tourist season.

Channel Fixed Link

Sir Reginald Eyre asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends making available in the White Paper the Government intend to publish about the Channel fixed link, or elsewhere, the Government's forecasts of the traffic that will use the link and the revenue to be derived therefrom.

Mr. Ridley: No. It would not be right for the Government to seek to influence the banks and other institutions to which a successful promoter will be looking for finance for a chosen link project. If the Government decide to facilitate one of the proposals in January, and subject to the final decision of Parliament, it will be for the successful promoter to put the details of the project, in the form in which it is to go ahead, to potential investors to allow them to decide whether to invest in it, without Government guarantee in any form, express or implied.

A decision by the Government to facilitate one project or another will not constitute endorsement by the Government of the promoter's forecast costs, traffic or revenues.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Rape (Anonymity of Victims)

Ms. Harman asked the Attorney-General if he will seek to amend the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1976 to extend the anonymity of rape victims to related civil proceedings.

The Solicitor-General: The Government will consider this in the light of recent events.

Magistrates

Mr. Hoyle asked the Attorney-General if he will enumerate magistrates in the north-west, excluding the county palatine, under the following categories (a) sex, (b) age groupings, (c) occupation, (d) social backgrounds, (e) resident or non-resident within their petty sessional area and (f) any political viewpoint or affiliation they have acknowledged.

The Solicitor-General: The description "north-west excluding the county palatine" is vague. In Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Lancashire appointments are made by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The Lord Chancellor makes appointments in Cheshire and the rest of England and Wales. The information as to sex, age goupings and political views of magistrates in Cheshire is as set out, with the caveat that views are indicated prior to appointment and may have since changed, and that appointments were at a range of dates widely varying from the present.

The information sought on occupation, social background and whether magistrates reside or do not reside in the petty sessional area is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Justices on the active list in Cheshire

	Number
Male	299
Female	239
Total	538
Age group
Under 40	35
40-49	157
50-59	234
60-69	112
	538
Conservative	234
Labour	156
Liberal/SDP	52
Independent	73
Undisclosed	23
	538

Lloyd's (Prosecution)

Sir Humphrey Atkins asked the Attorney-General if he is satisfied that the Director of Public Prosecutions, in his consideration of possible prosecutions against certain members of the Peter Cameron-Webb syndicate and Howdens, has access to all the evidence available to Lloyd's concerning those individuals.

The Solicitor-General: So far as the Director of Public Prosecutions is aware, he has received from Lloyd's all evidence in its possession material to the fraud investigation group's inquiries into the affair of Peter Cameron-Webb and Howden. This includes the transcripts of evidence given at relevant disciplinary proceedings which were passed to him on 16 December 1985.

PRIME MINISTER

Westland plc

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister what representations she has received from the General Electric Company about the proposed sale of a controlling interest in Westland to a United States company.

The Prime Minister: None.

PSBR (Privatisation)

Mr. Blair asked the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her answer of 12 December, Official Report, columns 1060-1, she will publish in the Official Report a table showing the public sector borrowing requirement in cash, at 1984-85 prices and as a percentage of gross domestic product for the years 1970-71 to 1984-85 and the projections for 1985-86 to 1988-89 on the assumption that actual or assumed proceeds of privatisation, including sales of land and buildings outside the special sales of assets, were replaced by a similar amount of borrowing.

The Prime Minister: Figures for the public sector borrowing requirement, on the three bases requested, were provided in the answer my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary gave the hon. Member on 2 December at column 101-2. Figures for the proceeds of privatisation and sales of land and buildings, in cash, were provided in the answers my right hon. Friend gave the hon. Member on the same day at columns 102-3 and the earlier answers referred to therein. Estimates of the gross domestic product (GDP) and the GDP deflator for 1970-71 to 1984-85 were published in Economic Trends (Annual Supplement 1985 and November 1985 editions). A forecast of the GDP for 1985-86 was published in the "Autumn Statement 1985" table 1.11. Assumptions for the GDP in 1986-87 to 1988-89 were published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1985-86" table 2.4, which also included assumptions for the GDP deflator in 1985-86 to 1988-89.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Nicholls asked the Prime Minister if she will list all measures her Government have taken to promote the welfare of animals; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government are committed to promoting the welfare of animals and have taken wide-ranging measures to improve their protection. We played a leading role in the preparation of a draft Council of Europe convention for the protection of vertebrate animals used for scientific and other experimental purposes, and have introduced in another place a Bill to relace the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 with a new system of controls which will strengthen the safeguards against avoidable suffering by animals used in scientific research.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department has given support and assistance to privately introduced measures to prohibit the sale of pet animals at markets (the Pet Animals (Amendment) Act 1983), and to strengthen the legal protection of badgers against acts of cruelty (section 1 of the Wildlife and Countryside (Amendment) Act 1985). Further protection was given to a number of wild species by the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

The Government supported the introduction of the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 and in April 1984 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment issued standards of modern zoo practice dealing among other things with the care and accommodation of animals in zoos, in accordance with section 9 of that Act.

This year the Government extended for a further four years the prohibition on the import of skins and products made from harp and hooded seals. The original prohibition, for two years, was introduced in 1983. In 1984, the Government introduced measures to treat all whales as an endangered species and to prohibit all products made from whales for commercial trade.

With regard to the welfare of farm animals, the Government established, in 1979, the Farm Animal Welfare Council which keeps under review the welfare of all farm animals and advises on any legislative or other changes which it considers necessary or desirable in order to improve or maintain standards of welfare. The council has reviewed all the welfare codes for livestock issued under the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968. Revised codes in respect of cattle and pigs have been approved by Parliament and are in operation, and those for domestic fowls and turkeys are under consideration. The council is now considering the revised codes to see whether any of the recommendations could more appropriately be made mandatory by incorporation in regulations.

In addition, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has introduced the Veterinary Surgeons (Operations) Order 1982, further controlling operations on farm animals; the Export of Animals (Protection) Order 1981 which improves protection for animals in transit; and the Slaughter of Poultry (Humane Conditions) Regulations 1984 which provide further protection for poultry at the point of slaughter.

Parliamentary Private Secretaries

Mr. Dewar asked the Prime Minister if she will list the parliamentary private secretaries presently in office and the Ministers they serve.

The Prime Minister: The information is as follows:

Department	Secretaries of State and Ministers	Parliamentary Private Secretaries
Prime Minister	Mrs. Thatcher	Mr. M. Alison
Foreign Office
Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs	Sir Geoffrey Howe	Mr. Richard Ryder
Minister of State	Mr. Rifkind	Lord James Douglas-Hamilton
Minister of State	Lady Young	Mr. Richard Ottaway
Minister for Overseas Development	Mr. Raison	Mr. William Powell
Minister of State	Mr. Renton	Mr. Richard Ottaway
Department of Trade and Industry
Secretary of State for Trade and Industry	Mr. Brittan	Mr. Gerry Malone
Minister of State	Mr. Channon	Mr. David Atkinson
Minister for Information Technology	Mr. Pattie	Mr. Spencer Batiste
Minister of State	Mr. Morrison	Dr. Ian Twinn
Parliamentary Under-Secretary	Mr. Howard	Mr. Rob Hayward
Her Majesty's Treasury
Chancellor of the Exchequer	Mr. Lawson	Mr. Peter Lilley
Chief Secretary	Mr. MacGregor	Mr. Michael Lord
Financial Secretary	Mr. Moore	Mr. John Ward
Economic Secretary	Mr. Stewart	Mr. Barry Henderson
Minister of State	Mr. P. Brooke	—
Home Office
Secretary of State for the Home Department	Mr. Hurd	Mr. Kenneth Carlisle
Ministers of State	Mr. Waddington and Mr. Shaw	Mr. Graham Bright
Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State	Mr. Mellor and Lord Glenarthur	Mr. Patrick Nicholls
Department of Education and Science
Secretary of State for Education	Sir Keith Joseph	Mrs. Edwina Currie
Minister of State	Mr. C. Patten	Mrs. Virginia Bottomley
Department of Energy
Secretary of State for Energy	Mr. Walker	Mr. Stephen Dorrell
Minister of State	Mr. Buchanan-Smith	Mr. Robert Key
Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State	Mr. Hunt and Mr. Goodlad	Mr. Michael Hirst
Ministry of Defence
Secretary of State	Mr. Heseltine	Mr. Nicholas Baker
Minister of State Armed Forces	Mr. Stanley	Mr. Roger Freeman
Minister of State Procurement	Mr. Lamont	Mr. David Heathcoat-Amory
Scottish Office
Secretary of State for Scotland	Mr. Younger	Mr. Alex Pollock
Welsh Office
Secretary of State for Wales	Mr. Edwards	Mr. Peter Hubbard-Miles
Lord Privy Seal	Mr. Biffen	Mr. Richard Page
Department of Health and Social Security
Secretary of State for Social Services	Mr. Fowler	Mr. Charles Wardle
Minister for Health	Mr. Hayhoe	Mr. Tom Sackville
Minister for Social Security	Mr. Newton	Mr. James Couchman
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster	Mr. Tebbit	Mr. Iain Mills
Northern Ireland Office
Secretary of State for Northern Ireland	Mr. King	Mr. Brian Mawhinney
Minister of State	Dr. Boyson	Mr. Alan Howarth
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	Mr. Jopling	Mr. Paul Marland
Minister of State	Mr. Gummer	Mr. Nicholas Soames
Department of Transport
Secretary of State for Transport	Mr. Ridley	Mr. Gerry Neale
Minister of State	Mrs. Chalker	Mr. Tony Baldry
Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State	Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Spicer	Mrs. Marion Roe
	Earl of Caithness	—
Department of Employment
Secretary of State for Employment	Lord Young	Mr. Robert Atkins
Paymaster General	Mr. Kenneth Clarke	Mr. Colin Moynihan

Department	Secretaries of State and Ministers	Parliamentary Private Secretaries
Department of the Environment
Secretary of State for the Environment	Mr. Baker	Mr. Alistair Burt
Minister of State, Environment, Countryside and Local Government	Mr. Waldegrave	Mr. Steven Norris
Minister of State,	Lord Elton	—
Minister of State, Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction	Mr. J. Patten	Mr. Martin Brandon-Bravo
Minister for the Arts	Mr. Luce	Mr. Michael Colvin
Attorney-General	Sir Michael Havers	Mr. Nicholas Lyell
Solicitor-General	Sir Patrick Mayhew	—

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Storage (Butter)

Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the overall cost of storing the surplus butter currently held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community; and what the figure is for storing the surplus butter held within the United Kingdom;

(2) what was the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for 1983 and 1984, respectively;

(3) what is the estimate for the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for 1986;

(4) what is the percentage change in the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively; and what is the estimated percentage change for 1986;

(5) what is the overall cost of storing the surplus butter currently held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community; what was the overall cost for 1983 and 1984, respectively; what is the estimated cost for 1986; and what is the percentage change for each year from 1983 to 1986, respectively;

(6) what is the overall cost of storing one tonne of surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for one year.

Mr. Gummer: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting held in Brussels on 19 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The Council had an initial discussion of a document from the Commission reporting the conclusions reached as a result of the consultations on its earlier paper "Perspectives for the Common Agricultural Policy". This document covers a wide range of issues, including price policy, co-responsibility, changes in intervention arrangements, diversification of production and measures to benefit the environment.

During the discussion I again stressed the paramount importance of price policy in tackling the problems of the CAP, the necessity of observing financial limits, and the need to avoid discrimination between producers.

The Council again considered the Commission's proposal to ban the use of hormones for fattening purposes, which had previously been supported by all member states except the United Kingdom. After a long discussion, the Chairman decided that a revised version of the text, in the form of a directive, should be voted upon by written procedure. If approved by qualified majority vote, the ban would apply from 1 January 1988.

As a result of my pressure, the Commission indicated that it would use the procedures set out in the directive to propose a derogation which would postpone the introduction of the ban in the United Kingdom until 1 January 1989. Nevertheless I intend to vote against the measure. There is no scientific evidence justifying the ban, and the procedure is contrary to the Council's earlier decision that a ban should be introduced only by unanimous agreement between member states.

SCOTLAND

Police (Computers)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has for each constabulary of the capital cost of the mainframe equipment used by that constabulary and the recurrent costs of maintaining that computer.

Mr. John MacKay: I understand that, of the eight Scottish police forces, only Lothian and Borders police have their own mainframe computer (this term being taken as excluding mini and microcomputers). Capital expenditure, including enhancements since the computer was first installed, has amounted to £1·3 million and maintenance costs are of the order of £134,000 per annum.

Some other forces have access, in varying degree, to local authority mainframe equipment, for which appropriate charges are made.

Roads

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the latest estimate of the length of Scottish motorways and trunk roads requiring reconstruction, compared to the total length of the road network.

Mr. Ancram: Estimates of the length of motorways and trunk roads requiring reconstruction, as distinct from structural repairs generally (ie reconstruction, resurfacing, overlay or surface dressing), are not separately available. In 1984, 360 kms of carriageway on such roads were assessed as requiring structural repairs generally, representing 9·5 per cent. of the total network of carriageway length.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has a long-term programme to reduce the backlog of Scottish trunk roads requiring reconstruction, analagous to that of the Department of Transport for English trunk roads.

Mr. Ancram: Yes. In view of an increase in the length of trunk road requiring structural repairs, my right hon. Friend has decided to increase expenditure on such work. Provision in the supply estimates for 1985-86 was £13·387 million but this was increased in the winter supplementary estimates to £15·262 million. In 1986-87, this will be further increased to £18 million.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, further to his answer in the Official Report of 9 December, column 457, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston, he will consider co-operating with regional and island councils to produce an annual road maintenance condition survey similar to the one produced for England and Wales.

Mr. Ancram: I do not consider that this would be necessary or helpful in view of the comprehensive information already available for trunk roads and motorways in Scotland, and the participation of most roads authorities in a sample survey for the remaining roads.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been (a) the total number of new hospital beds since May 1979 and (b) the total number of hospital beds closed, including those in hospitals which have been partially closed since May 1979 by region.

Mr. John MacKay: The information, by health board areas, is as follows. The details in respect of new hospital beds relate to new hospital buildings, funded from the central building programme: information in respect of locally funded developments is not held centrally. Many of the beds have been provided as replacements for outdated facilities and are not additions to the overall complement. The details of beds closed refer only to complete hospitals taken out of use. Information in respect of partial closures of hospitals is not collected centrally.

Health Board	(a) New Hospital beds	(b) Hospital beds closed
Argyll and Clyde	180	432
Ayrshire and Arran	710	220
Borders	50	47
Fife	492	65
Forth Valley	180	—
Grampian	264	26
Greater Glasgow	754	181
Highland	710	—
Lanarkshire	120	40
Lothian	462	—
Shetland	—	62
Tayside	234	132
Total	4,156	1,205

New Hospitals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all new hospitals which have opened since May 1979 or are due to open over the next 18 months, indicating the first date on which approval for each scheme was given.

Mr. John MacKay: Details, in respect of projects funded from the central building programme, are as follows. Comprehensive information on locally funded schemes is not held centrally. The total bed complement is shown but it should be noted that not all beds were necessarily brought into use in the given years. Many of the beds provided are replacements for outdated facilities elsewhere and are not additions to the overall complement:

Hospital facilities opened		Date project approved
1979
Greater Glasgow Health Board
Belvidere hospital—phase I	30 beds	May 1978
Woodilee hospital—phase I	60 beds	May 1978
1980
Argyll and Clyde Health Board
Johnstone hospital	30 beds	1978
Grampian Health Board
Woodend geriatric hospital	30 beds April 1979
Greater Glasgow Health Board
Blawarthill hospital	30 beds	May 1978
Canniesburn hospital	30 beds	May 1978
Gartloch hospital	30 beds	May 1978
Gartnavel hospital	30 beds	May 1978
Mearnskirk hospital	30 beds	May 1978
Stobhill hospital	60 beds	May 1978
Tayside Health Board
Irvine Memorial hospital, Pitlochry	12 beds	June 1977
Murray Royal hospital, Perth	60 beds	June 1977
1981
Ayrshire and Arran Health Board
Crosshouse hospital	710 beds	September 1964
Fife Health Board
Glenrothes hospital	72 beds plus 20 day places	January 1974

Hospital facilities opened		Date project approved
Lothian Health Board
Edinburgh Royal infirmary redevelopment—phase I	Nil	December 1959
Edinburgh Royal hospital—phase I	120 beds plus 50 day places	March 1972
Tayside Health Board
Perth Royal infirmary	60 beds plus 25 day places	June 1977
Royal Liff hospital, Dundee	60 beds	October 1977
1982
Grampian Health Board
Inverurie hospital	30 beds	June 1980
Spynie hospital, Elgin	30 beds	November 1972
Highland Health Board
Lochaber hospital	30 beds	June 1976
Lothian Health Board
Astley Ainslie	90 beds plus 40 day places	October 1974
Tayside Health Board
Blairgowrie cottage hospital	30 beds plus six day places	June 1977
1983
Borders Health Board
Hay Lodge, Peebles	50 beds plus 15 day places	May 1974
Fife Health Board
Whyteman's Brae, Kirkcaldy	180 beds plus 80 day places	November 1973
Forth Valley Health Board
Royal Scottish National hospital, Larbert	120 beds	April 1979
Grampian Health Board
Ugie hospital, Peterhead	30 beds	October 1978
Woodend hospital—Glenburn Wing	24 beds	April 1979
Woodlands hospital	120 beds	November 1976
Greater Glasgow Health Board
Glasgow Royal infirmary—phase I	214 beds	December 1966
Stobhill hospital	90 beds	May 1978
Lothian Health Board
Herdmanflat hospital	72 beds	April 1974
Tayside Health Board
Aberfeldy cottage hospital	12 beds	June 1977
1984
Lanarkshire Health Board
Kirklands hospital—phase I	120 beds	July 1979
Argyll and Clyde Health Board
Dunoon and District General Hospital	30 beds plus 10 day places	April 1982
Merchiston hospital—phase I	120 beds	January 1973
Greater Glasgow Health Board
Gartloch hospital	120 beds	June 1978
Forth Valley Health Board
Sauchie hospital	60 beds	June 1979
1985
Fife Health Board
West Fife district general hospital	240 beds plus 130 day places	March 1976
Highland Health Board
Raigmore hospital, Inverness	680 beds	June 1973
Lothian Health Board
Royal Victoria hospital—phase III	180 beds plus 50 day places	January 1974
(b) Openings expected within the next 18 months
Argyll and Clyde Health Board
Paisley District general hospital	700 beds	December 1971
Merchiston hospital—phase II	30 beds	May 1984

Hospital facilities opened		Date project approved
Dumfries and Galloway Health Board
Geriatric unit, Annan	30 beds	October 1980
Forth Valley Health Board
Falkirk Royal infirmary—maternity geriatric block	176 beds	June 1979
Greater Glasgow Health Board
Leverndale Hospital Redevelopment—phase 1 A plus B	240 beds	November 1983
Lennox Castle hospital redevelopment	120 beds	May 1983
Highland Health Board
Caithness hospital—phase II	97 beds	October 1973
Raigmore hospital—phase II	92 beds	June 1973
Lothian Health Board
Western General hospital—phase II	144 beds	May 1973

Historic Gardens (Working Party)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the working party on historic gardens, concerning maintenance grants and capital grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Officials from the Scottish Development Department and the Countryside Commission for Scotland set up an informal discussion group in August 1985 to consider policy issues likely to arise from an inventory of the most important gardens and designed landscapes in Scotland. The inventory is being prepared on behalf of SDD and CCS by Land Use Consultants Ltd. and is due to be completed in autumn 1986. The group will not be preparing a formal report but the outcome of the joint discussions will be reflected in the advice I receive once the inventory is available.

Glasgow Sheriff Court

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many accused persons have appeared from custody in Glasgow sheriff court as new cases in the latest convenient month for which figures are available and in each of the previous 12 months.

Mr. Younger: I regret that reliable information is not available.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases there have been in which the questioning of a suspect was recorded in a police station and which resulted in a prosecution in Glasgow sheriff court, together with the total number of suspects so interviewed in Glasgow for the last year or the latest convenient date for which figures are available, giving the first total as a percentage of the second.

Mr. Younger: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many summary complaints have been dealt with in Glasgow sheriff court in each of the last five years.

Mr. Younger: The information requested is set out in the table.

Number of persons called to Glasgow sheriff summary court

	Number
1980	27,910
1981	13,808
1982	17,454
1983	15,513
1984	14,939

Prison Population

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (i) the average daily prison population for the latest month for which figures are available, (ii) the figure for the same month in each of the previous five years and (iii) in each case the number of prisoners within that total who were on remand/awaiting trial or sentence.

Mr. Younger: The information is set out in the table.

Average daily population in penal establishments

November	Persons on remand	Total
1980	744	4,900
1981	838	4,510
1982	884	5,176
1983	862	4,988
1984	1,089	4,951
1985	1,097	5,602

Glasgow District Court

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many summary complaints have been dealt with in Glasgow district court in each of the last five years.

Mr. Younger: The information requested is given in the table.

Glasgow District Court	Number of persons called to court
1980	31,162
1981	32,444
1982	29,598
1983	33,301
1984	31,295

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints relating to offences under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 have been dealt with in Glasgow district court for the latest period for which figures are available and for the previous three years.

Mr. Younger: The information requested is set out in the table.

Persons called to Glasgow District Court
Misuse of Drugs Act 1971

	Number
1982	4
1983	0
1984	1
*1985	†0

* January to June.
† Provisional.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints relating to offences of drinking and driving under sections 5 and 6 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 have been dealt with in Glasgow district court for the latest period for which figures are available and for the previous three years.

Mr. Younger: No cases of drinking and driving have been dealt with by Glasgow district court.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Corporation Tax

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue yield in 1984-85 and 1985-86, respectively, from corporation tax on companies' capital gains.

Mr. Moore: Provisional estimates of receipts of corporation tax on capital gains are :

Receipts in	£ million
1984-85	325
1985-86	450

Bank of England

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to answer questions on commitments or guarantees of, or relating to, public money by the Bank of England in support of financial institutions where the resources come, or may have to come, other than wholly from the bank's own resources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Any funds provided by Parliament, or financial guarantees relying on such funds, are subject to the normal procedures—including the accountability of the responsible Minister and if appropriate, the laying of a minute in respect of proposed guarantees. These procedures would naturally apply to any such funds or guarantees to enable the Bank of England to support financial institutions.

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to the answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 466, he will define what is encompassed within the term "the Bank's own resources".

Mr. Ian Stewart: The resources at the disposal of the Bank of England which are reported annually in the accounts of its banking department.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the yield of capital gains tax in the current tax year were the indexation provisions to apply to chargeable gains relating to the period 1965 to 1982.

Mr. Moore: I regret that a precise estimate cannot be made. A large proportion of the yield of capital gains tax would be lost, possibly as much as two thirds of it.

City Financial Institutions (Alleged Corruption)

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning alleged corruption in City financial institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a small number of letters from hon. Members and members of the public about the problem of fraud. Specific allegations of fraudulent behaviour or corruption have been passed to the police, who are the appropriate authority to deal with such matters.

The Government are taking determined action to ensure high standards of conduct in the financial sector. The Government's White Paper on banking supervision, and the Financial Services Bill, both published this week, are designed to provide for the first time a comprehensive system of financial supervision. We have also taken steps to improve the effectiveness of the prosecution of fraud.

The fraud investigations group was established in January this year to improve co-operation between the police, the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Department of Trade and Industry. My hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General yesterday announced additional resources for the fraud investigation group. We will give urgent attention to the recommendations of Lord Justice Roskill on what can be done to improve the law and procedure governing complex fraud trials, in order to increase the prospects of successful prosecution.

Industrial Building Allowances

Mr. Butterfill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of extending industrial building allowances to (a) hotels and (b) leisure and entertainment buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Capital allowances are already given for hotels and will be 4 per cent. straight line writing-down allowances from 1 April 1986, the same rate as for all industrial buildings.

Leisure and entertainment buildings do not receive capital allowances for the cost of buildings, although some of the cost of many of these buildings will qualify for plant and machinery allowances. If industrial building allowances were extended to this sector, the first full year cost to the Exchequer would be less than £5 million; this could rise over 25 years to around £50 million a year at current levels of expenditure.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the amount of identifiable public expenditure per capita in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, excluding security expenditure, in each year since the inception of the territorial block formulae.

Mr. MacGregor: The territorial block formulae were adopted in their existing form in all three categories in the 1980 public expenditure survey to apply from 1981-82 onwards. Figures of identifiable public expenditure per capita up to 1983-84 were included in a previous answer on 22 February 1985 at columns 608-18. Later information is not yet available.

Berox Milling Machine (Southampton Docks)

Mr. Anderson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Berox 800 KV milling machine impounded by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise officials at Southampton docks en route to South Africa remains in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The machine to which the hon. Member refers is still in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Anderson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Customs and Excise intend to institute a prosecution following the seizure by customs officials of a Berox KV milling machine at Southampton docks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: No.

Spirits Duty

Mr. George Gardiner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast of receipts from spirits duty in 1985-86; and how much of this figure is attributable to the change in the rate of duty fixed in his last Budget.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that duty on spirits will yield £1,460 million in 1985-86, of which some £10 million is attributable to the increase in duty in the last Budget.

Civil Service (Fife)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each Department the number of Civil Service posts based within the Fife region at the following grades (a) clerical assistant, (b) clerical officer, (c) executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) principal, (g) deputy principal and (h) senior deputy principal; and what is the current rate of turnover in staff.

Mr. Brooke: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Privatisation Programme

Mr. Pike asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the effects on tax revenues in 1985-86 of Her Majesty's Government's privatisation programme.

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 28 November at column 661.

Domestic Credit

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his assessment of the effect of the purchase of commercial bills by the Bank of England on the level of domestic credit.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Rapid increases in the bank's holdings of commercial bills can distort financial markets. But it is not possible to quantify precisely their effects on domestic credit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in the Bank of England's holding of commercial bills from May 1979 to May 1983 and from May 1983 to date, together with the increase in domestic credit as a percentage of £M3 money stock at the beginning of each period.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Figures for the increase in the bank's holdings of commercial bills over these periods are as follows:

Increase over banking months	£ billion
May 1979 to May 1983	6·8
May 1983 to November 1985	3·5

Information on changes in domestic credit and the £M3 stock may be found in "Financial Statistics", tables 11.1, 11.2 and 11.5.

Prices

Mr. Ralph Howell: asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will compare the prices of one pint of milk, one pound of beef sirloin, one loaf of bread, 20 cigarettes, the average price of a three-bedroomed house and a medium-sized car, in 1970, 1979, 1984 and 1985, taking prices as 100; and if he will show the percentage increases in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have been asked to reply.

The available component indices of the retail prices index are as follows:

Annual average prices indices, 1979 = 100

	1970	1979	1984	1985*
Fresh milk	30·3	100	150·0	158·1
Beef	24·3	100	142·2	142·2
Bread	29·4	100	141·0	146·3
Cigarettes	38·7	100	198·1	215·6
House prices†	24·4	100	159·5	170·3
Purchase of motor vehicles	31·7	100	128·8	131·3

Percentage increases in these price indices

	1979	1979-84	*1984-85
Fresh milk	230·0	50·0	5·4
Beef	311·5	42·2	0·0
Bread	240·1	41·0	3·8
Cigarettes	158·4	98·1	8·8
House prices	309·8	59·5	6·8
Purchase of motor vehicles	215·5	28·8	1·9

* Average January—November 1985

† Sources: Department of the Environment mix adjusted house price index for all United Kingdom dwellings.

Trustee Savings Bank

Mr. Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current position regarding progress towards recognition of the Trustee Savings bank under the Banking Act.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985, c. 806]: Though the central Trustees Savings Bank Limited is a recognised bank under the 1979 Act the trustees savings banks themselves are exempted by schedule 1 of that Act from the prohibition on deposit-taking in section 1 of the Act. So long as they remain exempt, therefore, they do not require recognition. They are however supervised by the Bank of England on an informal basis on behalf of the Treasury, and in their regular prudential discussions the bank and the TSBs have considered future authorisation of the proposed future TSB companies.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iran about human rights in that country.

Mr. Renton: We continue to take all suitable opportunities to raise human rights matters with the Government of Iran. We co-sponsored the resolution on violations of human rights in Iran adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 13 December, which called for the Government of Iran to respect and ensure to all individuals within its territory the rights enshrined in the international covenant on civil and political rights, to which Iran is a party.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Iran and on the main factors which influence them.

Mr. Renton: We maintain diplomatic relations with Iran. Since the Iranian revolution in 1979 we have worked towards achieving a dialogue on issues of bilateral and international concern. These issues include the need for an urgent settlement to the Iran-Iraq conflict, and a bettering of human rights in Iran.

Torture

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards international action to prevent the use of torture in the light of the Amnesty programme for the prevention of torture, a copy of which has been sent to him by the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill.

Mr. Eggar: We share Amnesty's concern about all violations of human rights, including the widespread use of torture. We strongly supported the adoption by the United Nations General Assembly last December of the United Nations convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. We signed this convention on 15 March and we intend to ratify it in due course. We are participating constructively in the Council of Europe's negotiations on a draft European convention against torture. At the United Nations and in other international fora we have repeatedly condemned the use of torture, and we shall continue to do so, and shall make clear our hope that all member states of the United Nations will adhere to the United Nations convention against torture.

Tristan da Cunha

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer on 16 December, Official Report, column 33, if he will indicate the relationship between Table Bay Marine and Tristan Investments Limited.

Mr. Eggar: Table Bay Marine and Tristan Investments Limited have certain directors in common, but the former is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Palinauris Investments Limited and the latter of South Atlantic Islands Development Corporation Limited.

Treaties

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all treaties signed by the European Economic Community on behalf of the United Kingdom in the last 10 years.

Mr. Rifkind: The list of treaties concluded by the Community between 1957 and June 1984 has been published by the Commission. I am arranging for a copy of the English language version dated July 1984 to be placed in the Library of the House. I will write to the hon. Member with a consolidated list for the last 10 years as soon as possible.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy on the question of fisheries around the Falklands in the light of the report published by Imperial college, London, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Eggar: We are continuing to support actively the Food and Agriculture Organisation's efforts directed towards the establishment of a multilaterally based fisheries conservation and management regime in the south-west Atlantic. Dr. John Beddington's report on the fisheries around the Falklands, which was commissioned by the Falkland Islands Development Corporation for the United Kingdom and Falkland Islands Governments, constitutes an authoritative technical contribution to consideration of the issue. Copies of the report have been made available to the FAO and placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to discuss the question of fisheries in the south Atlantic with Argentina.

Mr. Eggar: In my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) on 20 November at column 206-7 I made it clear that we are in contact with all Governments with an interest in the south-west Atlantic fishery.

CMAO (Seizure)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received and what action he is taking about the seizure by the Government of Djibouti of the British owned company CMAO.

Mr. Rifkind: We have been informed of action which the Djibouti port authority proposes to take against the interests of Compagnie Maritime Auxiliaire D'Outre-Mer (CMAO) in Djibouti. It is our understanding that such action does not involve the seizure of the company but concerns the amount of rent to be paid in the future by CMAO under its lease with the port authority.

It is the responsibility of CMAO to take such action to protect its interests as it deems appropirate having regard to the remedies available under local law. But Her Majesty's ambassador has raised the matter with the Government of Djibouti and the relevant authorities; Foreign and Commonwealth officials have also had discussions with officers of CMAO. We are monitoring developments closely.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Rifkind: The usual written forecast was deposited in the House today. At present four formal and one informal meeting of the Council are scheduled for January.

On 8 and 9 January there will be an informal meeting of Transport Ministers in The Hague. For the meeting the Dutch Presidency has produced three papers covering air, inland and maritime transport which will form the basis for discussion.

On 13-14 January the Fisheries Council may meet to discuss any matters not resolved at the December meetings.

The Economic and Finance Council is expected to meet on 20 January to consider further the calculation of commercial interest reference rates which apply to export finance; the terms of reference of the high level working party on fiscal harmonisation, agreed on at the December Council and to discuss international debt issues.

The Agriculture Council is expected to meet on 20-21 January 1986. Among the subjects expected to be discussed are the reform of the starch regime, sugar for the chemical industry, and outstanding points on Portuguese and Spanish accession.

In the Foreign Affairs Council Ministers will discuss Commission proposals for a negotiating mandate on the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Ministers will also discuss the adaptation of the EC-EFTA agreements to take account of the enlargement of the Community.

European Act (Preamble)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the section of the preamble to the European Act agreed at the Council of Ministers on 17 December relating to European Union and the commitment of member states to realise that objective by means of a new treaty article.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: As I told the House in my statement on 18 December at columns 299-300 the texts agreed by the intergovernmental conference will be made available to the House as soon as we have them in final form.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff and at what Civil Service grade are employed by Her Majesty's Government on research into the means to provide for effective verification of a nuclear test moratorium or a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave in response to a question from the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 6 December 1985 at column 387.

British Embassy (Moscow)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the additional annual cost to public funds of replacing the 79 Soviet citizens working in the United Kingdom embassy and residences by United Kingdom citizens.

Mr. Eggar: Pursuant to the reply I gave on 13 December at column 814, the information is as follows. The estimated annual cost of employing 79 United Kingdom citizens to replace the Soviet citizens working in the embassy and residences in Moscow would be £921,010 if all 79 were single. It would be even higher if a substantial proportion were accompanied by their families, as would be normal.

Since the employment of Soviet citizens currently costs £257,310 per annum, the additional annual cost to public funds would be £663,700. But there would also be additional expenditure on, for instance, language training and the furnishing of accommodation, even assuming the Soviet authorities could provide it, and a number of the major practical problems.

ENVIRONMENT

Docklands STOLport

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the planning application for aircraft terminal positions to be located within 50m of residential houses in Camel Road, Silvertown is compatible with the outline conditions of planning and associated restrictions which he approved earlier this year.

Mr. Tracey: It is for the London Docklands development corporation, as local planning authority, to consider applications concerning the details of the development.

GLC (Consents)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all applications outstanding for more than a month from the Greater London council for consents under the Local Government act 1985; and in each case, what is the reason why a decision has not yet been reached.

Mr. Tracey: A list of these applications follows. This list could be provided in a more detailed form, with reasons why decisions have not yet been issued, only at a disproportionate cost.

1-11 Deancross Street E1
1-21 Blackbury Close
10 Seddon Road, Morden
105 Marlow Road
14 Catering Licences
18-24 Albemarle Road, Beckenham
1985 Brent Carnival
2-4 Thorpe Road E6
200 Venner Road SE26
36-60 South Lambeth Road
39, 58, 65, 73 Moram Road N4
5 Westminster Bridge Road SE1
50-62 King Street, Southall
57-62 High Street, Stroud, Gloucester
59 Mildhay Park N1
72 Acre At Gladstone Terrace
93 Venner Road SE26
A21 Sevenoaks Road, Bromley
Advance
Advice and Information Service
Afro-Caribbean Community Radio
Agricultural Restoration
Anti-Racist Awareness
Anti-Racist Activity
Arcade, Stamford Wharf SE1
Asian Radio Project
Athletic Track Development
Avon Trading Estate W14
Battersea Park
Beaver Estate, Hounslow
Beddington-Mitchan Area
Betty May Gray House, Peir Street
Block B, Camberwell Green Breakthrough Trust
Bridge Road, Southall
British Deaf Association
Burgess Park
Burgess Park
Burgess Park
Burgess Park
Bus Priority Measures
Car Park at Fenelon Place
Children's Legal Centre
Civil Defence Video Films
Clays Road, Thorns Way, Walton
Coin Street
Coin Street
Coin Street
Community Radio Project
Computer Equip for Office
Computer Equipment
Consultants to Study Abolition
Crayford Stadium Site, Bexley
Deephams, Edmonton, Sandy Lane
Dericte Street—Hackney
Dial-a-Ride
Disability Resource Team
East Hackney
East Hackney
Employment In GLC
Ethnic Minority Radio
Finsbury Park
Friends for the Young Deaf
Friends of the Young Deaf
George Green Centre
GLC Arts+Recreation Department
GLC/LRT Travel Diary OP
Grants for "Special Areas"
Grants for "Special Areas"
Grants for "Special Areas"
Grants for "Special Areas"
Hainault Forest
Heckford Street/Cranford Street/Cable
Homeless Families
Homelessness Inititives
Indemnity
Indemnity to Employees
Lambeth Walk Area (Ethelred VI)
Langdon Park
LFB Training Centre
LFB Training Centre
Local Household Survey
Local Information Initiatives
Local Radio Workshop
London Boroughs
London Ecology Centre
Londoners Action Kit
Londoners' Guide to Benefits
Malham Road SE23
Medway Homes, Kent
Metropolitan Roads in Lambeth
Mile End
Mile End Park
Mile End Park
Mile End Park
Monier Road E3, Tower Hamlets
Museum Service (Mobile Museum)
Neasden Rail Freight Depot
Neighbourhood Gypsy Worker
New Covent Garden, Nine Elms
New Lydenburg 11
Northern Distributor Road
Oldfield Road SWTS
Oldfield Road SWTS
One Islington
Parks and Open Spaces
Parliament Hill
Peace Street E!
Perivale Park Athletics Track
Playgrounds—fixed equipment
Pollution monitoring station
Polytechnic of Central London
Prov of Specialist Information
Railway Tavern, Hale Lane NW7
Relay
Ripple Road junction with Upney Lane
Road Safety
Roman Road/Grove Road junction
Roman Road/Grove Road junction
Roundhouse Arts Centre
Royal society for Mewntally
Scientific Branch Equipment
Shoreditch Park
Spinal Injuries Association
Summer Holiday Sports Activity
Surrey Docks Sports Ground
Surrey Univ+Comm Infor Project
Sutton Housing Trust, Southwark
T W Sound
Thames TV and LWT
Thamesmead Moorings
The Emerald Club W14
The Highway—Tower Hamlets
Thistlebrook Traveller Site
Tower Hamlets Advanced Tech
Tramshed Theatre
Translation and Interpretation
Travellers sites
Trinity College
Unit 1 Parkhouse trading estate
Upgrading of Microcomputers
Victoria PK+Burdett Gdns
Vietnamese Project
Wapping Sports Centre
Welfare Benefits Project
Welfare Rights Advice
Wilton's Music Hall Supplement
Women Enjoy Building
Women's Airwaves
Wormwood Scrubs

Wormscrubs
Wyke House Hotel Site
Yarnton Way Thamesmead

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the London residuary body is currently considering any proposal to turn county hall into a superstore; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I have seen a press report that proposals of this kind are being contemplated. It will be for the London residuary body to evaluate any proposals that are made for the purchase of county hall.

Pollution (Access to Information)

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the report of the working party on public access to information held by pollution control authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave: A decision about publication of the working party's report will be taken in the new year.

Public Consultation Documents (Responses)

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to make public the responses received by his Department to public consultation documents, except where respondents have specifically asked that their responses should be kept confidential.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

"Lifting the Burden"

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to introduce the changes to the town and county planning general development orders which were announced in the recent White Paper, "Lifting the Burden".

Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to introduce the changes to the town and country planning general development orders which were announced in the recent White Paper, "Lifting the Burden".

Mr. Tracey: The necessary orders, made by my right hon. Friend, have been laid before Parliament today. They make amendments to the general development orders 1977 to 1985, and to the special development order of 1985 which deals with national parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty, conservation areas and the Broads. An order made by the Secretary of State for Scotland, amending the Scottish general development order 1981 in broadly similar ways has also been laid before Parliament today. All the new orders will come into operation on 1 March 1986.

Several of the changes to the planning system being made by these new orders were announced in our White Paper, "Lifting the Burden," last July. Extensive public consultation has taken place on most of them as part of our review of the general development order, which began in 1983 and which is continuing. The amendments remove specific planning controls which can be lifted without significant risk to the environment. But one or two of the amendments increase or maintain control where necessary.

The amendments to the general development order mostly introduce or extend permitted development rights for several categories of minor development, so reducing or removing the need for specific planning applications to local planning authorities, as follows.

The limits of the existing right to extend industrial buildings are raised from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. of cubic content, subject to a permitted increase in floor space of 1000 sq m. rather than the present 750 sq m. These increases will not apply in national parks, AONBs, conservation areas in England and Wales and the Broads.

A new exemption for warehouse extensions, based on the same limits is also introduced. In areas to which the SDO applies the right to extend will be limited to not more than 10 per cent. of cubic content subject to a limit of 500 sq m. on the increase in aggregate floorspace.

A new relaxation in the existing size limits on operational building erected by electricity undertakings except in the SDO areas is introduced, together with an exemption for the Civil Aviation Authority's developments relating to air traffic control.

New exemptions are introduced for the improvement and restoration by the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England of property in its care and also for certain minor developments within existing amusement parks, such as the erection of new rides and sideshows, subject to various precise limits.

House occupiers will be able without specific planning permission to erect satellite dish antennas of up to 90 cm. in diameter on or at the front of their houses, as well as at the rear as now, but this relaxation will not apply in the SDO areas (or, in Scotland in the national scenic areas and conservation areas), where present controls will remain in operation. The requirements for listed building consent will also remain unchanged.

The amendments also introduce a new permission for small scale exploratory operations for minerals, and for the removal of material from small, temporary mineral working deposits. Parts of these new permissions will be subject to a new power of direction which will accelerate the process by which mineral planning authorities may intervene to impose full planning controls in certain specified circumstances.

Various other minor procedural changes are being introduced, including a reduction in the requirement upon planning authorities in England and Wales to notify the Department of Transport or the Welsh Office as appropriate of development proposals involving access to certain roads.

One substantive increase in planning controls is proposed. Class VI of the GDO—class V of the Scottish GDO—has sometimes been used to circumvent normal planning controls on the excavation of minerals and on the tipping of waste and spoil on agricultural land; and bonafide agricultural engineering operations on large scale can sometimes present planning problems. The amendments to class VI will greatly reduce the scope for problems and abuses in this area.

The remaining proposals for class VI outlined in the Department's consultation paper of 23 January 1984 are still under active consideration. We propose to introduce further changes, and to consolidate the GDO, and our conclusions will be announced as soon as possible. I understand that the Secretary of State for Scotland is considering introducing similar arrangements to aid consolidation of the Scottish GDO at about the same time.

Our overall aim in making these changes in planning legislation is to reduce the burden on both developers and planning authorities, without putting at risk the essential protection which the planning system provides both in general and in areas of special significance.

Departmental Party (Cost)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent by his Department on the party held on 18 December to celebrate Parliament's consideration of the Okehampton bypass (Confirmation of Order) Bill.

Mr. Ridley: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of the Environment spent nothing on this party. I refer the hon. Member to the answer to his identical question to me.

Domestic Heaters (Asbestos)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what account is taken of the cost of removing asbestos from domestic heaters in the housing investment programme allocation to local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: A detailed description of the methodology for making housing investment programme allocations for 1986-87 has been placed in the Library. A local authority stock condition indicator now represents 28 per cent. of the generalised needs index. The scores of individual authorities on that indicator reflect information about their expenditure needs supplied to my Department in the stock condition inquiry. The categories of works used in that inquiry included heating systems and asbestos treatment.

The Electricity Council has given guidance that storage heaters incorporating asbestos do not need to be replaced until the end of their useful life. Comprehensive guidance about domestic heaters will be included in the revised edition of my Department's booklet, "Asbestos materials in buildings."

Glanford and Scunthorpe

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate what effect regional aid grant of three enterprise zones, his Department's special employment measures, grants and cheap loans from the European Economic Community, derelict land grants, urban aid grants and the activities of English Industrial Estates have had upon employment in the parliamentary constituency of Glanford and Scunthorpe.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 59]: I estimate that since September 1983 just over 1,000 jobs have been created in the three areas within the two enterprise zones in Glanford and Scunthorpe, including that managed by English Estates. This includes 64 jobs directly related to schemes aided by derelict land grant and a proportion of the jobs protected or provided with the aid of regional selective assistance which also total nearly 1,000 throughout Glanford and Scunthorpe. In addition, some 20 jobs have been created outside the zones by grants under the urban programme.

I have no information about jobs created as a result of EEC funding. I am asking my right hon. and learned Friend the Paymaster General to write to my hon. Friend with information about the effect of special employment measures.

DEFENCE

Procurement Programme

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken to improve the efficiency of his Department's procurement programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave on 26 November to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) at column 733.

Radioactivity

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Defence how recently sites within 10 to 15 miles radius of the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment Aldermaston and Royal ordnance factory Burghfield have been monitored for radioactivity; what environmental discharges have been collected and checked; and what was the most recent recommendation of the International Commission on Radiological Protection about a radioactivity level.

Mr. Lee: Environmental surveys are carried out on a continuing and routine basis around the Atomic Weapons Research Establishmnt, Aldermaston, and the Royal ordnance factory, Burghfield, in the area up to some 10 to 15 miles from the sites. These include monitoring at fortnightly, monthly and quarterly intervals, depending on the type of monitoring. The last fortnightly cycle was completed during the week commencing 9 December; the last monthly cycle at the end of November; and the last quarterly cycle at the end of September. All three cycles will have been completed again by the end of the year. Monitoring covers both airborne and liquid discharges, the former on a continuous basis, the latter prior to each batch being released.

The International Commission on Radiological Protection made its last major recommendations in 1977 and has made minor changes as necessary at roughly annual intervals since then. The commission makes recommendations on radiological doses to people, including both classified radiation workers and members of the general public, rather than on levels of radioactivity in waste discharges.

The principal recommendation for members of the public is that it would be prudent to limit exposure on the basis of a lifetime average annual dose of 1 millisievert. Our aim is that the levels of radioactivity in waste discharges from AWRE and ROF Burghfield are such that they could lead to a radiological dose no greater than one thousandth of this figure. In practice, this aim is usually achieved by a substantial margin.

Footpath 43, Menwith with Darley

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 277, concerning a footpath in Menwith with Darley why he did not use the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 when he decided to stop and reprovide the footpath.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 were not applicable in this case.

Footpaths

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce legislation to amend the Defence Act 1842 to provide for proposals to stop up and reprovide footpaths to be subject to formal public representation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In view of the obligation under the Defence Act 1842 to provide a substitute footpath which is not substantially less convenient than the route which is closed, it is not considered necessary to amend the Act in the manner suggested.

United States Submarine (Plymouth)

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current visit to Plymouth Sound of an American submarine.

Mr. Stanley: The USS Henry Clay, an American SSBN, berthed in Plymouth Sound on 10 December on a short routine visit for the purposes of crew rest and recreation. The vessel departed, as planned, on 13 December, after a successful visit.

Military Hospitals (Contract Catering)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding offering alternative employment to civilian catering staff whose jobs are disestablished as the result of the introduction of contract catering at Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Lee: Every effort will be made to find alternative MOD employment within the vicinity of Woolwich garrison for staff affected by contract catering plans at Queen Elizabeth military hospital. The contractor will also be encouraged to employ those staff whose jobs are affected. If despite these efforts some staff have to be declared redundant, they will be eligible for reduncancy compensation based on length of service in the Department.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of meals produced each week by the catering department at Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Lee: About 20,000 main meals are prepared each week at the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what annual financial savings he estimates will result from the introduction of contracts catering at the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Lee: Tenders for the catering support contract at Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich, are currently being evaluated. I am unable to give details of the expected savings that will be achieved since this information would reveal the price of the acceptable tender which is agreed in confidence between the Department and the contractor. I can however say that there will be a significant saving over directly employed labour costs.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those military hospitals which have introduced contract catering services together with the starting dates and the names of the contractors involved.

Mr. Lee: No military hospitals have yet introduced a contract catering service. From 1 April 1986, a contract will be introduced at Princess Alexandra's Royal Air Force hospital, Wroughton, Wilts. The contract has been awarded to Pennine Caterers Ltd.

The use of contract catering at other military hospitals is under consideration, but no decisions have been made.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what evidence he has based his judgment that contract catering at Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich, can provide an effective service at lower cost.

Mr. Lee: The preparation of any proposal to invite tenders for work performed by MOD staff includes the formulation of a schedule of requirements and the identification of in-house costs. The contractor's acceptance of the schedule of requirements and the conditions of contract will ensure an effective service.

It is our policy that the only work that is carried out within the defence support organisation is that it is essential the Ministry of Defence carries out for clearly proven operational reasons or where there is significant financial advantage for the taxpayer.

Devonport and Rosyth

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs at the Principal Supply and Transport Officer Naval (Stores) at Portsmouth are dependent on the supply of stores to Devonport and Rosyth dockyards.

Mr. Lee: The effort involved equates to about 12 staff, but no job is wholly dependent on the supply of stores to Devonport and Rosyth dockyards.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the stores from the Principal Supply and Transport Officer Naval (Stores), Portsmouth that go to Devonport and Rosyth are strategic stores.

Mr. Lee: This information is not readily available.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Principal Supply and Transport Officer Naval (Stores) work at Portsmouth involves sending stores to Rosyth and Devonport.

Mr. Lee: About 15 per cent. of store issues by the Principal Supply and Transport Officer (Naval) at Portsmouth are for Devonport and Rosyth naval bases, but under half of those issues are to meet the requirements of the dockyards themselves.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of civilians employed in the transport departments of Rosyth and Devonport naval bases.

Mr. Lee: The transport departments of the Principal Supply and Transport Officer (Naval) employ 148 civilian staff at Rosyth, and 310 at Devonport.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list all the services provided by Devonport dockyard to the Royal Navy;

(2) if he will list all the services provided by Rosyth dockyard to the Royal Navy.

Mr. Lee: The services provided by the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth to the Royal Navy fall into five main categories as follows:

(a) Refit, repair, maintenance and modernisation of Royal Navy vessels;

(b) Overhaul and testing of naval equipments, including those to be returned to the Director General of Stores and Transport (Navy) for stock and subsequent issue to the Royal Navy;

(c) Installation and maintenance of machinery and equipment in naval establishments;

(d) Provision of utility services to Royal Navy vessels alongside in the naval base and to adjacent naval shore establishments; and

(e) manufacture of some items of ships' equipment.

Royal Navy (Civilian Staff)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all Royal Navy establishments in the United Kingdom employing civilian staff, indicating (a) the number of staff and (b) the rôle of that establishment.

Mr. Lee: The table shows naval establishments employing civilian staff within the main management areas together with details of their role-function. The detailed information on the numbers employed at individual establishments is not readily available but the overall management area strength as at 1 October 1985 is shown for information.

Management Area	Overall civilian strength as at 1 October 1985	Location/Title	Function/Role
Chief Executive Dockyards (CED)	21,252	Devonport Rosyth	Dockyards
		Faslane	Clyde Submarine Base
		Portland	Port Auxiliary Repair unit
		Blackbrook Farm	Internal Combustion Engine Repair Depot
		Navy Department Shore Machinery Offices: Aberporth, Belfast, Forest Moor, Inskip, Hangennoch, Milford Haven, Pembroke Dock, Risley and Trecwn	Support to Fleet and Civil Shore Establishments
		CED Telecommunications: at Fort Southwick, Forest Moor HMS COLLINGWOOD, Mount Wise and Northwood	Telecommunications
Director General of Supplies and Transport (Naval) (DGST(N))	13,581	Arrochar, Beith, Coulport Crombie, Dean Hill, Devonport, Milford Haven, Portsmouth and Trecwn	Armament Depots
		Copenacre, Devonport, Eaglescliffe, Exeter, Faslane, Fleetlands, Kirkliston, Lathalmond, Llangennoch, Newcastle upon Tyne, Perth, Portland, Portsmouth, Rosyth, Slough Woolsten, Wrangaton and Yeovilton	Stores/Victualling Depots
		Devonport, Garelochead, Invergordon, Pembroke Dock, Portland and Portsmouth	Oil Fuel Depots
Commander in Chief Naval Home Command (CINCNAVHOME)	4049	Plymouth, Portsmouth and Scotland/Northern Ireland	Flag Officers
		Dartmouth, Greenwich and Manadan	Royal Naval Colleges
		HMSs—CAMBRIDGE, COLLINGWOOD, DOLPHIN, MERCURY, TEMERAIRE, RALEIGH, ROYAL ARTHUR, SULTAN and VERNON	Training Establishments
		HMSs—CALEDONIA and EXCELLENT	Accommodation Centres
		HMSs—COCHRANE, DRAKE, NELSON, NEPTUNE	Naval Bases
		HMS INSKIP	Wireless Telegraphy Station

Management Area	Overall civilian strength as at 1 October 1985	Location/Title	Function/Role
		Royal Naval Auxiliary Service (RNXS) at—Birkenhead, Clyde, Forth FOSNI, N. Ireland, Plymouth, Portsmouth and Tyne
		Royal Naval Reserve—HMSs—CALLIOPE, CAMBRIA, CAMPERDOWN, CAROLINE, CLAVERHOUSE, EAGLET, FLYING FOX, GRAHAM, PRESIDENT, SUSSEX, WESSEX	HQ Units
		Royal Naval Reserve Training Centres: Birmingham, Chatham, Coventry, Leeds, Nottingham, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Preston, Sheffield, Southend, Stockton and Swansea	Communications. Training Centres.
Director General Fleet Support Policy and Services	3082	Director of Marine Services (Naval) Clyde, Portland, Portsmouth, Plymouth and Rosyth	Marine Support to the Royal Navy
Fleet Maintenance and Repair Organisation (FMRO)	3045	Portsmouth	Fleet maintenance and repair
Director General Aircraft (Naval) (DGA(N))	1704	Fleetlands Wroughton	Tri-Service helicopter repair facility
		Perth	Component repair Establishment
Flag Officer Naval Air Command (FONAC)	973	HMSs—DAEDALUS, GANNET, HERON, OSPREY and SEAHAWK	Naval Air Stations
Hydrographer	901	Taunton	Headquarters
		Plymouth Portsmouth Rosyth	Chart Depots
Commandant General Royal Marines (CGRM)	761	Bickleigh Eastney Norton Manor Seaton Stonehouse	Royal Marine Barracks/ Camps
		Deal	Royal Marine School of Music
		HMS CONDOR	Commando unit
Medical Director General (Naval) (MDG(N))	629	Haslar Stonehouse	Hospitals
		Greenock	Medical Store
		Alverstoke (Gosport)	Institute of Naval Medicine
Directorate General of Naval Manpower and Training (DGNMT)	481	HMS CENTURION	Naval pay and records
Commander in Chief Fleet (CINCFLEET)	213	HMS WARRIOR	Fleet Operations Control
		Plymouth	Fleet Maintenance Group
		Mount Wise	Wireless and Telegraphy Station
		Gosport	Flag Officer Submarines

Management Area	Overall civilian strength as at 1 October 1985	Location/Title	Function/Role
Department of Naval Recruiting (DNR)	41	Brighton, Bristol, Derby, Glasgow, HQ Western Region, HQ South East Region, Ipswich, Liverpool, Reading, Scotland and Northern Ireland and Southampton	Royal Navy/Royal Marine Careers Officers and School Liaison Officers
		Wroughton	Display Workshop

Procurement Expenditure

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion by value of the total procurement expenditure of his Department was directly with (a) firms employing up to 50 employees and (b) firms employing up to 200 employees in the financial year 1984-85.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The statistics for financial year 1984-85 are not yet available. I will write to my hon. Friend when they are.

Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men of 9 Signals Regiment have been transferred from 1 Squadron to 3 Squadron since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that none has been transferred.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men of 9 Signals Regiment have been interviewed by officers of DI24A since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that 47 service men or former service men of 9 Signals Regiment have been interviewed by officers of DI24A since 3 February 1984.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men of 9 Signals Regiment have been interviewed by Colonel Dobson of DI24A since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Stanley: Since 3 February 1984, I understand Lieutenant-Colonel Dobson has interviewed nine former members of 9 Signals Regiment.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men of 9 Signals Regiment have been transferred from 2 Squadron to 3 Squadron since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that none has been transferred.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what duties soldiers from the Guards Division would be employed on if they were not acting as grooms for fox hunting at RAVC Melton Mowbray;

(2) what is his policy towards soldiers at RAVC Melton Mowbray concealing their fox hunting activities there from other Army visitors to the centre;

(3) what proportion of Army horses spend their winter at RAVC Melton Mowbray; what exercise and training the remaining horses receive and where; and why they do not participate in hunting there;

(4) who owns the vehicles used to transport horses to hunt meetings; and who is responsible for the fuel and other running costs;

(5) what is the current usage of Land Rover registration number 64 HG 93 and Rice trailer 43 FL 94; and if he will make a statement on their use in connection with attendance at hunts in each of the last two seasons;

(6) if he will make it his policy to prohibit the use of regimental funds in connection with the use of departmental property, such as horses, to participate in fox hunting;

(7) whether any insurance costs arise to public funds in respect of the participation of Army (a) horses and (b) personnel in hunting activities;

(8) how regiments organise payments for block bookings taken out with hunts each winter; and what costs arise to public funds in this respect;

(9) what is the current annual cost of keeping a cavalry, Guards or King's Troop horse; and if this is fully met from public funds;

(10) what costs arise to public funds in respect of the participation of Army staff and horses in fox hunting; and if he will give the figures for the last two seasons broken down by character of cost;

(11) when, pursuant to the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, Army horses were first permitted to ride in hunts;

(12) on how many days in the 1984-85 season the 19 Army officers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, hunted;

(13) on how many days in the 1984-85 season any of the 25 soldiers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, actually rode to hounds.

(14) what were the duties of the 25 soldiers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, in the 1984-85 season whilst at RAVC Melton Mowbray;

(15) how many horses from each of the Household Cavalry, .Kings' Troop Royal Horse Artillery and the Guards Division were injured whilst hunting; and how many died whilst hunting or from causes directly related to hunting, in each of the last two seasons;

(16) how the horses are selected to participate in hunting activities; how are the (a) officers and (b) men selected from amongst the volunteers; and how many horses have been selected in total in each of the last five years, broken down by the number of times they have been so selected.

Mr. Lee: I will answer shortly.

Fife Region (Civil Servants)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each office or establishment of his Department in the Fife region the number of Civil Service posts at the following grades (a) clerical assistant, (b) clerical officer, (c) executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) principal, (g) deputy principal and (h) senior deputy principal; and what is the current rate of turnover in staff.

Mr. Lee: I will reply shortly.

Devonport Dockyard

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to prevent the managing director of Her Majesty's Devonport dockyard using his Department's official notepaper, envelopes and internal post to publicise a private company which he and other senior managers have formed to tender for the contract to manage Devonport dockyard from 1 April 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985, c. 812]: No. The managing director of Devonport dockyard may properly use my Department's stationery and internal postal system to make information available to the work force for which he is responsible, and to those with whom he normally has dealings, about the formation of a company by himself and a small team of managers at the dockyard to bid in competition with other companies for the contract to manage the dockyard.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the extent to which the involvement of serving Royal Navy officers in a private company tendering for the contract to manage Devonport dockyard from 1 April 1987 is consistent with the terms of Queen's Regulations so long as those officers continue to occupy their present positions;

(2) if he will make a statement on the extent to which the actions of the managing director of Devonport dockyard and other senior Civil Service managers, in forming a private company for the purposes of tendering for the contract to manage the dockyard after 1 April 1987, are consistent with the regulations governing the ethical conduct of civil servants, so long as those persons continue to occupy their present positions.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 December 1985, c. 812]: The basic criterion governing the involvement of serving Royal Navy officers and civil servants in private activities is that there must be no conflict of interests between the private activity concerned and the individual's official duties.

As my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State said in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Drake (Miss Fookes) at column 781, there is a broad identity of interest for those concerned, both as managers of the dockyard and as potential bidders for the contract. As my right hon. Friend also made clear, we shall be keeping the arrangements under close review.

Royal Air Force (Aircrew)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for defence how many of the 147 pilots and 69 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force this year were serving their last posting with Royal Air Force Germany.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Twelve pilots and five navigators have left the Royal Air Force this year who were serving their last tour with Royal Air Force Germany.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year, have served between 12 and 16 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Royal Air Force for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Five. As they have amortised their training costs no reimbursement was necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between eight and 12 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Royal Air Force for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: One. As he had amortised his training costs no reimbursement was necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between eight and 12 years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Fifteen.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between four and eight years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Seven.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served under four years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: One.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between 12 and 16 years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Six.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served less than four years; and what is the average amount that they have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: None.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal

Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between four and eight years; and what is the average amount that they have had to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Two. As they had amortised their training costs no reimbursement was necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement at some future date have served between 12 and 16 years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Two.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served between eight and 12 years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Two.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served between four and eight years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Two.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 46 navigators who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement have served under four years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: One.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement in the current year have served between 12 and 16 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagements.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: One. As he had amortised his training costs no reimbursement was necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served under four years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: None.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year have served between four and eight years; and what is the average amount they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: One. As he had amortised his training costs no reimbursement was necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 30 navigators who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement in the current year have served between eight and 12 years; and what is the average amount that they have been asked to reimburse the Ministry of Defence for non-completion of engagement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: None.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 74 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement are serving currently with fast jet squadrons in (a) Royal Air Force Germany, (b) strike command or (c) fast jet training schools.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]:

(a) RAF Germany	None
(b) Strike Command	Two
(c) Fast jet training schools	Eight

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 58 pilots who have left the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement this year were serving with fast jet squadrons in (a) Royal Air Force Germany, (b) strike command or (c) fast jet training schools.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]:

(a) RAF Germany	None
(b) Strike Command	None
(c) Fast Jet Training Schools	Three

SOCIAL SERVICES

NHS (Services)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give, for each district in 1984-85, the total expenditure on cleaning, the expenditure on services provided by private cleaning companies, the latter figure as a percentage of the former, and the difference between that percentage and the percentage in the previous year;

(2) if he will give for each district in 1984-85 the total expenditure on catering, the expenditure on services provided by private catering companies, the latter figure as a percentage of the former, and the difference between that percentage and the percentage in the previous year;

(3) if he will give for each district in 1984-85 the total expenditure on laundry, the expenditure on services provided by private laundry companies, the latter figure as a percentage of the former and the difference between that percentage and the percentage in the previous year.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 25 November 1985, c. 498-99]: Following is the information requested, derived from the annual accounts of regional and district health authorities.

Figures for 1984-85 are not entirely comparable with those for 1983-84 as value added tax on contracted-out services became reclaimable by health authorities on 1 September 1983.

Northern Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic/Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Hartlepool	575,270	—	—	—	955,452	12,464	1·30	0·10	146,929	9	0·01	0·01
North Tees	1,028,401	—	—	—	1,213,369	1,460	0·12	(3·96)	177,804	1,063	0·60	0·26
South Tees	2,203,773	—	—	—	2,566,836	31,514	1·23	0·26	296,014	14,562	4·92	2·76
East Cumbria	1,189,390	—	—	—	1,456,655	16,216	1·11	0·27	209,787	3,927	1·87	(0·09)
South Cumbria	952,288	—	—	—	992,828	4,872	0·55	(0·28)	211,495	16,972	8·02	2·08
West Cumbria	1,101,356	2,480	0·23	(0·43)	1,065,617	16,411	1·54	0·14	158,963	631	0·40	(0·34)
Darlington	1,215,972	—	—	—	1,252,632	10,102	0·81	0·16	213,580	—	—	—
Durham	946,792	—	—	—	1,165,659	9,253	0·79	0·61	207,987	29,224	14·05	12·36
North West Durham	650,431	—	—	—	837,957	5,088	0·60	(0·12)	119,620	56	0·05	(0·05)
South West Durham	1,459,693	—	—	—	1,821,595	9,785	0·54	0·02	254,932	342	0·13	0·10
Northumberland	2,996,621	—	—	—	2,955,572	8,635	0·29	(0·07)	397,671	553	0·14	0·08
Gateshead	1,213,091	—	—	—	1,804,481	24,285	1·34	0·05	90,808	69	0·08	0·05
Newcastle upon Tyne	3,876,132	1,465	0·04	(0·05)	4,740,903	41,366	0·87	(0·30)	658,187	128,238	19·48	(7·32)
North Tyneside	919,937	—	—	—	1,019,312	5,165	0·49	—	102,619	2,079	2·03	0·66
South Tyneside	875,212	—	—	—	1,211,911	24,383	2·01	0·62	195,400	755	0·39	(0·01)
Sunderland	2,578,421	972	0·04	—	3,011,124	14,645	0·49	(0·18)	515,434	—	—	—
Regional Health Authority	26,417	2,076	7·86	6·71	137,774	3,432	2·49	(1·22)	9,629	9,629	100·00	—
Regional Total	23,609,197	6,993	0·03	(0·02)	28,169,675	239,036	0·85	(0·14)	3,966,858	208,109	5·25	(0·45)

Yorkshire Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic/Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Hull	1,917,164	—	—	—	2,730,985	45,526	1·65	(0·10)	332,868	13,506	4·06	0·74
East Yorkshire	1,712,273	—	—	—	1,786,590	13,896	0·78	(0·24)	208,883	19,114	9·15	0·81
Grimsby	799,528	—	—	—	1,174,177	10,809	0·92	(0·10)	84,431	2,000	2·37	0·31
Scunthorpe	873,388	—	—	—	1,197,989	13,818	1·15	(0·09)	228,117	1,592	0·70	(0·60)
Northallerton	465,941	20,057	4·30	(0·37)	451,461	9,250	2·05	0·13	63,919	20,506	32·08	(16·21)
York	2,147,115	—	—	—	2,276,594	14,814	0·65	0·17	287,843	12,371	4·30	(3·54)
Scarborough	775,557	—	—	—	845,407	3,907	0·46	(0·04)	138,504	6,496	4·69	1·43
Harrogate	1,090,465	—	—	—	1,199,451	5,100	0·43	(0·05)	141,110	6,467	4·58	(3·17)
Bradford	2,612,750	—	—	—	2,870,592	24,179	0·84	0·05	441,609	9,624	2·18	(0·83)
Airedale	1,482,030	—	—	—	1,101,991	8,780	0·80	0·26	203,863	3,968	1·95	0·16
Calderdale	1,413,977	—	—	—	1,185,488	7,843	0·66	0·09	269,947	2,202	0·82	—
Huddersfield	1,889,112	—	—	—	2,044,898	12,921	0·63	(0·09)	333,100	7,734	2·32	0·88
Dewsbury	841,242	—	—	—	1,253,250	4,075	0·32	(0·08)	174,994	80,254	45·86	7·98
Leeds Western	3,189,644	—	—	—	3,270,506	328,000	10·14	3·32	773,509	33,834	4·37	2·38
Leeds Eastern	2,608,062	—	—	—	3,829,039	44,190	1·15	0·22	483,348	—	—	(0·35)
Wakefield	1,870,607	—	—	—	1,344,128	17,491	1·13	(0·09)	324,426	—	—	—
Pontefract	908,436	—	—	—	1,051,083	6,272	0·60	(0·03)	156,409	525	0·34	0·31
Regional Health Authority	46,457	—	—	—	205,733	8,851	4·30	1·01	15,682	—	—	(68·65)
Regional Total	26,643,750	20,057	0·08	0·01	30,039,342	779,729	2·60	0·36	4,662,562	220,193	4·72	(0·26)

Trent Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
North Derbyshire	1,729,866	—	—	—	2,080,421	6,926	0·34	(0·17)	244,247	20,421	8·36	(0·61)
South Derbyshire	3,787,727	8,887	0·23	0·23	3,692,573	92,108	2·49	0·20	515,651	2,583	0·50	(0·21)
Leicestershire	5,392,630	—	—	—	6,078,800	64,919	1·07	0·08	716,983	20,253	2·82	0·97
North Lincolnshire	1,975,472	—	—	—	2,462,976	17,544	0·71	(0·18)	264,959	7,959	3·00	(1·52)
South Lincolnshire	1,794,547	—	—	—	2,033,478	11,598	0·57	0·02	347,108	1,353	0·39	(0·45)
Bassetlaw	489,028	—	—	—	445,870	7,329	1·64	0·20	139,080	1,553	1·12	(0·22)
Central Nottinghamshire	2,081,345	13,294	0·64	0·59	2,177,324	6,054	0·28	(0·12)	279,140	5,765	2·07	1·97
Nottingham	4,024,195	—	—	—	6,559,407	98,499	1·47	0·78	1,146,031	17,089	1·49	0·43
Barnsley	1,425,959	5,777	0·41	(0·05)	1,506,045	14,970	0·99	(0·31)	282,987	11,998	4·24	3·23
Doncaster	2,037,095	—	—	—	1,504,853	4,567	0·29	(0·11)	272,710	757	0·28	0·28
Rotherham	1,321,802	—	—	—	1,449,320	19,105	1·32	0·07	227,728	4	—	(3·80)
Sheffield	5,090,248	—	—	(0·09)	7,864,337	83,421	1·06	0·61	654,820	730	0·11	(5·25)
Regional Health Authority	77,743	65,096	83·73	29·49	267,204	42,352	15·85	(0·92)	7,633	4,406	57·72	22·21
Region Total	31,227,160	93,054	0·30	0·09	38,162,608	467,390	1·22	0·25	5,099,067	94,869	1·86	(0·42)

East Anglian Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Cambridge	1,930,744	*			2,119,001	730,512	34·47	—	350,988	3,065	0·87	(1·68)
Peterborough	1,643,438	—	—	—	1,586,422	9,234	0·58	—	273,961	—	—	(0·02)
West Suffolk	1,460,139	—	—	—	1,490,150	27,171	1·82	(0·55)	417,027	—	—	—
East Suffolk	2,558,232	—	—	—	2,689,892	15,143	0·56	(0·08)	448,825	171	0·04	0·01
Norwich	3,623,435	—	—	—	4,366,541	16,547	0·38	(0·62)	400,057	5,691	1·42	(0·99)
Great Yarmouth	1,228,345	—	—	—	1,221,312	(10,422	0·85	0·28	340,805	4,253	1·25	0·75
West Norfolk and Wisbech	947,894	—	—	—	1,289,956	8,221	0·64	0·14	233,885	—	—	—
Huntingdon	467,894	—	—	—	452,479	223,899	49·48	31·85	83,476	31,004	97·04	96·19
Regional Health Authority	9,070	—	—	—	37,911	33,283	87·79	(2·66)	2,473	280	11·73	2·29
Regional Total	13,869,209	—	—	—	15,253,724	1,074,432	7·04	0·54	2,551,497	98,474	3·70	2·77

North West Thames Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
North Bedfordshire	1,221,342	327	0·03	0·03	1,651,204	11,442	0·69	0·09	211,129	11,006	5·21	3·44
South Bedfordshire	1,455,825	—	—	—	1,861,597	20,691	1·11	(0·18)	393,682	251,541	63·86	(0·58)
North Hertfordshire	974,182	—	—	—	1,267,410	20,729	1·64	(0·46)	118,541	1,420	1·20	0·12
East Hertfordshire	725,997	—	—	—	923,918	30,672	3·32	0·08	261,383	35,350	13·52	(3·10)
North West Hertfordshire	2,345,831	—	—	—	2,342,293	7,275	0·31	(0·56)	431,242	5,306	1·23	(0·28)
South West Hertfordshire	1,828,251	—	—	—	2,158,650	30,805	1·43	0·49	305,333	58,649	19·21	7·39
Barnet	2,797,175	—	—	—	3,593,877	34,605	0·96	(0·12)	315,363	2,142	0·68	0·08
Harrow	1,285,027	16,696	1·30	0·33	1,977,104	36,943	1·87	0·61	142,958	17,678	12·37	(11·48)
Hillingdon	1,380,773	—	—	—	2,388,810	15,627	0·65	(0·10)	211,366	1,154	0·55	0·16
Hounslow and Spelthorne	1,695,797	—	—	—	2,534,971	85,210	3·36	2·65	413,318	128,469	31·08	(11·49)
Ealing	1,986,795	—	—	—	2,089,083	7,421	0·36	(0·94)	253,396	7,854	3·10	(4·19)
Brent	2,281,105	—	—	—	2,518,264	20,252	0·80	0·77	338,453	—	—	—
Paddington	2,160,131	—	—	—	3,340,507	23,848	0·71	(0·28)	426,983	167,465	39·41	28·49
Hammersmith and Fulham	1,620,327	—	—	—	2,595,774	43,253	1·67	(0·15)	355,411	60,252	16·95	0·67
Victoria	3,142,914	—	—	—	4,190,949	220,877	5·27	(0·08)	450,101	195,214	43·37	(12·76)
Regional Health Authority	78,392	30,756	40·26	(6·28)	158,724	56,702	35·72	(2·32)	10,841	—	—	(37·20)
Regional Total	26,957,864	47,779	0·18	0·01	35,573,335	666,332	1·87	0·11	4,637,702	943,500	20·34	0·08

North East Thames Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Basildon and Thurrock	1,724,548	—	—	—	2,729,442	17,642	0·65	(0·06)	402,990	—	—	—
Mid Essex	1,122,806	169	0·02	0·02	1,801,882	44,431	2·47	1·31	405,776	12,895	3·18	0·28
North East Essex	2,516,174	—	—	—	2,577,041	123,114	4·78	3·12	413,764	6,062	1·47	1·47
West Essex	1,185,049	—	—	—	1,503,318	40,695	2·71	(0·04)	205,897	7	—	(1·22)
Southend	1,674,745	—	—	—	2,231,688	23,597	1·06	0·15	394,905	175,359	44·41	(27·40)
Barking Havering Brentwood	2,554,316	—	—	—	3,617,295	31,212	0·86	0·07	442,490	19,020	4·30	2·53
Hampstead	2,422,190	—	—	—	3,141,008	32,101	1·02	(0·53)	381,056	—	—	—
Bloomsbury	4,402,903	—	—	—	6,220,884	122,736	1·97	(0·44)	547,320	464,637	84·89	15·18
Islington	1,792,998	8,521	0·48	(0·09)	2,366,728	17,925	0·76	0·15	236,501	3,966	1·68	0·10
City and Hackney	2,702,650	—	—	—	4,383,607	74,695	1·70	(1·10)	365,268	5,924	1·62	(5·51)
Newham	1,134,531	2,144	0·19	(0·01)	1,779,318	12,345	0·69	0·30	306,608	4,787	1·56	0·11
Tower Hamlets	1,824,893	18,140	0·99	0·31	3,370,068	53,890	1·60	(0·88)	418,889	14,299	3·41	(0·71)
Enfield	913,076	—	—	—	1,763,549	19,734	1·12	0·33	217,274	6,136	2·82	0·94
Haringey	968,516	—	—	—	1,902,744	7,728	0·41	(0·38)	332,838	7,494	2·25	(2·10)
Redbridge	1,539,815	—	—	—	1,788,193	195,329	10·92	(9·23)	279,709	565	0·20	(0·05)
Waltham Forest	2,418,203	—	—	—	3,747,207	22,488	0·60	0·02	288,433	8,288	2·87	0·72
Regional Health Authority	94,041	31,441	33·43	(25·26)	233,927	41,057	17·55	0·88	9,101	3,402	37·38	(13·10)
Region Total	40,990,054	60,415	0·14	(0·03)	45,157,899	880,719	1·95	(0·29)	5,648,879	732,841	12·97	(0·44)

South East Thames Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Brighton	1,905,999	—	—	—	2,308,293	26,700	1·16	(0·01)	242,583	27,258	11·24	2·04
Eastbourne	1,405,318	1,352	0·10	0·10	1,768,953	4,877	0·28	(0·04)	358,632	26,252	7·32	4·29
Hastings	1,126,928	—	—	(0·03)	1,211,834	9,244	0·76	0·07	252,908	5,508	2·18	0·06
South East Kent	1,166,173	—	—	—	1,590,299	36,080	2·27	0·47	430,534	5,974	1·39	(0·43)
Canterbury and Thanet	2,230,761	—	—	—	2,724,153	20,162	0·74	0·02	660,535	8,524	1·29	(0·09)
Dartford and Gravesham	1,884,166	—	—	—	2,712,773	16,603	0·61	(0·18)	405,203	7,150	1·76	(0·61)
Maidstone	1,355,603	—	—	—	1,655,191	297,093	17·95	10·25	194,999	88,300	45·28	12·30
Medway	1,092,252	—	—	—	921,632	296,489	32·17	12·58	257,501	5,131	1·99	(0·12)
Tunbridge Wells	1,840,375	—	—	—	2,356,985	14,308	0·61	(0·02)	420,958	80,892	19·22	11·41
Bexley	1,352,677	—	—	—	1,918,658	31,629	1·65	1·03	287,412	9,442	3·29	(0·83)
Greenwich	2,343,143	—	—	—	3,220,852	9,760	0·30	(0·07)	325,607	6,179	1·90	(0·18)
Bromley	2,226,439	115,641	5·19	5·19	2,527,267	245,488	9·71	8·66	505,176	19,059	3·77	(0·31)
West Lambeth	3,199,756	—	—	—	4,273,114	23,497	0·55	(1·72)	345,454	172,845	50·03	(13·45)
Camberwell	2,224,263	—	—	—	2,723,980	19,476	0·71	0·02	361,395	76,010	21·03	8·95
Lewisham and North Southwark	3,460,856	39,627	1·15	0·08	5,063,479	65,330	1·29	0·07	680,772	9,081	1·33	(0·03)
Regional Health Authority	63,576	32,351	50·89	50·89	106,909	36,812	34·43	13·77	7,513	3,253	43·30	(28·75)
Region Total	28,858,305	188,971	0·65	0·53	37,084,372	1,153,548	3·11	1·04	5,737,182	550,858	9·60	(1·03)

South West Thames Regional Health Districts

South West Thames Region Health Districts	Catering: Total expenditure £	Catering: Private contracts £	Catering: Private contracts Percentage of total	Catering: Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Domestic/Cleaning: Total expenditure £	Domestic/Cleaning: Private contracts £	Domestic/Cleaning: Private contracts Percentage of total	Domestic/Cleaning: Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Laundry: Total expenditure £	Laundry: Private contracts £	Laundry: Private contracts Percentage of total	Laundry: Difference in percentage from 1983-84
North West Surrey	1,642,462	—	—	—	1,762,861	22,169	1·26	0·13	346,574	202,304	58·37	41·97
West Surrey and North East Hants	1,820,466	—	—	—	1,925,667	27,398	1·42	0·18	360,826	6,142	1·70	1·26
South West Surrey	1,231,807	28,926	2·35	2·35	1,572,404	51,408	3·27	2·22	259,311	1,898	0·73	0·49
Mid Surrey	2,310,880	—	—	—	2,195,364	25,641	1·17	(0·30)	367,631	1,989	0·54	(0·86)
East Surrey	2,028,080	3,813	0·19	0·16	1,937,693	159,492	8·23	2·35	410,481	165,150	40·23	28·19
Chichester	1,203,620	—	—	—	1,069,117	14,465	1·35	(0·31)	144,539	7,090	4·91	1·15
Mid Downs	1,585,102	1,673	0·11	(0·13)	1,447,711	116,828	8·07	6·18	204,836	20,181	9·85	0·94
Worthing	939,857	2,968	0·32	0·30	1,314,737	19,643	1·49	0·39	163,337	8,663	5·30	0·13
Croydon	2,610,785	—	—	—	2,940,928	27,246	0·93	0·49	607,926	208,842	34·35	31·10
Kingston and Esher	1,836,377	24,472	1·33	(0·15)	2,465,884	42,619	1·73	(0·56)	239,961	155,851	64·95	57·62
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton	1,193,079	—	—	—	1,735,786	41,827	2·41	0·25	404,430	323,309	79·94	15·73
Wandsworth	3,274,318	10,145	0·31	(0·13)	4,408,652	23,295	0·53	0·05	485,883	137,909	28·38	6·87
Merton and Sutton	2,544,421	17,527	0·69	0·01	3,513,217	152,946	4·35	2·46	669,316	211,920	31·66	23·65
Regional Health Authority	34,506	24,073	69·76	(9·68)	162,499	162,499	100·00	—	31,718	31,718	100·00	—
Region Total	24,255,760	113,647	0·47	0·05	28,452,520	887,476	3·12	0·89	4,696,769	1,482,966	31·57	18·04

Wessex Region Health Districts

	Catering: Total expenditure £	Catering: Private contracts £	Catering: Private contracts Percentage of total	Catering: Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Domestic/Cleaning: Total expenditure £	Domestic/Cleaning: Private contracts £	Domestic/Cleaning: Private contracts Percentage of total	Domestic/Cleaning: Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Laundry: Total expenditure £	Laundry: Private contracts £	Laundry: Private contracts Percentage of total	Laundry: Difference in percentage from 1983-84
East Dorset	2,508,015	—	—	—	2,732,766	17,277	0·63	(0·86)	322,389	10,637	3·30	(2·80)
West Dorset	1,706,502	—	—	—	1,649,467	15,559	0·94	0·50	275,048	7,680	2·79	0·66
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire	3,052,025	—	—	—	3,279,556	15,782	0·48	0·04	396,496	4,807	1·21	(0·77)
Southampton and South West Hampshire	3,274,181	—	—	—	4,384,194	19,887	0·45	0·03	527,372	5,898	1·12	0·54
Winchester	951,474	1,065	0·11	0·11	1,170,661	34,940	2·98	0·30	212,264	175,521	82·69	(7·07)
Basingstoke and North Hampshire	1,738,646	311	0·02	0·01	2,146,729	8,361	0·39	0·10	226,663	10,275	4·53	(0·60)
Salisbury	1,244,215	—	—	—	1,096,945	2,345	0·21	(0·13)	171,577	6,374	3·71	3·20
Swindon	1,334,340	8,863	0·66	0·66	1,326,627	5,971	0·45	(0·15)	215,551	3,431	1·60	1·04
Bath	2,627,845	—	—	—	2,476,423	13,926	0·56	(0·06)	424,094	—	—	(0·05)
Isle of Wight	846,825	—	—	—	843,949	6,294	0·75	—	163,943	33,681	20·54	0·96
Regional Health Authority	c 13,878	—	—	—	49,717	48,882	98·32	1·40	3,141	3,141	100·00	—
Regional Total	19,297,946	10,239	0·05	0·05	21,157,034	189,224	0·89	(0·04)	2,938,538	261,465	8·90	(0·14)

Oxford Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
East Berkshire	1,901,979	—	—	—	2,155,666	9,308	0·43	(0·38)	406,123	57,402	14·13	(0·95)
West Berkshire	2,484,950	3,375	0·14	0·10	3,010,956	60,136	2·00	1·04	301,403	882	0·29	(3·17)
Aylesbury	1,252,871	—	—	—	1,577,348	224,189	14·21	3·36	319,022	256,663	80·45	0·54
Wycombe	804,064	—	—	—	792,842	11,720	1·48	0·50	232,449	217,111	93·40	(1·67)
Milton Keynes	340,408	514	0·15	0·13	383,495	183,198	47·77	41·13	143,403	5	—	(0·03)
Kettering	1,079,659	—	—	—	1,245,888	8,021	0·64	0·42	329,511	802	0·24	0·02
Northampton	1,884,577	—	—	—	2,039,791	9,450	0·46	(0·18)	377,466	3,913	1·04	(0·23)
Oxford	3,232,864	9,827	0·30	0·05	3,879,886	147,896	3·81	(3·30)	799,796	50,638	6·33	(5·29)
Regional Health Authority	13,997	—	—	—	62,873	21,217	33·75	0·02	4,442	4,442	100·0	—
Region Total	12,995,369	13,716	0·11	0·04	15,148,745	675,185	4·46	0·83	2,913,615	591,858	20·31	(2·38)

South Western Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Bristol and Weston	2,564,021	2,114	0·08	(0·20)	2,916,424	9,925	0·34	0·15	286,729	7,989	2·79	0·24
Frenchay	2,435,780	1,331	0·05	(0·14)	2,345,334	13,567	0·58	0·02	319,084	8,772	2·75	1·61
Southmead	1,687,701	—	—	(0·02)	2,147,527	10,142	0·47	(0·28)	447,139	3,634	0·81	(19·57)
Cornwall	2,995,491	—	—	—	2,892,028	27,516	0·95	0·12	701,767	285,955	40·75	28·10
Exeter	3,489,470	288	0·01	0·01	3,048,706	32,629	1·07	0·14	401,765	5,959	1·48	0·75
North Devon	678,798	—	—	—	795,936	3,401	0·43	(0·02)	172,426	3,271	1·90	0·03
Plymouth	2,024,032	—	—	—	2,652,852	16,468	0·62	(0·19)	532,372	3,903	0·73	0·39
Torbay	1,120,870	—	—	—	1,334,374	5,420	0·41	0·22	214,398	432	0·20	(0·14)
Cheltenham	928,403	—	—	—	1,064,744	3,451	0·32	0·13	215,562	126,336	58·61	(14·36)
Gloucester	2,007,220	—	—	—	2,043,308	6,279	0·31	0·29	248,862	10,941	4·40	0·65
Somerset	3,018,866	5,880	0·19	0·02	3,015,860	31,624	1·05	0·24	436,589	3,280	0·75	(0·02)
Regional Health Authority	16,391	16,391	100·00	68·19	36,729	4,665	12·70	5·21	4,301	—	—	—
Regional Total	22,967,043	26,004	0·11	(0·04)	24,293,822	165,087	0·68	0·07	3,980,994	460,472	11·57	2·32

West Midlands Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Bromsgrove and Redditch	845,915	—	—	—	670,375	1,645	0·25	0·07	18,223	5,887	32·31	(49·59)
Hereford	1,063,216	—	—	—	696,582	2,513	0·36	(0·06)	202,060	1,521	0·75	(0·07)
Kidderminster	1,143,914	—	—	—	980,333	8,356	0·87	0·24	360,827	2,909	0·81	(0·29)
Worcester	1,483,853	—	—	—	1,621,765	15,672	0·97	0·06	267,878	11,113	4·15	(2·87)
Shropshire	2,314,360	—	—	—	2,188,755	9,655	0·44	(0·02)	471,051	—	—	(0·09)
Mid-Staffordshire	1,373,233	—	—	—	1,251,169	7,598	0·61	(0·72)	214,950	6,487	3·02	0·44
North Staffordshire	3,011,221	—	—	—	3,935,438	20,606	0·52	(0·04)	476,330	15,223	3·20	0·86
South East Staffordshire	1,730,778	—	—	—	1,078,345	25,510	2·37	1·18	260,305	—	—	—
Rugby	314,323	—	—	—	252,183	2,533	1·00	(0·04)	81,058	81,058	100·00	5·57
North Warwickshire	1,254,735	1,118	0·09	(0·05)	1,072,138	7,333	0·68	(0·07)	253,244	151,047	59·65	32·22
South Warwickshire	1,703,892	218	0·01	0·01	1,694,835	11,333	0·67	(0·11)	249,840	7,112	2·85	0·03
Central Birmingham	2,686,250	1,948	0·07	0·05	2,993,375	70,064	2·34	(0·02)	388,112	12,951	3·34	(2·91)
East Birmingham	1,122,345	—	—	—	1,266,330	3,055	0·24	(0·28)	35,020	2,067	5·90	(1·52)
North Birmingham	1,500,855	513	0·03	(0·01)	1,178,886	11,989	1·02	0·04	355,541	—	—	(0·08)
South Birmingham	2,224,772	—	—	(0·01)	2,363,708	38,780	1·64	0·67	287,181	4,666	1·62	1·59
West Birmingham	2,452,949	5,446	0·22	(0·04)	2,788,023	29,738	1·07	(0·32)	383,295	—	—	(1·14)
Coventry	2,478,522	—	—	—	1,706,741	11,841	0·69	(0·31)	280,001	102,252	36·52	(16·00)
Dudley	1,743,890	2,006	0·12	0·12	1,929,879	25,630	1·33	0·15	385,400	3,856	1·00	(0·01)
Sandwell	1,107,010	—	—	—	1,299,729	16,990	1·31	0·31	368,832	7,423	2·01	(0·56)
Solihull	996,395	90	0·01	0·01	952,919	18,777	1·97	0·15	252,026	2,244	0·89	(0·37)
Walsall	1,744,748	8,376	0·48	0·03	1,700,234	43,100	2·53	0·35	414,309	58,277	14·07	13·44
Wolverhampton	2,071,073	—	—	—	1,909,828	12,528	0·66	(0·29)	276,841	7,646	2·76	1·35
Regional Health Authority	178,147	—	—	—	180,470	80,538	44·63	0·11	45,351	37,852	83·46	(3·60)
Regional Total	36,546,396	19,715	0·05	—	35,692,038	475,784	1·33	0·02	6,327,675	521,591	8·24	1·14

Mersey Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Chester	1,604,968	—	—	—	1,717,460	11,149	0·65	0·01	184,569	15,132	8·20	5·61
Crewe	1,509,930	—	—	—	1,819,682	9,323	0·51	(0·54)	273,990	10,913	3·98	(1·18)
Halton	416,018	—	—	—	451,742	2,490	0·55	(0·78)	109,066	14,009	12·84	(4·17)
Macclesfield	1,420,710	—	—	—	1,549,575	12,894	0·83	0·01	321,724	6,005	1·87	0·19
Warrington	2,160,588	—	—	—	2,076,026	11,450	0·55	0·42	497,681	4,136	0·84	(0·08)
Liverpool	4,196,334	—	—	—	6,525,884	68,670	1·05	0·04	1,216,408	6,146	0·51	(0·17)
St. Helens and Knowsley	2,200,702	—	—	—	2,330,440	51,360	2·20	0·39	452,773	864	0·19	(0·24)
Southport and Formby	889,477	—	—	—	1,258,427	4,498	0·36	(0·04)	239,166	1	—	—
South Sefton	1,692,836	90	0·01	0·01	2,341,759	12,135	0·52	0·11	278,576	8,255	2·96	2·33
Wirral	2,249,215	—	—	—	2,525,124	22,099	0·88	(0·03)	1,009,691	360	0·04	(0·01)
Regional Health Authority	62,940	—	—	—	87,686	45,458	51·84	(0·37)	10,878	1,052	9·67	(10·23)
Regional Total	18,403,718	90	—	—	22,684,005	251,526	1·11	0·06	4,594,522	66,923	1·46	0·14

North Western Region Health Districts

	Catering				Domestic Cleaning				Laundry
	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84	Total expenditure £	Private contracts £	Private contracts Percentage of total	Difference in percentage from 1983-84
Lancaster	1,979,558	—	—	—	1,979,067	18,159	0·92	0·66	312,555	1,122	0·36	0·10
Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde	1,841,201	—	—	—	1,870,248	7,518	0·40	(0·15)	291,948	172	0·06	(0·03)
Preston	2,576,324	—	—	—	2,558,433	11,452	0·45	0·31	487,730	12,096	2·48	(7·26)
Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley	2,712,959	—	—	—	2,760,616	13,486	0·49	(0·36)	514,868	2,873	0·56	(0·10)
Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale	2,302,966	—	—	—	2,476,981	3,435	0·14	(0·42)	367,284	166	0·05	(0·19)
West Lancashire	881,511	—	—	—	870,233	1,561	0·18	(0·31)	139,186	—	—	(0·82)
Chorley and South Ribble	401,163	—	—	—	511,833	4,680	0·91	(0·43)	83,822	1,125	1·34	(0·62)
Bolton	1,481,865	—	—	—	1,425,853	20,714	1·45	(0·28)	324,280	—	—	(0·06)
Bury	766,518	—	—	—	860,249	12,604	1·47	0·54	270,769	252,010	93·07	1·53
North Manchester	2,492,200	—	—	—	2,740,068	13,971	0·51	(0·63)	189,039	1,319	0·70	(4·65)
Central Manchester	1,688,958	—	—	—	2,082,476	33,575	1·61	0·03	325,315	71,431	21·96	19·95
South Manchester	2,487,801	—	—	—	2,882,580	58,450	2·03	0·33	339,748	594	0·17	0·43
Oldham	846,624	—	—	—	1,219,783	2,013	0·17	0·14	96,144	7,106	7·39	(56·65)
Rochdale	983,509	—	—	—	804,132	15,246	1·90	(0·03)	159,483	2,514	1·58	(0·36)
Salford	2,809,282	—	—	—	3,032,703	116,046	3·83	0·62	501,474	4,683	0·93	—
Stockport	1,741,142	—	—	—	1,798,379	39,753	2·21	(0·02)	363,850	20,241	5·56	(2·99)
Tameside and Glossop	935,635	—	—	—	1,233,282	15,125	1·23	(0·33)	123,356	5,391	4·37	0·02
Trafford	1,074,167	—	—	—	970,379	73,591	7·58	5·88	267,891	14,357	5·36	2·71
Wigan	1,554,327	—	—	—	1,443,083	4,673	0·32	(0·22)	363,217	—	—	—
Regional Health Authority	40,540	—	—	—	243,332	51,913	21·33	(3·50)	22,142	14,589	65,89	(10·62)
Regional Total	31,598,250	—	—	—	33,763,690	517,965	1·53	0·10	5,544,101	411,789	7·43	(2·47)

Notes:

1. All figures are total current expenditure on the relevant service: capital expenditure is excluded.
2. Figures in brackets are reductions in percentage between 1983-84 and 1984-85

EMPLOYMENT

Inner City Areas

Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Paymaster General what research his Department has carried out in relation to employment and unemployment in inner city areas.

Mr. Alan Clark: Since 1980 the Department of Employment has commissioned a number of research projects which provided information relevant to employment and unemployment in inner city areas. I am sending my hon. Friend brief details of these projects, which also contain details of three projects planned to start in 1986, and will place a copy in the Library.

The Manpower Services Commission also conducts research, some of which is related to employment and unemployment in inner city areas.

Graduate Unemployment

Mr. Onslow asked the Paymaster General what statistics on graduate unemployment are available to his Department; and what conclusion he draws from these figures.

Mr. Alan Clark: According to the labour force survey there were 70,000 graduates without jobs and seeking work in Great Britain in the spring of 1984, representing 4·5 per cent. of all economically active graduates. The corresponding rate for those without degrees was 11·5 per cent. The figures show that while unemployment among graduates is significant, they nevertheless have much better employment prospects than those without degrees.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General how many claimants have voluntarily withdrawn their claims to unemployment benefit; and how many cases are being investigated as a result of the recent fraud benefit exercise in the Welwyn Hatfield constituency.

Mr. Alan Clark: Fifty two claimants within the Welwyn Hatfield constituency have voluntarily withdrawn their claims to unemployment benefit as a result of the recent fraud exercise: of these, three claimants are under further investigation for possible fraud proceedings.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to alter the arrangements for those signing on for the first time for unemployment benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are no plans to alter the basic method of claiming unemployment benefit for the first time. There is, however, a wide variation of practices within the basic scheme which are designed to meet local circumstances and particularly to suit the available premises; for example, some offices operate an appointment system whereas others need not do so. We are continually looking for ways to improve the service to the public.

Community Programme

Mr. Freeman asked the Paymaster General what response there has been from voluntary organisations to the extension of the community programme specifically to cover them.

Mr. Alan Clark: Voluntary organisations have been able to participate in the community programme from its inception and account for some 50 per cent. of the places provided. The response by voluntary orgainsations to the charities initiative launched on 4 November as an experiment in further extending the work done under the community programme has been encouraging. Some 15 bodies are taking part or will shortly do so, and a number of other orgainsations have also asked to be involved and, where possible, will be included in the experiment.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received advocating an increase in the average weekly allowance paid to those on the community programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: A number of representations have been received from hon. Members and members of the general public. All aspects of the community programme are kept under review.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Adley asked the Paymaster General if he will indicate the percentage of the work force employed in (a) manufacturing and (b) service in 1955, 1965, 1975 and 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table gives, for Great Britain, the employed labour force in (a) manufacturing, and (b) service industries, expressed as a percentage of the employed labour force (that is, employees in employment, the self-employed and Her Majesty's forces) in all industries and services in 1965, 1975 and 1985. Comparable figures are not available for periods prior to 1959. The June 1965 figures are analysed according to the 1968 standard industrial classification (SIC) and those for the later dates according to the 1980 SIC. There are slight differences in the definitions of manufacturing and service industries under the two versions of the SIC.

June each year Percentage

	1965	1975	1985
Manufacturing	34	31	23
Service industries	49	56	64

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General what is the latest unemployment total for (a) London and (b) Wandsworth; and what were the comparable figures in May 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. The number of unemployed claimants in the London borough of Wandsworth on 14 November 1985 was 16,529. Comparable figures for May 1979 are not available because of changes in the way figures are collected. However, the number of registered unemployed in jobcentre areas approximating to the London borough of Wandsworth in May 1979 was 5,698.

Unemployment figures for Greater London are available adjusted for discontinuities. They relate to unemployed claimants excluding school leavers and are seasonally adjusted. The number on 14 November 1985 was 396,100 and the comparable figure for May 1979 was 121,400.

Self-employment

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General if there is any ethnic analysis of the growth in self-employment.

Mr. Alan Clark: Evidence from the 1982 Policy Studies Institute's survey of racial minorities (which was partly funded by my Department) demonstrates that compared with 1974, when a broadly similar survey was carried out, there has been an above average rise in self-employment amongst Asian men and women, to the extent that self-employment is now more common amongst Asians than the white population. There has been little growth in self-employment amongst West Indian men and women since 1974. Self-employment amongst West Indians is less common than amongst the indigenous white population.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how much of the growth in self-employment has been in the building trade.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is estimated that the number of people who are self-employed increased by 717,000 between 1979 and 1985; of these 144,000 were in the construction industry.

Redundant Fishermen

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General what special action he is taking to provide retraining for redundant fishermen in Great Grimsby.

Mr. Trippier: Under the Manpower Services Commission's local training grants scheme, a retraining package has recently been negotiated with a Grimsby employer which will result in up to 60 locally redundant fishermen being retrained and offered permanent employment in the offshore oil industry. Redundant fishermen may also be assisted through the commission's programme of enterprise skill and work preparation training for unemployed individuals.

Long-term Unemployed

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General what plans he has to extend to Welwyn Hatfield the pilot schemes which have been initiated by his Department to assist the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Alan Clark: At present we have no plans to extend the pilot schemes announced, but if the measure we are testing in the pilot areas are a success we would certainly hope to apply them more widely.

Political Levy

Mr. Lawrence asked the Paymaster General whether he is satisfied that union members are being made aware of their rights to contract out of paying the political levy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am not satisfied that all trade union members are being made aware of their rights to contract out of paying the political levy.

The TUC issued guidance for affiliated unions on good practice in respect of political fund arrangements in February 1984. This was subsequently followed up by a model information sheet to be given to every member individually after a successful political fund review ballot had been held. The TUC model information sheet reminded members that they were entitled to contract out of paying the levy. It explained that they would do so either by completing a standard form obtainable from their union or by simply giving notice of their objection to the union in writing. In this respect it did no more than restate the obligations imposed on trade unions by the Trade Union Act 1913 and by their own rules.

I have been monitoring the implementation of the TUC guidance through my own contacts with trade unionists. I have to say that I have seen little evidence so far that union members are being notified individually of their rights.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will list for each area manpower board area the available number of mode A, mode B and mode B2 places for the years 1984, 1985 and 1986, giving the figures for premium and non-premium places where appropriate.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 55]: The information is not available in the form requested.

The numbers of approved youth training scheme places by mode for the financial years 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 in each area manpower board area are shown in the following tables.

The concept of premium and non-premium places will not apply until the two-year youth training scheme commences in April 1986. The numbers of such places for individual area manpower board areas in 1986-87 have yet to be decided.

Youth Training Scheme—Approved Places 1983-84 by Mode

Area Manpower Board Areas	Mode A	Mode B1	Mode B2	Total
Scotland
Glasgow City	7,365	1,817	590	9,772
Lanarkshire	3,010	1,272	359	4,641
Dunfries and Galloway	749	265	8	1,022
Ayrshire	2,159	825	—	2,984
Lothian and Borders	4,810	1,350	315	6,475
Central and Fife	3,929	1,081	135	5,145
Grampian and Tayside	4,943	879	191	6,013
Highlands and Islands	1,676	361	14	2,051
Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll	3,065	2,021	197	5,283
Northern
Durham	4,163	1,991	359	6,513
Cleveland	3,008	1,791	1,521	6,320
Northumberland, North Tyneside and Newcastle	4,472	1,855	1,081	7,408
Sunderland, South Tyneside and Gateshead	4,328	2,330	1,055	7,713
North West
Cheshire	5,062	3,102	123	8,287
Cumbria	3,143	543	153	3,839
Lancashire	7,185	2,264	235	9,684
Greater Manchester	18,784	4,837	1,502	25,123
Merseyside	9,062	5,625	2,079	16,766
Yorkshire and Humberside
Humberside	4,766	1,535	2,132	8,443
North Yorkshire	2,381	240	—	2,621

Area Manpower Board Areas	Mode A	Mode B1	Mode B2	Total
Leeds and Wakefield	6,215	1,422	608	8,245
South Yorkshire	8,214	3,188	1,933	13,335
Midlands
Birmingham and Solihull	10,938	3,079	237	14,254
Coventry and Warwickshire	5,270	2,440	557	8,267
Derbyshire	6,217	1,367	863	8,447
Dudley and Sandwell	3,873	1,213	1,006	6,092
Leicestershire and Northamptonshire	6,995	2,283	243	9,521
Lincolnshire	3,787	1,285	357	5,429
Nottinghamshire	6,702	1,873	255	8,830
Staffordshire	9,490	2,139	153	11,782
Shropshire, Hereford and Worcester	6,454	1,713	155	8,322
Wolverhampton and Walsall	5,067	2,764	425	8,256
Wales
Gwent	2,641	1,030	407	4,078
Dyfed and West Glamorgan	3,804	1,424	440	5,668
Mid and South Glamorgan	4,347	2,522	783	7,652
Clwyd and Powys	2,936	825	624	4,385
Gwynedd	1,306	375	206	1,887
South West
Avon	6,955	1,917	27	8,899
Gloucester and Wiltshire	5,423	1,046	283	6,752
Cornwall and Devon	9,295	1,152	349	10,796
Dorset and Wiltshire	5,615	1,127	241	6,983
South East
Kent	7,518	2,023	227	9,768
Essex	8,178	1,770	721	10,669
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	9,763	1,362	397	11,522
Buckinghamshire and Hertfordshire	5,771	735	514	7,020
Surrey	3,102	500	112	3,714
Norfolk and Suffolk	6,607	1,329	230	8,166
Bedfordshire and Cambridgeshire	5,468	994	1,221	7,683
Berkshire and Oxfordshire	5,056	760	1,047	6,863
East and West Sussex	5,348	823	245	6,416
London
London North East	7,653	1,185	218	9,056
London North	7,391	999	157	8,547
London South East	6,843	1,591	1,420	9,854
London South and West	4,227	880	234	5,341

Youth Training Scheme—Approved Places 1984-85 by Mode

Area Manpower Board Areas	Mode A	Mode B1	Mode B2	Total
Scotland
Glasgow City	6,739	1,464	235	8,438
Lanarkshire	3,628	1,124	184	4,936
Dunfries and Galloway	749	265	8	1,022
Ayrshire	2,159	825	—	2,984
Lothian and Borders	4,351	903	237	5,491
Central and Fife	5,065	758	213	6,036
Grampian and Tayside	4,202	553	107	4,862
Highlands and Islands	1,506	359	24	1,889
Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll	3,830	1,610	111	5,551
Northern
Durham	4,143	1,904	350	6,397
Cleveland	3,984	1,693	715	6,392
Northumberland, North Tyneside and Newcastle	4,059	1,545	813	6,417
Sunderland, South Tyneside and Gateshead	3,808	1,962	679	6,449
North West
Cheshire	4,828	1,796	138	6,762
Cumbria	3,090	400	179	3,669
Lancashire	7,503	1,372	168	9,043
Greater Manchester	16,112	3,667	1,090	20,869
Merseyside	8,648	5,048	999	14,695
Yorkshire and Humberside
Humberside	5,142	1,355	988	7,485
North Yorkshire	2,777	425	—	3,202
Leeds and Wakefield	5,931	1,367	213	7,511
South Yorkshire	9,351	2,354	1,536	13,241
Midlands
Birmingham and Solihull	10,084	2,403	354	12,841
Coventry and Warwickshire	4,803	2,006	153	6,962
Derbyshire	6,643	960	258	7,861
Dudley and Sandwell	4,826	1,140	503	6,469
Leicestershire and Northamptonshire	7,879	1,899	60	9,838
Lincolnshire	3,930	781	163	4,874
Nottinghamshire	6,814	1,570	96	8,480
Staffordshire	8,922	1,513	71	10,506
Shropshire, Hereford and Worcester	6,611	1,120	117	7,848
Wolverhampton and Walsall	4,677	2,059	186	6,922
Wales
Gwent	2,551	787	175	3,513
Dyfed and West Glamorgan	3,842	1,154	83	5,079
Mid and South Glamorgan	5,325	2,004	469	7,798
Clwyd and Powys	3,498	785	78	4,361
Gwynedd	1,514	335	30	1,879
South West
Avon	6,653	1,284	—	7,937
Gloucester and Wiltshire	5,332	1,071	188	6,591
Cornwall and Devon	8,011	1,135	138	9,284
Dorset and Wiltshire	5,392	870	92	6,354
South East
Kent	7,389	1,481	149	9,019
Essex	8,021	1,240	142	9,403
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	9,100	1,286	124	10,510
Buckinghamshire and Hertfordshire	6,928	765	415	8,108
Surrey	5,379	770	65	6,214
Norfolk and Suffolk	7,106	1,221	211	8,538
Bedfordshire and Cambridgeshire	5,745	725	404	6,874
Berkshire and Oxfordshire	5,143	670	389	6,202
East and West Sussex	2,261	437	16	2,714
London
London North East	6,627	1,346	301	8,274
London North	5,662	977	189	6,828
London South East	5,855	1,226	903	7,984
London South and West	7,339	916	120	8,375

Youth Training Scheme—Approved Places 1983-84 by Mode at 31 October 1985

Area Manpower Board Areas	Mode A	Mode B1	Mode B2	Total
Scotland
Glasgow City	5,446	1,152	253	6,851
Lanarkshire	3,893	984	179	5,056
Dunfries and Galloway	710	225	44	979
Ayrshire	2,318	686	—	3,004
Lothian and Borders	4,153	885	123	5,161
Central and Fife	5,152	683	204	6,039
Grampian and Tayside	4,058	576	178	4,812
Highlands and Islands	1,527	330	22	1,879
Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll	3,709	1,350	59	5,118

Area Manpower Board Areas	Mode A	Mode B1	Mode B2	Total
Northern
Durham	4,893	1,554	442	6,889
Cleveland	4,789	1,165	429	6,383
Northumberland, North Tyneside and Newcastle	4,493	1,353	623	6,469
Sunderland, South Tyneside and Gateshead	4,189	1,791	662	6,642
North West
Cheshire	4,969	2,119	180	7,268
Cumbria	2,844	372	136	3,352
Lancashire	7,696	1,444	163	9,303
Greater Manchester	14,931	3,405	1,124	19,460
Merseyside	8,734	4,820	1,199	14,753
Yorkshire and Humberside
Humberside	5,687	1,424	538	7,649
North Yorkshire	2,826	390	—	3,216
Leeds and Wakefield	5,721	1,393	263	7,377
South Yorkshire	9,332	2,410	1,007	12,749
Midlands
Birmingham and Solihull	10,128	2,366	341	12,835
Coventry and Warwickshire	5,031	1,462	90	6,583
Derbyshire	6,441	913	186	7,540
Dudley and Sandwell	4,598	1,055	398	6,051
Leicestershire and Northamptonshire	7,783	1,988	104	9,875
Lincolnshire	3,837	706	85	4,628
Nottinghamshire	7,724	1,344	128	9,196
Staffordshire	8,576	1,488	8	10,072
Shropshire, Hereford and Worcester	6,747	1,056	114	7,917
Wolverhampton and Walsall	4,157	1,684	164	6,005
Wales
Gwent	2,646	765	106	3,517
Dyfed and West Glamorgan	3,903	1,180	88	5,171
Mid and South Glamorgan	4,651	1,961	434	7,046
Clwyd and Powys	2,897	785	79	3,761
Gwynedd	1,288	340	30	1,658
South West
Avon	6,930	1,105	18	8,053
Gloucester and Wiltshire	4,693	893	176	5,762
Cornwall and Devon	7,948	1,026	150	9,124
Dorset and Wiltshire	4,957	840	95	5,892
South East
Kent	8,046	1,345	155	9,546
Essex	8,108	1,072	146	9,326
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	8,283	1,187	93	9,563
Buckinghamshire and Hertfordshire	5,983	669	203	6,855
Surrey	2,788	419	—	3,207
Norfolk and Suffolk	7,146	1,213	179	8,538
Bedfordshire and Cambridgeshire	5,254	691	378	6,323
Berkshire and Oxfordshire	4,788	665	253	5,706
East and West Sussex	4,400	544	65	5,009
London
London North East	6,214	1,343	369	7,926
London North	5,092	905	138	6,135
London South East	5,421	1,117	685	7,223
London South and West	6,347	836	110	7,293

TRANSPORT

Passenger Transport Authorities (Precepts)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he is to announce limitations on the precept levels he is proposing for the new joint board passenger transport authorities for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I am today informing the passenger transport authorities of the maximum precept levels I propose to prescribe for 1986-87.

Following my determination of expenditure levels for each PTA on 16 September, all the authorities submitted applications for redetermination under section 3(4) of the Rates Act 1984. My decisions on redetermination have been made in the light of the applications and of further information provided by the PTAs.

In their applications the PTAs have drawn my attention to their view that they may incur expenditure in 1986-87 as a result of staff becoming surplus to requirements. They have also represented to me the problems in estimating such expenditure in advance of the submission of transfer schemes under section 59 of the Transport Act 1985 and the outcome of the registration of bus services during the first half of that year. Accordingly, I have decided that for the year 1986-87 alone these amounts should be included within redetermined expenditure levels. Within each redetermined expenditure level I have distinguished an amount which, on the basis of the information available, including that put forward by the authorities, appears to me to be sufficient in respect of expenditure on severance costs which the PTAs have suggested the Passenger Transport Executive is likely to incur in 1986-87. These amounts are included within redetermined expenditure levels, but I have made clear to the authorities my view that if they prove in the event not to be required, I consider that any excess should be carried forward to reduce the burden on ratepayers in 1987-88.

The relevant amounts for each authority are as follows:

	Determined EL (£m.)	Redetermined EL (£m.)	Proposed Precept Limit (P)
Greater Manchester	74·3	83·5	19·99
Merseyside	75·2	81·3	44·88
South Yorkshire	50·5	59·3	44·07
Tyne & Wear	60·0	63·9	24·27
West Midlands	54·2	58·1	10·30
West Yorkshire	57·8	61·3	26·51
Total	372·0	407·4	—

These amounts are in my view sufficient to enable the authorities, if they so wish, to continue funding existing concessionary fare schemes in their areas provided they reduce levels of revenue support in line with my advice to passenger transport executives under the Transport Act 1983.

I have asked the authorities to inform me by 15 January whether they accept the proposed maximum precept levels.

M1 (Road Signs)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what date junction 12 route sign southbound on the M1 motorway between London and Wakefield was totally demolished; and on what date it will be replaced.

Mr. Nicholas Ridley: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 4 December 1985 at column 242.

Space Saver Tyres

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now arrange for a full safety evaluation of the space saver tyres available in the United Kingdom to be undertaken.

Mrs. Chalker: The Transport and Road Research Laboratory has already carried out tests and I am satisfied that temporary use spare tyres now available are safe if used in accordance with manufacturers' instructions and at a speed not in excess of 50 mph. Further safeguards will result from regulations which I am proposing to require new vehicles equipped with these tyres to meet the requirements of ECE regulation 64.

Road Humps

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his policy towards the use of road humps to achieve lower traffic speeds in urban areas.

Mrs. Chalker: Road humps are one of a number of measures available to highway authorities for moderating the speed of traffic. Provisions allowing their installation were inserted into the Highways Act 1980 by schedule 10 to the Transport Act 1981. Regulations governing the form and siting of road humps were subsequently made in 1983. The Department will shortly begin consultation on proposals for amendments to these regulations to introduce greater flexibility.

M25

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the projected traffic flow figures for the M1-M25 junctions in both east and west directions on the M25 and the dates when these projections were made.

Mrs. Chalker: The complete range of traffic movements between the M25 and M1 motorways will be accommodated by the M25/M1/A405 junctions complex rather than by the M1/M25 interchange alone. The most recent projections, for the year 2001, were made in January 1984 and are shown in the table. Where a range is given it represents low-high economic growth forecasts.

Two-way Traffic Flows	Vehicles per 16-hour average annual weekday
M25 west-M1 north	18,000-22,000
M25 east-M1 north	17,000-23,000
M25 west-A405 south	1,000+
M25 east-A405 south	4,000+
M1 traffic through interchange	58,000-71,000
M25 traffic through interchange	32,000-47,000

Not all this traffic will transfer to or from the M1; some will remain on the A405.

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Transport if any studies are being carried out into the possibility of adding further carriageways to the M25; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: No specific studies are being undertaken at present into the provision of additional carriageways on the M25. However, some sections have been designed to take additional lanes should they prove necessary. Traffic levels are being monitored and the situation is being kept under continuous review.

M1/M62

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations are currently being carried out by his Department into the possibility of constructing a link beteen the M1 in the vicinity of junction 40 and the M62 in the vicinity of junction 25; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: A brief and terms of reference for a study to be undertaken by consulting engineers is currently being prepared, and I hope to invite bids early in the new year.

Blood-alcohol Level

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received and what information he has on a product recently marketed which purports to affect the blood-alcohol level; and if he will make a statement on the implications of the marketing of this product for matters within his responsibility.

Mrs. Chalker: I understand that the product to which my hon. Friend refers is a fructose-based drink which it is claimed reduces the level of alcohol in the body and can thus be used to make people safe to drive after consuming alcohol.

While the rate at which alcohol is absorbed can be affected by a number of factors, I have yet to see any satisfactory evidence that its elimination from the bloodstream can be artificially speeded up. I would therefore strongly advise motorists not to rely on products such as this as a means of avoiding the risks associated with drinking and driving. The only safe policy is never to drink and drive under any circumstances.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent consultations he has had with the London boroughs of Newham and Greenwich about the future of the Woolwich ferry;

(2) what requests he has received from (a) the London borough of Newham or (b) the London borough of Greenwich for a meeting about the future of the Woolwich ferry; and what was his response.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, West (Mr. Maples) on 16 December.

Home Insulation

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek to widen the eligibility for noise insulation grants with regard to motorways.

Mrs. Chalker: As I stated in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 11 December at column 659, we are considering with other Departments the possibility of selective changes in the present arrangements for providing insulation against increased traffic noise associated with the road schemes of highway authorities.

Asbestos

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Transport if any studies have been made of the possible health hazards from the release of asbestos from vehicle brake linings; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Major studies on the health effects of asbestos have been carried out in the United Kingdom and abroad, but none specifically relating to asbestos released from vehicle brake linings. All have concluded that the levels of asbestos fibre to which the general public is exposed (and to which brake lining debris contributes only a small part) are very low and do not represent a health risk.

Transport and Road Research Laboratory

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Transport why the transport and road research laboratory has declined to furnish the Library with material relating to the research and development programme being conducted by the transport and road research laboratory into driver psychology in tunnels; if he will take steps to place the relevant material in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: A professional opinion has been prepared by a TRRL expert on driver psychology to assist the Department's assessment team in its consideration of specific proposals for a Channel fixed link, which of course at this stage is confidential.

Okehampton Bypass Bill (Departmental Celebration Party)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department on the party held on 18 December to celebrate parliament's consideration of the Okehampton Bypass (Confirmation of Order) Bill.

Mr. Ridley: £138.58; about 80 people attended.

Dash 7 STOL Aircraft

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to make special financial arrangements available to British-owned prospective purchasers of De Haviland Dash 7 STOL aircraft.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No.

London Docklands

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport what undertakings have been given by British Airways to the Civil Aviation Authority not to involve themselves in the operation of the docklands stolport; whether such involvement is now to be permitted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No undertakings have been given; nor have any been sought.

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department intends to take to seek to ensure competition between Heathrow and the new docklands stolport after the latter is opened for air traffic.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government envisage that, by the time that the docklands stolport is open to traffic, the British Airport Authority will have been privatised. So any questions of this kind will be dealt with under the general competition law.

Brymon Airways

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions took place between his Department and the Office of Fair Trading regarding the acquisition by British Airways of a substantial shareholding in Brymon Airways;

(2) if he plans to meet the chairman of British Airways to discuss British Airways' acquisition of a substantial shareholding in Brymon Airways; if he will publish details of the transaction with particular reference to the price paid by British Airways; if the acquisition by British Airways of such a shareholding is in accordance with Her Majesty's Government's aviation policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My officials have informally discussed with the Office of Fair Trading the proposed acquisition by British Airways of a minority shareholding in Brymon Aviation Ltd. The OFT has considered the matter in the light of information supplied to it by Brymon. On the basis that BA's voting shareholding does not exceed 14 per cent., the OFT does not consider that BA will be in a position to exercise material influence over Brymon or that the shareholding will constitute a merger within the meaning of the Fair Trading Act 1973. In these circumstances, the OFT does not intend to pursue the matter further.

My right hon. Friend as shareholder has to approve any significant financial stake BA wishes to acquire in another airline. In view of the OFT's clearance, he has therefore looked at this question purely as a trade investment by BA. He is satisfied that Brymon's capital structure will be such that the return to BA meets the normal financial criteria which he applies in approving its trade investments. My right hon. Friend has consequently approved a trade investment of £1·25 million by BA on the basis that voting rights will be no more than 14 per cent. and capital rights about 40 per cent. In addition, BA proposes to guarantee certain of Brymon's leasing commitments.

I see no need to discuss this matter with BA's chairman.

British Rail (Mid-Hertfordshire)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss at his next meeting with the chairman of British Rail the quality of commuter services provided to Mid-Hertfordshire.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a matter for my hon. Friend to discuss with BR.

Manchester International Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now make his announcement, promised before the end of the year, about the future control and operation of Manchester international airport.

Mr. Ridley: The control and operation of Manchester international airport following the abolition of the Greater Manchester county council is for the districts concerned to decide. The Government have not promised any announcement.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Married Women's Half Test Pension

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in view of the fact that official notification about the abolition of the married women's half test pension was only promulgated from his Department on 18 October, to countries overseas such as Canada, where official information about the change was not available until 31 October, he will make arrangements for the backdating of claims without loss of pension for a period of 12 months from that date.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 4 December at columns 276-77. As this makes clear, the great majority of those we estimate to be entitled to a pension following the abolition of the half test have been directly identified from the Department's records, contacted, and their pensions put into payment. This includes many of those living overseas.

The question of backdating any claims arising from the abolition of the married women's half test is a matter for the independent adjudicating authorities. The earliest date to which claims can be backdated is 22 December 1984, the date from which the test was abolished. There is a statutory limit of 12 months on the period for which a claim can be backdated.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners with capital in excess of £6,000 receive housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: We do not collect specific information about amounts of capital held by households which receive housing benefit. The 1983 family expenditure survey included questions on income from capital and it is possible to use this information to make broad estimates, although these may not be very reliable. On this basis, it is estimated that in 1983-84 somewhat over 250,000 pensioners in receipt of standard housing benefit had capital over £6,000.

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he had made of the level of expenditure by local authorities on payment of extra housing benefit to individual claimants referred to in paragraph 3.63 of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) how many (i) pensioner and (ii) non-pensioner claimants he expects to receive such benefit; what overall limits on local discretionary powers he proposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We estimate current expenditure on local discretion to be about £35 million. The removal of the power to operate local schemes except for war pensioners should reduce this expenditure, but we do not collect information centrally on the average value of discretionary payments to individuals. The amount which local authorities can spend on local discretion is currently limited by regulations to 10 per cent. of the cost of the standard housing benefit which the authority would have granted under the statutory scheme. We will propose similar limitations in the reformed scheme.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report his Department's estimates of the number of (a) pensioner households, (b) families with children and (c) other households which have (i) suffered a reduction in their housing benefit entitlement and (ii) lost all entitlement to housing benefit, as a result of changes to the tapers, minimum payment rules and high rent area authorisation formula, respectively, at April 1983, April 1984, November 1984, April 1985 and November 1985; and if he will also give his estimate of the cumulative savings made as a result of these changes.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 5 December 1985, c. 340]: Information derived from estimates made at the time is shown in the tables. It is not possible to aggregate the effects of the changes because they will overlap and in part be offset by the effects of upratings and other improvements to the scheme.

Table A: Estimated Numbers of Households Affected by Changes to the Housing Benefit Scheme

Great Britain
Thousands

	April 1983 taper changes	April and November 1984 changes to tapers, minima and childs needs allowance*	April 1985 high rent changes	November 1985 taper change†
(i) Households affected by the changes
(a) pensioners	1,150	1,200		1,470
(b) families with children	610	380
or			90
(c) working households				270
(d) others	500	480		330
(ii) Households losing all entitlement (included in the above):
(a) pensioners	120	210		270
(b) families with children
or			not available
(c) working households	280	210		100
(d) others		80		80

* The figures for those losing all entitlement include those affected by the non-dependent deduction changes.
† The figures for those losing all entitlement refer to rate rebates only; some households may still be receiving assistance with rents.

Table B: Estimated Cash Savings Resulting from the Changes

		£ million
1983-84		50 approx
1984-85		120 *
1985-86	April	6
	November	20 †

* This was the estimated full-year cost in November 1984 of restoring the November 1983 tapers and minima.
† Part-year saving only; the estimated full year saving is £57 million.

Visual Handicap

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to publish the report on services for the visually handicapped.

Mr. Newton: The results of the Department's fact-finding exercise on services for visually handicapped people are under consideration. I shall make an announcement about this as soon as possible.

Advertising

Mr. Jim Spicer asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advertising agents have been appointed by his Department, or by the Central Office of Information on behalf of his Department, to handle campaigns involving the communication of information on subjects for which his Department is responsible to Parliament over each of the last 10 years, respectively; what was the subject of each campaign; and how much was spent on each campaign.

Mr. Fowler: Only five years, figures are given in the table. Disproportionate cost would have been incurred if the figures had been collected for 10 years.

Subject	Expenditure £
1980-81
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
NHS prescriptions	37,466
Studentships in environmental engineering	756
Nursing recruitment	459,412
Blood donor recruitment	72,337
Hospital careers	19,586
Family Income Supplement	314,985
NI Uprating	64,788
1981-82
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
Help for the handicapped	528
Blood donor recruitment	95,056
Nursing recruitment	702,491
Hospital careers	26,989
National Insurance uprating	92,755
Kingsway Media Ltd.
Benefits	27,321
Child benefit	18,782
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
Family Income Supplement	501,918
National Insurance contributions	20,211
Civil Service Industrial Action	174,455
1982-83
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
Blood donor recruitment	36,272
Nursing recruitment	284,242
TBWA
Whooping cough	240,128
Blood donor recruitment	38,264
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
Housing benefit	293,024
Family Income Supplement	539,782
Company Directors N. Insurance	9,981
Form E111	76,775
Employers' Statutory Sick Pay	471,250
Kingsway Media

Subject	Expenditure £
Emergency pay	65,206
Register of manufacturers	969
1985-84
TBWA
Blood donor recruitment	100,322
Organ donation	391,392
Nursing recruitment	675,077
Dorlands Advertising Ltd.
Portable pensions	26,081
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
One-Parent benefit	64,779
Voluntary Unemployment Deductions	98,784
Benefits in work	12,434
National Insurance uprating	171,897
National Insurance numbercards	162,697
Employers' Statutory Sick Pay	495,895
1984-85
Dorlands Advertising Ltd.
Laser surgery	6,157
TBWA
Nurse recruitment	688,991
Blood donor recruitment	63,401
Adverse reactions	25,000
Organ donation	330,000
Yellowhammer
Misuse of drugs	298,274
Doyle Dane Bernbach Ltd.
National Insurance numbercard	253,801
National Insurance contributions	176,738
Severe Disablement Allowance	402,583
Computer Strike Emergency	482,216
£10 Christmas Bonus	97,961

Subject	Expenditure £
Dorlands Advertising Ltd.
Help for the handicapped	701
Computer Strike Emergency	715,151
Social Security Reviews	20,056
Child benefit	76,509
Pensioners living abroad	56,402

Benefits (Upratings)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the cost between November 1986 and April 1987 of uprating existing social security benefit levels in November 1986 by 4 per cent.

Mr. Newton: The cost up to 1 April 1987 of uprating existing social security benefit levels in the last week of November 1986 by 4 per cent. would be £530 million.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the responsibilities of each of the deputy secretaries in his Department and the numbers and ranks of staff reporting to each.

Mr. Fowler: The responsibilities of grade 2 (deputy secretary level) officers in my Department and the number and grades of staff reporting to them are given in the following table. In addition, 3,366 staff work in the special hospitals and youth treatment centres and a further 825 staff (mainly professional and support staff in headquarters) do not report through lines of command to grade 2 officers.

Title	Responsibilities	Staff reporting to each
		Grade 3	Grade 4	Grade 5	Grade 6	Principals and equivalent	Executive clerical and other grades	Total
Principal Establishments Officer	DHSS Establishments and Personnel, Social Security computing, Central Management Support. Operations in: —Social security regional organisation; —Newcastle Central Office; —North Fylde Central Office.	5	1	26	65	420	62,276	62,789
Principal Finance Officer	Departmental Finance, Economic and statistical advice, Operational research	5	1	20	13	114	1,579	1,732
Deputy Secretary: Social Security Policy	Social Security Policy	4	—	17	1	37	809	884
Deputy Secretary: Family Practitioner Services and Medicines Policy	Family Practitioner Services, Policy relating to Medicines	3	—	9	2	35	259	306
Deputy Secretary: Health and Personal Social Services Policy	Policy on health and Personal Social Services, Management of Special Hospitals, and Youth Treatment Centres	5	—	16	3	31	287	342
Director of Operations, NHS Management Board	Liaison with health authorities on administrative policy, accountability and planning; NHS building policy; NHS equipment and supplies; Artificial Limb and Appliance Centres	6	1	6	23	95	1,495	1,626
Director of Personnel: NHS Management Board	NHS Personnel Policy	1	—	6	—	13	103	123
Solicitor	Legal aspects of DHSS Responsibilities	3	—	11	41	8	82	145
Chief Inspector of Social Services	Social Services Inspectorate and certain aspects of personal social services	—	2	16	—	83	78	179
Deputy Chief Medical Officer	Health issues related to: —children, disablement, prevention and nutrition; —primary care; —toxicology; —Environmental health.	3	3	29	47	7	225	313
Deputy Chief Medical Officer	Health issues related to:	4	3	23	4	4	37	75

Title	Responsibilities	Staff reporting to each
		Grade 3	Grade 4	Grade 5	Grade 6	Principals and equivalent	Executive clerical and other grades	Total
	—hospital policy and services; —management, planning and organisation of the NHS, RAWP; —medical manpower and education; —community medicine; —mentally ill and mentally handicapped.
Deputy Chief Medical Officer	Health issues related to: —Medicines Act; —international health; —scientific services, equipment, building and supplies; —cancer; —artificial limb and appliance service; —research.	3	6	35	39	5	56	144

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what criteria is adopted by his Department for visiting claimants of benefits at home;

(2) how claimants are selected for interview at home by his Department.

Mr. Major: Details to support a claim to supplementary benefit made by a pensioner or someone not required to sign on at the unemployment benefit office, may be taken at an interview in the claimant's home if the claimant prefers this to filling in a postal claim form. At present most claimants who make a claim by post are visited within six months of their claim to check that benefit entitlement has been correctly assessed; thereafter most claimants are visited every three years for the same purpose.

Smoking-related Diseases

Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people died of smoking-related diseases in the Wisbech and West Norfolk health authority area in each of the last five years.

Mr. Whitney: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 16 December at column 73. The tables show the corresponding figures for the West Norfolk and Wisbech district health authority for 1981-84, and the King's Lynn health district for 1980.

West Norfolk and Wisbech health area

Year	Malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus and lung (ICD* 162)	Bronchitis and Emphysema, Chronic airways obstruction, not elsewhere classified (ICD* 490-492.496)
1980	129	63
1981†	138	84
1982	115	88
1983	117	97
†1984	125	105

* International Classification of Diseases 9th Revision.
† Figures for 1984 are not comparable with earlier years because of a change in coding rules.

West Norfolk and Wisbech health area

Year	Ischaemic Heart Disease (ICD* 410-414)
1980	605
1981	593
1982	561
1983	545
†1984	583

* International Classification of Diseases 9th Revision.
† Figures for 1984 are not comparable with earlier years because of a change in coding rules.

Blood (Factor VIII)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each year since 1981-82 (a) how much factor VIII was used in England and Wales, (b) what proportion of this was supplied by Central Blood Laboratories Authority institutions and (c) what proportion was supplied by the Elstree blood products laboratory.

Mr. Whitney: The estimated total consumption of factor VIII of all types in England and Wales has been as follows:

Millions of Units

Calendar Year	Total Used*	BPL Production†	Proportion‡ per cent.
1981	57·6	20·8	36·1
1982	65·3	22·0	33·6
1983	62·3	30·8	49·4
1984	69·6	27·9	40·0

Notes
* Most of this factor VIII was in the form of factor VIII concentrate, but the total includes some units used in the form of cryoprecipitate and plasma produced by regional transfusion centres.
† The blood products laboratory (BPL) is a constituent part of the Central Blood Laboratories Authority (CBLA). It is the BPL which produces blood products at its Elstree and Oxford sites. The CBLA has a management function only. BPL supplies factor VIII concentrate only.
‡ Production and consumption figures are not strictly comparable since output in any one year may not be consumed that same year.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Servies why, between 1983-84 and 1984-85, the output of factor VIII from central blood laboratories institutions fell by 2 million units.

Mr. Whitney: Production of non heat-treated factor VIII stopped during the course of the first quarter of 1985 whilst rapid preparations were made to introduce a safer heat-treated product.

Health Authorities (Capital Programmes)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out a table showing the over-commitment against resource assumptions of each regional health authority forward capital programme for the year 1987-88 to 1993-94.

Mr. Hayhoe: Regional health authorities need to take account of their planned capital allocations, expected income from the sale of surplus land and property, and any planned transfers between their revenue and capital budgets, in determining whether their projected capital programmes are affordable. Regions' strategic plans, which have been submitted to the Department for approval, contain information on capital spending plans, but some regions have indicated that those plans are subject to revision. In addition, regions are required to submit reports by the end of December on their proposals for selling surplus residential accommodation, which will further increase the total amount of capital available. It is not therefore possible to give a comprehensive account of available resources and planned expenditure.

Board and Lodging Payments

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total annual cost to his Department in board and lodging payments and personal expenses of the following types of non-elderly households receiving supplementary benefit in board and lodging accommodation for one year (a) a couple with one child under 11 years and one child aged between 11 and 16 years, (b) a couple with one child aged between 11 and 16 years, (c) a single parent with one child under 11 years and one child aged between 11 and 16 years, (d) a single parent with one child aged between 11 and 16 years, (e) a couple where the woman is pregnant, (f) a single pregnant woman, (g) a couple with no children and (h) a single person, in (i) Cheltenham and (ii) Greater London for board and lodging at local limit and in (iii) England and (iv) Great Britain at average board and lodging costs; and what would be the supplementary benefit costs at ordinary scale rate for these household types if they were living in council rented accommodation for one year.

Mr. Newton: The information is set out in the order requested. The table shows the annual cost of supplementary benefit payments for board and lodging calculated at a maximum weekly payment of (i) £55·00 —the limit that applies in Cheltenham—and (ii) £70·00 —the limit for Greater London. The average board and lodging limits for England and for Great Britain are estimated at approximately £55 and therefore the sums shown for Cheltenham will broadly equate. The third column shows supplementary benefit at ordinary scale rates including average water rates and housing benefit for average local authority rent and general rates. No increases for additional requirements are included and no deductions have been made for other income such as child benefit.

	Cheltenham board and lodging—£55 limit £	Greater London board and lodging —£70 limit £	Ordinary scale rate and average rent and rates £
(a)	10,810	13,150	5,060
(b)	9,130	11,280	4,480
(c)	7,440	9,000	4,110
(d)	6,480	8,040	3,520
(e)	6,010	7,380	3,560
(f)	3,360	4,140	2,600
(g)	6,010	7,380	3,560
(h)	3,360	4,140	2,600

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the numbers of young people affected by the board and lodgings regulations (a) prior to the judgment in the Cotton case in July and (b) since this judgment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 29 October at columns 439-42 for information on the numbers of claims from boarders aged 16 to 25 which were assessed between 29 April and 29 July 1985. Available information for the period following the High Court ruling on 31 July relates to claims by all ordinary boarders and does not distinguish between those made by people aged 26 and under. This information suggests about 50,000 ordinary boarder claims, including repeat and change of address cases, were made from the end of July to mid-November 1985.

As I indicated in the statement to the House on 17 December, at column 166, we are taking steps to identify from our records those cases in which arrears may be due following the Court of Appeal ruling on 13 December, and to pay arrears as soon as possible. I should emphasise that both claims made before and after the High Court ruling on 31 July will be checked for the possibility of arrears.

Family Spending Power

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will estimate the net weekly spending power of a man with a wife and two children aged eight and 11 years, whose gross earnings are (a) £120, (b) £130, (c) £140 and (d) £150 per week and whose rent and rates are £30 and £10, respectively (i) when he is working and (ii) if he was unemployed assuming that he and his wife were both earning £4 per week disregarded income and in each case were receiving all benefits to which they were entitled;

(2) if he will estimate the net weekly spending power of a man with a wife and two children aged eight and 11 years, whose gross earnings are (a) £80, (b) £90, (c) £100 and (d) £110 per week and whose rent and rates are £20 and £7, respectively (i) when he is working and (ii) if he is unemployed, assuming that he and his wife were both earning £4 per week disregarded income and in each case were receiving all benefits to which they were entitled.

Mr. Newton: Where the man's gross earnings are (a) £80, (b) £90, (c) £100 and (d) £110 and where rent and rates were £20 and £7 a week, net weekly spending power would be (a) £88·19 (b) £86·04 (c) £85·25 and (d) £85·05. Where the man's gross earnings were (e) £120, (f) £130, (g) £140 and (h) £150 and rent and rates were £30 and £10 a week, net weekly spending power would be (e) £80·95, (f) £82·95, (g) £84·62 and (h) £87·82.

If the family's only income, apart from benefits, was from part-time earnings and both the man and his wife had

£4 of their part-time earnings disregarded for supplementary benefit purposes, the net weekly spending power would be £85·17.

Water rates of £1·65 are assumed to be included in the rates figures of £7 and £10. It is assumed that current benefit and national insurance contribution rates are in force and that fares to work are £5·95 a week. All other assumptions are as in the April 1985 tax/benefit model tables; a copy of which is in the Library.

It should be noted that the combinations of assumptions outlined in the questions are not typical. For example, among couples with children earning £110 or less a week less than 2 per cent. (about 30,000 families) pay rent and rates totalling £27 or more a week. The numbers of couples with children earning between £120 and £150 gross a week and living in rented accommodation and paying £40 a week or more in rent and rates is too small to estimate or quantify. Furthermore, the latest estimates show that only about 1·8 per cent. of married unemployed supplementary benefit claimants have part-time earnings. The proportion where both the claimant and spouse work is not known but must be less than 1·8 per cent.

National No Smoking Day 1985

Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions officials from his Department have had with the Health Education Council on the National Opinion Poll survey on the effectiveness of National No Smoking Day 1985.

Mr. Whitney: The survey was considered in assessing the Health Education Council's programme on smoking during 1985 and its plans for next year.

Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of the National Opinion Poll survey by the Health Education Council on the effectiveness of National No Smoking Day 1985.

Mr. Whitney: £2,760.

Nurses

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have been appointed for the 190 district general posts that have now been filled.

Mr. Hayhoe: Five.

Hip Replacement (West Midlands)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hip replacement operations were performed in the west midlands region in 1984-85; and what change occurred in the waiting list in the region for such operations during the same period.

Mr. Whitney: In 1983, the latest year for which information is available centrally, there were an estimated number of 3,600 hip replacement operations performed in National Health Service hospitals in West Midlands regional health authority. Information on the numbers of people awaiting admission to National Health Service hospitals for particular operations is not available centrally and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of West Midlands regional health authority.

Form F.ID

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the proportion of those who apply for exemption from dental charges using a form F.ID who obtain (a) full exemption from charges, (b) partial exemption from charges and (c) no exemption from such charges.

Mr. Hayhoe: Of those cases in which the result of the application is known, in 1984 81·4 per cent. obtained full and 14·2 per cent. partial remission of charges and 4·4 per cent. obtained no remission.

Local Dental Committees

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether local dental committees are intended to be representative of general dental practitioners as a whole; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has as to how many dentists serve on local dental committees; what proportion of these are general dental practitioners on the dental list of family practitioner committees; how many are elected and how many co-opted; and how many contested elections took place in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hayhoe: It is a requirement that a local dental committee for a family practitioner committee area can only be officially recognised if it is representative of practitioners providing general dental services in that area.

My Department holds copies of the constitutions of local dental committees. No detailed information is available, however, on individual members of committees or the number of contested elections.

Government Circulars

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the progress made in the implementation of Government circulars HC84(12) and HC84(13).

Mr. Hayhoe: The purpose of circular HC(84)12 was to inform various authorities and institutions about the enactment of the Marriage Act 1983 and its implications. The only action required was for authorities to convey the information to those with an interest. No specific check has been made but there is no reason to doubt that health and local authorities will have passed on this information as requested.

Circular HC(84)13 instructed health authorities to establish the general management function in the National Health Service. It was originally hoped that all general managers would be in post by January 1986. So far all regional, district and nearly 300 unit appointments have been made. This is the largest management recruitment exercise ever mounted in this country, and I am pleased with the progress being made.

Taxes and Benefits

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the combined total of income tax and national insurance contribution a man with a wife and two children would pay per week if his income were £109 per week and his rent and rates were £15.60 and £7.35, respectively; what are the combined totals of child benefit, housing benefit and free school milk to which such a man would be entitled; and what the effect would be if tax and national insurance thresholds were raised to £110 per week and all state benefits were eliminated for persons who earned more than £100 per week.

Mr. Newton: On the basis of the assumptions quoted and other assumptions as listed in the following note, the combined weekly total of income tax and national insurance contribution payable would be £22.58. The combined total value of child benefit, housing benefit and free school meals available in such circumstances would be £26·21 a week.

If income tax and national insurance contribution thresholds were raised and state benefits eliminated as outlined, a man in the particular circumstances quoted would be £3.63 a week worse off. The example, however, has no general application: such thresholds and benefit limitations would produce varying gains or losses for people in different circumstances.

Note Other assumptions
(i) £7·35 figure includes £1·50 water rate
(ii) current benefit rates apply
(iii) fares to work are £5·95 a week
(iv) other assumptions are as in the April 1985 tax/benefit model tables.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will ask the General Medical Services Committee to reconsider its decision not to co-operate with the implementation of an appeals procedure for use with the limited list of drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: No, but if the British Medical Association or the medical profession changes its mind about an appeals procedure, I will, of course, look at the matter again.

Supplementary Benefits

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the total estimated amounts defrauded from supplementary benefits for each year from 1979.

Mr. Major: No reliable estimate is available of the extent of supplementary benefit fraud.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all the changes in social security law since May 1979 which have affected the entitlement of (a) 16 to 17-year-olds, (b) 18 to 20-year-olds and (c) 21 to 25-year-olds to supplementary benefit or any other benefit or which have affected the entitlement to any benefit of their parents.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 130]: The main changes in social security law specifically affecting the entitlement of young people and their parents have been identified as set out, showing who was affected by the change and the relevant legislation. Normal uprating increases and regulations made in 1980 reflecting the previous policy of the Supplementary Benefits Commission are not included.

Date	Change	Persons affected	Legislation
Supplementary Benefit
November 1980	Entitlement to benefit for school leavers deferred to a fixed date.	School leavers aged 16-18.	Supplementary Benefit (Conditions of Entitlement) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1586).
November 1980	Position of unemployed young people studying part-time clarified by allowing such study up to 21 hours a week without affecting entitlement to benefit.	Claimants aged 16-25.	Supplementary Benefit (Conditions of Entitlement) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1586).
November 1980	Married or unmarried parents still at school enabled to claim benefit for themselves whereas they could previously claim for their child only.	Claimants aged 16-19 and their parents.	Supplementary Benefit (Conditions of Entitlement) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1586).
November 1980	Blind persons aged 16-17 entitled to the same special addition (£1·25) as blind persons aged 18 and over—previously entitled to 90p only.	Claimants aged 16-17 and parents of dependent children aged 16-17.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1299).
November 1980	Receipt of non-contributory invalidity pension by person aged 16-17 to count as qualifying benefit for the supplementary benefit long-term scale rate.	Claimants aged 16-17.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1299).
November 1980	Benefit payable to young people in the care of the local authority whether in local authority or other accommodation.	Claimants aged 16-17.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1299).
November 1980	Fixed rates of deduction in respect of non-dependants instead of deduction calculated according to housing costs and number of persons in the household: £2·15 for non-dependants aged 16-17 or in receipt of supplementary benefit. £4·60 for all others.	Parents in receipt of supplementary benefit with non-dependent children living with them.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1299).
August 1982	Disregard of that part of any education grant or award which is specifically intended for additional expenses of living away from home.	Adult students and parents of dependent young people aged 16-19.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Amendment Regulations 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 1125).

Date	Change	Persons affected	Legislation
August 1982	Entitlement to supplementary benefit whilst studying up to 21 hours a week made dependent upon receipt of benefit for 3 months.	All young people but school leavers in particular.	Supplementary Benefit (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 907).
April 1983	Rent addition withdrawn from non-householder claimants aged 16-17; no deduction from householders' supplementary benefit in respect of non-dependants in receipt of supplementary benefit.	Non-householder claimants aged 16-17 and parents of such claimants if the parents receive supplementary benefit.	Supplementary Benefit (Housing Benefit) (Requirements and Resources) Consequential Amendments Regula-tions 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 1126).
August 1983	The 3-month qualifying period for entitlement to supplementary benefit whilst studying up to 21 hours a week to include periods spent on the Youth Opportunities Programme or Youth Training Scheme.	Claimants aged 16-17.	Supplementary Benefit (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1983 (S.I. 1983 No. 1000).
November 1983	Three fixed rates of deduction in respect of non-dependants aged over 18 in the claimant's household (£2·20, £3·95 or £4·70) according to age and whether or not in receipt of benefit.	Parents with non-dependent children aged 18 and over living with them.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1983 (S.I. 1983 No. 1399).
April 1984	Rent addition withdrawn from non-householder claimants aged 18-20; no deduction from householders' supplementary benefit in respect of non-dependants aged 18-20 in receipt of supplementary benefit. Deductions in respect of other non-dependants £2·20 or £6·15 dependent upon age and whether or not in receipt of benefit.	Non-householder claimants aged 18-20 and parents with non-dependent children in their household.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 282).
August 1984	Persons over 16 entitled to benefit whilst undergoing education of a type normally given in schools if education no more than 12 hours a week.	Claimants aged 16-19.	Supplementary Benefit (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 984).
November 1984	Rates of deduction in respect of non-dependent members of claimant's household revised according to age and whether or not in receipt of benefit.	Parents with non-dependent children in their household.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 1102).
November 1984	Full-time earnings of a child who has left school taken into account up to the level of the child's requirements during the period he is treated as dependent.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-18.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 1102).
April to July 1985 and from November 1985	Payment as a bourder restricted to limited periods (2, 4, or 8 weeks) in any one area in any period of 26 weeks.	Certain unemployed able-bodied claimants aged 16-25 without dependent children.	Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Miscellaneous Provisions Regulations 1985 (S.I. 1985 No. 613) and (No. 2) Regulations (S.I. 1985 No. 1835).
Housing Benefit
April 1983 (Partial start November 1982)	Introduction of Housing Benefit Scheme. Needs allowance set at £11·40 for each dependent child. Deductions for non-dependants set at three rates (£3·10, £5·55 and £6·55) dependent upon age and whether or not in receipt of benefit or training allowance. No deduction in respect of 16-17 year olds.	Parents with dependent or non-dependent children.	Housing Benefits Regulations 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 1124).
April 1984	Non-dependant deduction discontinued in respect of 18-20 year olds in receipt of supplementary benefit or on Youth Training Scheme. Deduction in respect of other persons aged 18 and over £3·10 or £8·20 dependent upon age and whether or not in receipt of benefit.	Parents with non-dependent children.	Housing Benefits Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 103).
November 1984	Real increase of 50p in the needs allowance for dependent children (ie 50p more than required by normal uprating formula).	Parents with dependent children	Housing Benefits (Increase in Needs Allowances) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 1105).

Date	Change	Persons affected	Legislation
November 1984	Non-dependant deduction of £3·30 in respect of 16-17 year old not in receipt of supplementary benefit, severe disablement benefit or on Youth Training Scheme. Deduction of £8·20 reduced to £3·30 in respect of persons over 18 in receipt of certain benefits for 8 weeks. Deductions in respect of other non-dependants increased to £3·30 or £8·80 dependent upon age and whether or not in receipt of benefit.	Parents with non-dependent children.	Housing Benefits Amendment (No. 3) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 940).
November 1985	Real increase of 95p in the needs allowance for dependent children (ie 95p more than required by the normal uprating formula).	Parents with dependent children.	Housing Benefits (Increase in Needs Allowances) Regulations 1985 (S.I. 1985 No. 1244).
Severe Disablement Allowance
November 1984	Non-contributory invalidity pension replaced.		Health and Social Security Act 1984, Section 11. Social Security (Severe Disablement Allowance) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 1303).
	(i) Abolition of household duties test. Entitlement on grounds of incapacity for work alone.	Claimants whose incapacity for work begins on or before 20th birthday.
	(ii) Abolition of household duties test. Entitlement conditional on incapacity for work and on assessment of at least 80 per cent. disablement.	Claimants whose incapacity for work begins after age 20.
Family Income Supplement
November 1985	Higher prescribed amounts in respect of older children.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-18.	Family Income Supplements (Computation) Regulations 1985 (S.I. 1985 No. 1188).
Child and One-Parent Benefits
February 1980	One-parent benefit extended to persons receiving the lower rate dependant's addition of industrial death benefit or industrial injuries disablement benefit.	Parents with dependent children.	Child Benefit and Social Security (Fixing and Adjustment of Rates) Amendment Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 110).
November 1980	Benefit in respect of school leaver to remain in payment until a specified date at the end of the school holiday following the final term; to continue in payment in respect of child on Youth Training Scheme or sponsored training course; to cease in respect of child awarded supplementary benefit.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-18.	Child Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1980 (S.I. 1980 No. 1045).
May 1982	Benefit in respect of school leaver withdrawn if child starts work or Youth Training Scheme or sponsored training course.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-18	Child Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 470).
February 1983	Benefit in respect of child in local authority care payable to persons with whom the child resides for 7 consecutive days.	Parents with dependent children.	Child Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1983 (S.I. 1983 No. 3).
April 1984	In respect of new claims, benefit not payable where claimant or spouse has income exempt from United Kingdom income tax.	Parents with dependent children.	Child Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 337).
August 1984	Benefit payable in respect of child attending school or college provided the course exceeds 12 hours a week.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-18.	Child Benefit (General) Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 939).
August 1984	The number of weeks a person may continue to receive benefit while that person or the child is outside Great Britain reduced from 26 to 8.	Parents with dependent children.	Child Benefit (Residence and Persons Abroad) Amendment Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 875).
Child Dependency Additions to Social Security Benefits
November 1984	Lower rate of child dependency addition abolished and an earnings condition for the higher rate introduced.	Parents with dependent children aged 16-19.	Health and Social Security Act 1984 (Section 13 and Schedule 5); Commencement No. 1 Order 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 1302).

Private Cleaning Contractors

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will establish within his Department an inspectorate to monitor private cleaning contractors by making spot checks on their standards of cleanliness, hygiene and pest control; what checks at present operate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. It is the responsibility of health authorities to monitor the performance of cleaning contractors. Officials in the Department are available to advise health authorities on these matters.

AIDS

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the maximum incubation period for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: Medical experts have suggested that the maximum incubation period for full clinical AIDS could be seven years or longer.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to satisfy himself as to the adequacy of the level of resources currently devoted to combating the threat posed by acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: My officials are in close touch with the three Thames regional health authorities which are treating the majority of United Kingdom acquired immune deficiency syndrome cases. The information they have provided has helped the Department assess the resource implications of the AIDS infection. I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims) on 2 December 1985 at columns 1-2 which outlined the new government money being provided this year and next year. This included allocations for the three Thames regions and haemophilia reference centres which are carrying an exceptional AIDS workload.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what level of resources his Department plans to devote to combating acquired immune deficiency syndrome in each year till 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Friend has already announced on 2 December at columns 1-2 that the Government are allocating some £6·3 million in 1986-87 for spending on public education on, and prevention and treatment of, acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). As the number of cases of AIDS will increase at least for some years, the Government will keep under close review the levels of expenditure needed in succeeding years. It is too soon, however, to make reliable estimates of the sums that would be involved.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what would be the cost of providing a retirement pension equal to that currently payable to British citizens in the United Kingdom (a) to all British retirement pensioners resident in the Republic of South Africa, and (b) to those aged 75 years and over;

(2) what would be the cost of providing a widow's pension equal to that currently payable to British citizens in the United Kingdom (a) to all British widows resident in the Republic of South Africa, and (b) to those aged 75 years and over.

Mr. Major: The cost of paying full retirement and widows' pensions to pensioners resident in the Republic of South Africa is estimated as £9·5 million a year at current rates of benefit. Separate estimates for the cost of each benefit, for the costs in relation to British citizens only, or for pensions payable to those aged 75 and over are not available.

Heart Disease

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will order an investigation into the reasons why there are 30 per cent. more deaths than the national average from heart disease in the St. Helens and Knowsley area.

Mr. Hayhoe: Both the Mersey region and St. Helens and Knowsley health authority are aware of the incidence of deaths from heart disease in the district, caused mainly by cigarette smoking and unhealthy diet. The district's health education unit is actively promoting campaigns in schools and places of employment, as well as through health visitors, midwives and community staff, alerting the public to the harmful effects of smoking on health as well as promoting healthy eating and the benefits of exercise.

Hospitals (Diets)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, in the light of the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy recommendation to increase the ratio of polyunsaturated fat in the diet, how many National Health Service hospitals in England and Wales now make available to patients on a regular basis margarine which is high in polyunsaturates.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that this information is not collected centrally.

Chemists (Prescriptions)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer on 9 December, Official Report, column 496, giving the number of National Health Service prescriptions dispensed by chemists in England in 1984, what was the aggregate cost to the National Health Service, including all special payments and subsidies, of payments made to chemists in England for filling those prescriptions.

Mr. Hayhoe: Payments to chemist contractors in England for dispensing National Health Service prescriptions totalled £1,408 million of which £1,078 million represented payment to contractors of the ingredient cost of the dispensed drugs and £330 million represented remuneration payments to contractors.

Action on Smoking and Health

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria he uses for deciding the level of funding to Action on Smoking and Health.

Mr. Whitney: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 27 November 1985 at columns 599-600.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many officials in his Department liaise with (a) the Health Education Council and (b) Action on Smoking and Health; and what is the cost per annum.

Mr. Whitney: The Department routinely liaises with relevant outside bodies, and this work is not separately costed. Varying numbers of officials may be involved at any time.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive a grant application for funds for 1986-87 from Action on Smoking and Health; and if he will place a copy of the application in the Library.

Mr. Whitney: We expect to receive an application from Action on Smoking and Health shortly. Applications from bodies seeking Government funding are treated in confidence.

NHS (Management Arrangements)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received recently about the implementation of management arrangements in respect of medical and nursing appointments at unit manager level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: None directly about unit general manager appointments. My colleagues and I have, of course, discussed issues arising from the Griffiths report with professional and other bodies. The implementation of general management at unit level is a matter for health authorities, but I have made it clear to regional health authority chairmen that the new management arrangements should command the confidence and commitment of medical and nursing interests locally.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he has given to health authorities concerning taking into account the compensation element of early retirement expenditure and the net costs of redundancy payments when assessing competitive tenders.

Mr. Hayhoe: Advice on this matter is contained in the circular on competitive tendering HC(83)18, a copy of which is in the Library. I am considering whether further advice is necessary.

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number by authority of (a) early retirements and (b) redundancies resulting from competitive tendering; and what are the numbers by health authorities and boards in the regional control totals.

Mr. Hayhoe: Information held centrally about redundancies is limited to those aged 50 or over who also attract early payment of superannuation benefits. The information set out in the table relates to (a) those voluntarily retiring for the avoidance of their own or another's redundancy, and (b) those compulsorily redundant who are also entitled to superannuation benefits, resulting from competitive tendering. The figures are for the period 1 April 1985 to 30 November 1985 and the provisional regional control totals are for the year ending 31 March 1986. The control totals are subject to revision in January in the light of later information about redundancies.

Region and District	Premature retirement	Redundancy	Control total
Northern
North Tees	0	1	—
South Cumbria	0	4	—
Northumberland	5	0	—
Newcastle	0	2	—
South Tyneside	4	0	—
	9	7	230
Yorkshire
Regional Employees	0	2	—
East Yorkshire	5	5	—
Hull	0	19	—
Scunthorpe	5	0	—
York	1	4	—
Scarborough	5	0	—
Harrogate	0	8	—
Bradford	10	6	—
Calderdale	28	7	—
Huddersfield	0	3	—
Leeds Eastern	0	1	—
Leeds Western	0	13	—
	54	68	260
Trent
North Derbyshire	1	2	—
North Lincolnshire	2	0	—
South Lincolnshire	0	2	—
Nottingham	1	0	—
Barnsley	0	1	—
	4	5	270
East Anglian
Norwich	0	42	—
Great Yarmouth and Waveney	3	0	—
West Suffolk	0	8	—
	3	50	120
North West Thames
South Bedfordshire	0	2	—
Hounslow and Spelthorne	0	29	—
Ealing	0	12	—
Paddington	0	42	—
Victoria	0	64	—
	0	149	570
North East Thames
Regional Employees	0	2	—
Mid Essex	6	4	—
North East Essex	1	0	—
Southend	1	0	—
Waltham Forest	22	0	—
Tower Hamlets	1	0	—
	31	6	260
South East Thames
South East Kent	1	0	—
Canterbury and Thanet	30	33	—
Bromley	0	25	—
	31	58	280
South West Thames
North West Surrey	0	9	—
Kingston and Esher	13	0	—
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton	0	29	—

Region and District	Premature retirement	Redundancy	Control total
Merton and Sutton	0	6	—
Wandsworth	19	0	—
Chichester	0	9	—
Worthing	0	9	—
Croydon	0	2	—
East Surrey	5	5	—
	37	69	400
Wessex
Regional Employees	0	1	—
East Dorset	0	3	—
Southampton and South West Hampshire	0	1	—
Winchester	0	1	—
Isle of Wight	0	1	—
	0	7	130
Oxford
Kettering	3	0	—
Oxfordshire	0	36	—
Milton Keynes	0	2	—
	3	38	100
South Western
North Devon	0	2	—
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	10	7	—
Bristol and Western	0	1	—
Frenchay	0	13	—
Southmead	0	2	—
Somerset	0	10	—
	10	35	150
West Midlands
Dudley	0	1	—
Herefordshire	0	1	—
Bromsgrove and Redditch	1	0	—
North Warwickshire	0	2	—
South Warwickshire	7	0	—
Rugby	3	0	—
South East Staffordshire	4	3	—
Solihull	0	3	—
East Birmingham	0	15	—
Central Birmingham	0	1	—
	15	26	350
Mersey
Chester	0	3	—
Crewe	7	0	—
Macclesfield	6	0	—
Warrington	4	1	—
North Sefton	0	1	—
South Sefton	0	2	—
	17	7	310
North Western
Rochdale	0	1	—
Bury	0	3	—
	0	4	150
Special Health Authorities
National Heart and Chest Hospital	4	0	—
Royal Marsden Hospital	0	8	—
	4	8	47

Breast Cancer (Screening)

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the clinics which operate breast screening for cancer in women within the National Health Service and state the number of patients screened in the last year.

Mr. Hayhoe: Since there is currently no national breast cancer screening programme, this information is not collected centrally. The Government have established an expert working group to consider the information now available on breast cancer screening by mammography and to advise them on whether there should be a change in policy on this subject.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the British Medical Association and the Health Education Council regarding the sale of tobacco products of the type known as Skoal Bandits; and what response he has made.

Mr. Whitney: The British Medical Association and the Health Education Council have expressed concern to the Department about the health risks associated with Skoal Bandits. A meeting with the association took place in July. In writing to the chairman of the Council in August, we drew attention to the letter from the Chief Medical Officer to doctors warning of the health hazards arising from the use of tobacco in the mouth, and to the voluntary agreement we had concluded with the manufacturers of Skoal Bandits restricting the marketing of the product in ways designed specifically to protect young people.

Member's Correspondence

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what efforts his Department has made to locate the application form for dependency benefit in respect of the wife of Mr. A., a constituent of the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton, who name and address is contained in the Minister of State's letter of 1 April (ref. PO (5) 4374/55), which Mr. A. delivered by hand to the Burley's Way, Leicester, office of his Department on 6 February 1981, but which was never received at the Yeoman street office when the case papers were transferred; whether he will now authorise back payment of this benefit, following the correspondence with the hon. Member on this matter, and the administrative errors accepted by the Minister in that correspondence.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend will be aware from our earlier correspondence that the Department has made intensive efforts to trace the claim for dependency benefit made in respect of Mrs. A. which was alleged to have been made on 6 February 1981. Searches of records at Burley's Way, Leicester, office and the Yeoman street office produced no evidence of such a claim made earlier than February 1983.

In March 1984 the late claim for the period 9 February 1981 to 1 July 1981 was referred to the adjudication officer who disallowed the claims for dependency benefit. In reaching that decision the adjudication officer would have considered the evidence of a claim having been made in 1981. The claimant was interviewed following the adjudication officer's decision and advised of his right of appeal to the social security appeal tribunal which he chose not to exercise. It is, of course, still open to the claimant to make a late appeal to the social security appeal tribunal which the chairman may decide should be heard if good cause has been shown for the delay. In these circumstances, I do not consider it would be appropriate to make an extra-statutory payment.

Spectacles

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many prescriptions were issued for prism segment bifocal spectacles in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Statistics are not collected on the number of prescriptions issued for specific lens types but it is estimated that some 1,100 prism segment bifocals were dispensed under the general ophthalmic services in England in 1984.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is (a) the number and (b) the proportion of the total represented by prescriptions for spectacles issued to people over pension age in the latest period up to April 1985, for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what estimate he has of numbers of people over pensionable age obtaining prescriptions for spectacles since 1 April compared with a similar period before that date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Separate information is not collected for prescriptions given to those of pensionable age.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what the cost saving has been to the Department of Health and Social Security since the changes introduced on 1 April to the availability of National Health Service spectacles; what is the expected saving in a full year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The expected savings in a full year in England are some £14 million. Present information indicates that these will be achieved.

Speech Therapy Teachers

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service staff in England and Wales are covered by the six Whitley Council grades for speech therapy teachers; ST 61, student teachers, ST 66, teacher, ST 71, senior teacher, ST 76, principal 2, ST 81, principal 1 and ST 86, principal 24 plus, both in total and by each grade.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is as follows:

	Numbers
ST 61—speech therapy student teacher	Nil
ST 66—speech therapy teacher	10
ST 71—speech therapy senior teacher	2
ST 76—speech therapy Principal II	1
ST 81—speech therapy Principal 1	1
ST 86—speech therapy Principal 24+	Nil
Total	14

Tobacco Industry (Advertising)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to conclude his discussions with the tobacco industry on voluntary restrictions on advertising and promotion.

Mr. Whitney: We hope the discussions will be concluded in good time to allow a new agreement to come into effect when the present one expires on 31 March 1986.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical appendix to the White Paper—"Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who now receive family income supplement will not be entitled to family credit.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the White Paper proposals on the reform of social security exclude 16 and 17-year-olds from receipt of a personal allowance in their own right and allow for their parents only to claim a child allowance for them if they are unemployed.

Mr. Newton: Sixteen and 17-year-old non-dependants will be entitled to income support at the same rate of personal allowance as 16 and 17-year-old dependent children.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many, nationally and for each social security region, of (a) 16-year-olds and (b) 17-year-olds are in receipt of supplementary benefit for the latest available year; and how many (i) live in their parents' household and (ii) live independently; and how many of them have (1) claimant parents and (2) non-claimant parents.

Mr. Newton: In December 1983 — the latest available figures—there were 56,000 16-year-olds and 119,000 17-year-olds in receipt of supplementary benefit nationally. Of these, an estimated 1,000 16-year-olds and 7,000 17-year-olds were householders. No further information about the status of the remaining claimants or their parents is available.

Estimates of the number of 16 and 17-year-old claimants can be provided for each social security region but this information is not immediately available.

I will let the hon. Member have a further reply when these figures are to hand.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, out of all the responses to the Green Paper, "Reform of Social Security", how many gave positive support to the proposal for a lower rate of supplementary benefit for under-25s; and which they were.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 84]: The responses are not generally in a form which can sensibly be used to provide a simple breakdown of numbers for or against this proposal. However, paragraphs 3.10 to 3.14 in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), published on Monday, gives the important points made about it and the Government's conclusions, including the proposal that all couples aged 18 or over should receive the same personal allowance.

Blood-alcohol Level

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received, what information he has and what action he proposes to take on a product recently marketed which purports to affect the blood-alcohol level;

(2) what representations he has received, what information he has and what action he proposes to take on a product recently marketed which purports to affect the blood-alcohol level; and if he will make a statement on the implications of the marketing of this product for health and safety matters.

Mr. Whitney: I have received no representations about this product to which my hon. Friend refers. I understand that it is a fructose-based carbonated drink which claims to reduce blood-alcohol levels. While the rate at which alcohol is eliminated from the blood can be affected by a variety of factors, I have yet to see any reliable evidence that its elimination from the blood can be artificially speeded. It would seem most unwise for an individual to place reliance on any such product.

Family Credit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what take-up rate his figures for beneficiaries from family credit are based.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 2.10 of the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691).

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will estimate, on the basis of a 50 per cent. take-up of family credit, the numbers of families who will gain and who will lose as a result of his new proposals for family credit;

(2) if he will recalculate and publish in the form of table 16B of the technical appendix of his White Paper the numbers of gainers and losers from changes in income-related benefits after making allowance for future child benefit payments (a) at their present rate, (b) rising in line with inflation and (c) rising by only 1 per cent. a year;

(3) if he will publish a table showing the total number of gainers and losers from his social security reviews after taking account of both his proposed changes in supplementary benefit, housing benefit and family income supplement and a policy for raising child benefit at a rate lower than price rises.

Mr. Newton: The technical annex to the White Paper gives a very substantial amount of information to illustrate the proposed changes in income-related benefits. In the Government's view it would not be a sensible use of the considerable computer and manpower resources involved to produce comparable information in respect of every possible variation of the assumptions on which they are based.

Child Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on his policy for the uprating of child benefit in the light of the decisions of his review of social security.

Mr. Newton: The future level of child benefit will be determined, uprating by uprating, according to all the circumstances at the appropriate time, including, in particular, the pattern of family support as a whole and the needs of families on low incomes.

Social Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of persons who each year will receive (a) help with funeral expenses and (b) help with maternity expenses from the proposed social fund.

Mr. Newton: Precise estimates cannot be made since the number of those receiving help will depend on factors such as the level of claimants' savings and, in the case of funerals, the proportion on income-related benefits responsible for funerals. But the new arrangements will mean a significant increase in the number of low income families eligible for substantial help with these expenses.

NHS (Services)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 1984-85 for each region the figures for payments to outside contractors for support services and for contractual arrangements for patient care indicating the services provided; if he will also give each figure a percentage of the total expenditure on the relevant service in each region; and if he will also give the 1983-84 figures for comparison.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 25 November 1985, c. 498]: Following is the information requested derived from the annual accounts of regional and district health authorities for 1984-85. For 1983-84, I refer the hon. Member to my predecessor's reply to him on 14 February 1985 at columns 281-82. Figures for the two years are not entirely comparable as value added tax on contracted-out services became reclaimable by health authorities on 1 September 1983. The annual accounts do not give a detailed analysis of expenditure on contractual arrangements for patient care.

Region	Medical & surgical equipment maintenance		X-ray equipment maintenance		Laboratory equipment maintenance		Catering		Laundry		Domestic Cleaning
	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.
Northern	473	2·44	538	50·42	493	11·48	7	0·03	208	5·25	239	0·85
Yorkshire	815	3·76	354	21·38	260	5·27	20	0·08	220	4·72	780	2·60
Trent	1,006	3·71	736	43·51	551	9·19	93	0·30	95	1·86	467	1·22
East Anglian	287	2·45	325	52·38	257	10·92	Nil	Nil	94	3·70	1,074	7·04
North West Thames	1,254	5·84	685	40·18	403	6·82	48	0·18	944	20·34	666	1·87
North East Thames	1,262	4·42	876	47·31	885	11·24	60	0·19	733	12·97	881	1·95
South East Thames	1,256	4·41	906	52·31	550	11·27	189	0·65	551	9·60	1,154	3·11
South West Thames	742	4·28	812	61·20	341	10·57	114	0·47	1,483	31·57	887	3·12
Wessex	1,068	6·61	561	53·71	275	10·05	10	0·05	261	8·90	189	0·89
Oxford	930	7·49	192	43·23	208	6·71	14	0·11	592	20·31	675	4·46
South Western	757	4·20	562	42·78	572	13·13	26	0·11	460	11·57	165	0·68
West Midlands	1,529	4·87	740	44·28	648	9·47	20	0·05	522	8·24	476	1·33
Mersey	771	5·11	630	55·92	442	11·73	—	—	67	1·46	252	1·11
North Western	1,088	4·03	641	40·96	913	14·98	Nil	Nil	412	7·43	518	1·53

Region	Engineering maintenance		Building maintenance		Grounds, etc. maintenance		Vehicle maintenance		Computers—contract services		Contractual arrangements for patient care
	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.	£'000	per cent.
Northern	3,041	16·73	3,680	32·78	102	6·64	517	20·20	76	5·80	1,406	0·29
Yorkshire	3,542	19·75	5,164	43·58	140	8·10	252	8·11	81	4·97	1,878	0·35
Trent	4,291	18·78	6,930	45·59	180	7·55	675	19·13	493	60·79	720	0·11
East Anglian	1,349	14·28	1,487	29·81	49	5·60	312	13·75	99	10·12	457	0·17
North West Thames	5,243	26·98	5,273	42·97	278	19·87	398	11·45	1,001	85·92	3,489	0·62
North East Thames	6,115	23·71	6,210	41·31	299	17·97	527	12·78	830	23·93	5,685	0·78
South East Thames	5,193	22·23	5,301	41·57	246	17·71	409	10·31	550	48·12	2,650	0·43
South West Thames	4,390	24·99	4,929	45·53	471	32·82	536	16·61	247	11·59	6,023	1·28
Wessex	2,480	20·26	2,404	29·48	86	6·81	409	18·47	194	31·39	1,942	0·50
Oxford	1,967	19·86	2,398	40·20	180	24·10	380	19·29	141	20·70	1,149	0·38
South Western	3,414	21·41	3,558	34·41	51	2·99	871	25·22	196	28·57	2,421	0·53
West Midlands	4,926	16·29	7,251	39·60	349	13·29	444	9·79	474	17·45	2,425	0·33
Mersey	3,353	22·84	6,164	53·25	185	14·74	275	12·19	50	4·73	2,354	0·60
North Western	4,637	22·89	5,382	33·90	236	11·22	287	7·64	211	20·87	6,919	1·07

Notes:

1. All figures are for current expenditure: capital is excluded.
2. For contractual arrangements for patient care, "total expenditure on the relevant service" is taken as total current expenditure on hospital services.
3. Payments to doctors, pharmacists, dentists, opticians and others contracted to the NHS to provide family practitioner services are excluded.
4. Minimal expenditure and percentages (ie less than £500 or 0·01 per cent.) as indicated by the use of a dash (—).
5. Information in the table has been prepared on as consistent a basis as practicable but comparisons of percentages between services may in some cases be misleading as the basis of the total relevant expenditure figures for different services are not completely uniform.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will classify refusals of severe disablement allowance to (a) men, (b) single women and (c) married women according to the following reasons (i) over pension age, (ii) not incapable of work, (iii) failed the 80 per cent. test, (iv) failed residence and presence conditions and (v) other.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 28 November 1985, c. 658]: I regret that, due to a typographical error, the figure of 530 was incorrectly given as 503 in the fourth row of the third column.

Child Abuse Officers

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many local authorities have child abuse officers.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 765]: Information about numbers of local authorities with child abuse co-ordinators is not held centrally.

Hospital Fires

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many fires have occurred in National Health Service hospitals in each year since 1979.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 18 December 1985, c. 234]: The readily available information relates to fires in hospitals (including nursing homes and non-NHS hospitals) in 1980-83. The information is published by the Home Office in "Fire Statistics United Kingdom". Figures for such fires during this period are:

	Number
1980	2,106
1981	2,081
1982	2,213
1983	2,243

The figure for 1984 is not yet available.

Information on National Health Service hospitals alone could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when his Department's questionnaire about cervical cancer provision was sent to each health authority; by what date they were asked to reply and whether he intends to publish the outcome.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 18 December 1985, c. 239]: A checklist intended to enable health authorities to review their cervical screening programmes was issued on 29 April and responses were asked for by 14 June. The checklist was not designed to elicit replies for summary and publication but to assist the Department's consideration of these issues.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the combined cost of single payments, death grant and maternity grant in (a) 1985-86, (b) 1986-87 and (c) 1987-88, respectively.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985]: Expenditure on death and maternity grants is estimated at £35 million in 1985-86 and £36 million in 1986-87. The White Paper, "Reform of Social Security", proposes that both grants will be replaced in April 1987. It is not possible to make comparably reliable projections of expenditure on single payments; expenditure in 1984-85 was £241 million.

Post-operative Infection

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the sample information on post-operative infection held by his Department.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985]: The available information is given in the table. The sample numbers are too small for reliable estimates to be made below regional level.

National Health Service hospitals, 1983*

Regional and special health authorities	Estimated number of inpatient cases with a diagnosis of post-operative infection
Northern	890
Yorkshire	1,150
Trent	1,800
East Anglian	740
North West Thames	1,050
North East Thames	1,590
South East Thames	1,160
South West Thames	910
Wessex	700
Oxford	460
South Western	2,090
West Midlands	1,260
Mersey	780
North Western	1,730
Special Health Authorities	†70
England	16,380

* Excluding psychiatric and maternity units.

† This estimate was based on a small sample number and should be treated with caution.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 13 January 1986

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the current allowance payable to hon. Members successful in the ballot for private Members' Bills to assist with drafting costs; when the allowance was last increased; what is the current value of the allowance expressed in prices prevailing at the date it was last increased; and if he has any plans to increase it.

Mr. Biffen: Pursuant to a resolution of the House of 29 November 1971, hon. Members who have secured one of the first 10 places in the ballot are entitled to claim not more than £200 towards the cost of drafting assistance for their Bill. This allowance has not been increased since it was introduced. The current value of the allowance expressed in prices prevailing at the date of its introduction is £43·35.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Campaigners (Grant)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what will be the amount of grant his Department will provide to the Campaigners for 1986-87; and how that compares with 1985-86.

Mr. Dunn: An allocation of £10,800 for headquarters grant was made to the Campaigners for 1985-86. Decisions about 1986-87 headquarters grant for national voluntary youth organisations will not be announced until spring 1986.

Teachers (Merit Payments)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, in preparing his plans for merit awards for teachers, what estimate he made of the percentage of teachers who would expect to receive merit awards within the first two years.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. He continues to look for a pay structure providing substantially more promotion opportunities for the better teachers to higher scales than are at present available combined with promotion arrangements and differentials designed to recruit, retain and motivate teachers of the right quality. The pay offer which the management panel made, with the Government's endorsement, on 12 September would have generated an extra 74,000 promotions, equal to one in five of all classroom teachers.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to ensure that all pupils receive at least a specified number of hours of instruction during their school career from teachers in receipt of the proposed merit payments.

Mr. Chris Patten: No.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to issue guidelines to examining boards on the consequences for the assessment of examination papers of the proposed introduction of merit payments for teachers and the implicit grading of the abilities of the teachers of each examinee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: No.

Private Education

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the total number of schoolchildren taking full-time private education.

Mr. Dunn: In January 1985, the latest date for which information is available, there were 501,422 full-time pupils in independent schools in England.

Examination Results

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will initiate discussions with examining boards about the implications for the evaluation of performance at recent and forthcoming O and A level examinations of the number of children whose schooling has been disrupted by strike action by teaching staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend and I share the deep concern which pupils and parents have about the current action being taken by teachers. We deplore any such action which harms children's education and which might damage their performance in public examinations and their future prospects.

The effect of the action so far is inevitably difficult to quantify and will have varied from school to school. It is open to schools to draw to the attention of the GCE and CSE examinations boards any relevant factors affecting pupils' examination performance, and the boards have indicated that they will consider any such details provided in accordance with their normal practice. My right hon. Friend therefore at present has no plans to hold discussions with the boards.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the percentage change in real terms, measured by the gross domestic product deflator, in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1983-84, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant and changes in the level of local authority rates (a) including and (b) excluding additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 3 December 1985, c. 161]: The percentage changes in the funding of each university between 1980-81 and 1983-84 in real terms measured by the gross domestic product deflator, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in the level of home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, provision for capital in recurrent expenditure and local authority rates (a) including and (b) excluding additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes are as follows. The percentage changes shown will be in part the consequence of the withdrawal of the overseas student subsidy and to the extent that these losses have been made up by the increased fee income will not accurately reflect the changes in the universities financial position.

University	Percentage change in UGC funding (Academic Years) Real terms 1980-81 to 1983-84 (a) including IT and new blood programmes	(b) excluding IT and new blood programmes
Aston	−30·9	−31·0
Bath	−4·0	−4·5
Birmingham	−14·0	−14·4
Bradford	−31·1	−31·2
Bristol	−12·7	−13·4
Brunel	−16·3	−16·6
Cambridge	−7·5	−8·2
City	−19·7	−19·8
Durham	−5·5	−5·7
East Anglia	−7·6	−8·0
Essex	−19·6	−20·0
Exeter	−14·9	−15·1
Hull	−16·6	−17·0
Keele	−32·0	−32·1
Kent	−19·3	−19·8
Lancaster	−12·1	−12·3
Leeds	−13·2	−13·4
Leicester	−6·0	−6·5
Liverpool	−15·0	−15·2
London Graduate School of Business Studies	+33·6	+33·6
London University	−13·6	−13·9
Loughborough	−7·4	−7·7
Manchester Business School	−25·2	−25·2
Manchester	−14·9	−15·2
University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology	−27·9	−29·2
Newcastle	−8·3	−8·7
Nottingham	−11·2	−11·8
Oxford	−8·8	−9·5
Reading	−13·2	−13·3
Salford	−42·2	−42·3
Sheffield	−11·0	−11·2
Southampton	−9·8	−10·3
Surrey	−21·7	−21·8
Sussex	−18·1	−18·9
Warwick	−11·5	−12·1
York	−0·3	−1·7
Aberystwyth U.C.	−16·3	−16·6
Bangor U.C.	−13·6	−13·8
Cardiff U.C.	−12·9	−13·0
St. David's Lampeter	+0·7	+0·7
Swansea U.C.	−16·0	−16·3
University of Wales Institute of Science and Technology	−15·7	−16·1
Welsh National School of Medicine	−7·0	−7·1
Aberdeen	−19·0	−19·2
Dundee	−15·2	−15·3
Edinburgh	−8·0	−8·6
Glasgow	−6·3	−6·7
Heriot-Watt	−9·0	−9·6
St. Andrews	−16·6	−16·9
Stirling	−20·7	−21·4
Strathclyde	−14·7	−14·6

Speech Science

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what information he has on the numbers of staff engaged in full or part-time teaching on courses leading to degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy and their places of employment;

(2) what information he has as to the number of students, and their place of study, sitting for examinations for degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy in 1983, 1984 and 1985 and the classification of honours awarded where appropriate;

(3) what information he has as to the numbers and location of courses at universities, polytechnics or other institution leading to degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 20 November 1985, c. 177-78]: The table published with my reply was misleading. Revised information on the numbers of speech science, speech pathology and speech therapy graduates is as follows:

Speech science, speech pathology and speech therapy courses and numbers of graduates

Institution	Course	All first degree graduates 1983	1984	1985	Good honours graduates 1983	1984	1985
(a) Great Britain universities
University College London	Speech sciences	43	46	42	18	16	14
Manchester	Speech pathology and therapy	22	18	19	16	10	13
Newcastle	Speech, Speech and psychology	16	11	19	4	7	8
Reading	Linguistics and Language pathology	10	13	11	9	4	8
Sheffield	Speech science	19	14	14	7	5	5
(b) England polytechnics
City of Birmingham	Speech pathology and therapy	—	20	—	—	7	—
Leicester	Speech pathology and therapy	—	—	—	—	—	—
Leeds	Speech therapy	—	—	—	—	—	—
Manchester	Remedial speech therapy	—	—	—	—	—	—
(c) England other institutions
The Central School of Speech and Drama	Speech therapy	—	—	—	—	—	—

— No graduates.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Priests (Retirements and Resignations)

Mr. Frank Field asked the hon. Member for Wokingham as representing the Church Commissioners if he will detail for the last five years the number of priests who have voluntarily retired or resigned early; and if these data can be suitably classified according to reason for the early retirement or resignation.

Sir William van Straubenzee: The commissioners do not keep the information necessary to answer this question precisely. However, the information they do keep indicates that the number of priests who left the commissioners' payroll, other than for normal retirement or death, were:

	Number
1980-81	208
1981-82	195
1982	190
1983	214
1984	237

A number of these will have taken up appointments in other forms of ministry: for example, forces chaplaincy, prison chaplaincy, school or hospital chaplaincy work.

Notes

1. The figures for 1980-81 and 1981-82 refer to the period 1 July to 30 June: the remaining columns refer to calendar years.
2. Clergymen who move directly from an appointment in one diocese to an appointment in another are not included in these figures.
3. The figures relate only to losses from full-time diocesan appointments.

ENERGY

Coal Industry

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what discussions he has had with the Opencast Executive and the chairman of the National Coal Board regarding privatisation of opencast coalmining operations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what discussions he has had with the chairman and members of the National Coal Board regarding privatisation of some deep mined coal production units; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government have no plans for privatising the National Coal Board's mining activities.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Peremptory Challenges

34. Mr. Jessel asked the Attorney-General whether any guidance is given by Her Majesty's Government to counsel appearing in Crown courts on the use of peremptory challenges.

The Attorney-General: It is not open to the Government to give guidance to counsel appearing in Crown courts on matters such as these. In 1977 the number of peremptory challenges available to each defendant was reduced from seven to three. As the Solicitor-General said in November, while the law so recently approved by Parliament remains as it is, counsel has a right and a duty to use the peremptory challenge, together with all other lawful means, to the extent that he conscientiously thinks it will further his client's interest.

Law Centres

35. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Attorney-General what recent discussions he has had about the future of law centres.

The Solicitor-General: The Lord Chancellor's officials continue to be in touch, as appropriate, with the seven centres funded by the Lord Chancellor's Department and with the Law Centres Federation. Other law centres are not the responsibility of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Confidentiality

36. Mr. John Morris asked the Attorney-General whether he is satisfied with the arrangements for maintaining the confidentiality of advice given by him to other Government Departments.

The Attorney-General: I an satisfied that the arrangements in my Department are adequate and that other Departments are aware of their duty to maintain the confidentiality of any advice which I may give them.

Family Courts

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Attorney-General when the report of the family court review being undertaken by the Lord Chancellor's Department will be published.

The Solicitor-General: It is hoped that a consultation paper will be published shortly and that a final report on the feasibility of the main options for a unified family court will be published by the end of this year or early in 1987.

Legal Aid

Mr. Best asked the Attorney-General whether there are any plans to review the operation of the legal aid scheme.

The Solicitor-General: The Government are concerned that legal aid should be provided in the most cost effective way. It has therefore been decided to carry out a scrutiny with the following terms of reference:

"Given the necessary judicial independence of the courts and existing reviews of court procedure, to consider the determinants of expenditure on the legal aid scheme by looking at its operation and administration in practice, and to make recommendations."

The scrutiny will be undertaken by officials from the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Treasury and the efficiency unit. It is intended that it will begin at the end of January 1986 and will be completed in about four and a half months.

Duty Solicitors

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Attorney-General what procedures have been established for the monitoring of the introduction of the duty solicitor scheme in London.

The Solicitor-General: The Law Society is receiving reports on the progress of implementation from its committees responsible for the administration of the 24-hour duty solicitor scheme. In addition, the society has made arrangements for the collection of detailed statistics on work done under the scheme.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

42. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what amounts of overseas aid provided by British taxpayers are bilateral, are through the European Economic Community and are through other international agencies such as those of the United Nations.

Mr. Raison: In 1984-85 aid programme expenditure was £1,165 million. Of this £664 million was provided as bilateral aid, £231 million was channelled through the European Community and £270 million was provided to other multilateral development agencies.

43. Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the levels of British bilateral and multilateral aid, respectively, in 1986-87 in real terms compared with the levels of 1978-79.

Mr. Raison: In 1978-79 bilateral aid was £563 million and multilateral aid £201 million. The aid programme breakdown in 1986-87 is still subject to some uncertainty but in broad terms the level of bilateral aid will be lower in real terms than in 1978-79 and that of multilateral aid greater.

Ethiopia and Sudan

44. Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on further emergency assistance to Ethiopia and the Sudan.

Mr. Raison: We shall continue to provide emergency assistance towards relief needs, and help for rehabilitation, in Ethiopia and the Sudan during 1986, both bilaterally and through the European Community. I have announced already a further £5·2 million relief assistance to the Sudan.

45. Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied that there will be sufficient food supplies in the Sudan in 1986.

Mr. Raison: Current assessments are that there will be an overall grain surplus in Sudan this year. However, some areas, particularly Darfur and Kordofan, will be in deficit and a substantial relief effort will be needed. We are ready to play a full part in this. I have already announced today the provision for a further £5·2 million relief assistance to the Sudan.

Yemen Arab Republic

46. Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will increase the present British aid programme to the Yemen Arab Republic.

Mr. Raison: I have no plans at present to do so. My visit last week to the Yemen Arab Republic confirmed the useful work being carried out under our technical co-operation programme. I made clear that there might be scope in the future for funds from the aid and trade provision if suitable project proposals were put forward.

Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid projects in Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador have been funded by Her Majesty's Government for each year since 1979.

Mr. Raison: Bilateral aid projects financed were as follows:

Project	*Aid category	Duration
HONDURAS
Forestry Development	T.C.	1979-85
Artisanal Fisheries	T.C.	1979-84
Coffee Diversification and Development	Capital and T.C.	1981-85
Natural Resources study of the Mosquitia Region	T.C.	1981
Water Exploration, Development and Supplies	Capital and T.C.	1982-85
Provision and Commissioning of Hospital Equipment	Capital and T.C.	1982-85
Provision of Bailey Bridging	Capital	1982-85
Agricultural Economist for the National Institute of Agriculture	T.C.	1983-85
Provision and Commissioning of Land Rovers for the National Institute of Agriculture	Capital and T.C.	1983-85
Construction of Prefabricated Wooden Bridges	T.C.	1984-85
Hydraulic Modelling Work for the Aguan River Basin Study	A.T.P./T.C.	1984
Agricultural Engineer for Ministry of Natural Resources, Unit of Development and Adaptation	T.C.	1985
GUATEMALA
None	—	—
EL SALVADOR
Self-Help Housing	T.C. (Accountable grant)	1979-84
Acelhuate River Management	T.C.	1979-80
Assistance to Central American Technological Institute	T.C.	1979
Economics Lecturer for Jose Simeon Caras University, San Salvador	T.C.	1979
Assistance to Veterinary Laboratories at Soyapango, San Miguel and Sonsonate	T.C.	1979
Provision of Equipment for Social Development	T.C. (Grant)	1985

* TC—Technical Co-operation.
ATP—Aid and Trade Provision.

Central America (Aid)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present total annual volume of European Economic Community aid to all central American countries; and how has this been allocated for each year since 1979.

Mr. Raison: European Community aid disbursements to Central America were £9·1 million in 1983, the latest year for which complete figures are available.

The annual average level of aid commitments in 1979-84 (inclusive) was £22·8 million (38·6 mecu) allocated as follows:

	Financial and technical	Food aid	Emergency aid	Trade promotion	Training	Voluntary organisations	Total
Guatemala	—	2·468	0·882	0·289	—	0·188	3·827
El Salvador	—	9·883	0·825	0·130	—	0·294	11·132
Honduras	22·000	16·150	0·088	0·389	0·004	0·082	38·713
Nicaragua	15·909	27·824	0·707	0·424	—	2·792	47·656
Costa Rica	10·602	0·271	0·030	0·518	—	0·300	11·721
Panama	—	—	—	0·259	—	0·018	0·277
Total	48·511	56·596	2·532	2·009	0·004	3·674	113·326
Regional programmes							23·879
Total							137·205

Source: Commission of the European Communities.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for further European Economic Community aid to Central American countries; and what restrictions thereon are planned.

Mr. Raison: The position remains as stated in the reply given to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 12 November 1985, at column 147. Individual proposals will be brought forward by the Commission in due course. These will be designed to support projects of regional importance on the basis of priorities and objectives identified by common agreement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BSC Chairman (Salary)

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide details of the salary of the Chairman of the British Steel Corporation at each increase date since 1974.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The information is as follows:

Salary £	Effective From
28,100	1 January 1974
28,330	1 January 1975
28,538	1 January 1977
31,390	1 January 1978
41,695	1 April 1979
48,500	1 April 1980
55,000*	1 September 1983
60,000*	1 January 1985

* Part-time

Ultraleisure

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the extent and nature of the Export Credits Guarantee Department's involvement in the circumstances which led to the failure of Ultraleisure and to the current imprisonment of one of the directors of that company;

(2) if, in offering cover for the export orders for sports facilities, secured by Ultraleisure in 1981, the Export Credits Guarantee Department's insistence that Ultraleisure should enter into a corporate association with its Danish clients was a normal feature of Export Credits Guarantee Department's policy at that time; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if the Export Credits Guarantee Department's advice in 1985 that a lower rate of interest than that permitted by European Economic Community rules could be offered to Ultraleisure if a Swiss company were set up to act as a front organisation was a feature of the advice the Export Credits Guarantee Department offered to exporters generally at that time; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if the advice tendered by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to Ultraleisure in 1981 has ever been the subject of any inquiry; if the 8½ per cent. interest rate offered at that time to Ultraleisure was a commercial rate in accordance with European Economic Community rules; if the Export Credits Guarantee Department's action in registering charges on the assets of Ultraleisure's Danish client companies without Ultraleisure's knowledge represented normal Export Credits Guarantee Department's policy at that time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I understand that the police are investigating certain aspects of the affairs of this company, which is in liquidation. The Export Credits Guarantee Department is co-operating with this investigation as necessary. I would not be right for me to comment further on the matter in these circumstances.

Post Office (Financial Return)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has issued any directive to the Post Office Corporation requiring it to achieve a break-even financial return on counter services; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: As I announced on 24 July, at columns 63-64, the Post Office counters business is required to secure a 4·5 per cent. return on turnover on the current cost accounting convention, before tax but after interest, for the financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what rate of return he has required the Post Office Corporation to achieve in (a) 1985-86 and (b) 1986-87; and what effect this is expected to have on the income and trading prospects of sub-postmasters or sub-postmistresses.

Mr. Pattie: As I announced on 24 July, at columns 63-64, each of the Post Office mails and counters businesses are required to secure a 4·5 per cent. return on turnover, on the current cost accounting convention, before tax, but after interest, for the financial year 1985-86. Financial targets for mails and counters for 1986 remain to be set. National Girobank is targeted separately.

The effect of financial targets set for parts of the Post Office Corporation on the income and trading prospects of sub-postmasters and sub-postmistresses depends on the success of the counters business in providing an efficient and cost-effective service that meets the needs of its agency customers at a price they are prepared to pay.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he proposes to use in determining the extent to which (a) the proposed United Technologies holding in Westland and (b) the increased holding on which an option exists are consistent with Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the existence of dominant or controlling foreign interests in strategically important United Kingdom companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: The Government have always made it clear that it is for Westland as a private sector company, to decide the best route to follow to secure its future and that of its employees. The board of Westland's proposals to shareholders no longer involve an option for United Technologies to acquire additional shares beyond the 29·9 per cent. that would be held by United Technologies and Fiat.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government will make it its policy to guarantee Westland shareholders against losses incurred if the Sikorsky-Fiat bid is rejected in favour of that of the European consortium.

Mr. Brittan: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether, in considering the future of Westland, the Government had regard to the profitability of the companies which want to acquire its shares; and if he will publish in the Official Report the return on capital employed for each of the past five years of Westland and the other firms in question;

(2) whether, in considering the Westland case, the Government had regard to previous examples of collaboration with European firms in the aircraft field;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report the numbers employed in the aircraft industry in the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy, respectively, in 1970, 1979 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Brittan: The Government have always made it clear that it is for Westland, as a private sector company, to decide the best route to follow to secure its future and that of its employees.

The information requested about numbers employed in the aircraft industry is as follows:

	1972	1979	Latest available
United Kingdom	207,500	204,381	217,891 (1983)
France	108,525	106,297	127,269 (1983)
Germany	52,455	60,886	65,677 (1983)
Italy	28,500	36,570	40,920 (1981)

Source: "The European Aerospace Industry Trading Position and Figures"—European Commission Staff Working Paper. 11 January 1984. Figures for 1970 are not available.

It is not possible to provide the information requested about companies return on capital employed on a consistent basis without excessive cost.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if he was consulted by Lloyds Merchant Bank before it offered 300,000 man hours of work to the Westland company in its document dated 27 December in respect of the ordering of six additional Sea King helicopters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: No.

Company Liquidations (Cardiff, West)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many retail businesses employing 10 or fewer people went into liquidation in the area of the Cardiff, West constituency from 1965 to date.

Mr. Howard: I regret that this information is not available. The main reason is that no records are kept of the number of employees of insolvent businesses.

Airbus

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the Airbus is produced in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Pattie: The United Kingdom content of the Airbus A300-600 and A310 programmes, as a proportion of the total aircraft, including airframe, engines and equipment, was initially about 12 per cent. for both the General Electric and the Pratt and Whitney engined versions of these aircraft. As a result of the collaborative agreement between General Electric of the United States and Rolls-Royce on the manufacture of the GE CF6-80C2 engines, the United Kingdom content of Airbus A300-600 and A310 aircraft equipped with these engines has now risen to about 16 per cent.

On figures currently available, the United Kingdom content of the Airbus A320 will be in the order of 16 per cent. for the CFM engined version and of 26 per cent. for the V2500 engined version.

United States (Trade Deficit)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the deficit or surplus in manufacturing trade with the United States of America, France, Germany and Italy, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available.

Mr. Channon: The information is in the following table.

*United Kingdom crude balance of trade in manufactures
12 months ending November 1985

	£ billion
United States of America	−0·6
France	−1·2
Federal Republic of Germany	−5·7
Italy	−1·3

* Standard International Trade Classification Sections 5 to 8.
Source: United Kingdom Overseas Trade Statistics.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing the total value of exports and imports of manufactured goods and the consequent surplus or deficit with the United States of America, the Commonwealth and the EEC, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available.

Mr. Channon: The information is in the following table.

*United Kingdom trade in manufactures
12 months ending November 1985
£ billion
OTS basis

	Exports (fob)	Imports (cif)	Crude balance
With:
United States of America	8·0	8·6	−0·6
The Commonwealth	7·3	3·5	+3·8
European Community†	20·6	29·5	−8·9

* Standard International Trade Classification, Section 5 to 8.
† The members in 1985. Including Spain and Portugal, who became members on 1 January 1986, exports during the above period were £21·8 billion and imports £31·2 billion.
Source: United Kingdom Overseas Trade Statistics.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the market for manufactured goods of the original six members of the EEC was secured by the United Kingdom in the most recent calendar year for which figures are available; and what was the comparable percentage in the calendar year 1982.

Mr. Channon: In 1984, 7·2 per cent. of the imports of manufactures by the original six members of the European Community came from the United Kingdom, the same proportion as in 1982.

Patent Office

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government intend to make the Patent Office a separate statutory body as proposed by the Chief Scientific Advisor, Cabinet Office, in the Green Paper, "Intellectual Property Rights and Innovation" Cmnd. 9117; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: The Green Paper, "Intellectual Property Rights and Innovation" (Cmnd. 9117) by Sir Robin Nicholson, the former chief scientific adviser at the Cabinet Office, proposed that the Patent Office should be allowed to be more responsive to the needs of innovation and that it should, therefore, be given a new look, freed from the traditional Civil Service framework and given broader terms of reference. The Green Paper added that the Patent Office should be self-supporting from fees and free to finance investment programmes.

The Government have decided that the Patent Office should become a statutory non-departmental public body for broadly these reasons. Legislation will be introduced in due course to give effect to this decision and work on its implementation will begin immediately.

Under the new arrangements it is intended that the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will retain the power to appoint a management board and advisory committees and to set targets.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Labour Statistics

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the level of unemployment in the construction industry in the Belfast travel-to-work area at the latest date both in numbers and on a percentage basis.

Dr. Boyson: At 12 December 1985 there were 8,778 unemployed construction workers in the Belfast travel-to-work area. This represents an estimated 40 per cent. of all construction employees in that area.

WALES

Water and Sewerage Grants

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications for grants have been made to his Department under the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts, how many of these were up to the maximum payable; and when the maximum payable figure under this grant was last reviewed by his Department.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: During the period 1 April 1979 to date the Department has received 87 applications for grant aid under the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944-71. The number of grants that were awarded up to the maximum payable is not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

The maximum current cost limits for grant calculation purposes, which have operated since October 1978 are: for water supply £1,200 per property; for sewerage services £1,650 per property.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Bruce Lee

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision as to whether he intends to refer the case of Mr. Bruce Lee under section 17 of the Criminal Appeals Act to ask the Court of Appeal to review Mr. Lee's conviction and sentence.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend hopes to be able to reach a decision shortly.

Crown Courts (Procedure)

Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration Her Majesty's Government are giving to changes in court procedure in Crown courts.

Mr. Hurd: The Lord Chancellor and I are considering the proposals made by Lord Roskill's committee on fraud trials concerning aspects of Crown court procedure. My noble and learned Friend and I keep Crown court procedure generally under review and some of the possible changes will be discussed in a White Paper I intend to issue on proposals for criminal justice legislation.

Official Secrets Acts ("Daily Telegraph")

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will refer to the Director of Public Prosecutions the publication of matters covered by the Official Secrets Acts relating to immigration procedures in the Daily Telegraph on 3 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: An investigation is in progress but it has not so far produced information of a kind which would justify asking the Director of Public Prosecutions to look into the matter.

Leicestershire Constabulary

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current approved manpower of the Leicestershire constabulary; and how this compares with the national average on officers per thousand population.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The authorised establishment of the Leicestershire constabulary is 1,733. On 31 December 1984 the ratio of police officers to population in Leicestershire was 1:499, compared with the average of 1:458 for police forces outside London in England and Wales, and 1:411 for all forces in England and Wales.

Police Forces (Establishments)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have applied for an increase in establishment over the last 12 months; and on what criteria he reaches his decisions on such applications.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Fifteen police authorities in England and Wales have applied for increases totalling 595 in their authorised establishments for the financial year 1985-86 or later. One hundred and eleven additional posts have so far been approved for seven forces, and decisions will be made shortly on the outstanding applications.

Police authority/force	Increase applied for	Increase approved
City of London	*6 (for 1985-86)	—
Cumbria	*14 (for 1985-86)	—
Devon and Cornwall	5 (for 1985-86) *18 (for 1986-87)	5 —
Dorset	20	20
Essex	10	10
Hertfordshire	*33 (for October 1986)	—
Northamptonshire	6 (for 1985-86) *23 (for 1986-87)	6 —
Staffordshire	*52	—
Suffolk	*50 (from April 1986)	—
Surrey	22	10
Sussex	*66 (for January 1987)	—
Thames Valley	†167 *200 (for 1986-87 onwards)	30 —
Warwickshire	*29	—
West Mercia	30	30
Wiltshire	*11	—

* These applications are under consideration.

† Thames Valley applied in November 1984 for 174 additional police posts without specifying when they would be needed. An increase of 20 posts was subsequently approved for 1984-85, and 30 for 1985-86. The current application for an increase of 200 posts supersedes the previous application.

Fifty additional police posts have been approved for the Metropolitan police for 1985-86 and 50 for 1986-87. In addition, as my right hon. Friend indicated to the House on 21 October 1985 at column 31, he has set urgent work in hand to assess where there are demonstrated needs for increases in the Metropolitan police establishment.

We consider applications for increases in police establishments on the basis of the demonstrated needs of police forces, and in the light of advice from Her Majesty's Inspectors of Constabulary, who have been requested by my right hon. Friend to assess the position.

Correspondence

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter sent on 30 May on behalf of a Leamington Spa constituent, Mr. Ian Tyres, in connection with the policy of immigration of Sri Lankans into the United kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 2 January.

Local Authorities (Emergency Planning Staff Levels and Salaries)

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he hopes to advise local authorities on recommended emergency planning staff levels and salaries.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A decision will be taken later this year on whether and what advice on manpower levels would be appropriate when the assessment of progress made on implementation of the 1983 regulations is complete. Staff salaries are a matter for local authorities to determine.

Law and Order Policy

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what statistical or other material he assesses the outcome of his law and order policy.

Mr. Mellor: Relevant information comes from a variety of sources. Statistics are collected centrally on recorded crime, cautioning, court proceedings, the treatment of offenders, and the work of the police, the courts, the probation service and the prison service. These regular central statistics are supplemented by information held locally and by a wide-ranging programme of research which is carried out into particular aspects of the criminal justice system. All the main statistical series and research results are published. A wide range of advice is also available to us from those working in the field of law and order.

Alcohol-related Offences

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has any estimate of the number of offences in which alcohol was a contributory factor, in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Comprehensive estimates are not available of the number of offences in which alcohol was a contributory factor. Results from the "British Crime Survey" suggest that in 1983 approximately 45 per cent. of offences of wounding or assault were committed by people who were thought by their victims to have been drinking. Statistics of convictions for offences of driving after consuming alcohol or taking drugs are published annually in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles" (Table 5.1 of the latest Issue number 28/85). Statistics of convictions and cautions for offences of drunkenness are published annually in the Statistical Bulletin "Offences of Drunkenness" (Issue No. 33/85).

10 Downing Street (Security)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 19 December, when he expects the inquiry into the security breach at No. 10 Downing street on 13 December to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The review was completed before Christmas. It made recommendations for improving the security of No. 10 itself, and the co-ordination of security arrangements between 10 Downing street and adjacent buildings. These are being implemented. It would not be right, on security grounds, to go into detail about the new arrangements.

Immigration

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will arrange for discussions to take place with relevant immigrant welfare organisations regarding the position of sponsors waiting for passengers at Heathrow airport who are undergoing lengthy and non-continuous interviewing;

(2) if he is satisfied with the arrangements at Heathrow airport for sponsors of passengers subject to lengthy and non-continuous interviewing to be kept informed of the up-to-date position; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will arrange for the immigration authorities at Heathrow airport to set up an inquiry desk where sponsors of passengers subject to lengthy interviewing can be given the fullest up-to-date position.

Mr. Waddington: Representatives of a number of organisations representing immigrants or concerned with immigration and community relations matters have visited Heathrow in recent months and have observed the immigration control in operation. Some have discussed with officials the position of sponsors waiting for passengers and their comments have been carefully noted. Our officials are prepared to make similar arrangements for representatives of other interested organisations.

There are a number of reasons, including the pressures on immigration officers at Heathrow, which contribute to difficulties in providing prompt and adequate information to sponsors. The main difficulty arises where the sponsor knows that a flight on which a particular passenger is expected has landed but his inquiries cannot be answered because the passenger has not yet reached the initial control, is being examined on that control or, having passed through it, is awaiting his or her baggage in the Customs Hall. If it is decided that a passenger has to be questioned at greater length than is possible on the initial control, inquiries can generally be answered promptly, but there are occasions when the large number of passengers requiring further examination causes delay.

Communications at terminal 3 should shortly be improved by the installation of an immigration booth and courtesy telephone giving direct access to the Immigration Office. The situation will be kept under review.

Brixton Prison (Strip Searches)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip searches have taken place in Brixton prison in the last 12 months.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent reasonable suspicion is a pre-condition of the carrying out of strip searches in Brixton prison.

Mr. Mellor: Strip searches as a routine security measure, for example, before and after court appearances, after visits, at the time of cell changes and during wing and cell searches, are not restricted to occasions when an officer has a reasonable suspicion that the particular prisoner has an unauthorised article concealed about his (or her) person. Where an officer has such reasonable suspicion, a special search may be carried out on the authority of the governor, deputy governor or chief officer.

Townley Gardens, Birmingham

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long the houses owned by his Department in Townley gardens, Birmingham, have been empty; when he expects disposal to take place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The seventeen houses became empty on various dates since June 1981 but mainly in 1983. It was decided in July 1984 to dispose of 13 of the houses; later it was decided to dispose of the other four. Contracts in respect of all the houses have been exchanged with a prospective purchaser. Purchase of one of them has now been completed and the prospective purchaser is legally committed to completion of purchase of the remaining sixteen by 31 January. Negotiations with two previous prospective purchasers were unsuccessful.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the practice of the community relations branch of the Metropolitan police to maintain lists of the party political affiliations of London borough councillors.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will explain the functions of the Metropolitan police's docklands policing secretariat.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The docklands policing secretariat is a small unit established by the Chief Superintendent in charge of the Metropolitan police "HH" Division. Its purpose is to help him and his officers to liaise effectively with all the agencies involved in the re-development of docklands, and to assist in the assessment of the long term policing needs of the area.

Drug Dealers

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are locally deployed against drug dealers in each of the London boroughs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As at 1 January 1986, of 91 officers were employed full-time on drugs work in the London boroughs as follows:

Borough	Officers
Barking and Dagenham Havering and Newham	8
Brent	2
Camden	8
Chelsea	5
Croydon and Sutton	3
Hammersmith and Fulham	2
Harrow	2
Hounslow and Richmond	2
Kensington	10
Lambeth	9
Lewisham and Bromley	13
Marylebone	6
Paddington	10
Wandsworth	6
Westminster	5
Total	91

In addition all district and divisional crime squad officers may undertake drug investigations as part of their general duties. The central drug squad, which has an establishment of 57 officers, operates throughout the Metropolitan police district against drug traffickers and dealers.

Prevention of Terrorism Act

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been held in custody under the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act in Newham, in 1984 and in 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not held centrally. The readily available information relates to the Metropolitan police district as a whole and is of those detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts 1976 and 1984. Sixty-three persons were so detained in 1984 and 34 in the first nine months of 1985. To provide information about individual police districts would involve disproportionate cost.

Metropolitan Police (Skills Training)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the Metropolitan police training expenditure is spent on police skills training; and if there are any plans to increase this percentage.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commisioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that information about the proportion of all Metropolitan police training expenditure which is devoted specifically to police skills training is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Some 22 per cent. of the initial 20-week recruit training course is spent on the study of community relations, race relations, interpersonal skills and the role of the force. There are no plans to increase the proportion of Metropolitan police training devoted to work in this area.

Public Order White Paper

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all organisations which have made submissions on the public order White Paper; and if he will place copies of the submissions in the Library.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Comments on the White Paper were received from the following organisations:

Guild of British Newspaper Editors
Football Trust
Law Society
Commission for Racial Equality
London Borough of Croydon
London Borough of Camden
National Union of Public Employees
Engineering Employers' Federation
Association of County Councils
Legal Action Group
Liverpool 8 Law Centre
Magistrates' Association
City of London Police Committee
Community/Police Consultative Group for Lambeth
London Borough of Southwark
Prosecuting Solicitors' Society of England and Wales
Association of Liberal Lawyers
Council for Country Sports
Justices' Clerks Society
London Borough of Tower Hamlets
Working Group of the Faculty of Law, Aberdeen University
Association of Scottish Police Superintendents
Association of Chief Police Officers' (Scotland)
Scottish Police Federation
London Borough of Hackney
London Borough of Newham
Confederation of Health Service Employees (COHSE)
Haldane Society of Socialist Lawyers
JUSTICE
London Borough of Islington
West Yorks County Council
Police Federation (England and Wales)
National Council for Civil Liberties
Association of District Councils
City of Coventry

Society of Civil and Public Servants
Cardiff City Council
National Association of Probation Officers
Greater Manchester Council
Organisation of Private Tenants
Association of Metropolitan Authorities
Association of British Insurers
Criminal Bar Association
Howard League
Board of Deputies of British Jews
Metropolitan Police
Merseyside County Council
National Farmers' Union
London Borough of Ealing
Association of London Authorities
National and Local Government Officers' Association
Law Society (Local Government Group)
Association of Chief Police Officers
Association of British Chambers of Commerce
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
National Association of Community Relations Councils
Campaign for Homosexual Equality
Trades Union Congress
Police Superintendents' Association (England and Wales)
Society of Conservative Lawyers
Central Electricity Generating Board
Conservative Group for Homosexual Equality
Scottish Council for Civil Liberties
Anti-Apartheid Movement
Greater London Council
Council on Tribunals
Country Landowners' Association

Not all these submissions were made in the expectation that they would be published, and I do not think it would be right for me to place them in the Library.

Hostile Attacks (Monitoring)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1985, Official Report, column 274, by what means, in what form and by whom the studies into ways of detecting and monitoring the effects of chemical attack and issuing appropriate public warnings are being conducted.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This work is an analytical review of the requirements for and the availability of detection, warning and monitoring equipment. It is being undertaken by the United Kingdom warning and monitoring organisation and the scientific research and development branch of the Home Office.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners convicted for murder in each year from 1970 to 1977 have since been released from prison; and what was the length of sentence served for each prisoner released.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 11 December 1985, c. 646]: The readily available information is given in the following table, which also shows the numbers received in each year who were still in custody in December 1985.

Persons received into Prison Department establishments in the years 1970 to 1977 under sentence for murder by year of reception under sentence, type of discharge and time spent under sentence in Prison Department establishments

Number of persons

Year of reception, under sentence and type of discharge	Number discharged by years under sentence†																Population in custody December 1985
	Up to 1	Over 1 up to 2	Over 2 up to 3	Over 3 up to 4	Over 4 up to 5	Over 5 up to 6	Over 6 up to 7	Over 7 up to 8	Over 8 up to 9	Over 9 up to 10	Over 10 up to 11	Over 11 up to 12	Over 12 up to 13	Over 13 up to 14	Over 14 up to 15	Total discharged
1970
On licence	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	14	16	5	10	13	8	2	1	71	16
Other‡	3	1	—	—	2	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	—	—	—	9
1971
On licence	—	—	—	—	1	3	4	10	11	9	5	5	6	1	1	55	22
Other‡	4	2	1	—	2	—	—	2	—	—	1	—	—	2	—	14
1972
On licence	—	—	1	—	—	—	5	5	7	9	14	6	—	1	*	48	19
Other‡	1	—	1	1	—	—	—	1	1	1	2	—	1	1	*	10
1973
On licence	—	—	—	—	1	1	4	2	8	13	9	6	2	*	*	46	38
Other‡	—	—	—	2	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	1	—	*	*	4
1974
On licence	—	—	—	—	2	3	3	11	16	9	5	2	*	*	*	51	60
Other‡	1	—	1	—	1	—	2	1	2	—	1	—	*	*	*	9
1975
On licence	—	—	—	—	—	2	3	3	10	8	2	*	*	*	*	28	66
Other‡	4	1	2	2	1	—	1	1	2	—	—	*	*	*	*	14
1976
On licence	—	—	1	—	—	2	4	7	7	3	*	*	*	*	*	24	77
Other‡	2	—	1	—	—	—	—	2	—	—	*	*	*	*	*	5
1977
On licence	—	—	—	—	—	2	4	7	1	*	*	*	*	*	*	14	93
Other‡	3	—	2	2	—	2	1	2	—	*	*	*	*	*	*	12

* Not applicable.
† Excluding any time spent either on remand in custody, in non-Prison Department establishments or following any subsequent re-call.
‡ Including successful appeals, deaths and transfers to psychiatric hospitals or to outside England and Wales.
‖ Based on central records which are approximate.

ENVIRONMENT

Watts Report

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has had to the Watts report on water metering.

Mr. John Patten: I have invited bodies representing consumer and other interests to comment upon the report by 10 March. About 25 letters have been received to date, expressing a variety of views.

Council House Sales

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 19 December to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield about local authority housing stock, what steps he is taking to collect information on the claims received and houses sold in Welwyn Hatfield between 3 October 1980 and 30 September 1985.

Sir George Young: Figures of right to buy progress from Welwyn Hatfield district council's September quarter statistical return were not available in time for inclusion in the table to which my hon. Friend refers. The authority has reported a total of 5,428 right to buy claims, of which 5,231 had been admitted and 2,822 sales completed in the period 3 October 1980 to 30 September 1985.

Nature Conservation

Sir Richard Body asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether the Nature Conservancy Council will consult the Anglian water authority about the practicalities of enclosing an area of the marshes of the Wash before agreeing to compensate any owners under the Wildlife and Countryside Act;

(2) whether any negotiations are taking place between the Nature Conservancy Council and any owners of the marshes of the Wash for compensation under the Wildlife and Countryside Act.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is the Nature Conservancy Council's normal practice to consult both the Anglian water authority and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food about all proposals involving land reclamation in the Wash.

The NCC is currently negotiating with two landowners concerning the future management of one area of some 600 acres, and is discussing inter alia the details of compensation under the Wildlife and Countryside Act.

EC (Council Building)

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the cost and the tendering procedure for the new Council building of the European Economic Community in Brussels.

Sir George Young: No reliable estimates of cost are yet available. Preliminary sketch plans are due to be submitted by the Belgian authorities to the Council of Ministers later this year.

The tendering arrangements provide for site preparation and site infrastructure to be handled by the Belgian authorities at no cost to the European Community. The substructure work will be handled by a general contractor already selected by the Belgian authorities. The superstructure, services and finishes will be the subject of competitive tendering by the Belgian authorities, under normal EC rules.

Private Rented Accommodation

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to monitor the effect of the House of Lords decision in the Street v Mountford case on the supply of private rented accommodation.

Sir George Young: We shall take account of this matter when considering the need for future research on the private rented sector as a whole.

Industrial Development (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many areas in Hampshire are available for industrial development, by district, indicating the number of hectares in each case.

Mr. Tracey: I do not have this information about land available for industrial development in Hampshire. The county council, with the agreement of the districts, produces an annual schedule of industrial land supply.

Glory Hole, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if an application has been received by his Department for a derelict land grant for the Glory Hole, Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: My Department received an application for derelict land grant from Portsmouth city council on 29 March 1985 for part of the site to be developed for housing and gave a pre-tender approval on 18 September 1985. Following a site investigation for chemical contamination, which identified various potentially hazardous materials including asbestos, my Department has received a request from the council for additional grant to dispose of the contaminated soil to a controlled site. My Department is presently awaiting further information from the council.

Coal Industry

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by site and county all opencast coalmining applications received since 1 January 1984, stating in each case whether authorisation has been granted, refused or is still pending; and if he will list separately for each approved case, and for each refused or as yet unauthorised case, the tonnage per year to be mined and the time period requested or authorised.

Mr. Tracey: Under section 1 of the Opencast Coal Act 1958 the National Coal Board requires an authorisation, issued by the appropriate Secretary of State, in respect of each opencast coal site before work at the site may commence. Since 1 March 1984 the responsibility for issuing authorisations has rested with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

The following table gives the information requested.

Applications for authorisation since 1 January 1984—in chronological order

Site	County	Total tonnage '000 tonnes	Status
1. Kingswood	Staffordshire	227	Authorised
2. Flagstaff	Leicestershire	280	Authorised
3. Dog Lane	Shropshire	200	Pending
4. Amberswood	Lancashire	190	Authorised
5. Kirk	Derbyshire	2,500	Pending
6. Potatopot	Cumbria	2,000	Authorised
7. Chester House	Northumberland	3,000	Authorised
8. Barnabas	Derbyshire	210	Pending
9. Bilston	West Midlands	364	Pending
10. Plenmeller	Northumberland	1,900	Pending
11. High Lane	Staffordshire	2,400	Pending
12. Ryefield	Derbyshire	27	Authorised
13. Moira Pottery	Leicestershire	100	Pending
14. Streets Lane	Staffordshire	2,300	Pending

Note: No information is available about annual extraction rates and the authorisation by the Secretary of State does not relate to a specific time period.

Basildon District Council

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether Basildon district council has appealed against its rate being capped.

Mrs. Rumbold: The council did not seek redetermination of the expenditure level notified to it in July. The council has been asked to indicate by 22 January whether it accepts the proposed rate limit of 52·75p which my right hon. Friend notified to it on 18 December.

Housing

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the waiting list for housing in Liverpool at the latest available date;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the housing waiting list for London boroughs at the latest available date;

(3) if he will publish the waiting lists for housing for Manchester, Sheffield, Birmingham and Leeds at the latest available date.

Sir George Young: Information on local authority waiting lists for housing is not collected centrally.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he approved an urban development grant for the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh which involves the loss of the second water closet in the three-bedroomed houses;

(2) if he will publish details of the updated returns which he requested by the end of December 1985 from local authorities in respect of additional resources required to operate the Housing Defects Act 1984;

(3) what is the most recent estimate of the cost to local authorities of providing bed and breakfast accommodation for homeless families;

(4) if he will list the totals for England of each aspect of housing needs appraisal listed on the numerical statement sent by housing authorities to his Department on form DOE 16314;

(5) how the net provisions for the total housing programme in 1986-87 compare with the expected outturn for 1985-86; and if he will show the difference in (a) cost and (b) real terms.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each of the designated houses in the Housing Defects Act the progress in obtaining an approval and warranty scheme for repair methods and show how many reinstatement grants have been offered for each type of house.

Mr. John Patten: PRC Homes Ltd has now approved repair systems for Airey, Cornish Unit and Unity houses. These types account for more than half of the PRC houses in private ownership. Details from the company of progress on the approval of repair systems for all designated types are as follows:

House type	Number notified but not yet submitted	Number submitted but not yet approved	Number approved
Airey	5	7	1
Boot	1	—	—
Butterley	—	—	—
Cornish Unit	2	4	2
Dorran	—	—	—
Dyke	—	—	—
Gregory	—	—	—
Hawkesley SGS	—	—	—
Myton	—	—	—
Newland	—	—	—
Orlit	3	1	—
Parkinson	2	—	—
Reema Hollow Panel	—	1	—
Schindler	—	—	—
Stent	1	1	—
Stonecrete	—	—	—
Tarran	1	—	—
Underdown	—	—	—
Unity	3	2	1
Waller	—	—	—
Wates	2	—	—
Wessex	—	—	—
Winget	—	—	—
Woolaway	2	2	—
Totals	22	18	4

Information on the number of reinstatement grants offered for each type is not available. But my Department will be asking local authorities, at the end of this financial year, to provide information on the number of reinstatement grants given for each type.

Urban Deprivation

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report his assessment of the level of urban deprivation in Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Newcastle and Leeds; and if he will make a statement on the basis on which the level of urban deprivation was assessed in each case.

Sir George Young: There is no single authoritative measure for the level of deprivation in an urban area. However, my Department's census information note No. 2, copies of which are in the Library of the House, shows how the areas of individual local authorities score on various indicators which were taken into account in deciding their urban programme status.

Water Authorities

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will tabulate in the Official Report at 1985 prices the percentage return on national capital required or obtained by each regional water authority in England together with the sum in each case for the financial year 1978-79, the latest year for which figures are available and his estimates for 1985-86, respectively.

Mr. John Patten: Financial targets in the form of a rate of return on net current cost assets were first set for water authorities in respect of 1981-82. The rates of return required of regional water authorities in England for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86 are set out in the following table. When account is taken of the carry forward of any under or over achievement of the target set for the preceding year, all English authorities met their financial targets in 1984-85.

Regional Water Authority	Required return (per cent.)
	1984-85	1985-86
North West	0·95	1·43
Northumbrian	1·25	1·48
Severn Trent	1·25	1·47
Yorkshire	1·00	1·43
Anglian	1·36	1·62
Thames	0·50	1·37
Southern	0·91	1·41
Wessex	0·61	1·40
South West	1·26	1·54

London Docklands

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the source and basis of the statement he made on 11 December, Official Report, column 944, that 4,700 permanent jobs have been created in the London docklands.

Sir George Young: The figure of 4,700 permanent jobs created in London docklands quoted is derived from two sources: (1) LDDC's record of firms that have moved into the area since July 1981 (3,772 jobs created); and (2) the number of jobs created through IUAA funding (928 jobs created).

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest forecast of local authority capital receipts for 1985-86; and how this compares with the forecast and assumptions made in December 1984.

Mr. John Patten: The latest forecast of local authority capital receipts against the five service blocks of the DOE/LA1 cash limit for 1985-86 is £2,071 million. This is based on projection of returns from local authorities covering capital expenditure and receipts in the first six months of the year. It compares with an assumption of £2,120 million made in December 1984. These figures both exclude receipts from area health authorities for jointly funded schemes.

Water Supplies

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of homes in England are connected to the public water supply; and how this compares with other member states of the European Community.

Mr. John Patten: The percentage of the population in England whose homes are connected to the public water supply is 99 per cent. Comparable percentages for other member states of the European Community as quoted in the WHO and International Water Supply Association publication "Statistical Survey of Water and Sanitation Services in Europe 1983" are:

	Per cent.
Belgium	98
Denmark	92
France	98
Greece	n/a
Ireland	n/a
Italy	90
Luxembourg	99
Netherlands	100
Portugal	n/a
Spain	82
West Germany	98

n/a=Not available.

Homelessness

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment to what factors he attributes the rise in homeless households housed as secure tenants as a percentage of all new secure tenancies in England as set out in his answer of 18 November 1985, Official Report, column 58.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will state his Department's latest available information on the savings or costs arising from abolition of the Greater London council and each of the metropolitan county councils; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will state his Department's latest available information on the likely number of redundancies arising from abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The explanatory and financial memorandum to the Local Government Act 1985 provided estimates for these matters. My right hon. Friend has consistently made it clear that the outcome will depend on the decisions made by successor bodies.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number of bodies, existing or proposed, due to inherit services currently administered by the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The destination of GLC functions and responsibilities was set out in my Department's guidance note of 16 July 1985, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what cost will be involved in his Department's distribution of the leaflet describing the new structures for London and metropolitan local government; when it will be issued; and how many copies will be produced.

Mr. Tracey: The Government will be arranging for leaflets describing the new structure of local government in Greater London and the metropolitan areas, to be sent to households and business premises in March, as was done in 1974. It is not yet possible to say what the cost will be.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, in view of the decision taken by the London Co-ordinating Committee about the disability resource team, if he will make a statement on the future of the team after abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: This is primarily a matter for boroughs, but I understand that a decision has been taken to set up a London-wide disability unit after abolition of the GLC.

Rates

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has responded to the request from the London Co-ordinating Committee that the 2p rate allowable under section 137 to London boroughs be doubled to 4p following abolition of the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department replied to the London Co-ordinating Committee on 10 December 1985.

GLC Research Library

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans exist to safeguard the Greater London council research library's ACOMPLINE databases;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the Greater London council research library.

Mr. Tracey: These are matters for the boroughs, together with the London Residuary Body which will be taking on the GLC's central computing services.

Local Authorities (Staff)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the total numbers of staff employed (full-time, part-time, and full-time equivalent) by (a) all local authorities in England, and (b) by local authorities by their party of control since 1979 to date.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer this question shortly.

Grants

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to Tower Hamlets for anti-racist activity for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Additional information on this application was received from the GLC on 24 December. A decision will be reached as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant for Lambeth homelessness initiatives for 16 to 18-year-olds, for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to Lambeth Vietnamese project for which the Greater London council applied on 27 Septmeber 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to Tower Hamlets, George Green centre, for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to Tower Hamlets, Langdon Park, for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(5) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Tower Hamlets and Wapping sports centre for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(6) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to Tower Hamlets for homeless families for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(7) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant for a neighbourhood gypsy worker in Hammersmith and Fulham for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985;

(8) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Tower Hamlets museum service for a mobile museum for which the Greater London council applied on 27 September 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 was given in all these cases on 18 December 1985. I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) on 18 December 1985, at column 219, which announced this decision.

GLC Welfare Benefits Project

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to a contract for publicity information and translated materials for the Greater London council welfare benefits project, for which the Greater London council applied on 28 August 1985.

Mr. Tracey: This application is receiving very careful consideration in the light of the significant expenditure involved.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment with reference to housing land transfers of London Docklands Development Corporation-owned land, what are the names of the schemes and the developers and the total numbers of transfers so far undertaken in each scheme.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 15 November 1985, c. 312]: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Site Name	Units Sold before 30 September 1985
London borough of Newham
Mariners Reach (Wimpey)	158
Parkside (Barratt)	184
Riverside Park (Comben)	114
Birch Trees (Broseley)	148
The Parks (Barratt)	212
Meadow Vale (Wimpey)	162
Linton Gardens (Comben)	194
Tollgate Park (Broseley)	167
Oakleigh Park (Barratt)	59
Alestan Beck (Countryside)	158
Beddalls Reach (Hey and Croft)	40
Tollgate Square (Golding)	15
The beacons (Bennett)	14
The Rodings (Jerram)	12
Tollgate C1 (Abbey National HA	17
Tollgate D2 (EAst London HA	31
Newham total	1,685
London borough of Southwark
Acorn Yard (Poger Malcolm)	61
Lavender Green (WPHT HA)	111
Reveley Lock (Countryside)	116
Nelsons Reach(Broseley)	118
Lady Dock (Lovell Farrow)	136
Lavender Quay (Wimpey)	51
Ronald Buckingham Court (RBL HA)	28
Elephant Lane (Regan)	76
Brunswick Quay (Daniel Homes)	9
Gullivers Place (Costain)	54
Southwark total	760
London borough of Tower Hamlets
South Quay (Broseley)	182
Waterman Quay (Central Ideal Homes)	17
Quayside (Barratt)	73
Riverside Mansions (Regalian)	160
Friars Mead (Combex Central Ideal)	74
London Yard (LY Development Co)	10
Caledonian Wharf (Bates)	100
Tower Hamlets total	616
LDDC total	3,061

1. Housing Association Schemes represent trafisfers of land for the provision of the stated number of units.
2. Total includes reserved plots on sites which are still under construction.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the environment what existing developments will be displaced in relation to the construction of the Docklands light railway, and with what employment consquences.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 19 November 1985, c. 148]: the construction of the Docklands light railway has resulted in the displacement of a number of firms, as set out in the following table. No further displacement of business is envisaged.

	Number of firms	Jobs lost
Businesses relocated	31	0
Businesses closed for a temporary period only	5	0
Businesses that may have to close due to access problems	2	6
Businesses voluntarily closed down	4	9
Businesses extinguished	8	13

Some 440 people are currently employed on the construction of the railway which, when complete, will provide local firms with rapid and reliable communications both within docklands and with the rest of London.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, with reference to appendix 1 of the London docklands Development Corporation's five-year operational plan published in January, whether the projections shown were made within the constraints imposed by the Government's external financing limit; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 6 December 1985, c. 375]: London Docklands Development Corporation's corporate plan (which includes the operational plan) is in part a bid for resources for future years. The external financing limit, which is notified to the corporation following the previous year's public expenditure survey, applies only to the current year. The corporate plan submission takes account of resource levels set in the public expenditure survey for future years as well as bidding for more. The programme at appendix 1 of the LDDC's five-year operational plan, to which the hon. Member refers, illustrates the levels of activity which would occur if the bid was met in full.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is his policy towards moves by the internal Namibian political parties of the multi-party conference to represent the views of Namibians in the United Nations General Assembly on the same basis as the South West Africa People's Organisation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on South West Africa People's Organisation representatives being allowed to address the United Nations General Assembly.

Mr. Renton: We have always been prepared to support requests from the representatives of political parties in Namibia to have their views heard in United Nations fora. However, we consider that only free and fair elections, as provided for in the United Nations plan, will determine who has the right to represent the views of the Namibian people in the United Nations General Assembly, as elsewhere.

British Citizens Abroad (Detention)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report the number of British citizens now held in custody pending trial in countries which are members of the Council of Europe at the latest available date; what is the longest time for which any individual has been so held; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The longest time any individual currently in detention pending trial has been so held is 16 months: the charge is murder and neither the individual nor his legal representative is pressing for a trial date to be finalised. All cases of detention of which we are notified are monitored by our posts overseas. In accordance with generally accepted international practice, we cannot intervene in the due process of law in another sovereign country any more than we would accept intervention in our own judicial process. The latest available figures are as follows:

British Citizens in detention and awaiting trial in Council of Europe countries

	Number
France	45
Federal Republic of Germany	78
Netherlands	13
Belgium	15
Luxembourg	0
Denmark	11
Greece	45
Italy	7
Spain	94
Portugal	6
Malta	3
Cyprus	3
Norway	12
Sweden	14
Switzerland	19
Turkey	0
Austria	5
Iceland	0
Ireland	Not known
Liechtenstein	0
Total	370

Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on providing regular advice on defence matters to the Governments of (i) Honduras, (ii) Guatemala and (iii) El Salvador through the defence attaché based at Her Majesty's embassy in Mexico.

Mr. Renton: It is not our policy to provided advice on defence matters to the Governments of Honduras, Guatemala or El Salvador. The role of the defence attaché based in Mexico City, who is also accredited to Honduras and El Salvador, is to advise Her Majesty's ambassador on defence related matters.

We have no diplomatic relations with Guatemala.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have made any representations to the special United Nations rapporteur on human rights in Chile.

Mr. Renton: We have not made any direct representations to the United Nations special rapporteur on human rights in Chile. However, as a member of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights we supported in March 1985 a resolution which extended his mandate and requested him to report again on the human rights situation in Chile.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many formal meetings have been held since November 1984 between Her Majesty's embassy in Santiago and representatives of the Government of Chile; and how many of these have been concerning human rights.

Mr. Renton: We make regular and frequent representations on human rights and other issues to the Government of Chile both in Santiago and London.

Pedro Fernandez Lembach

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest information that Her Majesty's Government have concerning the imprisonment of Pedro Fernandez Lembach.

Mr. Renton: There has been no change in the policy of the Chilean Government concerning the imprisonment of Pedro Fernandez Lembach.

EC (Defence)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement of the policy of Her Majesty's Government regarding the extent to which the treaty of Rome permits the EEC to participate in defence issues.

Mr. Renton: Defence issues as such do not fall within the scope of the treaty of Rome. Political and economic aspects of European security are discussed among the EC member states in the political co-operation framework. Such discussions are also covered in the treaty on European co-operation in the sphere of foreign policy, which was agreed in principle at the Luxembourg European Council (2-3 December 1985). But European defence co-operation is handled in other fora, including NATO, Eurogroup, Western European Union, the Independent European Programme Group, as well as directly between national Governments.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he has been informed by the Italian Government that they are opposed to any collaboration between European and United States firms on defence projects and in particular between Westland and Sikorski-Fiat;

(2) whether he has been informed by the Government of the French Republic that they are opposed to collaboration between European and United States firms on defence projects and, in particular, to any collaboration between Westland and Sikorski-Fiat;

(3) whether he has been informed by the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany that they re opposed to collaboration between Westland and Sikorski-Fiat and to the purchase by European Governments of helicopters for defence which incorporate United States technology or United States components.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister earlier today.

TRANSPORT

Channel Fixed Link

6. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the effect on the size of the United Kingdom merchant fleet of building the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Ridley: This matter will be dealt with in the White Paper on the Channel fixed link which the government intend to issue as soon as possible after the decision.

19. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the latest position in relation to a decision on the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister plans to meet the French President on 20 January to take a decision on which scheme, if any, should go ahead.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) in his forthcoming White Paper on a Channel fixed link, what conditions he expects to seek to impose on any chosen operator in respect of differential tariff structures between through rail, ferry rail, and road traffic, respectively;

(2) if, in his forthcoming White Paper on all aspects of the Channel fixed link, he will indicate for each scheme a comparison with the general level of current charges on ferries for each main category of traffic on current and projected volumes of traffic, respectively;

(3) if, in his forthcoming White Paper on the Channel fixed link, he will indicate for each option the range of expected reduction in transport costs for road freight travelling by the proposed Channel fixed links between Birmingham and Frankfurt;

(4) if, in his forthcoming White Paper on the Channel fixed link, he will estimate for each option the range of expected saving in time occasioned by the construction of a Channel fixed link, over use of Hovercraft, for travellers by road from London to Paris;

(5) if, in his forthcoming White Paper on the Channel fixed link, he will indicate the approximate expected reduction, in per cent. of the cost of rail passenger travel between London and Brussels occasioned by each applicable option.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend will bear these suggestions in mind for the content of the White Paper that the Government will issue if it is decided to proceed with a fixed link.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) earlier today.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in his forthcoming White Paper on all aspects of a Channel fixed link, he will list the principal causes of delay and hazard in the existing road traffic tunnels in the world and the Blackwall tunnel and summarise in that paper the plans for their avoidance in any proposed road tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: The safe and efficient flow of traffic through a fixed link is of considerable concern to the Government and, if the project goes ahead, the Government will ensure that the concession agreement with the successful promoter imposes appropriate obligations upon the promoter in this regard, and enables the Government to approve and monitor the promoter's arrangements.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if, in his White Paper on the Channel fixed link, he will indicate the expected ratio of cost to freight forwarders, arising through rail facilities, of the rail cost per mile of all costs arising from the link, to the cost per mile by rail in the United Kingdom;

(2) if, in his White Paper on the Channel fixed link, he will examine the merits and demerits of a common tariff for through rail freight from the continental ports to any one of six or more centres in Scotland, the north-west, the north-east, south Wales, the midlands and the south-west, respectively.

Mr. David Mitchell: No.

Disabled People (Taxi-card Scheme)

16. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has had about the future of the taxi-card scheme for disabled people.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend has received letters from hon. Members, interested organisations, and members of the public urging that the scheme be continued. I understand that an agreement has now been reached on the funding for 1986-87 through the London Co-ordinating Committee of Boroughs.

Rear Seat Belts

17. Mr. Hubbard-Miles asked the Secretary of State for Transport what response he has had to his consultation paper on the compulsory fitting of rear seat belts; and what conclusions he has reached.

Mr. David Mitchell: The response was generally favourable and my right hon. Friend has made the regulations. They will make rear seat belts or child restraints a legal requirement for all new cars manufactured from 1 October 1986.

Coaches (Speed Governors)

18. Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he intends to take to ensure that foreign coaches travelling in the United Kingdom are fitted with speed governors of the sort intended to be mandatory for British coaches; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We agree that it is essential that foreign coaches observe our speed limits. But coaches and other vehicles in international traffic are not subject to the detailed construction standards of the countries they visit provided they meet the more basic standards set out in the international traffic conventions. We shall look into what reciprocal arrangements for speed governors could be agreed with other European countries.

New Roads

20. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new motorway and trunk roads have been built since 1979.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Since April 1979, 218 miles of new motorway and 320 miles of new and improved trunk road have been constructed. During this period also 13 miles of existing motorway have been widened with additional lanes.

British Rail Inter-City Services

21. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average speed of British Rail inter-city services; and what was the figure in 1979.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a matter for BR.

Air Transport (Competition)

22. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with foreign Governments to open more opportunities for international competition in air transport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have agreed more competitive arrangements for air services with five European Governments in the last 18 months. Discussions are under way with the Scandinavians, Finns and Spanish and will shortly start with the Republic of Ireland. We continue to press hard for a liberal EC air transport policy, most recently at an informal Council of Transport Ministers on 9 January.

Bourne End and Hemel Hempstead Bypass

23. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the reasons for delay in publishing the side road orders for the A41 Bourne End and Hemel Hempstead bypass.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The detailed provisions of the orders cannot be finalised until after the review of traffic predictions for the scheme. This is taking longer than we had hoped, but should be completed early this year.

M1 (Lighting)

24. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce the full lighting of the M1 motorway in Leicestershire; and if he will estimate the total cost.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have no proposals to provide additional motorway lighting on the M1 in Leicestershire. I estimate the total cost of completing lighting through Leicestershire to be about £3·25 million.

National Freight Company

25. Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department has monitored the value of shares in the National Freight Company since that company was sold to its managers and employees in 1982.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The National Freight Company is an unquoted public limited company with share value established by independent valuers, I understand that since its sale to the management and employees, the value of shareholdings has increased substantially, reflecting improved performance and prospects.

Disabled People (London Boroughs)

26. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied with progess being made by the London boroughs to safeguard concessionary fare schemes and transport for people with disabilities.

Mr. Ridley: Yes.

Dial-a-ride Service (London)

27. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the future funding by Government for the dial-a-ride service covering the Greater London council area since 11 November.

Mr. Ridley: I have received a letter from the GLC-funded Federation of London Dial-a-Rides welcoming the Government's decision to take powers for LRT to fund Dial-a-Ride as an important advance in securing transport for people with disabilities.

Airports (Privatisation)

28. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether airlines will be allowed to purchase shares in airports under proposed legislation to privatise airports in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am not contemplating any prohibition on airlines purchasing shares in airports in the legislation I will be introducing shortly.

A1-M1 Link

29. Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to receive the report of the inspector who conducted the inquiry into the A1-M1 link road.

Mr. Ridley: I understand that the inspector does not expect to complete his report on these long and complex inquiries before June or July of this year.

Driving Test (Dyslexia)

30. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many dyslexic people have passed the standard driving test in the past year.

Mr. Ridley: I regret that this information is not available.

Cross-Channel Traffic

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will tabulate the approximate number of railway wagons, heavy commercial vehicles, containers, road passenger coaches, light motor vehicles and passengers, respectively, arriving at, or departing for, the continent from or to each port on the east and south coasts of the United Kingdom between Hull and Plymouth in the current year.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information given is based on commercial data supplied to the Department by port authorities and operators. Entries in the table marked with an asterisk denote cases where information is omitted to protect confidentiality.

1984 Port Traffic with Mainland Europe (thousands)

Port	Railway Wagons	Roads Goods Vehicles	Containers	Coaches	Cars etc.	Passengers
Hull	—	45	107	*	85
Goole	—	—	*	—	—
Grimsby/Immingham	—	120	62	—	—
Boston	—	—	*	—	—
Kings Lynn	—	—	*	—	—	456
Great Yarmouth	—	69	—	—	—
Lowestoft	—	—	*	—	—
Felixstowe	—	159	154	*	105
Ipswich	—	61	100	—	—	683
Harwich	21	131	93	*	213	1,924
London	—	3	172	—	—
Medway	—	58	*	*	93
Ramsgate	—	62	—	*	83	3,020
Folkestone	—	46	—	*	79
Dover	43	672	13	121	1,278	13,861
Newhaven	—	48	—	*	72
Shoreham	—	*	*	—	—
Portsmouth	—	†63	*	*	†282
Southampton	—	36	*	*	54	3,121
Poole	—	63	—	—	—
Portland/Weymouth	—	—	—	—	*
Plymouth	—	*	—	—	*
Total	64	*	757	156	*	23,065

* Denote cases where information is omitted to protect confidentiality.
† Includes Channel Islands traffic.

Blackwall Tunnel

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will schedule the principal delays, over half an hour, to traffic flows through the Blackwall tunnel in 1985 and give the dates, direction, length of delay and cause in each case.

Mr. Ridley: I do not collect this information. The Blackwall tunnel is a GLC responsibility.

Fishing Vessels (Safety)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take regarding the recommendations contained in the report of the loss of MFV Mhari L in relation to the Coastguard to be alerted rapidly when contact is lost with fishing vessels, fishing vessels being fitted with hydrostatic life rafts and the action recommended when fishing gear fouls underwater cables.

Mr. Ridley: I shall answer this question shortly.

Lighthouses

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the annual cost to the taxpayer of the administration of lighthouses under the control of the Northern Lighthouse Board; how much of this relates to lighthouses in the Isle of Man; and what contribution is made by the Isle of Man Government towards the cost;

(2) how much was spent on the improvement carried out on the lighthouse keepers' houses on Davaar island; what has been recovered of this cost by subsequent sale or letting of the houses; and what charges have been made on public funds to cover the costs involved.

Mr. Ridley: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Manchester International Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe of 19 December, Official Report, column 297, if he will itemise the representations he has received about the future ownership and control of Manchester international airport, indicating in each case the source of the representation and whether it expressed a view for or against the proposals of Manchester city council for an airport company.

Mr. Ridley: It is not the practice to publish the source or nature of individual representations from the public. But apart from correspondence with the town clerk of Manchester city council written representations have been received from a total of 15 parties—hon. Members, local councillors, members of the public and institutions. All save two expressed outright opposition to the city council's proposals.

Talgarth Road Traffic Scheme

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to abandon the present Talgarth road traffic scheme after abolition of the Greater London council on 31 March.

Mr. Ridley: As and when this stretch of road becomes my responsibility, I shall keep under review how it is operating as with all other parts of the trunk road network.

Blackwall and Rotherhithe Tunnels

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the London boroughs of Newham, Greenwich, Tower Hamlets and Southwark on the maintenance of the Blackwall and Rotherhithe tunnels and the foot tunnels.

Mr. Ridley: We are discussing maintenance arrangements for the Blackwall tunnel which will become my Department's responsibility. I understand that the boroughs are currently considering how best to discharge their future responsibility for maintaining the others.

Road Accidents (Statistics)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents involving a motor car and resulting in (a) death or (b) serious injury to (i) motor car drivers, (ii) motor car front seat passengers, (iii) motor car rear seat passengers, (iv) motor cyclists, (v) pedal cyclists and (vi) pedestrians there have been in each of the past five years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information is as follows:

Accidents, involving a motor car, resulting in death and serious injuries

Type of road user injured	1982	1983	1984
Car drivers	17,954	14,261	15,158
Car front seat passengers	9,023	6,427	6,798
Car rear seat passengers	3,594	3,543	3,913
Motor cyclists	12,965	12,040	12,076
Pedal cyclists	3,829	4,340	4,495
Pedestrians	13,811	14,085	14,890

Data for further years and a breakdown between deaths and serious injuries could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. Since more than one person can be injured in a single accident, some accidents are represented in more than one row of the table.

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor car drivers involved in car accidents resulting in death or serious injury have been over the legal alcohol limit in each of the past five years; and what proportion of the total number of drivers involved in such road accidents this has represented in each year.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information is as follows:

Car drivers involved in fatal or serious accidents: Great Britain

	(a) Positively breath tested or failed/ refused to provide breath specimen	(b) Expressed as a percentage of all car drivers involved in fatal or serious accidents
1980	3,806	5·5
1981	3,547	5·1
1982	3,806	5·3
1983	3,294	5·1
1984	3,371	5·0

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the reduction in the numbers of motorists and passengers killed and seriously injured attributable to the introduction of automatic and evidential breath-testing devices in 1983.

Mr. David Mitchell: My Department has not yet concluded an evaluation of the full effects of the introduction of evidential breath testing on 6 May 1983. Other factors will have affected the number of casualties in that year and subsequently, notably compulsory seat belt wearing, the learner motor cyclist regulations and the number of police patrols.

SCOTLAND

Islands (Development Support)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has now considered the recent proposals of the European Commission for support for agriculture and rural development in some Scottish islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The European Commission's proposals for a programme of special measures for the Scottish islands and two other proposals were published on 14 December 1985. They require very careful examination and evaluation both in terms of the probable levels of benefit to the areas concerned and the likely cost. These assessments are under way. Consideration of these proposals by the Council of Ministers has yet to commence.

Housing

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the housing waiting lists for Glasgow and Edinburgh at the latest available date.

Mr. Ancram: The information available centrally is neither complete nor compiled on a uniform basis. I must therefore refer the hon. Member directly to the local authorities in which he is interested.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of unemployment in the construction industry in (a) the Glasgow travel-to-work area and (b) the Strathclyde region at the latest available date.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information is not available.

Private Contractors (Approved List)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if it is his policy to accept a declaration of global interests as meeting the requirements of the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975 for health board chairmen and health board members when discussing and approving companies for inclusion on the approved list of contractors to tender for hospital services.

Mr. John MacKay: The 1975 regulations require chairmen and members of health boards to declare their interest in individual contracts being considered by the boards and to take no part in the discussions on the matter. This requirement is reflected in health boards' standing orders.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied that the chairman of Tayside health board met the requirements of the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975 when Tayside health board discussed and agreed the list of approved contractors for domestic services.

Mr. John MacKay: Yes.

Civil Defence

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1985, Official Report, column 292, what grants were made under the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations in each of the years 1978-79 to 1984-85 inclusive to each individual (a) joint police committee, (b) joint fire board, (c) regional council and (d) district council.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with the required information, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agriculture and Horticulture (Grants)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing for each year since 1967-68, together with as many future years for which estimates currently exist, the amount of money expended or to be expended by the Central Council for Agricultural and Horticultural Co-operation, and since 1983-84, the co-operative development division of Food From Britain on (a) grants to co-operatives and (b) administrative expenses.

Mr. Gummer: The co-operative development division of Food From Britain, formerly the Central Council for Agricultural and Horticultural Co-operation, makes recommendations to Agriculture Ministers on a number of grant schemes. Government expenditure (in cash terms) on schemes and on the co-operative division's administrative expenses have been as follows:

Year	Agriculture and Horticulture Co-operative Scheme	EC Regulation 1035/72 Launching Aids to Producer Groups in Fruit and Vegetable Sectors	Grants to Forage Groups in LFA's EC Directive 75/268	Administrative Expenses
	£'000	£'000	£'000	£'000
1967-68	*367	—	—	28
1968-69	*457	—	—	94
1969-70	*810	—	—	124
1970-71	*935	—	—	155
1971-72	*783	—	—	193
1972-73	*747	—	—	214
1973-74	*890	—	—	229
1974-75	908	19	—	394
1975-76	1,098	37	—	399
1976-77	764	52	26	430
1977-78	813	64	50	464
1978-79	1,052	12	44	524
1979-80	1,152	16	49	640
1980-81	1,431	19	49	1,102
1981-82	2,082	36	20	1,226
1982-83	2,357	198	254	1,276
1983-84	3,789	601	42	1,344
1984-85	4,526	884	39	1,303
1985-86 (estimated)	4,481	1,200	218	1,377

Source: Appropriation Accounts FFB Annual Report.
* Great Britain only.

Surplus Butter

Mr. Mudd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the percentage change in the amount of surplus butter that has been held by intervention boards within the EEC for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively; and what the estimated percentage change is for 1986;

(2) how much surplus butter was held by intervention boards within the EEC in 1983 and 1984, respectively;

(3) what the estimate is for the amount of surplus butter that will be held by intervention boards within the EEC for 1986.

Mr. Gummer: Stocks of butter held in intervention stores in the European Community vary during the course of the year. The stock figures given below are average end-of-month quantities. For 1985, the figure is the average end-of-month stock level up to the latest month (October) for which figures are available. There is no Community estimate for likely stock levels in 1986.

	Average end of month stock of intervention butter held in EC stores	Percentage change over previous year per cent.
1983	634,604	+182
1984	1,062,307	+67
1985	1,047,818	−1

Fenvalerate

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether fenvalerate as sold and distributed by H.L. Chemicals, has been approved under the pesticides safety precaution scheme.

Mrs. Fenner: Fenvalerate is a synthetic pyrethroid. One formulation containing fenvalerate, known as sumicidin, has provisional commercial clearance under the pesticides safety precautions scheme for a number of uses.

I have no evidence that the firm in question is selling or distributing fenvalerate formulations other than that listed above. If such evidence exists, it should be passed to the Health and Safety Executive so that they can ensure the relevant provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 are being observed.

The new regulations which we propose to make under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, will make it an offence to sell, supply, store, use or advertise an unapproved pesticide.

Live Animals (Exports)

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is satisfied that no live horses or ponies are being exported for slaughter.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department has powers to control the exports of horses under legislation consolidated under the Animal Health Act 1981. Among other things, these controls require exporters to make declarations as to the purpose for which horses and ponies are being exported and impose a system of minimum values at levels which would make export for slaughter uneconomic.

We have seen no evidence that would suggest that there is currently a trade in live equines for slaughter.

Antibiotics (Swann Report)

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list the recommendations made in the Swann report on the use of antibiotics which have not been acted upon.

Mrs. Fenner: The report of the joint committee on the use of antibiotics in animal husbandry and veterinary medicine (the Swann committee) was published in November 1969. The committee made a number of recommendations, relating both to general principles and to matters of detail, which were designed to avoid hazards to human and animal health which might result from the administration of antibiotics to farm livestock.

The Government's policy on the use of antibiotics in animal husbandry and veterinary medicine continues to be based on the Swann committee's principal recommendation that antibiotics available for administration to livestock should be classified as either "feed" or "therapeutic" and that only the former should be available without prescription for use in feedingstuffs. "Feed" antibiotics have little or no application as therapeutic agents in man or animals and will not impair the efficacy of prescribed therapeutic drugs through the development of resistant strains of organisms. The committee made a number of detailed recommendations relating to the control of feed antibiotics and to specific antibiotic substances consequent upon the principal recommendation; these recommendations too have been implemented with only very limited exceptions. Of the Swann Committee's remaining recommendations, which covered a wide variety of topics related to the use of antibiotics in farming, the majority have been implemented. In particular, the Ministry's central veterinary laboratories, together with the veterinary investigation centres, monitors the development of antibiotic resistance. An epidemiology department has been set up at the central veterinary laboratory since the committee reported. However, resource constraints have had a bearing on the extent to which the committee's recommendations on research and investigation have been followed up by universities and other organisations.

The committee's recommendation that the advertisement and promotion of therapeutic antibiotics to laymen should be prohibited has no been acted upon.

A joint sub-committee on antimicrobial substances was established in 1973 and reported jointly to the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the Veterinary Products Committee, the statutory committees of independent experts who advise the Health and Agriculture Ministers on matters relating to the safety, quality and efficacy of licensed medicinal products. However, the sub-committee was disbanded at the end of 1980 in the light of resource constraints. The Veterinary Products Committee continues to bear in mind the problem of resistance when considering applications for product licences for antibiotic medicines and feed additives. Licences are not granted if the Committee considers that there is a risk of resistant strains developing which might pose a hazard to human health.

Food Additives and Colourings

Sir Bernard Braine asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure full publicity of the controls his Department operate to prevent harm to health from food additives and colourings; what research is being currently undertaken into the possible ill-effects of such substances; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The safety of food is protected by provisions in the Food Act 1984, the Food Act (Scotland) 1956 or the Food Act (Northern Ireland) 1958 and by regulations made under those Acts. No additive to food is specifically permitted by regulation until the results of thorough research have been carefully assessed by independent committees of experts and a proposal to permit an additive by law has been the subject of consultation with all interested parties which includes representatives of manufacturers, traders and consumers. I am conscious that these procedures, and particularly the work of the expert committees, may not be fully understood by members of the public and I am therefore considering what steps might be taken to ensure greater publicity for this work and the careful way in which it is done.

These approvals of additives are of necessity based on the needs and safety of the general public at large. I am aware that a small number of consumers may react to some additives, as others react to some foods or food ingredients. My Department is currently funding research into such reactions and I hope that some results will be available next year. This is part of a wider programme of research into food additives carried out by my Department.

Crayfish Plague Fungus

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the spread of crayfish plague fungus in British rivers since 1981.

Mr. Gummer: Since 1981, outbreaks of crayfish plague have been confirmed in the following river systems:

Bristol Avon
River Lee (Hertfordshire)
River Wey (Hampshire and Surrey)
Hampshire Avon

Intervention Storage (Butter)

Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the overall cost of storing the surplus butter currently held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community; and what the figure is for storing the surplus butter held within the United Kingdom;

(2) what was the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic community for 1983 and 1984, respectively;

(3) what is the estimate for the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for 1986;

(4) what is the percentage change in the overall cost of storing the surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively; and what is the estimated percentage change for 1986;

(5) what is the overall cost of storing the surplus butter currently held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community; what was the overall cost for 1983 and 1984, respectively; what is the estimated cost for 1986; and what is the percentage change for each year from 1983 to 1986, respectively;

(6) what is the overall cost of storing one tonne of surplus butter held by intervention boards within the European Economic Community for one year.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 351]: The current cost to the Community of storing 1 tonne of butter in public intervention for one year is approximately 403 ecu (£230). There may be additional costs which fall to be met by the member state in which the butter is stored.

Community expenditure on the technical and financing costs of public intervention storage of butter for the years 1983 to 1986, and the percentage changes between these years, are as follows:

	mecu	Percentage change
1983	176
1984	368	+109
1985 (Budget and transfers)	394	+7
1986 (Draft budget)	299	−24

NOTE: These figures include the handling charges for butter bought and sold during the year.

Details of expenditure by the intervention board for agricultural produce on public intervention storage of butter in the United Kingdom in 1985-86 are given in the Winter Supplementary Estimates (HC9 1985-86) for Class III Vote 1. The Community expenditure figure given above for 1984 includes 66 mecu (£38 million) for storage in the United Kingdom.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Fisheries Ministers' meeting in Brussels on 16 and 17 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to the reply, 19 December 1985, c. 282]: The Council of Fisheries Ministers resumed discussion on 20 December to consider the further decisions necessary on total allowable catches and quotas for 1986 as a consequence of the accession of Spain and Portugal. I represented the United Kingdom.

After lengthy discussions involving Spain, Portugal and France, mainly on the arrangements to apply in the waters of Spain and Portugal, the Council was able to reach agreement on the allocations to Spain and Portugal of stocks already subject to TAC, the introduction of TACs and quotas for the enlarged Community for pollack and Norway lobster in Western waters as well as for a number of other species in Spanish and Portuguese waters, and certain additional controls on vessels of other member states fishing in Spanish and Portuguese waters as well as on Portuguese vessels fishing for limited quantities of horse mackerel and blue whiting in the waters of the existing Member States. The quotas allocated to the United Kingdom for pollack and Norway lobster in ICES areas Vb, VI and VII for 1986 were very satisfactory and reflected existing patterns of fishing. I am glad to report that Ireland lifted its waiting reserve on the package of TACs and quotas agreed at the previous meeting on 16 and 17 December which will now enter into force on an interim basis to 25 January only, pending the debate in the House on 16 January.

The Council accordingly completed the work done at the previous meeting and ensured that for the second year in succession the full range of TACs and quotas has been agreed before the end of the previous year and that the arrangements for Spanish and Portuguese accession in the fisheries sector have been completed on a basis which fully preserves the principles of the common fisheries policy as well as the opportunities of United Kingdom fishermen.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General (1) what representations he has received about the need for a national agreement on inter-authority payments for youth training scheme trainees;

(2) what representations he has received about the problems caused by the anomalies in the youth training scheme mode A extra district permit grants; and what steps he is taking to resolve them.

Mr. Trippier: A number of representations have been received about the question of inter-authority payments for young people on the youth training scheme and the related issue of extra district fees. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science hopes to introduce a Bill later this Session providing, inter alia, for an amendment to the existing law on inter-authority recoupment in respect of non-advanced further education. I understand that he is discussing with the local authority associations whether youth training scheme provision should be included within the scope of the Bill; and that the associations are themselves giving consideration to providing national advice for local education authorities on this matter.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received about the problems for youth training scheme trainees who are forced to travel to study certain specialist fields.

Mr. Trippier: I am not aware of any specific representations that have been made to Department of Employment Ministers on this matter. There is no evidence to suggest that the arrangements for the youth training scheme make it difficult for those trainees who have to attend colleges or work placements at a distance from their homes. The scheme aims to provide, wherever possible, suitable local opportunities for all eligible young people. I am satisfied that where these are not available the provision for the payment of travel and lodging costs is adequate.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what steps are being taken to ease the current problems of youth training scheme trainees studying outside their own regions.

Mr. Trippier: I am not aware of any significant problems affecting trainees who spend all or part of their training period outside their own region. The provision for payment of travel and lodging costs in such cases is kept under regular review.

Wages Inspectorate

Mr. McNamara asked the Paymaster General what was, for the years 1970, 1974, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1983 in respect of Humberside (a) the total number of establishments on the wages inspectorate register and the total number of workers covered by the register; (b) the number of establishments covered by each wages council and (c) the number of workers covered by each wages council.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The numbers of workers covered by wages councils are available only for Great Britain as a whole. Numbers of establishments covered by wages councils are not collected for areas smaller than wages inspectorate divisions. For the Yorkshire and Humberside division the figures requested are as follows:

Establishments on the wages inspectorate's register

	1970	1974	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983
Current Wages Councils
Aerated waters	109	82	62	62	60	61	55	54
Clothing manufacture	1,339	1,174	1,174	934	778	784	718	713
Boot and shoe repairing	349	282	240	230	228	226	204	196
Button manufacturing	10	11	9	8	7	7	9	9
Coffin furniture & cerement making	5	8	8	7	7	7	5	5
Cotton waste reclamation	5	3	1	3	3	3	3	3
Flax & hemp	4	3	1	1	—	—	—	—
Fur	39	34	36	29	27	27	28	27
General waste materials reclamation	467	412	366	359	353	357	321	308
Hairdressing undertakings	3,846	4,208	3,557	3,397	3,425	3,488	3,264	3,339
Hat, cap & millinery	29	22	18	12	11	11	11	9
Lace finishing	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Laundry	139	114	89	79	75	74	63	62
Linen & cotton handkerchiefs	12	10	8	9	8	9	11	8
Made up textiles	36	44	42	44	43	42	41	40
Ostrich & fancy feather	2	2	—	—	—	—	—	—
Perambulator and invalid carriage	3	4	5	3	3	3	4	4
Retail bespoke tailoring	180	168	122	98	95	95	56	49
Rope, twine & net	37	34	30	28	26	23	20	20
Sack & bag	25	25	23	17	14	14	16	16
Toy manufacturing	24	26	39	37	39	43	45	44
Retail trades (non food)	9,082	9,166	9,275	9,100	9,378	9,603	9,262	9,246
Retail food & allied trades	14,666	13,553	12,722	12,339	12,337	12,542	11,648	11,685
Licensed non residential establishment	6,452	6,541	6,581	6,705	6,797	6,898	7,008	7,030
Licensed residential establishment & licensed restaurant	1,055	1,414	1,482	1,674	1,750	1,845	1,882	1,898
Unlicensed place of refreshment	1,889	1,824	1,651	1,576	1,564	1,605	1,360	1,367
Wages Councils abolished since 1970
Road haulage	3,444	3,273	3,132	—	—	—	—	—
Industrial staff canteens	3,012	3,033	—	—	—	—	—	—
Hollow ware	2	1	—	—	—	—	—	—
Keg & drum	12	13	—	—	—	—	—	—
Milk distribution	399	367	—	—	—	—	—	—
Paper box	54	51	—	—	—	—	—	—
Stamped or pressed metal wares	12	12	—	—	—	—	—	—
Baking	1,030	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Boot & floor polish	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Brush & broom	38	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Hair, bass & fibre	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total establishments	47,813	45,914	40,673	36,751	37,028	37,767	36,034	36,132

Mr. McNamara asked the Paymaster General what were the number of times in the years 1970, 1974, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 when members of the wages inspectorate had checked employees' pay giving the number of establishments checked, the number of establishments underpaying, the percentages of establishments underpaying, the establishments visited, the percentage of the register visited, the number of establishments visited underpaying, the percentage of establishments visited, the workers whose pay was checked by visits and other methods, the workers underpaid, the percentage underpaid of all workers checked, the percentage of underpaid workers checked by visits, the arrears paid, the arrears raised by workers, the arrears not pursued and the total arrears assessed for Humberside.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Statistics about compliance with wages orders are not collected for areas smaller than wages inspectorate divisions. For the Yorkshire and Humberside division, the information requested is given in the following tables. Final figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Table 1 Establishments—Yorkshire and Humberside division of the wages inspectorate

Year	All checks of pay (visited and not visited)				Inspections by visit
	Establishments checked	Percentage of establishments checked	Establishments underpaying	Percentage of establishments underpaying	Establishments visited	Percentage of register visited	Establishments visited underpaying	Percentage of establishments visited underpaying
		per cent.		per cent.		per cent.		per cent.
1970*	5,022	10·5	912	18·2	5,022	10·5	912	18·2
1974*	4,457	9·7	1,059	23·8	4,457	9·7	1,059	23·8
1978	4,056	10·0	1,213	30·0	4,056	10·0	1,213	30·0
1979	6,026	16·4	1,156	19·2	4,132	11·2	1,156	28·0
1980	5,820	15·7	1,119	19·2	3,732	10·1	1,119	30·0
1981	4,083	10·8	871	21·3	2,737	7·2	871	31·8
1982	4,844	13·4	964	19·9	2,680	7·8	964	36·0
1983	3,835	10·6	941	24·5	2,584	7·2	941	36·4
1984	4,025	11·1	1,026	25·5	2,652	7·3	1,026	38·7
1985	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.

Table 2 Workers

Year	All checks of pay (visited and not visited)				Inspections by visit
	Workers whose pay was checked by visit and other methods	Workers underpaid	Percentage underpaid of all workers checked	Percentage underpaid of workers checked by visit	Arrears paid	Arrears waived by workers	Arrears not pursued	Total arrears assessed
			per cent.	per cent.	£	£	£	£
1970*	22,635	1,491	6·6	6·6	17,582	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.
1974*	21,564	2,058	9·5	9·5	36,334	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.
1978†	21,324	2,795	13·1	13·1	145,561	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.
1979†	28,699	2,396	8·3	10·9	133,955	n.a.	27,705	161,660
1980†	25,420	2,513	9·9	12·6	140,211	n.a.	25,037	165,248
1981†	18,377	2,060	11·2	15·2	136,244	n.a.	52,784	189,028
1982	39,234	2,077	5·3	13·4	145,066	45,589	15,155	205,810
1983	29,306	2,227	7·6	14·2	161,753	75,198	13,685	250,636
1984	29,370	2,252	7·7	13·4	159,068	44,657	27,516	231,241
1985	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.	n.a.

Pay checks by methods not involving visits include figures for multiple firms whose head office is located in the division whose branches are located, and workers employed, in other areas. This needs to be taken into account when considering the level of compliance.

* In 1970 and 1974, only inspections by visit were recorded.

† Information about the amount of arrears waived by workers and arrears not pursued was collected only from 1982.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General what was the level of unemployment in (a) the Liverpool travel-to-work area and (b) the Merseyside special development area in the construction industry both numerically and as a percentage at the latest available date; and what were the figures in June 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. As a result of the change to a claimant-based unemployment count in 1982, detailed statistics of unemployment by industry are no longer collected. The table shows figures for May 1982, the last date on which such information was collected, and for May 1979 (statistics for June 1979 are not available). They relate to unemployed registrants whose last employment had been in the construction industry in the Liverpool travel-to-work area and Merseyside special development area as defined at that time.

	May 1979	May 1982
Liverpool TTWA:
Construction workers registered as unemployed	7,137	12,782
Percentage of total unemployed	12·5	14·5
Merseyside SDA:
Construction workers registered as unemployed	10,405	19,112
Percentage of total unemployed	12·9	14·3

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General what was the level of unemployment in the Liverpool, Riverside constituency at the latest available date both in figures and as a percentage.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. On 12 December 1985 the number of unemployed claimants in the Liverpool, Riverside parliamentary constituency was 12,078. Unemployment rates are not calculated for areas smaller than travel-to-work areas.

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General what was the level of unemployment in (a) the Liverpool travel-to-work area and (b) the Merseyside special development area at the latest date both in figures and as a percentage.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 12 December 1985, the number of unemployed claimants in the Liverpool travel-to-work area was 105,461, which corresponds to an unemployment rate of 20·9 per cent. Special development areas were abolished in November 1984. The travel-to-work areas in the Merseyside area with development status, Liverpool, Wirral and Chester, Wigan and St. Helens, and Widnes and Runcorn, had in total 191,589 unemployed claimants on 12 December 1985, an unemployment rate of 19·9 per cent.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Disabled People (Equipment and Aids)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he intends to visit the Bettman centre for assessment by disabled people of equipment and gadgets in Coventry;

(2) if he will make it his policy that every local authority personal social services department should set up a centre where disabled people can assess gadgets, equipment and home aids with the assistance of occupational therapists;

(3) what information he has about which local authorities provide centres for disabled people to try out gadgets, aids and equipment with the assistance of occupational therapists.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans at present to visit the Bettman centre. I consider that both aid centres and assessment centres can be a valuable addition to services for disabled people and I hope that this new centre proves to be so.

It is of course for individual local authorities to decide whether to set up such centres, taking account of local circumstances, and we do not have comprehensive information about their arrangements. However, we are aware that a number of authorities, either alone or in association with health authorities and/or voluntary bodies, have set up or contribute towards the cost of running aid centres where a selection of aids can be seen and tried out by disabled people under the supervision of trained staff. There are 14 such centres in the United Kingdom offering a fully comprehensive service; these are situated in Belfast, Birmingham, Caerphilly, Edinburgh, Leeds, Leicester, Liverpool, London, Manchester, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sheffield, Southampton, Stockport and Swindon.

A more limited service is offered in Blackpool, Dudley, Portsmouth and Wakefield. Other places where aids can be seen and tried out include some social services departments some of which have assessment centres similar to the Bettman centre; and hospital occupational therapy departments some of which have arrangements for use also by local authority staff.

AIDS

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the period within which the incidence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome is currently doubling;

(2) what is the projection, on the basis of the current state of medical advice and knowledge, of the likely number of acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers in each year up to 1990.

Mr. Hayhoe: The number of cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre has doubled in the last 10 months. However, the rate of increase of cases has varied considerably in the short term and should not be used as the sole basis for estimates of future spread.

Recent predictions by the communicable disease surveillance centre of the numbers of new cases of AIDS in the United Kingdom for the years 1986-88, published in the Lancet of 7 September 1985 are as follows:

	Number
1986	336
1987	785
1988	1,837

These predictions do not take into account changing epidemiological features and should therefore be interpreted with caution.

It is not possible to predict on any scientific basis beyond 1988 because the various factors affecting the incidence of the disease are likely to change. It is also hoped that the planned national public information campaign on AIDS will be starting to have effect on incidence by 1988.

Competitive Tenders

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all guidance and other circular letters issued by his Department to health authorities and health authority chairmen on the subject of competitive tendering, indicating the purpose of each communication.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested is:

Circular HC(83), 18 September 1983 — asked health authorities to test the cost effectiveness of their domestic, catering and laundry services by putting them out to tender; and gave guidance on the procedures they should adopt.

DA(83)40, 22 November 1983 — attached specimen contracts for domestic and catering services; and told health authorities not to specify rates of pay or conditions of service for contractors staff.

Addendum to DA(83)40, 9 March 1984 — attached specimen contracts for laundry services.

Second Addendum to DA(83)40, 12 October 1984 — attached specimen contracts for linen and garment rental services.

Letter from Minister for Health to Regional Chairmen, 9 October 1984—explained why it was wrong for health authorities to specify the terms and conditions of service which private contractors should provide for staff working on NHS contracts.

Letters from Chairman of NHS Management Board to Regional Chairmen 3 January 1986 gave further advice to assist health authorities to obtain maximum benefits from the policy.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been (a) the total number of new hospital beds since May 1979 and (b) the total number of hospital beds closed, including those in hospitals which have been partially closed since May 1979 by region.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that there was an error in my reply of 16 December to the hon. Member. The figure for numbers of beds in hospitals or parts of hospitals approved for permanent closure between May 1979 and the end of June 1985 is 18,673.

The number of new hospital beds provided since 1979 and the number of hospital beds approved for closure from May 1979 to the end of June 1985 by region are as follows:

Region	Closures	Completed
Northern	684	916
Yorkshire	1,865	763
Trent	2,343	2,177
East Anglian	503	1,264
North West Thames	1,851	368
North East Thames	2,093	579
South East Thames	660	590
South West Thames	1,456	554
Wessex	750	739
Oxford	985	265
South Western	690	355
West Midlands	2,060	711
Mersey	1,877	2,427
North Western	814	783
SHAs	42	—

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what level of benefit is assumed for 16 and 17-year-old unemployed claimants in the illustrative examples of the effects of the social security White Paper;

(2) what account the technical annexe to the White Paper on social security analysis of gainers and losers takes of 16 and 17-year-olds who currently claim benefit in their own right.

Mr. Newton: The illustrative figures assume that 16 to 17-year-old claimants will continue to be entitled to benefit in their own right, with a personal allowance of £18·20 per week for single people and £36·40 for couples, increased by any further premiums where eligible. The effects for this age group are included in the tables in the technical annex.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans the Government have for payment and assessment of family credit to strikers' families during the period of a strike under the White Paper on the reform of social security.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what he estimates will be the percentage take up of family credit.

Mr. Newton: As explained in paragraph 2.10 of that document, the illustrations in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) are consistent with a take-up rate of 60 per cent.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of working families will have their marginal tax rates (a) increased and (b) reduced as a result of the implementation of proposals contained in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security", Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton: I regret that information about changes in marginal tax rates for individuals is not available.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state, for the London borough of Newham, each category of claimant, the numbers involved and the amounts gained or lost each week in benefits arising from his recent White Paper proposals for the reform of Social Security.

Mr. Newton: This information is not available.

Hospital Waiting Lists (Bolton)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to meet the Bolton health authority to discuss the waiting list on non-urgent cases waiting for operations for over one year in the area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No. Management of the waiting list on non-urgent cases waiting for operations in Bolton is a matter for the Bolton health authority. My hon. Friend may wish, therefore, to address his concern to the chairman of that authority.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of changes in the work load of his Department's local office staff since 1979.

Mr. Major: There has been a large number of changes in work loads and procedures both in supplementary benefit and contributory benefits since 1979. These have involved variously both reduced and increased activity and their net effect on the national complement has been a reduction of 4,229 posts.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many jobs have been lost in his Department's offices in the east Midlands since May 1979.

Mr. Major: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to those offices which were in the Department's east Midlands and East Anglia region before re-organisation in August 1982.

In May 1979 the complement for these offices was 3,465. The present complement is 3,559·5.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now increase the number of typists working in local offices of his Department by at least 2,000 extra posts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No. Such a proposal forms part of a bid for over 15,000 additional staff made recently by the Departmental trade union side which is currently being considered.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now increase the number of special case officers working in local offices of his Department by at least 200 posts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No. Such a proposal forms part of a bid for over 15,000 additional staff made recently by the Departmental trade union side and which is currently being considered.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many local offices of his Department in England now use staff to handwrite rather than type letters to claimants.

Mr. Major: All local offices of the Department of Health and Social Security make use of both handwritten and typed letters to claimants. The Department prefers individual letters to be typed, but often a handwritten letter or the completion by hand of a pre-printed standard letter or form, is the quickest and simplest way to make an inquiry or to provide information.

Personal Records

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action is being taken to tighten up security of personal records kept by his Department on individuals and procedures for disclosing such information on the telephone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: A review of standing instructions about disclosure of information has been completed and revised instructions to staff on the protection of personal information held in Departmental records are being issued. These include additional guidance on the disclosure of information by telephone.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons claimed supplementary benefit in 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and to the nearest available date in 1985.

Mr. Major: The table shows the number of claims to supplementary benefit received nationally for each of the years 1979 to 1984, and the number of persons receiving supplementary benefit at 30 July 1985 — the latest available — and at comparative dates since 1979. The figures of claims to benefit for 1985 show the number received up to 19 November only—the latest available figures.

	Claims received	*Benefit recipients
1979	5,169,992	3,197,019
1980	5,828,263	3,379,728
1981	5,456,585	3,780,980
1982	6,103,862	4,376,895
1983	5,889,787	4,661,318
1984	6,359,881	4,968,956
1985	5,482,137	5,169,435

* Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will name the local office which had received recent guidance from the chief adjudication officer referred to in the reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr, on 28 October, Official Report, column 381.

Mr. Major: The guidance was given to one of the adjudication officers at Birmingham, Perry Barr integrated local office.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the percentage rise in retirement pension claims during (i) 1983-84 and (ii) 1984-85.

Mr. Major: Retirement pension claims (all categories) rose by 1 per cent. between 1982-83 and 1983-84 and by 22·9 per cent. between 1983-84 and 1984-85. Numbers of claims in each year were:

	Number
1982-83	649,679
1983-84	656,208
1984-85	806,190

Benefits

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons received (a) unemployment benefit and (b) family income supplement in (i) 1979-80 and (ii) 1984-85.

Mr. Major: Information is not available for the whole of the periods requested, but is available for November of each year. The figures for November in the financial years requested are given in the table:

	November 1979	November 1984
Unemployment benefit	467,000	896,000
Family Income Supplement	77,000	200,000

North West Thames Regional Health Authority

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to cease the process of redistribution of resources from the North West Thames region to other regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The process of resource distribution aims both to direct larger cash increases to those regions which have historically received less than their fair share of resources, and to reflect regions' changing population size and structure. The need for adjustments between regions to reflect population changes will continue after historic deprivation has been made good; the impact on the North-West Thames region will depend on changes in its population relative to the population of other regions.

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the review of the resource allocation working party formulae by the National Health Service management board to be completed; whether the board will be seeking evidence from the North West Thames regional health authority; and if he intends to publish the results of the review.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Friend has asked the NHS management board to report to him by the end of 1986. The conduct of the review will be discussed with regional health authority chairmen shortly, and I would certainly expect all regions to be invited to submit evidence. Decisions have not yet been taken about the form in which the results of the review will be published.

Debendox

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received from the Debendox Action Group; when he received them; and what reply he has sent.

Mr. Hayhoe: None. My predecessor met Action Group representatives in December 1984 and agreed to ask a consultant adviser or other qualified adviser in DHSS to consider evidence about Debendox which became available after the Committee on Safety of Medicines last considered the product in March 1983.

I am writing to the right hon. Member to let him have a progress report on this matter.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for severe disablement allowance had been received by 19 November; how many of these claims have been decided; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: As at 19 November some 53,000 claims for severe disablement allowance had been recorded as received, but we know that mistakes in recording have been made and the figure probably overstates the true one; 10,165 claims had been decided.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time between receipt of a claim for severe disablement allowance and the issue of an order book (a) when the award is made after initial application by an adjudication officer alone and (b) when the award is made after initial application on the basis of a decision of an adjudicating medical authority on percentage disablement and recorded cause of incapacity for work.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information is not available.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the age breakdown and recorded cause of incapacity for work of (a) people who have been awarded severe disablement allowance and (b) people refused severe disablement allowance; and if he will give this information using the same classification of awards and refusals as in his answer of 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 657-58.

Mr. Newton: A special analysis is being made to provide as much of the information as possible. I shall reply to the hon. Member when it is complete.

Social Security Files (Wick)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) supplementary benefit and (b) national insurance benefit claim files relating to residents in Orkney are currently held in Wick.

Mr. Major: At the Department's office in Wick on 20 December 1985 — the latest figures available — there were 775 active supplementary benefit claim files relating to residents of Orkney and the associated islands. No national insurance benefit claims for the Orkneys are dealt with by Wick.

Hip Operations (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the mean average interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital for a total hip replacement or other orthoplasty of the hip in England in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The estimated mean interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital for toal hip replacement or other arthroplasty of hip in England in 1983, the latest year for which information is available centrally, was 35·5 weeks. The estimated median interval, which gives a more typical indication of the waiting experience of the "average" case, was 24 weeks.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether his talks with health authority chairmen have covered delays in screening cervical smears in pathology laboratories.

Mr. Hayhoe: Other more suitable mechanisms exist for setting service priorities and monitoring their achievement. As part of the normal process for setting service priorities health authorities will be asked to give priority to improving their cervical cancer screening programmes, including ensuring that laboratories can meet demand and avoid backlogs. Arrangements for monitoring the achievement of service priorities are an integral part of the NHS planning and accountability process. Whenever it proves necessary, this issue will be raised at annual Ministerial reviews of particular regional health authorities.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what details are available to his Department about health authorities or family practitioner committees which have issued instructions to doctors in clinics or family doctors, or both, to suspend, delay or reduce the taking of cervical smears because of a backlog in pathology laboratories.

Mr. Hayhoe: The management of local cervical cancer screening programmes is the responsibility of district health authorities, who are best placed to judge the most effective response to local problems such as laboratory backlogs. They are not required to report their detailed operational decisions. However through the normal arrangements for setting service priorities all health authorities will be required to give priority to improving their programmes including ensuring that laboratories can meet demand and avoid backlogs.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate how many women will not be called for cervical cancer screening, under current arrangements, before 1993.

Mr. Hayhoe: All women identifiable from family practitioner committee records as being at risk from cervical cancer should receive an invitation to be screened under the computerised call and recall arrangements which health authorities will be required to implement no later than March 1988.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy on the maximum interval between successive cervical cancer smears for women under 35 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The recommended interval between routine cervical smears for all women who are or have been sexually active is five years. This is based on the advice of the independent expert Committee on Gynaecological Cytology which reviews regularly the available evidence on the screening interval.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to collect, collate and publish information on delays by health authorities in dealing with cervical smears; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. Delays in particular laboratories are primarily a matter for local management. However through the normal arrangements for setting service priorities, health authorities will be asked to ensure that laboratories can meet demand and avoid backlogs. Arrangements for monitoring the achievement of service priorities is an integral part of the NHS planning and accountability process.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to publish his review of the number of medical conditions which lead to exemption from prescription charges.

Mr. Hayhoe: I expect to announce the outcome of the review soon.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each quarter of the calendar year 1984, the first three quarters of 1985 and for the financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85, for England, what were (a) the number of prescriptions dispensed, (b) the percentage of prescriptions exempt from charges, (c) the costs of prescriptions: (i) the payments by patients (excluding pre-payment certificates), (ii) the payments from public funds, (iii) the total costs and (iv) the average gross costs per prescription, (d) the number and type of pre-payment certificates and (e) the revenue from sale of pre-payment certificates.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 766]: The information requested, in respect of the family practitioner services in England, is set out in the table:

	1984				*1985		Financial years†
	Jan-Mar	Apr-June	Jul-Sep	Oct-Dec	Jan-Mar	Apr-June	1983-84	1984-85
Prescriptions dispensed (millions)	87·60	85·50	81·80	88·10	90·80	81·00	337·00	345·40
Prescriptions exempt from charges (percentage)‡	78·50	79·10	79·40	79·90	79·70	81·40	78·00	79·30
Costs
(i) Payments by patients (excluding pre-payment certificates (£ million)	26·00	27·90	26·50	27·50	27·90	29·50	99·80	109·10
(ii) Payments from public funds (£ million)	344·50	349·20	350·40	380·90	385·50	363·60	1,331·80	1,441·10
(iii) Total costs (£ million)	374·40	379·50	379·40	411·20	418·10	395·80	1,442·50	1,562·50
(iv) Average gross cost per prescription (£)	4·27	4·44	4·64	4·67	4·60	4·89	4·28	4·52
Pre-payment certificates
Number
4 Monthly (thousands)	65·20	55·50	53·40	58·60	65·10	47·10	225·00	232·50
12 Monthly (thousands)	156·80	79·10	83·80	94·60	174·00	71·60	427·10	431·60
Revenue (£ million)	3·90	2·40	2·50	2·80	4·80	2·70	10·90	12·40

*Figures are not yet available for the third quarter of 1985.
†To allow for the time lag in payments, the statistical data has been adjusted to make it compatible with the annual financial information.
‡Derived from prescriptions dispensed by pharmacists.

Cancer Treatment Facilities (Thames Areas)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when considering the proposals of the North-East Thames health authority on the creation of specialist cancer provision in its area, what attention he pays to the location of cancer provision facilities in other Thames health authority areas.

Mr. Whitney: The development of cancer treatment services in North-East Thames is a matter for the regional and district health authorities. Any proposals to change the present disposition of services would be referred to Ministers only if they were opposed by the relevant community health council. In reaching a decision Ministers would, like the regional health authority itself, take account of all relevant points including, where appropriate, the location and capacity of facilities in other Thames regions.

Smoking

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the names of those organisations which have made representations to his Department requesting (a) further restrictions on smoking on National Health Service premises, (b) further restrictions on smoking in public places and (c) banning smoking altogether; what was his reply in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: In formulating policy on smoking, the Government take note of all representations made, though I am not aware of any to ban smoking completely. However a number of representations have been made over past years about smoking on National Health Service premises and in public places by a variety of organisations and it would not be practicable to give details of names and our response to each.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to revise his Department's circular HC(85)22 relating to restrictions on smoking on National Health Service premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: There are no plans to revise the circular issued to health authorities last May promoting non-smoking on National Health Service premises.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to take steps to introduce a policy of recruiting only non-smokers in the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he intends to lay draft regulations to amend the Housing Benefit Regulations 1985 to give a similar effect to his policy towards students' income under deeds of covenant in relation to standard housing benefit as in relation to supplementary benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Yes. We are proposing to amend the Housing Benefits Regulations to ensure that the treatment of convenanted payments for housing benefit purposes is consistent with the intended supplementary benefit approach. Draft regulations have now been referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations for their views.

Departmental Appointments

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those bodies to which his Department makes appointments, the number of appointees and the number of these who are women.

Mr. Fowler: I refer the hon. Member to pages 35-39 and 78 of the Cabinet Office (MPO) booklet "Public Bodies 1985" (ISBN 011 430008 9), published on 17 December last year, copies of which are in the Library. I also appoint members to the management sides of the bodies listed in the table which also gives the other information requested. The information given relates to the two year period ending on 31 December 1985.

Name of body	Number of members		Number of additional co-opted members
	Total	Women	Total	Women
Whitley Councils for the Health Services (Great Britain)	51	5	3	1
Nursing and Midwifery Staff Negotiating Council	6	2	0	0
Joint Negotiating Committee for Professions Allied to Medicines	5	1	1	0

Hospital Closures

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospitals have been closed, or partly closed, due to funding restrictions in the last two months; where they are; and how much money has been saved as a result.

Mr. Whitney: Health authorities are not required to report such information to the Department, so I regret that I am unable to answer the question posed by the hon. Member, who is no doubt aware that we are spending more on health services than ever before.

Local Offices (Heating)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions his Department's offices have had to close owing to the failure of their heating systems; and what steps are taken in these circumstances regarding provision of services, particularly in relation to holiday periods.

Mr. Major: Information on the breakdown of office heating systems is not collected as a matter of routine. I am, however, aware that following the Christmas holiday period there were heating failures in a number of our local offices. In some cases it was necessary, because of the extreme cold, for management to close the office until urgent repairs to the heating system could be completed. In most cases the office was closed for a day or less and in no case did it take more than two days for the repairs to be completed.

We are, of course, concerned that such breakdowns occur and officials are in touch with the Property Services Agency on this issue.

When a breakdown occurs the manager of the office takes whatever steps are practicable to keep the public informed and to advise local social services departments and other agencies. In cases of urgency claimants could contact a neighbouring office or their local social services department.

Heart Transplants

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the long-term financial allocation for heart transplants; what assessment he has made of growth in numbers of and demands for this type of operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: £1,600,000 has been allocated to the heart transplant programmes at Papworth and Harefield hospitals in 1985-86. The report of an evaluation of the costs and benefits of heart transplantation, commissioned by the Department and undertaken by Mr. Martin Buxton and Professor Roy Acheson, was published in April 1985 and a copy placed in the Library; I refer my hon. Friend to chapter 11 of this report, which considers the difficulty inherent in estimating potential demand for the operation. Following the publication of the report, my right hon. Friend asked the supra regional services advisory group to make recommendations on how the development of heart transplantation within the National Health Service might best be taken forward; he has now received these recommendations and will announce his decisions very soon.

General Practitioners (Bristol Meeting)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost, purpose and outcome of a meeting held with seven general practitioners at a hotel in Bristol in the first week of December 1985 organised by Arthur Irving Associates on behalf of the Central Office of Information.

Mr. Whitney: The meeting which cost, I understand, about £700 was part of a programme of quantitative and qualitative research to evaluate the Government's campaign of education and information on drug misuse. This programme included interviews with young people, parents and professionals — of whom general practitioners are a key group. I am told that the Bristol meeting provided some useful insights for the evaluation.

NHS Premises (Telephones)

Mr. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress has been made in ensuring that all telephones in National Health Service premises can be used by the hard of hearing reliant on hearing aids; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The extent to which inductive couplers have been fitted to telephones on National Health Service premises is not known centrally. Decisions to install such equipment are for individual health authorities. Information as to its availability and benefits was recently given to works officers of regional health authorities.

Health Services Board

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will compile a register of the interests of members of the Health Services Board;

(2) whether the recommendations of the Salmon committee on standards of conduct in public life apply to the Health Services Board.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 319]: Those members of the Board who are civil servants are subject to the normal civil service rules of conduct which have had regard to the recommendations of the Salmon committee.

Other members are either subject to the general guidance on rules of conduct issued to health authorities in health memorandum (62)21 where appropriate or they are subject to agreed procedures regarding declaration of interest.

Public Life (Standards of Conduct)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he has issued to regional health authorities and district health authorities on compliance with the recommendations of the Salmon committee on standards of conduct in public life with reference to interests of members, officers employees and consultants of authorities and representations received from others, including Members of Parliament.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985 c. 319]: The standing orders of health authorities already require members and employees to declare any interest they may have in commercial concerns with whom the authority is, or is likely to, enter into a contractual relationship. I am currently considering the need for revised guidance on the standards of conduct in the National Health Service taking account of the recommendations in the Salmon committee report.

Benefit Statistics

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing for 1971, 1981 and the latest date for which estimates are available the number of households in the United Kingdom, with the figures broken down to distinguish between no family, one family and two or more family households, as in "Social Trends" no. 15 table 2.5 for Great Britain, but also showing whether the married couples and lone parents have one, two, three or more dependent children, with the latter defined as children aged under 16 years or 16 to 18 years in full-time education.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 26 November 1985 c. 542-44]: Further statistics on the numbers of households are now available, showing the proportionate breakdown of households by type for the United Kingdom as a whole in 1983. These are comparable to the figures for Great Britain in the last column of my reply on 26 November and take account of the results of the Continuous Household Survey in Northern Ireland.

The figures are as follows:

1983
Households	United Kingdom
One family households	Percentage
Married couple only	26
Married couple with one dependent child	11
Married couple with two dependent children	13
Married couple with three or more dependent children	6
Married couple with non-dependent children only	8
Lone parent with one dependent child	2
Lone parent with two dependent children	2
Lone parent with three or more dependent children	1
Lone parent with non-dependent children only	4
Two or more family households	1
No family households	26
Total households	100

Supplementary Benefits

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in each year since its introduction, what has been the gross and net saving from the removal from (a) 16 and 17-year olds, (b) 18 to 20-year olds supplementary benefit non-householders' rent addition; and what would be the cost of reversing these changes in a full year at 1985-86 benefit rates.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 131]: Information about the actual savings made as a result of the removal of the supplementary benefit non-householders rent addition for 16-20 year olds is not available.

The estimated gross and net costs of reversing the changes at 1985-86 benefit rates are as follows:

	Gross Cost to Supplementary Benefit £ million	Gross saving on Housing Benefit* £ million	Net cost to Supplementary Benefit and Housing Benefit £ million
(a) Restoring the non-householders rent contributions for 16 and 17 years olds	30	10	20
(b) Restoring the non-householders rent contribution for 18 to 20 year olds	60	15	45

* ie The overall reduction in housing benefit for householders which would also follow from such a change. The loss to the householder would normally precisely match the non-householder gain.

National Health Service (Revenue and Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each health district the revenue and capital expenditure in each year since 1974, expressing the figures (a) in money terms (b) adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) adjusted by the movement of National Health Service pay and prices.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 2 December 1985, c. 142]: Tables showing revenue and capital expenditure by regional health authorities in each year from 1974-75 to 1984-85 have been placed in the Library. The cash figures have been adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and by movements in NHS pay and prices for revenue and in construction prices for capital to a common 1983-84 base. Details of district health authority expenditure which are held centrally only for the years following the 1982 re-organisation have also been placed in the Library. Capital expenditure on major schemes is charged to regional health authority accounts and to that extent comparisons cannot usefully be drawn between district health authority expenditure figures. For both revenue and capital, it is inappropriate to revalue district health authority expenditure by reference to centrally assessed movements in pay and prices, because the composition of that expenditure can differ substantially from the national average. Although revenue and capital expenditure by regional health authorities has been revalued by centrally assessed movements in pay and prices, the composition of that expenditure can also differ from the national average.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what procedures are followed by district health authorities, regional health authorities and his department in the event of a contractor failing to achieve the standards laid down in a privatised cleaning, laundry or catering contract and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 18 December 1985, c. 236]: It is the responsibility of district health authorities to decide what steps need to be taken to bring the performance of contractors up to the required standards. They are expected to refer any proposals to cancel contracts to their regional health authority and the Department so that consideration can be given to whether all reasonable efforts have been made to obtain a satisfactory service.

Teaching Hospitals

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, if he will give for each region and for England in 1985-86 (a) the revenue allocations, (b) the growth addition in revenue over 1984-85 after allowing for movements in National Health Service pay and prices, (c) the service increment for teaching, (d) the capital allocation, (e) the percentage share of their weighted population entitlement and (f) the central capital contribution to major teaching hospital schemes.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 312]: The information requested is set out in the table, with the exception of (b); it will not be possible to provide this until after the end of the financial year.

1985-86

RHA	Revenue		Capital
	Revenue Allocation £000s	Service Increment £000s	*Capital Allocation £000s	RAWP allocation as per cent. of weighted population share	Central Teaching support £000s
Northern	617,301	13,068	39,037	88·7	239
Yorkshire	691,845	12,455	54,338	106·2	88
Trent	844,837	31,232	65,418	90·5	2,066
East Anglian	352,923	5,738	23,431	87·2	48
North West Thames	712,955	27,534	42,180	87·2	2,588
North East Thames	903,411	48,261	48,617	88·5	—
South East Thames	789,584	31,182	49,622	90·8	—
South West Thames	602,770	12,966	39,023	86·9	2,847
Wessex	503,853	9,186	60,945	134·2	2,034
Oxford	396,765	7,388	25,114	87·2	—

RHA	Revenue Revenue Allocation	Revenue Service Increment	Capital Allocation*	Capital RAWP allocation as per cent. of weighted population share	Central Teaching support
	£000s	£000s	£000s		£000s
South-Western	607,426	10,160	50,099	112·7	184
West-Midlands	962,044	13,926	85,375	115·9	—
Mersey	503,795	14,472	29,751	87·5	1,725
North-Western	849,811	22,265	70,433	119·6	1,560
Total	9,339,320	259,833	683,383	—	13,379

* Includes Joint Finance.

NHS Employees

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the ratio of claimants to staff in local offices of his Department (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 322]: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The following analysis refers to supplementary benefit claimants only.

No records were kept before 1983 on the number of staff employed on supplementary benefit duties.

From 1983 the ratio of staff to claimants in local offices is as follows:

	1 August 1983 Ratio	1 August 1984 Ratio	1 August 1985 Ratio
(a) Nationally	1 : 129	1 : 132	1 : 133
(b) Regions
North Eastern	1 : 133	1 : 132	1 : 135
London North	1 : 129	1 : 134	1 : 136
London South	1 : 122	1 : 123	1 : 123
Wales and South Western	1 : 131	1 : 136	1 : 138
Midlands	1 : 145	1 : 145	1 : 147
North Western	1 : 135	1 : 144	1 : 147
Scotland	1 : 108	1 : 104	1 : 103

No records are kept for claimants or staff in standard economic planning regions.

Health Statistics (Amber Valley)

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the change in the numbers of doctors, nurses and midwives in (a) Amber Valley and (b) Derbyshire between 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 322-23]: I regret that there is an error in my reply to the hon. Member.

Note 3 to the table should read:

(3) In 1980 the working week for nursing and midwifery staff was reduced from 40 hours to 37½. Part of the increase in nursing and midwifery staff is directly attributable to this change.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Industry (Costs)

Mr. Watts asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a comparison of the total cost to industry of (a) a 1 per cent. increase in interest rates, (b) a 1 per cent. increase in labour costs, (c) the rise in cost of imported materials consequent upon a 1 per cent. decline in the pound sterling dollar exchange rate and (d) the rise in cost of imported materials consequent upon a 1 per cent. fall in the trade weighted average value of the pound sterling.

Mr. MacGregor: The cost to industry of a 1 per cent. increase in labour costs is approximately £1 billion in a year. This is roughly three times as large as the cost to industry of either of the two exchange rate changes (for given dollar prices of oil and other commodities) and four times as large as the cost of a one percentage point increase in interest rates.

Johnson Matthey Bankers

Mr. Canavan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received about the Johnson Matthey Bank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: About 80 letters have been received.

United States (Taxation)

Sir William Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for the operation of the United Kingdom/United States double taxation convention in terms of the operation of the exemption from federal excise tax and for United Kingdom insurance companies operating in the United States of America of the tax reform legislation passed by the United States House of Representatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The United States tax reform bill, if passed in its present form, would remove part of the exemption presently enjoyed by British insurance companies under the United Kingdom/United States double taxation convention. We have been making strong representations to the United States Administration on the proposal. We will continue to support British insurance companies in seeking to have the relevant provision removed from the tax reform bill.

Wages

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give figures for the percentage of the wage bill paid by employers to the Exchequer for national insurance and tax under the following headings: (i) for all income levels, (ii) for incomes in excess of £12,000 per annum and (iii) for incomes less than £5,000 per annum.

Mr. Moore: The most recent information is for 1982-83. As a percentage of the wage bill (taken to include employers' national insurance contributions as well as gross pay), the amount paid over in income tax and national insurance contributions on the employee's behalf, and in employers' national insurance contributions (including the surcharge, since abolished) is estimated to have been (i) 31 per cent. (ii) 35 per cent. and (iii) 24 per cent. Employees in employment for only part of the year but earning, whilst in employment, at a weekly rate equivalent to more than £12,000 in a complete year, have been included in (ii). Correspondingly, part-year employees earning at a weekly rate equivalent to more than £5,000 in a complete year have been excluded from (iii).

Deep-discounted Securities

Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 770, on the subject of deep-discounted securities, when he intends to publish a full and detailed list of the amounts deemed by the Inland Revenue to be the issue price and interest element for each such security not issued in the United Kingdom which is subject to these provisions.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It would not be practicable to publish such a list.

Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 770, on the subject of deep-discounted securities, how he intends to determine the issue price of United States stripped securities where there is no specific date of issue and when the instruments are stripped on demand.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The rights to interest or redemption amounts from United States stripped securities are not regarded as securities issued by a company for United Kingdom tax purposes and the deep-discount legislation does not apply to them.

EC (Budget Contributions)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total net payment made by the United Kingdom to the EEC since 1 January 1973; if he will express this as a net amount per day of membership; and what estimate he has made of the comparable net daily cost in 1987.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table in the Official Report comparing the Government's estimates for local authority (a) current, (b) capital and (c) total expenditure contained in each public expenditure White Paper from 1979 to date, against the actual outturn of expenditure under these headings, and on a constant price basis.

Mr. MacGregor: Some of the information requested will be published shortly in the 1986 puublic expenditure White Paper. I shall write to the hon. Member giving the remaining material.

THE ARTS

Parks and Open Spaces

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts how many parks and open spaces are currently administered by the Arts Council.

Mr. Luce: None.

South Bank Centre

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he will give details of the qualifications of Mr. Richard Pulford, general director, administration of the South Bank Centre.

Mr. Luce: Mr. Pulford is an experienced administrator who was deputy secretary general of the Arts Council, and has been planning director for the South Bank.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what advice was sought by the Arts Council in determining the structure, staffing levels and pay of senior management for the South Bank Centre.

Mr. Luce: The Arts Council consulted the Government on its proposals.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he will list the salaries or expenses paid to members of the South Bank board since its inception; and how much is budgeted for 1986-87.

Mr. Luce: No member of the South Bank board receives a salary from the Arts Council; I will write to the hon. Member about the arrangements for expenses.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts (1) how many existing staff in the South Bank concert halls have been offered jobs following abolition of the Greater London council by the South Bank board;

(2) if he will list the positions, the salaries and the names of those so far appointed to administer the South Bank Centre following abolition of the Greater London council on 31 March.

Mr. Luce: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when he expects the Arts Council to declare its 1986-87 level of funding for the South Bank board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The Arts Council expects to indicate the level of funding for the South Bank board within the next four weeks.

Arts Council

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when he expects the Arts Council to announce its 1986-87 funding for clients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The Arts Council expects to make an announcement as soon as possible after its next meeting on 29 January.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Money (Allocation)

Mr. Nellist asked the Prime Minister if she will give similar information on identifiable grants and subsidies to local authorities to that given in her answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 12 December, Official Report, columns 712-15, for (a) Coventry, (b) Birmingham and (c) Liverpool both in cash prices and at constant 1979 prices.

The Prime Minister: The identifiable grants and subsidies paid to Coventry, Birmingham and Liverpool district councils are given in table 1 (cash prices) and table 2 (1979-80 prices). The figures are explained in the notes to tables 1 and 2.

Unemployment statistics by local authority areas are not available prior to 1983-84.

Attention is drawn to the discontinuities which result from the change in the rate support grant arrangements in 1981-82 and the introduction of housing benefit payments by DHSS in 1982-83.

Table 1—Identifiable grants and subsidies paid to Coventry, Birmingham and Liverpool district councils—Cash prices

		1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Coventry
(i) In total	£ million	71·9	87·4	80·4	84·4	108·1	102·9	103·5
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(2·0)	(3·1)	(1·5)	(2·9)	(2·8)	102·9	103·5
(ii) Per person	£	213	258	253	266	342	324	330
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	213	258	253	266	4,048	3,837	3,981
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	213	258	253	266	20,440	19,452	21,514
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,419	1,693	1,538	1,595	2,039	1,931	1,942
Birmingham
(i) In total	£ million	260·9	307·0	255·8	250·7	351·6	356·7	359·3
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(2·6)	(12·3)	(5·8)	(5·4)	(3·6)	356·7	359·3
(ii) Per person	£	241	298	251	246	347	355	358
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	241	298	251	246	3,788	3,857	3,893
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	241	298	251	246	18,419	20,218	22,089
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,510	1,746	1,437	1,409	1,991	2,031	2,046
Liverpool
(i) In total	£ million	164·0	199·1	174·8	181·7	239·9	233·5	254·0
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(5·5)	(6·5)	(6·1)	(8·0)	(6·1)	233·5	254·0
(ii) Per person	£	299	388	338	356	477	470	517
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	299	388	338	356	4,343	4,221	4,467
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	299	388	338	356	20,176	22,245	25,556
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,703	2,061	1,807	1,885	2,533	2,495	2,714

Table 2—Identifiable grants and subsidies paid to Coventry, Birmingham and Liverpool district councils—1979-80 prices

		1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Coventry
(i) In total	£ million	71·9	73·5	61·5	60·3	73·9	67·3	64·5
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(2·0)	(2·6)	(1·1)	(2·1)	(1·9)	67·3	64·5
(ii) Per person	£	213	217	193	190	234	212	205
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	213	217	193	190	2,768	2,511	2,481
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	213	217	193	190	13,978	12,728	13,408
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,419	1,425	1,176	1,139	1,395	1,263	1,210
Birmingham
(i) In total	£ million	260·9	258·4	195·6	179·1	240·5	223·4	233·9
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(2·6)	(10·4)	(4·4)	(3·8)	(2·4)	233·4	223·9
(ii) Per person	£	241	251	192	176	237	232	223
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	241	251	192	176	2,590	2,523	2,426
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	241	251	192	176	12,596	13,230	13,765
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,510	1,470	1,099	1,007	1,362	1,329	1,275
Liverpool
(i) In total	£ million	164·0	167·6	133·6	129·8	164·0	152·8	158·3
(Capital grants in brackets)	£ million	(5·5)	(5·4)	(4·6)	(5·7)	(4·2)	152·8	158·3
(ii) Per person	£	299	326	258	254	326	307	322
(iii) Per unemployed person	£	299	326	258	254	2,970	2,762	2,784
(iv) Per unemployed person under 20	£	299	326	258	254	13,798	14,556	15,926
(v) Per person of pensionable age	£	1,703	1,735	1,382	1,347	1,732	1,633	1,691

Notes to Tables 1 and 2

1. Table 1 gives information at cash prices. Table 2 gives the same figures converted to 1979-80 prices using the GDP deflator.
2. The figures include rate support grant, housing subsidies, housing benefit, specific revenue grants and capital grants. Capital grants are not available however for 1984-85 and 1985-86. The amounts included for capital grants in the totals for the earlier years are shown in brackets under line (i) of the information for each authority.

3. The figures included for rate support grant are affected by the change which occurred in 1981-82 when block grant and domestic rate relief grant superseded the needs, resources and domestic elements. Figures prior to 1981-82 are not on a comparable basis.

4. Up to 1982-83 the figures include rent and rate rebates paid by the DOE. The 1982-83 figures also include some housing benefits paid by the DHSS. Thereafter, all housing benefits were paid by the DHSS.

5. The figures only include grants and subsidies to the three authorities and do not include any payments to persons, companies or other organisations within the areas administered by them. Information on the latter is not readily available. If such payments could be included, the figures would be very much larger.

6. The figures also exclude any proportion of the grants to the upper tier authorities within whose areas these authorities are located.

7. Estimates of population figures for use in calculating lines (ii) and (v) of the information for each authority were obtained from OPCS. 1984-85 figures have been used as estimates for 1985-86.

8. The figures in lines (iii) and (iv) for each authority are based on unemployment data from the Department of Employment. These are not available before 1983-84. Figures for unemployed persons under 20 have been used in place of those for persons under 21, which are not available.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) when the Government first learned that Westlands was in financial difficulties; and when they first intervened in the process of finding a solution to the difficulties;

(2) whether she will publish in the Official Report particulars of the initiatives taken by the Government over the past 12 months to save Westland helicopters together with the representations made to foreign governments and foreign firms, showing the relevant dates.

The Prime Minister: It was known throughout 1985 that Westland faced potential financial difficulties. Westland approached a number of British and European companies to see whether an association with them could provide a solution to its problems, but without success. When it became known that Westland had received proposals from United Technologies and Fiat, the Government agreed that the then Secretary of State for Defence should explore further the possibility of an alternative association with Aerospatiale, MBB and Augusta becoming available for consideration by the board of Westland. The then Secretary of State for Defence accordingly had a number of contacts with his opposite numbers in France, Germany and Italy during November and December.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether the disclosures made by the Secretary of State for Defence concerning Cabinet and other discussions concerning the future of the British helicopter industry are to be referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

The Prime Minister: That is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister what is her policy towards the intervention of the European Commission in the Westland case; under what authority the commission acted when threatening Westland with loss of contracts in the event of it establishing a link with Sikorski and Fiat; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Commission has made clear that there is no Commission decision or policy on Westland, and that it has no intention of intervening in a private decision.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) further to her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland helicopters, whether she will publish in the Official Report particulars of the contributions which would be expected from Her Majesty's Government in the case of each of the existing and prospective future European collaborative projects to which she refers; whether and to what extent letters of intent would be signed within the lifetime of this Government; and what would be the extent of the commitment in terms of money and numbers of helicopters;

(2) whether she will publish in the Official Report a list of the existing and future European collaborative projects together with the stage which each has reached, the role and actual or prospective work load assigned to Westland and the number of helicopters ordered by each of the countries concerned or for which a requirement has been indicated; and what is the Government's estimate of the resultant minimum and maximum annual work load for Westland in terms of (a) design and development and (b) production.

The Prime Minister: A commitment has been entered into between Italy and the United Kingdom for the development of the EH101 anti-submarine helicopter. Production orders for the two nations are expected to amount to 90 military aircraft but contracts will not be placed in the near future. Development is being shared equally between the United Kingdom and Italy but obviously I cannot predict what the production share will be.

A memorandum of understanding in which the United Kingdom is participating on equal terms with France, Germany, Italy and the Netherlands governing the feasibility study of the NATO transport and anti-submarine helicopter for the 1990s (NH 90) was signed in September 1985. There is at present no commitment to future development or production on the part of any nation.

Negotiations with Italy and the Netherlands on a battlefield helicopter, a development of the existing Italian A129 helicopter, have been under way for some time. The industries of all three nations have been planning to be involved in the studies which would follow signature of a memorandum of understanding, whose preparation is well advanced. Recently, the possibility of amalgamating this project with the comparable Franco-German PAH2 has been suggested.

I cannot at this stage comment on the future levels of financial commitment, work load or aircraft requirements in either the transport/anti-submarine or light attack helicopter categories.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) whether, if the Westland shareholders reject the European consortium proposals for investment in the company, she will make it her policy to dismiss the Secretary of State for Defence;

(2) whether she will now make it her policy to dismiss the Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Defence.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether the letter sent by the Secretary of State for Defence to Lloyd's Bank International regarding investment in Westlands represents Government policy.

The Prime Minister: The then Secretary of State's letter of 3 January to the managing director of Lloyd's Merchant Bank was confined to questions relating to his responsibilities for defence procurement.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) further to her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland helicopters, whether she will make it her policy that no orders will be placed for production models unless and until it can be shown that the military requirement can be met at an acceptable cost and that the European consortium is also the most cost-effective source of supply, in the event that Westland accept the European consortium proposal;

(2) further to her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland helicopters, whether she will list in the Official Report the considerations which will be taken into account in deciding which helicopter comes from the most cost effective source; what weight will be given to the reduction in public revenue and the increase in public expenditure which would result from a loss of jobs in the United Kingdom; and whether contracts for the supply of the military helicopters will be open to tender on a specification which will admit competition from the United States of America as well as European firms;

(3) what is the Government's policy regarding discrimination against United States suppliers of defence materials.

The Prime Minister: As I said in the letter to which the hon. Member refers, Government policy will remain that the United Kingdom should procure its helicopters from the most cost-effective source. Our policy is to secure the best long term value for money on a national basis in procuring the equipment which the armed forces need for their tasks. Accordingly we buy British whenever it is sensible, economic and consistent with our international obligations to do so, and acquire from overseas only when the advantages of cost, performance and time scale outweigh the longer term benefits of procuring the British alternative. The criteria used in deciding the source of our requirements are set out in the 1983 open government document "Value for Money in Defence Procurement".

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister, further to her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland helicopters, whether any of the Governments and companies belonging to the European consortium have collaborated with the United States Government and/or United States firms on defence projects in the aircraft field; and whether he will publish particulars in the Official Report.

The Prime Minister: Collaboration in development and production is widespread in the aircraft and associated equipment field. Examples for some of the companies to which the hon. Member refers include:

British Aerospace:
Harrier AV8A, AV8B, GR5; Hawk for USN; all with McDonnell Douglas.

Agusta:
Licence build of various United States helicopters (Boeing Chinook, Bell 212 and 412, and Sikorsky S61N) before turning to in-house design and development (A109, A129)

MBB:
Manufacture and assembly of Phantom for German air force.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether the Government were aware before 29 November that an agreement was to be signed in London on that date between Lloyds International Bank and two companies owned by foreign Governments to form a consortium to seek a major shareholding in Westland.

The Prime Minister: I understand that Aerospatiale and MBB formally appointed Lloyds Merchant Bank to advise them on 5 November. The Government were made aware of the appointment shortly after.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) whether the Governments which made the threats against Westland communicated these threats to Her Majesty's Government; whether this was done before the threats were made public; what was the reaction of Her Majesty's Government to these threats; and if she will publish the terms of any communication she has sent to the Governments concerned expressing the Government's views on the matter;

(2) which European Governments and companies have indicated that a number of projects in which Westland is expecting to participate with other European companies may be lost to Westland if the United Technologies/Fiat proposals are accepted; to whom the indications have been given and in what form; and if the Government will make it its policy to institute proceedings before the European Court of Justice in respect of any action by any of the Governments or companies concerned which would discriminate against Westland on the grounds that it had accepted help from a non-European firm.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my letter of 1 January to Sir John Cuckney, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

No doubt the Governments and companies will be considering the position further once Westland's shareholders have reached a decision.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland was written in the knowledge that the Secretary of State for Defence would be writing to Lloyds Bank International on the same matter.

The Prime Minister: The then Secretary of State for Defence's letter was written in response to a letter of 3 January from the managing director of Lloyds Merchant Bank.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the future survival of Westland helicopters;

(2) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards maintenance of a complete helicopter manufacturing facility in the United Kingdom which would not be dependent on supplies from the Continent in time of war; and to what extent this will be realised in the case of the proposals put forward by the European consortium and by Sikorsky-Fiat, respectively.

The Prime Minister: The Government would wish to see a United Kingdom helicopter design, development and manufacturing capability maintained if possible. As a private sector company, it is for Westland to decide the best route to follow to secure its future and that of its employees.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether the Government intend to make it a condition for placing an order for helicopters with a European consortium that no shares in any of the companies concerned will be bought by an American company.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister, further to her letter dated 1 January to Sir John Cuckney concerning the future of Westland helicopters, whether, in the event of Westland agreeing to collaborate with the consortium on joint projects, the company will be given access to finance on the same scale and on no less favourable terms than the other participants; and whether the Government will make it their policy to protect Westland from unfair competition from foreign state-controlled and state-supported companies.

The Prime Minister: Westland will continue to have the same eligibility for Government support as other United Kingdom companies in the private sector.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) whether Her Majesty's Government are satisfied that the Governments and companies which have threatened to discriminate against Westland will not use their position in the consortium to transfer output and employment from the United Kingdom to the Continent in the event that the European consortium offer to Westland is accepted: and what safeguards have been agreed to seek to ensure that this will not happen;

(2) what she estimates would be the value of the work which would be put at risk for Westland if it collaborates with Sikorsky-Fiat; and if she will publish in the Official Report the basis on which the calculation was made.

The Prime Minister: The Government will resist to the best of their ability any attempts by others to discriminate against Westland just as they would resist attempts to discriminate against any British company. The commercial arrangements between Westland and companies which may become shareholders in it are a matter for Westland and the other companies concerned.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister what representations have been made by the Italian Government concerning the Sikorsky-Fiat proposals; what part Fiat would play in these proposals; and if the threats to Westland have been extended to Fiat by the Governments and companies referred to in her letter to Sir John Cuckney dated 1 January.

The Prime Minister: The Italian Government indicated on a number of occasions, most recently on 7 January, a clear position in favour of strengthening of European collaboration and maintaining and developing collaborative programmes. Within this framework they would prefer the European consortium's proposals. The role of Fiat in the event of the United Technologies/Fiat proposals being accepted is a matter for the companies.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will institute an inquiry into the publication of recent correspondence between the Solicitor-General and the Secretary of State for Defence; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 19 December, if Her Majesty's Government have conditionally approved the purchase of six additional Sea King helicopters from the Westland company in the event of it accepting the financial offer from the European consortium; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer being given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown).

Civil Servants (Armstrong Memorandum)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister (1) if she will amend the Armstrong memorandum of guidance on conduct for civil servants to cover the situation where there is a conflict of opinion between the head of the civil servants' Department and the Prime Minister; and if she will make a statement;

(2) whether she will clarify the terms of the memorandum sent by the head of the Civil Service to Departments after the Ponting Case on the relationship between civil servants and Ministers to cover the kind of briefing of the Press which has taken and is taking place in the Westland affair.

The Prime Minister: I see no need to clarify or amend the terms of that note of guidance.

Channel Fixed Link

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister what assumption Her Majesty's Government have made about the extent to which a Channel tunnel would be usable in time of war; and what measures will be taken to ensure that the relevant specialised shipping is available in time of need if the Channel tunnel is built.

The Prime Minister: It is not our practice to reveal details of our wartime plans.

United States (Trade Deficit)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will publish in the Official Report details of the United States trade deficit in manufactures with France, Italy and West Germany for the most recent period of 12 months for which figures are available; and how this compares with the United States surplus with each of the countries on defence equipment.

The Prime Minister: The United States trade deficit in manufactures for 1984 with the countries mentioned was as follows:

	$ billion
France	2·5
Germany	10·2
Italy	4·7

Information on certain items of defence equipment is confidential and on others is not separately identified. It is therefore not possible to give complete figures for the United States trade balance in defence equipment with each country.

United States (Defence Suppliers)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards dependence on supplies of arms and war material from the United States of America.

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy on defence equipment collaboration is fully set out in paragraphs 312 to 321 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985 (Cmnd. 9430-1).

European Council (Report)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she has yet received from the Commission the report requested by the meeting of the European Council in Fontainebleau in 1984 about a People's Europe; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Committee on a People's Europe delivered a first report in March 1985 and a second in June. These were considered by the Brussels and Milan European councils, as I reported to the House on 2 April and 2 July last year.

European Assembly (Proposals)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on the proposals by the European assembly for the creation of a European anthem, a European flag, a Euro-TV channel, the formulation of tax systems and the establishing of offices for receiving complaints about Europe, which proposals were made in response to the Fontainebleau Council of Ministers proposals of 1984.

The Prime Minister: These are expressions of view by the European Assembly. There has been no change in the Government's position since the European Council considered the report of the People's Europe Committee in June 1985. The issue of tax approximation was remitted by the European Council to Finance Ministers for further study. No consideration has been given by member Governments to the idea of complaints offices.

Urban Priority Areas (Church Commission)

Mr. Rooker asked the Prime Minister if she will list the rank and Department of civil servants loaned or seconded by Her Majesty's Government to the Archbishop of Canterbury's Commission on urban priority areas.

The Prime Minister: Mr. J. N. Pearson was seconded from the Department of the Environment to be secretary of the commission. His rank was principal up to 1 January 1985, on which date he was promoted to grade 5.

Airport Security

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister if she will state the number of occasions on which military personnel have been involved in exercises at Heathrow airport in each of the past five years; on whose proposal such exercises are undertaken; and which other airports in Great Britain have been involved in similar exercises in each of the past five years.

The Prime Minister: The number of routine security exercises involving the deployment of troops at Heathrow airport in each of the past five years is as follows. A similar exercise was held at Gatwick airport in 1983. The exercises are held at the request of the chief officer of police responsible for the policing of the airports.

	Number
1981	3
1982	4
1983	6
1984	6
1985	7

Company Takeovers

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister on what basis Ministers intervene in the complete or partial take over of one company by another.

The Prime Minister: Under the Fair Trading Act 1973 it is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to consider, in the light of advice from the Director General of Fair Trading, whether to refer any qualifying merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

DEFENCE

Falkland Islands

47. Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many ferry ships accompanied the task force to the Falkland Islands; and what part they played in the hostilities.

Mr. Stanley: Initially, six ferries (Baltic Ferry, Nordic Ferry, Europic Ferry, St. Edmund, Elk and Norland) accompanied the task force. They were needed to carry troops and their support equipment. The Tor Caledonia followed with stores and vehicles but arrived after hostilities had ceased.

The Europic Ferry and the Norland were used to carry troops for the first landings at San Carlos. The remaining troops and stores were disembarked over the next few days at San Carlos and Ajax bay.

Airfields

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, for all airfields in the United Kingdom owned or substantially used by his Department, all buildings which are frequently used or occupied by more than 1,000 members of the public for recreational purposes and which are within two miles of the airfield perimeter.

Mr. Lee: The public are admitted to airfields owned by my Department for various purposes, including air displays such as the Farnborough air show, open days and sporting events, but we have no knowledge of the purposes to which buildings beyond our perimeter are put. That is a matter for the local planning authority concerned.

Bolton and Bury (Defence Establishments)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence further to the answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 97, if he will list the number of people employed in each of the five defence establishments in Bolton and Bury.

Mr. Lee: The number of people employed in each of the five defence establishments in Bolton and Bury is as follows:

	Number of personnel
Bolton
Army Careers Information Centre	3
TAVRA Centre	4
Bury
TAVRA Centre	*5½
Army Regimental Headquarters	5
Army Training Camp and Area, Holcombe Moor	5

*Part-time employees are counted as half.

South Africa (Lecturers)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of any lecturer at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, who, within the last five years, has undertaken lecturing or other teaching engagements in South African universities in his capacity as a lecturer at Sandhurst.

Mr. Lee: No lecturer at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, has undertaken lecturing or other teaching engagements in South African universities in his capacity as a lecturer at Sandhurst in the last five years.

Southern Industrial Pay Office

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if it remains his intention to proceed with the proposals to create a southern industrial pay office to cover the whole of the south of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The expansion of CPRO Portsmouth to create a southern industrial pay office commenced in 1984 and will be completed in 1986 although the original plans have been modified because of the intention to introduce commercial management into the royal dockyards as explained in my letter to the hon. Member dated 11 December 1985.

Civil Defence

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any information about arrangements made under the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication agreement is made available to county emergency planning officers in Cheshire, Merseyside, Greater Manchester or Lancashire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: Information about the arrangements made under the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement is generally classified and it would not be in the public interest to detail its circulation.

13 Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many former members of 13 Signals Regiment have been discharged since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: According to our records, of those serving in 13 Signals Regiment on or after 3 February 1984 77 have been discharged from that regiment since that date.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many former members of 13 Signals Regiment have been discharged before completion of their engagement since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: According to our records, of those serving in 13 Signals Regiment on or after 3 February 1984 43 have since then been discharged from that regiment before completion of their engagement.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of 13 Signals Regiment are yet to be discharged before completion of their engagement.

Mr. Lee: Two members of 13 Signals Regiment are in the process of being discharged before completing their engagement and applications for discharge from a further three are currently being considered.

9 Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers of 9 Signals Regiment have been discharged since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: According to our records, of those officers serving in 9 Signals Regiment on or after 3 February 1984 five have left the service since that date, two at their own request and three on completion of their short service commission.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers of 9 Signals Regiment have been subjected to interrogation since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: Some 15 officers provided statements of evidence as part of the investigation into the alleged breaches of security at 9 Signals Regiment. A large number were interviewed but not required to provide such statements, and it would not now be possible to establish this figure precisely without disproportionate cost and effort.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many of the 300 service men who have provided statements of evidence as part of the investigation into alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Act at 9 Signals Regiment have been discharged since 3 February 1984;

(2) how many of the 300 service men who have provided statements of evidence as part of the investigation into the alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Act at 9 Signals Regiment (a) are awaiting discharge, (b) have been discharged and (c) have been discharged prematurely or are to be discharged prematurely.

Mr. Lee: This information could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many senior non-commissioned officers of 9 Signals Regiment have been subjected to interrogation since 3 February 1984.

Mr. Lee: Ninety seven senior non-commissioned officers provided statements of evidence as part of the investigation into the alleged breaches of security at 9 Signal Regiment. A large number were interviewed but not required to provide such statements, and it would not now be possible to establish this figure precisely without disproportionate cost and effort.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 83 service men prematurely discharged from 9 Signals Regiment have been subjected to interrogation since 3 January 1984.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply shortly.

RAF Personnel

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to the answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 252, whether a decision has been made yet on the future of Senior Aircraftsman Alan Lightower, Senior Aircraftsman Wayne Kriehn, Senior Aircraftsman Gwynfor Owen and Senior Aircraftsman Geoffrey Jones.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen have been subjected to interrogation since 3 February 1984 by Flight Sergeant Mason and Flight Sergeant Sheehan.

Mr. Lee: This information is not available.

Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether members of the armed forces of (i) Honduras, (ii) Guatemala and (iii) El Salvador have received training in his Department's establishments in the United Kingdom since August 1983.

Mr. Stanley: No, but El Salvador may receive some training in the United Kingdom in 1986.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether British troops stationed in Belize have provided training to members of the armed forces of (i) Honduras, (ii) Guatemala and (iii) El Salvador since August 1983.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Warships

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what saving the Government would expect to make if the warships now on order in British shipyards were built in German shipyards.

Mr. Lee: It is not the Government's policy to place orders for warships overseas.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the letter to him, dated 3 January, from Mr. Horne was received; when it was sent; and whether he had prior knowledge of the dispatch of the letter or its terms.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence who convened the meeting of the armaments directors of the United Kingdom, Germany, Italy and France in London on or around the afternoon of 29 November 1985; what proposals were discussed; and from whom each proposal originated.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The former Secretary of State, after consultation with Dr. Woerner convened the meeting. The armaments directors' unanimous recommendations resulted from a review of policies pursued since 1978 in the field of helicopter collaboration.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence who convened the meeting of senior executives of Agusta, Aerospatiale and Messerschmidt-Bolkow-Blohm in London on or around 29 November 1985; what proposals were considered at the meeting; and from whom each proposal originated.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The meeting originated in a request from Aerospatiale and MBB to my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Defence. He accepted this request just as he had previously agreed to see representatives of Sikorsky. At his suggestion Agusta were also invited to attend. After the three companies had met my right hon. Friend, and he had left for another engagement outside London, they had, I understand, a meeting with Lloyds Merchant Bank out of which their proposals emerged.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) further to his letter dated 3 January to Mr. Horne, whether he will publish in the Official Report full details of the indications given by the other Governments concerned in each of the three projects of their intention to withdraw from collaboration with Westland if the company decides to collaborate with Sikorsky and Fiat on the production of a helicopter;

(2) which of the Governments or firms in question took the initiative in forming the consortium which is bidding for a shareholding in Westland; and when and by whom the Government were first appraised of their intention;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report details of the battlefield helicopter on which the United Kingdom has been intending to proceed with a feasibility study with Italy; what provision has been made for buying this helicopter, and at what cost in the long-term United Kingdom defence expenditure plans; which of the other Governments in the consortium have expressed an interest in buying the helicopter when developed and at what cost; and what is the value of the work for Westland;

(4) whether he will publish in the Official Report particulars showing the terms on which the Government would be invited to buy the proposed European helicopter; whether and to what extent the price would include payment for the development to date of the A129 and the PAH2; and if he will state the amount spent on the development to date;

(5) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards buying arms and equipment from United Kingdom firms wholly or partly owned by United States firms; whether there has been any recent change in this policy; and if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the major United Kingdom defence contractors which are wholly or partly owned by United States firms;

(6) whether the Government are satisfied that the United Kingdom service requirement for which the new European helicopter is designed could not be met from United States sources at a competitive price; and whether the Government propose to enter into any contractual commitment which would prevent the United Kingdom buying a competitor helicopter at some future date;

(7) whether the general policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the purchase of helicopters from the proposed European consortium is based on the cost-benefit for the United Kingdom as well as on the strategic implications; and if he will publish in the Official Report the costs and benefits of each alternative as well as the strategic implications;

(8) which of the Governments and companies concerned have said they will take part in the NH90 helicopter development, and which have said that they will withdraw, if Westland collaborates with Sikorski-Fiat; and what claims Westland or Her Majesty's Government would have under the terms of the agreement if the agreement is denounced.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister earlier today.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) further to his letter, dated 3 January, to Mr. Horne, whether the Italian Government or Agusta have said that in the event of a link-up between Westland and Sikorsky-Fiat they will not proceed with the full development of the 13 tonne (EH 101) helicopter launched in 1984; which other countries would be interested in replacing Westland in this bilateral arrangement; whether any United Kingdom defence procurement interest would be jeopardised; and what claims Westland or the British Government would have under the terms of the agreement against Agusta if the agreement was denounced on the Italian side;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report details of the 13 tonne class (EH 101) helicopter being developed by Westland and Agusta; what requirement for each of the armed services in the United Kingdom would be met by this helicopter; how many machines would be purchased by the United Kingdom and Italian Governments and at what cost; whether comparable machines are available or under development in the United States of America; whether the Agusta-Westland machine would be cheaper than a comparable United States machine; and whether the complete machine would be made in the United Kingdom independently of components made in Italy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his letter, dated 3 January, to Mr. Horne, if he will give particulars to the 8-9 tonne helicopter (NH90) concerning which there is a memorandum of understanding; to what extent the five Governments are committed to develop this helicopter and to buy the machine when developed; what use the United Kingdom has for this helicopter; when it is expected to be in operation; how much of the development work will be in the United Kingdom; how much of the complete helicopter will be made in the United Kingdom; what is the amount of work which has been given to Westland under this project to date; and what future commitments of work have been made to Westland.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A memorandum of understanding covering the 14-month feasibility study into the NATO transport/anti-submarine helicopter for the 1990s was signed by France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and United Kingdom in September 1985. At this stage nations are only committed to take part in the feasibility study and will take a decision on whether to proceed to a further phase once the results of the feasibility study have been evaluated. The NH90 helicopter is likely to be of a size and configuration which could make it a contender to meet a United Kingdom light support helicopter requirement. Work during the feasibility study is shared on an equal basis between the five industries; no industrial plans have been made at this stage for any possible later phases.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards the purchase of the improved version of the Agusta A129 anti-tank helicopter; how this helicopter compares with the nearest equivalent produced by (a) Sikorsky and (b) any other United States company; what would be the cost in each case; how much of the improved Agusta A129 helicopter represents United Kingdom technology; and how much would be built in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Collaborative development of the A129 LAH is one of the options for meeting the Army's requirement for an anti-tank helicopter for the 1990s. Although it is envisaged that the A129 LAH would be an advanced helicopter, using the latest technology, the configuration, cost and industrial arrangements await the results and evaluation of a feasibility study. There is no equivalent helicopter currently produced by Sikorsky or any other American company, although a number of American companies are competing to develop an aircraft to meet the US service requirement for a light anti-tank helicopter to enter service in the 1990s.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence which of the three helicopter projects referred to in his letter dated 3 January to Mr. Horne would be an amalgam of the A129 and PAH2 helicopters.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The five-nation collaborative battlefield helicopter.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish for each of the three proposed collaborative helicopter projects referred to in his letter to Mr. Horne of 3 January the location of the relevant manufacturing plants.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The location of the principal plants of the companies participating in the NH90 project, which involves the largest number of countries in a European helicopter programme, is as follows:

France
Germany
Italy
United Kingdom
Netherlands
Marseilles
Munich
Milan
Yeovil
Amsterdam

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much he estimates will be saved in the defence budget if Westland joins the proposed European consortium to produce a battle helicopter; and if he will publish the Official Report the basis on which the calculation was made.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I have given today to a question from the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown).

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether, in considering the proposals for joint development of a battle helicopter, the Government took into account the effect of this on the design capability of Westland Helicopters; and if he will make a statement showing the extent to which the proposed new helicopter relies on design work already done on the A129 and the PAH2 together with the Government's estimate of the share of the design work, including work already done, which will accrue to Westland;

(2) what part Westland has played in developing the A129 and PAH2 helicopters; and what share Westland would get in designing the new helicopter if they agree to join the European consortium;

(3) how many man hours of work have already been done on the design and development of the helicopter which is to be built by a European consortium, and in which countries; how many more hours need to be done and how much would be done in the United Kingdom if Westland agreed to take part; and where the pre-production models would be built;

(4) what military characteristics are lacking in the A129 and PAH2 helicopters which will not be lacking in the proposed consortium helicopter; when the new helicopter will be available for battlefield use and how this compares with delivery dates for the A129 and PAH2, respectively; and whether the characteristics required can be found in a helicopter being built or developed in the United States of America;

(5) whether the European consortium has undertaken to supply a battle helicopter within a given price range regardless of cost; who will bear the development costs; and what information he has as to the price for a comparable United States helicopter;

(6) who is to provide the development finance for the helicopter to be built by the European consortium bidding for Westland; how much will be contributed directly or indirectly by the United Kingdom Government; whether a ceiling would be set on the United Kingdom contribution; and whether the United Kingdom will be free to purchase helicopters elsewhere if the proposed helicopter does not meet its specification or is not delivered on time.

(7) what proportion of the existing staff would be employed on work on the helicopter to be built by a European consortium in the event of the company agreeing to take part in the project;

Mr. Norman Lamont: The A129 anti-tank helicopter is an Italian project designed and built by Agusta and due to enter full production shortly. The PAH2 anti-tank helicopter is a Franco-German project, designed by Aerospatiale and MBB, due to begin full development this year and enter service in the early 1990s. Westland has not been involved in the development of either helicopter.

Over the past year discussions have been taking place between Italy, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom about the possibility of developing the A129 collaboratively to produce an advanced A129 LAH, to enter service in the mid-1990s; these negotiations have yet to be concluded.

Defence Ministers from France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom indicated in December their desire to see a single European anti-tank helicopter project, which would combine elements of A129 LAH and PAH2. It is too early to say what, if any, of the elements of the A129 LAH and PAH2 programmes would be brought into a combined European programme or to comment on future levels of workshare, costs or numbers of aircraft from any future sole European collaborative anti-tank helicopter programme.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government have considered the strategic implications of the offer by a consortium of continental European manufacturers to buy a 29·9 per cent. stake in Westland Helicopters; and whether the Government have sought and obtained a guarantee that the battle helicopter which is to replace the A129 and PAH2 will not be dependent on sub-assemblies and components manufactured outside the United Kingdom, in the event that the European consortium offer to Westland is accepted.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The implications for procurement strategy in this field have been fully considered. The specific arrangements for the battlefield helicopter project will be for consideration in the light of the outcome of decisions by the Westland shareholders on the future of the company. It is a feature of most collaborative projects that, in order to obtain the benefits of scale in production, the participants depend upon each other's industry for components and sub-assemblies: Tornado and EH101 are examples.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what part he or his officials played in the discussions, finalised on 29 November, leading to the formation of the European consortium which is seeking a stake in Westland.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Senior representatives of the European companies met my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Defence, and Ministry of Defence officials on 29 November 1985. Ministry of Defence officials have provided factual information on the Department's plans for future helicopter procurement. Westland has been regularly provided with similar information as part of the routine liaison between the Department and its main helicopter supplier.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the nature and purpose of the NH90 project; what the letters NH convey; and why he told the Lloyd's Merchant Bank that a United States stake in Westland would be incompatible with participation by that company in the NH90 project.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister earlier today.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence how Her Majesty's Government intend to implement the assurances given by the Prime Minister to the board of Westland plc regarding that company's future participation in European projects.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We shall seek on all occasions to persuade our European partners of the advantages of Westland's participation in helicopter projects of mutual interest.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government considered the range, characteristics and estimated cost of the helicopters currently and prospectively available in examining the case for purchasing supplies from a European consortium; and if he will publish this information in the Official Report.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My Department keeps itself informed of the operational characteristics and estimated cost of helicopters which might potentially satisfy the needs of the armed services.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government considered the merits of the AST404 helicopter compared to the NH90 for supply to the British Army; what are the main fighting and other characteristics of each; what was the estimated United Kingdom content of each; and what was the estimated cost in each case before and after taking account of other costs and benefits.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The comparison the hon. Member is seeking is between a Ministry of Defence staff target and a specific helicopter project which is currently the subject of international feasibility study. No answer is therefore possible on the basis requested.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied his policy on United States collaboration with Westland will not affect the willingness of the United States to place contracts for strategic defence initiative work in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have no reason to suppose that decisions on the future of Westland will affect the placing of SDI work.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has examined the financial position of Agusta; how this compares with that of Westland; and what assessment he has made of the implications for each of these companies of a Westland link up with Sikorsky and Fiat.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Agusta, in common with other Western helicopter manufacturers, has experienced difficulties stemming from the stagnation of the world helicopter market following a period of growth in the 1970s. I understand that it is the intention of the Italian Government to sustain Agusta as a centre for the design, development and production of modern helicopters.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government are satisfied that other EEC countries would be willing to supply helicopters to the United Kingdom for use in the Falklands should hostilities recommence.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made to the Governments of France, Italy and Germany before 29 November last to persuade them to take a shareholding directly or indirectly in Westland helicopters in return for a commitment by the United Kingdom to buy a continental helicopter.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what rates of exchange were used to cost the various options open to his Department for the purchase of helicopters; and what effect there would be if the costings were all adjusted to current rates of exchange.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government will give an undertaking that helicopters purchased from the European consortium will be built in the United Kingdom in the event of Westland agreeing to join the consortium.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The implications for procurement strategy in this field have been fully considered. The specific arrangements for the battlefield helicopter project will be for consideration in the light of the outcome of decisions by the Westland shareholders on the future of the company. It is a feature of most collaborative projects that, in order to obtain the benefits of scale in production, the participants depend upon each other's industry for components and sub-assemblies: Tornado and EH101 are examples.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether, in the negotiations leading up to the European consortium proposals for a share stake in Westland, he made it clear to the other Governments and companies concerned that the British Government would continue to support Westland's wish to participate in joint European projects.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Yes.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government are satisfied with the terms on which Westland Helicopters would participate in a European consortium to manufacture a battle helicopter in the event of the European consortium's proposals for Westlands being accepted; whether representatives of nationalised companies in other countries will be represented on the board of Westland; how Her Majesty's Government's interests will be safeguarded; and if he will publish in the Official Report such details as he has of the ownership, turnover and production of the firms concerned.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The commercial arrangements between Westland and any companies which may acquire a shareholding in it would be for the companies themselves to decide. Her Majesty's Government's interests in specific projects would be safeguarded in the contractual and other arrangements for those projects.

No doubt the hon. Member could obtain direct from the relevant companies copies of their annual reports giving the further information he seeks.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will indicate in which year he anticipates being able to place the order for six Westland Sea King helicopters if the projected saving of £25 million from merging the A129 and PAH2 helicopters is achieved.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence cannot guarantee the order for six Sea Kings. However, if the plans for a five-nation battlefield helicopter project are approved, the order will be placed in late 1986, consistent with delivery in early 1990. This would apply whatever reconstruction proposals Westland's shareholders accepted.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown and details of the £25 million projected savings in overheads from the merging of the A129 and PAH2 helicopter projects.

Mr. Norman Lamont: If a battlefield helicopter were procured on a five-nation basis, the United Kingdom defence budget would expect to contribute less than to a two-nation project because the costs of development would be more widely shared. The saving in the Department's forward costings is calculated to amount to £25 million by March 1991.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement explaining where and when the recent meeting of national armaments directors of France, Germany and Italy took place at which the decision was made to purchase only helicopters built in Europe; and what steps he took to publicise the decisions made at the meeting and the implications of the decisions for defence policy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the significance of the Tornado aircraft programme to the defence of the United Kingdom; how much public money has been committed to it; and if he intends to cancel the programme in the light of the disclosure of Libyan part ownership of Fiat.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the significance of the European fighter aircraft to the defence of the United Kingdom; how much public money has been committed to it; and if he intends to cancel the programme in the light of the disclosure of Libyan part ownership of Fiat.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

NATO Costs

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total costs of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation defences were borne by the United States of America, the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available.

Mr. Stanley: The countries mentioned accounted for the following percentage of total defence spending by NATO members in 1984:

	per cent.
United States	70·6
United Kingdom	6·7
France	6·0
Germany	6·0
Italy	2·8

Notes:

(1) These figures are compiled from NATO sources, except for France. They are based on NATO definitions of defence expenditure.

(2) The United Kingdom devotes some 95 per cent. of its defence spending to NATO; comparable figures are not available for other countries.

Arms Supplies

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government are satisfied at the co-operation from the United States of America in supplying arms and equipment for use by the British forces; and if Her Majesty's Government are also satisfied with similar co-operation from Italy, France and Germany.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Yes.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the defence implications of the consequences for the ferry fleet of the proposed Channel tunnel.

Mr. Stanley: The effect of a Channel fixed link upon the ferry fleet and the consequential defence implications, are being taken fully into account in the assessment of the Channel Fixed Link proposals.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to prohibit the use of regimental funds in connection with the use of departmental property, such as horses, to participate in fox hunting.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: No. Hunting is a demanding mounted activity which brings benefit in terms of improving equestrian standards, and positive exercise and development for the horses. Regimental funds are not public funds, so the question of a prohibition does not arise.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any insurance costs arise to public funds in respect of the participation of Army (a) horses and (b) personnel in hunting activities.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: No.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence how regiments organise payments for block bookings taken out with hunts each winter; and what costs arise to public funds in this respect.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: All payments to hunts are made from non-public funds.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual cost of keeping a Cavalry, Guards or King's Troop horse; and if this is fully met from public funds.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: The average annual cost of an Army horse is about £800 which is met from public funds.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what costs arise to public funds in respect of the participation of Army staff and horses in fox hunting; and if he will give the figures for the last two seasons broken down by character of cost.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: There are no additional costs to public funds.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence when, pursuant to the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, Army horses were first permitted to ride in hunts.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: Records show that Army horses have been hunted since at least 1902, but it is believed that Army horses have participated in hunts for many years before that date.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days in the 1984-85 season the 19 Army officers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, hunted.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: Detailed records are not kept but on average each officer hunted about seven times during the season. Officers pay the entry fees for hunts from their own money.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days in the 1984-85 season any of the 25 soldiers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, actually rode to hounds.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: Detailed records are not kept but each soldier hunted about three or four times during the season. Unlike officers, soldiers do not pay entry fees to the hunts; these are paid on their behalf from regimental funds.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the duties of the 25 soldiers referred to in the answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 782, in the 1984-85 season whilst at RAVC Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: To exercise and look after the Army horses sent by London units to Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many horses from each of the Household Cavalry, Kings' Troop Royal Horse Artillery and the Guards Division were injured whilst hunting; and how many died whilst hunting or from causes directly related to hunting, in each of the last two seasons.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: During the last two seasons one horse died whilst on a hunt but its death was not directly related to hunting. No separate records are kept of injuries sustained on hunts.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence how the horses are selected to participate in hunting activities; how are the (a) officers and (b) men selected from amongst the volunteers; and how many horses have been selected in total in each of the last five years, broken down by the number of times they have been so selected.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: The horses that are selected for hunting are those which would benefit from the vigorous exercise and the teamwork involved in hunting. They tend to be the younger horses which have spent the summer on ceremonial duties in London. The officers and men selected for hunts are those who enjoy the hunts, are competent riders and are available to exercise the horses. Records are not kept of the number of times a horse has been selected for hunts during the last five years.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current usage of Land Rover registration number 64 HG 93 and Rice trailer 43 FL 94; and if he will make a statement on their use in connection with attendance at hunts in each of the last two seasons.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: Rice trailer 43 FL 94 is the property of the Guards Saddle club, having been purchased and insured by the club. Land Rover 64 HG 93 is the only military transport used by the personnel from the Household Division involved in the winter training at Melton Mowbray. It is used to collect forage, transport soldiers and tow a horse box. Money is recovered from the Guards Saddle club, appropriate to the distance travelled, and if the vehicle is used for taking horses to meets.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence who owns the vehicles used to transport horses to hunt meetings; and who is responsible for the fuel and other running costs.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: With the exception of one military Land Rover which amongst its other duties is sometimes used to take horses to meets, all vehicles used to convey Army horses to hunts are privately owned by the units concerned. Fuel and maintenance costs for these vehicles are met from regimental funds. In the case of the military Land Rover a recovery of cost is made from the unit's saddle club funds when the vehicle is used to transport horses to meets.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of Army horses spend their winter at RAVC Melton Mowbray; what exercise and training the remaining horses receive and where; and why they do not participate in hunting there.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: About 25 per cent. of the Army horses spend the winter at Melton Mowbray. Horses which do not go to Melton Mowbray for winter exercising tend to be: horses which are unlikely to benefit significantly from winter exercising, usually the more mature horses; horses needed for ceremonial duties; horses needed for riding instruction in London. All horses that are based in London are exercised regularly, for varying durations, in Hyde park; some horses from the Household Cavalry are also sent to Sopley, Hampshire for two weeks winter exercising.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards soldiers at RAVC Melton Mowbray concealing their fox hunting activities there from other Army visitors to the centre.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: No attempt is made to conceal this activity from Army visitors to the centre.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what duties soldiers from the Guards Division would be employed on if they were not acting as grooms for fox hunting at RAVC Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 379-80]: They would be exercising and looking after Army horses or undertaking equestrian training.

Bases and Facilities

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the location by parliamentary constituency of (a) all Royal Air Force facilities in the United Kingdom and (b) all United States bases and facilities in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 November 1985, c. 577]: The following two communications facilities were omitted in error from the list of bases and facilities used by the United States Forces in the United Kingdom which I gave in my previous reply:

Communications Facility	Constituency
RAF Swingate	Dover
RAF Thurso	Caithness and Sutherland

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 14 January 1986

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Phoenix II

Mr. Parris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about Phoenix II, the proposed engineering steels joint venture between the British Steel Corporation and Guest, Keen and Nettlefold.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government announced on 7 August 1985 their agreement in principle that Phoenix II should go ahead, as a joint venture company combining BSC's special steels businesses and GKN's special steels and forgings operations. Agreement has now been reached on a number of major outstanding issues, which should enable the new company, to be called United Engineering Steels, to start trading on 1 April 1986.

BSC and GKN will both contribute fixed assets, stocks and cash to the new company. As part of these arrangements the Government have approved the provision of funds for BSC to subscribe £55 million for preference shares and loanstock. United Engineering Steels will be a freestanding, private sector company, and it is the firm intention of BSC and GKN as shareholders, and of the Government, that it will meet all future financial requirements without further recourse to public sector finance or guarantees. The Government approval is also on the understanding that the new company will undertake further investments, particularly in continuous casting facilities.

On the information at present before him, and in accordance with the recommendation of the Director General of Fair Trading, my right hon. and learned Friend has decided not to refer the merger of the relevant BSC and GKN activities to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. Formation of the new company is also subject to the agreement of the European Commission under the competition provisions of the treaty of Paris.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Expenditure White Paper

Mr. Lightbown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to publish the 1986 public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. MacGregor: "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89"—Cmnd. 9702, Vol I and II, will be published at 3.30 pm on Wednesday 15 January, and copies will be available in the Vote Office.

EC Budget

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to receive payment of the 1,000 million European currency units abatement agreed at Fontainebleau in June 1984 in respect of the United Kingdom's excessive net contribution to the 1984 Community budget.

Mr. Brooke: Payment of the 1,000 mecu (£604 million) was made over the period 31 December to 6 January. It could not be paid to the United Kingdom until the Community's new own resources decision had been approved by all member states in accordance with their respective national procedures. Notification of the last of the national approvals was received by the Community on 28 December. The 1,000 mecu were then paid as soon as possible thereafter. Further details are contained in a press notice issued by Her Majesty's Treasury on 7 January, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Kestrel Pension Scheme

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Attorney-General if the Director of Public Prosecutions has received any report from the police concerning allegations of fraud in connection with the Kestrel pension scheme run by Hill: Kestrel Communications Limited; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: These allegations were the subject of a report to the Director of Public Prosecutions by the Thames Valley police in December 1984. The Director of Public Prosecutions established a fraud investigation group to co-ordinate the investigation and the result of the inquiries is now under consideration.

St. Edward (Remains)

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Attorney-General if he has received representations about the return of the bones of Saint Edward, the Anglo Saxon martyr king, to Shaftesbury; and if he has been engaged in legal proceedings concerning the return of the bones.

The Attorney-General: I have received a number of representations on this matter from supporters of the King Edward Orthodox Trust, who wish to establish a resting place for the bones at Brookwood Cemetery, and from others who would like to see the bones returned to Shaftesbury where they were discovered. I have no plans, at present, to pursue legal proceedings concerning the return of the bones.

Commercial Counterfeiting

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Attorney-General if the remit for the investigation by the Roskill commission included the trial of cases involving commercial counterfeiting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

The remit of the fraud trials committee included all criminal proceedings arising from fraud. I would refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. Friend made today.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the stocks of beef and skimmed milk held in intervention stores in the United Kingdom at the latest convenient date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of United Kingdom and Community intervention stocks, including those of beef and skimmed milk powder, is deposited in the Library of the House and updated monthly.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost in 1984-85, and what is the estimated cost in 1985-86, of holding beef and skimmed milk in intervention stores.

Mr. Gummer: Figures for storage and other related costs are:

£'000

	1984-85 (outturn)	1985-86 (estimate)
Beef	12,552	23,769
Skimmed milk powder	2,323	924

Source: 1984-85 Appropriation Accounts, Class III, Vote 1, Subhead A1; 1985-86 Winter Supplementary Estimate, Class III, Vote 1, Subhead A1.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the cattle which produced the beef and skimmed milk currently held in intervention stores were fed on imported grain, soya, ground nuts or anchovies.

Mr. Gummer: It is not possible to ascertain on what the animals from which are derived the beef and milk products held in intervention have been fed. I have no evidence that imported groundnuts or anchovies are used in cattle feed, although soya can be a minor ingredient in cattle rations and some imported grain may be used in cattle feed in some areas of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy that beef and skimmed milk going into intervention stores do not come from cattle reared on imported grain, soya, ground nuts or anchovies, or on crops capable of being used for human consumption.

Mr. Gummer: No. Producers should continue to be free to choose the most economic way of providing feedstuffs for their livestock. It is any way not practicable nor sensible to do this.

EC (Surplus Food)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total tonnage of surplus food in European Economic Community private and public stores at the most recent date for which figures are available; what were the comparable totals on the same date in each of the previous three years; and what was the increase in such total stocks each day over the past 12 months.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of produce, including foodstuffs, in intervention and private storage in the European Economic Community on the latest available dates is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly. Information on EC stock levels at the end of December in each of the three previous years is as follows:

'000 tonnes

	1982	1983	1984	Date at which applicable in each year
European Community foodstuffs held in public intervention storage
Butter	100	692	841	31 December
Skimmed milk powder	567	990	617	31 December
Wheat	6,300	6,857	8,782	31 December
of which:
Feed	n.a.	n.a.	3,109	31 December
Bread	n.a.	n.a.	5,673	31 December
Barley	1,625	1,102	1,845	31 December
Rye	293	249	426	31 December
Durum	771	714	858	31 December
Beef	203	372	610	31 December
Olive oil	166	102	112	31 December
Oilseeds	37	0	55	31 December
Wine alcohol	n.a.	n.a.	2mhl	September
Sugar (white sugar equivalent)	0	0	88	31 December
European Community foodstuffs held in assisted private storage
Butter	237	188	107	31 December (1982 and 1983=December)
Cheese	67	91	‡100	December
Beef	26	24	275	Figures represent quantities contracted for storage under schemes operating nearest the end of each year
Pigmeat	10	22	4	31 December
Dried fruit	0	*55	*15	31 December
			†22	31 December
Table wine	38mhl	39mhl	5mhl	31 December

* 1981 crop dried grapes.
† 1982 crop dried grapes and figs suitable for distillation and animal feed.
‡ Estimated.

Figures showing the increase in stocks on a day-to-day basis over the past 12 months are not available.

Annual Review

Mr. Soames asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the 1986 annual review of agriculture.

Mr. Jopling: A White Paper setting out the conclusions of the 1986 annual review of agriculture will be laid before Parliament today. The White Paper shows that gross output in current prices is forecast to decrease about 5 per cent. from £12,550 million in 1984 to £11,883 million in 1985. Aggregate farming income during 1985 fell by 43 per cent. following the 35 per cent. increase in 1984. Farm business income, a broader based measure, declined by 25 per cent. following a 27 per cent. increase in 1984. The industry's labour productivity declined by 3 per cent. compared to an average annual growth rate of 7 per cent. over the last decade.

These adverse trends are largely the result of the exceptional weather conditions experienced in 1985 which particularly affected Scotland, Northern Ireland and the hill and upland areas of Wales and Northern England.

The cereals harvest was 4·3 million tonnes below the record level in 1984 and there were marked reductions in farming incomes in the cattle and sheep, cereals and other cropping sectors. Community policies aimed at restraining production were also contributing factors.

Live Fish (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Soames asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to make an order to permit live fish of the salmon family to enter Great Britain from Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Following extensive investigations conducted by our officials, my right hon. Friends and I have concluded that the present absolute prohibition on imports of live fish of the salmon family under section 1 of the Diseases of Fish Act 1937 should be relaxed in respect of Northern Ireland. Accordingly, we have today laid before Parliament for its approval a draft statutory instrument entitled The Importation of Live Fish of the Salmon Family Order, which would give effect to this relaxation.

The absolute prohibition under the 1937 Act on imports of live fish of the salmon family has served us well over the years and the Government intend to do nothing which would jeopardise our present relative freedom from serious fish diseases. The relaxation we propose relates only to live fish of the salmon family coming from regularly tested hatcheries in Northern Ireland. We have concluded that such a relaxation is justified because of the fish disease status of Northern Ireland and the measures it takes to secure that status. When the order comes into force movements of live fish of the salmon family from Northern Ireland to Great Britain will need to be licensed by the appropriate Fisheries Department. Licences will be issued only so long as we are satisfied as to the health status of the supplying site.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers' Pay Dispute

38. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his policy towards the reimbursement of transport costs for children who, as a result of disruption to school timetables in connection with the teachers' dispute, are obliged to travel at times of day when official school transport is not available.

Mr. Dunn: Under section 55(1) of the Education Act 1944 it is for local education authorities to judge whether it is necessary to make arrangements for facilitating the attendance of pupils at schools. Transport provided under such arrangements must be free of charge. Section 55(2) provides a discretionary power for authorities to pay the whole or part of the travel expenses in other cases.

Open University

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received the report of the Open University's visiting committee; and if he will make a statement on the Open University's allocation of grant for 1986 and the provisional allocation for 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has considered the Open University visiting committee's report. A copy has been sent to the university with a letter notifying it of its grant for 1986 and indicated grants for 1987 and 1988. Copies of the report and the grant letter have been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Pollutants (Synergistic Relationship)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the existence of a synergistic relationship between the two pollutant effects sulphur dioxide and oxides of nitrogen.

Mrs. Rumbold: Research so far indicates that these two pollutants can be synergistic in their effects in some cases but that in others their combined effects may be equal to, or less than, the effect of each independently. Further research in my Department's programme is aimed at increasing our understanding of these complex relationships.

Acid Deposition

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what freshwater bodies in the United Kingdom have become unable to support fish stocks because of acidification as a result of anthropogenic emissions of sulphur compounds; and, in each case, if a return to former viability is expected to be achieved by the end of the century, with or without liming operations.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are a number of man made and natural causes of acidification. The freshwaters where fish stocks have been most affected by acidification are mainly areas of high rainfall and acid geology in the north and west of Britain. A report by my Department's acid waters review group identifying the most susceptible areas will soon be published.

It is not possible to say whether or when the affected waters might be returned to their former biological status. Research is being carried out to investigate causes and possible remedies.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what fall there has been in the level of emission of sulphur dioxide from United Kingdom sources between 1979 and 1984.

Mrs. Rumbold: United Kingdom sulphur dioxide emissions fell from an estimated 5·34 million tonnes in 1979 to an estimated 3·54 million tonnes in 1984, a fall of 33·7 per cent.

Water (Nitrate Levels)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many reports were made to health officials by water undertakings to indicate nitrate levels in public water supplies over 50 mg; and what were the comparable figures in each of the previous three years.

Mr. John Patten: Water authorities and companies notify health authorities whenever nitrate levels in a public water supply exceed 50 mg per litre. During the first six months of 1985, 70 supplies exceeded 50 mg nitrate per litre at some time, in 1984, 81 supplies and in 1983, 82 supplies. I do not have comparable information for earlier years.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to reduce nitrate levels in public water supplies.

Mr. John Patten: No public water supply is allowed to contain nitrate levels which the Government's medical advisers consider to be a danger to public health. As a result of my Department's recent examination of applications for derogations from the nitrate standard of the EC drinking water directive, concentrations in seven supplies have been or are being reduced. A group of experts will shortly be reporting to Ministers on the scope for limiting nitrate concentrations in water sources and supplies in the longer term.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Victim Support Schemes

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached a conclusion on the possibility of providing additional funding for victim support schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Yes. I remain of the view that individual schemes should in the main be able to look to their local communities as their primary sources of funds. Such an arrangement best corresponds with the spontaneous and voluntary character of the victims support movement. I am, however, conscious that some schemes are experiencing particular financial difficulties, and I therefore propose to make £136,000 available in the financial year 1986-87 to help such schemes. This will be in addition to the grant which will continue to be paid to the National Association of Victims Support Schemes to support its headquarters work. The money will be paid to NAVSS, which will allocate grants to local schemes which are in particular need of financial assistance. I understand that NAVSS will shortly be writing to local management committees inviting applications. Victims support schemes, like other voluntary bodies, can also apply for assistance under general Government programmes such as the urban programme and the MSC voluntary projects and community programmes.

Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (Report)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on his strategy for the coming year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I am today placing copies of the Commissioner's report to me in the Library, and I am sending a copy to all right hon. and hon. Members for constituencies wholly or partly within the Metropolitan police district. I plan to meet London Members shortly to discuss the report, and I hope that the House as a whole will also have the opportunity to debate it.

I have discussed the Commissioner's report fully with him. It describes the progress made towards achieving the strategy last year, and sets a new force goal for 1986.

The Metropolitan police have been under heavy pressure for much of the past year, notably during the disturbances in September and October. Despite this the Commissioner is able to report achievements in many fields. The continued growth in the number of neighbourhood watch schemes, and the further development of community-police consultative groups is particularly welcome. Consultative groups in many parts of London now play an important part in the development of the policing policies for their areas.

The force goal for 1986 will be to improve the quality of service to the public by:

(a) The reduction of criminal opportunity through crime prevention, public contact, involvement and cooperation;

(b) (i) The enhanced detection of specific criminal offences (for example, robbery, burglary, drug misuse, racial attacks, vandalism and auto-crime) in accordance with local or centrally identified priorities; (ii) A concerted attack on organised crime and the elimination of the profits therefrom;

(c) The enhanced support, care and concern for victims of crime;

(d) Improved effectiveness both in the preservation of public tranquillity through closer community-police relations and in the policing of public disorder through better tactical control, communications, equipment and training.

I greatly welcome the new emphasis on support for the victims of crime.

The Commissioner expresses in the report his views on the manpower needs of the force. As I told the House on 21 October, I have set in hand urgent work to consider where there are specific needs for further increases in the force establishment. At the same time, I have emphasised the continuing importance of securing the most effective use of existing resources. The report gives a full account of the initiatives which the Commissioner is pursuing to this end.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the increase in the number of 14 to 17-year-olds and 17 to 21-year-olds cautioned for indictable offences between 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics of cautions are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (chapter 5 of the latest issue of 1984, Cmnd. 9621) and more detail is given in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables, Volume 4". Table S4.1(c) of the issue of the latter for 1984 shows that between 1983 and 1984 the number of cautions of those aged 14 to 16 increased by 10 per cent. and of those aged 17 to 20 by 34 per cent.

Coroners

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce legislation to consolidate the law regarding the duties of coroners.

Mr. Mellor: We have no immediate plans to do so.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of criminal offences recorded in 1985 and the number in 1978.

Mr. Mellor: Information on notifiable offences recorded by the police in England and Wales in the first three quarters of 1985 was published in "Home Office Statistical Bulletin", issue 34/85 on 11 December 1985. The number of offences in 1978 was published in the report on criminal statistics for that year (Cmnd. 7670).

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the operation of neighbourhood watch schemes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Neighbourhood watch provides an important stimulus for community involvement in practical crime prevention and I am encouraged by its continued expansion. Some 8,000 individual schemes are now operating in England and Wales, and more are planned. Schemes which are properly designed and carefully introduced can reduce local crime. The results of detailed evaluations of neighbourhood watch schemes in the Metropolitan police district, which we expect towards the end of the year, should provide further information on how to obtain the full benefit of this valuable crime prevention initiative.

Shops Bill

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will update the figures previously given for the number of representations he has received from members of the public and interested parties for and against the Shops Bill [Lords] detailing the total numbers involved; and if he will list any shopping chains that have written in favour and those against.

Mr. Waddington: We have received 27 representations in favour of the Bill since its publication and 16,292 against. The following multiple retailers have written in favour of the Bill since its publication:

Wyevale Garden Centres Limited
Notcutts Garden Centres Limited
William Stike Limited
Briggs Boot Stores.

The Co-operative Union Limited has written against.

Prevention of Terrorism

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects Sir Cyril Philips to complete his next annual report on the operation of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Sir Cyril Philips has undertaken a comprehensive programme of visits and has consulted a number of organisations interested in the operation of the prevention of terrorism legislation. Observations from other interested persons or organisations may be sent to him direct or received on his behalf by the Home Office F.4 division by 24 January. I hope to make the report public later this month.

SCOTLAND

Acid Deposition

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give figures to show the current levels of deposited acidity in grams of hydrogen ion per square metre per year, deposited non-marine sulphate, and deposited nitrate in grams of sulphur and nitrogen per square metre per year for (a) the Loch Ard area and (b) the Merrick in Galloway; and what is the number of years over which the figures are averaged;

(2) if he will publish estimates of levels of deposited acidity in grams of hydrogen ion per square metre per year and deposited non-marine sulphate and deposited nitrate in grams of sulphur and nitrogen per square metre per year for (a) the Loch Ard area, central Scotland and (b) the Merrick in Galloway for the years 1990, 1993, 1996, 1999 and 2001, respectively.

Mr. Ancram: Figures of the levels of deposited acidity in the Loch Ard area and the Merrick are not available but values can be deduced from the date published by the Department of the Environment review group on acid rain in 1983 and available from Her Majesty Stationery Office. Ranges representative of these general areas, averaged over three years 1978-1980, within which depositions may be expected to lie are set out in the table.

	Wet Deposition		Dry Deposition
	Loch Ard	Merrick	Loch Ard	Merrick
Hydrogen ion (gH^+m^{-2} $year^{-1}$)	0.05-0.1	0.05-0.1	—	—
Sulphate (gSm^{-2} $year^{-1}$)	1.2-1.6	>1.6	0.5-1.0	0.5-1.0
Nitrate (gNm^{-2} $year^{-1}$)	0.2-0.4	0.1-0.2	Not Available

It is not possible to make an accurate estimate of future deposition levels at specific sites in individual years because of the difficulty of forecasting emissions and the large year-to-year variation introduced by meteorological factors. Data from a number of Scottish sites suggest, however, that if present emission patterns remain relatively constant there is unlikely to be a significant change in deposition levels over the Loch Ard and Merrick areas in the next 15 years. A reduction in emissions would, however, be expected to result in generally reduced depositions.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has to the maximum level of sulphur deposition, expressed in kilograms per hectare per year, which lochs and freshwaters in acid-sensitive areas of Scotland can tolerate without experiencing long-term acidification; and what information he has as to which specific bodies of water have already been acidified beyond this maximum level.

Mr. Ancram: The sensitivity of lochs and freshwaters to acidity varies according to geological and other conditions, and the level of sulphur deposition above which ecosystems may become affected is subject to continuing research. The biological effects of long-term acidification have, however, been evident so far only in the surface waters of the Galloway and Trossach areas.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage change there has been in the concentration of acidity of rainfall in Scotland between 1979 and 1984.

Mr. Ancram: Current research indicates that between 1979 and 1984 the concentration of acidity in rainfall in Scotland has reduced substantially, probably by 40 to 50 per cent., although the trend has not been consistent over the country due to effects of variable weather patterns. These figures are based on measurements taken since 1978 at a number of different sites throughout the country.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General why claimants who are disallowed unemployment benefit on availability grounds are included in the unemployment totals if they continue to sign on as unemployed.

Mr. Alan Clark: The monthly unemployment count relates to those claiming benefits at unemployment benefit offices. The count may therefore include some people who are disallowed benefit on availability grounds who continue to sign on, usually because they are appealing against disallowance.

Nuclear Power Industry

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General if he will describe the types of information published by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in respect of accidents, incidents and untoward occurrences, including those without any radiological consequences, at licensed nuclear sites and at other nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Health and Safety Executive publishes a quarterly statement of all incidents at nuclear installations which are reported to Ministers under the arrangements announced by my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Mr. Moore), the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Energy, to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 26 July 1982, at column 374.

In addition, the executive publishes reports of special investigations that it carries out.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Paymaster General how many people have been assisted by the work on own account scheme in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what was the cost of the scheme in each year; if he will provide details of the assistance given in each individual case in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The number of people helped in the last five years and the total cost of the business on own account scheme in each of those years was:

	Beneficiaries	Expenditure £
1980-81	11	9,906
1981-82	13	19,762
1982-83	7	24,085
1983-84	13	34,568
1984-85	7	26,272

Details of the grants awarded, but not necessarily paid, in 1984-85 are as follows:

£1,700 for piano tuning.
£6,000 for word processing and office services.
£6,700 for picture framing.
£4,000 for music composition.
£5,180 for car sales and valeting.
£6,000 for saddlery.
£5,000 for electronics repairs.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Paymaster General if he will provide details of the work on own account scheme and the eligibility criteria for the scheme.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The business on own account scheme is intended to help certain very severely disabled people who have no other means of obtaining employment to set up their own businesses. It provides assistance in cases where other schemes, such as the enterprise allowance scheme, are not appropriate or do not make adequate financial provision. The scheme is administered by the Manpower Services Commission.

Assistance under the scheme is given in the form of a single grant towards the cost of the tools, equipment, premises alterations and so on necessary to start up a business. MSC's disablement resettlement officers can advise potential applicants as to their eligibility, the criteria for which are:

(i) the applicant must be severely disabled and classified as section II disabled according to the registration scheme set up under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944;

(ii) the applicant must be considered capable of running the business;

(iii) the proposed business should be well thought out and considered to be viable;

(iv) the business must be a last resort, that is all other avenues of resettlement into open and sheltered employment must have been explored.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Third World (Private Aid)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what factors he attributes the decline in net private aid flows to the Third world between 1980 and 1984, and in particular the fall in bank lending.

Mr. Raison: The decline in net private flows to developing countries is the product of general world economic circumstances. During the 1970s many such countries borrowed heavily on floating rate terms in currencies which in recent years have yielded high real rates of interest. This has led to an increasing level of debt servicing and a corresponding decline in creditworthiness. The increased risk of international bank lending has resulted in banks, including those in the United Kingdom, reducing the level of net lending to developing countries.

Net private flows from the United Kingdom to developing countries are estimated to have declined from £4·5 billion in 1980 to £1·4 billion in 1984, the main element being a decline from £1·9 billion to £0·1 billion in bank lending on market terms (that is loans with a maturity of one year or more, net of repayments). Total international bank lending from all sources to developing countries declined markedly over the same period.

Aid Statistics

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will set out in tabular form from Organisation for Economic Development and Co-operation sources the actual monetary amount, converted to pounds sterling or United States dollars, of official aid provided in 1984 by France, Canada, West Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom, Italy and the United States of America.

Mr. Raison: Net official development assistance provided in 1984 by the listed countries was:

	US $ billion	US $ billion
France	*2·552	†3·768
Canada	1·625
West Germany	2·782
Japan	4·319
United Kingdom	1·418
Italy	1·105
United States	8·711

* Excludes disbursements to overseas departments and territories.
† Includes disbursements to overseas departments and territories.
Source: OECD development assistance committee chairman's report for 1985 (draft).

ENERGY

Polkemmet Bing

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Energy what conclusions the National Coal Board's chief scientist for Scotland has reached following his analysis of the length of copper piping taken from near the Polkemmet Bing and supplied by the hon. Member for Linlithgow to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Wirral, West (Mr. Hunt) on 16 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The National Coal Board's monitoring of the fumes at the Polkemmet Bing has shown that the levels of hydrogen sulphide and sulphur dioxide at the perimeter of the burning Bing are less than one part per million; concentrations at nearby properties should be even lower because of dilution. Experts believe that these low concentrations would not be a health hazard, even though they have unpleasant odours and are capable of discolouring some metals such as copper.

The section of copper pipe which the hon. Member passed on to me on 16 December has been examined by the Scottish area of the NCB's chief scientist, with the assistance of the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh. They conclude that the discolouration of the pipe is a film of copper sulphide, which is to be expected given the prevailing conditions at Polkemmet. I shall be writing to the hon. Member to give him the details of the reports.

PRIME MINISTER

Israeli Prime Minister

Q42. Mr. Latham asked the Prime Minister whether she will make a statement on the forthcoming visit to the United Kingdom by the Prime Minister of Israel.

The Prime Minister: The Prime Minister of the State of Israel will visit the United Kingdom at my invitation from 21-26 January. I look forward to my talks with Mr. Peres.

Children (Ministerial Responsibility)

Q49. Mr. Dickens asked the Prime Minister if she will allocate specific ministerial responsibility for the welfare and protection of children to co-ordinate the responsibilities of the Department of Health and Social Security, education, police and voluntary services; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I am fully aware of the need for effective co-ordination on all matters concerned with the welfare and protection of children. But I do not believe that my hon. Friend's proposal would secure the result he earnestly seeks. At present the Secretary of State for Social Services is the lead Minister in the existing arrangements.

British Rail

Q60. Dr. Marek asked the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to use British Rail at least once in the course of her official duties in 1986.

The Prime Minister: I will try.

EC (Majority Voting)

Q78. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister what has been the response of other European Economic Community members to the reservation which she placed at the Luxembourg summit in December on the proposal to extend majority voting to directives dealing with terms and conditions of employment; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: At the Foreign Affairs Council on 16-17 December, there was a brief discussion in which my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, maintained our reserve on the working environment text dealing with the health and safety of workers on the grounds that this article, as drafted, might be used to impose unfair burdens on our small and medium businesses. It has already been agreed to maintain unanimity for directives concerned with harmonisation of laws relating to other rights and interests of employed persons.

Engagements

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 14 January.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 14 January.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 14 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 14 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Westland plc

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will institute an inquiry into the publication of recent correspondence between the Solicitor-General and the Secretary of State for Defence: and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [pursuant to her reply, 13 January 1986]: An inquiry has been instituted.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish detailed statistics on pupil-teacher ratios and unit costs in primary, secondary and grammar schools for each of the five education and library board areas in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott: The latest available information is as follows:

	Belfast	North-Eastern	South-Eastern	Southern	Western
1. Pupil/teacher ratios
Primary (including nursery)	21·7	23·5	23·8	23·8	23·8
Secondary	14·0	15·3	15·1	15·4	15·2
Grammar	15·5	16·0	17·2	15·7	16·1
2. Cost per pupil	£	£	£	£	£
Primary (including nursery)	739	642	627	612	629
Secondary	1,314	1,064	1,063	984	1,042
Grammar	1,047	1,003	919	1,023	1,010

Notes:
(a) Pupil and teacher numbers are as at January 1985: expenditure as in 1984-85 financial year.
(b) Unit pupil costs exclude expenditure on certain school-related services—eg school meals, home-school transport and other miscellaneous items.

Terrorism

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce legislation to provide for stiffer sentences for terrorist activities, including the reintroduction of the death penalty for murder.

Mr. Tom King: No.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Board and Lodging

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to action taken by local authorities in Tyne and Wear on cases referred to them in accordance with his Department's circular S12/85 on substandard board and lodging accommodation.

Mr. Newton: I understand that local authorities in the Tyne and Wear area have taken action in two cases following reference to them in accordance with the Department's circular S12/85. The details of any such action are of course the responsibility of the local authorities concerned—the boroughs of Sunderland and South Tyneside—and the hon. Member may therefore wish to consult them direct.

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps have been taken to ensure the payment of arrears of supplementary benefit board and lodging allowances following the statement to the House on 17 December 1985 by the Minister for Social Security, the hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton).

Mr. Newton: Instructions were issued last week on the payment of arrears of benefit to people in ordinary board and lodging between 29 April and 24 November 1985. Copies of the instructions are in the Library. Local offices will be identifying affected cases and paying arrears as soon as possible.

We shall also take the earliest possible opportunity to secure, take in and, as appropriate, act upon judicial clarification of the effect of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Amendment and Temporary Provisions Regulations (SI 1984/2034), which governed the payments for all types of boarders from December 1984 to April 1985.

Hospitals

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all new hospitals which have opened since May 1979 or are due to open over the next 18 months, indicating the first date on which approval for each scheme was given.

Mr. Whitney: The tables list the major capital schemes completed since May 1979 and those expected to be completed in 1986-87 and give in each case the year in which the scheme was first approved. A major scheme is one above a certain cost, which has varied over time, which requires it to be subject to departmental approvals. During the period many smaller capital projects have been completed, but for which full records are not held centrally.

Region and Scheme	Approval in principle given
Major capital schemes completed since May 1979
Northern
Furness (Barrow) DGH Scheme 1 Ph 1	1972
North Tyneside Scheme 1 Ph 1	1977
Queen Elizabeth Gateshead Ph 1	1979
Royal Victoria Infirmary Ph 4	1964
South Cleveland General Ph 1	1972
Yorkshire
Grimsby DGH Ph 1	1975
Leeds General Infirmary Ph 1	1960
Trent
Chesterfield DGH Ph 1	1972
Glenfield DGH Ph 1	1976
Lincoln County Ph 1	1978
Northern General Ph 1c	1980
Queens Medical Centre Ph 2	1975
Rotherham DGH Ph 2	1978
East Anglian
Great Yarmouth DGH Ph 1	1976
Hinchinbrooke Hospital Ph 3	1979
Ipswich Ph 1 (Heath Road Wing)	1977
Kings Lynn DGH Ph 2	1971
North West Thames
Watford (Shrodells) Wing Ph 3	1970
North East Thames
Broomfield DGH Ph 5	1980
Colchester DGH Ph 2	1979
London Hospital Clinical Building Ph 1	1970
Newham Hospital Ph 1	1976
South East Thames
Kent & Sussex Hospital Ph 1	1978
Maidstone DGH Ph 1	1977
Orpington DGH Ph 1	1978
South West Thames
Croydon/Mayday DGH	1976
Redhill DGH (Nucleus)	1976
St Georges Block G2 and F Ph 2	1979
Wessex
Southampton General Ph 5 (Maternity)	1968
Southampton General Ph 5 West Ward Block	1968
Oxford
Milton Keynes DGH Ph 1	1979
South Western
Derriford DGH Ph 1	1971
West Midlands
Dudley DGH (Russells Hall) Ph 3a	1970
Stafford DGH Ph 4	1971
Mersey
Arrowe Park New DGH	1964
Countess of Chester (W Cheshire)	1977
Halton DGH Ph 2	1981
Macclesfield Development (Nucleus)	1978
Royal Liverpool Ph 2/3	1967
North Western
Hope Hospital Salford Ph 1	1976
Preston New Hospital Ph 1	1975
Preston New Hospital Ph 2	1977
Major capital schemes due for completion 1986-87
Yorkshire
Scarborough DGH Ph 1	1981
Trent
Derby City Ph 1	1980
Derby Royal Infirmary Ph 2	1980
North West Thames
Hemel Hempstead Ph 1	1982
St Marys W2 Ph 1B	1980
North East Thames
Harold Wood Hospital Ph 1	1981
Wessex
Royal Hants County Winchester	1980
Royal S Hants Southampton Ph 3	1980
W Dorset DGH Ph 1	1981
South Western
West Somerset (Musgrove Park) Ph 1	1980
Weston Super Mare New Hospital	1979
West Midlands
Bromsgrove & Redditch DGH Ph 1	1980
North Western
Tameside General Hospital Ph 2	1981

Social Services (Exhibition)

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will arrange for an exhibition relating to social services today to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 27 January 1986 to 31 January 1986.

AIDS

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services who are the members of the interdepartmental committee on acquired immune deficiency syndrome; when the committee last met; and what are its terms of reference.

Mr. Hayhoe: The ministerial steering group on AIDS and the interdepartmental group on AIDS comprise representatives from the following Departments: Health and Social Security, Home Office, Employment, Education and Science, Environment, Defence, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Cabinet Office, Treasury, Trade and Industry, and the Welsh, Northern Ireland, and Scottish Offices.

The ministerial steering group met on 2 December 1985 and the first meeting of the interdepartmental group will be held on 21 January. The interdepartmental group's terms of reference are

"to advise the Ministerial Steering Group on AIDS on the development of a co-ordinated strategy towards the wider issues arising out of the infection with the HTLVIII virus, and on any measures needed to implement that strategy".

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to publish guidelines to those people in the National Health Service who are likely to come into contact with individuals who are HTLVIII positive.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens has already issued interim guidelines on AIDS for clinical and laboratory staff. ACDP is revising the guidelines to take account of current scientific knowledge and these should be published in the early part of this year.

Drugs Campaign

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement on the current position of the Government's drug misuse education and information campaign.

Mr. Fowler: The campaign of information and education about the misuse of drugs has been running since February. It features a set of leaflets for parents, two television commercials and a series of poster and press advertisements. In December last year a video training package entitled "Working with Drug Users" was launched.

As the next stage, the Government have launched "Double Take", a video package for young people, especially 12 to 15-year-olds. The package will be issued free for retention to any secondary school in England and Wales that applies for it. All secondary school headteachers in England and Wales are being mailed with details of the package.

The 1985 campaign as a whole has been evaluated by two independent market research companies and the initial results are now available. The evaluation consisted of a long-term "quantitative" survey to check significant shifts in opinion and attitudes as well as a smaller "qualitative" study of the campaign. The main findings of the evaluation include:

—the campaign was widely noticed and appreciated not only by young people, the main target audience, but also by parents.

—a reduction in the proportion of young people who considered heroin attractive or glamorous.

—an increased awareness of the social and physical ill-effects of misusing heroin.

—an increased resistance to the idea of experimenting with heroin.

This evaluation will form the base from which decisions about activity in 1986-87 will be made. A budget of £2 million will be available for further work in 1986-87.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of people on the waiting list for acute surgery in each London health district from November 1982 until the latest available date.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1985, c. 155]: The available information at 30 September and 31 March is given in the table.

Number of cases on acute surgical in-patient waiting lists in National Health Service hospitals in district health authorities wholly or partly within the Greater London council area

District health authority	*30 September 1982	*31 March 1983	*30 September 1983	*31 March 1984	30 September 1984	31 March 1985
Barnet	3,521	3,614	3,708	3,356	3,689	3,766
Harrow	1,271	1,383	1,257	1,521	1,132	1,104
Hillingdon	5,809	5,900	5,799	5,954	6,162	6,665
Hounslow and Spelthorne	3,100	3,211	3,707	3,610	4,104	3,839
Ealing	1,367	1,268	1,610	1,689	1,341	1,659
Brent	1,620	1,908	2,243	2,169	2,097	1,840
Paddington and North Kensington	2,628	2,416	2,282	2,757	2,881	2,380
Hammersmith and Fulham	2,972	2,930	2,632	2,679	2,294	2,830
Victoria	2,713	2,731	2,602	2,657	2,637	2,327
Barking, Havering and Brentwood	4,312	4,497	4,234	5,199	5,665	6,103
Hampstead	1,948	1,675	1,705	1,879	1,776	2,133
Bloomsbury	8,904	10,342	9,842	11,694	11,921	12,853
Islington	1,072	1,123	1,312	1,571	1,476	1,748
City and Hackney	4,131	4,436	4,985	5,434	5,834	6,399
Newham	2,222	2,000	2,412	1,504	1,550	1,162
Tower Hamlets	5,563	5,505	5,495	5,476	5,508	5,823
Enfield	2,952	2,676	2,755	2,829	2,792	3,069
Haringey	1,708	1,456	1,350	1,108	1,211	1,208
Redbridge	1,688	1,658	1,465	1,623	1,577	1,375
Waltham Forest	3,245	3,712	3,566	3,963	3,670	3,945
Bexley	1,049	1,148	1,026	920	1,268	1,348
Greenwich	2,138	2,579	2,463	2,435	2,241	2,026
Bromley	1,906	2,122	2,103	1,910	1,806	1,919
West Lambeth	5,602	4,616	4,215	5,006	5,158	4,732
Camberwell	3,128	2,927	2,949	2,842	2,954	2,748
Lewisham and North Southwark	4,800	4,726	4,347	5,207	5,496	5,840
Croydon	3,006	2,922	2,709	2,390	1,942	2,142
Kingston and Esher	3,168	3,038	2,948	3,118	2,934	3,070
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton	2,266	2,333	2,571	2,740	2,899	2,770
Wandsworth	2,939	3,139	2,863	3,048	2,987	3,044
Merton and Sutton	3,530	3,374	3,285	2,622	2,411	2,424

* Figures before 30 September 1984 exclude a small number of surgical specialist units which were not separately identifiable.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the index for the movement of National Health Service pay and prices since 1970, expressing 1970 costs as 100; and whether separate indices are used to deflate health service costs in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 312]: There is not an index of National Health Service pay and price movements, but indices are maintained, based on centrally assessed movements of pay and prices in England, for health and community health service revenue and capital expenditure respectively. The indices are available from 1971-72 and are shown in the table with the index for 1971-72 expressed as 100. Figures are not available for the current financial year.

Real increases in expenditure on the HCHS are measured by reference to general inflation, as recorded by movements in the GDP deflator, since this approach records changes in the real cost of the service. It would, in any event, be highly misleading to revalue district or health board expenditure by reference to national pay and price indices, because the composition of that expenditure can vary from the national average.

Separate pay and price indices are not maintained for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Hospital and Community Health Services

	Revenue	Capital
1971-72	100·0	100·0
1972-73	109·0	108·2
1973-74	119·6	123·9
1974-75	162·9	154·1
1975-76	209·8	201·3
1976-77	238·7	225·4
1977-78	259·2	257·7
1978-79	284·1	287·8
1979-80	342·4	347·4
1980-81	438·2	437·4
1981-82	474·2	451·4
1982-83	505·0	458·6
1983-84	530·6	465·9
1984-85	561·4	483·1

TRANSPORT

Bus Lanes (Millbank)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether his Department was consulted prior to the designation and eventual implementation of two new bus lanes along Millbank between Parliament square and Abingdon street; what advice was given to the Greater London council; and what assessment he has made of the effect on traffic flows to and from the Palace of Westminster;

(2) what representations were received, what advice was given, and what meetings were held with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis prior to the introduction by the Greater London council of new bus lanes along Millbank between Parliament square and Abingdon street in order to ascertain how they might affect the Palace of Westminster and access to it.

Mr. Ridley: The GLC is solely and entirely responsible for this scheme. I understand that they have consulted the House authorities (who have expressed their concern at the scheme) and the police. They have not consulted me. The GLC has classified the scheme as experimental and my approval is not required. It will be open to Westminster city council from 1 April to decide if it should be abandoned forthwith. Meanwhile, the GLC is pressing ahead despite the concern that has been expressed and the fact that Westminster city council has recently announced a comprehensive review of traffic and environmental conditions in the area.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Initiative

13. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Defence what changes will be made in the defence budget over the next five years as a result of British participation in the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Younger: None. The provision for defence expenditure up to 1988-89 was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his autumn statement on 12 November.

22. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts have been created to date for British institutions through the activities of the strategic defence initiative participation office.

26. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of procurement contracts which may be available to the west midlands in the take-up of the United Kingdom's strategic defence initiative responsibilities; and if he will make a statement.

30. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the value of research contracts which could accrue to the United Kingdom from the strategic defence initiative research programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Since the formal agreement between the United States and United Kingdom Governments on British participation in SDI research was only concluded on 6 December 1985 it would be premature to make such an assessment. We are confident, however, that the terms of the agreement will provide for substantial British participation.

29. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation his Department has made of the feasibility of the strategic defence initiative as a defence system.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft).

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence what defence technology of use to Britain he expects to obtain from United Kingdom participation in the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence said in this House on 9 December 1985, at column 623.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications of United Kingdom participation in strategic defence initiative research for United Kingdom research into emerging technologies with application for conventional defence.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence said in the House on 9 December 1985, at columns 623-24.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what changes will be made in the defence budget over the next five years as a result of British participation in the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) earlier.

Expenditure

20. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present level of planned defence spending as a percentage of all public expenditure; and what was the comparable figure for 1979.

Mr. Stanley: Based on the figure for general Government expenditure in the 1985 autumn statement made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 12 November, planned defence expenditure is expected to be 11·5 per cent. of general Government expenditure in 1985-86, compared to 10 per cent. in 1978-79.

Nuclear Tests (Report)

21. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to discuss the Australian Royal Commission report on British nuclear tests with his Australian counterpart; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: At the instigation of the Australian Government, discussions between British and Australian officials took place in Canberra last week on those recommendations of the Australian Royal Commission's report which may affect the United Kingdom. I plan to meet Senator Evans, the Australian Minister for Resources and Energy, next week to discuss these matters. It would be premature to make a statement until the outcome of our discussions with the Australian Government has been fully considered.

A13

23. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether, in the light of the recently published line of the A13 marshes route, he will review his Department's need for its landholding on the Rainham marshes.

Mr. Lee: None of the published routes for the A13 road will be materially affected by the existence of the Purfleet firing range, which is my Department's only remaining landholding in the area. The need for this heavily used range continues.

Nuclear Back-packs

24. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to equip British soldiers stationed on British soil with man mobile atomic weapons (nuclear back-packs).

Mr. Stanley: No.

Nuclear Materials (Stocks)

27. Mr. Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now answer parliamentary questions on the levels of the United Kingdom stock of weapons grade nuclear materials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It has been the longstanding practice of successive Governments not to disclose information of this nature.

Trident

28. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the proportion of British-made content in the Trident programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Approximately 55 per cent. or over £5,100 million by value of the total estimated cost of Trident (£9,285 million at 1984-85 prices and at £1=$1·38) is planned to be spent in the United Kingdom. In addition, there are a number of British companies competing for work on the United States Trident II programme. To date, 128 contracts (at a value of some $38 million) have been placed with 50 United Kingdom firms. Many of these sub-contracts are for initial quantities with the potential for follow-on orders.

32. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete development of the Trident missile programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The development of the United Kingdom Trident system is planned to be completed to enable it to be deployed in the mid-1990s.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the current cost of Trident and the proportion it will take up of the defence budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: My predecessor announced an estimate of the cost of Trident of £9,285 million at 1984-85 prices and at an exchange rate of £1=$1·38 on 29 January 1985. Over its procurement period, Trident is expected to absorb about 3 per cent. of the defence budget.

International Committee of the Red Cross (Protocols)

31. Mr. Lester asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there has been a full military review of the International Committee of the Red Cross, protocols 1 and 2 of 1977, initialled by Her Majesty's Government but not yet ratified.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that a full review of the military implications of protocols 1 and 2 was conducted prior to the then Government's initialling of these protocols in 1977.

Nimrod Aircraft

33. Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the likely introduction date of the Nimrod airborne early warning aircraft into squadron service.

Mr. Norman Lamont: This must be dependent on the outcome of the current negotiations with GEC Avionics Limited and on the consequent decisions on the best way to take the project forward.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

34. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects SACEUR to visit the United Kingdom to begin negotiations for the development of modernised battlefield nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Members for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) and for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 22 November 1985 at column 351. Initial discussions with SACEUR's staff are planned to commence in February.

Nuclear Tests (Compensation)

35. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received about payment of compensation to former service men and women as a result of Britain's nuclear testing programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Within the past three months I have received seven such representations. Two of these were inquiries made by hon. Members on behalf of constituents, two were early-day motions laid before the House by hon. Members and three were questions for oral answer tabled by hon. Members.

37. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department now intends to review claims for compensation to ex-service personnel arising from Britain's nuclear test programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Members for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) and Worsley (Mr. Lewis) earlier today.

European Fighter Aircraft

36. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will report on progress on the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins).

Mutually Assured Destruction

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his United States counterpart concerning an evaluation of the strategy of mutually assured destruction.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend's predecessor regularly discussed with Mr. Weinberger matters pertaining to NATO's strategy of deterrence, which has preserved peace with freedom in western Europe for more than 40 years.

Fighter Pilots (Training)

Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the present cost for training Royal Air Force fighter pilots.

Mr. Lee: The RAF does not separately categorise fighter pilots. The average cost to the Ministry of Defence of training a student pilot to the point when he joins an operational fast jet squadron is approximately £2·87 million (at 1984-85 prices).

Departmental Efficiency

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what methods he uses to measure the efficiency of his Department.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State informed the House of certain steps which have been taken to improve the efficiency of defence in his speech in the defence debate on 12 June 1985, at columns 915-16, and a fuller record was given in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" (Cmnd. 9430-1).

Private Shipyards (Security)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there have been any breaches of security at the private yards where HMS Otter and HMS Euryalus are being refitted.

Mr. Lee: I am not aware of any breaches in security in these yards. The security arrangements at these private yards were examined in detail by the security authorities, to confirm that they complied with my Department's requirements. Some small improvement in the existing arrangements were made as a result.

If the hon. Gentleman has any relevant information I should be grateful to hear from him.

NATO

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet his North Atlantic Treaty Organisation counterparts; and what he expects to discuss.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend expects to meet his NATO counterparts collectively at the spring meeting of the nuclear planning group, administrative details of which will be released nearer the time. The agenda is confidential.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 15 January 1986

WALES

Retail Businesses

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the number of retail businesses employing 10 or fewer people in the Cardiff, West parliamentary constituency in (i) 1965 to 1970, (ii) 1971 to 1975, (iii) 1976 to 1980 and (iv) 1981 to 1984.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is not available.

SCOTLAND

Nets

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to seek further control over the use of nylon monofilament nets in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend plans to introduce orders shortly under sections 1 and 2 of the Inshore Fishing (Scotland) Act 1984 to prohibit fishing for salmon or sea trout with a gill net in a specified sea area off the coast of Scotland and to prohibit the carriage of monofilament gill nets in British fishing boats in Scottish inshore waters.

Forth Bridge (Tolls)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now instigate an inquiry into the policy for tolls on the Forth road bridge following the recommendatons of his Department's report on 9 October 1985.

Mr. Ancram: No.

EMPLOYMENT

New Businesses

52. Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General how many new businesses were established in the greater London area in 1978 and 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that estimates are not available for the period specified. The available estimates, which relate to 1980 to 1983, are published in an article in the 18 January 1985 edition of British Business, a copy of which is in the Library.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Pendry asked the Paymaster General if he will provide a detailed breakdown of the number of unemployed claimants in the Littleborough and Saddleworth parliamentary constituency using the most recent available figures, analysed by sex and by the age of the unemployed and duration of unemployment.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. The figures relate to 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by age and duration is available.

Age and Duration Analysis of the Unemployed for Statistical Date 10 October 1985

Littleborough and Saddleworth CC

Males

Duration of Unemployment in weeks	Under 17	17	18	19	20-24	25-29	30-34	35-39	40-44	45-49	50-54	55-59	60 and over	Total
One or less	3	7	9	5	22	9	3	2	4	7	4	3	4	82
Over 1 and up to 2	4	2	7	8	25	11	8	5	3	4	1	3	0	81
Over 2 and up to 4	9	11	12	11	26	10	9	7	7	6	3	4	4	119
Over 4 and up to 6	18	14	25	5	19	15	11	9	5	4	9	15	6	155
Over 6 and up to 8	2	4	10	5	22	10	8	6	8	3	3	4	1	86
Over 8 and up to 13	1	9	14	15	35	30	11	17	16	10	9	11	3	181
Over 13 and up to 26	10	22	26	28	93	31	27	32	16	13	22	18	19	357
Over 26 and up to 39	1	8	16	12	44	28	20	18	14	10	9	22	22	224
Over 39 and up to 52	0	1	8	11	36	20	19	20	12	8	16	10	9	170
Over 52 and up to 65	0	9	5	10	22	13	9	9	4	6	4	11	2	104
Over 65 and up to 78	0	0	6	4	18	16	7	6	4	3	4	9	5	82
Over 78 and up to 104	0	0	6	10	28	21	17	13	12	10	9	19	1	146
Over 104 and up to 156	0	0	6	11	30	24	29	21	20	13	18	29	6	207
Over 156 and up to 208	0	0	0	2	22	16	16	14	17	13	19	25	2	146
Over 208 and up to 260	0	0	0	0	11	14	13	17	11	13	15	21	1	116
Over 260	0	0	0	0	6	10	15	15	8	12	22	32	6	126
Grand totals Males	48	87	150	137	459	278	222	211	161	135	167	236	91	2,382

Females

Duration of Unemployment in weeks	Under 17	17	18	19	20-24	25-29	30-34	35-39	40-44	45-49	50-54	55-59	60 and over	Total
One or less	5	1	1	2	12	5	5	7	2	0	1	2	0	43
Over 1 and up to 2	6	3	8	3	12	9	3	5	2	3	2	0	0	56
Over 2 and up to 4	7	6	14	5	25	14	11	7	5	4	2	1	0	101
Over 4 and up to 6	23	15	21	8	17	8	11	5	6	4	4	7	0	129
Over 6 and up to 8	2	2	3	3	11	10	4	5	1	0	2	0	0	43
Over 8 and up to 13	2	6	7	8	28	22	9	6	5	4	3	7	0	107
Over 13 and up to 26	6	10	13	10	66	49	22	17	9	10	10	7	0	229
Over 26 and up to 39	0	9	7	5	29	33	24	18	7	8	5	7	0	152

Duration of Unemployment in weeks	Under 17	17	18	19	20-24	25-29	30-34	35-39	40-44	45-49	50-54	55-59	60 and over	Total
Over 39 and up to 52	0	4	4	6	25	26	10	6	13	7	7	7	0	115
Over 52 and up to 65	0	8	5	6	12	17	14	5	3	7	4	2	0	83
Over 65 and up to 78	0	2	6	4	10	7	8	7	4	4	4	6	0	62
Over 78 and up to 104	0	0	0	6	9	6	10	8	5	3	8	7	0	62
Over 104 and up to 156	0	0	3	7	12	5	6	1	4	9	10	16	0	73
Over 156 and up to 208	0	0	0	1	6	6	6	3	5	7	9	7	0	50
Over 208 and up to 260	0	0	0	0	3	2	2	2	2	5	6	13	0	35
Over 260	0	0	0	0	2	1	5	0	0	2	5	16	0	31
Grand totals Females	51	66	92	74	279	220	150	102	73	77	82	105	0	1,371

Mr. Pendry asked the Paymaster General if he will provide a breakdown of the number of unemployed claimants in the Littleborough and Saddleworth parliamentary constituency by their last trade, occupation or profession.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information requested is not available.

Youth Training

Sir Hector Monro asked the Paymaster General whether he is satisfied that the Christmas undertaking under the youth training scheme that all unemployed minimum age school leavers would be offered a suitable place by Christmas 1985 has been met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am very pleased to say that the Government's undertaking has been effectively met for the third successive year. There are around 300,000 young people on the youth training scheme and on 3 January only 2,290 youngsters were waiting for the offer of a place. The comparable figure for the previous year was 3,850.

This is another excellent achievement by all concerned — the Manpower Services Commission, the careers service, employers, trade unions, local authorities, colleges and voluntary organisations—and I am grateful for their support and commitment. I very much look forward to this continuing under the new two year scheme to be introduced in April.

The enthusiasm of young people for the youth training scheme is clearly demonstrated by these figures, and I am confident that the new scheme will be equally popular with them.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drink-driving Statistics

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give such information, either readily available, or as may be provided without incurring disproportionate cost, regarding the number of people stopped and breathalysed by the police during the Christmas period by force area throughout England and Wales; and if he will make a statement on the operation of breath tests and the level of positive breath tests.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The official Home Office statistics on breath tests in England and Wales in 1985 including the Christmas period, will not be available until the middle of this year, but the Association of Chief Police Officers has collated provisional figures for roadside screening tests from 31 police forces and this information is given in the table.

Roadside screening breath tests carried out from 22 December 1985 to 1 January 1986

Police force	Number of tests	Positive results
Cambridgeshire	632	43
Cheshire	341	54
Cleveland	54	15
Derbyshire	490	49
Devon and Cornwall	245	98
Dorset	133	33
Essex	493	84
Gloucestershire	139	40
Greater Manchester	890	193
Gwent	314	27
Hampshire	465	112
Hertfordshire	224	27
Humberside	161	51
Kent	132	46
Lancashire	484	119
Lincolnshire	206	34
Merseyside	104	60
Norfolk	265	23
Northumbria	116	80
North Wales	1,134	142
Nottinghamshire	*4,733	*115
South Wales	113	51
South Yorkshire	629	92
Staffordshire	445	23
Surrey	287	51
Sussex	620	77
Thames Valley	827	211
Warwickshire	137	20
West Mercia	188	47
West Yorkshire	359	149
Wiltshire	152	37
Totals	15,511	2,203

* Figures relate to the period from 19 December 1985 to 2 January 1986.

City Fraud

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reasons he attributes to the increase in the amount of City fraud under investigation between 1981 and 1984; how many separate cases are being investigated involving the years 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985; and what is the total amount of money involved in each year.

Mr. Mellor: I presume the hon. Member has in mind the figures published in the recent report of the Fraud Trials Committee (page 245) which were discussed in that report. I am informed by the Commissioner of Police for the City of London that the only additional information which can be provided without incurring disproportionate cost is that given in the following table, which shows the number of new investigations into fraud in the City started each year by the company fraud department. These figures are consistent with the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) on 6 December 1985, at column 358. They have narrower coverage than the figures published in the Roskill report because they do not include cases where after the initial investigation the police were not satisfied that an offence had been committed and because they also exclude a small number of cases investigated on behalf of provincial forces or overseas law enforcement agencies where the alleged offence was committed outside of the City.

New investigations into City fraud started by the City of London police

	Number
1981	54
1982	60
1983	61
1984	91
1985	81

Malaysia (Drug-Trafficking)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now make a statement on his investigations into measures being taken in Malaysia to deter drug-trafficking; and what is their relevance to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Mellor: There are some similarities between Malaysian and United Kingdom drugs law and we understand that consideration is being given by the Malaysian Government to the introduction of legislation on the confiscation of the assets of drug traffickers. All Governments, however, have to ensure that any legislation on these matters reflects local conditions and the particular nature of their drugs problem; the recent changes in the maximum penalty under our law for drug trafficking and our proposals for legislation on the confiscation of assets reflect this approach.

Airport Security (Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Greater Manchester on what consultations he undertook with interested organisations prior to the decision to post machine gun guards at Manchester international airport, as to whether local representatives of the Police Federation were consulted about the decision, and as to what consideration he gave to the alternative of using military personnel to undertake the duties which have now been assigned to uniformed police officers.

Mr. Hurd: I would refer the right hon. Member to the reply the Prime Minister gave to a question from him today.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists have been prosecuted in England and Wales and Greater London, respectively, in each quarter since 1 January 1982 for failing to observe traffic lights, distinguishing between those cases involving injury, death and no injury.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Martial Art Weapons

Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to issue guidance on the sale of potentially dangerous martial art weapons to young people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Possession of an offensive weapon in a public place without reasonable excuse is an offence under the Prevention of Crime Act 1953, and I have been particularly concerned at the indiscriminate sale of martial arts weapons to persons with no valid reason to possess them. In conjunction with the Martial Arts Commission I am therefore issuing guidelines to traders urging that such items should not be sold to persons under 18 or to those who cannot produce evidence of membership of a bona fide martial arts club. I look to traders to act responsibly and to pay close attention to the guidelines, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authorities (Wages and Salaries)

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total annual expenditure on wages and salaries of (a) local authority manual workers, (b) local authority administrative workers and (c) firemen; and what are the total numbers employed in each group.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is given in the table below:

	Wages & salaries 1985-86 estimates*		Numbers (June 1985)
	£ million	Full-time	Part-time	Total
(a) Manual workers	2,420	357,600	566,500	924,100
(b) Administrative workers†	4,160	504,100	144,500	648,600
(c) Firemen	370	36,900	400	37,300

* Excluding national insurance and superannuation but including London weighting.
† Defined as all white-collar workers employed on general services except teachers and lecturers.

Rates

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which are currently consulting or have in the past consulted representatives of industrial and commercial ratepayers, as permitted under section 13 of the Rates Act 1984.

Mrs. Rumbold: All major rating and precepting authorities are obliged, under sectin 13 of the Rates Act 1984, to consult representatives of industrial and commercial ratepayers before setting their rates or precepts each year.

Building Standards

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations concerning unsatisfactory building work he has received in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Congleton (Mrs. Winterton) on 21 November 1984. The information provided by the Office of Fair Trading for each of the last 10 years is as follows:

Year	Number
1975	13,061
1976	16,375
1977	20,675
1978	23,136
1979	27,960
1980	24,436
1981	24,673
1982	28,727
1983	36,316
1984	46,549
1985*	18,950

* (first 6 months).

Rate Capping

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if money paid by a health authority to a local authority under the terms of section 1 of the Health and Social Services and Social Security Adjudications Act 1983 is to be taken into account for ratecapping calculations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The rate limits proposed for rate-capped authorities are based on the level of total expenditure earlier determined for them. Total expenditure is reduced by most payments into the rate fund including payments by a health authority towards projects which they jointly finance with local authorities. Rate-capped authorities have until 22 January to indicate whether or not they agree to their proposed rate limit, and if they consider it inadequate to cover their spending needs to seek agreement with the Secretary of State on a higher limit.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his response to the memorandum on the operation and activities of the London Docklands development corporation sent to him by the hon. Members for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore), for Bow and Poplar (Mr. Mikardo), for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) and for Newham, South on 5 June 1985.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not intend to publish a formal response to this document which was designed to form the basis for discussions between the right hon. and hon. Members who presented it and the chairman of the London Docklands development corporation.

Sewerage System

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has, for each water authority, on the number of significant sewer collapses in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is set out below for English regional water authorities. The Welsh water authority is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Number of significant sewer collapses

	1982-3	1983-4	1984-5
Anglian	180	150	*275
North West	690	600	1,000
Northumbrian	185	256	280
Severn-Trent	473	478	n/a
South West	76	300	230
Southern	296	210	260
Thames	360	390	491
Wessex	275	275	280
Yorkshire	1,218	1,225	1,350

* Anglian 1984-85: Higher estimate based on more comprehensive reporting.

A " significant sewer collapse" is defined as any incident involving actual or suspected structural damage to a sewer, which involves excavation or tunnelling. There are some differences in methods of measurements, so particular caution is needed in drawing comparisons between authorities.

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each water authority, the total number of properties connected to the sewerage system, the total population connected to the sewerage system and the total population connected to the water supply system.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is set out below for English regional water authorities. The Welsh water authority is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Water Authorities: Population and Properties Connected

Authority	*Properties connected to sewerage system	†Population connected to sewerage system	†Population connected to water supply system
Anglian	1,807	5,192	3,600
North West	2,650	6,878	6,822
Northumbrian	1,006	2,631	1,222
Severn-Trent	3,119	8,173	6,809
South West	531	1,431	1,427
Southern	1,483	3,922	2,047
Thames	4,985	11,489	7,126
Wessex	880	2,378	1,047
Yorkshire	1,755	4,639	4,384

*Source: water authority charges returns
† Source: Water Authorities Association

Water Authorities

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list for each water authority the target rate of return set for 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88;

(2) if he will list for each water authority the external financing limit set for 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has, for each water authority, on the number of properties flooded by sewage in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is set out below for English regional water authorities. The Welsh water authority is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Number of premises flooded by foul/combined sewage

	1982-83	1983-84	*1984-85
Anglian	†5,693	1,125	1,180
North West	4,100	2,730	950
Northumbrian	3,342	300	270
Severn-Trent	2,245	1,277	1,287
South West	800	770	770
Southern	350	273	389
Thames	8,300	13,250	12,620
Wessex	3,500	3,500	3,300
Yorkshire	2,104	2,050	2,050

* provisional
† Anglian 1982-83: includes surface water flooding

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations which commented on the document entitled "Water Privatisation — a Discussion Paper", indicating which supported privatisation and which opposed it.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has for each water authority on the number of people suffering complete loss of piped water supply for a period of 12 hours or more in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is set out below for English regional water authorities. The Welsh water authority is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Number of people suffering complete loss of piped water supply for 12 hours or more (including repetitions)

	1982-83	1983-84	*1984-85
Anglian	17,000	2,800	2,750
North West	55,000	35,000	45,000
Northumbrian	5,213	647	624
Severn-Trent	45,000	29,400	21,400
South West	3,000	2,410	2,420
Southern	1,615	2,880	5,700
Thames	42,000	N/A	N/A
Wessex	600	500	200
Yorkshire	29,900	32,000	90,000

* Provisional.

Housing

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he approved an urban development grant for the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh which involves the loss of the second water closet in the three-bedroomed houses.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 465-6]: Design and layout defects had resulted in part of this estate becoming difficult to let. Following an invitation from the local authority to housebuilders to submit proposals for refurbishment, urban development grant was approved for a scheme which was considered to provide the best overall solution to the problems. The only dwellings to lose a WC are 3-storey, 4-bedroom houses which had proved to be unpopular and which are being reduced to 2-storey, leaving each house with 2 bedrooms.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the totals for England of each aspect of housing needs appraisal listed on the numercial statement sent by housing authorities to his Department on form DOE 16314.

Mr John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 465-6]: Totals for England, including allowances for any missing figures, for each of the items in local authorities' 1985 housing investment programme housing needs appraisal statements (HIP!) are as follows:

Section A: Dwelling stock position at 1 April 1985

Thousand dwellings

	Local authorities	Housing associations	Other public sector	Private sector	Total
1 Total (including non-permanent)	4,511	439	292	13,275	18,517
2 Specially designed or adapted and intended for use:
by the elderly
(a) sheltered	271	83	3	11	368
(b) others	292	15	5	2	314
by the disabled
(c) wheelchair	11	3	1	3	18
(d) others	21	1	—	8	31
3 Unfit	87	12	2	548	649
4 Fit but lacking amenities	95	7	4	461	566
5 Non-substandard, in need of renovation	1,209	18	23	1,525	2,776
6 Prefabricated reinforced concrete, designed before 1960	131	—	6	25	162
7 Difficult to let	321	4	2	n/a	n/a
8 Total vacant	110	15	19	545	689

Section B: Households in need at 1 April 1985

Thousand households

	Total in need	On housing list and in need
1. Overcrowded:
(a) more than 1 but not more than 1·5 persons per room	415	168
(b) more than 1·5 persons per room	114	58
2. Needing accommodation as described in A2:
(a) elderly	667	232
(b) disabled	111	13
3. Concealed:
(a) married couples	193	105
(b) lone parents	170	69
4. Sharing:
(a) single persons	244	168
(b) other	124	93
5. Others	*	* *
6. Households accepted as homeless 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1985:		Thousand households
(a) total		108
(b) of which, in priority need		81

Section C: Nominations made to housing association or new town dwellings between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985

	Thousand households
1. Households taking up nominations to secure tenancies:
(a) total	18
(b) of which, homeless households	2

Section D: Relets (HRA stock) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985

	Thousand dwellings
1. Vacant and available for letting on 1 April 1984	33
2. Came into management during the period:
(a) newly built	26
(b) through acquisition or following modernisation or, conversion	15
3. Other (including dwellings vacated by existing tenants, even if moving to another local authority dwelling)	412
4. Total available for letting 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1985	487
5. Let through the National Mobility Scheme and, for London, other schemes:
(a) total	13
(b) which, homeless households	1
6. Let through the Tenants Exchange Scheme	7
7. Let to tenants of other authorities under Exchange Agreements (excluding D5 and D6)	7
8. Let to existing tenants transferring within an authority's own stock	163
9. Let to new secure tenants:
(a) displaced through slum clearance or redevelopment	7
(b) homeless households	46
(c) housed from waiting list (normal allocation)	156
(d) other	20
10. Let to new tenants not on secure tenancies:
(a) total	11
(b) of which, homeless households	8
11. Total let 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1985	429
12. Included at D4, but subsequently taken out of management and not available for letting 31 March 1985	26
13. Vacant and available for letting on 31 March 1985	32

Section E: Loans for purchase of dwellings in the private sector between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985

	Thousands
1. Total applications in priority categories to local authorities	18
2. Of which:
(a) granted loans by local authorities	2
(b) referred to building societies	13
3. Referrals resulting in building society loans	9

* Reliable totals cannot be estimated from those figures received less than 500.

n/a Not applicable.

Local authorities' figures for housing not in their ownership, are not usually based on detailed surveys and they are, therefore, less firm. Also, local authorities' criteria for some items might differ: for example, on unfitness, for which the totals are not consistent with the results of the English house condition survey. Authorities' coverage of other households in need (B5) varies so widely that meaningful totals cannot be estimated from the figures received.

The aggregate figures returned, with no adjustment for missing figures, are in the "HIP1 (1985) all items print" which is available in the Library.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish details of the updated returns which he requested by the end of December 1985 from local authorities in respect of additional resources required to operate the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 465-6]: To date only 25 returns have been received. As soon as a substantial number are available I shall arrange for details to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how does the net provision for the total housing programme in 1986-87 compare with the expected outturn for 1985-86 and if he will show the difference in (a) cost and (b) real terms.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 465-6]: The net provision for the total housing programme in 1986-87 is £2,752 million in cash terms and £2,633 million when expressed in real terms at 1985-86 prices. The expected net outturn for 1985-86, based on first quarter estimates, is £2,742 million. In the terminology used in the public expenditure White Papers, "real terms" are equivalent to "cost terms". Figures for net expenditure do not include the spending power available to local authorities and the Housing Corporation from capital receipts.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the most recent estimate of the cost to local authorities of providing bed and breakfast accommodation for homeless families.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 465-6]: According to information published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy gross expenditure by authorities on maintaining homeless households in bed and breakfast accommodation in 1984-85 was £14·4 million or £18·77 per household per day; net expenditure, taking into account income from fees and charges including income received direct from the Department of Health and Social Security in respect of such households, was £10·3 million or £13·35 per household per day.

Local Authorities (Staff)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the total numbers of staff employed full-time, part-time and full-time equivalent by (a) all local authorities in England and (b) by local authorities by their party of control since 1979 to date.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 469-70]: Given below are the figures requested. The figures showing employment in authorities according to political control refer only to those authorities whose political control has remained unchanged between 1979 and 1985.

	June 1979	June 1985	Change per cent.
England
Full-time	1,468,995	1,373,994	−6·5
Part-time	876,079	859,726	−1·9
Full-time equivalent	1,813,217	1,714,639	−5·4
Conservative controlled (20·6 per cent. of 1985 Manpower)
Full-time	318,683	283,409	−3·6
Part-time	191,199	175,980	−8·0
Labour Controlled (22·6 per cent. of 1985 Manpower)
Full-time	339,683	327,453	−3·6
Part-time	171,678	176,425	+2·8
Liberal controlled (less than 0·1 per cent. of 1985 Manpower)
Full-time	418	341	−18·4
Part-time	70	50	−28·6
Independent controlled (0·6 per cent. of 1985 Manpower)
Full-time	12,360	11,880	−3·9
Part-time	1,882	1,935	+2·8

Notes:

(a) Includes only General Services Manpower.

(b) Full Time Equivalents are not available at an individual authority level.

(c) excludes from the analysis by political control:

(i) authorities that have changed political control between 1979 and 1985.

(ii) authorities under no overall political control.

(iii) authorities from whom figures were not available for either or both years.

PRIME MINISTER

Westland plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister what discussions she had with the President of the United States of America on the future of Westland plc.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister if she has had any recent discussions with the President of the United States of America over the future of Westland helicopters and the role of the Sikorsky company in a rescue bid for Westland helicopters; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None.

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the wider national implications of the involvement of British Aerospace plc, as currently proposed in the rescue of Westland plc.

The Prime Minister: There are no wider national implications which make either proposal unacceptable.

Ministers (Gifts)

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister (1) what are the current limits on the value of gifts received by Ministers in their official capacity which they may retain personally; and what happens to gifts surrendered by Ministers on the grounds that they are valued in excess of the limit;

(2) if she will list all the gifts she has received in her official capacity since 1979; and if she will list those which she has not retained personally on the grounds that their value is in excess of the permitted limit.

The Prime Minister: The current limit for the value of gifts which Ministers may retain is £75. The rules governing disposal of gifts of higher value, of which Ministers are advised when taking office, are similar to those governing the acceptance of gifts by civil servants, which are contained in the Civil Service Pay and Conditions Code (paragraph 9882 to 9893), a copy of which is in the Library.

I regret that information on the numbers of gifts I have received since 1979 could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Airport Security (Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Prime Minister what consultations Ministers undertook with interested organisations prior to the decision to post guards armed with machine guns at Manchester international airport; if the Police Federation was consulted; and what consideration was given to the alternative of using military personnel to undertake the duties which have now been assigned to uniformed police officers.

The Prime Minister: This was a decision for the chief constable and not for Ministers. I understand that the chief constable discussed his decision with the Police Federation before it was implemented. Armed police officers have for some years been present at Manchester airport when this has been considered necessary; I understand that the chief constable does not think it necessary to ask for military personnel to be deployed at present.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Nets

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he plans to seek further controls over the use of nylon monofilament nets in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: It is illegal to use a net which is constructed of a single filament of synthetic material for the taking of salmon or freshwater fish in Northern Ireland. There are no plans to seek further controls at present.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Badgers

Mr. Mudd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the Dunnet review on badgers; and if it is his intention that it will be published.

Mrs. Fenner: I understand that Professor Dunnet's review team has now completed its inquiry and is well advanced with the detailed drafting of its report. I expect to receive that report in two or three months. I have already made clear my intention to publish it in full.

Nylon Monofilament Nets

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he plans to seek further controls over the use of nylon monofilament nets in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Turville School (Member's Correspondence)

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Durham, North of 7 October concerning Turville school.

Sir Keith Joseph: I hope to be in a position to reply very shortly. I regret not having been able to do so earlier, but examination of the matters raised has required reference outside my Department.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what would be the total cost of meeting the National Union of Teachers' latest pay demand for 1986.

Sir Keith Joseph: The National Union of Teachers is to discuss a motion on pay at a special salaries conference on January 18, calling for an increase from April 1986 of at least £1,700 for each teacher. Illustratively, and using teacher numbers in England and Wales as at January 1985, the cost of a £1,700 increase for each teacher would be £770 million, or over 17 per cent. of the 1984-85 salary bill (excluding employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions).

Post-Doctoral Research Associates

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what conveniently available figures he has for 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 for the number of new Ph.Ds willing to accept appointment as post-doctoral research associates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: This information is not available.

TRANSPORT

British Airways

53. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be in a position to announce a timetable for the privatisation of British Airways.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government intend to privatise British Airways as soon as possible, but current litigation under US anti-trust law has to be settled before a timetable can be set.

North Devon Road Programme

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the anticipated start and completion dates for (a) the north Devon link road stage 2A, (b) the north Devon link road stage 2B, (c) the north Devon link road stage Barnstaple bypass, (d) the A39 Barnstaple relief road, (e) the A39 Bideford bridge completion, (f) the A361 Braunton bypass, (g) the A377 Barnstaple to Exeter improvement and (h) the B3226 Aller Cross to Blackmoor Gate improvement, and any other parts of the north Devon road programme.

Mr Michael Spicer: The estimated start and completion dates of trunk road schemes in north Devon which I am at present able to give are:

	Start	Completion
North Devon Link Road Stage 2A	Spring 1987	Spring 1989
A39/A361 Barnstaple Bypass	Winter 1986/87	Winter 1988-89
A39 Bideford Bypass	In progress	Summer 1987

Dates for stage 2B of the north Devon Link cannot be determined until the remaining statutory procedures have been completed.

The other road schemes listed are the responsibility of the Devon county council.

Navigation Lights

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied that the navigational beacon at Minsters rock on the Rubha Na Leachaig on the west coast of Scotland is suitable for all weather conditions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he is satisfied with the efficiency of the navigation lights into Loch Inchard and Kinlochbervie on the west coast of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Transport Act 1985

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Transport to whom the letter entitled "Dear Transport Operator" signed by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State was sent; how many copies of the letter were issued; and at what cost.

Mr. David Mitchell: The letter entitled "Dear Transport Operator" was sent to businesses in the transport field who might wish to take up the opportunities provided by the Transport Act 1985 to extend their activities into public service vehicle operation. About 39,000 copies of the letter were printed, at a cost of £1,500. They were mailed at no extra cost with copies of the leaflet, "Your Business in the Making", for which the combined printing and postage cost was £22,000.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of the leaflets "Your Business in the Making: Tomorrow's Buses" have been printed; how the leaflets are to be distributed; what has been the total cost; and whether it is planned to issue any other similar leaflets.

Mr. David Mitchell: About 54,500 copies of the leaflet "Your Business in the Making" have been printed and mailed at a cost of £22,000. These leaflets have been mailed to transport businesses which might be interested in extending their activities into public service vehicle operations.

Similar leaflets have been provided for existing bus operators, taxi and hire car operators. Other leaflets are in preparation directed at potential investors and operators in the bus business, financial ad legal advisors and members of the general public.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he has already made or plans to make for publicising the terms of the Transport Act 1985; and what is the total estimated cost of such publicity and advertising, including the costs of preparation within his Department.

Mr. David Mitchell: Approximately £950,000 has been set aside for paid publicity, mainly in the form of short leaflets and trade press advertising. The aim is to provide information to the public on the Transport Act, and to draw the attention of those concerned to the new business opportunities it provides. The cost of officials' and my time in preparing information material has not been assessed separately and is not included in this figure.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will name any advertising agents or public relations consultants who have been retained by his Department to advise on publicity relating to the Transport Act 1985; and what is their likely cost.

Mr. David Mitchell: My Department has been advised on the paid publicity programme for the Transport Act 1985 by the Central Office of Information, with assistance on press advertising from Davidson Pearce Ltd, the Department's contracted agency on other issues. A total of approximately £950,000 has been set aside in 1985-86 and 1986-87 for its advice, the preparation of information material, and media costs.

Aircraft Safety

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what new safety measures are now being taken to improve evacuation standards on aircraft in consequence of the Boeing 737 fire at Manchester international airport on 22 August 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: As I have explained to the right hon. Member, aviation safety requirements and standards are the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority.

The CAA has recently announced three new mandatory airworthiness instructions for UK airlines:

(1) The date by which all passenger seats must meet more stringent fire resistance standards has been brought forward from 1 December 1987 to 1 July 1987.

(2) By 1 July 1986, access to overwing emergency exits of the type used in Manchester B737 accident must be improved.

(3) By 1 December 1987, floor level emergency escape path lighting must be provided.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department and the Civil Aviation Authority, respectively, first became aware that loss of life in aviation accidents would be reduced by the use of less flammable material on aircraft seats.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation safety matters are the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. The CAA has advised it has for some time been clear that potential loss of life would be reduced by the introduction of more fire resistant seats. The timing, however, of such a requirement was dependent on the availability of effective and practical materials in production quantities.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the estimated cost of an average airline seat upholstered with fire resistant material compared with one upholstered in current materials.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority is statutorily responsible for aviation safety requirements and standards and I have drawn the hon. Gentleman's question to the attention of the chairman, who will reply direct to him.

Traffic Lights

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many cases of injury have occurred and how many cases of death in England and Wales and Greater London, respectively, in each quarter since 1 January 1982 arising from motorists failing to observe traffic lights.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Information on failure to observe lights is not included in routine accident reports.

Fishing Vessels (Safety)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take regarding the recommendations contained in the report of the loss of MFV Mhari L in relation to the Coastguard to be alerted rapidly when contact is lost with fishing vessels, fishing vessels being fitted with hydrostatic life rafts and the action recommended when fishing gear foul underwater cables.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 479]: The recommendations are being studied. At present Her Majesty's Coastguard takes every opportunity to stress the importance of the earliest possible warning that a vessel may be missing, and merchant shipping notices recommend that life rafts be fitted with hydrostatic release units and also advise on the dangers of fishing gear being fouled on the sea bed. My Department is, however, considering what further action can effectively be taken to prevent such tragic losses.

Lighthouses

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the annual cost to the taxpayer of the administration of lighthouses under the control of the Northern Lighthouse Board; how much of this relates to lighthouses in the Isle of Man; and what contribution is made by the Isle of Man Government towards the cost.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 479]: The expenses of the board are met, not by the taxpayer, but from the general lighthouse fund, which is derived from light dues levied on shipping using ports in the British Isles.

In 1984-85 the board incurred current and capital expenditure of about £5 million on lighthouses of which of £0·3 million was in the Isle of Man. The Isle of Man Government do not contribute to the board's costs.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on the improvement carried out on the lighthouse-keepers' houses on Davaar Island; what has been recovered of this cost by subsequent sale or letting of the houses; and what charges have been made on public funds to cover the costs involved.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 479]: I understand that the Northern Lights Board has spent no money on improving these houses in the last five years. No house has been let or sold, and no charge has fallen on public funds.

Drink-Driving Campaign

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the drink-drive campaign undertaken by his Department during the Christmas holiday period, including the cost and efficiency of the campaign, and the planned follow-up during 1986; and if there are any plans to introduce random breath testing.

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Christmas drink-drive campaign.

Mr. Ridley: I have asked for a full report on the campaign, the publicity for which cost £1.4 million. This will require an analysis of national accident and breath testing data.

Existing legislation sets out clearly the circumstances in which the police may require a breath test. These are:

- if there is reasonable cause to suspect the motorist of driving, attempting to drive or having driven, with alcohol in his body
- if there is reasonable cause to suspect him of having committed a moving traffic offence
- if he has been involved in an accident

There are no powers to carry out breath tests other than in these circumstances, and I have no plans to propose such powers. Nor do I have plans to change the existing legal limit.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Argentina

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 364, what form the contacts with Argentina are taking regarding the question of fisheries in the south-west Atlantic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation is taking the lead, in consultation with all the Governments concerned, in undertaking a technical assessment of fisheries in the south-west Atlantic. Our own communications with the Argentine Government are conducted through the protecting powers and are confidential.

South Atlantic (Wildlife)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visit to London of a senior official from the Food and Agriculture Organisation to discuss wildlife in the south Atlantic.

Mr. Renton: An official of the Food and Agriculture Organisation secretariat will visit London later this month in connection with the FAO's technical study of the south-west Atlantic fishery. We are co-operating fully in the preparation of this study, which we hope will lead on to agreement on multilaterally-based fisheries conservation and management arrangements for the area.

Cancer Research

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his committee of scientific experts has started work on the questions put to him regarding European cancer research by the hon. Member for Linlithgow, Official Report, column 306, 18 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Yes. The Committee of EC cancer experts set up following the December Foreign Affairs Council will meet for the first time on 24 January in Brussels. Its task is to make recommendations for a coordinated plan of action to combat cancer in EC member states. The United Kingdom's representative will be Professor Norman Bleehen, honorary director, Medical Research Council unit of clinical oncology and radiotherapeutics.

Hong Kong

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has had discussions with the Chinese Government on the question of the granting of Chinese citizenship to non-Chinese citizens of Hong Kong who are not presently entitled to British citizenship, resulting from the transfer of sovereignty of Hong Kong from the United Kingdom to the People's Republic of China in 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We have discussed this matter with the Chinese Government in the Sino-British joint liaison group. They have confirmed that non-Chinese who meet the legal requirements under Chinese nationality law may apply for Chinese nationality, and that such cases would be dealt with by the appropriate authorities.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industrial Development

8. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the Trades Union Congress to discuss industrial development.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. and learned Friend, I and other Ministers of the Department meet the TUC at meetings of the National Economic Development Council, where such questions arise regularly.

35. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet the Confederation of British Industry and the Trades Union Congress to discuss the state of British industry.

Mr. Brittan: Either I or another Minister from my Department meet the CBI and TUC each month at the National Economic Development Council where such matters are regularly discussed. I have no immediate plans for a separate meeting with the two bodies on this subject.

38. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the Trades Union Congress to discuss industrial development.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. and learned Friend, I and other Ministers of the Department meet the TUC at meetings of the National Economic Development Council, where such questions arise regularly.

Romania

17. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has had any recent consultations with the Romanian authorities concerning United Kingdom trade with Romania; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I met the Romanian ambassador yesterday for a general discussion on a number of bilateral issues. I am anxious to increase Anglo-Romanian trade to our mutual benefit.

Industry (Earnings)

22. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the level of earnings in industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. and learned Friend has regular contact with the leaders of the CBI. He has taken every opportunity to make clear to the CBI that the Government fully support its initiative for lower settlements in the present pay round. It is vitally important that our competitive position should not be eroded by excessive pay rises.

Soft Loans

23. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement of progress on implementing the soft loans package announced last August.

Mr. Channon: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 12 November the introduction of a soft loan facility under the aid and trade provision. Support for several projects is under consideration following useful initial discussions with the Chinese Government.

Research and Development

24. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with public bodies within his responsibility and private companies concerning the dispersal of their research and development activities to the regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: None.

Regional Policy

25. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with the workings of regional industrial policy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Yes. However, I intend to supervise closely the workings of the current arrangements and consider carefully the possible need for any future changes which may appear necessary.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further steps he proposes to take to seek to improve industrial development in the regions.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Under the new regional policy announced in November 1984 a greater emphasis is placed on job creation. Many parts of the country have been designated as assisted areas, thus benefiting from various measures of assistance for industrial development. We will be monitoring the effectiveness of the new arrangements with great care.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the National Economic Development Council to discuss the relationship between economic development and job creation in the regions.

Mr. Jack Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the National Economic Development Council to discuss the relationship between economic development and job creation in the regions.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Either my right hon. and learned Friend or another Minister from the Department attends NEDC each month. Last November, as part of its continuing work on jobs, NEDC discussed papers on job creation in areas of high unemployment. Further related papers will be taken in the coming months.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the objectives of his Department's regional policy; how he monitors its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The objective of the Government's regional industrial policy is to help reduce regional disparities in investment as well as employment opportunities. I can assure my hon. Friend that we will continue to monitor carefully how well the taxpayer's money is being spent in this respect.

Manufacturing Industry

26. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the most recent figure for output in manufacturing industry; and how this compares with the figure for the same month six years ago.

Mr. Howard: The index of production for manufacturing industry in the three months up to October 1985 stood at 103, compared to a base of 100 in 1980. This is 3 per cent. lower than for the corresponding period in 1979.

39. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of investment in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Howard: In 1984, which is the latest year for which complete outturn figures are available, total investment in manufacturing was nearly £6·4 billion at 1980 prices; 16 per cent. above the trough in the last investment cycle downswing which started in 1980. It is expected that the outturn for 1985 will be nearly £6·8 billion at 1980 prices, about 6 per cent. above the level in 1984.

British Shipbuilders

27. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of British Shipbuilders; and what was discussed.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. and learned Friend last saw Mr. Day on Tuesday 7 January. Their discussion was wide ranging.

Manufactured Goods

28. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Channon: In the first 11 months of 1985 trade in manufactures was in deficit by £3·1 billion. Over the same period, the current account which covers trade in all visibls and invisibles showed a surplus of £2·8 billion.

Exports (Data Base)

29. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Association of British Chambers of Commerce about the establishment of industry data bases as an aid to the promotion of export trade.

Mr. Channon: There have been a number of discussions between the ABCC and my officials. The British Overseas Trade Board is represented on an ABCC working group co-ordinating the development by individual chambers of commerce of computerised membership data bases. It is expected that these will lead to the movement being able to supply national listings.

British Steel Corporation

30. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the British Steel Corporation; what subjects were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. and learned Friend last met Sir Robert Haslam on 24 October 1985 when he discussed BSC's financing requirements and the general market outlook. I myself last met Sir Robert at the nationalised industries chairmen's dinner hosted by the Prime Minister on 22 November.

Gulf States (Ministerial Visit)

31. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Minister for Trade's visit to the Gulf states.

Mr. Channon: I had useful meetings with a large number of Ministers and with the resident British businessmen in Kuwait, Oman and YAR. I was also able to see some of the projects in which British firms are involved. The 1985 trade figures to date show good increases in United Kingdom exports to all three markets. My visit confirmed that each will continue to offer worthwhile opportunities for British goods and services in 1986. Provided we are competitive we should be able to increase our market shares. We enjoy substantial surpluses in our trade with all three countries. In Kuwait and Oman there was new emphasis on reciprocity. United Kingdom suppliers and project bidders will find it in their own interests to maximise the local content of their offers. In all three countries there is a strong desire for more British investment in joint ventures.

Company Mergers

33. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy on company mergers in the light of recent merger activity.

Mr. Howard: Recent merger activity has demonstrated the effectiveness of the policy on merger references, announced by the then Secretary of State in July 1984. The policy remains to make references primarily on competition grounds. In evaluating the competitive situation in individual cases, the Secretary of State will have regard to the international context, to the extent of competition in the home market from non-United Kingdom sources, and to the competitive position of United Kingdom companies in overseas markets.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

34. Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the progress of negotiations towards a renewed multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Channon: The Council of Ministers will be considering the Community's negotiating mandate at its meeting on 27-28 January. I shall be advancing the Government's position as announced in the House on 9 May last year and maintaining close contact with the British industry and other interested parties. The GATT textiles committee meets for the renewal negotiations on 3 April.

Vauxhall Motors

36. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of Vauxhall Motors; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the chairman of Vauxhall Motors, Mr. John Fleming, on 3 December 1985 for a general discussion about Vauxhall's future plans in the United Kingdom. During the meeting Vauxhall said that it would be investing a further £8·7 million in its Ellesmere Port plant, increasing output from 28 to 35 vehicles an hour, creating 600 new jobs and lifting the United Kingdom-produced share of United Kingdom sales from 56 per cent. to 64 per cent. this year. Approval for further investment to raise output still higher is to be sought from GM. In addition, Vauxhall has said that by the end of this year it aims to achieve a 60 per cent. level of United Kingdom content in the vehicles it builds here.

Financial Services Bill (Lloyd's)

37. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received proposing the inclusion of Lloyd's within the scope of the proposed Financial Services Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have received six letters on this subject. I have nothing to add to what I said during the Second Reading debate on the Financial Services Bill yesterday.

British Telecom

40. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to increase the powers of OFTEL to intervene in price increases proposed by British Telecom.

Mr. Pattie: No. British Telecom's licence includes certain restrictions on the company's ability to raise prices. The Director General of Telecommunications has powers under the Telecommunications Act 1984 to propose modifications to BT's licence should he judge it necessary to do so having regard to his duties under that Act.

Northern Region

42. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total amount of regional aid granted in the northern region in the first 12 months of the operation of the new regional aid policy laid down in the Co-operative Development Agency and Industrial Development Act 1984.

Mr. Peter Morrison: £101 million of regional aid has been granted in the northern region in this period.

Latin America

43. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those countries in Latin America to which Britain has supplied arms or security equipment since 1979.

Mr. Channon: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to publish such information.

Anti-dumping Actions

44. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the level of costs involved in securing the necessary evidence to promote successful anti-dumping actions; and if he has any plans to provide funds to meet part of these costs of the firms involved.

Mr. Channon: The only recent representations received about the level of costs involved in taking successful anti-dumping action have been from the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, which earlier this year suggested that financial support should be given to trade associations for the purpose of investigating anti-dumping cases. The government have no plans at present to provide any financial assistance to industry to meet such costs. The Department's anti-dumping unit does, however, provide help and advice to industries which believe they are being adversely affected by dumped imports.

Rolls-Royce Ltd.

45. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has taken steps to satisfy himself that all actual and contingent liabilities of Rolls-Royce Ltd. will be advised to the court in that company's application for a reduction in its capital.

Mr. Pattie: The court approved Rolls-Royce's capital reduction on 2 December 1985. The company made available to the court all the information it required in respect of the company's actual and contingent liabilities.

Japan

47. Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom's trading relations with Japan, both bilaterally and in competition for major contracts in third countries.

Mr. Channon: The United Kingdom and its community partners continue to press for a significant increase in Japan's imports of manufactured goods. Competition in third countries remains intense, but the Government's new soft loan facility will assist United Kingdom exporters.

49. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement reporting progress in reducing the visible trade imbalance between the United Kingdom and Japan, following the action programme announced by the Japanese Government last July.

Mr. Channon: Implementation of the action programme is well under way, although it is too early to judge what impact this will have on Japan's low propensity to import. The Government, and the European Commission, will monitor progress closely.

USSR

48. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the expansion of trade with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Channon: Her Majesty's Government are very keen to encourage the expansion of trade between the United Kingdom and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and are confident that a substantial increase in the level of trade can be achieved over the period of the new Soviet five-year plan (1986-90).

Public Utility Monopolies

50. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to improve the provisions intended to protect the domestic consumer in existing and proposed privatisation legislation relating to public utility monopolies.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have been and are closely involved in ensuring that adequate provisions to protect the domestic consumer are included in privatisation legislation relating to public utility monopolies.

Steel Industry

51. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes he expects to be made in regard to the capacity and structure of the special or engineering steels industry in the United Kingdom during the next two years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, West (Mr. Parris). Decisions on any changes in the capacity of the UK engineering steels industry will be matters for the board of United Engineering Steels Ltd.

Gartcosh Steelworks

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government have yet determined their position on the closure of the Gartcosh steelworks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is in a position to announce the Government's decision over the future of the Gartcosh steelworks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The report of the Scottish Affairs Committee on the closure of Gartcosh was published on 18 December 1985. The Government's position was explained in evidence to the Committee in November last year.

The Government have examined carefully the report, together with the evidence presented to the Committee which was made available on 20 December. While naturally we accept that there is always scope for alternative forecasts of demand and interpretations of the commercial background, the Government do not regard the arguments in the report and evidence as justifying intervention in BSC's decision to close Gartcosh.

The Government's view remains that the issues raised by BSC's decision to close Gartcosh are commercial, managerial and technical, rather than strategic, and that these issues are properly a matter for BSC. The Government naturally regret the effect of the closure on those whose jobs will be lost and BSC and others are doing what they can to alleviate the effects.

The closure of Gartcosh as well as other reductions in capacity and manpower within the strategy announced last August are necessary to improve BSC's competitive position and to help it attain financial self-sufficiency. BSC has very little room for manoeuvre if it is to achieve this objective, which the Government regard as the highest priority.

Competition

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider putting forward proposals to improve the practical working and effectiveness of the European Communities rules on competition and, in particular, to seek revision of articles 85 to 94 of the treaty of Rome, EEC regulation 17 of 6 February 1962 and related provisions.

Mr. Channon: I have no plans to seek changes in the competition provisions of the Treaty of Rome. But my Department remains in touch with the Commission about continuing improvements in the speedy and effective application of the rules.

Counterfeiting

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new measures he proposes to combat the counterfeiting of manufactured goods in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Recording Tapes (Levy)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the present position with regard to the proposals in the Green Paper, Cmnd. 9445, published in February 1985 for the introduction of a levy on blank audio and video tapes; and whether it is still proposed to proceed with such a scheme in the light of comments received.

Mr. Pattie: We are preparing a White Paper setting out our proposals for the reform of copyright law, including details of whether or not we propose to introduce a levy on blank audio and video recording tape.

Westland plc.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Sir Raymond Lygo about British Aerospace plc's proposed involvement in Westland; and what view he conveyed to Sir Raymond about the wider national implications and the action he would wish the company to take in the light of these.

Mr. Brittan: I refer the hon. Gentleman to what I said in answer to questions following my statement on 13 January.

NATIONAL FINANCE

£2 Coin

Dr. Twinn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he is now in a position to give further details about the £2 coin to be struck to commemorate the XIII Commonwealth Games to be held in Scotland in 1986.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Yes. Her Majesty made a proclamation on 18 December 1985 under the Coinage Act giving details of this coin.

On the obverse the £2 coin will feature the Raphael Maklouf portrait of Her Majesty the Queen with the inscription "Elizabeth. II. Dei. Gratia. Regina. F.D." and the words "Two Pounds", and on the reverse a St. Andrew's cross surmounted in chief by a crown triumphal overall a thistle of Scotland and the date of the year "1986". It is proposed to strike six versions, one of gold, two of silver and three of nickel brass. The gold coin will have graining on the edge. The silver and nickel coins will also have graining on the edge and in incuse letters the inscription "XIII Commonwealth Games Scotland 1986", followed by the mark of the Royal Mint.

A copy of the proclamation is available in the Library.

Construction Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps he is taking to seek to curb the growth of the black economy in the construction sector; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what estimate he has of the growth of the black economy in the construction industry over the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise keep under careful review the methods used to counter tax evasion in the construction industry. By the very nature of the problem, it is impossible to provide a reliable estimate of the tax lost through evasion.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has recently received concerning the impact of value added tax thresholds on the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Twenty representations have been received since the last Budget, 15 of them wanting a reduction or abolition of the threshold and five recommending that it be increased. The level of the threshold will, as usual, be reviewed as part of the preparations for my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Third World (Airline Revenues)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has approached the International Monetary Fund to seek its assistance in obtaining release of airline revenues held by Third-world countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The articles of agreement of the International Monetary Fund provide that there should be no discrimination in the treatment of remittances to third countries. The fund is aware of the United Kingdom's concern about blockages of such remittances especially airline remittances (which in almost all cases are covered by provisions which have treaty status). In such cases, wherever appropriate, the United Kingdom supports the fund's policy, of seeking an agreed timetable for the equitable clearance of external arrears. The question of blocked remittances is also raised by the United Kingdom directly with the countries concerned as opportunity arises.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the level of tax reliefs granted for life assurance, mortgage interest, approved pension schemes, employers' contributions to approved pension schemes, retirement annuity and age allowance for each year since 1979; and what has been the annual percentage increase in each case and the total percentage increase 1979-85 in each case.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Personal Incomes

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the gain or loss to those with incomes (a) under £5,000, (b) £5,000 to £10,000, (c) £10,000 to £15,000, (d) £15,000 to £20,000, (e) £20,000 to £30,000, (f) £30,000 to £50,000 and (g) over £50,000 a year as a result of each Finance Act since 1979, both in aggregate and per person on average in each of these categories, in each case indicating how much is due to indexation and how much is real gain.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Johnson Matthey Bankers

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many statutory returns were submitted by the Johnson Matthey Bank in the 12-month period preceding its collapse and rescue.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Low-paid Workers

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table giving details of the effects of his proposed social security reforms on the marginal total effective deduction rates of low paid workers setting out the numbers affected by (a) the present system and (b) the proposed new system for those forgoing 50 to 60 pence, 60 to 70 pence, 70 to 80 pence, 80 to 90 pence, 90 pence to £1 and over £1 for each additional £1 in earnings; and if he will also publish comparable data taking into account the 20 per cent. rates payments these families will have to pay.

Mr. Newton: The estimated numbers of families, including single persons, affected by the various marginal tax rates quoted are shown in the table. The estimates, which exclude families paying tax at higher than the standard rate, have been calculated on a similar basis to the figures in the illustrative tables prepared for the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security". The marginal tax rates have been calculated as the sum of the extra income tax and employee's national insurance contribution paid—assumed as 9 per cent.—and the amounts by which means-tested benefits are reduced for every extra £1 of gross earnings. The estimates are necessarily approximate and should only be taken as illustrating the orders of magnitude involved.

Total marginal rate of deduction per extra £1 of gross earnings	Current scheme	Proposed new scheme—without 20 per cent. rates contribution	Proposed new scheme—with 20 per cent. rates contribution
50p but less than 60p	230,000	180,000	80,000
60p but less than 70p	160,000	10,000	10,000
70p but less than 80p	nil	110,000	120,000

Total marginal rate of deduction per extra £1 of gross earnings	Current scheme	Proposed new scheme—without 20 per cent. rates contribution	Proposed new scheme—with 20 per cent. rates contribution
80p but less than 90p	160,000	420,000	410,000
90p but less than £1	60,000	40,000	40,000
£1 and over	70,000	nil	nil

Departmental Staff

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were employed by his Department in 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and to the nearest available date in 1985.

Mr. Fowler: The numbers of staff in post in my Department for the years in question were:

1 April
1979	98,369
1980	96,209
1981	97,411
1982	95,543
1983	94,101
1984	90,474
1985	92,788

As at 1 December 1985, the most recent date for which figures are available, the number of staff in post was 92,892.

Advancement of Women

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what meetings he has had with the Equal Opportunities Commission to discuss the implementation of those parts of the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women relevant to his Department; and what future plans he has for such meetings.

Mr. Fowler: I have not met the Equal Opportunities Commission to discuss the strategies and have no plans to do so.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to evaluate the success of those parts of the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women which apply to his Department; what resources he has allocated to this; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: The Department is studying the text of the Nairobi forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women and will be considering how best to take its conclusions forward.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has for implementing paragraph 58 of the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women, which calls for the collection of timely and reliable statistics on the situation of women.

Mr. Fowler: A good deal of relevant statistical information is already collected by the Department. Much of this information is published.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will establish a special office within his Department to monitor periodically and accelerate the process of equitable representation of women as called for in paragraph 88 of the United Nations Nairobi forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women.

Mr. Fowler: The Department is working in conjunction with the trade unions to implement the recommendations of the programme of action on equal opportunity for women in the Civil Service as agreed by the Management and Personnel Office and the Council for Civil Service Unions. A departmental equal opportunities officer has been appointed and a network of equal opportunity officers set up covering every personnel section.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what levels of gross income entitlement to housing benefit will cease for a working single person, childless couple, couple plus one, two, three and four children and lone parent plus one, two, three and four children, assuming average rent and rates, under the proposals in Cmnd. 9691; and, in each case, at what income levels entitlement ceases at present.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the estimated £450 million reduction in expenditure on housing benefit referred to in his reply of 19 December 1985 to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East, Official Report, column 317, includes reduced expenditure on housing benefit resulting from payment of family credit; and what is his estimate of the reduction in expenditure on housing benefit due to family credit payments.

Mr. Newton: The estimated £450 million reduction in housing benefit expenditure is a broad indication of the likely effect of all the changes, including reductions in housing benefit brought about by increased family credit. It is impossible to isolate the latter effect with any degree of precision, but it is likely to contribute something in the range of £25 million to £50 million towards the overall reduction in housing benefit expenditure.

Social Security (Reform)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the cost of the transitional arrangements to prevent cash losses, as proposed in Cmnd. 9691, for each year that these transitional arrangements are expected to apply.

Mr. Newton: It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the cost of transitional protection until final decisions are taken about the rates of benefit that will apply from April 1988.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many households currently claiming housing benefit will lose entitlement to (a) rent rebate and (b) rate rebate, under the proposals in Cmnd. 9691; and, in each case, what is the number of pensioner households and the number of working households with and without children;

(2) how many families currently receiving family income supplement will not be entitled to family credit, on the basis of the structural reforms proposed in Cmnd. 9691;

(3) if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the changes in disposable income after meeting housing costs as a result of the changes proposed in housing benefit in Cmnd. 9691, by client group, on the same bases as the tables showing the effect of structural reform, including the 20 per cent. rates contribution, in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691;

(4) how many working households with children currently receive (a) both family income supplement and housing benefit, (b) just family income supplement and (c) just housing benefit; and how many, under the structural proposals in Cmnd. 9691, will receive (i) both family credit and housing benefit, (ii) just family credit and (iii) just housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will specify the amounts of supplementary benefit that will be received by unemployed single childless people and couples and lone parents aged 16 and 17 years.

Mr. Newton: I assume the hon. Member has in mind income support rather than supplementary benefit, and I refer him to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 13 January at column 495.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what compensation, if any, is allowed for the loss of (i) the direct payment of water rates and (ii) payment for residual housing costs in the illustrative benefit rates given in the technical annexe to Cmnd. 9691 for (a) single persons aged 18 to 25 years, (b) single persons aged 25 years and over and lone parents and (c) couples.

Mr. Newton: The technical annex assumes that the resources currently devoted to water rates and residual housing costs are included in the overall amounts available in setting the illustrative rates of weekly benefit. The changes in underlying benefit entitlement of those claimants who currently receive such payments are therefore included in the illustrative tables set out in the annex, along with the other factors that might affect their benefit entitlement. In common with other claimants, transitional protection will ensure that claimants currently receiving payments for water rates and residual housing costs will not experience a fall in cash income as a result of the change from supplementary benefit to income support.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the double family premium for a disabled child will be paid only if the child is blind or in receipt of mobility or attendance allowance; and whether the double premium will also be payable under the family credit scheme.

Mr. Newton: Yes, as regards income support and housing benefit.

In the case of family credit, the structure described in paragraph 3.69 of the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) is based on a maximum credit consisting simply of an adult credit and a child credit, which will be age-related for each child. It does not include the payment of a double family premium. As with the other income-related benefits, any mobility allowance or attendance allowance will be disregarded in full in estimating a family's income.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the responses to the Green Paper, "Reform of Social Security", had been analysed before the publication of the White Paper; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: All responses to the Green Paper were fully considered, but as indicated in my reply to the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) on 10 December at column 597, they were not generally in a form which could sensibly be used to provide a simple breakdown of numbers for or against particular aspects of the proposals.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table of gains and losses resulting from the proposed structural reforms contained in Cmnd. 9691, including 20 per cent. rates contribution, which also takes account of the cuts in rate rebates, child benefit and central heating additions and related changes which took effect in 1985.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 20 December at columns 435-436.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans the Government have for payment and assessment of family credit to strikers' families during the period of a strike under the White Paper on the reform of social security.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1985, c. 495]: The Government intend to consult further on the operational procedures for family credit. However it is envisaged that payment of the credit would generally be suspended when the recipient was on strike, but that payment would be allowed to continue if a strike lasted for no more than a few days. It would of course be open to the striker to claim income support, subject to the trade dispute rules, in respect of his dependants. Assessment of family credit claimed where a member of the family is on strike will be on the basis of the latter's normal earnings.

Disabled Children

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the number of (a) blind children, (b) children in receipt of attendance allowance and mobility allowance and (c) other disabled children; and what is his estimate, in each case, where the family is claiming (i) supplementary benefit and (ii) standard housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: The latest information relating to blind children and those receiving attendance allowance and mobility allowance is set out in the table. It is not possible to produce reliable and up to date estimates of the numbers of other disabled children in advance of the results of the disablement survey being undertaken by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Neither is it possible to produce reliable estimates of the numbers of disabled children living in families receiving standard housing benefit.

Disabled children in Great Britain (000's)*

	Blind†	Receiving mobility allowance	Receiving attendance allowance
Total number	2	19	57
Number of families receiving supplementary benefit	n/a	7	1

Notes

* Figures overlap, and relate to different dates. The latest available figure has been used in each case.

† The figures for the blind relate to children registered with their local authority.

Social Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the social fund will make non-recoverable grants only for the purposes of maternity and funeral expenses and community care needs; and whether all other payments will be on the basis of a loan.

Mr. Newton: Yes, except that payments for funeral expenses will be recoverable from the estate of the deceased. The circumstances in which payments will be made for community care needs will be set out in guidance which will be published in due course.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update to 1983 and, if possible 1984, table 34.41 of "Social Security Statistics 1984", or provide such information as is available relating to receipt of the long-term supplementary benefit rate and additional requirements; and if he will give figures for the number of carers receiving the long term supplementary benefit rate.

Mr. Newton: Social security statistics giving the 1983 figures will be published in March. The information requested is provided in table 10.4 of Supplementary Benefit Statistics, Annual Inquiry December 1983, a copy of which is in the Library. It is regretted that information for 1984 is not yet available.

Income Support Scheme

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans for changes in the entitlement to benefit for the families of those involved in trade disputes under the income support scheme.

Mr. Newton: We intend to make broadly similar provision for trade disputes in relation to income support as currently exists for supplementary benefit, subject to some minor changes and clarifications.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he intends to take, in relation to the decision of the Social Security Commissioners, reference CSB/930/1985, other than his response to applications for review from individual claimants, in relation to (a) supplementary benefit claimants who applied for exceptionally severe weather single payments during last winter but who were refused on the basis of the instructions from the chief adjudication officer then in force, (b) the 170,000 claimants who, according to his reply of 22 October 1985 to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East, Official Report, column 132, received payments which should now be recalculated and (c) claimants who made no claim for a single payment because they were aware of the instructions set out in the chief adjudication officer's guidance.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 6 December at column 394. The chief adjudication officer's guidance covers both review of decisions made last year and cases where no claim was made at the time.

Artificial Limb and Appliance Centres (Report)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to the answer of 13 November, Official Report, column 207-8, why the McColl committee report on services received by patients at artificial limb and appliance centres has not been published; when he expects to publish it; if he still intends to publish it in full and in the form in which it was submitted to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Hawksley) on 19 December at column 310, publication before the recess proved impracticable. Since originally submitting its report the working party has made a number of amendments which will be incorporated in the full text to be published shortly.

School Hygiene Inspections

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many children were seen by school nurses in the course of hygiene inspections in 1979 and each succeeding year; and what percentage were subsequently referred for medical examination or treatment.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that the exact information requested is not available. Relevant information which is available centrally is shown in the table. It would be extremely unusual for pupils to be referred for medical examination or treatment solely because of infestation.

School health service in England
Hygiene inspections

Year	Examinations of pupils in schools by school nurses or other authorised persons (thousands)*	Pupils found to be infested† (thousands)
1979	14,500	161
1980	14,573	180
1981	14,223	189
1982	12,795	170
1983	11,682	173
1984	9,402	132

* Individual pupils may have more than one examination during the year.

† Number of individual pupils, not instances of infestation.

NHS Privatisation

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether a record is kept by his Department of any representations made by hon. Members about the privatisation of particular contracts in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: A record of written representations from hon. and right hon. Members is kept.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he or any of his ministerial colleagues last had contact with directors, staff or consultants of Hospital Hygiene Services, Crothalls, Office Cleaning Services, Pritchards, Brengreen or any of their subsidiaries about the contracting out of hospital services.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Friend met with representatives of all the contractors listed except Brengreen on 23 July 1985.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which company lost a cleaning, catering or laundry contract with a health authority in the last year for failing to achieve standards laid down in the contract; and which was the health authority concerned.

Mr. Hayhoe: Bromley health authority terminated the domestic contract at Orpington hospital which had been awarded to Hospital Hygiene Services.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether any district health authority chairman has expressed concern to him in discussions about the scope for efficiency savings in the current year and 1987; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether any district health authorities have made any representations to him about the scope for savings in cost improvement programmes in 1986-87 compared with 1985-86.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Consultants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish information held by his Department on health authorities which have instituted formal arrangements to monitor consultants' commitments to National Health Service work and on health authorities which have instituted disciplinary proceedings against consultants in relation to their commitment to the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have nothing to add to my reply to the hon. Member on 19 December, at column 312.

Operations (Survival Rates)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies have been made by or for his Department into the comparative survival rates following operations in different hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has not sponsored any study specifically on this topic but has commissioned the social medicine and health services research unit, St. Thomas' hospital, London, to conduct research into the incidence of deaths in disease groups amenable to medical treatment. The final report is expected in 1987.

Child Health

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies have been carried out by or for his Department into trends in child health, nationally, regionally or locally.

Mr. Whitney: The following studies are currently funded by the Department and are either wholly or in part concerned with trends in child health.

Professor F. Harris, Institute of Child Health, University of Liverpool — Liverpool Congenital Malformations Registry.

Professor O. H. Wolff and Dr. I. Smith, Institute of Child Health, London University Phenylketonuria Register. Jointly funded with Medical Research Council.

Professor W. Holland, United Medical and Dental Schools, St. Thomas' Campus, London, National Study of Health and Growth.

Dr. I. Chalmers, National Perinatal Epidemiology Unit, Oxford — a range of projects are being undertaken by this unit.

Professor D. L. Miller, St. Mary's Hospital Medical School, London—National Childhood Encephalopathy Study.

Dr. D. L. Crombie, General Practice Research Unit, Birmingham—National Morbidity Studies.

Professor R. Davie, National Children's Bureau—National Child Development Study.

Dr. W. O. Williams, Royal College of GPs, Swansea Research Unit — The long-term effects of whooping cough in children.

Professor M. Stacey, University of Warwick—Overview of research on the provision and utilisation of the child health services. This includes details of some locally and centrally funded projects completed between 1980 and 1984.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps the Government have taken to reduce social class inequalities in child health.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Government's policy is aimed at directing health care services towards the most vulnerable groups of people and towards those areas of the country with the greatest need. In the field of child health, the Government have endorsed the recommendations of the maternity services advisory committee, which emphasised the need for a high level of maternity and neonatal services. The Government have also initiated campaigns to improve the take-up of vaccination and immunisation; and is discussing with the professional bodies concerned the content and scope of child health surveillance. These activities will benefit those children whose health needs may arise from social inequalities.

Primary Care Package

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the district health authorities areas in which the £9 million primary care package awarded in 1983 has been spent;

(2) how much of the £9 million primary care package was spent centrally.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, further to the answer of 12 December 1985, Official Report, columns 767-8, the spending items mentioned in the last sentence of the answer were financed from the £9 million primary care package.

Mr. Hayhoe: Yes.

NHS Property Sales

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish an estimate of the number of residential places for National Health Service staff which will be lost as a result of the selling of National Health Service property in 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall publish this information as soon as I have received and approved action plans from all health authorities. I regret that a number of authorities failed to submit their plans by 31 December but I am expecting to receive most during January.

General Practitioner Premises

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the current levels of Government-financed or backed spending or lending for the building or improvement of general practitioner premises; and if they are cash limited.

Mr. Hayhoe: No separate figures are available for spending on the cost rent scheme which is not cash limited. Spending under the improvement grant scheme amounted to £2·6 million in 1984-85, the last year for which out-turn figures are available. This spending is not cash limited. Spending under the enhanced improvement grant scheme for inner cities is cash limited and amounted to £0·5 million in 1984-85. The cash allocation for the scheme for the current financial year is £1·25 million. The General Practice Finance Corporation, whose borrowing is covered by Treasury guarantees and is subject to public expenditure control, lent £23·2 million to general medical practitioners in 1984-85 for the purchase, construction or adaptation of surgery premises. Its net borrowing limit for 1985-86 is £22·5 million.

Child Abuse

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the further programme of work on child abuse which his Department now has in hand.

Mr. Whitney: We expect to make such a statement shortly.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that no voluntary sector activity in the fields of health and social services will cease or be substantially reduced as a result of the abolition of the metropolitan counties and the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to him on 10 December at column 612 and on 18 December at column 237. Decisions about whether any particular voluntary sector activity affected by abolition of the metropolitan county councils and the Greater London council should continue to be supported from public funds are for the appropriate successor authorities.

Inpatient Stays

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how the attitude of patients or carers to the reduction of inpatient stays will be measured; and if he will make a statement;

(2)if he is aware of any local, district or regional surveys of attitudes of patients or carers to the reduction in average inpatient stays in any or all types of hospital.

Mr. Whitney: We are not aware of any studies of patients' or carers' attitudes specifically on reductions in lengths of stay.

Statistics

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those statistics which were collected by or for his Department on health and social services matters which are no longer collected as a result of Rayner exercises in Government Departments, health authorities or family practitioners' committees.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Budget Spectacles

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the information collected by his Department on the market price of budget spectacles.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information collected by my Department is that which is available to everyone from advertising and published price lists.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how his Department arrived at its estimate of the median interval between a patient being placed on a hip replacement waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital for a total hip replacement; and when the equivalent figure for 1984 will be available.

Mr. Whitney: The estimated median interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service non-psychiatric hospital is based on the sample information held centrally. The median value is the waiting time of the middle case of a group of patients when ranked in order of waiting time. Equivalent 1984 information is expected to be available in May this year.

Residential Care (Booklet)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he has not sought to make "Home Life—A Code of Priorities for Residential Care" binding on local authorities.

Mr. Whitney: It would not be appropriate to make binding the provisions of a code that was drafted in advisory terms and dealt with matters on which discretionary judgments had to be made. However, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Social Services and for Wales, in their foreword to the published code, asked local authorities to regard it in the same light as general guidance issued under section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970.

Nursing Homes (Booklet)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he has not formally directed health authorities to conform with "Registration and Inspection of Nursing Homes: A Handbook for Health Authorities".

Mr. Whitney: That would have been inappropriate. As the preface to the handbook makes clear, its purpose is twofold: to provide advice to health authorities on their responsibilities in relation to registration and inspection of nursing homes, and to provide model guidelines, which can be adapted to meet local needs, to assist health authorities in carrying out their duties.

Post-operative Infections

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the sample information on post-operative infections held by his Department for 1979 and each year since.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Stanley Royd Hospital, Wakefield

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he received the report of the committee of inquiry into the outbreak of food poisoning at Stanley Royd hospital, Wakefield.

Mr. Hayhoe: On 6 December 1985.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of food poisoning occurred in National Health Service hospitals in 1979 and each succeeding year.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 28 November at columns 652-654, which provides the information requested for England and Wales.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people died of food poisoning in National Health Service hospitals in 1979 and each succeeding year, distinguishing between patients and others.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Tobacco Company Sponsorship

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the acceptance by health authorities of tobacco company sponsorship for National Health Service hospitals or wards.

Mr. Whitney: We would expect that with their first-hand knowledge of the health effects of smoking authorities would wish to avoid the acceptance of tobacco company sponsorship for National Health Service hospitals or wards.

Academic Department of General Practice

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which are the five academic departments of general practice which have been supported; and what was the total cost of this support.

Mr. Hayhoe: The five academic departments of general practice which are receiving support as part of the initiative on primary care in inner cities are those at St. Bartholomew's hospital, St. Thomas' hospital, Guy's hospital, St. Mary's hospital and University College hospital. Each Department has been advised that it may spend up to £25,000 in each of two years to fund additional posts to work on projects which would benefit primary health care in their areas.

Homeless and Rootless Persons

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the localities covered by the experimental schemes to promote primary health care of the homeless and rootless.

Mr. Hayhoe: Pilot trials for providing primary health care for homeless and rootless people will be mounted in the localities of City and east London and Camden and Islington family practitioner committees.

Short-term Benefits

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in what circumstances reduced rates of short-term benefits are paid; and whether he has any plans for changing them.

Mr. Newton: Payment of short-term benefits at the full rate depends on the claimant having paid or been credited with national insurance contributions on earnings of 50 times the lower earnings limit, below which contributions are not payable, in the relevant tax year. In the current year the lower limit is £35·50 so that to qualify for full benefit a person needs to have paid contributions on earnings of at least £1,775 in the year. People who cannot meet this condition but have paid contributions on earnings of £887·50 or more receive half-rate benefit and those who have paid on £1,331·25 or more receive three-quarter rate.

The half rate of employment benefit for a single person is £15·23 and the three-quarter rate is £22·84. The rates for sickness benefit and maternity allowance are slightly lower. The administrative costs of paying such reduced rates of benefit are high—over 20 per cent. Over half the recipients receive no financial advantage from the benefit because they also draw supplementary benefit. The rest are likely either to have partners who are working or to have other resources of their own.

The Government have concluded that these arrangements are an unjustified complication of the social security system and do not represent a sensible use of resources. We therefore propose in the forthcoming Social Security Bill to abolish the power to make regulations for the payment of these reduced rates. Subject to parliamentary agreement to this proposal further consideration will be given to the date of implementation. Transitional protection will be given to people who are receiving the benefit at that date. The change will save about £20 million net in a full year.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list in the Official Report those family practitioner committees which have been criticised by his Department's director of audit or other officials from his Department for having made insufficient provision for internal audit; whether he will estimate the annual expenditure necessary to remedy those identified shortcomings; and whether he will now revise his earlier view that internal audit for family practitioner committees should not attract additional Government funding.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1985, c. 153-4]: I regret that the second page of my answer was omitted. The full text was as follows:

"In their preliminary review of the accounts of Family Practitioner Committees for the financial year 1985-86 Statutory Auditors have, to date, issued reports on the inadequate provision for internal audit at the following Committees:

Oxfordshire FPC
Suffolk FPC
Cambridgeshire FPC
Norfolk FPC
Buckinghamshire FPC
Coventry FPC
Staffordshire FPC
Birmingham FPC
Walsall FPC
Solihull FPC
Dudley FPC
Warwickshire FPC
Wolverhampton FPC
Sandwell FPC
Shropshire FPC

Following their examination of the accounts for 1984-85, the last year for which responsibility for the provision of internal audit services to Family Practitioner Committees lay with the linked District Health Authority, Statutory Auditors commented on the inadequacy of such services at the following authorities:

Huddersfield HA — in respect of Kirklees FPC
North Lincolnshire HA — in respect of Lincolnshire FPC
Wakefield HA — in respect of Wakefield FPC
Doncaster HA — in respect of Doncaster FPC
Chichester HA — in respect of West Sussex FPC
Wirral HA — in respect of Wirral FPC
St. Helens and Knowsley HA — in respect of St. Helens and Knowsley FPC
Isle of Wight HA— in respect of Isle of Wight FPC
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly HA — in respect of Cornwall and Isles of Scilly FPC
City and Hackney HA — in respect of City and East London FPC
South Sefton HA — in respect of Sefton FPC

The expenditure necessary to remedy shortcomings in internal audit depends on the assessment by individual FPCs of their needs and on decisions they take on the way that these needs should be met.

All relevant burdens on FPCs will, however, be taken into account in the distribution of the limited resources available to FPCs for 1986-87. Consideration will be given to whether any financial help can be provided to FPCs with little or no current internal audit resources."

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Upper Waiting Hall (Exhibitions)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will take steps to introduce a revised system for booking exhibitions in the Upper Waiting Hall which avoids the need for personal queuing.

Mr. Biffen: I understand that the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee of the Services Committee will be reviewing this matter shortly.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the present system for booking exhibitions in the Upper Waiting Hall; who is permitted actually to make the bookings; what are the time limits on bookings; and on how many occasions in the last 12 months persons have sought, at the earliest available opportunity, to book exhibitions more than there have been slots available.

Mr. Biffen: Under arrangements agreed by the Services Committee exhibitions may be booked on a first-come-first-served basis at the Serjeant at Arms' Office. A booking may be made by an hon. Member or by his secretary or research assistant. Bookings may be made immediately after the announcement of the appropriate recess dates as follows:

Recess Date Announced	Booking Period Available
Summer	End of Summer Recess to Christmas Recess
Christmas	End of Christmas Recess to Easter Recess
Easter	End of Easter Recess to Summer Recess

In the past 12 months, 17 hon. Members applied for bookings on opening days without success.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Lord Privy Seal (1) if he will take steps to introduce arrangements for booking the Upper Waiting Hall for exhibitions for a period of half a week; and if he will make a statement.

(2) if he will take steps to introduce arrangements to permit two small exhibitions to be mounted simultaneously in the Upper Waiting Hall, one on each side; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I have asked the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee of the Services Committee to include these matters in its forthcoming review of exhibition arrangements.

DEFENCE

Defence Attachés

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has in mind to strengthen the contribution of defence attachés to the work of his Department.

Mr. Younger: Our service attachés play a very important part in the work of posts overseas: in representing the British armed forces overseas; in developing the relationships between the armed services of this country and those of the nations to which they are accredited, including, where appropriate, facilitating military co-operation; in assisting defence equipment co-operation and collaboration; and, together with the head of defence export services and his staff, in assisting defence export effort.

We have sought to strengthen our effort in a number of these areas, including military assistance overseas, equipment co-operation and collaboration, and defence sales. In view of the important contribution our service attachés can make, I believe that it would be helpful if they were able to talk to Ministers, my senior military advisers and officials of my Department and of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in order to keep themselves abreast with latest developments.

I have therefore decided, in consultation with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, that the principal service attachés and advisers now serving abroad should return to this country in the spring in order that as a group they may exchange views, and have the opportunity to discuss their roles and responsibilities with me, my ministerial colleagues and our advisers. I believe that this exchange of views will be of considerable mutual value.

Nuclear Tests (Compensation)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Defence what procedure the National Radiological Protection Board has developed on circulation of the questionnaire sent to nuclear veterans who served on Christmas Island; and what further questionnaire is sent out when the personnel involved on the nuclear tests are already deceased and the cause of death is identified as cancer.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence has commissioned the National Radiological Protection Board to carry out a survey on its behalf of the health of United Kingdom participants in the British atmospheric nuclear weapon test programmes both on Christmas Island and in Australia. However, the procedures by which the national Radiological Protection Board carries out the survey are a matter for the board, and I have asked the board to write to the right hon. Member in answer to this question.

Nuclear Duties (Guidelines)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will put in the Library the guidelines he has circulated to service men on nuclear duties.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) on 18 December 1984, at column 101.

GEC-Plessey (Merger)

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the implications for defence procurement of the proposed merger of GEC and Plessey.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement explaining where and when the recent meeting of national armaments directors of France, Germany and Italy took place at which the decision was made to purchase only helicopters built in Europe; and what steps he took to publicise the decisions made at the meeting and the implications of the decisions for defence policy.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 534]: The national armaments directors of France, Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom met in London on 29 November 1985. Her Majesty's Government's position on the NADs' recommendation was set out by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the House of Commons on 16 December 1985 and again on 13 January 1986.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government are satisfied that other EEC countries would be willing to supply helicopters to the United Kingdom for use in the Falklands should hostilities recommence.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 533]: I have no reason to believe that the supply of helicopters would be a problem in these circumstances.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the letter to him, dated 3 January, from Mr. Horne was received; when it was sent; and whether he had prior knowledge of the dispatch of the letter or its terms.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 525]: The letter from Mr. Horne was received on 3 January, the day it was sent. My right hon. Friend was aware of its terms before the letter was received in the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his letter, dated 3 January, to Mr. Horne, whether the Italian Government or Agusta have said that in the event of a link-up between Westland and Sikorsky-Fiat they will not proceed with the full development of the 13-tonne (EH 101) helicopter launched in 1984; which other countries would be interested in replacing Westland in this bilateral arrangement; whether any United Kingdom defence procurement interest would be jeopardised; and what claims Westland or the British Government would have under the terms of the agreement against Agusta if the agreement was denounced on the Italian side.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1985, c. 528]: The EH 101 project was not included in the projects referred to by my right hon. Friend in his letter of 3 January, where he stated explicitly that there were indications available to Her Majesty's Government that a Westland link with Sikorsky-Fiat would be incompatible with participation by that company on behalf of the United kingdom in the collaborative battlefield helicopter and NH90 projects. There have been recent indications that Agusta is content to proceed with full development of the EH 101 helicopter.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish in the Official Report details of the 13-tonne class (EH 101) helicopter being developed by Westland and Augusta; what requirement for each of the armed services in the United Kingdom would be met by this helicopter; how many machines would be purchased by the United Kingdom and Italian Governments and at what cost; whether comparable machines are available or under development in the United States of America; whether the Augusta-Westland machine would be cheaper than a comparable United States machine; and whether the complete machine would be made in the United Kingdom independently of components made in Italy.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 529]: The EH 101 helicopter is being produced to meet the Royal Navy's requirement to replace the Sea King and Lynx in an anti-submarine role. Initial orders are expected to amount to about 90 helicopters, including 50 for the United Kingdom. Total programme costs for the United Kingdom are estimated at £1·5 billion at current economic rates. There is no comparable machine currently available or under development in the United States of America. Collaborative production will involve the assembly in both countries of complete helicopters from components some of which will have been made in the United Kingdom and some in Italy.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the significance of the Tornado aircraft programme to the defence of the United Kingdom; how much public money has been committed to it; and if he intends to cancel the programme in the light of the disclosure of Libyan part ownership of Fiat.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 534.]: The Tornado aircraft, in its different versions, will provide a major part of the RAF's front line until well into the next century. Four thousand, six hundred and three million pounds had been spent on the programme up to 31 March 1985. There is no intention of cancelling it.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the significance of the European fighter aircraft to the defence of the United Kingdom; how much public money has been committed to it; and if he intends to cancel the programme in the light of the disclosure of Libyan part ownership of Fiat.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 534.]: The European fighter aircraft is intended to be the successor to Phantom and Jaguar aircraft currently in service in the air defence and ground attack roles. To date, we have spent or contractually commited some £2 million on the collaborative programme. In addition, the participating nations are committed to the project definition phase of the programme; this is the subject of current contractual negotiation and it would therefore be inappropriate to publish a cost estimate. The question of cancellation does not arise.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 16 January 1986

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Drugs

Mr. Dalyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the British Veterinary Association, the National Farmers Union, and the Consumers Association, about a black market in the growth-boosting drugs, after the European Economic Community hormone ban; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: I am aware of the concern felt in many quarters on this aspect, and we have drawn it to the attention of the Council of Ministers, although no formal representations have recently been made to me.

Crayfish

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what action his Department has taken under the Import of Live Fish (England and Wales) Act 1980 to prevent the import of American signal crayfish;

(2) what action he is taking following the observations in the 11th report of the Nature Conservancy Council on the spread of crayfish plague in British waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Unfortunately, the considerable practical difficulties involved in combating a disease which attacks wild fish in their natural environment mean that efforts now to eradicate crayfish plague would almost certainly be unsuccessful. Moreover, the necessary restrictions on all imports of live crayfish, including those for the table, and controls on their movement throughout England and Wales would be highly disruptive to trade and expensive to enforce. For these reasons we have not taken any action to control imports of signal crayfish or to restrict or monitor their movements in this country.

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why his Department has continued to provide support from public funds for an organisation which markets American signal crayfish in view of the health record of imports of such fish.

Mr. Jopling: In 1981 the Government contributed towards the cost of a feasibility study into the co-operative marketing of crayfish matured in this country. The grant was made under the agricultural and horticultural co-operation scheme which was then administered by the Central Council for Agricultural and Horticultural Co-operation (now Food from Britain). As a result, the British Crayfish Marketing Association was established and in 1982 it received a very small grant towards its formation costs. My Department has made no further payments to the BCMA.

River Mersey (Silt Dumping)

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current position regarding the issuing of a dumping licence for silt dredged from the River Mersey, its adjacent docks, locks and channels.

Mr. Jopling: The licences issued under the Dumping at Sea Act 1974 for the disposal to sea of dredge spoil from the River Mersey and its environs expired on 31 December 1985. Applications for their renewal were not received until well into the month of December. As it usually takes about two months for applications to be fully considered by our scientific advisers, the old licences were extended until 28 February to allow time for proper assessments to be made.

Under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, which now governs the issue of licences for sea disposal, Ministers are required to have regard to the protection of the marine environment, the living resources which it supports and human health. We shall take full account of these considerations and all other relevant factors in coming to decisions on these applications, which we expect to reach well before the end of February.

Nets

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he plans to seek further controls over the use of nylon monofilament nets in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 579]: No. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastleigh (Sir D. Price) on 29 November 1985, at column 702.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Official Secrets Act

Mr. John Morris asked the Attorney-General whether he will refer the apparent breach of any security involved in the disclosure of the contents of the recent letter of the Solicitor-General to the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) to the Director of Public Prosecutions for his consideration and advice as to whether a decision to prosecute under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act should be taken.

The Attorney-General: An internal inquiry has been instituted into the matter to which the right hon. and learned Gentleman refers. When it has been completed — and it is still some considerable way from being completed—I shall be in a position to consider whether it is appropriate to follow the procedure which he suggests.

SCOTLAND

Summerston Shopping Centre, Glasgow

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Scottish Development Agency hopes to complete its arrangements with Glasgow district council for landscaping the coup at the Summerston shopping centre, Glasgow.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The agency is re-appraising all proposed new projects and expects to reach decisions by March on the priority to be accorded to this project, and, if it is to go ahead, on the time scale for undertaking it.

Ruchill Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what further consideration his Department has given to proposals from Greater Glasgow health board for providing a psychiatric day unit at Ruchill hospital, Glasgow and an inpatient unit to serve the north-west of the city.

Mr. John MacKay: Formal proposals for a psychiatric development at Ruchill are still awaited from the health board. I understand, however, that the board is now actively working on these proposals, which will require to be set in the context of an overall strategy for the development of psychiatric services in the area.

Lothian Regional Council (RSG)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of rate support grant paid to Lothian regional council in 1979 and 1985, respectively; and what percentage of the expenditure of the council those figures represented.

Mr. Ancram: Total rate support grant paid to Lothian regional council in respect of 1979-80 was £134·1 million. The grant paid in respect of 1985-86 will not be known until final expenditure information is available. The grant payable for 1985-86 on the basis of the Rate Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1985 is £182 million. This has already been adjusted for grant penalties and interest rate changes and will be further adjusted for these reasons as necessary. These grant figures are 52·6 per cent. of total expenditure, including loan charges, in 1979-80 and 45·6 per cent. in 1985-86.

WALES

Parrot Corporation

Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will report the outcome of Mr. Douglas Baker's internal investigation into the Welsh Development Agency's handling of its investment in the Parrot Corporation.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I announced on 28 October, at columns 313-14, that I had invited Mr. Douglas Baker, chairman of Touche Ross and Co., to examine the Welsh Development agency's handling of its investment in the Parrot Corporation and the agency's supervision of its investment, having special regard to the provisions of the WDA Act 1975, the investment guidelines laid down by the Welsh Office and the WDA's own investment manual; and to report to me.

Mr. Baker has now completed his investigation. I have expressed my gratitude to him for the thoroughness with which he has undertaken this task.

As I earlier informed the House, Mr. Baker was asked to undertake an internal investigation. His report contains material that is of a commercially confidential nature. In view of this and the continuing police investigation into the circumstances of the original investment and the conduct of individuals it would not be appropriate to publish his internal advice to me. I undertook to report further to the House.

Mr. Baker found that the transaction between the Parrot Corporation and Northern Trust involving a collateralised deposit was most unusual from a commercial viewpoint and that it could not reasonably have been anticipated by the agency. I have no reason to dispute that finding. Mr. Baker also found that the WDA Act 1975 and the investment guidelines had been followed. However, although Mr. Baker also concluded that even the most elaborate procedures may not have been sufficient to prevent the circumstances that arose, he did find that certain of the procedures followed by the WDA in its handling of the investment and in its subsequent monitoring were deficient.

I have discussed these findings with the chairman of the WDA. It is clear that for the future there must be arrangements to ensure that the deficiencies identified are not repeated. The chairman has informed me that a number of measures have already been taken by the agency: in particular, arrangements with respect to the appointment of non-executive directors and their responsibilities have been substantially clarified and a new system to improve the monitoring of investments has been established within the agency. In the light of Mr. Baker's findings, the chairman has also informed me that steps will be taken to ensure that the agency obtains reports from outside accountants in all appropriate investment cases and to allow closer supervision of the legal aspects of completion deals. By these means the agency has taken or is in the process of taking steps to ensure that the deficiencies identified by Mr. Baker have been dealt with.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what expenditure will be incurred during the current year and for 1986-87, by each health authority in Wales, on the cervical smear programme;

(2) what was the total expenditure incurred by the National Health Service on its cervical smear programme, by health authority, in Wales, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is not available centrally.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the extent to which the current level of funding of the cervical smear programme in each of the area health authorities in Wales for the current year admits of the completion of the service, tests and follow-up reporting to all patients requesting or referred by their general practitioners for such tests.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The level of funding for this service is essentially a matter for the individual health authorities to determine in the light of other demands on their resources.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the total expenditure incurred on the cervical smear programme in Mid Glamorgan is accounted for by the laboratory testing of smears; and which centres are used for tests conducted for each of the districts within the Mid Glamorgan area health authority.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Information in respect of expenditure on the cervical smear programme is not available centrally. Pathology laboratories at the following hospitals in Mid Glamorgan conducted cervical cytology tests during 1984: Prince Charles, East Glamorgan general and Bridgend general.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements exist in each of the Welsh health authorities for follow-up reporting of results to National Health Service patients who have received cervical smear tests.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Responsibility for the administration of this service lies with the health authorities. The report of the joint NHS-Welsh Office working party which was published last July recommended certain follow-up action and safeguards that should be incorporated into local procedures. Some authorities have commented on the working party's findings and these are being considered prior to the issue of a circular advising authorities on the implementation of the recommendations.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state for each of the last five years the number of cervical smear tests conducted in each district of the Mid Glamorgan health authority and the total number for each of the other Welsh area health authorities.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of cervical cytology tests reported by pathology laboratories for each of the years 1980 to 1984 are given in the table. It is not possible to relate these figures to the district of residence of the patients tested.

Health district/Management Unit	Number of Tests
	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Mid Glamorgan
Ogwr	7,002	6,688	6,274	6,974	8,317
Taff-Ely	8,606	9,678	9,277	10,948	11,298
Rhondda	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil
Merthyr Cynon	6,817	7,631	6,830	7,751	10,836
Rhymney Valley	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil
Total	22,425	23,997	22,381	25,673	30,451
Clwyd	19,390	20,435	19,144	20,821	22,304
East Dyfed	17,650	18,920	17,974	19,372	16,319
Pembrokeshire*	..	..	Nil	Nil	Nil
Gwent	22,506	23,569	23,241	25,112	27,828
Gwynedd	8,763	9,825	9,684	10,451	12,791
Powys	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil
South Glamorgan	28,877	32,036	30,724	31,920	38,632
West Glamorgan	19,495	20,536	18,882	21,026	23,055
Wales	139,106	149,318	142,030	154,375	171,380

* Figures included with East Dyfed for 1980 and 1981.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the additional capital allocation proposed for local authorities in Wales for 1986-87 compared with 1985-86; and what is his estimate of (a) the additional annual loans charges and (b) the other revenue cost consequences arising which will arise from this increased capital allocation.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The total of capital allocations available to local authorities in Wales for 1986-87 is £322·8 million, compared with £263·3 million in 1985-86; an increase of some £60 million, or 23 per cent. Additional capital expenditure may increase revenue expenditure in two ways—loan charges to repay any borrowing, and current expenditure, arising from increases in associated manpower and running expenses. Provision for this expenditure increased by £25·7 million and £59·1 million respectively between 1985-86 and 1986-87. The precise effect on current expenditure will depend on the nature of the schemes undertaken. Indeed, in announcing allocations for individual authorities on 16 December I emphasised that authorities should give priority to revenue saving schemes, such as projects to eliminate surplus school places. In the case of housing, a substantial part of the additional resources have been earmarked for public and private sector renovation, which does not, of course, result in increased current expenditure.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will specify the mechanism by which grant moneys which are withheld from local authorities in Wales will be credited back to local authorities in due course, and not redirected for use by other public services in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: If aggregate expenditure by local authorities in Wales exceeds the level of provision in the rate support grant for 1986-87, there will be a net under-claim on block grant. As I indicated in my statement to the House on 18 December, any such surplus grant will be made available for local government spending in Wales. I shall await the budget returns of authorities before determining how this surplus might be distributed.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to issue the final settlement figures for the rate support grant for local authorities in Wales for the year 1984-85; and why there has been a delay in this matter.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: There has been no delay. In accordance with the timetable agreed with the Welsh local authority associations, I expect to lay the final supplementary report for 1984-85 in July of this year, after the customary audit of local authorities' accounts has been completed.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to change any of his Department's cash limits for the current year, in respect of rate support grants, national parks supplementary grants, and transport supplementary grants.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the following amendments are proposed. The cash limit for national parks supplementary grants (class 18, vote 4) will be increased by £29,000, from £2,000,000 to £2,029,000. The cash limit for transport supplementary grants (class 18, vote 10) will be increased by £9,000, from £26,500,000 to £26,509,000. These increases will be matched by a corresponding reduction of £38,000 to the cash limit for RSG (class 18, vote 2), from £828,600,000 to £828,562,000.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Cells (Detained persons)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last visited remand prisoners in police cells; where; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend Lord Glenarthur visited the cells at Horseferry road magistrates court on 30 July 1985.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces outside of the metropolitan area have detained prisoners in police cells in 1985; where they were detained; and what were their age and sex.

Mr. Mellor: The number of prisoners held in police cells by provincial police forces between 18 October 1985 (that is since my reply to a similar question by the hon. Member on 28 October) and 31 December 1985 was as follows:

Counties	Adult Males	Under 21 Males	Adult Females	Under 21 Females
Bedfordshire	—	—	2	—
Cambridgeshire	—	—	1	—
Dorset	—	—	6	—
Essex	35	—	2	3
Hampshire	—	—	11	4
Hertfordshire	29	—	—	—
Kent	—	—	3	1
Leicestershire	—	—	—	—
Norfolk	—	—	1	—
Northampton	—	—	—	1
Suffolk	—	—	8	—
Surrey	11	—	—	—
Sussex	54	—	—	1
Thames Valley	—	—	7	—
Wiltshire	—	—	1	—
Total	129	—	42	10

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the longest period of time that a person was detained in police cells in 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Twenty-nine nights.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men, (b) women and (c) juveniles in custody in police cells on each day in 1985 by location.

Mr. Mellor: The number of prisoners held in police cells in 1985 after 18 October, the last occasion on which I answered this question for the hon. Member, was as follows:

	Adult males		Adult females		Males under 21
	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Total
October
18-21	36	—	—	—	—	—	36
21-22	6	—	5	—	—	11	22
22-23	20	—	—	—	—	9	29
23-24	5	—	—	—	—	5	10
24-25	—	—	11	—	2	—	13
25-28	—	—	12	3	—	—	15
28-29	3	—	11	2	—	—	16
29-30	—	—	6	—	—	—	6
30-31	12	—	15	1	—	—	28
31-1	5	—	13	—	—	7	25
November
3-4	12	3	—	3	—	9	27
4-5	3	—	6	—	—	5	14
5-6	6	—	9	2	2	—	19
6-7	7	—	13	1	6	1	28
7-8	—	—	21	—	1	2	24
8-11	24	—	18	3	—	—	45
11-12	2	—	14	1	—	2	19
12-13	3	—	20	—	—	7	30
13-14	1	—	20	1	2	—	24
14-15	—	—	24	1	3	—	28
15-18	27	—	36	—	—	—	63
18-19	19	—	15	1	—	—	35
19-20	24	—	16	4	—	—	44

	Adult males		Adult females		Males under 21
	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Total
20-21	8	—	24	1	—	1	34
21-22	13	—	22	—	—	—	35
22-25	36	—	45	6	—	—	87
25-26	40	—	19	6	—	2	67
26-27	41	—	26	1	—	1	69
27-28	16	5	31	1	3	—	56
28-29	—	—	36	2	3	—	41
29-2	45	—	48	—	—	—	93
December
2-3	44	3	20	3	—	3	73
3-4	77	16	24	2	4	—	123
4-5	87	21	19	—	6	3	136
5-6	57	26	10	—	—	3	96
6-9	111	9	—	3	—	3	126
9-10	37	—	6	1	—	11	55
10-11	—	—	7	—	—	—	7
11-12	2	—	9	—	—	—	11
12-13	16	—	15	—	—	—	31
16-17	16	—	1	—	—	3	20
17-18	9	—	—	—	—	—	9
18-19	5	—	4	—	—	—	9
19-20	8	—	6	—	—	1	15
20-23	3	—	—	—	—	—	3
23-24	7	—	—	—	—	—	7

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men, (b) women and (c) juveniles in custody in police cells on each day in 1986 by location.

Mr. Mellor: As at 13 January 1986, prisoners have been held in police cells as follows:

	Adult Females		Adult Males		Males under 21
	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Metropolitan Police	Other Forces	Total
January
1-2	15	—	—	—	—	—	15
2-3	4	—	—	—	—	—	4
7-8	3	—	—	—	1	—	4
10-13	15	—	—	—	—	—	15

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest cost of holding a person in police cells.

Mr. Mellor: The average cost per night of holding a prisoner in police cells based on the latest accounts submitted by the Metropolitan police, is £176.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of police officers deployed in 1985 in guarding persons detained in police cells.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on prisoners in police cells in the last financial year.

Mr. Mellor: Total expenditure incurred by the Department in the financial year 1984-85 on holding prisoners in police cells was £3,358,560.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on conditions in which unconvicted and unsentenced persons are held in police and court cells.

Mr. Mellor: We are conscious of the fact that court cells are not designed to hold prisoners for more than a few hours and that the medical and other facilities leave much to be desired. The police, however, are doing everything they can under difficult circumstances to provide the best possible facilities.

Racially Motivated Attacks

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from each chief of police listing the number of racially motivated attacks that have been recorded in each of the last five years; and what special measures they have taken to deal with this problem;

(2) if he has knowledge of any police force that does not record racially motivated attacks;

(3) what advice or guidelines have been issued to police forces in the recording of and the dealing with racially motivated attacks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Information on the incidence of racially motivated attacks and on the recording practices of individual police forces is not held centrally. However, in October last year the Association of Chief Police Officers issued guidance on the handling of racial attacks. The guidance, a copy of which I am placing in the Library, emphasised the importance of a vigorous and sympathetic police response, and drew attention to the need for collecting and collating reliable local information about racial incidents. My right hon. Friend has asked the Chief Inspector of Constabulary to pay particular attention in his annual inspections to the steps taken in each force to record and monitor racially motivated incidents.

Prison Officers (Training Courses)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many regionally organised training courses for prison officers have been suspended as a result of the prison department's decisions communicated to prison governors in August 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Two hundred and eleven courses, of varying content and duration, have been cancelled.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list for each prisoner at Holloway prison the number of (a) baths or showers allowed per week and (b) changes of clothes allowed per week.

Mr. Mellor: The number of baths or showers allowed at Holloway is generally in excess of the statutory requirement of one per week. On average, each inmate is allowed four per week: inmates assigned to certain work parties are allowed a daily bath. All inmates may change their clothes for clean ones each day.

Immigration

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the waiting list as at 1 January for entry clearance at (a) Dacca, (b) Islamabad and (c) Delhi; and what were the comparative figures for 1 January 1985 and 1 January 1984.

Mr. Waddington: Information for end-December 1985 is not yet available; the other information requested and that for end-September 1985 are given in the following table:

*Persons awaiting a decision on their application for entry clearance to the United Kingdom

Number

	end December 1983	end December 1984	end September 1985
Dacca	11,400	13,300	12,800
Islamabad	6,400	7,000	7,000
New Delhi	2,000	1,700	1,600

* For immediate settlement or temporary admission, including those who have been interviewed but whose application remains undetermined.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to introduce visa requests for arrivals from Bangladesh.

Mr. Waddington: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 5 December, at column 311.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the visa requests for arrivals from Sri Lanka will be lifted.

Mr. Waddington: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from him on 17 December, at column 132.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrivals from (a) Bangladesh, (b) Pakistan, (c) India and (d) Sri Lanka were held in detention at (i) Harmondsworth and (ii) Ashford during the period 20 December 1985 to 3 January 1986.

Mr. Waddington: The available information relates to passengers detained at Harmondsworth who were citizens of the countries concerned, and is as follows:

(a) 49; (b) 83; (c) 64; (d) 12.

Statistics of persons held in Ashford remand centre do not differentiate between passengers and others held under the powers contained in the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were denied entry to the United Kingdom at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Dover between 20 December 1985 and 3 January 1986; what was the total number of passengers arriving; and what were the comparative figures for 1984-85.

Mr. Waddington: Precise statistics for passengers arriving during the period in question are not yet available. Those given are approximate.

	20 December 1985 to 3 January 1986		20 December 1984 to 3 January 1985
	Passengers arrived	Refused entry	Passengers arrived	Refused entry
Heathrow
Terminal 1	107,000	74	101,000	69
Terminal 2	117,000	204	109,000	150
Terminal 3	182,000	401	174,000	322
Gatwick	197,000	177	187,000	111
Dover (Eastern docks, Western docks and Hoverport)	145,000	160	143,000	119

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrivals from Bangladesh were stopped at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Dover between 20 December 1985 and 3 January 1986.

Mr. Waddington: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the number of Bangladesh citizens who were refused entry at the ports listed during this period.

The information is as follows:

	Number
Heathrow
Terminal 1	0
Terminal 2	1
Terminal 3	60
Gatwick	5
Dover (Eastern docks, Western docks and Hoverport)	13

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent instructions have been given to the immigration service dealing with the arrival of people from Bangladesh.

Mr. Waddington: Those issued at Heathrow terminal 3 about liaison with the Bangladesh high commission, about falsified documents and about the need for faster handling of representations from right hon. and hon. Members.

Vegan Diets

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied with the adequacy of the vegan diets being received by inmates of East Sutton Park open prison.

Mr. Mellor: Sentenced prisoners may be allowed a vegan diet at the governor's discretion. On 14 January 1986 a vegan diet was being taken by two prisoners at East Sutton Park and a vegetarian diet by a further four prisoners, all at their own request. I understand that none of the prisoners concerned has complained about her food and that on the basis of his regular inspections the medical officer is satisfied with the nutritional quality of the diets.

Community Radio

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the membership of his advisory committee on community radio.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The members of the advisory panel on community radio are:

Mr. Stephen O'Brien (Chairman), Mr. Ray Beaty, Mrs. Diana Eccles, Mr. Bevan Jones, Mrs. Jill McIvor and Mr. Richard Wade.

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations have been held between representatives of minority community groups and the advisory committee on community radio.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the advisory panel on community radio has held a number of useful meetings with interested individuals and groups from the ethnic minority communities.

Hong Kong

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement regarding the rights of Hong Kong British Dependent Territories citizens in the light of the motion passed by the Legislative Council of Hong Kong at its session on Wednesday 8 January.

Mr. Waddington: The Government's proposals for the future nationality status of Hong Kong British Dependent Territories citizens and related matters were set out in a White Paper (Cmnd. 9637) published on 17 October 1985. I am aware of the motion passed by the Legislative Council of Hong Kong on 8 January. The House will have an opportunity to consider all these matters when it debates the White Paper later today. The Government will take careful account of the views expressed.

Housing (Fire Safety)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to issue a national code of guidance on means of escape in case of fire from houses in multiple occupation; what representations he has received from local authorities and others on the subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend plans shortly to issue a draft code of guidance on fire safety in certain houses in multiple occupation for consultation. Most representations have inquired about progress on the preparation of the code, which has taken longer than was expected.

BBC

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has as to the amount of money which might be expected to be raised by allowing advertising on BBC television.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A number of recent published studies, including two commissioned by the committee on financing the BBC, have offered various estimates of the potential revenue which might be derived from introducing advertising on BBC television. My right hon. Friend, of course, awaits the committee's own assessment of this evidence and of the financial and other implications of financing the BBC partly or wholly out of advertising revenue or from other sources.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he intends to take to protect the editorial independence of the BBC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I am not aware that any steps are necessary.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions the Minister has had with the governors of the BBC and the IBA over the introduction of advertising on BBC.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend's discussion with the chairman of the BBC's board of governors and of the IBA about various broadcasting issues have not included any substantive consideration of the questions now being studied by the committee on financing the BBC, whose report it is well understood he awaits with an open mind.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the BBC will continue to be allowed to retain any revenues derived from any source other than the licence fee.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The BBC's charter provides for the corporation to receive and use revenue derived from sources other than the television licence fee, and includes no provision for such revenue to be surrendered.

Peacock Committee (Report)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Peacock committee is expected to report.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the committee expects to submit its report in the summer.

Mr. Louis Farrakhan

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will use his powers to deny entry to the United Kingdom to Mr. Louis Farrakhan, an American citizen, on the ground that his presence would not be in the public interest or of good race and community relations.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, in view of his anti-Semitic comments, he will refuse permission for Mr. Louis Farrakhan to enter the United Kingdom on the ground that his presence would not be conducive to the public good; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have decided, in the light of Mr. Farrakhan's public statements, that his presence in the United Kingdom would not be conducive to the public good, and have given instructions that he should be refused leave to enter if he seeks admission to the United Kingdom.

Local Government

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement as to his policy towards funding posts within Lancashire under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966.

Mr. Waddington: All applications from local authorities for grant under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 are considered in accordance with the criteria set out in Home Office circular No. 97/1982, a copy of which is in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

Mr. Stern asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 16 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall be giving a dinner for His Majesty King Hussein of Jordan.

Select Committees

Mr. George asked the Prime Minister how many staff are engaged principally in liaison with departmental Select Committees in each Department, and if he will estimate the number of working days spent by each Department on the overall requirements of departmental Select Committees.

The Prime Minister: Liaison with departmental Select Committees forms part of the duties of some staff in all Departments. In 1985 six individuals are reported by Departments to have spent more than half their time solely on this work. A study was carried out in 1980-81 to determine the amount of time spent by all officials on departmental Select Committee work, and a copy of the report on this was placed in the Library on 10 December 1982. It would not be possible to update this information without an extensive new study at disproportionate cost; however, in general the work occasioned by departmental Select Committees in 1985 has not changed markedly from the year on which this study was based.

Mr. Mohammed Fayed

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister why Mohammed Fayed was invited to a Downing street dinner to mark the state visit of President Mubarak of Egypt; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: It is the normal practice to invite prominent nationals of the country represented by a foreign visitor to such occasions.

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister if Mr. Mohammed Fayed attended a function at Downing street in March or April 1985.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister if she has ever met Mr. Mohammed Fayed in an official capacity.

The Prime Minister: I met Mr. Al-Fayed in the context of the visit of the Sultan of Brunei on 25 January 1985, and subsequently at a dinner for President Mubarak of Egypt at Downing Street on 14 March 1985.

Brunei (Sterling Deposits)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Prime Minister if any members or representatives of the British Government had any meetings with members or representatives of the Government of Brunei in relation to sterling deposists; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The contents of meetings between members or representatives of Her Majesty's Government and other Governments are confidential.

Gifts

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister what gifts the Prime Minister has received from representatives of foreign Governments and overseas Heads of State; and on what dates.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

Sultan of Brunei

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Prime Minister on what occasions since 1979 she met the Sultan of Brunei.

The Prime Minister: I met the Sultan of Brunei in June 1981 when he was in London studying the structure and operation of British government as part of the preparations for Brunei's independence. I also met the Sultan on three occasions last year: in January, when he was on a visit to London; in April, during the course of my tour of south and south-east Asia; and in October at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting.

Nuclear Tests (Report)

Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister if she has completed consideration of the Australian Royal Commission's report on British nuclear tests; if she has any plans to meet Senator Gareth Evans; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. Officials had preliminary discussions in Canberra last week, which provided a useful opportunity for an initial exchange of views and for clarification of a number of matters. Senator Gareth Evans, Australian Minister for Resources and Energy, is to have discussions with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement and Baroness Young, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, whilst he is in Britain next week.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Speller asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps to harmonise the provisions of financial inducements for household energy conservation throughout the United Kingdom on the basis of the scheme operating in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government already provide financial assistance towards household energy efficiency in the rest of the United Kingdom on the same basis as in Northern Ireland.

Westland plc

Mr. Williams asked the Prime Minister if the recent letter from the Solicitor-General to the Secretary of State for Defence about Westland was covered by the Official Secrets Act.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Information Leaks (Inquiries)

Mr Williams asked the Prime Minister how many inquiries into leaks have been initiated since June 1979; on what dates; and with what outcome.

The Prime Minister: As I have made clear on a number of previous occasions, it has not been the practice of successive Governments to disclose information of this kind.

TRANSPORT

Channel Fixed Link

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport what individuals and bodies, including fire authorities, have been consulted about the risk from fire and other emergencies in each of the proposed solutions to the cross-Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: During the course of the Government's assessment of the promoters' proposals, views on the risk from fire and other emergencies were obtained from the Chief Inspecting Officer for Railways, the Home Office fire service inspectorate, the chief fire officer for Kent, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's safety and reliability directorate and Lloyd's Register.

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates when he received the final complete proposals from each of the promoters for the proposed cross-Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: Four proposals for fixed link schemes were submitted in accordance with the "Invitation to Promoters" on 31 October 1985. In response to the joint Anglo-French assessment all promoters proposed, or agreed to, adaptations of their schemes to meet the various concerns of the two Governments. No time limit was imposed on such adaptations.

Airport Security

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had on security of United Kingdom airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: On 16 July in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State outlined some of the steps that were being taken to enhance the already high standard of security at British airports. Most of the measures to which he referred are now in place (for example, the reconciliation of passengers and baggage is now a legal requirement). We are keeping all aviation security measures continually under review; I am currently involved in discussions on security arrangements at United Kingdom airports following the attacks on EL AL check-in desks at Vienna and Rome.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will undertake an immediate review of recent security lapses at Manchester airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Manchester airport has been asked to report to my Department details of recent lapses in security and the remedial action they are taking. My Department will then consider whether any further action is necessary.

Avon Bridge (Tolls)

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider the introduction of toll charges on the M5 over the Avon bridge.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. I have no power to introduce such tolls. Moreover, I have no wish to risk causing significant volumes of traffic to divert from the M5 to unsuitable local roads in and around Bristol.

Cars

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many private cars were registered in Wales in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The total number of private cars registered in Wales in December 1979 was 726,398. The total as at 30 September 1985 (the last date for which figures are available) was 810,243.

Navigation Lights

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he is satisfied that the navigational beacon at Minsters rock on the Rubha Na Leachaig on the west coast of Scotland is suitable for all weather conditions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he is satisfied with the efficiency of the navigational lights into Loch Inchard and Kinlochbervie on the west coast of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to the reply, 15 January 1986, c. 580]: These lights are provided by the Highland regional council in its capacity as a local lighthouse authority. The Northern lighthouse board has a statutory duty to inspect these lights and I understand that it found them to be satisfactory in all respects when examined in August last. This is a matter for the board's judgment.

M1 (Signpost Damage)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 14 November, Official Report, column 263, why the direction signpost at junction 30 of the southbound section of the M1 between Wakefield and London has still not been repaired.

Mr. Ridley: My reply of 14 November referred to the direction sign at the southbound exit to junction 30 which had been reported damaged on 9 October and was repaired on 28 October. I understand, however, that the right hon. Gentleman may have been referring to the one-mile advance warning sign at this junction which has also been damaged. It will be repaired as part of a larger re-signing scheme which I expect to be completed by the end of March 1986. The damage to this sign involves no threat to road safety and I have no information as to when it was damaged.

Motorways (Signs)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what sources of information he uses in replying to parliamentary questions on the state of road signs on motorways; and what checks his Department carries out to confirm the information provided.

Mr. Ridley: Details are obtained from the county councils which maintain the motorways as my agents. My Department's regional offices also periodically carry out their own inspections of motorways.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Production

49. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest available statistics of manufacturing production.

Mr. Butcher: The index of output for manufacturing in the three months up to October 1985 stood at 103, based on 1980 equal to 100.

Airbus

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much launch aid is planned for British Aerospace in connection with development of the European airbus project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: In accordance with the statement to the House on 1 March 1984 by my right hon. Friend, the former Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, financial provision has been made in the Department's Vote for launch aid of up to £250 million in respect of participation by British Aerospace in the Airbus A320 programme.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what information he has concerning the share of the total world market which has been held by the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available;

(2) what information he has concerning the share of the total European aerospace market which has been held by the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Pattie: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the percentage of turnover which is represented by exports from the United Kingdom aerospace industry.

Mr. Pattie: The most recent information that I have is for 1983 when 56 per cent. of the value of the United Kingdom aerospace industry's turnover was exported.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the total value of aerospace exports from the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in value on the previous year's figures in each of those years.

Mr. Pattie: According to the information I have, the figures in current money terms are as follows:

	UK aerospace exports £ million	Per cent. growth over previous years
1975	801	21·2
1976	903	11·3
1977	1,038	13·0
1978	1,170	11·3
1979	1,269	7·8
1980	1,775	28·5
1981	2,547	30·3
1982	3,110	18·1
1983	3,194	2·6
1984	3,514	9·1

London Commodity Exchange (Exhibition)

Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will arrange for an exhibition relating to the London commodity exchange to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Howard: Arrangements have been made for such an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall to take place from 24 February to 28 February 1986.

Materials and Processes

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's policy on the wider application of new and improved materials and processes in the light of his Department's review of its support for innovation scheme and the publication of the materials advisory group report.

Mr. Pattie: The materials advisory group drew attention to the very important field of materials technology and identified within it areas of particular opportunity to a wide range of UK industries. This has made a major contribution to my Department's continuing assessment of research priorities. While I am unable to accept that progress in this field can only be made by the provision of additional Government funding on the scale suggested by the group, I consider that there is considerable scope for obtaining greater benefit from the already substantial amount of work in the materials field by the redirection and more efficient use of Government resources.

The Department will therefore be: re-orientating its existing resources towards materials work; seeking to improve awareness of new materials and to develop collaborative projects which will accelerate commercial application; collaborating more closely with the science and engineering research council to guide university research and promote technology transfer; working with the Ministry of Defence with a view to commercial exploitation of military materials developments; seeking the fullest UK participation in European Community and other international collaborative programmes; and working for improved specification standards where these offer opportunities for exploitation of new materials.

In the discussion which has been concluded in the European Community's research council on an extension of the Community's primary raw materials programme I particularly emphasised the importance which the UK attaches to the new section on advanced materials. In the four year research action programme on materials which we agreed, over 40 per cent. of the total budget of £40 million will be devoted to this section, thus providing a useful further stimulus to advanced materials work.

Imperial Tobacco Ltd.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the takeover bid by Hanson Trust for Imperial Tobacco Ltd. to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The proposed takeover is currently being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will make his decision on whether it should be referred for further investigation by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in the light of that advice.

Airbus Projects (Launch Aid)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much launch aid Her Majesty's Government proposes to make available to British Aerospace in connection with the development of (a) the TA9 airbus project and (b) the TA11 airbus project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The supervisory board of Airbus Industries has yet to make any decision on the launch of these projects. The question put by my hon. Friend is thus premature.

House of Fraser

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why the application by Lonhro to bid for the House of Fraser was delayed by the Secretary of State for three months in November 1984.

Mr. Howard: The extension of the period for the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to report on the merger reference of Lonrho and House of Fraser by three months, to 28 February 1985, was granted in the normal way, in response to a request for an extension from the MMC.

ENERGY

British Gas

50. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what sum he now expects will be received from the sale of British Gas in 1986-87 and 1987-88; and what is his estimate of the total fees and charges which will be received by City institutions involved in the sale.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I cannot speculate on the value the market will place on British Gas. Total fees and charges will depend on the precise structure of the offer, on which decisions have not yet been taken.

Renewable Energy Sources (Research and Development)

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the annual expenditure on research and development in renewable sources of energy since 1979-80, including the current year and any projected expenditure.

Mr. David Hunt: Information about expenditure between 1975-76 and 1984-85 was given in reply to the question from the hon. Member for Bootle (Mr. Roberts) on 13 June 1985 at columns 533-34. Actual expenditure in 1984-85 was the same as the estimate provided in that answer. Expenditure on research and development on renewable energy in 1985-86 is forecast to be at a similar level.

Petrol (Lead Content)

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy what additional capital investment has been incurred by the United Kingdom oil industry as a result of the reduction in the maximum lead content of petrol from 0·4 to 0·15g per litre from January.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The United Kingdom oil industry's most recently published figure indicates capital expenditure of the order of £300 million.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the extra energy, in terms of barrels of crude oil, that will be consumed at the refinery each year as a result of the reduction in the maximum lead content of petrol from 0·4 to 0·15g per litre from 1 January and, subsequently from 0·15g per litre to unleaded, when the transition to unleaded petrol is complete.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: For a petrol demand of 20·2 million tonnes, the additional crude oil required per year, when lead levels are reduced, is estimated to be:
From 0·40 to 0·15g per litre (g/l) of lead—some 3·7 million barrels.
From 0·15g/l of lead to unleaded—some 4·9 million barrels.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the increase in price that the United Kingdom oil industry will need to charge for each gallon of petrol as a result of the reduction in the maximum lead content of petrol from 0·4 to 0·15g per litre and, subsequently from 0·15g per litre to unleaded, when the transition to unleaded petrol is complete.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The manufacturing costs incurred in reducing the lead content from 0·40 to 0·15g per litre are believed to be about 2p to 3p per gallon. For the subsequent move to unleaded petrol, the costs are estimated to be in the order of a further 2p to 5p per gallon.

However, the extent to which pump prices may be increased is purely a matter for individual petrol retailers.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Law Changes

Mr. Pollock asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what change will be made to the 1985-86 cash limit for class IX, vote 10, Law Charges, Scotland.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The outturn for this vote for 1984-85 showed expenditure of £107,000 in excess of that year's cash limit. The overspend arose as a result of insufficient provision necessary to meet greater manpower costs brought about by the increase in serious crime, unavoidable expenditure incurred through the provision of necessary accommodation and the establishment of Crown Office fraud and internal audit units. In accordance with normal practice, the cash limit for this Vote for this financial year is reduced by the amount of the previous year's overspend. The cash limit will therefore be reduced by £107,000 from £13,773,000 to £13,666,000.

EMPLOYMENT

Baking Industry

Mr. Golding asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received on the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954; and what response he has given.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954 is currently being considered in the context of the proposal to repeal restrictions on women's hours of work. Consultations with employers' associations and trade unions involved in the industry are in progress. I have received written representations from four employers' associations and two trade unions. Meetings have been held. The Health and Safety Commission and the Equal Opportunities Commission have also given their views.

Mr. Golding asked the Paymaster General what exemptions have been granted in North Staffordshire to the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Information relating to North Staffordshire is not available. In Staffordshire as a whole, 11 employers are recorded as being exempted from the Act's provisions.

Since 1980, there have been very few inquiries about the operation of the Act, no formal complaints requiring investigation have been received and no exemptions have been granted.

Aerospace Industry (Manpower)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General how many people have been employed in the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available; and what percentage of the total numbers employed in manufacturing industry this figure represents in each of those years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table gives, for the dates specified, the estimated number of employees in employment in the aerospace equipment manufacturing and repairing industry in Great Britain (figures are not available for the United Kingdom for some of the years). The Department's employment statistics are analysed according to the Standard Industrial Classification. The figures for June 1966 to June 1981 are for minimum list heading 383 of the 1968 SIC, while those for June 1982 to June 1985 are for activity heading 3640 of the 1980 SIC. The figures for September 1981 are given on both bases.

Employees in Employment—Aerospace equipment manufacturing and repairing
Great Britain

	1968 SIC MLH 383	1980 SIC AH 3640	As a percentage of employees in employment in manufacturing industries per cent.
June 1966	239,000	*	2·8
June 1967	244,000	*	3·0
June 1968	239,000	*	3·0
June 1969	237,000	*	2·9
June 1970	227,000	*	2·8
June 1971	211,400	*	2·7
June 1972	201,000	*	2·6
June 1973	195,400	*	2·5
June 1974	203,400	*	2·6
June 1975	204,400	*	2·8
June 1976	197,300	*	2·8
June 1977	186,300	*	2·6
June 1978	183,900	*	2·6
June 1979	187,600	*	2·6
June 1980	190,100	*	2·8
June 1981	184,800	*	3·0
September 1981	184,300	185,000	3·1

	1968 SIC MLH 383	1980 SIC AH 3640	As a percentage of employees in employment in manufacturing industries per cent.
June 1982	*	173,200	3·0
June 1983	*	161,700	2·9
June 1984	*	155,200	2·9
June 1985	*	152,300	2·8

* Not available

Community Programme (Finance)

Mr. Gould asked the Paymaster General if he will approve sufficient increases in the operating costs of community programmes in their training budgets and in the wages of their employees to take account of the inflation rate since the inception of the community programmes.

Mr. Alan Clark: We keep under review the maximum levels of approved costs which can be reimbursed under the community programme and make changes whenever this would improve the cost-effective use of taxpayers' money.

Community Programme (Ex-Service Men)

Mr. Wareing asked the Paymaster General if he will review the regulations governing the community programme to ensure that ex-service men who are in receipt of service pensions are not denied the right of entrance to jobs funded under the programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Ex-service men in receipt of service pensions are already able to participate in the community programme if their circumstances accord with the criteria for priority entry. We keep these criteria under review but have no present plans for change.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a table showing (a) the number and percentage of jobs lost by regional area between June 1979 and June 1985 in (i) all manufacturing industries, (ii) service industries, (iii) all industries, (iv) shipbuilding and (v) engineering industries and (b) the numbers of long-term unemployed by regional area in June 1979 and June 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information about job gains and job losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

Tables 1 and 2 give, for the areas, dates and categories specified, the net numerical and percentage changes in the numbers of employees in employment.

Separate estimates of employees in employment in the shipbuilding and engineering industries are not available for regions, and the figures are combined with other activities within the metal goods, engineering and vehicles division of the 1980 standard industrial classification.

Table 1: Employees in employment: changes between June 1979 and June 1985

	All industries and services	Manufacturing Industries	Service Industries	Metal Goods Engineering and Vehicles
South East	−213,000	−337,000	200,000	−151,000
East Anglia	4,000	−29,000	48,000	−10,000
South West	−57,000	−71,000	31,000	−39,000
West Midlands	−312,000	−289,000	13,000	−182,000
East Midlands	−137,000	−116,000	14,000	−50,000
Yorkshire and Humberside	−263,000	−199,000	−7,000	−71,000
North West	−309,000	−295,000	33,000	−102,000
North	−220,000	−125,000	−31,000	−60,000
Wales	−133,000	−110,000	8,000	−39,000
Scotland	−163,000	−171,000	54,000	−77,000

Table 2: Employees in Employment: percentage changes between June 1979 and June 1985

	All industries and services per cent.	Manufacturing industries per cent.	Service industries per cent.	Metal Goods Engineering and Vehicles per cent.
South East	−3	−18	+4	−16
East Anglia	+1	−14	+12	−11
South West	−4	−16	+3	−18
West Midlands	−14	−29	+1	−30
East Midlands	−9	−19	+2	−21
Yorkshire and Humberside	−13	−28	−1	−29
North West	−12	−31	+2	−26
North	−18	−31	−5	−33
Wales	−13	−35	+1	−32
Scotland	−8	−28	+4	−30

The following table shows the requested information in respect of unemployed claimants at July 1985 (not available for June 1985) and for unemployed registrants at July 1979 (not available for June 1979). The figures for July 1979 and July 1985 are not comparable because of the change in the basis of the count in October 1982, the 1983 Budget provisions which mean that some men, mainly aged 60 or over, no longer need to sign on at unemployment benefit offices to receive benefit, and the change to the new ward-based system.

Table 3: Persons unemployed for over 12 months

Region	Registrants—July 1979	Claimants—July 1985
South East	59,850	279,206
East Anglia	7,210	27,366
South West	23,349	68,318
West Midlands	33,753	162,576
East Midlands	19,934	79,114
Yorkshire and Humberside	30,475	126,246
North West	61,612	201,431
North	32,521	106,502
Wales	23,043	75,882
Scotland	48,796	142,645

TUC Education Service

Mr. Bidwell asked the Paymaster General how much grant the Trades Union Congress education service receives; and what were the figures for 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Trades Union Congress education service estimates that it will take up £1·599 million of the £1·704 million grant made available to it by the Government for education and training by the TUC and affiliated unions in 1985-86. In the years 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85, the totals of grant paid were £1,598,571, £1,545,726 and £1,532,962 respectively.

Jobcentre Registrations

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Paymaster General how many people are registered with jobcentres in England and Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 3 January 1986 there were 379,385 persons registered at jobcentres in England and Wales.

Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General whether he will seek to amend section 6 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes.

Departmental Office (North Stockport)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to ensure the health and welfare of staff and claimants using the Department of Employment unemployment benefit office at Wellesley house, Wellington road, North Stockport, in view of the problems being faced in that office.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am not aware of any particular problems facing the unemployment benefit offices in Wellesley house at the moment.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

India (British Citizens)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his latest estimate of the number of British overseas citizens in India.

Mr. Renton: There are an estimated 36,000 British overseas citizens resident in India.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated cost of administering entry clearance at overseas posts in 1986-87.

Mr. Renton: The estimated cost of administering entry clearance at overseas posts in 1986-87 is £17·4 million. This includes the cost of local support staff and services.

Special Quota Vouchers

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision exists to ensure that, where special quota vouchers in India are not taken up by those to whom they are allocated, the full number of 600 is issued.

Mr. Renton: In order to ensure that the quota of vouchers is issued a greater number of vouchers is offered to applicants. The non take-up rate has remained steady in recent years at around 25 per cent.

Staff Statistics

Mr. George asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many permanent staff are engaged principally in work related to (a) foreign and Commonwealth affairs and (b) specifically relating to the Overseas Development Administration; and whether this has changed since 1979.

Mr. Renton: The average estimated provision for permanent United Kingdom-based staff employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1985-86 is 9,885. Of these, 8,330 are principally engaged in Foreign and Commonwealth affairs, and 1,555 in Overseas Development Administration. The overall reduction in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff provision since 1979 is 14 per cent.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Shared Scholarship Scheme

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the 50 additional scholarships made available under the Overseas Development Administration shared scholarship scheme have been applied for by polytechnics or other local authority higher education colleges; and if he will make a statement on the level of response.

Mr. Raison: Only two polytechnics applied to join with the ODA in offering awards under the scheme for study to begin in the academic year 1986-87. They requested and were allocated one award each. All universities and polytechnics (central institutions in Scotland) were invited to participate in the scheme. The overall response was good but that from the polytechnics and central institutions was disappointing. We are considering ways of encouraging a better response from them in future.

DEFENCE

Select Committee on Defence

Mr. George asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many permanent staff are engaged primarily in work related to the Defence Committee; and whether this has changed (a) since 1979 and (b) since the situation pertaining during the period of the Expenditure Sub-committee on Defence and External Affairs 1970 to 1979.

Mr. Younger: Two of my Department's permanent staff's duties are primarily related to the Defence Select Committee. The corresponding figure for the number of staff so engaged prior to early 1983, including the period of the Defence and External Affairs Sub-Committee of the Select Committee on Expenditure, was three.

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether it was on his authority that the Royal Navy has expressed to the official Broadsheet concern about the decline of British merchant shipping; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The Government expressed their concern about the possible defence implications of the decline of the United Kingdom's merchant fleet continuing for several more years at the present rate in paragraph 459 of volume I of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985" (Cmnd. 9430).

Broadsheet 85, which is published annually by the Royal Navy, reflects this concern.

HMS Challenger

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any major repairs or refit work is due for HMS Challenger; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Improvements are required to be made in the diving system of HMS Challenger. Following competitive tendering the contract has been awarded to Thorn-EMI and the work will take place, under subcontract, at Humber Shiprepairers.

During 1986 HMS Challenger is also due to undergo a short docking period for routine maintenance.

Low-flying Aircraft

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were flown by military aircraft over land in the United Kingdom during the Christmas and new year period in 1985-86.

Mr. Lee: Between 24 December 1985 and 2 January 1986 inclusive, military low flying took place in the United Kingdom on 30 and 31 December, and 2 January. The total number of sorties flown was 356.

Submarines

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he made of the implications for the maintenance of competition in the market for United Kingdom built conventional submarines of the placing of the orders for three follow-on Upholder class patrol submarines with a single yard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Three yards tendered for the recent order. We fully expect to be able to place future Upholder class submarine orders by competition.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the next tenders will be sought for further Upholder class patrol submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No decisions have yet been taken on the size and timing of future orders for this class, but I would expect that these orders would be placed in the early 1990s.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will indicate the discounts offered for a batch order of three follow-on Upholder class patrol vessels recently offered by (a) Cammell Laird-Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering, (b) Scott Lithgow and (c) Yarrows, respectively;

(2) if he will estimate the saving to public funds of placing the three recent orders for Upholder class patrol vessels with a single yard as against dividing them between yards.

Mr. Lee: Details of individual tenders are commercially confidential. The overall cost is, however, some £20 million below the figure which my Ministry was expecting to have to pay for these submarines, about one half due to competition and one half to batch ordering.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the manner in which the Cammell Laird-Vickers tender for three follow-on Upholder class patrol submarines represented significantly the best value for money to his Department.

Mr. Lee: Competition was strong, but after full assessment of all the tenders received we concluded that the Cammell Laird-Vickers bid offered substantially the best value for money to the defence budget.

Scott Lithgow (Shipping Orders)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he currently plans to place with Scott Lithgow the orders for (a) the range mooring vessel and (b) each of the powered mooring lighters; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to place the orders with Scott Lithgow for the range mooring vessel and the two powered mooring lighters not later than the spring of 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what account he has taken of the work currently available to the Scott Lithgow yard in deciding the timing of placing there of orders (a) for the range mooring vessel and (b) each of the powered mooring lighters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In view of the wider and more relevant factors the Government have decided to place an order for a range mooring vessel with Scott Lithgow later this year, followed by two lighters, subject to the negotiation of satisfactory terms and conditions. This timing reflects our operational requirements. Scott Lithgow will continue to be invited to tender for all MOD new construction and refit work which it is capable of undertaking. But it must be competitive if it is to win future orders.

Departmental Staff (Holiday Vetting)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any employees in his Department have to be vetted by the American Central Intelligence Agency before they are allowed to go on holiday to Warsaw pact or other countries.

Mr. Lee: No.

Fife Region (Civil Servants)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each office or establishment of his Department in the Fife region the number of Civil Service posts at the following grades (a) clerical assistant, (b) clerical officer, (c) executive officer, (d) higher executive officer, (e) senior executive officer, (f) principal, (g) deputy principal and (h) senior deputy principal; and what is the current rate of turnover in staff.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 380]: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally in the form requested; and refer the hon. Member to the information supplied to him in a letter from my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Treasury dated 7 January 1986.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Meals

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the average cost of a school meal in each local education authority in England.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not have the information from which to calculate the average cost of a school meal.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the nutritional standard of school meals provided by local education authorities with particular reference to the provisions of the Education Act 1980.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 17 December 1985 at column 113.

University Applicants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university applicants there were in each year since 1978-79; and how many candidates were finally accepted in each of those years.

Mr. Walden: Applicants and acceptances through the Universities' Central Council on admissions scheme for universities in the United Kingdom were as follows:

Academic year of entry	Applicants	Acceptances
1978	157,506	80,530
1979	166,362	82,398
1980	168,354	84,695
1981	167,096	80,341
1982	171,496	77,752
1983	172,738	74,860
1984	173,674	77,431
1985	176,553	82,889

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide figures relating to the percentage distribution of parents of children participating in the assisted places scheme according to the contributory scales used by the Department, for the latest three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is as follows:

Relevant income bands (at 1984 prices) £	Percentage distribution 1982	1983	1984
Up to 6,046	38·3	36·2	39·7
6,047-6,390	2·7	3·0	3·4
6,391-6,910	5·2	6·2	5·1
6,911-7,950	11·2	12·0	10·4
7,951-9,550	17·7	17·9	16·9
9,551-11,630	17·0	17·4	16·2
11,631 upwards	7·9	7·3	8·3

REPLAN Programme

Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement about the future of the REPLAN Programme.

Mr. Walden: The programme now known as REPLAN, which seeks to encourage the development of educational opportunities for unemployed adults, was announced on 5 March 1984 at column 411, initially as a three-year programme. The programme, which covers England and Wales, is jointly funded by the Department of Education and Science and the Welsh Office, with the Manpower Services Commission contributing to the cost of certain projects. REPLAN's main elements so far have included the appointment of a team of advisory field officers employed by the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education; programmes of development projects (64 approved so far) managed by NIACE and the further education unit; staff development programmes organised by NIACE in collaboration with the regional advisory councils and the Welsh joint education committee; and an associated programme of education support grants under which 80 local education authorities have received approval for projects concerned with the planning, co-ordination and development of provision for the unemployed.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Wales have now reviewed REPLAN's work to date. They are satisfied that the programme has already provided valuable support for those seeking to develop educational provision for the unemployed, and is helping the development of co-ordinated local responses between the many institutions and agencies involved.

My right hon. Friends have agreed that the duration of REPLAN should be extended, in the first instance, to December 1988. In the light of a further review of progress, a decision will be taken during 1986 on whether to extend the programme to December 1989; and the case for further 12 month extensions will be considered annually thereafter in the same way. Under this arrangement, the REPLAN Programme will be assured of a three-year planning horizon for so long as the annual reviews suggest that a continuing need for the programme can be foreseen.

Research Funding

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking on the Science and Engineering Research Council report about the current level of funding of research into (a) new alloys and ceramics and (b) optical computers.

Mr. Walden: These areas of research were included amongst the growth points mentioned in the Science and Engineering Research Council's corporate plan published in December.

On the advice of the ABRC the Secretary of State has increased the funds available to the SERC for strategic research in science and technology for 1986-87 by £8 million and increases have also been made to the Council's planning figures for 1987-88 and 1988-89. The precise distribution of these additional funds between competing priority areas is a matter for decision by the council but I understand that the two areas raised in the question are among those likely to benefit.

Higher and Further Education (Statistics)

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has regarding the numbers of schoolchildren in (a) Derbyshire and (b) Amber Valley who went on to higher/further education in 1985, compared with 1979.

Mr. Walden: Figures for the academic year 1984-85 are not yet available. Information for 1978-79 and 1983-84 for Derbyshire is as follows. Data are not available centrally for areas smaller than local education authorities.

Leavers from maintained schools in Derbyshire intending to pursue full-time courses of further or higher education

Academic year	Number (000s)	Percentage of total leavers
1978-79	2·63	19·0
1983-84	3·75	26·7

Secondary Education Certificates (Examination Results)

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has regarding the recent trend in the proportion of pupils in (a) Derbyshire and (b) Amber Valley gaining A-levels, O-levels and certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Dunn: Information for 1981-82, 1982-83 and 1983-84 for Derbyshire is as follows. Data are not available centrally for areas smaller than local education authorities.

Examination achievements of leavers from maintained schools in Derbyshire
Percentage of total leavers

	Academic year 1981-82	1982-83	1983-84
1 or more A level	12·3	13·2	11·9
No A level 5 or more higher grade passes at O level or CSE	9·7	11·3	11·4
1-4 higher grade passes at O level or CSE	27·9	26·2	28·1
No higher grades, but 1 or more other grade	41·6	39·4	41·0
No graded result	8·5	9·9	7·5

Sacred Heart of Mary Girls' School, Upminster

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will approve the expenditure which is necessary for the enlargement of the Sacred Heart of Mary girls' school at Upminster; and if he will state when the decision will be taken and announced.

Mr. Dunn: Allocations under the 1986-87 education capital expenditure programme were announced on 18 December 1985. Unfortunately it did not prove possible, within the resources available, to include an amount for the project at the Sacred Heart of Mary girls' school.

Refugees (Grants)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to extend mandatory educational grants to refugees in the United Kingdom who are not granted refugee status but given exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom because of the dangers they might encounter in their own country.

Mr. Walden: There is no intention to exempt those granted exceptional leave to remain from the requirement that all students, except those granted refugee status, must be resident in this country for three years in order to be eligible for a mandatory award.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Tax

13. Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his poiicy towards the taxation of families.

Mr. Moore: We shall be putting forward our views on this issue in the Green Paper in due course.

21. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the effective marginal tax rate on earnings of those in the lower tax band; and how this compares with other major industrialised countries.

Mr. Moore: The marginal income tax rate on earnings for those in the lowest tax band in this country is 30 per cent. This is the second highest rate amongst the OECD countries.

24. Mr. Nicholls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in the last six months on the level of income tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: We have received a wide range of representations on this issue in the last six months.

27. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effect on the net disposable income of a single man earning £100 per week gross of the Government devoting £1,200,000,000 to (a) raising income tax thresholds uniformly or (b) reducing the basic rate of income tax.

Mr. Moore: A single man would get an increase in net income of 69p and 55p per week, respectively, based on the illustrative allowances shown in the autumn statement.

30. Mr. Hannam asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what increase in take-home pay would be received by a person earning £140 a week if the basic rate of income tax were reduced from 30 per cent. to 28 per cent.

46. Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what increase in take-home pay would be received by a person earning £140 a week if the basic rate of income tax were reduced from 30 to 28 per cent.

Mr. Moore: £1·90 per week for a single person or working wife and £1·39 for a married man in 1986-87, based on the illustrative allowances shown in the autumn statement.

Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of tax units do not pay any income tax; what were the equivalent figures for each year since 1978-79; and what was the average income of each tax unit in this group in each year at constant prices.

Mr. Moore: Estimates of the proportion of tax units who do not pay income tax are as follows. The figures exclude young people aged under 16 and those over 16 still at school. I regret that there is insufficient information to provide reliable estimates of the average income of this group.

Year	Percentage of tax units who do not pay income tax*
1978-79	26·5
1979-80	26·5
1980-81	29·4
1981-82	31·0
1982-83	31·4
1983-84	33·1
1984-85	34·0
1985-86	34·5

* Counting married couples as one.

Companies (Government Holdings)

14. Mr. Kenneth Calisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how those companies in which Her Majesty's Government retain a minority shareholding but previously had a majority shareholding have performed since the disposal by Her Majesty's Government of their majority stake.

Mr. Moore: The recent results of privatised companies have generally been excellent.

United States (Budget Deficit)

17. Dr. Mawhinney asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with United States officials, since he last answered questions, about the United States budget deficit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lawson: I welcome the moves made by the United States Administration to reduce their budget deficit, but it is clear that further progress is necessary.

Economic Strategy

18. Mr. Dubs asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the effect of recent changes in oil prices on his economic strategy.

Mr. MacGregor: I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the Chancellor said in answer to an earlier question.

Taxation

19. Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of gross domestic product taken in taxation compared with that in the United States of America and in Japan.

Mr. Moore: The latest available data, published by OECD, for 1983 are as follows:

Percentage of GDP at market prices

	Total tax revenue and social security contributions	Total tax revenue excluding social security contributions
United Kingdom	37·8	31·1
United States of America	29·0	20·7
Japan	27·7	19·4

Source: OECD "Revenue Statistics of OECD Member Countries 1965-1984" page 82.

Inflation Restraint

20. Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the implications of his policy on restraining the rate of inflation for his policies towards the levels of other economic indicators.

Mr. Brooke: The Government's success in reducing inflation, together with their supply-side policies, has led to a sustained expansion of output and employment.

Value Added Tax (Evasion)

22. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated loss of revenue from value added tax evasion.

Mr. Brooke: By the very nature of tax evasion, it is not possible to give a reliable estimate. Customs and Excise has, however, indicated that the VAT revenue lost may total between £300 million and £500 million a year.

Free Ports

23. Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of the experimental free ports.

Mr. Brooke: Six experimental free zones were designated on 6 August 1984. Four — Liverpool, Southampton, Belfast and Prestwick — are already operational, and another—Birmingham—is expected to be operational later this year.

Johnson Matthey Bankers

25. Mr. Skinner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what study he has made of the latest set of accounts from Johnson Matthey Bankers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My hon. Friend has read them with interest.

29. Mr. Strang asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, when he next meets the Governor of the Bank of England, he will raise with him the latest annual report of Johnson Matthey Bankers Limited; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Chancellor and the Governor meet regularly and discuss a wide range of matters, but it is not the practice to disclose them.

43. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the proposed sale of Johnson Matthey Bankers by the Bank of England.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The proposed sale of JMB is a matter for the Bank of England.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many statutory returns were submitted by the Johnson Matthey Bank in the 12-month period preceding its collapse and rescue.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 594]: I assume the hon. Member has in mind returns submitted to the Bank of England, although the White Paper "Banking Supervision" (Cmnd. 9695) explained that such returns are not strictly statutory. I understand from the Bank of England that in the 12 months preceding 1 October 1984 about 100 returns of about 23 different types were submitted by JMB for a variety of purposes including the preparation of monetary and economic statistics as well as banking supervision.

Johnson Matthey Metals

26. Mr. Nellist asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has had from the Governor of the Bank of England regarding Johnson Matthey Metals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

Inflation

28. Mr. Hirst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the likely trend of inflation in 1986.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Most outside forecasts are broadly in line with the autumn statement which forecasts the annual rate of increase in the RPI declining to 3¾ per cent. by the fourth quarter of 1986.

37. Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he makes as to the relative impact of inflation on those of (a) below average and (b) above average incomes.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Apart from the pensioner price indices, measures of inflation for separate income groups are not compiled.

39. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the inflation rate for 1986.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A forecast of 3¾ per cent. for the rate of inflation, as measured by the increase in the retail prices index, in the fourth quarter of 1986 was given in the autumn statement.

42. Mr. Portillo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether he will make a statement on the current factors affecting the rate of inflation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Many factors affect inflation, but further progress on reducing it requires the maintenance of sound financial conditions. The prospects for inflation are set out in the autumn statement.

45. Mr. Leigh asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current inflation rate.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Over the 12 months to November 1985, the retail prices index increased by 5·5 per cent.

Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency

31. Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Excehequer what are the objectives of the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency; how he monitors its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the publications "Information Technology in the Civil Service", IT series Nos. 8 and 11, copies of which are in the Library.

Job Creation

32. Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax measures he has taken to encourage the creation of new jobs.

Mr. Moore: The whole thrust of our tax policy has been to promote the creation of new job opportunities and to improve incentives to work.

Shareholders

33. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the number of individual shareholders in 1979 and at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Moore: According to Inland Revenue data, the number of individual shareholders in 1979 was about 1½ million. This number has probably at least doubled since then although recent market research suggests that the figure may now be much higher.

Exchange Rates

34. Mr. Hayes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the present exchange rate between the pound sterling and the deutschmark.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The deutschmark/sterling exchange rate was 3·5432 at close of business on 15 January.

41. Mr. Janner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there have been over the past two months in the value of the pound on the foreign exchange.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The sterling index closed at 79·5 on 15 November and 78·0 on 15 January.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

35. Sir David Price asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the Treasury reasons for seeking to ensure that local authorities are not allowed to spend their capital receipts as they see fit.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government are committed to tight control of public expenditure of which capital expenditure by local authorities forms part. In order to be able to plan expenditure and to ensure these plans are met, the Government must ensure that receipts are drawn down and spent at an orderly rate. There is no restriction on the investment of the cash or its use to repay debt, or on the services for which receipts can be used to justify additional spending, within local authorities' normal powers.

Economic Growth

36. Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest projections for the growth of demand in the economy over the coming year.

47. Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of total demand in the economy.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government's latest projections for growth in the economy are as in the autumn statement, where the forecast for 1986 growth in output is 3 per cent.

Bradford

38. Mr. Madden asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when a Treasury Minister last paid an official visit to Bradford; and for what purpose.

Mr. Moore: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor visited Bradford on 7 December 1984 during a regional tour in Yorkshire.

Personal Allowances

40. Mr. Watts asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to establish transferability of personal allowances between husband and wife.

Mr. Moore: This is one of the subjects which will be discussed in the Green Paper on personal taxation.

Bank of England

44. Mr. Fatchett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England; and what topics were discussed.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor meets the Governor regularly for confidential discussions about a wide range of matters.

Privatisation

48. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has revised the sum he expects to raise from sales of assets during 1986-87 quoted in the autumn statement.

Mr. Moore: No.

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Dewar asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total spent in Scotland under the business expansion scheme and the number of applicants from Scotland who benefited for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will give the Scottish totals in each case as a percentage of those for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Moore: The table gives the final estimates for investments made in 1983-84. Information for 1984-85 is not yet complete and the figures are based on the information currently available.

Business Expansion Scheme Investments

	1983-84		*1984-85
	Number of companies	Amount invested £ million	Number of companies	Amount invested £ million
Scotland	59	4·8	37	2·6
United Kingdom total	715	105·0	507	100·1
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Scotland as percentage of United Kingdom total	8	5	7	3

* Incomplete.

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards the use of the business expansion scheme for the provision of bed and breakfast accommodation for homeless families; and whether the use of the scheme for this purpose is limited to people designated as homeless under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Select Committees (Reports)

Mr. George asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of each of the departmental Select Committees' reports have been sold to the public, distributed to Government Departments and distributed via the Vote Office in the current Parliament to date.

Mr. Brooke: The information is as follows:

Select Committee	Number of Reports Published	Average Number of each Report Sold	Average Number of each Report Supplied to Vote Office
Agriculture	14	385	125
Defence	13	653	148
Education Science & Arts	6	553	125
Employment	14	394	140
Energy	24	570	130
Foreign Affairs	16	611	145
Home Affairs	10	560	137
Trade & Industry	17	507	125
Social Services	16	867	136
Transport	14	498	125
Treasury & Civil Service	32	506	136
Scottish Affairs	7	479	125
Welsh Affairs	5	376	125
Environment	19	556	125
Parliamentary Commissioner For Administration	8	437	125

Note:
All copies are regarded as sold except those provided to the Vote Office on initial publication.

Productivity Statistics

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the level of output per man hour in the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Japan, Germany, France, Italy and Sweden for each year since 1955; and what has been the percentage change each year for each country.

Mr. MacGregor: Figures of hours worked and hence of output per man hour for the whole economy are not available for the United Kingdom. Index numbers of output per man are compiled and published in Economic Trends, with information on percentage changes given in the national accounts Blue Book. Index numbers of output per man hour for manufacturing industry are published in Economic Trends.

Information of the kind requested for the other countries is not available in the main international statistical publications. However, the most recent (December 1985) issue of the OECD "Economic Outlook" provides some information on productivity developments in manufacturing since the 1960s for the countries requested (table 18, page 47.)

All the publications referred to are available in the Library of the House.

New Cross Building Society

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, in the light of subsequent events, he has any reason to modify the statement in Cmnd. 9033 on the New Cross building society that in a matter of months the society might not have been able to repay investors; if he plans to publish evidence if the statement remains justified; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The passage to which my hon. Friend refers (paragraph 4 "New Cross building society", Cmnd. 9033) summarised fairly the conclusions which the Chief Registrar had reached in his decision on the proposed statutory orders against the New Cross Building Society (reprinted as appendix 5 to Cmnd. 9033, specifically in paragraph 15.5). Subsequent events have done nothing to cast doubts on the Chief Registrar's assessment.

Orphans (Taxation)

Mr. Hancock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will seek to amend sections 16 to 18 of the Finance Act 1973 so as to reduce tax payable by orphaned children who receive low incomes from their parents' estate.

Mr. Moore: I am not sure what the hon. Member has in mind. Under sections 16 to 18 Finance Act 1973 the income of certain discretionary or accumulation trusts is subject to tax at the additional rate of 15 per cent. as well as the basic rate of 30 per cent. A payment to a beneficiary is treated as having suffered tax at 45 per cent., but where the beneficiary is not liable to pay tax, or is liable at less than 45 per cent., he or she can then reclaim all or part of the tax paid by the trustees.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Gorst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts included within the totals shown in the 1985 annual report of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of under declarations of tax discovered on control visits represent no loss to the Exchequer because the value added tax charged would have been recoverable by another.

Mr. Brooke: Exact figures are not available since it is impracticable to classify precisely underdeclarations of tax discovered on control visits in order to identify with certainty the tax which would have been recoverable by another registered trader. However, a statistical sampling exercise conducted by Customs and Excise in 1983-84 suggests that the figure is probably of the order of 10 per cent. (£40 million). The total of underdeclarations shown in the annual report (£409 million) does not include the preventive effect of control visiting which is estimated to provide additional revenue of at least an equivalent value.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Woodcock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston on 14 May 1985, Official Report, column 86, the Government have yet decided whether to tax unleaded petrol, when it is available, at the same rate as leaded petrol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: No decision has yet been taken on the tax treatment of unleaded petrol. This was one of the points on which the Government invited comment in the discussion paper issued last year, and the responses to this paper are still being examined.

Diorama

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Crown Estate Commissioners have for the redevelopment of the Diorama; and what representations he has received from those opposed to the scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: I understand that the Crown Estate Commissioners have made a planning application to redevelop the Diorama. Their intention is to restore and preserve the remaining original features whilst converting much of the interior to high quality residential accommodation. Provision will be made for an exhibition area, with public access, and two proposed atria will give a view of part of the interior of the building.

I have not received any representations on the Commissioners' proposals.

EC (Budget Contributions)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total net payment made by the United Kingdom to the EEC since 1 January 1973; if he will express this as a net amount per day of membership; and what estimate he has made of the comparable net daily cost in 1987.

Mr. Peter Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 511.]: The latest available figure for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the Community budget is for the period 1 January 1973 to 30 September 1985. It is £6,527 million. This represents an average net payment of £1·40 million a day since accession. These figures do not take into account the United Kingdom's 1,000 mecu (£604 million) abatement paid over the period 31 December 1985 to 6 January 1986.

Projections of our net contribution to the Community budget for future calendar years are not published. Information on our net contribution in the financial year 1987-88 is contained in the public expenditure White Paper published on 15 January.

ENVIRONMENT

Sensory Handicap

Mr. Golding asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what study is taking place on the needs of the sensory handicapped regarding the appropriation of incorporating special requirements in building access regulations, and the provision of telephones which can be used by the hearing-impaired; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No formal study is under way on the incorporation in building access regulations of special requirements for people with sensory handicaps.

Building regulations apply only to buildings when they are constructed or structurally altered and they contain no powers of continuing control over buildings in use. The regulations are principally concerned therefore with the structure. The access regulations which came into force last year require certain structural measures such as ramps which will help disabled people gain access to and within buildings. The British Standard code of practice, BS5810 which supports these provisions does, however, also contain general design recommendations for additional nonstructural features which will assist people with sensory impairments.

In my earlier replies to the hon. Member of 2 July, 1985 at column 98 and 1 October, 1985 at column 88 I explained that licensing arrangements already exist to ensure that emergency telephones in lifts can be inductively coupled to hearing aids. In addition, British Telecom require that telephones in all public call boxes, should be capable of being inductively coupled to hearing aids.

Water Supplies

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the geographical area of the five water supplies in Lincolnshire in respect of which action has had to be taken to reduce the concentration of nitrates and if he will make a statement on the progress made to date by the Anglian water authority to comply with the relevant European Community directives.

Mr. John Patten: The geographical areas are as follows:

two areas in and around Sleaford;
the Potterhanworth supply area;
the Wareham Bridge-Saltersford supply area;
the Horbling supply area in South Kesteven.

Action has been taken by the Anglian water authority to reduce the nitrates content of water supplies to these areas below 80mg per litre on a three-monthly average. This is considered by our medical advisers to be an acceptable level. A small supply in Norfolk was taken out of use recently because the nitrate level was unacceptable.

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will furnish details of the geographical areas covered by those water supplies in respect of which applications for derogations from the maximum admissible concentrations have been made by the Anglian water authority and the Yorkshire water authority; and if he will indicate which of these applications for derogations were refused.

Mr. John Patten: Details of the relevant areas are attached. No applications have been refused but a number have been modified or withdrawn as a result of discussions with the Department. Applications have also been approved subject to conditions. Programmes of improvement have accompanied many of the applications including all those relating to the microbiological parameters.

Supply Area	Parameter
Anglian water authority
Dersingham and Snettisham	Nitrate

Supply Area	Parameter
Docking	Nitrate
East Wretham	Nitrate
Heacham and Hunstanton	Nitrate
Moulton and Kennet	Nitrate
Wisbech	Nitrate
Habrough	Nitrate
Aswarby-Saltersford	Nitrate
Barrow	Nitrate
Binbrook	Nitrate
Bully Hill-Barnoldby	Nitrate
Bully Hill-Otby	Nitrate
Clay Hill-Drove Lane Sleaford	Nitrate
Drove Lane Sleaford	Nitrate
Potterhanworth	Nitrate
Saltersford	Nitrate
Waneham Bridge-Saltersford	Nitrate
Bucklesham	Nitrate
Grundesburgh-Ufford-Melton	Nitrate, Iron, Nitrite
Horbling	Nitrate
Ely and Littleport	Nitrate
Habrough-Covenham	Nitrate
Halstead-Urban	Potassium
Braintree	Iron
Braintree-Northern Rural	Iron
Braintree-Kelvedon-Tiptree	Iron
Colchester-Lexden	Ammonia, Potassium
Colchester-Greenstead	Odour, Taste, Trihalomethanes
Colchester-South	Odour, Taste, Trihalomethanes
Colchester-West Bergholt	Iron, Potassium
Colchester-North	Iron, Potassium
Bures	Iron, Potassium
Baylham-Kirby Rise	Iron
Baylham-Winston	Iron
Bowthorpe	Nitrate
Belstead	Trihalomethanes
Heigham-Kirby Cane	Iron, Manganese
Heigham-Thorpe	Nitrate
Mattishall	Iron, Manganese
Mundesley	Manganese
Pettistree	Nitrite, Iron
Raydon, Belstead, Alton and Great Wenham	Odour, Taste, Trihalomethanes
Rushall-Bunwell	Iron
Stowmarket	Iron, Manganese
Tuddenham-Bucklesham	Nitrate
West Bradenham	Iron, Manganese
King's Lynn	Odour, Trihalomethanes
Alford-Driby	Iron
Elkesley-Grove-Newton-Ordsall Road	Iron
Everton	Iron
Gainsborough	Iron
Grove-Ordsall Road	Iron
Ordsall Road	Iron
Scarle	Iron
Winterton Holmes	Sulphate
Winterton Holmes-Barrow	Sulphate
Yorkshire WA Bulk	Iron
Maltby-Le-Marsh	Manganese
Mumby-Fordington	Iron, Manganese
Driby-Fordington	Iron, Manganese
Otby	Nitrate
Otby-Waddington	Nitrate
Yorkshire water authority (southern division)
Dunford Bridge Spring Source	Colour, Iron, Manganese
*Ewden Treatment Works Supply System	Colour, Aluminium, Manganese
*Ingbirchworth Treatment Works (Barnsley rural)	Aluminium, Manganese
*Ingbirchworth Treatment Works (Barnsley urban)	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Loxley Treatment Works Supply System	Colour, Aluminium, Manganese
Mossley Borehole Supply System	Iron, Manganese
Racecommon Borehole Supply System	Iron, Manganese
Rivelin Treatment Works Supply System	Aluminium, Manganese
Royd Moor Treatment Works	Colour, Aluminium, Iron, Manganese

Supply Area	Parameter
Wilson Treatment Works Supply System	Manganese
*Agden Ram Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Cranworth Service Reservoir Supply System	Total Coliforms
*Kimberworth (No. 1) Service Reservoir Supply System	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Moonshine Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Sandtoft Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Stannington Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Wadsley Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Wickersley Service Reservoir Supply System	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Yorkshire water authority (central division)
Eccup Supply System	Manganese
Hanger Lane Supply System	Manganese
Headingley Supply System	Colour, Iron
Jaw Hill Supply System	Aluminium, Iron, Fecal Coliforms
Gypsey Lane Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Hazelwood Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
John O'Gaunts Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Middleton Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Moortown East Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Calverley Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Garforth (1) Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms
Garforth (2) Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Park Hill (2) Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Tins Hill (1) Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Tinshill (3) Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Yorkshire Water Authority (North and East division)
Boltby Treatment Works Supply Area	Colour, Aluminium, Manganese
Stalling Busk Spring Supply System	Colour, Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Mickley Borehole Supply Area	Manganese
Harlow Hill/Irongate Bridge Treatment Works	Iron, Manganese
Baldersby Borehole Supply Area	Nitrates
Countersett Spring Supply Area	Colour, Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Kirby Malzeard Supply Area	Iron, Manganese
Yorkshire Derwent Grid Supply System	Total Hardness
Filey Borehole Supply Area	Iron
*Norwood Treatment Works Supply Area	Colour, Turbidity, Aluminium, Iron, Manganese, Fecal Coliforms
Crumma Spring Supply Area	Colour, Fecal Coliforms
Fossdale Spring Supply Area	Colour, Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Marsett Spring Supply Area	Colour, Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Middlesmoor Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Gayle Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Lofthouse Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Carperby Spring Supply Source	Total Coliforms
Cranehow Bottom Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Ellingstring Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Newbiggin Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Feldom Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Horsehouse Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Sowden Beck Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
West Burton Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Ganton Wold Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms
*Cockmoor Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms
*North Coates Road Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms
*Dunnington Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Kexmoor Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Sicklingham Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Green Hammerton Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms
*Gallowate Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Osmotherley Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Yorkshire water authority (western division)
Addingham Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
High Bentham Spring Supply Area	Iron
*Brownhill Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium
Burnsall Spring Supply Area	Iron
Carr Bottom Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese, Fecal Coliforms

Supply Area	Parameter
Graincliffe Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Fixby Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium
Helwith Bridge Spring Supply Area	Colour
Digley Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Holmstyes Treatment Works Supply Area	Manganese
*Longwood Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Iron, Manganese
Moor Top Borehole Supply Area	Manganese
*Oldfield Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Iron
Panorama Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Fecal Coliforms
Reva Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium
Thornton Moor Treatment Works Supply Area	Colour, Iron
March Ghyll Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
*Thornton Pressure Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium
Blackmoorfoot North Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese, Fecal Coliforms
Blackmoorfoot South Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese, Fecal Coliforms
Deerhill Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Iron, Manganese
Haugh Top Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Withens Clough Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Embsay Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Hollin Hall Treatment Works Supply Area	Colour, Aluminium, Manganese
Ogden Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Thrum Hall Treatment Works Supply Area	Aluminium, Manganese
Austwick Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Bentham High Level Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Bentham Low Level Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Blackhouse Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Burnsall Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Chapel le Dale Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Grassington Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Hawkswick Spring Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
Ingleton Low Level Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Langcliffe Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Baw Head Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Oughtershaw Spring Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Blackhill Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
*Moor Lane-Menston Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Clough Head-Goldcar Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Cowersley Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Gledhill Service Reservoir Supply Area	Fecal Coliforms
Kirkburton Service Reservoir Supply System	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms
*Star Inn Service Reservoir Supply Area	Total Coliforms, Fecal Coliforms

* Application submitted but no decision yet given.

London Borough of Greenwich (GLC Finance)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out details of each payment to the London borough of Greenwich for which the Greater London council has sought his consent under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985, indicating which have received his approval.

Mr. Tracey: The following applications have been received from the GLC for consent under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 in respect of payments to the London borough of Greenwich:

Scheme	Value £
Parks and Open Spaces	1,262,507
Playgrounds and Fixed Equipment	348,140
Library/Community Centre building and Lake edge treatment	335,517
Homelessness initiative	184,507
Tramshed Theatre	18,720
Environmental Improvements, Woolwich High Street	9,386
Manager for Thistlebrook Traveller Caravan Site	7,475

Consent has been given in each case.

Empty Dwellings

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the length of time the numbers of empty dwellings in the answer of 19 December, Official Report, columns 263-4, have been empty.

Mr. John Patten: Estimates based on local authorities' 1985 housing investment programme returns indicate that, of the 116,500 local authority dwellings vacant as at 1 April 1985, 26,100 had been vacant for more than a year and, of these, 13,500 had been vacant for more than two years. I do not have information about the length of time other dwellings have been empty as this is not collected centrally.

Hainault Forest

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements have been made for the management and ownership of Hainault forest in the wake of the Greater London council's abolition; and if he is satisfied that the arrangements will safeguard the forest's role and character.

Mr. Tracey: Failing agreement on a single successor authority among the local authorities in whose areas Hainault forest lies, the draft general property transfer order provides for its ownership to be transferred to the London boroughs of Redbridge and Havering and to Essex county council. Management arrangements for the forest are for the three authorities to develop. A supplementary transfer order could be considered before 1 April making different provision if the authorities concerned are agreed.

Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to issue a departmental circular in respect of the provisions of the Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 before the Act comes into force on 1 April.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Yes. My Department has now received comments from the local authority associations and other bodies on a draft of the circular sent to them on 29 November 1985. This was the subject of a departmental news release (No. 592 of 1985) a copy of which is available in the Library.

Housing Revenue Account Dwellings

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of Exchequer subsidies and rate fund contributions, separately, to local authorities' housing revenue account dwellings, on a per dwelling basis, for the years 1978-79 to 1985-86, and the estimate for 1986-87, and the number of local authority housing revenue account dwellings on which these figures are based.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The available information is as follows. It is based on information provided by local authorities in their housing subsidy claim forms. The 1985-86 figures are estimates; estimates for 1986-87 are not yet available.

Year	Housing subsidy per dwelling £	Net rate fund contribution per dwelling £
1978-79	198·27	40·73
1979-80	253·10	65·43
1980-81	281·36	86·77
1981-82	175·96	82·06
1982-83	90·61	88·47
1983-84	69·04	85·88
1984-85	83·00	92·06
1985-86	95·89	95·19

Housing Revenue Account Surpluses

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the local authorities in England which showed a surplus on their housing revenue account in each year since 1981-82, giving the figures in each case.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The available information is as follows. It is based on information provided by local authorities in their housing subsidy claim forms:

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Greater Manchester
Bury	0	0	0	138,700	0
Merseyside
St. Helens	0	887,000	0	0	0
South Yorkshire
Tyne and Wear
South Tyneside	0	0	0	2,841,278	1,327,550
West Midlands
Birmingham	0	0	0	273,300	0
Dudley	0	0	1,000,000	1,750,000	0
West Yorkshire
Kensington and Chelsea	0	0	0	0	247,540
Barking and Dagenham	0	1,138,713	2,840,000	2,544,000	4,323,500
Barnet	0	428,492	0	0	0
Bexley	0	0	0	1,268,100	8,000
Bromley	48,064	69,855	159,080	2,294,956	0
Ealing	0	218,349	183,974	682,892	983,700
Havering	216,660	1,651,025	1,917,311	1	329,960
Hillingdon	1,129,757	693,033	954,514	1,112,610	1,902,180
Kingston-upon-Thames	0	1,894,601	1,321,994	1,884,789	2,445,200
Merton	0	0	1,030,903	1,313,855	0
Redbridge	0	0	12,000	90,000	90,000
Sutton	0	191,169	321,408	367,360	347,600
Avon
Wansdyke	0	0	464,500	1,926,800	1,366,200
Woodspring	300,784	1,060,398	809,979	635,723	683,390
Bedfordshire
South Bedfordshire	0	0	30,517	65,646	76,485

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Berkshire
Bracknell	168,900	60,000	14,000	91,345	295,700
Newbury	0	0	0	0	143,700
Reading	0	0	0	437,924	445,000
Slough	300,000	300,000	300,000	0	0
Windsor and Maidenhead	137,190	111,692	521,044	817,145	1,030,000
Wokingham	9,484	40,436	0	0	0
Buckinghamshire
Beaconsfield	76,330	71,333	809,678	611,539	167,265
Wycombe	1,109,000	0	0	400,000	420,000
Cambridgeshire
East Cambridgeshire	453,560	735,240	590,965	450,000	625,000
Fenland	206,800	0	0	393,120	421,660
Cheshire
Congleton	345,000	217,685	222,500	272,500	461,500
Cleveland
Stockton on Tees	48,344	0	0	0	0
Cornwall
Carrick	0	72,460	86,520	12,800	12,940
Kerrier	0	0	0	13,451	18,450
Penwith	0	0	99,306	113,442	114,000
Restormel	108,059	72,195	75,682	68,263	73,400
Cumbria
Barrow in Furness	0	0	65,611	69,430	0
South Lakeland	8,561	267,541	503,862	730,462	546,500
Derbyshire
Devon
East Devon	0	89,556	101,036	200,568	202,470
Exeter	92,881	142,704	160,718	157,106	182,850
North Devon	0	79,879	90,737	139,020	95,470
Plymouth	0	0	0	79,590	125,770
South Hams	0	78,144	77,470	70,980	68,210
Mid Devon	0	0	0	1	332,600
Torbay	0	299,650	445,007	230,710	580,000
Dorset
Bournemouth	200,970	798,642	174,770	350,000	400,000
Christchurch	0	0	0	30,000	50,000
North Dorset	29,177	4,796	738	1,890	1,500
Poole	0	0	499,705	610,769	133,805
Purbeck	0	0	0	64,400	50,000
West Dorset	0	0	100,000	200,000	210,000
Wimborne	105,027	85,842	80,247	109,378	119,290
Durham
East Sussex
Brighton	26,244	21,562	15,411	20,000	0
Eastbourne	48,841	227,926	230,339	262,250	0
Hove	39,420	88,606	87,080	115,497	124,335
Lewes	0	0	0	0	150,000
Rother	0	0	5,921	53,000	0
Essex
Brentwood	2,835	77,565	232,492	137,000	0
Castle Point	32,692	31,310	347,171	171,770	0
Colchester	533,857	548,596	850,960	1,163,280	1,153,000
Epping Forest	1,380,000	660,540	0	40,000	1,500,000
Maldon	0	0	100,000	120,000	100,000
Rochford	158,999	169,551	182,789	218,335	340,900
Southend on Sea	0	0	0	199,453	207,250
Tendring	118,255	194,748	0	44,174	40,540
Thurrock	0	158,095	0	0	0
Gloucestershire
Cheltenham	86,308	500,000	540,000	570,000	570,000
Gloucester	115,476	117,526	0	500,000	0
Tewkesbury	0	93,891	156,836	143,350	98,384

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Hampshire
Basingstoke and Deane	613,032	0	0	0	0
Eastleigh	0	0	0	0	20,000
Gosport	106,000	0	0	0	0
Havant	468,249	0	312,893	391,203	399,200
Portsmouth	0	0	0	12,000	395,360
Hereford and Worcester
Hereford	4,273	9,535	3,375	0	0
Leominster	0	0	181,586	0	0
Redditch	0	0	0	0	115,430
Worcester	0	0	0	94,930	101,360
Hertfordshire
Broxbourne	0	14,178	922,629	1,233,887	1,071,230
Dacorum	1,000,000	559,000	324,000	324,000	324,000
East Hertfordshire	272,765	0	0	0	0
North Hertfordshire	400,000	0	0	0	61,410
Three Rivers	219,830	130,376	162,979	167,638	202,550
Welwyn Hatfield	0	0	0	250,000	0
Humberside
Glanford	8,365	25,000	0	0	0
North Wolds	0	0	0	0	94,630
Isle of Wight
South Wight	0	47,000	60,500	95,286	78,400
Kent
Ashford	0	29,810	0	0	0
Canterbury	300,000	0	0	0	0
Dartford	0	79,109	0	0	109,365
Shepway	0	50,000	50,000	52,300	70,000
Tonbridge and Malling	861,330	861,330	900,000	850,000	850,000
Tunbridge Wells	0	80,999	0	0	0
Lancashire
Blackpool	85,573	0	0	0	0
Hyndburn	0	0	0	82,240	99,705
Lancaster	0	220,111	124,106	138,343	188,976
Rossendale	0	0	190,000	0	0
West Lancashire	0	20,000	200,000	122,235	266,430
Leicestershire
Charnwood	0	0	0	0	472,960
Harborough	53,000	63,000	68,000	97,672	71,500
Hinckley and Bosworth	0	298,633	82,429	69,044	51,421
Melton	0	0	350,000	215,000	251,000
Oadby and Wigston	0	0	0	30,000	100,000
Rutland	0	0	0	100,000	100,000
Lincolnshire
Boston	300,000	0	0	0	0
Lincoln	240,000	0	0	0	0
South Holland	0	0	0	0	182,579
South Kesteven	0	0	0	100,000	200,000
Norfolk
Breckland	34,198	0	0	150,000	150,000
North Norfolk	28,015	0	0	111,770	0
South Norfolk	0	0	16,770	14,250	14,400
Northamptonshire
Northampton	0	0	0	0	87,690
South Northampton	40,000	40,000	40,000	40,000	60,000
Northumberland
Castle Morpeth	0	0	52,060	0	0
North Yorkshire
Hambleton	0	0	63,271	76,461	76,740
Harrogate	0	0	0	0	258,000
Ryedale	0	0	0	85,000	85,000
Scarborough	0	0	116,495	151,551	132,270
Nottinghamshire
Mansfield	0	343,103	249,991	0	0

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Rushcliffe	0	105,405	0	0	0
Oxfordshire
Cherwell	0	140,000	18,970	214,690	0
South Oxfordshire	448,015	506,884	736,011	1,234,799	1,203,300
Vale of White Horse	167,270	91,900	109,450	82,778	80,510
West Oxfordshire	0	0	0	1,000,000	0
Salop
North Shropshire	48,186	64,731	72,739	64,978	65,000
Shrewsbury and Atcham	149,525	0	0	0	0
Somerset
Sedgemoor	87,048	0	0	0	0
West Somerset	0	0	0	3,004	0
Staffordshire
East Staffordshire	150,000	172,800	0	0	0
Lichfield	114,000	0	0	0	0
Newcastle under Lyme	206,795	66,358	0	0	0
Staffs. Moorlands	850,000	600,000	450,000	450,000	0
Suffolk
Forest Heath	47,935	0	0	0	0
Ipswich	229,776	0	0	0	0
Suffolk Coastal	0	0	0	0	100,000
Surrey
Elmbridge	0	220,871	259,306	248,961	220,070
Epsom and Ewell	8,720	86,947	157,516	265,011	202,000
Guildford	154,902	0	150,000	0	50,000
Reigate and Banstead	0	0	26,387	521,989	9,000
Runnymede	46,021	81,011	125,602	274,536	322,645
Spelthorne	109,000	410,683	443,000	116,590	0
Surrey Heath	247,250	79,090	484,885	452,116	93,440
Tandridge	0	499,430	499,430	999,430	999,430
Waverley	103,205	121,486	177,003	154,025	196,870
Woking	0	60,000	139,084	124,940	0
Warwickshire
Stratford-on-Avon	835,260	88,000	176,320	27,793	30,800
West Sussex
Adur	0	0	0	0	120,435
Arun	0	0	0	50,000	100,000
Chichester	0	250,000	143,575	476,438	465,900
Horsham	253,900	605,506	298,840	0	0
Mid Sussex	17,500	0	200,124	19,174	19,137
Worthing	0	20,000	57,857	55,456	60,600
Wiltshire
West Wiltshire	119,751	130,769	162,955	210,480	209,412

Property Services Agency (Berkshire)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current acreage and location of sites and properties in Berkshire at the disposal of or administered by the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows:

Address	Acreage (Hectares)	ALA (M^2)
Crown
Reading
Crown Buildings, Coley park	8·620	11,050
Bennett Road	0·200	33
35 Ardler Road	0·910	58
South Street	0·121	522
Newbury
Land Adjoining Eastfield	0·200	300
Reading
Land for Skill Centre	1·720	5,410
Artillery House	0·635	2,386
Bradfield
UKWMO	0·031	11
Newbury
UKWMO	0·030	11
Streatley
UKWMO	0·030	11
Statfield Targis
UKWMO	0·030	11
Newbury
Reception Centre	0·730	1,225
HGVTS Turnpike Lane, Shaw	1·246	2,524

Address	Acreage (Hectares)	ALA (M^2)
33 Chandros Road	0·070	80
Reading
Met Office Training School	20·581	10,333
Donnington
Donnington Castle	2·158
Slough
MSC Skill Centre	5·900
Sub District Works Office (ACO)		73
Holdings from other Government Departments (MOD)
Hermitage
PSA Works Office SMS		254
Arborfield
District Works Office		638
Leased
Slough
Upton Lodge		2,504
64 Stoke Road		112
Chalfont House 1st Floor		483
Prudential Buildings		397
72 High Street		307
172-177 Buckingham Avenue	0·911	4,314
Windsor Road Slough		680
Garth House		279
Bracknell
Fitzwilliam House		1,800
29 Charles Square		365
Western Road	0·702	3,929
Maidenhead
Marlow House		705
Thames House		2,328
3 Park Street		1,111
Wokingham
13 Peach Street		100
37 Broad Street		124
Reading
Reading Bridge House		2,149
Fountain House Butts Centre		6,012
79-81 Basingstoke Road		694
BSM (Ground and 1st Floor)		1,107
Market Place House		4,540
1 Station Road 22 Friar Street		517
Sun Alliance House 60 Oxford Road		449
30-31 Friar Street		360
76 School Road Tilehurst		70
Barn and 2 Garages		206
Wessex House		1,699
Terrapin Building		298
Atlas House Silver Street		787
Scottish Life House		430
Premier House		1,451
20 The Butts Centre		136
21-23 Valpy Street—1-12 Beaconsfield Buildings		3,723
Quebec House, 3 Silver Street		714
161-163 Friar Street		2,205
47-57 Queens Road		5,613
26-30 Kings Road		1,915
City wall House 26-30 West Street		1,161
Abbey Hall, Kings Road		639
10 Friars Walk		2,690
Monarch House, 77-79 Caversham Road		731
Units A-F The Butts Centre		686
Slough
24 Farnham Road	0·327	395
Crown Building 2 Farnham Road	0·89	3·282
Hurworth House London Road	4·650	8·699
Newbury
15 Kings Road West		63
Bracknell
London road	0·204	15,604
Met Office Eastern Road	1·399	5,477
Met Office East Hampstead	33·259	3,381
Crowthorne
TRRL Crowthorne	103·765	43,080
Sunningdale
Sunningdale Park	42·177	10,020
Holdings from other Government Departments
Bracknell
Sub District Works Office PSA		42
Broadmoor
Sub District Works Office PSA		531
Reading
Sub Depot PSA		1,787
Thatcham
Sub Depot PSA		43
Newbury
22 Oxford Street Cromwell House		622
1-3 The Broadway		407
Elizabeth House 41 West Street		1,335
Hillview House West Street		1,503
County Court Offices Kings Road		141
Reading
10 Cremyll Road		961
New Warehouse		1,640
8A St. Mary's Butts		157
Heron House 41-45 Queens Road		7,282
Old Shire Hall The Forbury		762
Balmore House		599
Windsor
Crown House Victoria Street		991
Shinfield Cattle Breeding Centre	1·363	672
MOD held for disposal
The Meadows Sandhurst	76·290 (acres)
Maywood Avenue White Waltham Maidenhead (39 Houses)	5·480 (acres)
Whitley Wood Reading (12 Houses)	2·992 (acres)
60 Houses at various locations in Newbury Thatcham and Reading

Grant-related Expenditure

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing (a) grant-related expenditure per head (b) actual expenditure per head in 1985-86, (c) proposed block grant per head in 1986-87 and (d) the difference in block grant per head proposed compared with 1985-86 in the 10 shire metropolitan or London authorities with (i) the highest and (ii) the lowest grant-related expenditure per head proposed for 1986-87.

Mrs Rumbold: The available information is shown in the following table: the amount of grant to be paid in 1986-87 will depend on authorities own spending decisions.

	GRE per head* 1986-87 settlement £	Expenditure per head* 1985-86 2nd Supplementary Report £	Grant per head† 1985-86 2nd Supplementary Report £
Highest GRE per head
City of London	4,369·25	10,703·85	−8,653·72
Isles of Scilly	761·50	645·62	377·92
Newham	674·25	628·06	299·34
Tower Hamlets	662·19	448·35	169·23
Haringey	632·54	664·62	214·38
Brent	603·32	584·08	179·32
Manchester	576·83	548·16	283·22
Islington	570·89	526·88	172·75
Hackney	566·49	522·70	256·80
Camden	542·50	670·14	80·26
Lowest GRE per head
Wandsworth	364·66	247·72	209·00
Hertfordshire	364·42	342·51	59·65
Avon	362·91	349·47	97·72
Suffolk	357·77	322·92	120·30
Dorset	352·63	310·51	95·53
East Sussex	352·43	306·86	82·49
West Sussex	347·38	298·21	77·06
Oxfordshire	337·78	317·04	70·35
Surrey	333·39	307·42	32·72
Greenwich	316·58	308·36	167·11

Footnotes:

* Comparisons of GRE and expenditure per head between different classes of authorities are misleading because functions differ between classes.

† Includes payments to and receipts from the London Resource Equalisation Scheme.

Council House Sales

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to refuse permission to local authorities seeking powers to prevent home owners personalising their homes.

Mr. Tracey: As reflected in the provisions of the town and country planning general development order, our policy is that many types of alteration to the appearance of dwellings do not need to be subject to specific planning control.

Water Catchment Areas (Sales)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received critical of his proposal that regional water authorities should offer for sale water catchment areas; what steps he is taking to preserve for sport and recreational use such land holdings as would be affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have received representations from local authorities, and sport and recreation interests in the North West, mostly through hon. Members. I expect water authorities to consult sporting and recreational interests when considering the disposal of land in their catchment areas. I have commended to them some guidelines which show how such interests can be given due consideration.

Home Insulation Grants

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those councils that have applied for supplementary grant under the 1985-86 home insulation grant programme; and what proportion of the £7 million allocated to the reserve programme has been distributed.

Sir George Young: The information is as follows:

To date, the following local authorities have applied for additional allocations from the Home Insulation Scheme.

Northern
- Langbaurgh
- Middlesbrough
- Stockton-on-Tees
- Tynedale
- Alnwick*
- Chester-le-Street
- Darlington

Yorkshire and Humberside
- Beverley
- Cleethorpes
- East Yorkshire
- Glanford
- Holderness
- Scunthorpe
- Hambleton
- Scarborough
- Selby
- Barnsley
- Doncaster
- Sheffield*
- Bradford
- Calderdale*
- Kirklees*
- Wakefield
- Kingston upon Hull
- Craven
- Harrogate
- Ryedale
- York

East Midlands
- Amber Valley
- Erewash*
- North-East Derbyshire
- West Derbyshire
- Blaby
- Charnwood
- Melton
- North West Leicestershire
- Oadby and Wigston
- North Kesteven
- West Lindsey
- Corby
- Kettering
- Northampton
- Wellingborough
- Ashfield
- Bassetlaw
- Broxstowe
- Gedling
- Mansfield
- Newark
- Nottingham
- South Northamptonshire
- Bolsover
- Chesterfield
- Derby
- High Peak
- Harborough*
- Rutland
- Boston
- East Lindsey*
- South Kesteven
- Daventry
- East Northamptonshire
- Rushcliffe

Eastern
- Luton
- North Bedfordshire

South Bedfordshire
Mid Bedfordshire
Chiltern
South Buckinghamshire
Wycombe*
Fenland
Basildon
Brentwood
Castle Point
Colchester
Harlow
Maldon
Southend on Sea
Tendring
Uttlesford
Broxbourne
Dacorum
St. Albans
Stevenage
Welwyn, Hatfield
Breckland
Broadland
Great Yarmouth
Norwich
South Norfolk
Babergh*
Forest Heath
Ipswich
Mid Suffolk
St. Edmundsbury
Suffolk Coastal
Waveney
North Hertfordshire
Aylesbury Vale
Huntingdon
Chelmsford
Thurrock
Hertsmere
North Norfolk*

Greater London

Bromley
Ealing
Havering
Lambeth
Redbridge
Brent

South Eastern

Bracknell
Windsor and Maidenhead
Wokingham
Eastbourne
Rother
Wealden
Basingstoke and Deane
East Hampshire
Eastleigh
Fareham
Havant
New Forest

South Eastern

Southampton
Test Valley
Winchester
Medina
Ashford
Canterbury
Dartford
Dover*
Gillingham
Maidstone
Sevenoaks
Thanet
Tunbridge Wells
South Oxfordshire
Vale of White Horse
West Oxfordshire*
Elmbridge
Epsom and Ewell
Guildford
Mole Valley*
Reigate and Banstead
Runnymede
Spelthorne
Surrey Heath
Waverley
Woking
Adur
Arun
Chichester
Horsham
Mid-Sussex
Worthing
Lewes
Portsmouth
South Wight
Tonbridge and Malling
Tendridge
Hove*

South West

Woodspring
Carrick*
Mid Devon
North Devon
Torridge
Christchurch
North Dorset
Poole
West Dorset
Wimborne
Stroud*
Taunton Deane
Kennet
Wansdyke
Caradon
Kerrier
East Devon
South Hams*
Bournemouth*
Thamesdown

West Midlands

Bromsgrove
Hereford
Leominster
Malvern Hills
Redditch
Worcester

West Midlands

Wychavon
Wyre Forest
Bridgnorth
Shrewsbury and Atcham
South Shropshire
The Wrekin
Cannock Chase*
Lichfield
Newcastle under Lyme
South Staffordshire
Nuneaton and Bedworth
Stratford on Avon*
Warwick
Coventry*
Dudley
Sandwell*
North Shropshire
East Staffordshire
Stafford
Tamworth
North Warwickshire
Rugby

North West
Congleton
Crewe and Nantwich
Ellesmere Port and Neston
Halton
Warrington
South Lakeland
Fylde*
Hyndburn
Rossendale*
Wyre
Bolton
Rochdale
Bury*
Salford*
Wigan
Sefton
Macclesfield
St. Helens
Wirral
Oldham

* These authorities have not received any additional allocation as a result of applications they have made. They have however been invited to re-apply when it is clearer that their existing allocations will soon be exhausted.

Some 83 per cent. of the reserve has been allocated.

Background note

Mr. Speller asked an identical question in June 1985 (PQ 2824/84/86) and this draft answer simply updates the information previously provided in reply.

Service Charges

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to complete consideration of the Nugee report; and if he will introduce legislation on the subject of service charges at an early date.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend and I are still considering the many recommendations in the Nugee report in consultation with colleagues in other Departments which have an interest. I will make a statement as soon as possible, but I cannot say at this stage when it will be possible to introduce legislation on this subject.

Merseyside Residuary Body

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he is satisfied with the progress being made by the Merseyside Residuary Body; and if he will make a statement;

(2) why he dismissed Mr. Leslie Pocock as chairman of the Merseyside Residuary Body.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer these quesions shortly.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table of the latest estimate of financial gains or losses likely to be incurred by each London borough arising out of the abolition of the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Savings following the abolition of the GLC will depend on decisions by each of the successors.

London Residuary Body (Interim Budget)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue to all hon. Members in London the interim budget statement for 1986-87 of the London Residuary Body; if he will publish in the Official Report the impact on each London borough of the interim budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No. The London Residuary Body is continuing to modify its budget in the light of discussion with boroughs and others directly concerned.

Mary Rose

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list, by subsection and paragraph, the powers under which he acted in providing funds towards the cost of recovering the Mary Rose;

(2) if he will list, by subsection and paragraph, the powers under which he acted in designating the Mary Rose as an ancient monument;

(3) how many protected wrecks have also been designated as ancient monuments; and if he will list them;

(4) what is his policy regarding the payment of public funds to private charities in connection with the preservation of ancient monuments; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will list, by subsection and paragraph, the powers under which he paid grants to the Mary Rose trust;

(6) whether any grant was actually paid to the Mary Rose trust prior to the designation of the Mary Rose as an ancient monument taking effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The grant offered by my predecessor to the Mary Rose trust was within the powers of section 24(2) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 which enables contributions to be made towards the cost of removing ancient monuments to another place for the purposes of preservation. Section 61(12) defines an "ancient monument" as either a scheduled monument (section I of the 1979 Act) or "any other monument which in the opinion of the Secretary of State is of public interest by reason of the historic, architectural, traditional, artistic or archaeological interest attaching to it". The Mary Rose fell within the definition of "monument" in section 61(7)(a) and the exclusion in section 61(8)(b) concerning protected wrecks does not apply to this subsection. The Mary Rose was clearly of public interest and a grant could thus lawfully be made. This conclusion was reached before the grant was offered; payments were not made until 1982. No protected wrecks have been scheduled.

The responsibility for making grants was transferred to the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission on 1 April 1984 and the present policy on aid to private charities is a matter for the Commission.

Local Government Bill

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Audit Commission about the implementation of part 2 of the Local Government Bill.

Mr. Waldegrave: Informal discussions about the Local Government Bill were held between officers of my Department and the Audit Commission last December.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of local people currently employed on the construction of the Docklands light railway.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 18 November 1985, c. 61]: The number of people currently employed on the construction of the London Docklands railway at December 1985, based on postal areas, is shown in the table:

Postal Area	Numbers Employed
London East	232
London South East	14
London South West	6
London West	13
London North	31
London North West	38
Home Counties	69
Elsewhere	37
Total	440

London east and London south-east would include all those living in the Docklands boroughs.

Water Authorities

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations which commented on the document titled "Water Privatisation A Discussion Paper", indicating which supported privatisation and which opposed it.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 573]: Responses have been received from the following:

The Water Authorities Association
Anglian Water Authority
North West Water Authority
Northumbrian Water Authority
Severn Trent Water Authority
South West Water Authority
Southern Water Authority
Thames Water Authority
Welsh Water Authority
Wessex Water Authority
Yorkshire Water Authority
The Water Companies Association
British Water Industries Group
National Joint Industrial Committee for the Water Industry (Trade Union Side)
Institute of Water Engineers and Scientists
British Effluent and Water Association
Association of Chief Technical Officers
Association of Consulting Engineers
Association of District Councils
Association of Metropolitan District Engineers
Basildon Council
Camden District Council
Confederation of British Industry
Countryside Commission
Deloitte Haskins and Sells
Food Manufacturers Federation
Institute of Directors
John Laing Construction Ltd/Société Lyonnaise des Eaux
London Boroughs Association
London Borough of Merton
Metropolitan Borough of Knowsley
National Anglers Council
National Consumer Council
National Farmers Union
Salmon and Trout Association
South Derbyshire District Council
Southern Water Retirement Association
Trafford Metropolitan Borough Council
United Kingdom Petroleum Industry Association Ltd Environmental Group

In addition, responses have been received from four private individuals.

Of the total of 43 responses, seven supported the principle of privatisation and eleven opposed it. The remaining 25 commented on practical issues, without expressing a view on the merits of privatisation itself.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many Divisions have taken place in each Session on reports for each departmental Select Committee; and how many reports have been approved unanimously, for each year since their appointment.

Mr. Biffen: The number of divisions which have taken place on reports for each departmental Select Committee in each Session is as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86 to date
Agriculture	6	10	2	0	1	5	—
Defence	2	2	0	0	0	0	0
Education	39	0	46	28	0	0	0
Employment	0	0	0	0	0	5	0
Energy	0	0	0	2	0	0	0
Environment	8	131	20	0	4	0	0
Foreign Affairs	31	13	50	0	24	12	0
Home Affairs	15	12	15	8	0	3	0
Scottish Affairs	8	0	7	2	93	72	0
Social Services	1	0	1	1	0	0	0
Trade and Industry	0	0	0	1	0	1	0
Transport	0	6	10	0	55	49	0
Treasury and Civil Service	2	22	18	*6	6	37	3
Welsh Affairs	0	1	0	29	0	7	3

* This figure does not include 69 divisions on a report which was not in the event made to the House.

The number of reports which have been approved unanimously by each Committee are as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86 to date
Agriculture	1	4	1	1	2	8	0
Defence	2	3	2	4	3	6	1
Education	4	3	7	2	2	1	0
Employment	2	3	6	0	2	3	0
Energy	2	3	6	3	12	9	0
Environment	0	1	0	5	7	7	0
Foreign Affairs	4	6	4	6	5	4	2
Home Affairs	4	3	7	3	1	5	0
Scottish Affairs	0	2	0	1	1	0	0
Social Services	3	5	3	2	4	8	0
Trade and Industry	4	9	16	6	9	7	2
Transport	3	9	6	6	3	7	0
Treasury and Civil Service	5	7	6	5	7	10	2
Welsh Affairs	1	1	1	0	1	0	1

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the percentage attendance rate and percentage turnover of members of each departmental Select Committee and their Sub-Committees for each Session since their appointment; what is the overall attendance rate; and what is the total number of members who have served on each Select Committee.

Mr. Biffen: The attendance percentages for each departmental Select Committee and their Sub-Committees for each Session since their appointment are as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
Agriculture	84	77	75	72	68	62
Defence	72	72	75	73	69	74
Education	71	68	72	63	76	68
Employment	74	69	70	70	81	82
Energy	72	73	53	63	73	67
Environment	69	67	68	68	76	64
Foreign Affairs	87	69	84	78	66	75
Sub-Committee Overseas Develpment*	45	75	84	83	—	—
Home Affairs	92	84	75	73	82	75
Sub-Committee Race Relations and Immigration	89	89	87	92	83	80
Scottish Affairs	85	78	74	71	72	67
Social Services	73	66	70	71	72	66
Trade and Industry	84	81	71	67	63	57
Transport	73	69	74	65	73	67
Treasury and Civil Service	92	88	85	85	77	78
Sub-Committee	75	73	61	71	79	92
Welsh Affairs	81	75	76	79	83	80

Note:

* Where a Member ceases to be able to attend a Committee, but until his replacement technically remains a Member, the above attendances are thereby depressed.

The turnover percentages for each departmental Select Committee and their Sub-Committees for each Session since their appointment are:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86 to date
Agriculture	0	33	11	0	18	9	†18
Defence	0	9	27	18	0	0	0
Education	0	0	11	0	9	18	0
Employment	0	22	22	22	0	0	0
Energy	9	9	9	18	0	27	9
Environment	18	18	64	9	9	18	0
Foreign Affairs	0	18	18	36	9	0	0
Sub-Committee on Overseas Development‡	25	17	33	40	—	—	—
Home Affairs	0	18	0	18	9	9	0
Sub-Committee on Race Relations and Immigration	20	0	0	20	20	20	0
Scottish Affairs	0	30	25	15	30	0	0
Social Services	11	22	11	22	0	27	†18
Trade and Industry	0	9	9	9	27	9	0

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86 to date
Transport	0	9	9	0	0	9	0
Treasury and Civil Service	0	18	27	0	9	0	0
Sub-Committee	14	14	57	0	*	*	*
Welsh Affairs	12	0	18	9	9	0	0

Notes:

* Membership of the Sub-Committee has varied in size and composition in these Sessions.

† This figure does not take account of members who have resigned their seats and have not yet been replaced.

‡ The Overseas Development Sub-Committee was not re-appointed in the 1983-84 Session.

¶ One member died; vacancy was not filled.

The overall attendance rate for the departmental Select Committees and Sub-Committees and the total number of members who have served on each Committee are:

	Overall Attendance	Number of Members
Agriculture	73	25
Defence	72·5	17
Education	71·5	22
Employment	74	23
Energy	66·1	27
Environment	69·2	26
Foreign Affairs	74	24
Sub-Committee
Overseas Development	72	16
Home Affairs	80	28
Sub-Committee
Race Relations and Immigration	80	12
Scottish Affairs	74·5	27
Social Services	69·8	24
Trade and Industry	70	24
Transport	70	19
Treasury and Civil Service	81	22
Sub Committee	76	16
Welsh Affairs	79	23

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal which reports of departmental Select Committee and their sub-committees, where appropriate, have been debated; when they were debated; what percentage of the total number of reports this represents; and which reports have been mentioned on the Order Paper as relevant to debate.

Mr. Biffen: Information requested is as follows: The following reports of departmental Select Committees and their Sub-Committees have been debated on substantive motions:

Second Report (1979-80) from the Home Affairs Committee on 'Race Relations and the 'Sus' law' debated 5 June 1980.

Second Report (1979-80) from the Social Services Committee on 'Perinatal and Neonatal Mortality' debated 5 December 1980.

Fourth Report (1980-81) from the Social Services Committee on 'Medical Education' debated 18 June 1982.

Fifth Report (1984-85) from the Employment Committee on 'Wages Councils' debated 6 June 1985.

This represents 0·9 per cent. of the total number of reports.

The following reports have been mentioned on the Order Paper as relevant to debate:

Agriculture

First Report (1980-81) on 'Animal Welfare in the Poultry, Pig and Veal Calf Industries' debated 19 November 1982.

Defence

Second Report (1979-80) on 'Statement on the Defence Estimates 1980' debated 28 and 29 April 1980.

Second Report (1980-81) on 'Statement on the Defence Estimates 1981' debated 19 and 20 May 1981.

First Report (1983-84) on 'Statement on the Defence Estimates 1984' debated 18 and 19 June 1984.

Third Report (1983-84) on 'Ministry of Defence Reorganisation' debated 22 October 1984.

First Report (1984-85) on 'The Use of Merchant Shipping for Defence Purposes' debated 12 and 13 June 1985.

Third Report (1984-85) on 'Defence Commitments and Resources and the Defence Estimates 1985-86' debated 12 and 13 June 1985.

Education

Eighth Report (1981-82) on "Public and Private Funding of the Arts" debated 14 June 1984.

First Report (1982-83) on "Prison Education" debated 4 July 1984.

Second Report (1983-84) on "Observation on the Government Reply to the First Report of the Education, Science and Arts Committee 1982-83" debated on 4 July 1984.

Employment

First Report (1983-84) on "GCHQ" debated 27 February 1984.

Energy

Second Report (1983-84) on "Department of Energy Supplementary Estimate in Respect of the Coal Industry" debated 8 March 1984.

Fourth Report (1984-85) on "Department of Energy Winter Supplementary Estimate in respect of the British National Oil Corporation" debated 18 December 1984.

Fifth Report (1984-85) on "Government Oil Price Policy and the Department of Energy Spring Supplementary Estimate in respect of the British National Oil Corporation" debated 14 March 1985.

Environment

Second Report (1983-84) on "Department of the Environment Main Estimates 1984-85" debated 4 July 1984.

Third Report (1983-84) on "Property Services Agency Main Estimates 1984-85" debated 17 July 1984.

Fourth Report (1983-84) on "Acid Rain" debated 11 January 1985.

Third Report (1984-85) on "Department of the Environment Main Estimates 1985-86" debated 11 July 1985.

Fourth Report (1984-85) on "Property Services Agency Main Estimates 1985-86" debated 11 July 1985.

Foreign Affairs

Fifth Report (1980-81) on "Mexico Summit: the British Role in the light of the Brandt Commission" debated 24 July 1981.

First Report (1980-81) on "British North American Acts: Role of Parliament" debated 17 February 1982.

Second Report (1980-81) on "British North America Acts: Role of Parliament" debated 17 February 1982.

First Report (1981-82) (1980-81) on "British North America Acts: Role of Parliament" debated 17 February 1982.

Second Report (1982-83) on "Turks and Caicos Islands: Airport Development on Providenciales" debated 14 March 1983.

Second Report (1983-84) on "Grenada" debated 17 July 1984.

Fourth Report (1984-85) on "FCO/ODA Estimates 1984-85" debated 17 July 1984.

Fifth Report (1983-84) on "Falkland Islands" debated 14 March 1985.

Fifth Report (1984-85) on "United Kingdom Membership of UNESCO" debated 22 November 1985.

Second Report (1984-85) on "Famine in Africa" debated 17 December 1985.

First Report (1985-86) on "Winter Supplementary Estimates 1985-86" debated 17 December 1985.

Social Services

Third Report (1981-82) on "Age of Retirement" debated 25 November 1983.

First Report (1983-84) on "Griffiths NHS Management Enquiry Report" debated 4 May 1984.

Second Report (1984-85) on "Community Care" debated 11 July 1985.

Trade and Industry

Third Report (1984-85) on "Trade with China" debated 18 July 1985.

Transport

First Report (1984-85) on "Road Safety" debated 15 November 1985.

First Report (1985-86) on "The Channel Link" debated 9 December 1985.

Treasury and Civil Service

Second Report (1979-80) on "The Budget and the Government's Expenditure Plans 1980-81 to 1983-84" debated 7 May 1980.

Fifth Report (1980-81) on "The 1981 Budget and the Government's Expenditure Plans 1981-82 to 1983-84" debated 9 April 1981.

Third Report (1981-82) on "Efficiency and Effectiveness in the Civil Service" debated on 28 October 1983.

Fourth Report (1981-82) on "The 1982 Budget" debated 6 April 1982.

Fifth Report (1981-82) on "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1982-83 to 1984-85" debated 21 April 1982.

Second Report (1982-83) on "The Spring Supplementary Estimates" debated 14 March 1983.

Third Report (1982-83) on "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1983-84 to 1985-86" debated 9 March 1983.

Fourth Report (1982-83) on "International Monetary Arrangements: International Lending by Banks" debated 18 April 1983.

Fifth Report (1982-83) on "The 1983 Budget" debated 14 April 1983.

First Report (1983-84) on "The Government's Economic Policy: Autumn Statement" debated 6 March 1984.

Third Report (1983-84) on "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1984-85 to 1986-87" debated 6 March 1984.

Fourth Report (1983-84) on "The 1984 Budget" debated 10 April 1984.

Seventh Report (1983-84) on "The Fontainebleau Summit Agreement" debated 10 July 1984.

First Report (1984-85) on "The Government's Economic Policy: Autumn Statement" debated 6 December 1984.

Third Report (1984-85) on "Special Supplementary Estimates Class II, Vote 10 (Budget of the European Community)" debated 22 January 1985.

Sixth Report (1984-85) on "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1985-86 to 1987-88" debated 4 March 1985.

Eighth Report (1984-85) on "The 1985 Budget" debated 29 April 1985.

Second Report (1985-86) on "The Government's Economic Policy: Autumn Statement" debated on 12 December 1985.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the number of formal evidence sessions for each of the departmental Select Committees for each year since their establishment, together with the total figure for 1979 to 1985; and if he will give similar data for Sub-Committees since their appointment.

Mr. Biffen: The following table shows the number of formal evidence sessions held by each departmental Select Committee and their Sub-Committees, with a total for the years 1979-85:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	Total
Agriculture	0	19	16	14	9	17	19	94
Defence	0	29	20	26	17	34	24	150
Education	0	20	40	30	14	22	21	147
Employment	0	22	27	23	12	16	20	120
Energy	0	16	23	19	14	17	25	114
Environment	0	11	4	14	14	30	29	107
Foreign Affairs	1	22	15	22	9	29	30	128
Sub-Committee Overseas Development	0	16	13	13	5	—	—	47
Home Affairs	2	16	11	17	5	16	10	77
Sub-Committee Race Relations and Immigration	2	26	20	16	7	15	11	97
Scottish Affairs	1	18	17	19	12	19	8	94
Social Services	0	19	38	23	19	29	17	145
Trade and Industry	0	26	20	15	10	23	25	119
Transport	0	30	25	18	16	30	28	147
Treasury and Civil Service	1	22	14	25	11	18	22	113
Sub-Committee	0	11	13	14	0	14	12	64
Welsh Affairs	0	27	26	21	8	14	9	105

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the occupations at appointment of specialist advisers who have assisted the various departmental Select Committees since their appointment, together with the number in each occupation.

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

	Number
Academics	120
Consultants	18
Journalists	3
Headmasters	2
Businessmen	3
Arts Administrators	2
Retired Civil Servants	18
Retired LEA Inspector	1
Retired College Principal	1
Education Officer	1
Retired Her Majesty's Inspector	1
Director of Administration (London Zoo)	1
Consulting Engineers	6
Retired	2
Authors	2
Non-Government Organisation	2
Buildings Officer	1
Doctor	1
Regional Nursing Officer	1
Solicitor	1
Director of Social Services	1
Social Scientists	4
Accountants	4
Economists	22
Adviser on GEEC Affairs	1

	Number
Director CIPFA	1
Director NIESR	1
Director of Studies RIIA	1
Local Government Officer	1
Director-General RIPA	1
Research Analyst	1
Administrative Sub-Dean	1
Administrator	1
Other	5

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will name the advisers appointed by each Select Committee since their appointment; what was the total cost of (a) remuneration and (b) expenses to each Select Committee of advisers for each Session; and if he will indicate those advisers who are currently appointed to advise each committee.

Mr. Biffen: The information requested is given in the following tables.

The following people have been appointed as specialist advisers by the departmental Select Committees since their establishment. Those advisers currently appointed are indicated with an asterisk.

Agriculture
Professor J. Ashton.
*Professor D. K. Britten.
Mr. E. Neville-Rolfe.*
Professor C. R. W. Spedding.
Professor A. J. F. Webster.
Mr. I. Sturgess.

Defence
Mrs. Valerie Adams.*
Colonel Jonathan Alford.*
Air Vice Marshal Anthony Caillard, CB.*
Professor Lawrence Freedman.*
Rear Admiral E. F. Gueritz, CB, CBE, DSC.*
Air Vice Marshal R. Harding.
Dr. Keith Hartley.*
Brigadier K. Hunt.
Mr. S. Jenkins.
Major General Patrick Kay.
Sir Peter Matthews.
Major General Sir Jeremy Moore, KCB, OBE, MC.*
Mr. Chapman Pincher.
Mr. Anthony Preston.
Mr. Keith Thomas.

Education
Mr. M. Lightfoot, *Mr. J. Myerscough, Professor W. Brammer, Mr. B. Hanson, Dr. J. Crichton Campbell, Mr. A. Travers, Mr. A. C. Morris, Mr. M. Shattock, *Mr. S. Heaven, Dr. J. F. Harbinson, Dr. S. Worrall, Mr. P. Shea, Mr. J. Dawson, Professor Vickery, Mr. C. Rainbow, Dr. P. Andrews, Mr. P. Mann, Mr. A. Garrett, Mr. D. Dougan, Dr. C. Andrew, Professor R. Floud, *Mr. N. Thomas.

Employment
Mike Hanson, Roy Lewis, Dr. Charles Hanson, Paul McCormick, Hubert Scholes, Dr. Keith Ewing, Ian Hudson, Professor Bryan Harvey, Gilmour Warnock, *Professor Charles Handy, Frank Wilkinson, Roger Tarling, Andrew Likierman, *Professor Richard Layard and *Professor David Metcalf.

Energy
Professor D. Burn, *Mr. J. Chesshire, Mr. H. Gott, Dr. N. Dombey, *Professor A. Kemp, *Professor G. Manners, *Professor W. Murgatroyd, *Professor P. O'Sullivan, *Mr. W. Orchard, *Professor J. Surrey and *Mr. S. Lumby.

Environment
Mr. V. Watts: Senior Partner in Arthur Anderson & Co.,
Mr. J. Stevenson: Director of Economic Affairs, National Federation of Building Trades Employers,
Mr. A. Murie: Academic, University of Bristol,
Mr. D. Webster: Principal Scientific Officer, Centre for Environmental Studies,
Mr. A. Bovaird: Lecturer in Economics, University of Aston in Birmingham,
Dr. Christine Whitehead: Lecturer in Economics, London School of Economics,
Mr. M. Harloe: Academic, University of Essex,
*Dr. Ken Young: Academic, Policy Studies Institute,
*Mr. A. J. Rosenfeld CB: Civil Servant (retired), Principal Finance Officer,
*Dr. J. N. Bell: Academic, Department of Botany, University of London,
*Professor A. Williams: Academic, Department of Fuel and Energy, Leeds University,
*Dr. J. Mather: Academic, Natural Environment Research Council (NERC),
*Mr. W. Patterson: Consultant and author on nuclear physics,
Mr. M. Grant: Academic, Southampton University.

Foreign Affairs
Mr. David Watt, *Mrs. Jocelyn Statler, Mrs. Carol Geldart, Dr. Karen Darwisha, Mrs. Nancy Crawshaw, Brigadier Frank Henn CBE, Dr. John Finnis, *Mr. E. G. White, Dr. George Hills, Dr. A. J. Payne, Dr. Colin Clarke, Dr. David Browning, Dr. Walter Little, Professor E. D. Brown, Professor Charles Elliott, Dr. Paul Howell, Mr. Anthony Bottrall, Mr. John Cathie, Mr. John Mitchell, Dr. Paul Mosley, Mr. J. D. Stephen, Dr. C. L. Colclough, Mr. Gordon Bridger, Sir Melvyn Rosser, Professor J. M. Hirst, Dr. N. Clark, Mr. Rupert Bristow, Mr. S. Jones, Mr. G. Hunter, Professor Rosalyn Higgins, *Sir Curtis Keeble, *Mr. Michael Kaser, *Mr. Phil Williams, *Mr. Richard Pollock.

Home Affairs
Dr. S. D. McConville, Dr. D. Williams.

Sub-Committee on Race Relations and Immigration
Dr. D. Smith

Scottish Affairs
Professor T. Carbery, Dr. Tony Cockerill, Diane Dawson, Ian Falconer, David Heald, Professor L. Hunter, Jim Ross, *Charlotte Lythe, Professor D. Mackay, Tony Mackay, Malcolm Maclennan, Alan McGregor, John More

Social Services
Mr. K. Shuttleworth, Professor E. O. R. Reynolds, Professor R. Beard, Professor E. Alberman, Professor R. Klein, *Mr. M. O'Higgins, Professor T. Clark, Professor J. Parkhourse, Mr. N. Hendry, Mr. S. Engleman, Mr. M. Fogarty, Mr. H. Billing, Mrs. B. Kahan, Mrs. D. Rawstron, Mr. D. Allen, Professor J. Wing, Mr. D. Plank, Miss J. Young, Dr. M. Mitcheson, *Mr. R. Berthoud, *Mr. J. Kay, *Professor J. Bradshaw, *Professor J. Gunn, *Dr. J. MacKeith, *Professor R. Bluglass.

Trade & Industry
Mr. A. G. Thorne, Mr. J. M. Jamieson, Mr. J. J. B. Barrett, Mr. G. Firth, Mr. T. A. J. Cockerill and *Professor D. Garel Rhys.

Transport
Mr. C. D. Brown, Mr. A. Muir Wood (later Sir Alan Muir Wood), Mr. W. R. Shirrefs, Mr. A. Likierman, Dr. S. Glaister, Mr. A. Bull, Professor A. D. May, *Professor K. M. Gwilliam.

Treasury and Civil Service
Professor M. Artis, Professor A. B. Atkinson, Professor M. Beesley, Dr. D. Begg, Mr. A. J. C. Britton*, Dr. A. Budd, Professor W. Buiter, Mr. P. J. Butler, Mr. A. Doig, Mr. J. Ermisch*, Mr. J. E. Hansford, Mr. D. Heald, Professor D. Hendry, Mr. S. G. B. Henry, Mr. N. Hepworth, Mr. C. Johnson*, Mr. A. J. Jones, Mr. J. Kay, Mr. G. G. Leighton-Boyce, Mr. A. Likierman*, Mr. M. Marks, Mr. W. E. Martin*, Mr. R. Matthews, Professor M. Miller, Dr. P. Neild, Mr. P. Ormerod, Mrs. Hermione Parker, Mr. W. Plowden*, Mr. J. Redwood, Dr. W. Robinson*, Professor H. Rose, Mr. H. C. Salter, Mr. D.

Savage*, Mr. S. Stewart, Mr. M. F. Stonefrost, Professor B. Tew, Mr. W. J. L. Wallace, Mr. T. Ward*, Professor J. Williamson.

Welsh Affairs

Mr. B. Moore, Mr. J. Rhodes, Mr. D. R. Thomas, Mr. J. J. Boyd Barrett, Mr. F. H. Wise, Mr. J. Lloyd, Professor R. Mace, Mr. W. Dyfri Jones, Professor D. Morris, Professor R. E. Thomas, Mr. R. R. MacKay, Mr. W. S. Cole*, Dr. D. Stickler, Professor B. Archer*, Dr. S. Wanhill, Mr. D. Jones, Mr. P. Algar.

Special advisers—Fees and Expenses by Session

Committee	1979-80		1980-81		1981-82		1982-83		1983-84		*1984-85		*1985-86
	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £	Fees £	Expenses £
Agriculture	4,330	3,883	2,820	929	2,800	963	1,750	386	1,282	463	1,640	882
Defence	3,387	321	6,667	628	10,069	942	7,147	938	10,007	1,111	10,429	1,172	830	109
Education, Science and Arts	8,594	3,269	10,302	2,951	16,916	3,052	10,212	1,644	2,988	54	3,453	84
Employment	2,198	357	5,607	1,185	2,783	199	1,054	437	1,560	106	4,398	60
Energy	6,696	648	11,926	2,593	13,553	3,109	5,900	1,075	7,829	1,262	11,343	3,636	1,026	93
Environment	10,950	1,322	6,611	1,415	6,563	1,030	3,589	79	3,832	184	4,952	280
European Legislation	1,480	62
Foreign Affairs	8,598	2,713	17,430	2,402	17,987	3,733	10,512	3,522	2,295	130	2,548	586
Home Affairs	1,769	261	1,882	256
House of Commons (Services) Computer Sub-committee	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2,050	446	200	27
Industry and Trade	3,355	961	6,187	2,041	6,660	2,653	3,350	1,589	2,499	1,311	3,960	1,773
Scottish Affairs	1,755	1,378	2,025	1,753	2,070	2,737	2,337	1,461	1,367	1,965	1,557	2,165
Social Services	9,442	1,813	14,936	12,296	4,704	1,104	4,669	828	4,671	623	4,002	649
Sound Broadcasting	800	125	495	29	2,000	288	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Transport	1,975	700	4,635	674	4,920	479	1,860	355	400	66	2,680	1,237	—	—
Treasury and Civil Service	8,557	1,777	9,686	2,178	9,690	2,193	12,953	4,645	10,515	1,693	11,351	2,431	652	5
Welsh Affairs	2,652	969	300	23	3,430	1,175	3,358	1,346	4,031	1,758	4,616	1,104	522	141

* The Accounts for 1984-85 and 1985-86 are not yet complete

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many memoranda have been submitted by Government Departments to Select Committees other than those appointed to examine their activities for each Session since their appointment.

Mr. Biffen: The number of memoranda submitted to departmental Select Committees in each Session since 1979 by Government Departments other than that which they were appointed to examine is as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Agriculture	2	0	2	1	0	1	0
Defence	7	0	2	0	0	2	2
Education	2	1	2	0	0	2	2
Employment	1	3	1	1	1	2	0
Energy	0	3	3	0	5	6	0
Environment	0	1	2	7	9	4	—
Foreign Affairs	3	6	2	1	1	7	1
Sub-Committee Overseas Development	4	1	5	1	—	—	—
Home Affairs	1	1	1	1	2	3	0
Sub-Committee Race Relations and Immigration	0	14	10	5	8	17	3
Scottish Affairs	0	1	1	0	0	2	—
Social Services	1	2	9	3	2	3	1
Trade and Industry	6	0	13	7	2	20	—
Transport	0	3	0	0	1	1	—
Treasury and Civil Service	2	9	26	4	24	8	0
Welsh Affairs	1	2	1	0	2	1	—

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many memoranda have been presented by Government Departments to each departmental Select Committee and Sub-Committee for each Session since their appointment.

Mr. Biffen: The number of memoranda presented to the departmental Select Committees and their Sub-Committees in each Session since 1979 by Government Departments is as follows:

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Agriculture	18	7	19	10	7	14	6
Defence	32	30	18	12	54	65	14
Education	21	24	35	21	5	6	2
Employment	4	5	4	1	4	4	1
Energy	18	11	17	21	19	11	2
Environment	2	6	9	11	32	29	—
Foreign Affairs	51	53	49	48	41	62	8

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Sub-Committee Overseas Development	25	37	28	32	—	—	—
Home Affairs	8	11	9	7	6	5	1
Sub-Committee Race Relations and Immigration	2	24	23	12	18	9	4
Scottish Affairs	3	3	3	11	4	7	—
Social Services	17	10	20	15	17	12	1
Trade and Industry	65	34	54	19	10	32	—
Transport	9	12	18	14	13	11	—
Treasury and Civil Service	33	43	71	26	55	44	5
Sub-Committee Welsh Affairs	*	*	*	*	8	5	1
Welsh Affairs	5	5	11	2	8	12	—

*It is not possible to apportion memoranda between the Committee and the Sub-Committee for this period.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many committee temporary assistants are employed by each of the Select Committees; how many have been appointed since the new committees were established; what is the cost each year; and how many have had their appointments extended beyond the initial two years.

Mr. Biffen: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the average period that has elapsed from publication of reports of departmental Select Committees to receipt of the Government response; and what is the average period elapsing relating to each of the committees.

Mr. Biffen: The average period elapsing between the publication of reports of departmental Select Committees and the receipt of the Government response is 109 days. The average period elapsing for each individual Committee is as follows:

	Average No. of Days for each Committee
Agriculture	112
Defence	88
Education	184
Employment	89
Energy	80
Environment	84
Foreign Affairs	74
Home Affairs	123
Scottish Affairs	89
Social Services	145
Trade and Industry	83
Transport	158
Treasury and Civil Service	81
Welsh Affairs	182

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the total number of witnesses who have appeared before each of the Select Committees and their sub-committees since 1979 (a) from Government Departments, (b) from associated public bodies and (c) from others.

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

	Government Departments	Associated Public Bodies	Others
Agriculture	118	68	266
Defence	348	0	224
Education	170	75	666
Employment	51	92	372
Energy	130	106	196
Environment	111	63	364
Foreign Affairs	170	29	163
Sub-Committee Overseas Development	78	22	69
Home Affairs	77	5	245
Sub-Committee Race Relations & Immigration	141	88	405
Scottish Affairs	127	81	267
Social Services	114	0	856
Trade and Industry	122	162	250
Transport	96	83	481
Treasury and Civil Service	107	14	112
Sub-Committee	78	5	101
Welsh Affairs	78	118	218

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many full-time staff are engaged principally in work for each of the departmental Select Committees; what is the number within each grade; and what is the total staff employed within the Committee Office.

Mr. John Biffen: The permanent staff working for the departmental Select Committees, and their grades, are shown in the following table:

Committee	Full-time staff	Clerks	Higher Executive Officers/Chief Office Clerks	Office Clerks	Secretaries	Specialist Assistants
Agriculture	3	2	—	—	1	—
Defence	5	3	—	1	1	—
Education, Science and Arts	4	1	1	—	1	1
Employment	3	1	1	—	1	—
Energy	4	2	1	—	1	—
Environment	*6	*3	1	—	1	1
Foreign Affairs	5	2	1	1	1	—
Home Affairs	4	2	1	—	1	—

Committee	Full-time staff	Clerks	Higher Executive Officers/Chief Office Clerks	Office Clerks	Secretaries	Specialist Assistants
Scottish Affairs	3	2	—	—	1	—
Social Services	4	2	1	—	1	—
Trade and Industry	4	2	1	—	1	—
Transport	5	2	1	—	1	1
Treasury and Civil Service	6	2	1	—	1	2
Welsh Affairs	3	1	1	—	1	—
Total	59	27	11	2	14	5

Total staff employed within the Committee Office is 77½*.
* Includes one working four days a week.
† Includes three secretaries working part-time.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal which reports of departmental Select Committees have been noticed on the Order Paper as relevant to debate on the Estimates days provided for in Standing Order No. 19(1).

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

First Report, Session 1982-83 of the Education, Science and Arts Committee, "Prison Education" together with the Second Report of the Committee Session 1983-84 "Observation on the Government Reply to the First Report for the Education, Science and Arts Committee, Session 1982-83". Debated on 4 July 1984.

Second Report from the Energy Committee on the Department of Energy's Supplementary Estimate for £230 million in respect of the Coal Industry—8 March 1984.

Fourth Report from the Energy Committee on the Department of Energy's Winter Supplementary Estimate for £45 million in respect of the British National Oil Corporation—18 December 1984.

Fifth Report from the Energy Committee on Government Oil Price Policy and the Department of Energy's Spring Supplementary Estimate for £20 million in respect of the British National Oil Corporation—14 March 1985.

"Department of the Environment's Main Estimates, 1984-85" (Second Report, Session 1983-84, HC 414)—4 July 1984.

"Property Services Agency Main Estimates 1984-85" (Third Report, Session 1983-84, HC 444)—17 July 1984.

"Department of the Environment's Main Estimates, 1985-86" (Third Report, Session 1984-85, HC 414)—11 July 1985.

"Property Services Agency Main Estimates 1985-86" (Fourth Report, Session 1984-85, HC 415)—11 July 1985.

Second Report (1982-83) Turks and Caicos Islands: Airport Development on Providenciales (HC 112) (Est).

Second Report (1983-84) Grenada; and Fourth Report (1984-85) FCO/ODA Estimates 1984-85 (HC 226, 421) (Est).

Second Report (1984-85) Famine in Africa; and First Report (1985-86) Winter Supplementary Estimates 1985-86 (HC 123) (Est).

Community Care, Second Report 1984-85, from the Social Services Committee.

Third Report 1984-85: Trade with China, from the Trade and Industry Committee.

Second Report, Session 1982-83, Spring Supplementary Estimates, from the Treasury and Civil Service Committee.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Claimants

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Harlesden office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same period;

(2) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Neasden office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same period;

(3) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Cricklewood office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same period;

Mr. Major: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide the figures, for all the cases analysed in tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex to the "Reform of Social Security", published 16 December 1985, for an unmodified state earnings related pension scheme on the same basis as those quoted for a modified state earnings related pension scheme.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report figures similar to those given in tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex of the "Reform of Social Security" on the basis of a rate of return of 1½ per cent., 2 per cent. and 2½ per cent.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on 20 December at columns 435-436.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish figures, for all categories listed in the technical annex to the "Reform of Social Security", for changes in disposable income following the White Paper proposals by comparison with current benefit levels in 1985-86.

Mr. Newton: The figures in the technical annex already illustrate these changes.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what basis the rate of return figures quoted in tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex to the "Reform of Social Security" are calculated.

Mr. Newton: The rate of return figures used in tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" are calculated in real terms net of increases in prices.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what levels of gross income entitlement to family credit will cease for a family with one, two, three and four children.

Mr. Newton: These levels would depend on the ages of the children and would, therefore, vary between families of the same size. They would be determined by the actual decisions about benefit rates to be taken nearer the time of implementation in April 1988. However, using the illustrative figures contained in the technical annex to the social security White Paper, some examples would be as follows:

	Level of gross income at which entitlement to family credit ceases* £
Family with one child aged 3	129
Family with two children aged 4 and 6	141
Family with three children aged 3, 8 and 11	165
Family with four children aged 3, 8, 11 and 16	197

* Excluding child benefit.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements are planned under the family credit scheme to deal with (a) those who move in and out of short-term or temporary jobs, (b) lay-offs, (c) those employed in more than one part-time job, (d) those whose employers are not liable to pay tax and national insurance contributions and (e) cases of marriage break-up where the parent in receipt of family credit is not the parent who has care of the child or children.

Mr. Newton: Detailed procedures have not been finalised. On (a), to be entitled to family credit a person will have to be engaged and normally engaged in remunerative work. If a person in a short-term or temporary job fulfils the "normally engaged" condition and family credit is payable, he will be subject to the rule in paragraph 3.83 of the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) that an award will end if the payee loses his job or moves to a new employer. The situations in (b), (c) and (d) all concern payment of family credit through employers, and the detailed procedures in this area are to be the subject of further consultations with employers. On (e), the intention is that there will be provision for family credit to be withdrawn in this sort of situation.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will be consulting interested voluntary organisations as well as local authorities on the unresolved housing benefit questions listed in paragraph 3.64 of Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton: Many of the matters which we will be discussing with local authority interests involve very detailed questions of administrative practice and procedure. But where it seems appropriate, we will certainly consider seeking the views of other organisations on an informal basis.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what procedures will be used to calculate family credit where a claimant is on emergency tax coding.

Mr. Newton: Detailed procedures have not been finalised, but as family credit will be based on normal net earnings it is anticipated that there will be provision for an estimate to be made of what the normal tax deduction would be.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a breakdown by gross income level of the totals illustrated in the bottom line of tables 3(i)B, 3(ii)B, and 12(ii)B of the technical annex to the White Paper on the reform of social security, distinguishing, where possible, between couples and single parents, using the following or similar gross weekly income bands: under £50, £50-£74, £75-£99, £100-£124 and £125 plus.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide estimates of the numbers of losers resulting from the changes to standard housing benefit proposed in the White Paper on the reform of social security, Cmnd. 9691, including the suggested 20 per cent. rate contribution; how many of these would lose entitlement to housing benefit altogether; and if he will break the above estimate down into the following categories: (a) pensioners, (b) working households with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (c) working households without children, (d) others with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents and (e) others without children.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many households currently claiming housing benefit will lose entitlement to (a) rent rebate and (b) rate rebate, under the proposals in Cmnd. 9691; and, in each case, what is the number of pensioner households and the number of working households with and without children.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 596]: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper*, including a minimum contribution to domestic rates of 20 per cent., the estimated numbers losing entitlement are shown below. In the case of working households with children, the loss of entitlement would often arise because of increased income through the proposed family credit, and would be more than offset by the increased entitlement in that respect.

Thousands

	Rent Rebate/Allowance	Rate Rebate
Total	460	810
—pensioners	140	330
—working households with children	170	290
—working households without children	80	70

Note: *Cmnd. 9691.

Maternity Allowance

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what savings are expected to accrue from the proposed changes in maternity allowance; and what estimate Her Majesty's Government have made of income arising as a result of taxation of the statutory maternity allowance.

Mr. Newton: These estimates will depend on decisions to be taken following the outcome of the consultations on maternity allowance currently under way with employers' and other interested organisations. I shall write to my hon. Friend when these decisions have been taken.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women eligible for the maternity allowance under current arrangements are expected to lose by the proposed changes; and how many women currently ineligible are expected to gain under the new arrangements.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide estimates of the numbers of gainers and losers resulting from the proposed changes to the maternity allowance.

Mr. Newton: Provisonal estimates are that some 75,000 to 85,000 women will no longer qualify for the allowance. These will almost entirely be women who were not in fact working when their pregnancies began, and who therefore do not come within the category for whom such an earnings-replacement benefit was intended. We estimate that between 5,000 and 10,000 will be entitled to the allowance for the first time.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide an estimate of the public expenditure saving as a result of the changes proposed to the maternity benefits including the abolition of the maternity grant (a) in total and (b) for each benefit.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, following his reply of 25 July 1985 to the hon. Member for Hornchurch, Official Report, column 742, he is now in a position to clarify whether non-dependent deductions made from the housing benefit of households with non-dependent income support claimants living with them will be abolished.

Mr. Newton: We are still considering the future arrangements for non-dependent contributions.

Hospital Fires

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors he attributes the increase of 9 per cent. in the number of fires in hospitals and nursing homes between 1981 and 1983.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Visually Handicapped Persons

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he intends to publish his Department's fact-finding exercise on services for the visually handicapped.

Mr. Newton: I cannot yet add to my reply to the hon. Member on 20 December at column 411.

School Nurses

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors he attributes the decrease in the number of children seen by school nurses in 1984 as compared with 1980.

Mr. Whitney: The decrease of 2 per cent. between 1980 and 1984 in the number of children seen by school nurses in England coincided with a fall of 10 per cent. in the maintained school population. The percentage of pupils seen by nurses rose from 54 per cent. in 1980 to 59 per cent. in 1984.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the figures for the number of children seen by school nurses in 1979 in his answer of 18 December 1985, Official Report, column 237, is strictly comparable with those for the succeeding years.

Mr. Whitney: 1979 was the first year for which this information was collected centrally and reporting was less complete than in later years. I am sorry that an explanatory note to this effect was not included in my previous reply.

Radiation (Studies)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the studies being undertaken by the committee on the medical aspects of radiation in the environment particularly relating to the incidence of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer in young people living close to the royal ordnance factory Burghfield and Atomic Weapons Research Establishment Aldermaston will be made public; and when he expects the committee to report.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Prescription Charges

Mr Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to provide that prescription charges should be set at £2 or the actual cost of the prescribed drug, whichever is the lower; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. On average the total cost to the National Health Service of each item dispensed in 1984 was £4.39p.

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of kidney transplants in 1985; if he has now completed his consideration of the provision of a national computer register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: According to information supplied by the United Kingdom transplant service, the provisional number of kidney transplants performed in the United Kingdom in 1985 was 1,338. Although this is 8 per cent. lower than the record level in 1984, it still shows a 17 per cent. increase on the 1983 figure and we are confident that the overall trend is still rising. Further initiatives to publicise the organ donor card scheme are being prepared.

We have studied estimates of the costs of establishing a free-standing national computer register of potential organ donors, and we are not convinced that at the present time the benefits would justify the large expenditure required. We are, however, exploring other methods of using computer facilities to identify potential donors, but do not expect to be able to make an announcement in the immediate future.

Consultants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of prima facie evidence of the failure of a consultant to meet the terms of a contract have been referred by him to the employing authority in each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am not aware of any such cases and do not believe that an extensive search of records would be justified.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to his answer of 19 December 1985, Official Report, column 324, which health authorities are running call and recall schemes for cervical cancer screening.

Mr. Hayhoe: In my reply to the hon. Member on 19 December at columns 324-325 I listed those health authorities that in June 1985 either had implemented computerised call and recall systems or had firm plans to do so by the end of 1985. Health authorities will next be asked to report their progress towards implementing such systems in June 1986, as part of the normal planning and accountability process.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish such information as is held by his Department on the times taken by pathology laboratories to process cervical smears.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information available to the Department is in general neither comprehensive nor in a publishable form. Furthermore, such information rapidly becomes out of date. Limited information from the British Society of Clinical Cytologists gave the result of a survey of 25 laboratories in one of its regions, which indicated that in the first half of 1985 it took less than four weeks to process a cervical smear in 10 laboratories, and between four and nine weeks in 15.

All health authorities are to be asked to give priority to improving their cervical cancer screening programmes including ensuring that laboratories can meet demand and avoid backlogs, which should not regularly exceed one month's work.

Surgery Attendances

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is held by his Department about the number of patients attending doctors' surgeries.

Mr. Hayhoe: None, but information is available from the general household survey about the number of consultations.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the basis of his statement that the incidence of chronic renal failure has not changed since 1978.

Mr. Whitney: The basis of the statement was that we have no evidence, either from general discussion with clinicians in the field or from scientific literature that the incidence has changed. If the hon. Member is aware of any evidence of a change I should be grateful if he would draw it to my attention.

Adopted Children

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, if he will introduce legislation to allow natural parents access to information about their children which have been adopted.

Mr. Whitney: No. It is entirely up to the adopted person to decide whether he wishes his new identity to be disclosed to his natural parents.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to reply to the two letters of 2 October and 29 November 1985 from Mr. and Mrs. Crawley of Hawthorn Crescent, Portsmouth, on the subject of access by natural parents to information about their children who have been adopted.

Mr. Whitney: Mr. and Mrs. Crawley have written a number of letters on this issue since 1983. Their letter of 29 November to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary was transferred to this Department and a brief reply in acknowledgement was sent to them although there was nothing further that could usefully be added to previous correspondence.

Growth Hormone

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to make available within the National Health Service for all those lacking sufficient human growth hormone the new genetically engineered growth hormone which came on the market in October 1985.

Mr. Whitney: Biosynthetic growth hormone is available to any patient in the NHS diagnosed as requiring treatment of short stature caused by decreased or absent secretion of pituitary growth hormones by a specialist medical practitioner.

NHS (General Managers)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many general managers so far appointed in the National Health Service at (i) regional, (ii) district and (iii) unit level, were in their previous jobs (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) businessmen, and (d) other occupations; and if he will give a breakdown of the last category.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish the number of families with children with additional requirements included in their supplementary benefit assessment, by type and average amount of additional requirement;.

(2) if he will provide estimates for November 1985 of the number of standard housing benefit recipients, in total and according to the following household types (a) pensioners, (b) working households with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (c) working households without children, (d) others with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents and (e) others without children.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Single Payments

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the number and average amount of single payments made in the latest period for which figures are available to families with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, in total and by type of single payment.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Income Support Scheme

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if it is proposed that 16 to 17-year-olds should be entitled to claim benefit in their own right once the income support scheme has come into effect.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 13 January at column 495.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements are being made to deal with the claims made by married or cohabiting women for invalid care allowance since Mrs. Drake was awarded invalid care allowance by a tribunal on 1 March 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 26 July at column 943.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many married and cohabiting women have submitted claims for invalid care allowance pending the European Court of Justice ruling on the Drake case, since 1 March 1985 (a) before 1 October 1985 and (b) before 1 December 1985.

Mr. Newton: 4,588 and 7,632, of which 348 and 567, respectively, have been disallowed because qualifying conditions other than marital status were not satisfied.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the current cost of extending invalid care allowance to married and co-habiting women (i) gross, (ii) net of savings on other national insurance benefits and (iii) net of savings on both means-tested and national insurance benefits.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 24 July at column 603. This is the latest estimate made. There is insufficient information available to break the figures down further in the way requested.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if all claims for invalid care allowance by married or co-habiting women will be back-dated either to the date of claim or 22 December 1985 when the EEC directive 7/79 came into force, if the European Court upholds the Drake case decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The date from which an award of a benefit is made is a matter for the independent statutory authorities, subject to the overriding time limits laid down in legislation. A claim for invalid care allowance can be valid for a period of up to three months before the date of claim or, if the adjudicating authorities are satisfied that there was good cause for claiming late, for up to 12 months before the date of claim.

NHS (Private Contractors)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he treats as confidential the names of companies who have fallen down on privatised contracts.

Mr. Hayhoe: When standards achieved in a contract are unsatisfactory, it is necessary for both the health authority and the contractor to examine what steps need to be taken to put things right. I do not consider this would be helped by publishing the name of the company concerned. If, despite these efforts, a contract has to be terminated, then the name of the contractor will become public.

Mentally Handicapped Children

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many children have been admitted for (a) long-term care and (b) short-term care of less than three months duration, to mental handicap hospitals in the last full year; and if he will name the hospitals and their locations.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 759-64]: I regret that the table in my reply contained a number of typing errors.

The heading to the last column should have read "Children admitted during 1984 but not discharged by the end of 1984".

Under South Western regional health authority the entry against Plymouth district health authority should have read "Tamar House" and in the last column the entry should have read "1".

Under Mersey regional health authority the second entry against Crewe district health authority should have read "Cranage Hall".

Primary Care Package

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the district health authorities areas in which the £9 million primary care package awarded in 1983 has been spent.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 602]: Money is being spent from the £9 million primary care package within the following district health authority areas:

Mersey RHA
Liverpool
St. Helen's and Knowsley
South Sefton
Wirral

Northern RHA
Gateshead
Newcastle
North Tyneside
South Tees
South Tyneside
Sunderland

North Western RHA
Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley

Blackpool Wyre and Fylde
Bolton
Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale
Bury
Chorley and South Ribble
Lancaster
Central Manchester
North Manchester
Oldham
Preston
Rochdale
Salford
Stockport
Tameside
Trafford
West Lancashire
Wigan

Trent RHA
Leicestershire
Nottingham
Sheffield
Southern Derbyshire

West Midlands RHA
Central Birmingham
East Birmingham
North Birmingham
South Birmingham
West Birmingham
Coventry
Sandwell
Walsall
Wolverhampton

Yorkshire RHA
Airedale
Bradford
Hull
Leeds Eastern
Leeds Western

South Western RHA
Bristol and Weston

North East Thames RHA
Haringey
Newham
Tower Hamlets
City and Hackney
Islington
Hampstead
Bloomsbury

North West Thames RHA
Brent
Hammersmith and Fulham
Paddington and North Kensington
Victoria

South East Thames RHA
Greenwich
West Lambeth
Camberwell
Lewisham and North Southwark

South West Thames RHA
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton
Wandsworth

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much of the £9 million primary care package was spent centrally.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 602]: Extra provision for primary health care services in inner cities is spread over the period 1983-84 to 1988-89. In the first two years £85,000 has been spent on centrally funded initiatives. It is estimated that about £1·4 million will be spent on such projects over the whole period.

Income Support

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who currently receive supplementary benefit will receive no help under the new income support scheme;

(2) using the assumptions in paragraph 2·4 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who now receive housing benefit will receive no help under the new income support scheme;

(3) using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical appendix to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), how many claimants who now receive family income supplement will not be entitled to family credit;

(4) how many families currently receiving family income supplement will not be entitled to family credit, on the basis of the structural reforms proposed in Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people will lose all benefit under the White Paper structural reforms taking 20 per cent. rates contribution into account; what is their client group and family status.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his replies, 19 December 1985, c. 318, 20 December, c. 434 and 15 January c. 596]: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper, the information is as follows:

Decreases in the number receiving income-related benefits ('000 rounded to 10,000)

	Housing benefit	Supplementary benefit/income support
Client group
Pensioners age 80+	20	10
Pensioners age 60-79	290	60
Sick or disabled	10	*
Lone parent	70	*
Couples with children:
—in full-time work	260	—
—not in full-time work	10	*
Others:
—in full-time work	100	—
—not in full-time work	50	20
Total	820	90
Family status
Pensioners:
—single	130	30
—couples	180	40
Non-pensioners with children:
—lone parents	70	*
—couples	280	*
Non-pensioners without children
—single age 25†	90	10
—single age 25	20	10
—couples	50	10
Total	820	90

* Under 5,000.

The figures in the table do not show the net effects of the changes. They take no account of the people — broadly estimated to number more than 150,000 — not now getting supplementary benefit who will qualify for income support, nor of the number—broadly estimated to be rather under 50,000—not now receiving housing benefit who would do so under the new arrangements. Nor do they take account of the fact that, in the case of working families with children, loss of entitlement to housing benefit would often arise because of increased income through the proposed family credit, and would be more than offset by the increased entitlement in that respect.

The number of families now getting family income supplement (FIS) who would not receive family credit is so small — probably under 1,000 — that no reliable estimate is possible. We expect family credit to help about twice as many families as now receive FIS.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 17 January 1986

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total annual expenditure on wages and salaries of (a) primary and secondary teachers, (b) university teachers and (c) other higher education teachers; and what are the total numbers employed in each group.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information is given in the following table. The figures are for 1983-84, the latest year for which data on all the categories is generally available.

	1983-84 (England)
	*Teacher Numbers ('000's, full-time equivalents)	Annual expenditure on wages and salaries†‡ (£ million)
(a) Primary and secondary teachers	408·8	4,500
(b) University teachers‖ (GB)	30·2	583
(c) Other higher education teachers¶	25·9	426

* Teacher numbers as at January 1984.

† All figures include the cost of employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions.

‡ Expenditure figures are on a financial year basis for (a) and (c), and on an academic year basis for (b).

‖ Includes research staff wholly financed by universities, not full-time equivalent.

¶ Polytechnic lecturers and lecturers undertaking advanced further education work in other major establishments of further education.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the net recurrent cost per pupil in nursery schools, nursery classes and primary schools; and what proportion of that cost is attributed to teachers' salaries.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information is as follows:

Schools (Morning Worship)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he proposes to take to ensure that local education authorities comply with their obligations under the Education Act 1944 on morning worship in schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have already made it clear in the White Paper, "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) that we look to local education authorities and to the schools to ensure that the statutory requirements are met.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the extent of non-observance in some schools of the statutorily required daily act of worship; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information about such matters is not collected centrally; but where complaints are made to my right hon. Friend that the requirements of the Education Act 1944 on collective worship are not being met in a particular school, he obtains details of the circumstances of the individual case.

Pupil Costs

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is the average cost per pupil of children in (i) maintained primary schools, (ii) maintained secondary schools, (iii) maintained sixth forms, (iv) assisted places pupils up to school leaving age and (v) asisted places pupils after school leaving age for the last five years for which data is available;

(2) what is the average cost per pupil in (a) nursery schools, (b) nursery classes, (c) primary schools, (d) secondary schools, (e) sixth form colleges and (f) special schools for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: The latest available information is as follows:

Average cost per pupil	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82*	1982-83*	1983-84*
			(£ Cash England)
Maintained Schools
Nursery schools	815	990	1,110	1,140	1,230
Primary schools
—age classes	430	545	620	680	730
—Nursery classes	520	640	725	795	855
—Ordinary classes	430	545	615	675	725
Secondary schools
—all pupils	610	770	870	945	1,015
—11-16 pupils	580	730	825	895	965
—16+ pupils	1,025	1,240	1,320	1,435	1,545
Special education	1,930	2,455	2,760	3,060	3,265
Assisted Places
—all pupils	n/a	n/a	1,098	1,267	1,303

* The maintained school data relate to Financial Years and the assisted places to Academic Years.

(1983-84 £ cash) England

	Total net recurrent cost per pupil	Teachers' salaries as per cent. of total cost
	£	£
Nursery schools	1,230	44
Primary schools
—age classes	730	69
—Nursery classes	855	52
—Ordinary classes	725	70

School Meals

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish figures or estimates for each of the last 10 years showing the revenue raised from school meal charges, the subsidy paid on school meals, and the expenditure on free meals at (a) cash prices, (b) 1984-85 prices and (c) indexed, using 1975-76 as the base;

(2) what was (a) the total Government expenditure on school meals and (b) expenditure on free school meals for each year since 1978-79 to the latest available date, expressed in cash terms, real terms using 1984-85 prices, and indexed using 1978-79 as the base; what was the proportion of the school population receiving school meals during the period; and what was the proportion receiving free school meals.

Mr. Dunn: The information that is available is as follows:

	Total net expenditure (total subsidy)				Income from charges			Estimated subsidy on free meals†				Pupils receiving meals
	Cash	Real terms*	Index		Cash	Real terms*	Index	Cash	Real terms*	Index		Total	Free
	£ million	£ million			£ million	£ million		£ million	£ million			per cent.	per cent
1975-76	318·4	810·8	100	—	135·1	344·0	100	58·2	148·2	100	—	70·3	9·2
1976-77	382·0	859·6	106	—	129·1	290·5	84	70·6	158·9	107	—	69·4	9·8
1977-78	364·5	720·2	89	—	154·4	305·1	89	96·8	191·3	129	—	61·7	11·8
1978-79	388·4	693·7	86	100	185·3	331·0	96	118·3	211·3	143	100	65·9	13·9
1979-80	421·7	644·5	80	93	205·7	314·4	91	113·9	174·1	117	82	64·1	11·9
1980-81	397·4	511·3	63	74	217·5	279·8	81	124·7	160·4	108	76	48·2	9·9
1981-82	396·6	463·6	57	67	214·0	250·1	73	147·4	172·3	116	82	49·0	11·9
1982-83	411·3	449·1	55	65	210·4	229·7	67	174·8	190·8	129	90	49·4	13·9
1983-84	426·6	445·8	55	64	200·5	209·5	61	199·8	208·8	141	99	51·4	15·9
1984-85	n.a.	—	—	—	n.a.	—	—	n.a.	—	—	—	51·3	17·4

Notes:

* Real terms are the cash figures adjusted to 1984-85 prices using the GDP deflator at market prices.

† The gross expenditure on all meals has been apportioned to free meals for pupils in the ratio of free meals for pupils to total pupil meals.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science which local education authorities do not provide a schools meals service to pupils other than those entitled to a free school meal.

Mr. Dunn: Only three of the 97 LEAs in England do not provide a full primary and secondary school meals service. These are Dorset and Lincolnshire, who supply paid meals only in secondary and special schools; and Hereford and Worcester, whose paid meal service is restricted to special schools.

All three also have self-help groups operating in some primary schools, and in Hereford and Worcester some schools are supplied by commercial catering firms.

Higher Education (Non-standard Entrants)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the proportion of students entering higher education who can be classified as non-standard entrants in each year since 1979.

Mr. Walden: The proportions of home students entering university undergraduate courses in Great Britain and CNAA first degree courses in England who did not have two or more A-level passes or Scottish highers were as follows:

	Percentage
1979	17
1980	17
1981	17
1982	19
1983	18
1984	19

Overseas Students

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of overseas students in (a) universities, (b) maintained sector advanced education, and (c) non-advanced further education, for each year since 1974; what was the continental distribution of the intake; and how many completed their course.

Mr. Walden: The numbers of overseas students are given below.

Students from abroad: Great Britain

Thousands

	1974	1975	1976	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Universities	29·5	32·9	35·6	37·2	38·5	37·7	35·8	34·6	33·3	33·8	34·6
Public sector higher education	12·2	16·8	21·2	22·4	22·1	21·0	19·7	18·6	15·3	13·8	13·6
Non-advanced further education	21·6	26·8	27·7	27·5	27·1	26·6	19·5	11·1	8·1	7·8	7·3

Statistics of the continental distribution of these students could only be provided at disproportionate cost, but figures for individual countries are published by the British Council in its booklet "Statistics of Overseas Students in the United Kingdom" copies of which are in the Library. Statistics for advanced and non-advanced level students from each continent in the maintained sector in England are published in my Department's annual volume "Statistics of Education Further Education" which is also in the Library.

Information on the numbers completing their course is not available.

Open University

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the value of the Government grant to the Open University for each year since 1971 in (a) cash terms, (b) at 1984-85 prices and (c) using 1971-72 as a base, including and excluding Government loans to the institution.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Financial year	Recurrent grant £ million	Recurrent grant in 1984-85 real terms (£ million)	Recurrent grant indexed in real terms 1971-72=100
1971-72	6·63	29·19	100·0
1972-73	7·90	32·23	110·4
1973-74	9·78	37·23	127·5
1974-75	13·86	44·22	151·5
1975-76	16·38	41·57	142·4
1976-77	23·57	52·86	181·1
1977-78	24·15	47·56	162·9
1978-79	29·96	53·33	182·7
1979-80	36·71	55·92	191·6
1980-81	47·13	60·45	207·1
1981-82	51·27	59·79	204·8
1982-83	54·21 (55·21)*	59·07 (60·16)*	202·4 (206·1)*
1983-84	55·72 (56·42)*	58·11 (58·84)*	199·1 (201·6)*
1984-85	58·25 (59·05)*	58·25 (59·05)*	199·6 (202·3)*

* Figures in brackets are based on the inclusion of loans of £1 million, £0·7 million and £0·8 million in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85 respectively, whereby the Open Universtity could develop its professional industrial and commercial updating (PICKUP) activities.

Class Sizes

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage change there has been in class sizes in the period since 1975 in all types of schools.

Mr. Dunn: The average size of class as taught by all teachers in maintained primary schools in England has decreased by 8·4 per cent. between January 1977—the earliest date for which this information is available—and January 1985. Between January 1975 and January 1985, the corresponding average size of class for secondary schools decreased by 5·7 per cent.

Information about class sizes in nursery, special and independent schools is not collected centrally.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the latest pupil to teacher ratios for England and for each local education authority including and excluding headteachers, in (a) nursery schools, (b) primary schools, (c) secondary schools, (d) special schools and (e) sixth form colleges.

Mr. Dunn: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Nursery Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the age participation rate in education for the under fives expressed as a percentage of the two, three and four-year old age group.

Mr. Dunn: The percentage of children aged two, three and four years in January 1985 attending maintained nursery and primary schools were 4 per cent., 32 per cent. and 75 per cent. respectively.

Academic Staff (Promotions)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the incidence and nature of promotions of academic staff in universities in the last year for which data are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The latest information available is of the numbers of full-time, wholly university financed, non-clinical academic staff at universities in Great Britain, who moved to higher grade posts in 1983, as follows:

Post at 31 December 1982	Post at 31 December 1983
	Lecturer or assistant lecturer	Senior lecturer or reader	Professor
Senior lecturer or reader	—	—	164
Lecturer or assistant lecturer	—	520	9
Other	103	—	—

The number and timing of promotions and questions concerning academic career structures generally are matters for the universities.

Education Support Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about present and planned expediture on education support grants.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 19 December 1985 at columns 289-90.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Students

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what countries have ceased to receive aid provided for overseas students, in each of the last five years for which data are available.

Mr. Raison: The only country for which aid programme expenditure on overseas students ended during the period 1981 to 1985 was El Salvador, in 1983. No new training awards have been made for the Lebanon since 1984 but expenditure has continued on existing awards.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

R. v. Pain, Jory and others

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Attorney-General what was the cost to public funds of the recent case of R. v. Pain, Jory and others.

The Attorney-General: The total cost to public funds of an individual trial cannot be ascertained. It comprises numerous elements, some which may be part of the general running costs of the various Government Departments concerned. It is not the practice to publish individual fees payable to counsel or solicitors from public funds, which in any event cannot be ascertained until after taxation of bills of costs.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Probation Statistics

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the average costings of probation orders and community service orders published in the Home Office probation statistics include an appropriate proportion of probation officers' salaries, office costs and other related expenditure.

Mr. Mellor: Yes. The estimation of the average costings is described in paragraph 12.4 on page 115 of "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1984", published on 16 January 1986. They include a proportion of all expenditure on the probation service, other than that on the Home Office sponsorship scheme, probation and bail hostels and salaries etc. of probation officers seconded to prison department establishments.

Community Radio

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the successful applicants for experimental community radio licences.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend expects to receive a report from the advisory panel on community radio within the next few weeks, and to announce the successful applicants thereafter.

Royal Observer Corps

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied that in the event of national emergency adequate police protection could be provided for monitoring posts of the Royal Observer Corps.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are satisfied that the arrangements which have been made and which are regularly exercised would provide adequate police protection.

Registration and Naturalisation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for (a) registration and (b) naturalisation he expects to receive in 1986-87.

Mr. Waddington: On present estimates we expect to receive 40,400 applications for registration and 21,600 applications for naturalisation in 1986-87.

Asylum

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to conduct the experiment referred to in paragraph 88 of his response to the report of the Home Affairs Committee on refugees and asylum seekers.

Mr. Waddington: We regret that the pressures on the refugee unit have not yet permitted this experiment to take place, but we hope that it may be possible to conduct it later in the year. In the meantime the necessary preparatory work is in hand.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many decisions on applications for asylum were made in each month since the beginning of 1984;

(2) how many initial applications for asylum have been decided in each month since January 1985; and how many such cases are outstanding at the end of each month;

(3) how many decisions on applications for asylum have been made since his Department's arrears unit was established.

Mr. Waddington: I am arranging for this information to be obtained and shall write to the hon. Member when it is available. It will take some time before the statistics for 1985 are compiled.

Registration and Naturalisation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he uses in deciding whether or not to grant registration as a British citizen under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981.

Mr. Waddington: In considering applications under section 4(5) a number of factors are taken into account principally the quality of an applicant's relevant service and his or her personal connections with the United Kingdom.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 have been (a) received, (b) granted and (c) refused in each year since 1983.

Mr. Waddington: Following is the information requested:

	1983	1984	1985
Applications received	0	237	221
Applications granted	0	0	1
Applications refused	0	0	1

Special Quota Vouchers

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of heads of households granted special quota vouchers in India in 1985 did not use those vouchers.

Mr. Waddington: Information on special voucher holders accepted for settlement on arrival in the United Kingdom, analysed by the place of issue of the voucher, is not available. The latest available information is for the first three quarters of 1985, when 820 special vouchers were issued worldwide—of which 450 were issued in India—and 840 voucher holders were accepted for settlement on arrival in the United Kingdom. The vouchers are valid for six months and some of those who arrived in 1985 will have had vouchers issued in 1984 and some of those issued with vouchers in 1985 will not arrive until 1986.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many visitors who were refused entry to Britain in the latest 12 months lodged appeals after removal; and what proportion of these appeals were successful;

(2) how many appeals by husbands and male fiancés from (a) India, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Pakistan against refusals of entry clearance were allowed in the year September 1984 to September 1985;

(3) how many (a) wives and (b) children from (i) India, (ii) Pakistan and (iii) Bangladesh have had an appeal against refusal of entry clearance to join their husbands or fathers upheld during the year September 1984 to September 1985.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that the statistics available about appeals and their outcome do not enable this precise information to be provided.

Remanded Prisoners

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to end the routine use of police cells to hold remand prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: Police cells are used to accommodate only those prisoners for whom places cannot be found in the appropriate establishments because of industrial action, transport or logistical difficulties or because of a mismatch of prisoners and places causing overloading of one part of the prison system. We do not accept that police cells are used as a matter of routine.

Police Statistics

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total annual expenditure on wages and salaries of the police, and the numbers employed in the police service.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested, in respect of expenditure planned for the financial year 1986-87 in England and Wales, is as follows:

	Expenditure planned for 1986-87 £ million	Average manpower assumptions
Police pay and allowances	2,016·7	121,661
Civilians' pay	315·1	*39,882
Traffic Wardens' pay	34·5	4,994
Police cadets' pay	1·8	450

Note

* The civilian figure includes part-time staff on a 2 for 1 basis

On 30 November 1985 there were 120,629 police officers, 39,176 civilians, 4,791 traffic wardens and 374 cadets in the police service in England and Wales.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Apples (Refreshment Department)

Sir John Wells asked the Lord Privy Seal why virtually no English apples were on sale in the Refreshment Department's outlets between October 1985 and January 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Biffen: English apples are always available. The Refreshment Department also buys apples from other countries in its constant quest to satisfy the varied demands of Members.

Photocopying Paper

Sir John Wells asked the Lord Privy Seal why no A4 papers have been available in the main photocopying room below the Chamber of the House for the first two days after the return of the House on 13 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I regret that no stocks of A4 photocopying paper were available on 13 January for the copying machines below the Chamber. I understand that stocks were checked on Wednesday 8 January and found to be adequate; but between then and Friday 10 January the total reserve of some 20 boxes was removed from the store by persons unknown. A fresh supply was ordered as soon as possible after the loss was discovered, and became available on Tuesday 14 January. The Deliverer of the Vote is reviewing the security of photocopying paper stocks as a result of this incident.

ENERGY

Yelland Power Station

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the future of the decommissioned Yelland power station in north Devon.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by the Central Electricity Generating Board that work is in hand to ensure the safety of the former power station buildings, and that the possible future development of the site is under active examination.

National Coal Board

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the current levels of productivity being achieved in the National Coal Board.

Mr. David Hunt: The NCB has recently for the first time in its history achieved average deep-mined productivity in excess of 3 tonnes per man shift. This major improvement since the ending of the strike is a clear demonstration of what can be achieved with determined effort by all those in the industry.

Manley Report

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish in full the Manley report before legislation on the Atomic Energy Authority is debated in the House.

Mr. Goodlad: No—the report itself is a classified internal departmental document, and it is not normal practice to publish confidential advice to Ministers. The conclusions and recommendations of the AEA review report were, however, summarised fully in the press notice issued by the Department on 3 October 1984, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House.

NCB (Compensation Payments)

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how much has been paid in compensation to Lothian estates/Lothian coal company in each year in relation to pits taken over by the National Coal Board;

(2) what was paid as compensation to Lothian estates/Grange estates/Newtongrange estates and any other interested body when the National Coal Board lease expired in 1982, as a result of the conditions imposed at the time of nationalisation of the coal industry not having been fulfilled.

Mr. David Hunt: These are matters for the National Coal Board, I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

DEFENCE

Captain of the Port (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has any plans to privatise the Captain of the Port's facility at Portsmouth;

(2) what investigations have been carried out into the feasibility of privatising the Captain of the Port's facility at Portsmouth.

Mr. Lee: The scope for contracting out marine services tasks generally is under examination as the result of a recent management audit. Our principal aim must be to improve efficiency, while maintaining the operational effectiveness of the services provided. If specific proposals for contractorisation are developed, in respect of Portsmouth or elsewhere, there will be full consultation before decisions are taken.

No specific studies in respect of the Captain of the Port's department at Portsmouth have yet been completed.

HMS Otter

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the progress being made with the refit of HMS Otter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: HMS Otter's refit is proceeding as planned and is on course to complete within the scheduled time.

Royal Dockyards

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies which are visiting or have visited the royal dockyards with a view to tendering for commercial management.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Representatives of the following companies are visiting or have visited one or both of the royal dockyards in pursuit of their interest in tendering for the management contracts:

A&P Appledore
Babcock International
Balfour Beatty
British Aerospace
Foster Wheeler
GEC
Hawker Siddeley
Northern Engineering Industries
Plessey
Press Offshore
Seaforth Welding
Taylor Woodrow
Thorn-EMI
Trafalgar House
Tyne Ship Repair
The Weir Group

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence what talks have taken place with British Aerospace over the commercial management of the royal dockyards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Discussions on a wide range of issues related to the introduction of commercial management into the royal dockyards have taken place between my Department and all the companies, including British Aerospace, which has expressed an interest in tendering for the management contracts.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those companies originally named as interested in the franchise for the royal dockyards and which have indicated they no longer wish to pursue their interest.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In his statement on 23 July at columns 867-868 my right hon. Friend the Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) the former Secretary of State for Defence gave the names of some companies which had expressed interest in the Government's proposals to introduce commercial management into the royal dockyards. I gave the names of further such companies on 2 December during the Second Reading debate on the Dockyard Services Bill at column 34. Of these companies, Costain and STC have indicated that they no longer have an interest in bidding for the contract to manage the dockyards.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has had any discussions with management at Rosyth dockyard about the possibility of a bid for the franchise management of the dockyard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have had no substantive or formal discussion with the Rosyth dockyard management on this issue. During my visit to Rosyth on 9 December 1985 I drew the management's attention to developments at Devonport.

GEC–Plessey (Merger)

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the implications for defence procurement of the proposed merger of GEC and Plessey.

Mr. Norman Lamont: [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 610]: An analysis of the implications for defence procurement of the proposed merger has been made available to the Director General of Fair Trading, who is responsible for providing advice to my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on this matter.

WALES

Co-operatives (Job Creation)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the number of jobs generated by co-operatives in Wales over the last six years and as to the average cost to public funds of each job.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: My Department does not collect information on a basis that would enable me to answer the question in the form asked. I understand that the Wales Co-operative Centre has data on current employment provided by co-operatives.

Heating and Insulation (Government Funding)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received calling for additional Government funds to improve heating and insulation in council homes in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since 1 April 1984 11 representations have been received.

Jobcentres

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many Jobcentres in Wales are open less than five days per week in areas of (a) over 20 per cent. unemployment, (b) between 15 per cent. and 20 per cent. unemployment and (c) up to 15 per cent. unemployment; and if he will specify, in each case, the number of days per week each Jobcentre is open.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Sixteen of the 98 Jobcentres in Wales are open less than 5 days per week. Following is the detailed information.

Job centre	Days of opening
TTWA over 20 per cent. unemployment
Pontlottyn	Tuesday and Thursday
Treharris	Monday to Wednesday
Fishguard	Monday, Tuesday and Thursday
Prestatyn	Monday to Wednesday
TTWA 15-20 per cent. unemployment
Ferndale	Monday, Tuesday and Friday
Caldicot	Tuesday
Blaenavon	Wednesday
Kidwelly	Wednesday
Cymmer*	Tuesday and Thursday
Resolven	Wednesday
Glyn Neath	Tuesday
Garnant	Monday, Tuesday and Thursday
Tumble	Monday, Tuesday and Thursday
Dolgellau	Wednesday
Abergele	Tuesday and Friday
TTWA under 15 per cent. employment
Ruthin	Wednesday

* Temporarily closed due to premises difficulties.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Trade Union Representatives (Government Departments)

Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the latest estimates of the numbers of elected representatives in each of the main Government Departments and of the cost of providing paid time off.

Mr. Brooke: The estimates as at 1.6.85 are shown in the following tables. Compared with the position as at 1.6.84, the total amount of paid time off for union business shows a reduction by 35 man years (2·8 per cent.) with a consequential saving (in real terms) of £0·36 million reflecting for the third consecutive year the tighter control and accountability measures introduced by the revised national facilities agreement in 1982.

Civil Service Non-Industrial Union Representatives
Estimates of Numbers and Cost of Paid Time Off for Industrial Relations Duties and Trade Union Activities (as at 1 June 1985)
Table 1—Percentage of Time Off

Department	Under 5	6-10	11-20	21-30	31-40	41-50	51-60	61-70	71-80	81-90	91-99	Full Time
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food	569	54	32	13	4	3	3	1	—	2	—	7
Customs and Excise	357	186	100	16	16	9	11	15	6	7	—	39
Ministry of Defence	904	131	102	37	6	14	12	2	12	1	8	10
Department of Employment Group	1,604	430	199	40	23	11	8	—	—	1	1	11
Department of Environment/Transport	345	93	57	9	4	3	5	5	3	—	—	10
Foreign and Commonwealth Office (inc. Overseas Development Administration)	38	3	21	1	5	—	1	4	1	—	—	8
Department of Health and Social Security	1,480	463	225	83	53	36	28	19	20	43	29	66
Home Office (inc. Prison Department)	812	200	122	43	12	1	5	5	2	4	3	11
Department of Trade and Industry	367	62	48	13	4	3	6	2	2	2	1	6
Inland Revenue	1,808	333	174	41	31	22	5	4	6	2	1	6
Lord Chancellor's Department	49	28	27	10	5	5	2	2	1	—	—	9
Department for National Savings	154	7	5	7	4	1	2	1	1	1	—	13
Property Services Agency (inc. Crown Suppliers)	351	61	27	4	3	1	1	1	—	—	—	3

Department	Under 5	6-10	11-20	21-30	31-40	41-50	51-60	61-70	71-80	81-90	91-99	Full Time
Scottish Office (inc. General Register Office (Scotland), Scottish Record Office and Scottish Prison Service)	183	50	17	7	—	2	—	—	—	—	—	8
Other Government Departments	499	127	79	24	11	10	4	4	2	1	3	25
Total	9,520	2,228	1,235	348	181	121	93	65	56	64	46	232

Table 2 Numbers and Cost

Department	Total Number involved	Total Number expressed as whole time equivalent	Cost in Salaries wages and direct benefit (£ million)	Cost as percentage of wage bill*	Total number of non-industrial staff at 1 July 1985
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	688	33	0·40	0·29	10,582
Customs and Excise	762	117	1·31	0·43	25,204
Ministry of Defence	1,239	118	1·27	0·11	94,431
Department of Employment Group	2,328	103	1·17	0·20	53,456
Department of Environment Transport (excluding Property Services Agency)	534	48	0·54	0·22	19,710
Foreign and Commonwealth Office (inc. Overseas Development, Administration)	82	18	0·16	0·07	9,440
Department of Health and Social Security	2,545	316	2·88	0·32	91,825
Home Office (including Prison Department)	1,220	116	1·11	0·21	33,535
Department of Trade and Industry	516	42	0·49	0·29	12,230
Inland Revenue	2,433	125	1·44	0·17	69,858
Lord Chancellor's Department	138	28	0·32	0·31	10,128
Department for National Savings	196	22	0·24	0·37	7,694
Property Services Agency (inc. Crown Suppliers)	452	25	0·33	0·18	15,126
Scottish Office (including General Register Office (Scotland), Seottish Record Office and Scottish Prison Service)	267	21	0·26	0·20	9,576
Other Government Departments	789	82	0·97	0·24	33,193
Total	14,189	1,214	12·89	0·21	495,988

* For 1984 the figures in this column were shown to one decimal point only, and the total figure of 0·2 was 0·225 rounded down.

SCOTLAND

Cormorants

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the number of applications for licences to kill cormorants received in 1984 and 1985; and what was the number granted, the number of cormorants allowed to be killed, the number killed, and, in each case, the location and the reason for the killing.

Mr. John MacKay: The details are as follows:

	1984	1985
i. Applications received	25	37
ii. Licences granted	25	36
iii. No limits were attached to licences issued in 1984; one licence issued in 1985 to the Ythan district salmon fishery board set an upper limit of 100 birds.
iv. Numbers killed, including provisional figures for 1985, and locations were as shown in the table below.
v. Licences were issued for the prevention of serious damage to fisheries.

Loch or River System	Number of Licences		Numbers killed under licence
	1984	1985	1984	1985
Kyle of Sutherland	nil	1	nil	13
Naver	nil	1	nil	15
Loch Etive	nil	1	nil	nil
Loch Fitty	nil	1	nil	13
Loch Maree	1	1	5	7
Loch Leven	1	nil	107	nil
Lochailort	1	4	1	7
Doon	1	1	22	14
Laggan and Duich	1	1	18	21
Spean	1	1	3	5
Brora	1	1	14	29
South Esk	3	3	4	nil
Spey and Findhorn	1	2	1	1
Nairn	1	1	22	4
Annan	1	3	nil	nil
Awe	1	1	nil	2
Conon	1	2	6	nil
Tay	6	7	272	212
Tweed	2	2	85	19
Ythan	1	1	314	88
Shin	1	nil	12	nil
Helmsdale	nil	1	nil	nil
Total	25	36	886	450

Forth Road Bridge

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to exclude the Forth road bridge approach roads from the responsibility of the Forth road bridge joint board.

Mr. Ancram: No.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional income he estimates will be received as a result of his decision to increase tolls on the Forth road bridge.

Mr. Ancram: It is estimated that revenue from tolls will be increased by between £1·2 million and £1·5 million per annum.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland from what date he plans to levy increased tolls on users of the Forth road bridge.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend will bring the necessary order into effect on a date to be determined after consultation with the Joint Board.

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, under part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, he intends to institute a system of licensing for agricultural contractors for the application of pesticides in respect of forestry.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the question he put to my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, which he answered today. The proposals in his reply will take aboard the use of pesticides in forestry.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

North-West

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide the names of all those companies in the north-west, or which moved to the north-west, having received Government or European Economic Community grants to maintain or create employment since 1979; and what was the amount of any such grants, the date of payment of such grants, the number of jobs maintained or created by the grant, the specific type of grant paid, the address of the specific plant to which the grant related and, where a move of location had been the purpose of the grant, the previous address of the plant.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I regret that the information the hon. Gentleman seeks is not available in the form requested. Much of it cannot be revealed for commecial reasons and what is available can only be provided at disproportionate costs. However I shall be writing shortly to the hon. Gentleman.

Westland plc

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his statement of the evening of Monday 13 January, what was the time at which he became aware of the contents of the letter sent to the Government by Sir Austin Pearce.

Mr. Brittan: I became aware of the contents of the letter dated 13 January from Sir Austin Pearce to the Prime Minister on 14 January.

Mr. John Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Morley and Leeds, South on 13 January, Official Report, column 783, whether he or anyone in his Department saw the Solicitor-General's letter in draft before it was sent, or material upon which the letter was based; and whether he was consulted about the contents of the letter, or its sending, before it was sent.

Mr. Brittan: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to what I said in my speech to the House on 15 January at column 1167-8.

Warship Builders (Privatisation)

Mr. Trotter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest progress in privatising the warship building interests of British Shipbuilders.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave his consent today to British Shipbuilders for the sale of Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd. to a management buy-out consortium. British Shipbuilders will receive £5 million partly offset by provision for unavoidable future losses and capital expenditure planned before completion of the sale. In addition British Shipbuilders has accepted a limited contingency liability should redundancies arise.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry Commission Land (Dorset)

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sales of Forestry Commission land have taken place and Dorset (a) in 1984 and (b) in 1985; and what, in each year, has been the total area sold.

Mrs. Fenner: The information is as follows:

Calendar year	Number of sales	Total area sold hectares
1984	7	287
1985	4	144

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, under part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, he intends to institute a system of licensing for agricultural contractors for the application of pesticides.

Mrs. Fenner: I am concerned to ensure that all who apply pesticides on a commercial scale should be appropriately trained in their effective use and in the necessary safeguards for health and the environment.

My Department has therefore proposed, in the consultative document "Pesticides: Implementing Part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985", that there should be a general obligation on all who use pesticides in the course of their business to ensure that they and their employees have received adequate instruction and guidance; and a specific obligation

> "on those whose business is the application of pesticides as a commercial service, that they and their employees involved in the use of pesticides attend an approved training course and obtain certification that they have reached the appropriate standard".

My officials are consulting a range of public agencies and industry representatives on the implementation of this proposal.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which agency will monitor and provide inspectors for the implementation and enforcement of part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 in England and Wales; and if he will indicate by region and by county how many extra inspectors will be provided.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Member to chapter 9 of the consultative document "Pesticides: Implementing Part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985", where we have proposed that a number of different agencies should be responsible for enforcement. The deployment of their resources is a matter for the agencies involved, and I am therefore unable to give the detail requested.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General why disabled persons are included in the unemployment count.

Mr. Alan Clark: Disabled people are included in the count of people claiming unemployment benefits because they declare that they are capable and available for work. Some severely disabled people, who could not obtain employment except under sheltered conditions, are included. The severely disabled used to be excluded from the former count at jobcentres and careers offices until October 1982 when they numbered about 23,000; but they are not separately identified at unemployment benefit offices which have been the source of the unemployment count since then.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Alexander asked the Paymaster General what was the number of low-paid male manual workers for each year since 1975 and the proportion of the total work force that they represented.

Mr. Alan Clark: The number and proportion of adult male manual employees with relatively low weekly earnings can be assessed from the tables on the distribution of weekly earnings regularly published in the annual reports on the "New Earnings Survey", table 14 for 1975 to 1981 and table 29 for 1982 to 1985, copies of which are available in the Library.

It is a matter of judgment what levels of relatively low pay are regarded as significant.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General how many 16-year-olds entered employment, excluding special training measures, in each of the last 15 years; and what these numbers represent as a percentage of their respective age groups.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information in the precise form requested is not available. The latest available relevant estimates for 1984 and 1985 are shown in the following table:

Young people aged 16 years in Great Britain*

	January 1984		January 1985
	Numbers	Per cent.	Numbers	Per cent.
Total population	895,000	100	870,000	100
of which:
(a) in full-time education or YTS, or claimant unemployed	745,000	83	740,000	85
(b) other: mainly employed outside YTS†	155,000	17	130,000	15

* Ages as at preceding 31 August.

† Mainly those in employment but excluding those employed under the youth training scheme and including some who were seeking work but not claiming benefit and others who were neither employed nor seeking work—for example, because of domestic responsibilities. This group is obtained by subtracting from the total population of the age group those estimated to be in full-time education or in the youth training scheme and the claimant unemployed.

Similar estimates for 1974-83 are shown in table 5 of Statistical Bulletin 5/85, published by the Department of Education and Science, which is available in the Library. Corresponding estimates prior to 1974 are not readily available.

Wages Councils

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report an estimate of the number and proportion of workers who would be covered by wages councils if wages council orders ceased to apply to workers under 21 years of age; and if he will provide the same data for each wages council industry.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: About 2·25 million workers will continue to be covered by wages councils following the removal from regulation of workers under 21 years of age. This figure represents about four fifths of the total number covered at present. It is not possible to provide the information requested for individual wages council industries.

Youth Training

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report those firms, of which his Department is aware, that pay an additional wage to youth training scheme trainees.

Mr. Trippier: Payments made to youth training scheme trainees in excess of the standard allowances to which they are entitled are a matter for the training providers concerned. Neither my Department nor the Manpower Services Commission maintain a record of the firms who make such payments.

Technical and Vocational Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General, how many children in each local authority are taking part in the technical and vocational education initiative at the latest date for which data are available, and for the previous year.

Mr. Trippier: 14 local education authorities started projects in 1983, and have therefore had 3 student intakes; 47 further authorities started 48 projects in 1984, with Strathclyde education authority running separate projects in 2 of its divisions; 12 authorities started projects in 1985.

The following figures give the numbers of children taking part in the initiative as at September 1985, with revised totals for September 1984.

Authority	Position at September 1984	Position at September 1985
Barnsley*	708	1,144
Bedfordshire*	977	1,213
Berkshire	239	489
Birmingham	500	794
Bolton	179	419
Borders	236	534
Bradford*	510	760
Bromley†	—	228
Buckinghamshire	259	494
Bury	197	383
Cambridgeshire	225	460
Cheshire	200	390
Cleveland	214	422
Clwyd*	509	913
Cornwall	286	565
Coventry	259	518
Croydon	235	477
Cumbria	226	448
Derbyshire	236	492
Devon*	554	805
Doncaster	236	484
Dudley	250	498
Dumfries and Galloway	199	429
Durham	259	510
Dyfed†	—	250
Ealing†	—	195
East Sussex	249	502
Enfield*	412	674
Essex	235	498
Fife	232	470
Glasgow‡	238	451
Gloucestershire	271	536
Gwent	250	500
Gwynedd	230	482
Hampshire	323	586
Havering	247	494
Hereford and Worcester*	513	764
Hertfordshire*	606	876
Isle of Wight	265	528
Kent†	—	225
Kingston†	—	243
Leicestershire*	1,007	1,524
Lincolnshire	246	484
Lothian†	—	243
Mid Glamorgan	247	497
Newcastle	239	495
Norfolk	207	438
Northamptonshire	245	496
North Tyneside	253	507
Northumberland	277	550
North Yorkshire†	—	274
Powys	267	492
Renfrew‡	220	442
Richmond	256	504
Sandwell*	1,161	1,491
Shropshire	245	502
Solihull	255	502
Somerset	258	504
South Glamorgan†	—	250
South tyneside	251	520
Staffordshire*	632	946
Stockport	251	502
Suffolk	231	452
Sunderland	240	509
Surrey	262	515
Tameside	256	545
Walsall†	—	250
Warwickshire	216	433
West Glamorgan	247	503
West Sussex†	—	206
Wiltshire†	—	256
Wigan*	450	672
Wirral*	509	766
Wolverhampton†	—	243
Totals 74	20,692	39,656

* 1983 Project
† 1985 Project
‡ Divisions of Strathclyde EA.

Norwood

Mr. John Fraser asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently unemployed in each ward of the Norwood constituency.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. Figures are given showing the numbers of unemployed claimants in the wards of the Norwood parliamentary constituency as at 12 December 1985.

	Number
Angell	1,976
Gipsy Hill	1,027
Herne Hill	1,369
Knight's Hill	1,024
St. Martin's	1,035
Thurlow Park	442
Tulse Hill	1,918

ENVIRONMENT

Thamesmead Community Trust

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff he expects to be transferred from the Greater London council to the new Thamesmead community trust indicating the differing grades involved.

Sir George Young: This information is not yet available. Mr. Thornton, chairman designate of the trust, is still involved in negotiations with the staff and trade union representatives about future staffing levels at Thamesmead. When these are finalised and endorsed by the board, the trust will make the requisite offers of employment.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what initial office accommodation is to be made available for the new Thamesmead community trust.

Sir George Young: The trust will be able to purchase from the London Residuary Body existing GLC owned office accommodation at Thamesmead. If additional space is needed, it will be for the trust to make provision for it.

Audit Commission

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of the Audit Commission; and what subjects were discussed.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Secretary of State for the Environment last met the chairman of the Audit Commission on 17 October 1985 to discuss future membership of the commission.

Washington Development Corporation

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the names of those persons who have been appointed to the Washington Development Corporation; when he intends to add further names; and when he intends to complete the list.

Mr. Tracey: The terms of office of all members of the board of the Washington development corporation expired on 31 December 1985. So far the following have been re-appointed:

Professor G. McClelland (Chairman)
Mr. F. Osborn (Deputy Chairman)
Mr. D. Kelly
Mr. S. Wareing (until 31 March 1986).

Steps are in hand to appoint two councillors nominated by Sunderland borough council. My right hon. Friend is currently considering what further appointments to make to the board.

Publicly Owned Land

Mr. Lightbown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further efforts he is planning to make to bring unused and underused publicly owned land back into full use.

Sir George Young: On 19 November, I announced that directions had been given, under section 98 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, to the owners of 21 sites on the registers of unused and underused public land, requiring them to dispose of their interest in the land. I said then that the Government were determined to maintain the momentum we had built up in bringing surplus land back into use and that further sites which might be suitable for similar directions were being considered.

My right hon. Friend has today given notice under section 99 of the 1980 Act to the owners of another 32 sites on the registers of his intention to direct them to dispose of their interest in the land, unless they are able to satisfy him that there are good reasons why he should not do so. The notices give the owners 42 days in which to make representations to the Secretary of State. A list of the sites, amounting to some 50 hectares (125 acres), has been placed in the Library of the House.

This is the third batch of section 99 notices. As in the past, we hope that issuing the notice will in itself bring about the release of much of the land. Where it does not, we shall not hesitate, if appropriate, to give a direction under section 98 of the Act.

Public bodies owning unused or underused land should take note. They have had ample opportunity to decide how they wish to use such land or to dispose of it on their own terms. If they have no use for the land, the Government are determined that it should no longer lie idle.

North-East Hampshire Structure Plan

Mr. Critchley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will aprove the first alteration to the north-east Hampshire structure plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have approved this alteration today. I have made a number of technical modifications and a strategic modification to transport policy. I have decided to approve the housing provision proposed by the county council, ie 18,100 dwellings up to 1991. I have had regard both to the demand for housing and to the concern of local people that the quality of life in the area would be harmed by any additional housing provision, and I am satisfied that no increase is justified in this alteration.

Water Authorities

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list for each water authority the external financing limit set for 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88;

(2) if he will list for each water authority the target rate of return set for 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. John Patten: [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 572]: Water authorities will be set external finance limits and target rates of return in respect of 1987-88 later this year as part of the normal public expenditure round. The equivalent figures requested for English water authorities for 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87 are set out below.

For 1986-87, grants for land drainage and flood protection, totalling some £14 million have yet to be notified to individual authorities.

The Welsh water authority is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

	External finance limits £ million, cash			Target rate of return per cent
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
Anglian	60·0	46·0	40·5	1·36	1·62	1·68
Northumbrian	26·0	23·0	20·0	1·25	1·54	1·73
North West	87·0	*84·5	54·0	0·95	1·48	1·50

	External finance limits £ million, cash			Target rate of return per cent
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
Severn-Trent	40·0	*55·2	2·5	1·25	1·47	1·60
Southern	23·0	11·0	0	0·91	1·43	1·55
South West	11·0	*4·9	4·0	1·25	1·43	1·73
Thames	−34·0	−60·0	−85·0	0·50	1·41	1·61
Wessex	16·0	21·0	25·0	0·61	1·40	1·50
Yorkshire	34·0	31·0	32·0	1·00	1·37	1·60

* Revised from the figures notified to Authorities in January 1985.

Merseyside Residuary Body

Mr. Robert N. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the progress being made by the Merseyside residuary body; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 679]: I am satisfied that the Merseyside residuary body has covered much of the groundwork for tasks that need to be completed by 1 April and will continue to make progress on that basis.

Mr. Robert N. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he dismissed Mr. Leslie Pocock as chairman of the Merseyside residuary body.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 679]: I have nothing to add to the announcement I made on 24 December in my Department's news release number 642, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

TRANSPORT

Roads Expenditure

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state (i) actual expenditure in 1984-85, (ii) estimated expenditure in 1985-86 and (iii) planned expenditure in 1986-87 on the reconstruction of (a) motorways and (b) all purpose trunk roads showing, in each case the number of miles involved.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The renewal of roads, including major renewal schemes, generally involves a combination of reconstruction, overlaying and resurfacing work.

Information about the cost of the reconstruction element alone is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate expense. The following information relates to expenditure on all types of carriageway renewal, including reconstruction:

	Motorway	All-purpose trunk road
1984-85
Estimated expenditure	£75 million	£42 million
Mileage renewed	80 e.r.m.*	160 s.c.e.m.†
1985-86
Estimated expenditure	£70 million	£54 million
Mileage to be renewed	70 e.r.m.*	160 s.c.e.m.*†‡
1986-87
Planned expenditure	£83 million	£59 million
Mileage to be renewed	80 e.r.m.*	185 s.c.e.m.†

* Equivalent route miles; ie the equivalent mileage of dual 3-lane motorway renewed.
† Single carriageway equivalent miles: ie the equivalent mileage of single carriageway, 2 lane trunk road renewed.
‡ The mileage actually achieved will depend greatly upon weather conditions during the remainder of the winter. The final result is likely to be between 135 and 160 scen.

Road Reconstruction Costs

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost per mile at 1985-86 prices of reconstructing (i) dual three-lane motorway, (ii) dual two-lane all purpose trunk road and (iii) single carriageway all purpose trunk road.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The average costs per mile in 1985-86 at 1985-86 prices of reconstruction—that is, the total or partial replacement of a road pavement—are as follows:

	£ million
Dual 3-lane motorway	2·1
Dual 2-lane all-purpose trunk road	1·4
Single carriageway all-purpose trunk road	0·7

The renewal of roads generally involves a combination of reconstruction, overlaying and resurfacing work. Average renewal costs per mile in 1985-86 are as follows:

	£ million
Dual 3-lane motorway	1·0
Dual 2-lane all-purpose trunk road	0·6
Single carriageway all-purpose trunk road	0·3

Great Northern Electric Rail Services

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to introduce private capital into the Great Northern electric rail services.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have told BR that we shall welcome proposals from them for more private sector finance and participation in the development of stations and railway services.

British Airways (Privatisation)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in connection with the privatisation of British Airways, he will introduce legislation defining unacceptable predatory behaviour for application subsequent to the airline entering the private sector.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. The Civil Aviation Authority has adequate powers to maintain and promote competition including taking action against airlines which act in an anti-competitive or predatory fashion. In addition, the Director General of Fair Trading can investigate and seek to remedy anti-competitive behaviour in domestic and whole plane charter services and refer monopoly questions concerning these services to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry can also refer to the Commission monopoly questions concerning any aspect of civil aviation, including international scheduled services.

Airports (Ground Handling Charges)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to legislate for the deregulation of airport ground handling charges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The arrangements for ground handling differ widely between airports. Charges for the services provided are a matter for the airport operator, or for the authorised agent and airlines concerned. However, the Airports Bill, published on 16 January, contains proposals whereby the Civil Aviation Authority will have power in this area to remedy charges or trading practices by airport operators that are discriminatory or that represent an abuse of an operator's monopoly.

Aircraft Engine Hush Kits

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received from the National Joint Council for Civil Air Transport about the implications for the future competitiveness of British-owned air cargo companies, in the light of the cessation of trading on 3 January of Tradewinds Airways, of the requirement for United Kingdom air cargo operators to fit engine hush kits and of the related exemptions granted to non-United Kingdom carriers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications for the international competitiveness of the United Kingdom air cargo industry of his Department's requirement that certain aircraft operated by British-owned carriers must be fitted with engine hush kits from 1 January and of the decision to grant one and two-year exemptions from this requirement to European and non-European airlines, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The decision to exclude from the United Kingdom register from 1 January 1986 subsonic jet aeroplanes not complying with minimum noise standards was taken following an announcement by the previous Administration in the White Paper on airports policy of 1978 (Cmnd. 7084). Over the last seven years most of our airlines have brought their fleets into full compliance with those standards while maintaining or enhancing their competitiveness. As Tradewinds Airways' recent announcement made clear, its decision to cease trading was by no means due solely to the need to fit hush kits to its aeroplanes. The question of granting exemptions to foreign carriers does not arise; international agreements prevent the banning of such aeroplanes before 1 January 1988.

My right hon. Friend is considering representations on these matters from the trade union side of the National Joint Council for Civil Air Transport.

PRIME MINISTER

Legislation (Ministerial Conduct)

Mr. Spearing asked the Prime Minister what instructions she has given and what action she has taken concerning the application and interpretation of the rules governing ministerial conduct, insofar as they relate to Ministers sponsoring Bills covering matters in which they retain a pecuniary interest; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Ministers who are Members of this House are bound, just as any other hon. Member is bound, by the rules of the House governing registration and declaration of any personal interest they may have in business which comes before the House; and these rules of course apply also to Ministers in charge of a Bill.

New Zealand (Nuclear Shipping)

Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister whether she has had any discussions with President Reagan or other members of the United States Administration, concerning the implications for the joint United States/United Kingdom naval exercises to be held in the south Pacific later this year, of New Zealand's decision to ban nuclear shipping from New Zealand territorial waters.

The Prime Minister: I have had no such discussions relating to specific exercises but I have talked with President Reagan about the general point.

Written Communications

Dr. Marek asked the Prime Minister what are the circumstances in which Ministers reveal the existence of written communications which the sender has asked not to be revealed.

The Prime Minister: It is not my practice to reveal such communications without permission.

Westland plc

Mr. Spearing asked the Prime Minister what was the time on 13 January when she became aware of the contents of the letter received from Sir Austin Pearce.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on 14 January at column 924.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the effect of the Anglo-Irish agreement upon the role and machinery of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: As article 2 of the Anglo-Irish agreement of 1985 makes clear, the Intergovernmental Conference established under the agreement is within the framework of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council. The other machinery of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council retains its existing functions.

Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the recent visit to the United Kingdom of the Iraqi Foreign Minister, he had any discussions about the possibility of lifting the embargo on the sale of military equipment to Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Changes to the current guidelines on the sale of defence equipment to Iraq were not discussed during the recent visit to this country of the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister. The guidelines remain as outlined in the answer given by my right hon. and learned Friend to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel) on 29 October 1985 at column 454.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations were made by Her Majesty's Government to the Iraqi Foreign Minister on recent development in Iraqi Kurdistan.

Mr. Renton: There was no specific discussion of recent developments in Iraqi Kurdistan.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he next intends to meet the Iraqi Foreign Secretary to discuss political prisoners there;

(2) when he next intends to have talks with the Iraqi Foreign Minister.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has at present no plans for further meetings with the Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Iraq.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current relations between the United Kingdom and Iraq.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom has normal diplomatic relations with Iraq. High level ministerial visits are exchanged, and these enable us to improve existing relations whilst providing an opportunity to speak frankly on matters where our views do not coincide. Iraq is also an important and growing market for British exporters.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what matters were discussed when he last met the Iraqi Foreign Minister; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the Iraqi Foreign Minister.

Mr. Renton: When my right hon. and learned Friend met the Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Iraq on 4 December they discussed a wide range of bilateral and regional issues, including Iran-Iraq, Arab-Israel and the situation in the Lebanon.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps were taken at the recent meetings with the Iraqi Foreign Secretary to seek to ensure an end to human rights violations in Iraq.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) on 18 December 1985 at column 294.

European Court of Human Rights (Right of Petition)

Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government intend to renew the existing rights of individual petition from the Channel Islands or other British dependencies which are parties to the European Court of Human Rights.

Mr. Renton: We are presently seeking the views on this matter of the Channel Islands and the dependent territories on whose behalf we previously accepted the right of individual petition to the European Commission of Human Rights.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Departmental Staff

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the average rate of staff turnover in his Department's inner city offices during each of the past five years.

Mr. Major: Turnover is defined as those staff who leave the Department, change offices within the Department or change grade within an office. The number of staff who leave the Department (wastage) is much lower. Both sets of figures for the last two years are set out in the following table:

	Turnover per cent.	Wastage per cent.
December 1983—November 1984	24·4	10·6
December 1984—November 1985	21·3	10·4

This information relates to the grades of clerical assistant, local officer II and local officer I employed in inner city offices.

Obtaining information for earlier periods would be disproportionately expensive.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service employees' take-home pay is less than the level regarded by the Government as the minimum required for subsistence.

Mr. Hayhoe: Information on take-home pay is not generally available. Deductions from gross earnings, such as income tax and national insurance contributions depend wholly on individual circumstances.

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total annual expenditure on wages and salaries of (a) nursing and midwifery staff, (b) ancillary staff, (c) medical staff and (d) ambulance staff; and what are the total numbers employed in each group.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested is as follows:

	Staff numbers	Expenditure (£ million)
(a) Nursing and midwifery staff	393,700	3,034
(b) Ancillary staff	152,200	937
(c) Medical staff (medical)	36,800	873
(dental)	2,400	47
Total	39,200	920
(d) Ambulance staff	18,100	174

Expenditure is for 1984/85 and includes employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions. Staff numbers are whole time equivalents of permanent paid staff employed in the hospital and community health service at 30 September 1984. Details for both expenditure and staff numbers exclude agency staff and locums.

Family Practitioner Committees (Computer Facilities)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those family practitioner committees which do not possess a computer capable of operating a cervical screening call and recall scheme.

Mr. Barney Hayhoe: The 45 family practitioner committees listed do not possess computer systems capable of operating a cervical screening call and recall scheme.

Berkshire
Bolton
Bradford
Bromley
Bury
Cambridgeshire
Camden and Islington
Cheshire
City and East London
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly
Cumbria
Doncaster
Dudley
East Sussex
Essex
Gateshead
Greenwich and Bexley
Hertfordshire
Humberside
Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster
Kingston and Richmond
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham
Lancashire
Leeds
Leicestershire
Lincolnshire
Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth
Newcastle
Norfolk
North Yorkshire
Oldham
Oxfordshire
Redbridge and Waltham Forest
Sheffield
Shropshire
Somerset
South Tyneside
Suffolk
Sunderland
Surrey
Tameside
Trafford
Wakefield
West Sussex
Wolverhampton

Departmental Local Offices

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will state for the inner and outer areas of Greater London, respectively, the approximate turnover of staff in grades of clerical assistant and clerical officer, respectively, in social security offices open to the public, together with maximum and minimum rates of turnover naming the offices concerned;

(2) if he will tabulate for each of his offices in Greater London for the years 1980 and 1985 (a) the numbers of staff, (b) persons in receipt of supplementary benefit and (c) the approximate percentage of (b) arising from retirement pensioners and others, respectively.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state in respect of social security offices in the London boroughs of Hackney, Tower Hamlets, and Newham; the number of outstanding single claims, the number of staff vacancies and the number of resignations from clerical grades in the year 1985 set out on a borough office basis.

Mr. Major: The number of (a) resignations from clerical grades in the year 1985 and (b) outstanding single payment claims at 31 December 1985 is as follows:

London Borough of Hackney	(a)	(b)
Finsbury Park ILO	23	215
Hackney ILO	7	700
Hoxton ILO	13	400
Shoreditch AO	11	428
Stoke Newington ILO	15	225
London Borough of Tower Hamlets
Poplar ILO	15	251
Stepney AO	9	70
Hackney ILO	See above
Shoreditch ILO	See above
London Borough of Newham
Canning Town ILO	9	350
Plaistow ILO	16	579
Woodgrange Park ILO	10	90

At 1 January 1986 there were no vacancies at any of the offices listed above.

Disablement Benefit

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether applications for disablement benefit are subject to disproportionate delay when processing the backlog of applications for other types of social security benefit.

Mr. Newton: No. Claims for disablement benefit are given the same priority as claims for any other benefit. However, if the hon. Member has a particular problem in mind I should be very willing to investigate it.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Robert Sheldon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has now received in respect of the change to a limited list for prescribing specific drugs.

Mr. Hayhoe: Since the end of June 1985 we have replied to approximately 2,500 representations about specific drugs; information relating to correspondence received before that date is not readily available.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social services how many single payments to supplementary benefit claimants last year were for a sum, respectively, of less than £10, £10 to £20, £20 to £40, £40 to £60, £60 to £80, £80 to £100, £100 to £150, £150 to £300, £300 to £500, £500 to £800, £800 to £1,000 or greater than £1,000.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Opticians and Ophthalmologists

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many opticians and ophthalmologists have been trained in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. The table shows the numbers of new opticians who registered with the General Optical Council and the numbers of doctors in training in ophthalmology in National Health Service hospitals.

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Ophthalmic Opticians	244	265	271	277	*
Dispensing Opticians	276	224	192	218	*
Doctors in Training	536	545	535	536	*

* Not available

Notes:

The figures for opticians are United Kingdom figures for years ended 31 December.

The figures for doctors are England and Wales figures at 30 September.

Benefit Claims (Slough)

Ms Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people claimed supplementary benefit in Slough in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985; and what percentage change that represents;

(2) what was the percentage change in claims made to the Department of Health and Social Security offices in Slough between 1979 and 1985; and what was the percentage change in staff for the same period.

Mr. Major: The table shows the number of claims to benefit received by the Department's office at Slough in 1980—the earliest available figures—and 1985; the percentage changes and the staffing changes. There has been a large number of procedural changes in both contributory and supplementary benefits over this period and therefore the figures for claims and staffing levels are not directly comparable.

	1980	1985	Percentage change
Sickness benefit	35,787	3,549	−90
Maternity benefit	3,183	2,241	−30
Injury benefit	1,314	—	—
Widows benefit	332	482	+45
Death grant	2,331	2,132	−9
Disablement benefit	134	*	—
Retirement pension	3,939	3,823	−3
Supplementary benefit	12,533	16,994	+36
Staff. Contributory benefit	108	77	−29
Supplementary benefit	113	−29 +35
Total staff	192	190	−1

* Disablement benefit claims are now handled at a separate specialist benefit office.

"Reform of Social Security"

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why, in table 16B of the technical annexe to the "Reform of Social Security", the number of lone parent losers broken down by decrease does not equal the figures given for the aggregate total decreased; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a revised version of table 16A and 16B of the technical annex to the "Reform of Social Security" giving precise figures, rather than figures rounded to the nearest thousand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The estimates in the technical annex are based on data in sample surveys and are, by their nature, approximations. Unrounded figures would give an air of spurious precision without adding to the usefulness of the information. As the technical annex makes clear in paragraph 2·14, numbers of claimants were rounded to 10,000 and, due to rounding, totals do not sum exactly in every case.

McColl Report

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the reply of 19 December 1985, Official Report, column 310, he is yet in a position to state when the McColl report on artificial limb and appliance centres will be published.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 15 January at columns 599-600.

Board and Lodging Allowance

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for a board and lodging allowance have been made by persons aged under 26 years since 25 November 1985 in the Tyne and Wear area.

Mr. Newton: The Department's local offices do not keep separate statistics on the number of claims for a board and lodging allowance made by persons aged under 26 years. The information is not therefore readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Income Support

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much an unemployed single person, aged 24 years and who receives (a) heating additions and (b) the average amount of single payment per annum will lose in benefit following the introduction of income support, using the assumptions in paragraph 2·4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), and calculated on (i) a weekly and (ii) a yearly basis.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 317-8]: As paragraph 1.45 of the White Paper makes clear, no one then on supplementary benefit would lose cash income at the point of introducing the new scheme because transitional protection will ensure that income support will make up weekly cash income to at least the same level as supplementary benefit did before the change.

I assume however that the hon. Member is seeking information about the underlying entitlement in the cases he postulates. Since two thirds of single unemployed people aged 24 are non-householders, and therefore most unlikely to be receiving a heating addition but likely to be receiving a non-householder addition, any meaningful comparison must look at householders and non-householders separately.

Assuming a basic rate heating addition and average water rates, the current supplementary benefit entitlement of a single 24-year-old unemployed householder would be £33·10; while that of a single 24-year-old non-householder receiving the non-householder addition would be £27·50. In either case, on the illustrative figures contained in the technical annex, the income support rate would be £24. Thus the change in underlying entitlement would be £9·10 a week (£470 a year) for the householder with the heating addition and £3·50 a week (£180 a year) for the non-householder with the housing addition.

These calculations take no account of single payments, since the income support scheme is concerned with weekly payments of benefit.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much a 60 to 79-year-old single pensioner who currently receives (a) diet, (b) clothing, (c) heating additions and (d) the average single payment help will lose under his new income support scheme, using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd 9691);

(2) how much a pensioner couple who both currently receive (a) diet, (b) clothing, (c) heating additions and (d) the average single payment help and are aged between 60 and 79 years will lose under his new income support scheme, using the assumptions in paragraph 2.4 of the technical annex of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd 9691).

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19, December 1985, c. 317-318]: As paragraph 1.45 of the White Paper makes clear, no one then on supplementary benefit would lose cash income at the point of introducing the new scheme because transitional protection will ensure that income support will make up weekly cash income to at least the same level as supplementary benefit did before the change.

I assume however that the hon. member is seeking information about the underlying entitlement in the cases he postulates. Assuming the basic rate additions for heating and diet, the estimated average clothing addition, and average water rates, the current supplementary benefit entitlement for those between 60 and 79 is £43·35 for a single pensioner householder, £65·85 for a pensioner householder couple, £38·35 for a single pensioner non-householder and £68·35 for a pensioner non-householder couple. On the illustrative figures of the technical annex, income support rates in such cases would be £40·60 for a single pensioner and £63·25 for a pensioner couple receiving the lower pensioner premium, and £42·85 for a single pensioner and £65·45 for a pensioner couple receiving the higher pensioner premium — factors associated with ill-health or disability are among qualifying conditions for the clothing addition referred to by the hon. Member. Thus the difference between the two schemes would range from an increased underlying entitlement of £4·50 a week for a single pensioner non-householder receiving the higher income support premium to a decreased underlying entitlement of £2·75 a week for a single pensioner householder receiving the lower income support premium. No account is taken in these calculations of single payments, since income support is concerned only with regular weekly payments.

It is estimated that fewer than 1 per cent. of pensioners currently receive the combination of additions mentioned in the question.

Supplementary Benefit (Statistics)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the number and rate per 1,000 of the population of people on supplementary pension (a) nationally (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year 1979 to the latest available date;

(2) what was the number and rate per 1,000 of the population of people on supplementary benefit (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 321]: The information for Great Britain as a whole is as follows:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary pension (000s)	2,046	1,981	2,039	2,098	1,925
Rate per 1,000 of the pensioner population	214	204	207	212	195
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary benefit* (000s)	4,370	4,863	6,121	7,070	7,238
Rate per 1,000 of the total population	80	89	112	129	132

As information on population is not available for all social security regions and information on supplementary benefit recipients is not available for all standard regions, comparative rates are available only for England, Wales and Scotland as follows:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983
England
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary pension (000s)	1,756	1,709	1,752	1,814	1,654
Rate per 1,000 of the pensioner population	209	203	208	215	196
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary benefit* (000s)	3,652	4,092	5,144	5,939	6,088
Rate per 1,000 of the total population	78	87	110	127	130
Wales
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary pension (000s)	117	108	113	111	109
Rate per 1,000 of the pensioner population	220	203	212	209	205
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary benefit* (000s)	267	290	370	426	437
Rate per 1,000 of the total population	95	103	131	152	156
Scotland
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary pension (000s)	173	164	174	173	163
Rate per 1,000 of the pensioner population	196	186	196	196	185
Numbers of claimants and dependants on supplementary benefit* (000s)	451	482	608	705	713
Rate per 1,000 of the total population	87	93	117	136	138

* Includes supplementary pensiners.

Source:

Benefit/pension figures: Annual Statistical Enquiries

Population figures: Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish versions of tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), showing projections based on current state earnings-related pension scheme provisions;

(2) if he will provide the figures, for all the cases analysed in tables P1 to P6 of the technical annex to the "Reform of Social Security", published 16 December 1985, for an unmodified state earnings-related pension scheme on the same basis as those quoted for a modified state earnings related pension scheme.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his replies, 19 December 1985, c. 320, and 16 January 1986, c. 596]: The following table gives the information requested. Amounts illustrated are total weekly state basic and earnings-related pensions assuming no change in the present scheme. All other assumptions are the same as those used and explained on pages 1 and 2 of the technical annex to the White Paper.

Age in 1988 and earnings levels	Table number in the technical annex to the White Paper
	P1	P2	P3	P4	P5	P6
16 low earner	83	83	60	60	*	*
middle earner	126	126	80	80	*	*
high earner	161	161	110	110	*	*
20 low earner	81	81	59	59	99	99
middle earner	121	121	78	78	146	146
high earner	154	154	106	106	146	146
30 low earner	75	75	56	54	90	88
middle earner	110	110	72	69	131	131
high earner	138	138	96	91	131	131
40 low earner	70	68	52	49	77	73
middle earner	100	100	67	60	118	118
high earner	124	124	87	77	118	118

* Amounts were not shown for these cases in tables P5 and P6 of the technical annex.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether any district health authority chairman has expressed concern to him in discussions about the scope for efficiency savings in the current year and 1987; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether any district health authorities have made any representations to him about the scope for savings in cost improvement programmes in 1986-87 compared with 1985-86.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 600-1]: Any discussion about the scope for future cost improvement normally takes place at regional level, since regional health authorities are required to put forward an overall programme. Three district health authorities have however discussed the scope for increased programmes in 1986-87 with Ministers, in the context of wider issues.

Radiation (Studies)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the studies being undertaken by the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment particularly relating to the incidence of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer in young people living close to the royal ordnance factory, Burghfield and atomic weapons research establishment, Aldermaston will be made public; and when he expects the committee to report.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 700]: Yes, the committee's findings on the incidence of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer in young people living close to the royal ordnance factory, Burghfield and atomic weapons research establishment, Aldermaston will be published but it is too early to predict when the committee will complete its deliberations.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 89

SESSION 1985-86

16th December 1985—17th January 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.

Abortion deaths 81-4w
Scotland 63-4w

Access to buildings
Mobility of disabled 655-6w

Accidents
Channel tunnel 758

Accounting
Johnson Matthey 649w

Acid rain 548-9w
Freshwater fish 544-5w
Merrick 548-9w
Scotland 549w
Water 549w

Action on Smoking & Health 429w
Dept of Health & Social Security 429w
Government grants 428w, 429w

Acute beds 558w
Hospital waiting lists 558w

Adjournment debates
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 132-3, (20.12.85) 748, (15.01.86) 1186

Adjudication officers 79w, 499w

Adley, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1272, 1273, 1292-5
Members interests (17.12.85) 226, 229, 245-6, 251
Oral question time point of order (17.12.85) 157-8
Oral questions, Members attendance (18.12.85) 345
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 786
Questions
Buses, Speed governors 757-8
Coal mining, Industrial disputes 29w
Drug abuse, Heroin 132w
Drug crimes, Malaysia 569w
Employment, Manufacturing industries 398w
Hong Kong, Nationality 584w
London docklands railway, Private sector 764
NATO 564w
Railway electrification, Dorset 44w
South Africa, Ministers visits abroad 284-5
Westland helicopters, Avionics 243-4w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 347w
Westland helicopters, Foreign investment in UK 451w

Administrative costs
Departmental forms 154w
Entry clearances 640w

Administrative delays
Cervical cancer 325w, 500w, 501w, 699w
Departmental forms 154w
Enterprise allowance scheme 56-7w
Export credit guarantees 1060-1
Handicap benefits 738w
House of Commons Select Committees 691w
Pensions 75w
Severe disablement allowance 499w
Social security appeals tribunals 79w
Social security payments 75w
Unemployment benefits 397w

Adoption
Disclosure of information 700w
Ministers correspondence 700w

Adult education
Unemployed 644-5w

Advanced gas-cooled reactors
Nuclear power stations 30-1w

Advertising
Dept of Trade & Industry 23w
Home Office 275w

Advertising agencies
Dept of Health & Social Security 411-4w
Dept of Trade & Industry 21-3w

Advertising codes of practice
Tobacco industry 434w

Advisory Conciliation & Arbitration Service
Teachers 147

Advisory services
AIDS 70w, 71w
Exports 203-4w

Aerospace industry 632w
Airbuses 451-2w
EC countries 452w
Exports 632w
Helicopters 137w, 526w
International cooperation 517-8w
Manpower 636-7w
USA 517-8w

Affray (13.01.86) 792-869

Afghanistan (20.12.85) 681-90
Foreign policy 204w

Africa
Debts 308-9w
Democracy 208w
Food aid from EC 329w
Overseas aid 770

African National Congress 293
Foreign relations 294
South Africa 285
Violence 285

Agricultural advisory services 16-7, 59-60w
Scotland 16-7, 18, 59-60w

Agricultural Development & Advisory Service 279-80w, 280-1w
Civil service manpower 279-80w
Income 280-1w

Agricultural land
Cereals 554-5
High technology parks 559
Land use 558-9

Agricultural policy 278w

Agricultural production
Cereals 276w, 561
Pulses & seeds 277w

Agricultural research 210-1w
Crops 2w
Public appointments 336w
Research finance 771
Scotland 59-60w

Agricultural subsidies
Cereals 551-2w

Agricultural support systems
Highlands & Islands Development Board 294-5w

Agricultural surpluses
Cereals 276w, 553-4
Common agricultural policy 551w
Intervention stocks 551w

Agricultural & Food Research Council 336w

Agriculture
Government grants 266-7w
Northern Ireland 266-7w
Overseas aid 769
Sudan 772

Agusta
Company finance 533w
International cooperation 529w, 610w

Agusta helicopters 530-1w, 531-2w, 535w
Defence procurement 530w

Aid financed trade
Development aid 770
Soft loans 585w
Water treatment 770

AIDS 63w, 70w, 71w, 72w, 170w, 326w, 427w, 494w, 556-7w
Advisory services 70w, 71w
Armed forces 212w
Blood 326w
Death 70w
Departmental coordination 556w
Departmental publications 70w
Discrimination 71w
Disease control 72w
Government grants 427w
Haemophilia 70w
Health education 71w
Health service staff 556-7w
Medical research 71w
Patients 494w
Preventive medicine 63w
Prison medical services 170w
Research finance 71w
Scottish health boards 63w

Aids for handicapped
Bettman Centre 493w
Blind 411w
Local government social services 493w

Air force 101w
Armed forces discharges 381-2w
Armed forces retirement 382-3w, 383-4w
Armed forces training 564w
Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament 213w
Jet aircraft 384w
Military aircraft 247w
Military police 213w
West Germany 381-2w

Air force bases
Armed forces deployment 538w
Public buildings 522w

Air freight transport
Aircraft noise 733-4w
Trade competitiveness 733-4w

Air pollution
Consultation papers 259w
Sulphur dioxide 3, 545w

Air transport 477w
Bilateral treaties 47w

Air buses
Aerospace industry 451-2w
Government assistance 634w

Aircraft
Fire prevention 582w
Fire resistant materials 582w
Safety measures 581-2w

Aircraft noise
Air freight transport 733-4w

Aircrew
Armed forces discharges 99-101w
Armed forces retirement 99-101w
Armed forces training 99w, 101w

Airedale
Road construction 763-4

Airlines
International Monetary Fund 593w
Shares 478w

Airport security 630w
Manchester Airport 569w, 578w
Military exercises 521-2w

Airports
Fees & charges 733w
Privatisation 478w
Public buildings 167w

Airports Bill 1985/86
1R (16.01.86) 1239

Airspace
Nicaragua 283

Aish & Company 214w, 215w

Aitken, Mr Jonathan
Questions
Business statement 1219

Alcoholic drinks duties
Tax yields 361w

Alcoholism & crime 457w

Alexander, Mr Richard
Questions
Manual workers, Low pay 726w
Petroleum exploration 26w
Soft loans, Aid financed trade 585w
Teachers, Pay 146

Alley, Eric 177-8w
Civil defence 177-8w

Almeida Theatre (20.12.85) 731-7

Alternative energy
EC Energy Council 10
Energy conservation 5
Energy research 4, 634w
Research finance 10

Alton, Mr David
Debates etc
Housing cooperatives (20.12.85) 745-8, 751
Members interests, Business statement (17.12.85) 176
Questions
Business statement 577
Cervical cancer, Screening 572
Financial institutions, City of London 360w
Food labelling 355-6
House of Commons Select Committees 291-2w
Nuclear weapons tests, National Radiological Protection Board 906
Plessey, Mergers 179w
Student grants 147-8
Trident missiles 246w
UNESCO 179w

Amber valley 289w, 322-3w, 509w
Health service staff 322-3w, 509w
Hospital waiting lists 322w
Hospitals 323w
Pupil-teacher ratios 289w

Ambulance services
Pay 161w
Scotland 161w

Amenity beds
Income 314-6w
NHS & private practice 311w
Regional health authorities 314-6w

Amess, Mr David
Debates etc
Hospital radio (18.12.85) 378-80
Sunday trading, Public petitions (19.12.85) 663
Questions
Horses, Animal welfare 281-2w
Local government expenditure, Basildon District Council 922
Rate limitation, Appeals 465w

Amnesty International
Torture 363-4w

Ancient monuments
Governments grants 678w
Mary Rose 678w

Ancram, Mr Michael, Parliamentary Under Secretary Scottish Office
Debates etc
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 85-7
Planning inquiries, Dounreay (14.01.86) 1053-6
Questions
Acid rain 548-9w
Acid rain, Scotland 549w
A92, Expenditure 162w
A92, Road works 61w
Building industry, Scotland 61w
Bypasses, Scotland 61-2w
Council house waiting lists, Waiting lists 482w
Forth road bridge, Joint boards 723w
Forth road bridge, Road tolls 566w, 723w
Gardens, Scotland 357w
Motorways, Lighting 292w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Dounreay 109-10w
Rate support grants, Lothian Regional Council 615w
Road works, Scotland 352-3w

Anderson, Mr Donald
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 337-8
Questions
Customs, Prosecutions 361w
Cycleways, Public footpaths 19w
Export controls, Machine tools 361w
Lesotho, South Africa 924
Middle East, Peace negotiations 288
Severn bridge, Road tolls 757
South Africa, Mandela, Nelson 286
Zimbabwe, Foreign relations 200w

Anderson, Martina 342w

Anglian Water Authority 463w, 656-62w

Anglo-Irish Agreement 4w, 132w, 265w, 735w
International conferences 4w
Ministers 4w

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference 735w

Angola
Peace negotiations 133w

Animal experiments 173-4w
Animal cruelty (15.01.86) 1078-81

Animal feed
Cattle 541-2w
Intervention stocks 553-4

Animal husbandry
Antibiotics 485-6w
Drugs 613w

Animal welfare 347-8w
Codes of practice 560
Horses 281-2w
Anniversaries Okehampton Bypass 371w, 407w

Annual reports 17w, 649w, 1068-9
Hong Kong 133w
Johnson Matthey 649w
Nature Conservancy Council 17w

Annual reports, Specific cases 133w

"Annual Review of Agriculture, 1986" 543w

Antibiotics
Animal husbandry 485-6w
Veterinary medicine 485-6w

Antidumping
Costs 589-90w
Evidence 589-90w

Antrim, East
By-election writs (17.12.85) 139

Antrim, North
By-election writs (17.12.85) 140

Antrim, South
By-election writs (17.12.85) 140

Apartheid
Economic sanctions 1074

Appeals
Limited list prescribing 421-2w
Rate limitation 465w

Apples
House of Commons catering 716w

Apralan
Cattle diseases 283w

Arab boycott
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 291
Israel 33w

Arab states
British residents abroad 192w, 203w
Christmas 203w
Prisoners 192w
Women 208w

Archaeology
International conferences 148-9

Archbishop of Canterbury 521w

"Archbishop of Canterburys Commission on Urban Priority Areas Report" 521w

Archer, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc
Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1332-3

Architectural conservation
Diorama 655w

Area manpower boards 400-4w

Areas of deprivation 467w

Argentina
Diplomatic relations 198w, 199w
Fishery agreements 364w
Foreign policy 199w
Overseas trade 199w
Peace negotiations 198-9w

Armed forces deployment
Air force bases 538w

Armed forces
AIDS 212w
Hospital catering 373w, 374w
Schools 917
Vocational guidance 918
West Germany 211w

Armed Forces Bill 1985/86
Motion relating to Select Committee (16.12.85) 127
House of Commons Select Committee (20.12.85) 744

Armed forces catering services
Armed forces civilians 373w
Hospital catering 373w
Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital 373w

Armed forces civilians
Armed forces catering services 373w
Navy 374-8w
Pay 523w

Armed forces deployment
Army reserves 916
Bolton 96w
Bury 96w
Heathrow 521-2w
Navy 215w
9 Signal Regiment 379w, 525w
South Africa 212w
US bases 538w
USA 205w

Armed forces discharges
Air force 381-2w
Aircrew 99-101w
14 Signal Regiment 99w, 215w
9 Signal Regiment 99w, 215w, 524w, 525w
13 Signal Regiment 523w, 524w

Armed forces officers
Criminal investigation 525w

Armed forces pensions
Costs 96w
Widows 246w

Armed forces retirement
Air force 382-3w, 383-4w
Aircrew 99-101w

Armed forces storage depots 374w
Navy 374w

Armed forces strength
Bolton 522-3w
Bury 522-3w
Vocational guidance 917
14 Signal Regiment 101-2w
9 Signal Regiment 101-2w

Armed forces training
Air force 564w
Aircrew 99, 101w
Army reserves 916
EL Salvador 202w, 525w
Honduras 525w
Morocco 212w
RAF Cranwell 99w, 101w
RAF Finningley 101w
RAF Shawbury 99w
RAF Valley 99w
South Africa 523w
Ulster Defence Regiment 102w

Arms control 203w
USA 199w

Arms embargoes
Chile 199w
Iraq 735w
Israel 206w
South Africa 134w

Arms trade
International cooperation 535w
Morocco 134w
South America 589w

Armstrong, Robert 520w

Army
Fox hunting 379-80w, 536-7w, 538w
Horses 536w, 537w

Army in Northern Ireland 265-6w

Army reserves
Armed forces deployment 916
Armed forces training 916

Arnold, Mr Tom
Questions
Civil service manpower, Dept of Health & Social Security 414-6w

Arrests
Monteith, Billy 343w

Artificial insemination
Clinics 325w

Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review 310w, 600w, 740w
Disclosure of information 600w

Arts Council
Arts finance 512w
Parks 512w
Recreation spaces 512w
South Bank 512w

Arts Council grants
Concert Halls 304-5w

Arts finance
Arts Council 512w
Greater Manchester 189w
Local government reform 189w, (20.12.85) 731-7
South Bank 512w

Asbestos
Brakes 407w
Heating 371w

Asbestos stripping 371w
Housing investment programmes 371w

Ashby, Mr David
Debates etc
Juries (18.12.85) 416, 420, 421-3, 425
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 798
Questions
European Court of Human Rights, British dependent territories 736w
Fires, Coal mining 1205

Ashdown, Mr Paddy
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 945, 961-4, 1015
Members interests (17.12.85) 242-5
Private notice questions (16.12.85) 46
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 38, (13.01.86) 780 (15.01.86) 1099, 1110, 1116, 1119, 1131-5
Questions
Health service staff, Low pay 736w
Helicopters, International cooperation 535w
Indirect taxation, Family income 306-7w
Lloyds of London, Members interests 1057-8
Local authorities, Non-domestic rates 570w
Nuclear accidents, Hinckley Point B 30-1w
Nuclear accidents, Information 249w
Nuclear Installations Inspectorate, Nuclear accidents 549w
Nuclear safety, Scotland 64w
Planning appeals, Hypermarkets 13w
Strategic defence initiative, Computer applications 910-1
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 560w
Westland helicopters, Defence contracts 535w

Ashford Detention Centre 623-4w

Ashley, Rt Hon Jack
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1367, 1370-2
Questions
Business statement 576, 1215
Child patients, Mental hospitals 702w
Criminal injuries compensation 131w
Debendox, Drug side effects 498-9w
Food additives, EC law 276w
Food labelling, Food additives 556
NHS complaints 232w
NHS complaints, Clinical judgements 231w, 232w, 233w
Special schools, School governors 119w
Vaccine damaged children, Compensation 157w

Ashton, Mr Joseph
Questions
Health education, Nutrition & health 121w

Asian Development Bank (Extension of Limit on Guarantees) Order 1985 (13.01.86) 791

Asset stripping
National Bus Company 760

Assisted areas
North West region 139-40w

Assisted places scheme
Cost per pupil 708w
Income distribution 643-4w

Associated British Foods 243w, 252w
Company accounts 243w
IRA 252w

Association of British Chambers of Commerce 587w
Trade promotion 587w

Association of Chief Police Officers 126-7w
Codes of practice 126-7w
Ministerial responsibility 127w

Association of Metropolitan Authorities 6-7w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit 6-7w

Association of University Teachers 148-9
World Archaeological Congress 148-9

Atkins, Rt Hon Sir Humphrey
Questions
Lloyds of London, Fraud 346-7w

Atkins, Mr Robert
Questions
British Aerospace, Profitability 156
Defence attaches 608-9w
European fighter aircraft, International cooperation 909
Export promotion, Government grants 1060
London docklands railway, Stolport 755
Middle East, Foreign policy 193w
Public transport, Local government expenditure 404-6w

Atkinson, Mr David
Debates etc
Afghanistan (20.12.85) 681-4
Questions
Inflation 650w
Nuclear weapons, Nuclear fuel cycle 561w

Atkinson, Mr Norman
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 325
Questions
Civil disorder, Metropolitan Police 172-3w
North East Thames Regional Health Authority 230-1w

Atomic Weapons Research Establishment
Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment 744-6w
Radiation hazards 372w

Attendance allowance
Handicapped children 598-9w

Attorney-General
Government departments 567-8
Security 446w

Audit
Family practitioner committees 154w, 607w

Australia
Nuclear weapons tests 159w, 160w, 216w, 561w, 629w

Automatic credit transfer 228w
Post Office 228w

Autumn Statement
Northern Ireland 267-8w

Average earnings
Confederation of British Industry 585w
Inflation 650w
Marginal tax rates 1194
Men 300-1w
Nurses 1199
Pensions 319-20w
Women 3001-w

Avionics
Westland helicopters 243-4w

Avon bridge 630-1w

A1 478w
Road construction 478w

A13 561w

A19
Road works 297w

A40 44w
Construction costs 44w
Road construction 44w

A41
Bypasses 477w
Orders & regulations 477w

A45 295w
Road traffic 295w

A92 162w
Expenditure 162w
Road works 61w, 162w

A127 295-6w
Road accidents 295-6w
Road safety barriers 295-6w

A320 Airbus 632w
Government assistance 632w

Badgers & Bovine Tuberculosis (No 2) Review 579w

Baker Review see Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 Independent Review

Baker, Rt Hon Kenneth, Secretary of State for the Environment
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Ministerial statements (18.12.85) 310-30
Questions
Housing revenue accounts, Surpluses 664-70w
Housing subsidies, Expenditure 663-4w
Local government expenditure, Greater London Council 219w
Local government reform, Local government finance 222-3w
Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 663w
North East Hampshire structure plan 730w
Ordnance Survey, Management 104-5w
Property Services Agency, Berkshire 669-72w
Public participation in planning, Disclosure of information 369w
Rate equalisation, Greater London Council 108w
Rate limitation, Local government expenditure 219w

Baker, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 950, 963
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1117
Questions
Diplomatic service, Trade promotion 297-8
Hill Kestrel Communications, Fraud 540w

St Edward, Bones 540w

Baking industry
Staffordshire 636w
Working hours 635-6w

Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954 635-6w

Balance of trade
Japan 590w
Manufactured goods 452-3w, 587w
USA 452-3w, 520-1w

Baldry, Mr Tony
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 173-4
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 308-9
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 188
Questions
Argentina, Peace negotiations 198-9w
Book piracy 1067-8
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 27w
Common agricultural policy, EC reform 278w
Emergency planning, Royal Observer Corps 714w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 291-2
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w
Unemployment 190w

Bangladesh
Immigrants 625w
Immigration controls 623-4w
Visas 624w

Bank loans
Bank of England 1193

Bank of England 652w
Bank loans 1193
Banking supervision 1191-2
Commercial bills 362w
Financial institutions 359w
Own resources 359w

Banking Act 1979 309w
Banks 309w

Banking supervision (17.12.85) 159-67, 649w, 1068-9, 1191-2
Bank of England 1191-2
Johnson Matthey 649w
Ministerial statements (17.12.85) 159-67
Public appointments 1193

"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 159-67

Banks
Banking Act 1979 309w
Financial institutions 309w
Trustee savings banks 363w

Banks Colliery
Standing Order No 10 applications (17.12.85) 175

Banks, Mr Tony
Debates etc
Homelessness, Greater London (20.12.85) 700-4, 708-9
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 320
Questions
Advertising, Dept of Trade & Industry 23w
Advertising, Home Office 275w
Arts Council, Arts finance 512w
Arts Council, Recreation spaces 512w
Blackwall tunnel, Repairs & maintenance 480w
Central America, EC external relations 191w
Civil defence, Government grants 272-3w
Civil defence, Government grants to local authorities 272-3w
Civil defence, Local authorities in Scotland 293w
Civil defence, Scotland 292-3w, 483w
Civil defence, Training 272w
Concessionary fares, London boroughs 478w
Crimes of violence, Women 275w
Crown lands & estates, Diorama 655w
Drug crimes, Greater London 459w
Duty solicitors, Greater London 446-7w
Early warning systems, Chemical weapons 462w
Fayed, Mohammed 628w
Greater London Council, Redundancy 564-5
Heathrow, Armed forces deployment 521-2w
House of Fraser, Mergers 634w
Local government expenditure, Greater London Council 366-9w, 470w
Local government reform, County Hall 369w
Local government reform, Departmental leaflets 469w
Local government reform, Greater London Council 468-9w
Local government reform, Greater London Council Research Library 469w
Local government reform, London boroughs 677w
London Docklands Development Corporation, External financing limits 472w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Property transfer 471-2w
London docklands railway, Employment 471-2w
London docklands railway, Manpower 679w
London Residuary Body, Finance 677-8w
Metropolitan Police, Councillors 459w
Metropolitan Police, Police training 460w
Metropolitan Police, Ports 459w
Police custody, Prevention of Terrorism Acts 459-60w
"Public Order Law White Paper" 460-1w
Road traffic control, Talgarth road 490w
Social security benefits, Newham 496w
South Bank, Arts finance 512w
South Bank, Local government reforms 512w
South Bank, Managers 512w
South Bank, Pulford, Richard 512w
South Bank Board, Pay 512w
United Kingdom Warning & Monitoring Organisation 274w

BAOR
Costs 211w

Barnett, Mr Guy
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 207-10
Questions
Teachers, Industrial disputes 143
Woolwich ferry, Local government reform 406-7w

Barnsley
Coal mining 53w
Glass industry 53w

Barron, Mr Kevin
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 828

Basildon District Council 465w, 922
Local government expenditure 922
Rate limitation 922

Batiste, Mr Spencer
Questions
Business statement 579

Baton rounds
Metropolitan Police 171-2w

BBC 626w
Income 626w
Television advertising 626w, 636w

BBC Advertising & Sponsorship Review 627w

BBC external services
Electromagnetic interference 206w
Satellite broadcasting 206w
Television 206w

Beaches
Sea pollution 223-8w

Beaumont-Dark, Mr Anthony
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 166
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 434, 437-9, 444
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1007
Members (18.12.85) 364
Members interests, Liberal Party (18.12.85) 343, 344
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 322
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 44, (13.01.86) 784
Questions
Japan, Foreign relations 205w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence contracts 913

Beckenham Hospital (20.12.85) 738-44

Beckett, Mrs Margaret
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 168-9
Questions
Dept of Health & Social Security, Public appointments 504w
Equal opportunities, Dept of Health & Social Security 595-6w
Family credit, Social security claims 495w
Housing benefits, Social security benefits rules 503-4w
Housing benefits, Social security recipients 410-2w
Invalid care allowances 701-2w
Invalid care allowances, Costs 701w
Invalid care allowances, European Court of Justice 701w
Invalid care allowances, Married women 701w
Severe disablement allowance, Administrative delays 499w
Severe disablement allowance, Social security benefits disqualification 437w
Severe disablement allowance, Social security recipients 499w
Social security reviews, Marginal tax rates 495-6w
Supplementary benefits, Young people 506-8w
Young people, Social security benefits rules 422-6w

Bed & breakfast accommodation
Business expansion scheme 651w
Local government expenditure 465-6w, 577w
Slums 553w
Tyne & Wear 553w

Beef & veal
Intervention stocks 540-1w

Beggs, Roy
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

Beith, Mr A J
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 303
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 183-6
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 871-2
Questions
European Assembly, Elections 204w
Languages education, Nordic countries 118-9w
Lesotho, South Africa 923
Nicaragua, USA 283-4
Overseas aid, Agriculture 769
Overseas trade, USSR 590w
Public sector borrowing requirement 305w
Regional aid, Northern region 1066
Social security benefits rules, Seasonal workers 239-40w
South Africa, Economic sanctions 294-5
Strategic Defence Initiative, Reagan, President 907-8

Belfast
Building industry 454w

Belfast, East
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Belfast, North
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Belfast, South
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Bell, Mr Stuart
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1209
Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1334-5
Questions
Regional aid, Northern region 1196-7

Bellingham, Mr Henry
Questions
Smoking related diseases, Death 415-6w
Smoking related diseases, Norfolk 73-5w

Bendall, Mr Vivian
Debates etc
Taxis, Heathrow (17.12.85) 277-9, 280
Questions
Middle East, Foreign policy 193w

Bennett, Mr Andrew F
Debates etc
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 107-9, 112, 113, 119-20, 121
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 32
Questions
Assisted places scheme, Income distribution 643-4w
Education, Departmental publications 113-4w
Education support grants, Expenditure 713w
Food additives, Food industry 276w
Higher education admission 709-10w
Nursery schools, Cost per pupil 707-9w
Open University, University finance 711-2w
Ordnance survey, Financial targets 104w
Overseas aid, Overseas students 713w
Overseas students, Student numbers 709-11w
Pre-school education, School population 712w
Public footpaths, Defence Act 1842 373w
Public footpaths, Menwith 372-3w
Pupil-teacher ratios 711w
School meals 709-10w
School meals, Nutrition 644w
School meals, Per capita costs 643w
Schools, Class sizes 711w
Schools, Cost per pupil 708w
Social security benefits, Costs 414w
Student grants 148
Teachers, Merit awards 441w, 442w
Technical & vocational education initiative, Pupils 727-8w
Unemployment benefit offices, Stockport 639w
Universities, Higher education admission 643w
University finance, University Grants Committee 442-4w
University teachers, Careers development 712w
Youth employment, School leaving 726w
Youth training scheme, Pay 727-8w

Bennett, Sir Frederic
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 302-3

Berkhampsted bypass 765-6
Dual carriageways 765-6
Road construction 765-6

Berkshire
Property Services Agency 669-72w

Bermingham, Mr Gerald
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 944, 991-3
Juries (18.12.85) 420, 425, 427
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 877, 893
Questions
BBC 626w
BBC, Income 626w
BBC, Television advertising 626w, 636w
BBC Advertising & Sponsorship Review 627w
Mental patients, Respiratory diseases 73-4w
Planning permission, Opencast mining 464-6w

Best, Mr Keith
Debates etc
Drinking & driving (18.12.85) 508-14, 515, 517, 518, 519
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 950-1
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 338
Questions
Blood alcohol levels 435w
Cash limits, Wales 619w
Drinking & driving 406w
Earthquakes, Defence research 211w
Housing benefits, Pensioners 410w
Iran, Foreign relations 363w
Iran, Human rights 363w
Legal aid, Inquiries 446w
NHS finance, Rural areas 75w
Nuclear test ban, Civil service manpower 366w
Nuclear test ban, International co-operation 290-1w
Nuclear test ban, Strategic defence initiative 197w
Nuclear weapons tests 216w
Oil imports, Iran 249-50w
Overseas trade, Iran 331-2w
Radioactive waste disposal, Research 106w
Sunday trading, Law enforcement 251-2w
Trident missiles, Testing 212w
Wales Tourist Board, Government grants 286w

Betting & gaming duties
Bingo 143-4w

Bettman Centre
Aids for handicapped 493w

Bideford bypass 580w

Bidwell, Mr Sydney
Questions
El Salvador, Armed forces training 202w
Pilotage, Orders & regulations 167w
Trades Union Congress, Government grants 639w

Biffen, Rt Hon John, Lord Privy Seal and Leader of the House of Commons
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 774-6
Business statement, Members interests (17.12.85) 176-7
Members interests (17.12.85) 219-23, 249-51
Recess motions, Christmas (18.12.85) 389-92
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 836
Westland Helicopters, Solicitor-General (15.01.86) 1077
Questions
Business statement 573-82, 1214-24
House of Commons catering, Apples 716w
House of Commons Select Committees 291-2w
House of Commons staff 66w
House of Commons, Sanitation 160w
House of Commons Select Committees, Administrative delays 691w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons debates 683-6w, 693w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons Divisions 679-82w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons staff 691-4w
House of Commons Select Committees, Members 681-4w
House of Commons Select Committees, Select Committee evidence 685-6w, 689-92w
House of Commons Select Committees, Specialist advisers 685-6w, 687-90w
House of Commons Select Committees, Temporary staff 691w
House of Commons Select Committees, Witnesses 691-2w
Members allowances, Members staff 15
Members allowances, Private members bills 441w
Members facilities, Computers 16
Members interests 15-6
Members & trade unions 16
Northern Ireland Office, Oral questions 65-6w
Reprography, Members facilities 716w
Upper Waiting Hall, Exhibitions 607-8w

Biggs-Davison, Sir John
Questions
Anglo-Irish Agreement 132w, 735w
Anglo-Irish Agreement, International conferences 4w
Anglo-Irish Agreement, Ministers 4w
Body searches, Northern Ireland 185-6w
Body searches, Scotland 60-1w
Devolution, Northern Ireland 565
Greater London Council, Science & technology 105w
Lesotho, South Africa 923-4
Motorways, Road construction 477w
Oil exports, North Sea oil 28w
Terrorism, International cooperation 207w

Bilateral aid
Overseas aid 447w

Bilateral treaties
Air transport 47w

Bingo
Betting & gaming duties 143-4w
Licensed premises 143-4w

Birds
Scotland 721-3w

Birmingham
House purchase 458-9w
Land Registry Office 109w

Birtenshaw Farm 18w
Planning appeals 18w

Black economy
Building industry 593w
Growth promoting hormones 613w

Blackwall tunnel 475-6w, 479w, 480w
Repairs & maintenance 480w
Road traffic 479w

Blaenau Ffestining (18.12.85) 374-6

Blair, Mr Tony
Questions
Africa, Debts 308-9w
Crown lands & estates, Rates & rating 49w
International economic relations, Interest rates 1202-3
Public sector borrowing requirement 347w

Blaker, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Questions
European Regional Development Fund, Council of Ministers 137-8w
South Africa, Foreign relations 295

Blechen, Norman 584w

Blaenau Ffestiniog
Stone quarrying (18.12.85) 374-6

Blind
Aids for handicapped 411w
Health services 697w
Social services 697w

Block grant
Per capita costs 672-3w
Rates & rating 104w

Blood
AIDS 326w
Factor VIII 416w
Imports 326w
Laboratories 416w
Scotland 292w
Self-sufficiency 292w

Blood alcohol levels 406w, 435w, 481w

Blood products laboratory 416w

Blyth Valley
Special development areas 1066-7
Unemployment 1066-7

Board & lodging charges 69w, (17.12.85) 168-74, 240w, 417-8w, 489-90w, 553-4w, 740w
Costs 417-8w
Judgments 240w
Ministerial statements (17.12.85) 168-74
Social security recipients 240w, 418w
Supplementary benefits 69w, 553-4w, 740w
Tyne & Wear 740w
Young people 418w
Youth training scheme 489-90w

Body, Sir Richard
Questions
Animal husbandry, Antibiotics 485-6w

Cereals, Intervention stock 283w
Horses, Export of live animals 485w
Nature conservation, Wash 463w
Pesticides, Fenvalerate 484w

Body searches 60-1w, 185-6w, 342-3w, 458w
Brixton Prison 342w, 458w
Majid, Jamila 342-3w
Northern Ireland 185-6w
Scotland 60-1w
Thomarin, Sylvia 342-3w

Boiler conversion scheme 27w
Coal firing scheme 27w

Bolton
Armed forces deployment 96w
Armed forces strength 522-3w

Bolton Health Authority 496w
Hospital waiting lists 496w

Bone marrow disorders
Transplant surgery 167w

Bones
St Edward 540w

Bonsor, Sir Nicholas
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1378-82

Book piracy 1067-8

Bottomley, Mr Peter Under-Secretary of State for Employment*
Debates etc
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 535-8
Questions
Baking industry, Staffordshire 636w
Baking industry, Working hours 635-6w
British Dental Association, Trade unions 125w
Building industry, Death 52-4w
Building industry, Labour only subcontracting 52w
Business on own account scheme 550w
Factory Inspectorate, North West region 188w
Health & Safety at Work etc Act 1974 639w
Health & Safety Executive, Building industry 52w
Nuclear Installations Inspectorate, Nuclear accidents 549w
Shareholders 650w
Small businesses, Industrial health & safety 302-3w
Trade unions, Political levy 304w, 399-400w
Trades Union Congress, Government grants 639w
Wages councils, Personal 726w
Wages Inspectorate, Yorkshire & Humberside 489-92w
Youth training scheme, European Social Fund 299w

Bottomley, Mrs Virginia
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 33
Questions
Ordnance Survey, Management 104-5w
Social security benefits rules, Students 229-30w
South Africa, Economic sanctions 196w
Teachers, Industrial dispute 114-5w

Bourne End bypass 477w

Bowden, Mr Andrew
Questions
Retirement pensions, South Africa 427-8w
Social Security, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 310w

Bowden, Mr Gerald
Questions
Educational standards, Schools 117w
Gartcosh Steelworks, Factory closures 591w
Inner London Education Authority, Local government expenditure 185w
Local government reform, Local government finance 222-3w
Small businesses, Employment 303w

Boyes, Mr Roland
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Tyne & Wear 553w
Board & lodging charges, Tyne & Wear 740w
Business statement 579, 1218
Members facilities, Computers 16
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Research finance 11
Strategic defence initiative, Technical Assistance 560w
Turkey, Political prisoners 191w
Washington Development Corporation, Public appointments 729w

Boyson, Dr Rhodes, Minister of State for Northern Ireland
Questions
Agriculture, Northern Ireland 266-7w
Building industry, Belfast 454w
Building industry, Northern Ireland 42w, 186w
Fishing gear 579w
Northern Ireland Office, Civil service manpower 41w
Youth training scheme, Northern Ireland 41w

Bradford
Ministers domestic visits 651w
Slum clearance 565
Textile industry 1063

Braine, Rt Hon Sir Bernard
Questions
Food additives, Food standards 486w
Road accidents, A127 295-6w

Brakes
Asbestos 407w

Brandon-Bravo, Mr Martin M
Debates etc
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 276
Questions
Emergency planning, Local government staff 456w

Bray, Dr Jeremy
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1273, 1300-1
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 695-6
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 64-7
Questions
Business statement 1217
CERN, UK contributions 145
Exchange rates, Interest rates 1198
Iron & steel, Exports 1060

Breach of contract
Hospital consultants 699w

Bread
Prices 551-2w

Breast cancer
Public petitions (17.01.86) 1345
Screening 78w, 432w, 571-2

Breast Cancer Screening Working Party 78w

Breathalysers 583w
Christmas 567-8w
Road accidents 481w

Brewing industry
Public houses 136w

Bridge of Don 61w, 162w

Bright, Mr Graham
Questions
EC internal trade 1072

British Aerospace (13.01.86) 870-8
Defence contracts 98-9w
Dockyards 718w
Ministers correspondence 918-9, 922
Profitability 156
Westland helicopters 592w, 724w, 918-9, 920-1, 922, 1204-5

British Airports Authority
Privatisation (16.01.86) 1239

British Airways
Privatisation 580w, 733w
Stolport 408w
Unfair competition 733w

British citizenship 714w, 715w
Immigration appeals 8-9w

British Council 192w
Cultural relations 297
Finance 297

British Dental Association 125w
Trade unions 125w

British dependent territories
European Court of Human Rights 736w

British embassies
Costs 366w
South Africa 196w
USSR 366w

British Film Institute
Film industry 35-8w
Government grants 35-8w

British Gas Corporation
Consumer protection 6-7
Licensing 6, 10-1
Pension funds 9
Privatisation 5-6, 6-7, 9, 10-1, 27-8w, 30w, 634w
Shares 5-6, 27w
Tax yields 123w
Trades Union Congress 30w

British Geological Survey
Keyworth 17

British Library
Construction, Specific cases 35w

British Medical Association
Skoal Bandits 432w

British national (overseas) (16.01.86) 1268-304

British nationality (16.01.86) 1268-304

British Rail
Railway travel 477w

British residents abroad
Arab States 192w, 203w
India 639-40w
Prisoners 473w

British Shipbuilders 587w
Privatisation 72w
Warships 724w

British Steel Corporation 587w
Pay 449w
Privatisation 1059
Public appointments 449w

British Telecom
Price increases 589w

British Veterinary Association 613w

Brittan, Rt Hon Leon, Secretary of State for Trade & Industry
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 1R (18.12.85) 346
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 938-48, 949, 952-3
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1111, 1155, 1159-65
Westland helicopters, Ministerial statements (16.12.85) 35-46, (13.01.86) 777-89, 870-4
Questions
Employment schemes, Government grants 179-83w
Financial services 1057
Financial services, Securities & Investment Board 1057
Financial Services Bill 1985/86, Members interests 1058
Industrial development 585w
Lloyds of London, Inquiries 1069
Lloyds of London, Members interests 1057-8, 1069-70

Patent Office, Non-departmental public bodies 453-4w
Securities & Investment Board, Self-regulatory system 245w
Strategic defence initiative, Intellectual property 184w
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 592w, 724w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 452w
Westland helicopters, Foreign investment in UK 451w
Westland helicopters, Merchant banks 451w
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 724w

Brixton Prison 342w, 458w
Body searches 342w, 458w
Prisoners rights 342w
Security 342w
Women 342w

Broadcasting licences
Community radio 713-4w

Broadcasting programmes 130w

Bromley Health Authority (20.12.85) 738-44
Hospital hygiene services 601w

Brooke, Mr Peter, Minister of State at the Treasury
Questions
Betting & gaming duties, Bingo 143-4w
Car tax 1199
Car tax, Car industry 1198-9
Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 650w
Civil servants, Trade unions 720-2w
Civil service manpower, Fife 361w
Customs, Drug crimes 144-5w
Customs, Prosecutions 361w
Customs, Ships 144w
Customs officers, North East region 190w
Customs officers, Northern region 191w
Customs officers, Tyne & Wear 144w
Drug crimes, Northern Region 190w
EC budget, UK contributions 511w, 655w
EC Budget Council 48-9w
Export controls, Machine tools 361w
Free ports 649w
Indirect taxation, Family income 306-7w
Inflation 648w
Select committees, Publishing 652-4w
Shareholders, Investment in financial assets 1193
Shareholders, Privatisation 1194
Small investors, Industrial loan stocks 1194
Tax yields, Alcoholic drinks duties 361w
Tax yields, VAT zero rated goods 142w
Taxation, Lead free petrol 654-5w
UK repayments from EC budget 539-40w
VAT, EC countries 305-6w
VAT, Tax avoidance 654w
VAT, Tax evasion 648w
VAT threshold, Building industry 593w

Brown, Mr Gordon
Debates etc
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 538
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 32
Tin, Cornwall (18.12.85) 543
Questions
Child benefit 436w
Child benefit, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 318w
Civil service manpower, Fife 361w
Civil service manpower, Ministry of Defence 381w
Dockyards, Management 718w
Dockyards, Privatisation 718w
Family credit, Social security claims 435w
Family income supplement, Social security reform 596-7w
Family income supplements, Social security recipients 434w
Forth road bridge, Joint boards 723w
Forth road bridge, Road tolls 566w, 723w
Funerals, Death grants 316-7w
Funerals, Exceptional needs payments 436w
Handicap benefits, Social security reform 597-8w
Handicapped children, Mobility allowance 598-9w
Housing benefits, Costs 317w
Housing benefits, Expenditure 596w
Housing benefits, Rates & rating 317w, 319w
Housing benefits, Social security reform 596w, 597w, 696w
Income support scheme, Heating allowances 318w
Income support scheme, Housing benefits 318w
Income support scheme, Industrial disputes 599w
Income support scheme, Pensioners 317-8w, 741-2w
Income support scheme, Severe weather payments 318w
Income support scheme, Single people 741w
Income support scheme, Social security recipients 317-8w
Income support scheme, Unemployed 317-8w
Income support scheme, Unemployed 597w
Johnson Matthey, Banking supervision 649w
Johnson Matthey, Company finance 594w
Manufacturing industries, Regional development grants 332-4w
Means tested benefits, Social security reform 435-6w, 704-6w
Ministry of Defence, Early retirement 215-6w
Ministry of Defence, Fife 643w
National insurance benefits, Expenditure 439
"Reform of Social Security Consultation Paper" 598w
Rent rebates, Social security reform 596w
Severe weather payments 599-600w
Severe weather payments, Exceptional needs payments 71-2w
Social Fund, Finance 319w
Social Fund, Maternity benefits 599w
Social security benefits, Costs 596w
Social security benefits rules, Industrial disputes 318w
Social security reform 598w
Supplementary benefits, Carers 599w
Supplementary benefits, Costs 319w
Unemployment, Economic regions 638-9w
Water charges, Social security reform 597w
Westland helicopters 578w

Brown, Mr Michael
Questions
Action on smoking & health, Government grants 428w, 429w
Africa, Democracy 208w
Angola, Peace negotiations 133w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Action on Smoking & Health 429w
Namibia, Political parties 133w
Namibia, Racial discrimination 205w
NHS, Recruitment 503w
Office of Fair Trading, Cash limits 244w
Smoking, Hospitals 503w
Smoking, Public buildings 502w

Brown, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
Legal Advice & Assistance Regulations 1985 (19.12.85) 657-9
Questions
Fraud investigation group, Manpower 768
Regional aid, Northern region 1065

Brown, Mr Robert C
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 788, 873
Questions
Middle east, Peace negotiations 193w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence contracts 913
Sewers, Water authorities 571-2w
Water authorities, External financing limits 730-2w
Water authorities, Finance 572w

Brown, Mr Ron
Questions
Afghanistan, Foreign policy 204w
Teachers, Scotland 64-5w

Browne, Mr John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 985, 1001-3
Questions
International economic relations, Exchange rates 1202

Bruce, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc
Fuel poverty (16.12.85) 133
Low incomes, Heating allowances (16.12.85) 133
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 95-9
Questions
A92, Expenditure 162w
A92, Road works 61w
Bank of England, Banking supervision 1191-2
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 6-7
Farm incomes 281w
Industrial energy prices, Electricity area boards 13
Strategic defence initiative, Defence expenditure 560w

Brucellosis
Cattle diseases 284w
Slaughterhouses 283w

Bruinvels, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1237
Motorways, Lighting (18.12.85) 383-5
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 797
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 330
Questions
Bus lanes, Millbank 559w
Business statement 579, 1221
Civil & Public Services Association 31w
Drinking & driving, Christmas 567-8w
Drinking & driving, Convictions 132w
Drinking & driving, Publicity 583w
Fire prevention, Electric lighting 175w
Housing design, Crime prevention 175w
Ministers visits abroad, Gulf states 587-8w
Motorways, Leicestershire 477w
M25, Construction costs 44w
Nicaragua, Coffee 284
Northern Ireland Office, Oral questions 65-6w
Nursing homes, Licensing 79-80w
Police, Leicestershire 455w
Police, Manpower 456w
Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 265w, 553w, 627w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Northern Ireland 554w
Railway transport, Electric power 297w
Road accidents, Drinking & driving 112w
Road accidents, Motorways 112w
Road construction, Road works 756
Shops Bill (HL) 1985/86 547-8w
Smith houses, Defective housing 254-5w
Teachers appraisal 152
10 Downing Street, Security 271w
Terrorism, Sentencing 553w
Unemployment, Parliamentary constituencies 125w

Brunei 628w
Heads of state 629w

Bryan, Sir Paul
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1087

Buchanan-Smith, Rt Hon Alick, Minister of State for Energy
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 10-1, 27-8w, 634w
British Gas Corporation, Tax yields 123w
Continental shelf, Orders & regulations 30w
Energy consumption, fuels 124w
Gas tariffs, Privatisation 30w
Lead free petrol, Capital investment 634-5w
Lead free petrol, Costs 635w
Lead free petrol, Energy consumption 635w
North Sea oil, Technical assistance 250w

Offshore drilling, Energy research 26-7w
Oil exports, North Sea oil 28w
Oil imports, Iran 249-50w
Oil reserves, Oil recovery 13-4
Oil rigs, Manpower 248-9w
Petroleum exploration 26w
Standing charges, Gas fuels 124-5w

Buck, Sir Antony
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 39
Questions
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 907

Budapest Cultural Forum 208w

Budgen Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 306
Members interests (17.12.85) 220
Questions
Butter, Food surpluses 279w
Cereals, Production quotas 558
Fraud, Criminal investigation 253-4w
UNESCO, Overseas aid 241w

Budget
USA 648w

Building industry
Belfast 454w
Black economy 593w
Complaints 570-1w
Death 52-4w
Glasgow 482w
Health & Safety Executive 52w
Industrial injuries 79w
Injuries 52-4w
Labour only sub-contracting 42w, 52w
Latent damage 766
Liability 766
Liverpool 491-2w
Merseyside 491-2w
Northern Ireland 42w, 186w
Scotland 61w
Self-employed 186w, 399w
Strathclyde 482w
Tax exemption certificates 50w
Unemployment 454w
VAT threshold 593w

Building land
Defence land 916-7
Playing fields 285w, 286w

Building regulations
Energy efficiency 8
Energy efficiency year 13w
Greater London 13-4w
Insulation 8

Building repairs
Leeds General Infirmary 154w

Building societies
Company registration 143w
Takeovers 142-3w

Building Societies Bill 1985/86
2R (19.12.85) 592-653
Money res* (19.12.85) 653
Ways & means res* (19.12.85) 653

"Burdens on Business" 55w, 56w
Costs 55w

Bureaucracy
Inland Revenue 308w
Inland tax assessment 308w
Small businesses 55-6w

Burnham Committee 119w
Pay settlements 119w

Bury
Armed forces deployment 96w
Armed forces strength 522-3w

Bus crews
Codes of practice 757-8
Driving instruction 758

Bus fares
Price increases 759-60
South Yorkshire 759-60

Bus lanes
Millbank 559w

Buses
Motor vehicle safety 476w
Speed governors 476w, 757-8

Business education
Curriculum 123w
Universities 335w

Business expansion scheme 141w, 652w
Bed & breakfast accommodation 651w
Industrial investment 141w
Scotland 652w

Business on own account scheme 550w

Business question time intervention (19.12.85) 581

Business questions
Speakers rulings & statements (16.01.86) 1223, 1224

Business statement 573-82, (13.01.86) 774-6, 1214-24
Members interests (17.12.85) 176-7
Speakers rulings & statements (13.01.86) 774, 775

Butcher, Mr John Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry*
Questions
Advertising, Dept of Trade & Industry 23w
Advertising agencies, Dept of Trade & Industry 21-3w
Industrial production 632w
Iron & steel industry, Industrial production 24-5w
Tobacco, Retail trade 138-9w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 137w

Butler, Rt Hon Sir Adam
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1118, 1127-30

Butter
Food surpluses 279w
Import quotas 210w
Imports 280w
Intervention stocks 351w, 483-4w, 487w
New Zealand 210w, 280w

Butterfill, Mr John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 941, 981, 984, 1003-4
Questions
Tax yields, Industrial building allowances 360w
Teachers, Pay 1203

By election writs
Antrim, East (17.12.85) 139
Antrim, North (17.12.85) 140
Antrim, South (17.12.85) 140
Belfast, East (17.12.85) 140
Belfast, North (17.12.85) 140
Belfast, South (17.12.85) 140
Fermanagh & South Tyrone (17.12.85) 139
Lagan Valley (17.12.85) 139
Londonderry, East (17.12.85) 139
Mid-Ulster (17.12.85) 139
Newry & Armagh (17.12.85) 140
North Down (17.12.85) 140
South Down (17.12.85) 140
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 139
Strangford (17.12.85) 140
Upper Bann (17.12.85) 140

Bypasses
A41 477w
Scotland 61-2w

Cabinet
Channel crossing 759

Cabinet committees
Westland helicopters 1206

Caborn, Mr Richard
Debates etc
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 300
Questions
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service recruitment 153w
Economic growth, Regional planning & development 586w
School leaving, Educational qualifications 122w
Social security claims, Home visits 415w
Social security recipients, Sheffield 229w
South Africa, EC external relations 195w
South Africa, Economic sanctions 293
Tactical nuclear weapons, NATO 562-3w

Callaghan, Rt Hon James
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 787, (15.01.86) 1107-14

Callaghan, Mr Jim
Questions
Food standards, Irradiation 310w
Industrial development 585w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w

Calling of members
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 142, 249, (18.12.85) 345, (19.12.85) 568, (20.12.85) 696, (15.01.86) 1130, (16.01.86) 1221

Cammell Laird 642w
Defence procurement 912
Submarines 911

Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament
Air force 213w

Campbell-Savours, Mr D N
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 164
Business question time intervention (19.12.85) 581
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 396
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1209
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 940, 982-7, 1011, 1012
Members interests (17.12.85) 237-40
Members interests, Liberal party (18.12.85) 345
Oral question time intervention (13.01.86) 767
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 288
Recess motions, Christmas (18.12.85) 392
Unemployment (18.12.85) 373
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 42, (13.01.86) 786, (15.01.86) 1164
Questions
Agricultural Development & Advisory Service, Civil service manpower 279-80w
Associated British Foods, Company accounts 243w
Associated British Foods, IRA 252w
Business statement 578
Falkland Islands, EC external relations 192w
Fayed, Mohammed 628w
Industrial energy prices, Temperature 13
Members interests 16
Prime Minister, Gifts 628w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 1197
Regional aid, Northern region 1066
Type 23 Frigates 914

Canada
Double taxation 103w, 307-8w

Canary Wharf
London docklands railway 755

Canavan, Mr Dennis
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1348, 1350
Questions
Balance of trade, Manufactured goods 587w
Fraud, Johnson Matthey 510w
Intervention stocks, Food surpluses 1w
South Africa, Foreign policy 195w

Cancer
EC action 584w

Health services 501w
Medical treatments (13.01.86) 898-904, (15.01.86) 1183-90
North East Thames Regional Health Authority 501w

Cancer hazards
Radiation hazards 698w

Capenhurst
Nuclear safeguards 29w

Captial gains tax 48w
Tax yields 360w

Capital investment
Coal mining 2
District health authorities 507w
Government grants to local authorities 21w
Health services finance 326w
Lead free petrol 634-5w
Mersey Regional health authority 149-52w
Oil industry 248w
Power industry 248w
Scottish health boards 164-6w
Wales 332w
Welsh Development Agency 615-6w

Capital punishment
Terrorism 553w

Car industry
Car tax 1198-9
Employment 1199
Foreign companies in UK 1062
Motor vehicle parts 1061

Cardiac surgery 238w

Cardiff
Company liquidations 451w

Cardiff West 565w
Shops 565w

Careers development 712w
University teachers 712w

Carers
Supplementary benefits 599w

Carlile, Mr Alex
Debates etc
Legal Advice & Assistance Regulations 1985 (19.12.85) 656, 659-60
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 796-7, 821, 827, 828, 833, 849-52
Questions
Agricultural Development & Advisory Service, Income 280-1w

Carlisle, Mr John
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1233
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 799-800, 805-6
Questions
Business statement 1218
South Africa, African National Congress 285
South Africa, Funerals 196w
Traffic lights, Costs 111-2w

Carlisle, Mr Kenneth
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1029
Questions
Companies 588w
Companies, Privatisation 647-8w
Privatisation, Share ownership 1059

Carlisle, Rt Hon Mark
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1237-8
Juries (18.12.85) 418-9
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 812-5

Cars
Road accidents 481w

Carter-Jones, Mr Lewis
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 174
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 31
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 63-4
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 40, (13.01.86) 781
Questions
Diet & disease, Medical research 78w
Educational psychology, Local government staff 338w
Educational psychology, Professional qualifications 337-8w
Hospital patients, Trauma 158w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 698w
Medical research, Trauma 38w
South Africa, Violence 285-6
Spectacles, Costs 433w
Spectacles, Prescriptions 433w
Vaccination, Publicity 78-9w

Cartwright, Mr John
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 318
Questions
Armed forces catering services, Armed forces civilians 373w
Armed forces catering services, Hospital catering 373w
Community radio, Broadcasting licences 713-4w
Dartford tunnel, Private sector 762
House purchase, Housing Defects Act 1984 103-4w
Libyan Arab Republic, USA 1205-6
Local government revenue, Greenwich 661w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 291
Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital, Armed forces catering services 373w
Queen Elizabeth Military hospital, Contract catering 373w, 374w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Elections 259w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Local government reform 259w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Local government staff 728-9w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Offices 729w

Cash, Mr William
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 637-8
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 307
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 445-464
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 966-7, 1008
Juries (18.12.85) 421
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 795
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1129, 1132-3
Questions
Business education, Curriculum 123w
Competition, European communities 591-2w
Exports, Iron & steel 1068
Police authorities, Local government expenditure 173w

Cash limit
Legal costs 635w
Office of Fair Trading 244w
Wales 619w

Castleford
Coal mining 126w
Manufacturing industries 126w

Cattle
Animal feed 541-2w
Drug research 283w

Cattle diseases
Apralan 283w
Brucellosis 284w

Central America
Debts 200w
EC external relations 191w
EC aid 448-50w
USA 205w

Central Blood Laboratories Authority 416w

Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 650w

Central Council for Agricultural & Horticultural Cooperation 483-4w

Cereals
Agricultural land 554-5
Agricultural production 276w, 561
Agricultural subsidies 551-2w
Agricultural surpluses 276w, 553-4
Co-responsibility levy 558
EC action 276w
Export credit guarantees 242-3w
Intervention stocks 1w, 283w, 551w, 554, 557
Prices 555, 557, 558, 561
Production quotas 554-5, 557, 558, 561
Weather 558

CERN
UK contributions 145

Cervical cancer
Administrative delays 325w, 500w, 501w, 699w
Computer applications 569-70, 699w
Departmental circulars 238-9w
District health authorities 570-1
Mid Glamorgan 616-7w
Per capita costs 572
Screening 239w, 324-5w, 439w, 500w, 501w, 569-70, 570-1, 572, 616w, 617w, 618w, 699w, 737-8w
Teaching hospitals 571
Wales 616w, 617w, 618w

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House
Debates etc
Amendments & new clauses (16.12.85) 107, 114
Scope of debate (16.12.85) 107, 111, 122, 123

Chalker, Mrs Lynda, Minister of State for Transport (Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from 10 Jan 1986)
Debates etc
Drinking & driving (18.12.85) 514-21
Questions
Asbestos, Brakes 407w
A19, Road works 297w
A40, Construction costs 44w
A45, Road traffic 295w
Cancer, EC action 584w
Dartford tunnel, Road construction 111w
Drinking and driving 406w
Leighton Linslade bypass, Government grants 112w
Lesotho, South Africa 923-4
Local government reform, Department of Transport 47-8w
Motor vehicle safety, EC law 111w
Motor vehicle safety, Space saver spare wheels 298w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 42w
Motorways, Noise insulation grants 407w
Motorways, Road traffic 45-6w, 297w
Motorways, Safety barriers 167w
M1, Road construction 406w
M25, Construction costs 44w
M25, Fog 43w
M25, Road construction 406w
M25, Road traffic 405-6w
Pedestrian areas, Local government reform 111w
Rear seat belts 345w
Road accidents, Drinking and driving 112w
Road accidents, Motorway 112w
Road construction, Public inquiries 43w
Road freight transport, Hazardous wastes 45w
Road freight transport, Road accidents 45w
Road humps, Road traffic control 405w
Road safety, Lorries 46w
Road signs, Motorways 42-3w
Road signs, Tourist attractions 345w
Space saver spare wheels, Motor vehicle safety 111w, 405w
Traffic lights, Costs 111-2w
Woolwich ferry, Local government reform 406-7w

Channel crossing 475w, 630w, 920
Cabinet 759

Channel ferries 535-6w, 765
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 395-414
Environmental impact assessment 15w
Hazards 630w
Income 345w
Investor protection 764-5
Lighting 759
Lorries 113w
Motor vehicles 478-80w
Nature Conservancy Council 15w
North of England Regional Consortium 759
Passengers 478-80w
Private investment 764-5
Railway freight transport 476w
Road accidents 765
Road traffic 345w, 475-6w
Shipping 475w
Transport costs 475w
Travel 475w

Channel ferries
Channel crossing 535-6w, 765
Defence 535-6w
NATO 765

Channel tunnel
Accidents 758
Driving (18.12.85) 395-414
Environment protection 758
Road traffic 475-6w
Safety 758-9
Ventilation 758-9
Wars 520w

Channon, Rt Hon Paul, Minister of State for Trade
Debates etc
Tin, Cornwall (18.12.85) 541-3
Questions
Antidumping, Evidence 589-90w
Arms trade, South America 589w
Balance of trade, Japan 590w
Balance of trade, Manufactured goods 452-3w, 587w
Cereals, Export credit guarantees 242-3w
Company liquidations, Ultraleisure 449-50w
Competition, European communities 591-2w
Export credit guarantees, Ecuador 1060-1
Export Credits Guarantee Department, Financial targets 1061
Export promotion, Data banks 587w
Export promotion, Government grants 1060
Export promotion, Turkey 1060
Exports, Wealth 1061
Iron & steel, USSR 1065
Manufactured goods, EC trade 453w
Ministers visits abroad, Gulf states 587-8w
Multifibre arrangement 24w, 588w, 1062-3, 1064
Multifibre arrangement, EC action 184w
Multifibre arrangement, Hong Kong 1063
Multifibre arrangement, Textile industry 1063-4
Overseas trade, Iran 331-2w
Overseas trade, Japan 590w
Overseas trade, Romania 585w
Overseas trade, Service industries 1073-4
Overseas trade, South Africa 1074
Overseas trade, USSR 590w, 1064-5
Soft loans, Aid financed trade 585w
Technology transfer, USSR 1065
Trade promotion, China 1073
Wood, Imports 332w

Chapman, Mr Sydney
Debates etc
Urban areas (20.12.85) 709-12
Questions
Agricultural land, Land use 558-9
Balance of trade, Japan 590w
Civil servants, Greater London 48w
Coal mining, Productivity 717w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 190w
Liability, Building industry 766
Non-departmental public bodies 109w
Nuclear test ban 197w
Oil reserves, Oil recovery 13-4
Private rented housing, Judgments 464w
Road construction "Fairer & Faster Route to Major Road Construction" 756
Teachers, Industrial disputes 146

Charities (18.12.85) 365-71
Private education 50w

Cheese
Milk 553

Chemical industries
Sugar 279w

Chemical weapons 196w
Defence research 462w
Early warning systems 462w

Chemists shops
Prescriptions 428w

Chequers
Official hospitality 264w

Chester
Regional aid 1067

Chief Adjudication Officer 497w

Chief constables
Greater Manchester 565

Chief Nursing Officer 95w

Child benefit 436w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 318w
Scotland 72-3w

Child care
Education welfare officers 185w
Government grants to local authorities 119w
Ministerial responsibility 552w
School meals 38w, 119w, 141-2
Teachers 144
Training 185w

Child health 237-8w
Medical research 602w
Social class 602w

Child patients
Hospital wards 284w
Mental hospitals 702w
Wales 284w

Children
Children in care 82w
Ex-servicemen 906
Kidnapping (20.12.85) 725-30
Nigeria (20.12.85) 725-30
Outpatients 108w

Children in care (17.01.86) 1405-9
Children 82w

Chile
Arms embargoes 199w
Diplomatic service 298
Human rights 200w, 473-4w
Military vehicles 298
Political prisoners 474w
United Nations 473-4w

China
Soft loans 585w, 1073
Trade promotion 1073

Chocolate
Food labelling 557

Chope, Mr Christopher
Questions
Marginal tax rates, Average earnings 1194
Philippines, Ministers visits abroad 198w

Christmas
Arab states 203w
Breathalysers 567-8w
Drinking & driving 567-8w

Christmas Island 609w
Nuclear weapons tests 609w

Church of England
Inner city areas 521w

Churchill, Mr Winston
Questions
Greater London Council, Local government reform 564

Cinemas (Safety) Regulations 1985 8w

City of London
Financial institutions 360w
Fraud 135-6w, 153, 155-6, 360w, 568-9w, 1191, 1192-3
Invisible trade balance 1192

City & Guilds of London Institute 118w
Vocational education 118w

Civil Aviation Authority (16.01.86) 1239

Civil defence
Alley, Eric 177-8w
Communication 7-8w
Emergency planning 523w
Government grants 272-3w, 292-3w
Government grants to local authorities 9w, 272w, 273w, 293w, 483w
Local authorities 177-8w
Local authorities in Scotland 293w
Local government expenditure 9w
Local government services 9w
Police authorities 272w
Scotland 292-3w, 483w
Training 272w

Civil disorder (13.01.86) 792-869
Compensation 131w
Haringey 343w
Metropolitan Police 172-3w, 343w
Police training 172-3w
Public order policing 919
Street lighting 173w
Tottenham 919

Civil servants
Department of Employment 18
Department of Health & Social Security 18, 19-20
Department of Health & Social Security local offices 497w
Disclosure of information 520w
Greater London 48w
House of Commons Select Committees 628w
Leave 7-2w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 19-20
10 Downing Street 18-9
Trade unions 720-2w
Westland helicopters 1206
Work study 17-8

Civil servants secondment
"Faith in the City" 521w
Strategic defence initiative 160w

Civil service
Scotland 18
Trade unions 31w

Civil service dispersal
Research 585-6w

Civil service manpower
Agricultural Development & Advisory Service 279-80w
Defence Select Committee 641w
Dept of Health & Social Security 414-6w, 595w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 322w, 496w
DHSS local offices 509w
Fife 361w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 640w
Local government reform 11-2w, 15w, 24w, 47-8w, 49-50w, 258w
Ministry of Defence 381w
Northern Ireland Office 41w
Nuclear test ban 366w
Scottish Office 161w
Welsh Office 284w

Civil service recruitment
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 153w, 496w
Diplomatic service 297-8
Equal opportunities officers 31w

Civil service redundancies
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 496w

Civil & Public Services Association 31w

Civilian Pay Records Office 523w

Clark, Mr Alan, Under-Secretary of State for Employment
Questions
Aerospace industry, Manpower 636-7w
Average earnings, Men 300-1w
Building industry, Labour only subcontracting 52w
Building industry, Liverpool 491-2w
Coal mining, Barnsley 53w
Community programme 51w
Community programme, Ex-servicemen 637-8w
Community programme, Finance 637w
Community programme, Training allowances 398w
Community programme, Vacancies 303w
Community programme, Voluntary organisations 398w
Community programme, Working hours 303w
Employment, Inner city areas 397w
Employment, Manufacturing industries 398w
Employment, Welwyn Hatfield 399w
Employment schemes, Newham 51w
Employment schemes, Vocational training 186w
Employment schemes, Wolverhampton 186w
Industrial training schemes, Tameside 125w
Job creation schemes, South East region 299-300w
Kirkby Victims Support Scheme, Government grants to voluntary organisations 187w
Manual workers, Low pay 726w
Manufacturing industries, Castleford 126w
Part-time employment 51w
Prices, Retail prices index 362w
Self-employed, Building industry 399w
Self-employed, Ethnic groups 399w
Self-employed, Statistics 299w
Unemployment 549w, 639w
unemployment, Copeland 188w
Unemployment, Economic regions 301-2w, 638-9w
Unemployment, Graduates 397w
Unemployment, Handicapped workers 725w
Unemployment, Littleborough 566-8w
Unemployment, Liverpool 492-3w
Unemployment, Norwood 728w
Unemployment, Parliamentary constituencies 125w
Unemployment, Wandsworth 398-9w
Unemployment benefit offices, Stockport 639w
Unemployment benefits, Administrative delays 397w
Unemployment benefits, Social security abuse 300w
Unemployment benefits, Welwyn Hatfield 397w
Youth employment, School leaving 726w

Clark, Dr David
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1034-7, 1047-8
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 259-62, 265
Questions
Brucellosis, Cattle diseases 284w
Brucellosis, Slaughterhouses 283w
Customs, Ships 144w
Customs officers, Tyne & Wear 144w
Housing insulation, Government grants to local authorities 263w
Nature Conservancy Council, Annual reports 17w
Okehampton bypass, Dept of the Environment 371w
Okehampton bypass, Dept of Transport 407w
Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981, Orders & regulations 14-5w

Clark, Dr Michael
Debates etc
Southend Hospital (15.01.86) 1183-6, 1187
Questions
Civil servants, Work study 17-8
Electricity generation, Nuclear power 4
Health education, Drug abuse 155-6w
Nuclear power stations, Construction 28w

Clark, Sir William
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 162
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 972-4
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 28
Questions
Taxation, UK companies abroad 510w

Clarke, Rt Hon Kenneth, Paymaster General
Questions
EC Labour & Social Affairs Council 188-9w

Clarke, Mr Tom
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1346-53, 1369, 1403-4
Members Fund (16.12.85) 129
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 197-9
Questions
British Steel Corporation, Public appointments 449w
Business statement 581-2
Health services finance, Scottish health boards 59w
Iron & steel, USSR 1065
Joint financing, Scotland 58w
Joint liaison committees, Scotland 59w
Lesotho, South Africa 924
South Africa, EC external relations 194-5w

Class sizes
Pupil-teacher ratios 116w
Schools 711w

Clawbacks 559
Sheep 559-60
Sheep meat 560

Cleaning services
NHS 427w

Clegg, Sir Walter
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1250-2

Clelland, David
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 829-31
Questions
Newcastle Airport, Immigration controls 273w

Cleveland
Regional aid 1066
Unemployment 1196-7

Clinical judgments 231w, 232w, 233w
NHS complaints 231w, 232w, 233w

Clinics
Artificial insemination 325w
Test tube babies 325w

Closed circuit television
Crime prevention 340w

Clothing
Nurses 234w

Clwyd, Mrs Ann
Questions
British Telecom, Price increases 589w
Cervical cancer, Screening 572
Electricity generation, Nuclear power 4-5
European Assembly, EC reform 200-1w
Iraq, Arms embargoes 735w
Iraq, Foreign relations 735-6w
Iraq, Human rights 736w
Iraq, Kurdistan 735w
Iraq, Political prisoners 735w
Margam mine, National Coal Board 14-5
Members allowances, Members staff 15
Nuclear weapons policy, Nuclear weapons deployment 915
Prime Minister official engagements 627w

Clwyd, Ann
Nuclear weapons policy 915

Coal
Exports 8-9

Coal firing scheme 27w
Boiler conversion scheme 27w

Coal mine closures (17.12.85) 175
Kinsley 7
National Coal Board 330w

Coal mining 28w
Barnsley 53w
Capital investment 2
Castleford 126w
Colliery review procedure 12-3
Conditions of employment 7
Death 250-1w
Fires 1205
Imports 8-9
Industrial disputes 14, 29w
Industrial health & safety 7
Industrial injuries 250-1w
Industrial relations 11-2, 12-3
Investment 9, 26w
Manpower 28w
Ministers domestic visits 1-2
Monktonhall Colliery 2-3
Musselburgh 2
National insurance contributions 14
Private investment 29w
Privatisation 6, 445w
Productivity 11-2, 26w, 717w
Redundancy 330w
Redundancy pay 247-8w
Redundant mineworkers payments scheme 12
Research 11
Scotland 1-2, 2-3
Trade competitiveness 9
Unemployment 26w
Working hours 7

Coal stocks
Road & rail transport comparisons 29w

Coastal shipping 762
EC action 762-3
EC countries 762, 763
Greece 763
Norway 762-3

Cockeram, Mr Eric
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 616-8
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 327
Questions
Outgoers scheme, Common agricultural policy 562

Codes of practice
Animal welfare 560
Association of Chief Police Officers 126-7w
Bus crews 757-8
Health Services Board 505w
Mergers 335w
Regional health authorities 319w
Residential care 604w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 42w, 269w
Takeovers 335w

Coffee
Haringey 284
Nicaragua 284

Cohabitation
Illegitimate children 153w
Invalid care allowances 701w
Single people 153w

Cohen, Mr Harry
Debates etc
Cruelty to Animals (Amendment) Bill 1R (15.01.86) 1078-81
Housing, Waltham Forest (20.12.85) 717-20, 721-2
Nuclear weapons policy (18.12.85) 380-3
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 793
Questions
Animal experiments 173-4w
Bank of England, Financial institutions 359w
Bank of England, Own resources 359w
Breast cancer, Screening 78w

Broadcasting programmes 130w
Complaints against the police, Jarrett, Floyd 131w
Complaints against the police, Parsons, Mark 131w
Data protection tribunal, Public appointments 130w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Personal records 497w
Electoral register, Disclosure of information 128w
Electoral register, Metropolitan Police 128w
Electoral register, Police 128w
Food standards, Nutrition & health 277-8w
Groce, Cherry, Police firearms 130w
L9A1 gas spray guns 211w
Makenjuola, Adebola, Sexual offences 252w
Metropolitan Police, Rewards 7w
M25, Fog 43w
Police, Computers 130w
Police, Scotland 352w
Police equipment, Riot control weapons 129-30w
Prison accommodation 7w
Residential care of children, Northern Ireland 134-5w
Social security recipients, Leytonstone 69w

Coinage
Commonwealth Games 592w

Coleman, Mr Donald
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.1.85) 336-7

Collective warship 708w

College closures
Jordanhill College of Education 294w

Colliery review procedure 9, 12, (17.12.85) 175
Coal mining 12-3

Collyear Committee 633w

Colombia
Disaster relief 283-4

Colvin, Mr Michael
Questions
Brewing industry, Public houses 136w
British Library, Construction, specific cases 35w
Channel crossing, Channel ferries 765
Channel crossing, Shipping 475w
Common agricultural policy, EC reform 561
Defence procurement, Warships 914
Social security payments, Post Office 228w

Commercial bills 362w
Bank of England 362w

Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis 546w, 559w

Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy 121w

Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment 744-6w
Atomic Weapons Research Establishment 744-6w
Royal ordnance factories 744-6w

Common agricultural policy
Agricultural surpluses 551w
Crops 2w
EC Agricultural Council 351-2w
EC reform 278w, 561
Environment protection 282w
Outgoers scheme 562

Common fisheries policy (16.01.86) 1240-67
EC Fisheries Council 282w

Common sheep meat regime 560

Common sugar regime
Raw materials 279w

Commonwealth
Economic sanctions 294-5
UNESCO 179w

Commonwealth Games
Coinage 592w

Communication
Civil defence 7-8w

Community care
Hospital discharges 236-7w

Community policing
Elderly 155

Community programme 51w
Exservicemen 637-8w
Finance 637w
Training allowances 398w
Training grants 52w
Vacancies 303w
Voluntary organisations 398w
Working hours 303w

Community radio (18.12.85) 378-80, 625w
Broadcasting licences 713-4w
Ethnic minorities 625w

Commuters
Hertfordshire 409w
Railway transport 409w

Companies 588w
Dockyards 718w
Government grants 723-4w
Loan guarantee scheme 301-2w
Manchester Airport 169w
North West region 723-4w
Privatisation 647-8w
Spectacles 326-7w
Training allowances 727-8w
Tristan da Cunha 33w, 364w

Companies Act 1985 25w

Company accounts
Associated British Foods 243w
Johnson Matthey 1068-9
Small businesses 243w

Company finance
Agusta 533w
Government shareholding 647-8w
Johnson Matthey 594w
Rolls-Royce 590w
Westland helicopters 137w, 347w, 452w, 515w, 518-9w, 534w

Company law
Law reform 136-7w

Company liquidations
Cardiff 451w
Enterprise allowance scheme 57w
Inquiries 25w
Investor protection 1073
Ultraleisure 449-50w
WG Allen 1073

Company registration
Building Societies 143w
Fees & charges 136w

Company taxation
USA 510w

Compensation
Civil disorder 131w
Land reclamation 463w
Lothian Estates 717w
National Coal Board 717w
Sexual offences 270-1w
Vaccine damaged children 157w

Competition
European communities 591-2w

Complaints
Building industry 570-1w

Complaints against police
Jarrett, Floyd 131w
Metropolitan Police 344w
Parsons, Mark 131w
Public petitions (20.12.85) 671-2

Computer applications
Cervical cancer 569-70, 699w
Family practitioner committees 737-8w
Strategic defence initiative 910-1
Transplant surgery 698w

Computer privacy
Electoral register 128w

Computers
Doctors 77-8w
Members facilities 16
Police 130w, 352w

Computers in government departments 650w

Concert halls
Arts Council grants 304-5w
Merseyside 304-5w

Concessionary fares
Handicapped 478w
London boroughs 478w

Conditions of employment
Coal mining 7
EC law 552w
Hospital consultants 312w
Industrial arbitration 1206-7
Management 381w
Scientific civil service 16-7
Teachers 1203

Confederation of British Industry
Average earnings 585w
Financial services 1057

Conflict of interests 161w, 163w
Scottish health boards 161w
Scottish health board 161w, 163w

Conlan, Mr Bernard
Questions
Freedom of expression, Prosecutions 152
Motor vehicle safety, Space saver spare wheels 298w

Consolidated Fund Bill 1985/86 (17.12.85) 258
1R (17.12.85) 258
2R and rem stages* (18.12.85) 393-4
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Consolidated Fund debates
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 395-414
Copyright (18.12.85) 522-30
Drinking & driving (18.12.85) 508-21
Fraud (18.12.85) 433-72
Immigration controls (18.12.85) 494-507
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 531-8
Juries (18.12.85) 415-32
Low pay (18.12.85) 473-93
Tin (18.12.85) 539-43

Construction
Hospitals 266w, 554-6w
London docklands railway 755
Naval bases 97w
Nuclear power stations 28w

Construction costs
A40 44w
European Economic Community 463-4w
Hospitals 234-6w
M1 44w
M25 44w

Construction, Specific cases
British Library 35w

Consultants
Personal social services 323-4w
Social security 323-4w

Consultation papers 228-9w
Air pollution 259w
Hospital closures 228-9w
Pollution control 259w

Consumer organisations
Energy Efficiency Year 331w

Consumer protection (13.01.86) 790
British Gas Corporation 6-7
Public utilities 590-1w

Contadora Group 191w, 205w
EC external relations 191w
USA 205w

Continental shelf
Orders & regulations 30w

Contract catering 373w, 374w
Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital 373w, 374w

Contracts
Insurance (20.12.85) 673-80
Ministry of Defence 247w
Trident 562w

Contracts for services
Disclosure of information 702w
District health authorities 155w, 508w
Health services 236w
NHS 385-96w, 436-8w, 702w
Scottish health boards 293-4w, 482w
Termination of employment 155w

Contracts of employment
Hospital consultants 312w

Conventional war
Falkland Islands 522w

Convictions
Drinking & driving 132w

Conway, Mr Derek
Questions
Higher education, Student numbers 117w
Territorial Army & Volunteer Revenue 916

Coombs, Mr Simon
Questions
Energy consumption, Fuels 124w
Food labelling, Nutrition & health 556
Housing Corporation, Finance 262w
Power industry, Capital investment 248w
Road construction, Public inquiries 43w

Cooperatives
Employment opportunities 719w
Food From Britain 483-4w
Wales 719w

Copeland
Unemployment 188w

Copyright
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 522-30
Publishing 1067-8
Recording equipment 592w
Television programmes 24w

Corbett, Mr Robin
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 41
Questions
Civil defence, Government grants to local authorities 9w
Civil defence, Local government expenditure 9w
Civil defence, Local government services 9w
Counterfeit manufacturing 592w

Corbyn, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc
Arts finance, Local government reform (20.12.85) 733
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 308
Immigration control (18.12.85) 494-9, 502, 504, 507
Low pay (18.12.85) 491
Pensioners Right to Heat, Light & Communications Bill, 1R (18.12.85) 347-9
Questions
Armed forces training, El Salvador 525w
Armed forces training, Morocco 212w
British Gas Corporation, Tax yields 123w
Central America, EC aid 448-50w
Chile, Human rights 473-4w
District health authorities, Contracts for services 155w
Entry clearances, Dacca 624w
Honduras, Defence 473w
Honduras, Development aid 448w
Honduras, Refugees 207-8w
Hospital closures, NHS finance 503w
Hospital waiting lists, Greater London 558w
Hospital waiting lists, Surgery 155w
Immigrant detainees, Indian subcontinent 623-4w
Immigrants, Bangladesh 625w
Immigration controls 625w
Immigration controls, Bangladesh 623-4w
Imports, Morocco 138w
Industrial development 584-5w
Lembach, Pedro Fernandez, Political prisoners 474w
Middlesex Hospital, Hospital closures 155w
Morocco, Arms trade 134w
Morocco, Resources exploration 134w
Phosphates, Imports 184-5w
Primary health care 155w
Standing charges, Gas fuels 124-5w
Visas, Bangladesh 624w
Visas, Foreign tourists 132w
Visas, Sri Lanka 132w, 624w
Western Sahara, Recognition of states 133-4w

Cormack, Mr Patrick
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 776
Criminal Records Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1405-7
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1347
Members interests (17.12.85) 227, 228
Oral question time intervention (13.01.86) 767
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 322
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 785, 873
Questions
Business statement 1214-5
Teachers, Industrial disputes 144

Corneal Tissue Bill 1985/86
2R* (17.01.86) 1410

Cornish unit houses 331-2w
Defective housing 331-2w
Wales 331-2w

Cornwall
Tin (18.12.85) 539-43

Coronary bypass operations 238w
Hospital waiting lists 325w

Coroners 547w

Corporation tax
Small businesses 141w
Tax yields 359w

Corrie, Mr John
Questions
Hill livestock allowances, Scotland 294-5w
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Upper Waiting Hall 250w
Sea transport, Scottish Islands 163w

Cost benefit analysis
Defence research 907

Cost effectiveness 263w, 298w, 325-6w, 372w, 374w, 517w, 564w, 583w, 642w, 743-4w
Defence 564w
Defence procurement 372w
District health authorities 600-1w, 743-4w
Industrial development 586w
Regional health authorities 325-6w
Westland helicopters 517w

Cost per pupil
Assisted places scheme 708w
Northern Ireland 554w
Nursery schools 707-9w
Primary education 707-9w
Schools 708w

Couchman, Mr James
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 776
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1234-5

Council house sales 259-60w
Welwyn Hatfield 463w

Council house waiting lists 465w
Waiting lists 482w

Council housing
Costs 217w
Defective housing 103-4w
Empty housing 218-9w, 662w
Heating 719w
Rent arrears 257-60w
Waltham Forest (20.12.85) 717-24

Council housing finance 255-6w, 465-6w
Defective housing 465-6w

Council of Ministers
European Regional Development Fund 137-8w
Middle East 133w
Offices 463-4w
Order of Business 365w

Council of Scottish Agricultural Colleges 59-60w

Councillors
Metropolitan Police 459w

Counterfeit manufacturing 592w

County Hall 369w
Hypermarkets 369w
Local government reform 369w

County Palatine 329w
Magistrates 329w

Court of Appeal
Lee, Bruce 454w

Cox, Mr Tom
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1352, 1368, 1376-8
Questions
Dial-a-ride, Greater London 478w
Food surpluses, European Economic Community 277w
Housing finance, Greater London Council 216-8w
Overseas trade, USSR 1064-5
Prisoners, Petitions 4w
Sudan, Overseas aid 771-2

Co-responsibility levy 557, 560-1
Cereals 558
Milk 560-1

Craigen, Mr Jim
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 596, 627-9
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.12.85) 1347
Hospital closures, Ruchill Hospital (18.12.85) 377-8
Iron & steel industry, Glasgow (20.12.85) 697
Questions
Mental health services, Glasgow 615w
Shopping centres, Glasgow District Council 614-5w
Torture, Amnesty International 363-4w

Cranborne, Viscount
Debates etc
Afghanistan (20.12.85) 685
Questions
Business statement 1220
Occupational deafness, Marine engines 76w
Trade promotion, Marketing 298

Crayford School, Bexley 149
School closures 149

Cricklewood
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 694w
Social security claims 694w

Crime
Falkland Islands 32w
Law enforcement 457w
Statistics 457w

Crime prevention
Closed circuit television 340w
Housing design 175w
Street lighting 173w, 175w

Crimes of violence
European Assembly members 32-3w
Sentencing 341-2w
Women 127w, 275w

Criminal injuries compensation 131w
Rape 270-1w

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board
Government grants 271w
Manpower 271w

Criminal investigation
Armed forces officers 525w
Drug crimes (19.12.85) 591
Falkland Islands 32w
Fraud 252-3w, 253-4w, 568-9w, 766-7, 768

Criminal proceedings
Costs 713w
Crown courts 454-5w
Fraud 153, 155-6, (14.01.86) 925-34
Government departments 567-8

Criminal Proceedings Arising From Fraud Review Committee 540w, (14.01.86) 925-34
Ministerial statements (14.01.86) 925-34

Criminal records
Disclosure of information (17.01.86) 1405-9

Criminal Records Bill 1985/86
2R (17.01.86) 1405-9

Criminal statistics 547w

Critchley, Mr Julian
Questions
North East Hampshire structure plan 730w

Crops
Agricultural research 2w
Common agricultural policy 2w
Marginal land 2w
Pulses & seeds 277w

Crouch, Mr David
Questions
Channel tunnel, Safety 758

Crown Agents (Amendment) Bill 1985/86
2R* (16.01.86) 1336
Money res (16.01.86) 1336

Crown courts
Criminal proceedings 454-5w
Fraud 454-5w
Juries 445-6w

Crown lands & estates
Diorama 655w
Rates & rating 49w

Crown Prosecution Service 159w
Manpower 159w

Crown Suppliers 335w
Fees & charges 335w

Cruelty to Animals (Amendment) Bill 1985/86
1R (15.01.86) 1078-81

Cruelty to children 603w
Local government social services 437w

Cultural heritage
Gardens 357w

Cultural relations 208w
British Council 297

Cunningham, Dr John
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 311-3, 322
Questions
Cattle, Drug research 283w
Housing revenue accounts, Surpluses 664-70w
Housing subsidies, Expenditure 663-4w
Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 663w
Property Services Agency, Berkshire 669-72w
Rate equalisation, Greater London Council 108w
Unemployment, Copeland 188w

Curriculum
Business education 123w

Currie, Mrs Edwina
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 34
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1096
Questions
Board & lodging charges, Social security recipients 240w
Coal mining, Productivity 11-2

Custody officers 169-70w
Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984 169-70w

Customs
Drug crimes 144-5w
Equipment 144-5w
Manpower 144w
Prosecutions 361w
Ships 144w

Customs officers 144-5w, 190w, 191w
Manpower 191w
North East region 190w
Northern region 190w, 191w
Tyne & Wear 144w

Cycle Tracks Act 1984 19w

Cycleways
Public footpaths 19w

Cyprus
Elections 32w
United Nations 32w

Dacca
Entry clearances 624w

Daily Telegraph 455w
Official secrets 455w

Dairy farming
Costs 560-1

Dalyell, Mr Tam
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 173
Business questions point of order (16.01.86) 1224
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 395-402, 404, 410, 411, 412, 414
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 307-8
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1235
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1031, 1032
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 300
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 69
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 40-1, (13.01.86) 784-5, 874 (15.01.86) 1087, 1116, 1126, 1130, 1151-2
Westland helicopters, Solicitor-General (15.01.86) 1077
Questions
Agricultural & Food Research Council 336w
Business statement 1222
Cancer, EC action 584w
CERN, UK contributions 145
Channel crossing 475w
Channel crossing, Road accidents 765
Company accounts, Johnson Matthey 1068-9
Fisheries, South Atlantic 583-4w
Fishery protection, South Atlantic 584w
Foreign Affairs Select Committee, General Belgrano 287-8
Fraud, City of London 568-9w
Gardens, Scotland 357w
Growth promoting hormones, Black economy 613w
Honours, Political Honours Scrutiny Committee 3w
Immigration controls, Statistics 9-10w
Inquiries, Official secrets 768-9
Insider trading, Prosecutions 184w
Johnson Matthey 305w
Navy, Shipping 641w
Nuclear safeguards 609w
Postgraduate students, Science & technology research 579-80w
Science Research Council, Research finance 645w
Scientific civil service, Conditions of employment 16-7
Smith, James, Defence procurement 214w, 215w
Smoke & chimney gases, Polkemmet Bing 551-2w
Strategic defence initiative, Civil servants secondment 160w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence contracts 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 213w, 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Edinburgh University 910
Strategic defence initiative, Imports 213w
Strategic defence initiative, Intellectual property 184w, 213-4w
Strategic defence initiative, Lasers 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Scientists 265w
Strategic defence initiative, Tactical nuclear weapons 213w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 4w
Treaties, Space technology 208w
Tunnels, Psychology 407w
Waste disposal, Polkemmet 3
Welsh Plant Breeding Station, Overseas students 336w
Youth custody, Prisons 8w
Youth custody, Scotland 63w

Dartford tunnel 111w, 761
East London River Crossing 761
Private sector 762
Road construction 111w
Road tolls 761
Road traffic 762

Dash 7 aircraft 408w
Finance 408w

Data banks
Export promotion 587w

Data protection registrar 128w

Data protection tribunal 130w
Public appointments 130w

Davaar Island 583w
Lighthouses 479w

Davidson Pearce 581w

Davies, Rt Hon Denzil
Questions
Strategic defence initiative, Nuclear weapons deployment 907

Davies, Mr Ron
Debates etc
Johnson Matthey (18.12.85) 344-5
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 340
Questions
Cervical cancer, Mid Glamorgan 616-7w
Cervical cancer, Wales 616w, 617w, 618w
Environment protection, EC action 282w
Households, Wales 285w
Manufacturing industries, Wales 285w
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injury compensation 905
Pesticides, Licensing 723w, 725w
Population, Wales 285w
Public sector assets, Privatisation 652w
Severn bridge, Road tolls 757
Staff-student ratios, Universities 121w
Unemployment, Wales 285w
Woolaway houses, Defective housing 167w
Young people, Police cautions 546-7w

Davis, Mr Terry
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 317
Questions
Marginal tax rates, Taxpayers 1195

Day nurseries
Taxation 141-2w

De Havilland 408w

Deakins, Mr Eric
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 307
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 201-4
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers, Ministerial responsibility 127w
Cereals, Prices 557
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service manpower 496w
EC integration 197w
Equal opportunities, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 33-4w

Housing investment programmes, Private rented housing 217w
Job creation schemes, South East region 299-300w
Metropolitan Police, Police powers 126-7w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 291
Overseas aid, Bilateral aid 447w
Production quotas, Cereals 555

Death
AIDS 70w
Building industry 52-4w
Coal mining 250-1w
Drinking & driving 112w
Ethiopia 40-1w
Hypothermia 321w, 322w
Mental patients 73-4w
Motorways 112w
Nuclear power stations 250w
Smoking related diseases 73-5w, 415-6w
South Africa 285-6
Surgery 601-2w

Death grants
Funerals 316-7w
Social Fund 316-7w

Debendox
Drug side effects 498-9w

Debendox Action Group 498-9w

Debts
Africa 308-9w
Central America 200w
Developing countries 204w
Farmers 282w
Overseas aid 308-9w
Severn bridge 756
South America 200w

Debts written off
Lothian Health Board 292w

Declarations of interest 161w, 482w, 505-6w, 734w
District health authorities 505-6w
Health Services Board 505w
Ministers 734w
Regional health authorities 505-6w

Deeds of Covenant 120w
Student grants 120w
Students 229-30w

Deep discounted stock 511w

Defective housing 16-7w, 103-4w, 167w, 254-5w, 331-2w, 466-7w, 576w
Cornish unit houses 331-2w
Council housing 103-4w
Council housing finance 465-6w
Easiform housing 16-7w
Government grants 254-5w
Local government expenditure 576w
Repairs & maintenance 466-7w
Smith houses 254-5w
Woolaway houses 167w

Defence
Channel ferries 535-6w
Cost effectiveness 564w
EC internal relations 474w
Guatemala 473w
Honduras 473w
Labour Party 567
Nimrod aircraft 98w

Defence Act 1842 373w
Public footpaths 373w

Defence attaches 608-9w

Defence contracts 911-2
British Aerospace 98-9w
Defence industries 915
EC countries 916
European fighter aircraft 910
GEC avionics 98w
Nimrod aircraft 97-8w, 912, 913
Overcharging 214w, 215w
Scotland 912
Scott Lithgow 642w, 914
Strategic defence initiative 214w
Submarines 641-2w, 911
Tenders 517w
Trident submarines 911
Type 23 frigates 913-4
VC10 aircraft 97w, 247w
Westland helicopters 515w, 534w, 535w

Defence equipment
Nuclear weapons 561w

Defence expenditure
Defence procurement 379w
European fighter aircraft 534-5w, 612w
Helicopters 535w
NATO 535w
Public expenditure 561w
Strategic defence initiative 560-1w
Tornado aircraft 534w, 611-2w
Trident 562w

Defence industries
Defence contracts 915
Personnel 379w
Tyne & Wear 913-4

Defence land
Building land 916-7
Land acquisition 916-7
Rainham marshes 561w
Road construction 561w

Defence procurement 155, 247w, (18.12.85) 385-6
Agusta helicopters 530w
Cammell Laird 912
Cost effectiveness 372w
Defence expenditure 379w
European fighter aircraft 909
Helicopters 520w, 529w, 532-3w, 534w, 609-10w, 610-1w
International cooperation 910
Mergers 719w
Navy 914
Smith, James 214w, 215w
USA 521w, 526-8w
VC10 aircraft 97w
Vickers Shipbuilding & Engineering 912
Warships 914
West Germany 525w
Westland helicopters 155, 525-6w, 564, 566

Defence research
Chemical weapons 462w
Cost benefit analysis 907
Earthquakes 211w
Nuclear disarmament 906
Strategic defence initiative 213w, 214w, 906, 907
Technical assistance 908

Defence Select Committee
Civil service manpower 641w

Deficit financing
USA 648w

Democracy
Africa 208w

Demonstrations
Gartcosh 921
Northern Ireland 266w, 340w
Surveillance 266w, 340w

Dental charges exemptions 420w

Dental services
Fees & charges 147w

Departmental circulars
Cervical cancer 238-9w
Dept of Health & Social Security 494w
Marriage Act 1983 420w
NHS administration 420w

Departmental coordination
AIDS 556w

Departmental correspondence 497w, 580-1w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 497w
Dept of Transport 580-1w

Departmental forms
Administrative costs 154w
Administrative delays 154w

Departmental leaflets
Dept of Transport 581w
Local government reform 469w

Departmental publications
AIDS 70w
Education 113-4w
Students 38w

Departmental reports
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority 717w

Dependents
Families 506w

Deposited papers
House of Commons Library (16.01.86) 1209-12

Dept of Education & Science
In-service training 120w

Dept of Employment
Civil servants 18

Dept of Health & Social Security
Action on Smoking & Health 429w
Advertising agencies 411-4w
Civil servants 18, 19-20
Civil service manpower 414-6w, 595w
Departmental circulars 494w
Disclosure of information 497w
Equal opportunities 595-6w
Health Education Council 429w
Nairobi Conference 595w
Personal records 497w
Public appointments 504w
Statistics 604w
Women 504w

Dept of Health & Social Security local offices
Civil servants 497w
Civil service manpower 322w, 496w
Civil service recruitment 153w, 496w
Civil service redundancies 496w
Cricklewood 694w
Departmental correspondence 497w
East Midlands 496w
Greater London 738w
Harlesden 693-4w
Heating 503-4w
Inner city areas 736w
Labour turnover 736w
Neasden 693-4w
Opening hours 503-4w
Secretarial staff 496w
Slough 739-40w
Social security recipients 322w

Dept of the Environment
Efficiency scrutinies 263w
Local government reform 258w
Okehampton bypass 371w

Dept of Trade & Industry
Advertising 23w
Advertising agencies 21-3w
Local government reform 24w

Dept of Transport
Departmental correspondence 580-1w
Departmental leaflets 581w
Efficiency scrutinies 298w
Local government reform 47-8w
Okehampton bypass 407w

Derbyshire
Health service staff 322-3w, 509w
Hospital waiting lists 322w
Hospitals 323w
Pupil-teacher ratios 289w
School leaving 645w
School leaving certificates 645-6w

Derelict land grants 371-2w
Glory Hole 464w

Derelict land grants, Specific cases 464w

Deserts
Water supply 770-1

Design
Prison 177w

Deterrence theory 563w
Nuclear weapons deployment 915

Nuclear weapons policy 915
Strategic defence initiative 907-8

Developing countries
Debts 204w
Foreign aid 550-1w
International Monetary Fund 593w
Overseas aid 550-1w

Development agencies
Northern region 1195-6

Development aid
Aid financed trade 770
El Salvador 448w
Food 770
Honduras 448w
Manpower 769
North Yemen 447-8w
Rural areas 770
Sudan 772

Devolution
Northern Ireland 565

Devonport Dockyard 374w, 381w
Management 381w
Shipbuilding 374w

Dewar, Mr Donald
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 396
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 692-3, 695
Questions
Business expansion scheme, Scotland 652w
Drinking & driving, Scottish courts 359w
Drug abuse, Scottish courts 358-9w
Parliamentary private secretaries 348-52w
Police interrogation, Scotland 357w
Prison population, Scotland 357-8w
Remand in custody, Scottish courts 357w
Summary trial, Scottish courts 357w, 358w

DHSS Circular House of Commons (85) 22 503w

DHSS Circular SI2/85 553w

DHSS local offices
Civil service manpower 509w
Greater London 738w
Labour turnover 738w
Supplementary benefits 497w
Wick 499w

Dial-a-ride 478w
Greater London 478w

Dickens, Mr Geoffrey
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 775
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 786
Questions
Child care, Ministerial responsibility 552w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 907

Dicks, Mr Terry
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 324

Diet & disease
Handicapped 78w
Medical research 78w

Dietary allowances 741-2w

Diets
East Sutton Park Open Prison 625w

Diorama
Architectural conservation 655w
Crown lands & estates 655w

Diplomatic relations
Argentina 198w, 199w
Polisario Front 133-4w

Diplomatic service
Chile 298
Civil service recruitment 297-8
Jamaica 298
Overseas trade 203-4w
Trade promotion 297-8

Director of Public Prosecutions
Government grants 253-4w

DIR8O/778/EEC 12w

Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill 1985/86
2R (17.01.86) 1346-1404

Disadvantaged
Supplementary benefits 154-5

Disallowed questions
Speakers rulings & statements (13.01.86) 758, (15.01.86) 1058

Disaster relief
Colombia 283-4
Ethiopia 447w
Food surpluses 329w
Sudan 447w

Disciplinary proceedings 235-6w, 312w
Hospital consultants 312w
Hospital staff 235-6w

Disclosure of information
Adoption 700w
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review 600w
Civil servants 520w
Contracts for services 702w
Criminal records (17.01.86) 1405-9
Dept of Health & Social Security 497w
Electoral register 128w
General Belgrano 287-8
Government departments 446w
Inquiries 629w
Law officers 769
Ministers correspondence 734w
Official secrets 769
Pollution control 369w
Prosthetics 600w
Public participation in planning 369w
Westland helicopters 515w, 520w, 919, 920-1

Disclosure of information
Immigrant detainees 457-8w

Discounts
Vaccination 151w

Discrimination
AIDS 71w
Viral diseases 71w
Westland helicopters 518w, 519w

Disease control 63w, 72w, 427w, 613w
AIDS 72w

Diseases
Prescription charges exemptions 501-2w

Dismissal
Pocock, Leslie 731w
Secretaries of state 516w
Teachers 150

Disposable income
Social security reform 694w

Distribution & Media Sales (UK) 243w
Inquiries 243w

District health authorities
Capital investment 507w
Cervical cancer 570-1
Contracts for services 155w, 508w
Cost effectiveness 600-1w, 743-4w
Declarations of interest 505-6w
Expenditure 238w, 702-3w
Hospitals 84-96w
Merseyside 149-52w
Primary health care 602w, 702-3w
Screening 324-5w

Dixon, Mr Don
Debates etc
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 533, 537
Questions
British Shipbuilders 587w
Business statement 1216
Coal mining, Redundant mineworkers payments scheme 12
Sewers, Water authorities 572-3w
Water authorities, Privatisation 679-82w
Water supply, Water authorities 573-4w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 573w

Djibouti
UK companies abroad 365w

Dobson, Mr Frank
Debates etc
Board & Lodging charges (17.12.85) 172
Homelessness, Greater London (20.12.85) 706
Oldchurch Hospital (13.01.86) 901, 902
Questions
Aids for handicapped, Blind 411w
Aircraft, Fire prevention 582w
Aircraft, Fire resistant materials 582w
Amenity beds, NHS & private practice 311w
Amenity beds, Regional health authorities 314-6w
Artificial insemination, Clinics 325w
Blind, Social services 697w
Blood, Imports 326w
Cancer, North East Thames Regional Health Authority 501w
Cervical cancer, Administrative delays 699w
Cervical cancer, Departmental circulars 238-9w
Cervical cancer, Screening 239w, 324-5w, 439w, 500w, 501w, 569-70, 699w
Child health 237-8w
Child health, Medical research 602w
Child health, Social class 602w
Cruelty to children 603w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Statistics 604w
District health authorities, Capital investment 507w
District health authorities, Contracts for services 508w
District health authorities, Cost effectiveness 600-1w, 743-4w
District health authorities, Expenditure 238w, 702-3w
Doctors surgeries, government grants 603w
Drug abuse, Family doctors 505w
Educational health services 600w
Family doctors, Patients 325w
Fraud, Members correspondence 252-3w
Health service ancillary staff, Patients 235w
Health service staff, Housing 603w
Health service staff, Management 235w
Health service staff, Pay 312-3w
Health services, Contracts for services 236w
Health services, Greater London 234w
Health Services Board, Declaration of interest 505w
Health services finance, Greater London 311w
Health services finance, Sponsorship 311w
Hip replacements, Hospital waiting lists 499-500w, 604w
Hospital closures, Sick leave 324w
Hospital consultants, Breach of contract 699w
Hospital consultants, Conditions of employment 312w
Hospital consultants, Contracts of employment 312w
Hospital consultants, NHS & private practice 601w
Hospital discharges, Community care 236-7w
Hospital Hygiene Services, Bromley Health Authority 601w
Hospital length of stay 235w, 604w
Hospital staff, Disciplinary proceedings 235-6w
Hospital waiting lists, Coronary bypass operations 325w
Hospitals 605w
Hospitals, Construction costs 234-6w
Hospitals, Fires 234w, 438w, 697w
Hospitals, Food poisoning 605w
Hospitals, Peterborough Health Authority 326w
Hospitals, Sponsorship 605w
Hypothermia, Death 321w
Kidney failure, Kidney patients 699-700w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 310-1w
Local government expenditure, Voluntary organisations 237w
London Marathon, Government grants 263w
Lothian health board, Debts written off 292w

NHS, Contracts for services 385-96w, 436-8w, 702w
NHS, Hospitals 84-96w
NHS, Management 326w
NHS, Pay 312w, 557-9w
NHS, Privatisation 311w, 601w
NHS finance, Greater London 145-8w, 311w
NHS finance, Northern Ireland 268-70w
NHS finance, Teaching hospitals 312w
NHS Management Inquiry 326w
Nurses, Clothing 234w
Nursing homes, Handbooks 605w
Patients, Family doctors 699w
Personal social services, Consultants 323-4w
Prescription charges exemptions, Diseases 501-2w
Primary health care, District health authorities 602w
Primary health care, Expenditure 602w
Primary health care, Homelessness 606w
Primary health care, Inner city areas 602-3w, 606w
Primary health care, NHS finance 703-4w
Pupils 698w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper". Social security recipients 566
Regional health authorities, Codes of practice 319w
Regional health authorities, Cost effectiveness 325-6w
Regional health authorities, Declarations of interest 505-6w
Regional health authorities, Pay 235w
Residential care, Codes of practice 604w
Richmond Terrace, House of Commons accommodation 261w
Road accidents, Traffic lights 582w
Road traffic offences 569w
School nurses, Educational health services 697-8w
Scottish health boards, Capital investment 164-6w
Spectacles, NHS 326-7w
Spectacles, Prices 238w, 604w
Stanley Royd Hospital, Food poisoning 325w, 605w
Surgery, Death 601-2w
Surgery, Hospital waiting lists 238w
Surgery, Infectious diseases 325w, 440w, 605w
Teaching hospitals, NHS finance 508-10w
Voluntary organisations, Local government reform 603w

Dock workers
Radioactive waste disposal 221-2w

Dockyards
British Aerospace 718w
Companies 718w
Management 718w
Manpower 102w, 374w
Privatisation 718w
Redundancy 215-6w
Southampton 294
Transport 374w

Doctors
Computers 77-8w

Doctors surgeries 603w, 699w
Government grants 603w

Dog fighting (19.12.85) 664, (15.01.86) 1078-81
Public petitions (19.12.85) 664

Dogs
Imports 5w
Licensing 217-8w
USA 5w

Dollar
Exchange rates 1202

Domestic energy conservation
Energy efficiency 331w
Energy Efficiency Year 330-1w
Government grants 629w

Dormand, Mr Jack
Questions
Coal mining, Investment 26w
Government grants, British Film Institute 35-8w
Regional aid, Northern region 1195-6
Research, Civil service dispersal 585-6w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w

Dorrell, Mr Stephen
Questions
Youth training scheme, Skilled workers 150-1

Dorset
Forestry Commission 724-5w
Railway electrification 44w

Double taxation
Canada 103w, 307-8w
Income tax 103w

Double Taxation Relief (Taxes on Income) (Canada) Order 1985 103w, 307-8w

Douglas, Mr Dick
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1149
Questions
Business statement 1218-9
Energy efficiency, Energy prices 8
Ministers domestic visits, Coal mining 1-2
Strategic Defence Initative 194w
Submarines, Shipbuilding 911

Douglas-Hamilton, Lord James
Questions
European fighter aircraft, Defence contracts 910

Dounreay
Nuclear fuel reprocessing 109-10w, 160w, (14.01.86) 1049-56
Planning inquiries (14.01.86) 1049-56

Dover, Mr Den
Questions
Channel crossing 920
Double taxation, Canada 307-8w

Drake, Jacqueline 701w

Draught-proofing materials 315w
Exceptional needs payments 315w

Drift nets 563, 614w
Fishing gear 614w

Drinking & driving (18.12.85) 383-5, 406w
Christmas 567-8w
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 508-21
Convictions 132w
Death 112w
Publicity 583w
Road accidents 112w, 481w
Scottish courts 359w

Driving
Channel tunnel (18.12.85) 395-414
Tunnels 407w

Driving instruction
Bus crews 758

Driving offences (18.12.85) 508-21

Driving tests
Dyslexia 478w

Drug abuse
Family doctors 505w
Health education 155-6w
Heroin 132w
Publicity 505w, 557-8w
Scottish courts 358-9w

Drug crimes
Criminal investigation (19.12.85) 591
Customs 144-5w
Greater London 459w
Local government expenditure 6-7w
Malaysia 569w
Northern Region 190w
Personal property (19.12.85) 591
Police 6w
Regional crime squads 6w
Ships 144w

Drug research
Cattle 283w

Drug side effects
Debendox 498-9w

Drug Trafficking Offences Bill 1985/86 (19.12.85) 591

Drug
Animal husbandry 613w

Dual Carriageways 765-6
Berkhamsted bypass 765-6

Dubs, Mr Alfred
Debates etc
Immigration control (18.12.85) 499-503, 506
Social security, Public petitions (20.12.85) 672
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1156-7
Questions
Africa, Food aid from EC 329w
British citizenship 715w
Defence expenditure, Public expenditure 561w
Entry clearances, Administrative costs 640w
Entry clearances, Immigration appeals 715w
Hong Kong, Overseas aid 772
India, British residents abroad 639-40w
India, Special voucher scheme 640w
Naturalisation 714w
Oil prices, Economic planning 648w
Political refugees, Immigration applications 714w
Rape, Criminal injuries compensation 270-1w
Refugees 714w
Road humps, road traffic control 405w
Special voucher scheme, India 715w
Taxicards, Greater London 476w
Unemployment, Wandsworth 398-9w

Dumping
Licensing 614w

Dunn, Mr Bob, Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science
Questions
Assisted places scheme, Income distribution 643-4w
Government grants to voluntary organisations 441w
National Youth Advisory Council, Public appointments 287-8w
Pre-school education, School population 712w
Private education, Pupils 442w
Pupil-teacher ratios 711w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Derbyshire 289w
Sacred Heart of Mary School, Upminster 646w
School leaving certificates, Derbyshire 645-6w
School meals 709-10w
School meals, Nutrition 644w
School meals, Per capita costs 643w
Schools, Class sizes 711w
Schools, Cost per pupil 708w
Schools & parents, Parents rights 39w
Special educational needs, Judgments 288-9w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 544w

Dunnet Committee see Badgers & Bovine Tuberculosis (No 2) Review

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 305
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 698
Questions
AIDS, Disease control 72w
Iraq, Terrorism 200w
Multiple sclerosis, Medical treatment 76-7w

Durham Prison 170w

Duty solicitors 169-70w, 446-7w
Greater London 446-7w

Dwyer, Jean (20.12.85) 725-30

Dykes, Mr Hugh
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 984, 985

Prime Ministers question time point of order (19.12.85) 568
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1107, 1161, 1162, 1163
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 5-6
Economic growth, Manufacturing industries 1199-1200
Fraud, Criminal investigation 766-7
London Commodity Exchange, Upper Waiting Hall 633w
South Africa, Foreign policy 195w

Dyslexia
Driving tests 478w
Special educational needs 288-9w

Eadie, Mr Alexander
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1357
Questions
Coal mining, Imports 8-9
Coal mining, Industrial health & safety 7
Coal mining, Industrial relations 12-3
Coal mining, Scotland 2-3
Electricity generation, Nuclear power 5
National Coal Board, Compensation 717w
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, Departmental reports 717w

Early retirement
Ministers of religion 445w
Ministry of Defence 215-6w
NHS 429-32w

Early warning systems
Chemical weapons 462w
Military aircraft 562w

Earthquakes
Defence research 211w

Eastform housing 16-7w
Defective housing 16-7w
Housing Defects Act 1984 17w

East Anglia
Water pollution 257w

East London river crossing 111w, 761
Dartford tunnel 761
Tenders 111w

East Midlands
Dept of Health & Social security local offices 496w

East Sutton Park Open Prison 625w
Diets 625w

East West relations
Nuclear test ban 290-1w

Eastham, Mr Ken
Debates etc
Manchester Airport (18.12.85) 351-2
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 43, (13.01.86) 789, (15.01.86) 1117-20
Questions
British Aerospace, Defence contracts 98-9w
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 10
Falkland Islands, Hospitals 125w
Falkland Islands Company, Hospitals 125w
Food additives, Nutrition & health 276w
Gulf war, United Nations 206-7w
Nimrod aircraft, Repairs & maintenance 97-8w
VC10 aircraft, Military aircraft 97w

EC accession
Horticulture 278-9w

EC action
Cancer 584w
Cereals 276w
Coastal shipping 762-3
Environment protection 282w
Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1027-48
Fisheries (16.01.86) 1240-67
Food surpluses 279w
Legal costs 42w
Lighting 42w
Multifibre arrangement 184w

EC Agricultural Council
Common agricultural policy 351-2w

EC aid
Central America 448-50w
Overseas aid 447w

EC budget
EC Foreign Affairs Council 202w
UK contributions 511w, 655w

EC budget contributions
Portugal 207w

EC Budget Council 48-9w

EC countries
Aerospace industry 452w
Coastal shipping 762, 763
Defence contracts 916
Helicopters 515-6w
Higher education 117w
Housing stock 16w
Unemployed benefits 72w
VAT 305-6w
Water supply 468w

EC Draft 7283/85 (14.01.86) 1027-48

EC Draft 8662/85 (16.01.86) 1240-67

EC Draft 9284/85 (16.01.86) 1240-67

EC Draft 10047/85/1 (16.01.86) 1240-67

EC Draft 10047/85/2 (16.01.86) 1240-67

EC Draft 10047/85/3 (16.01.86) 1240-67

EC Energy Council
Alternative energy 10

EC external relations
Central America 191w
Contadora Group 191w
Falkland Islands 192w
Nicaragua 201w
South Africa 194-5w, 195-6w

EC Fisheries Council 487-8w
Common fisheries policy 282w
Ministerial statements (19.12.85) 584-9

EC Foreign Affairs Council
EC budget 202w
Ministerial statements (18.12.85) 301-9

EC grants & loans
Scottish Islands 482w

EC integration 197w, 198w, 365-6w

EC internal relations 201w, 202w
Defence 474w

EC internal trade 1072
Financial services 1072
Horticulture 278-9w

EC Labour & Social Affairs Council 188-9w

EC law
Conditions of employment 552w
Food additives 276w
Motor vehicle safety 111w
Sea pollution 223-8w
Voting methods 552w

EC reform 197w, 198w, 201w, 365-6w, 521w
Common agricultural policy 278w, 561
European Assembly 200-1w
Parliament 201-2w
Voting methods 201w

EC Research Council 244w

EC Steel Council 25-6w

EC trade
Manufactured goods 453w
Market share 453w

Economic growth 651w
Interest rates 1200
Manufacturing industries 1199-1200, 1200-1
Regional planning & development 586w

Economic planning
Oil prices 648w

Economic regions
Hypothermia 322w
Unemployment 301-2w, 638-9w

Economic sanctions
Apartheid 1074
Commonwealth 294-5
Employment 294
Lesotho 923-4
South Africa 195-6w, 293, 294-5, 295-6

Economic situation 651w
Wales 758

Ecuador
Export credit guarantees 1060-1

Edinburgh University 910
Strategic defence initiative 910

Education
Departmental publications 113-4w

Education Act 1944 708w

Education Act 1980 122w
School choice 122w

Education support grants (16.12.85) 107-25, 126, 289-90w, 713w
Expenditure 289-90w, 713w

Education Support Grants (Amendment) (No 2) Regulations 1985 (16.12.85) 126

Education welfare officers 185w
Child care 185w

Education (Amendment) Bill 1985/86
Rem stages (16.12.85) 107-25

Educational finance
Government grants 289-90w
Higher education 338-40w
Powys 1207-8
University finance 116-7w
Voluntary schools 340w

Educational health services 600w
School nurses 697-8w

Educational psychology
Local government staff 338w
Manpower 338w
Professional qualifications 337-8w
Training 337-8w

Educational qualifications
Educational standards 442w
School leaving 122w

Educational standards
Educational qualifications 442w
Higher education admission 115w
Schools 117w
Selective schools 117w
Teachers 442w
Youth training scheme 150

Edwards, Rt Hon Nicholas, Secretary of State for Wales
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Ministerial statements (18.12.85) 331-40
Questions
Capital investment, Wales 332w
Cash limits, Wales 619w
Cervical cancer, Mid Glamorgan 616-7w
Cervical cancer, Wales 616w, 617w, 618w
Cooperatives, Wales 719w
Government grants to local authorities, Capital investment 21w
Government grants to local authorities, Wales 617-8w
Housing insulation, Wales 719w
Job centres, Wales 719-20w
Manufacturing industries, Wales 285w
Rate support grants, Wales 618-9w
Shops, Cardiff West 565w
Small firms service, Wales 286w
Unemployment, Wales 285w
Wales Tourist Board, Government grants 286w
Welsh Development Agency, Capital investment 615-6w
Welsh Office, Civil service manpower 284w

Efficiency scrutinies 263w, 298w
Dept of the Environment 263w
Dept of Transport 298w

Eggar, Mr Tim, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign & Commonwealth Affairs*
Debates etc
Afghanistan (20.12.85) 686-90
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 300
Owoseja, Oluronke, Kidnapping (20.12.85) 728-30
Questions
Afghanistan, Foreign policy 204w
Anglo-Irish Agreement 132w
BBC external services, Electromagnetic interference 206w
BBC external services, Satellite broadcasting 206w
British Council 192w
British Council, Cultural relations 297
British Council, Finance 297
British embassies, USSR 366w
Budapest Cultural Forum 208w
Central America, EC external relations 191w
Chile, Arms embargoes 199w
Chile, Human rights 200w
Cyprus, United Nations 32w
El Salvador, Armed forces training 202w
Entry clearances, Fees and charges 291w
Equal opportunities, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 33-4w
Falkland Islands, Crime 32w
Falkland Islands, Criminal investigation 32w
Falkland Islands, EC external relations 192w
Falkland Islands, Fisheries 364w
Falkland Islands, General Belgrano 288
Foreign Affairs Select Committee, General Belgano 287-8
Honduras, Refugees 207-8w
Israel, Arab boycott 33w
Nicaragua, Airspace 283
Nicaragua, Coffee 284
Nicaragua, EC external relations 201w
Nicaragua, Ministers visits abroad 283
Nicaragua, USA 283-4
Overseas trade, Security 291w
Philippines, Foreign policy 31-2w
Sri Lanka, Foreign relations 202w
Terrorism, International co-operation 207w
Torture, Amnesty International 363-4w
Tristan da Cunha, Companies 364w
Tristan da Cunha, Overseas trade 33w
Turkey, Political prisoners 191w
USA, Central America 205w

El Salvador
Armed forces training 202w, 525w
Development aid 448w

Elderly
Community policing 155

Elections
Cyprus 32w
European Assembly 204w
School governors 152
Thamesmead Community Trust 259w

Electoral register
Computer privacy 128w
Disclosure of information 128w
Metropolitan Police 128w
Police 128w

Electric lighting
Fire prevention 175w

Electric power
Railway transport 297w

Electricity
Standing charges 124-5w

Electricity area boards
Industrial energy prices 13

Electricity generation 3-4
Nuclear power 4-5
Nuclear power stations 3-4
Wind power 27w

Electricity supply industry
Tax yields 123w

Electricity tariffs
Landlord & tenant 23-4w

Electromagnetic interference
BBC external services 206w

Emergency planning 456w, 523w, 714w
Civil defence 523w
Local government staff 456w
Royal Observer Corps 714w

Emergency powers
Northern Ireland (16.01.86) 1307-30, 1331-5

Emery, Sir Peter
Debates etc
By election writs, Northern Ireland (17.12.85) 139
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 56-9
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 44
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 6

Employees contributions
Occupational pensions 320-1w
Pensions 320w

Employers contributions
National insurance contributions 510-1w
Pensions 320w

Employers statutory sick pay scheme (15.01.86) 1175-82

Employment
Car industry 1199
Economic sanctions 294
Graduates 336-8w
Inner city areas 397w
London docklands railway 471-2w
Manufacturing industries 398w
Service industries 398w
Small businesses 303w
South Africa 196w, 1074
Welwyn Hatfield 399w
Westland helicopters 1204

Employment discrimination
Exservicemen 906

Employment opportunities 179-83w
Cooperatives 719w
Greater London 299-300w
Hypermarkets 13w
London docklands 220w, 467w
Taxation 650w

Employment Protection (Variation of Limits) Order 1985 (19.12.85) 662

Employment schemes
Glasgow 57-8w
Government grants 179-83w
Newham 51w
Vocational training 186w
Wolverhampton 186w

Empty housing
Council housing 218-9w, 662w
Home Office 458-9w
Private sector housing 263-4w
Public sector housing 263-4w

Energy conservation
Alternative energy 5
Low pay 315w

Energy consumption
Fuels 124w
Lead free petrol 635w

Energy efficiency 7-8, 307w, 330-1w
Building regulations 8
Domestic energy conservation 331w
Energy prices 8
Government assistance to industry 307w
Government grants 331w
Industrial energy conservation 7-8
Private investment 7-8
Tax incentives 307w

Energy efficiency year 7-8, 13w, 330-1w
Building regulations 13w
Consumer organisations 331w
Domestic energy conservation 330-1w
Thermal insulation 13w
Voluntary organisations 331w

Energy prices
Energy efficiency 8
Government assistance to industry 13

Energy research
Alternative energy 4, 634w
Natural gas production 26-7w
Offshore drilling 26-7w

Enterprise allowance scheme
Administrative delays 56-7w
Company liquidations 57w
Government grants 56-7w
Small businesses 57w
Women 57w

Enterprise & deregulation unit 56w
Costs 56w

Entry clearances (18.12.85) 494-507
Administrative costs 640w
Dacca 624w
Fees & charges 291w
Immigration appeals 715w
Islamabad 624w

Environment protection
Channel tunnel 758
Common agricultural policy 282w
EC action 282w
Opencast mining 5

Environmental impact assessment 15w
Channel crossing 15w

Equal opportunities
Dept of Health & Social Security 595-6w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 33-4w
Home Office 5w, 127w
Law reform 5w
Women 5w

Equal opportunities officers 31w
Civil service recruitment 31w
Management & Personnel Office 31w

Equipment
Customs 144-5w
Fire services 274w

Estimates days
House of Commons select committees 693w
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 180-218, 257

Ethiopia
Death 40-1w
Disaster relief 447w
Food aid 40w
Malnutrition 40-1w

Ethnic groups
Prison population 170w
Self-employed 399w

Ethnic minorities
Community radio 625w

Ethnic monitoring 130-1w, 399w
Probation 130-1w

Europe
Nuclear weapons 204w
Security 292-3

European Assembly 202w
EC reform 200-1w
Elections 204w

European Agricultural Guidance & Guarantee Fund
Intervention stock 283w

European Assembly members
Crimes of violence 32-3w

European Commission
Westland helicopters 515w

European Communities 206w
Competition 591-2w
National anthems 521w
Oral questions (18.12.85) 300
Tax harmonisation 521w
Voting methods 193-4w

European Communities (Spanish & Portuguese Accession) Bill (HL) 1985/86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

European Court of Human Rights
British dependent territories 736w
Government Communications Headquarters 207w

European Court of Justice
Invalid care allowance 701w
Westland helicopters 518w

European Economic Community
Construction costs 463-4w
Food surpluses 277w, 279w
Helicopters 533w
Treaties 364w
USA 1059

European fighter aircraft 612w, 909, 915
Defence contracts 910
Defence expenditure 534-5w, 612w
Defence procurement 909
International cooperation 563w, 909, 916

European monetary system 307w
Interest rates 1191-2

European Regional Development Fund
Council of Ministers 137-8w

European Security Conference
Stockholm 292

European Social Fund
Youth training scheme 299w

Evans, Gareth 629w

Evennett, Mr David
Questions
EC Labour & Social Affairs Council 188-9w
Local enterprise agencies, Local authorities 303-4w
Local government expenditure, Greater London Council 219w
School closures, Crayford School, Bexley 149

Evidence
Antidumping 589-90w
Sexual offences 290w

Ewing, Mr Harry
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1232-3
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 81-5, 94, 95, 97
Questions
Business statement 1216-7
Iron & steel industry, Factory closures 1070-1

Ex gratia payments 231w
NHS complaints 231w

Examinations
Industrial disputes 442w

Exceptional circumstances additions
Social security benefits rules 69w

Exceptional needs payments 739w
Draught-proofing materials 315w
Expenditure 439w
Families 701w
Funerals 436w
Maternity benefits 436w
Severe weather payments 71-2w
Supplementary benefits 321-2w

Exchange rates
Dollar 1202
Industry 509-10w
Interest rates 1198
International economic relations 1202
Mark 650w
Sterling 651w
Trade competitiveness 566

Exclusion clauses (20.12.85) 673-80

Executive officers 361w

Exhaust emissions
EC action (14.01.86) 1027-48

Exhibitions
Gas safety 245w
Social services 556w
Upper Waiting Hall 607-8w
Yorkshire Water Colour Society 34-5w

Export controls
Machine tools 361w

Export credit guarantees
Administrative delays 1060-1
Cereals 242-3w
Ecuador 1060-1

Export Credits Guarantee Department
Financial targets 1061
Ultraleisure 449-50w

Export of live animals
Horses 485w

Export promotion
Data banks 587w
Government grants 1060
Soft loans 1060
Turkey 1060

Exports
Advisory services 203-4w
Aerospace industry 632w
Coal 8-9
Iron & steel 1060, 1068
Sheep meat 559
Wealth 1061
Wood 332w

Exservicemen
Children 906
Community programme 637-8w
Employment discrimination 906
Nuclear weapons tests 906
Radiation hazards 563w, 609w, 905-6

External financing limits
London Docklands Development Corporation 472w
North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board 164w
Water authorities 572w, 730-2w

Eyre, Sir Reginald
Questions
Channel crossing, Road traffic 345w
Smith houses, Defective housing 254-5w

Factor VIII 416w
Blood 416w

Factories
Helicopters 530w

Factory closures
Garcosh 1070-1, 1071-2
Garcosh Steelworks 591w
Iron & steel industry 591w, 1070-1
National Coal Board 329-30w

Factory Inspectorate
North West region 188w

"Fairer & Faster Route to Major Road Construction" 756
Road construction 756

"Faith in the City"
Civil servants secondment 521w

Falkland Islands
Conventional war 522w
Crime 32w
Criminal investigation 32w
EC external relations 192w
Ferries 522w
Fisheries 364w, 562-3
Fishing limits 562
General Belgrano 288
Helicopters 601w
Hospitals 125w
Ministers visits abroad 212w
Peace negotiations 191-2w
United Nations 191-2w

Falkland Islands Company 125w
Hospitals 125w

Fallon, Mr Michael
Questions
Airports, Privatisation 478w
Fraud, City of London 153
National income, Taxation 648w
Public expenditure, Per capita costs 360w
Regional aid, Northern region 589w, 1066
Transport supplementary grants 168-9w

Families
Dependents 506w
Exceptional needs payments 701w
Handicapped children 315-6w
Homelessness 465-6w, 651w
Households 506w
Income support scheme 318w
Low incomes 74-6w
Standard of living 418-9w
Supplementary benefits 700-1w
Taxation 646w

Family courts 446w
Family courts review 446w

Family credit (16.12.85) 21-34, 435-6w, 495w, 596w, 694-5w, 696w
Social security benefits disqualification 434w
Social security claims 435w, 495w
Social security reform 596-7w, 694-5w
Strike benefits 495w
Tax rates & bands 696w

Family credits
Social security reform 598w

Family doctors
Drug abuse 505w
Patients 325w, 699w

Family income
Indirect taxation 306-7w

Family income supplement
Social security reform 596-7w

Family income supplements
Social security recipients 434w, 498w

Family Planning Association 80w
Government grants 80w
Health Education Council 80w

Family practitioner committees
Audit 154w, 607w
Computer applications 737-8w

Farm incomes 281w

Farmers
Debts 282w
Severe weather payments 209w

Farr, Sir John
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.88) 900
Questions
Antidumping, Evidence 589-90w
Married women, Retirement pensions 409w
Middle East, Foreign policy 193w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w
Trident, Contracts 562w

Farrakhan, Louis 627w

Fashion
Naval bases 97w

Fast reactors
France 29w
International cooperation 29w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing 109-10w

Fatchett, Mr Derek
Questions
Bank of England 652w
Leeds General Infirmary, Building repairs 154w
Lloyds of London, Inquiries 1069
Local government reform, Civil service manpower 15w, 24w, 258w
Local government reform, Dept of Transport 47-8w
Local government reform, Home Office 11-2w
Local government reform, Treasury 49-50w
Water supply, Leeds 220w

Fats
Food labelling 277w, 556-7

Faulds, Mr Andrew
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 174
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1270, 1284-6

Official Report (16.01.86) 1213
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 31
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 783
Questions
Business statement 1219-20
Middle East, Peace negotiations 289-90
Palestine 202w

Favell, Mr Tony
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1235
Questions
Diplomatic service, Overseas trade 203-4w

Fayed, Mohammed 628w

Fees & charges
Airports 733w
Company registration 136w
Crown Suppliers 335w
Dental services 147w
Entry clearances 291w
Firearms certificates 274w

Fenner, Mrs Peggy, Parliamentary Secretary for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Questions
Agricultural Development & Advisory Service, Civil service manpower 279-80w
Agricultural Development & Advisory Service, Income 280-1w
Agricultural land, Land use 558-9
Agricultural research, Crops 2w
Animal husbandry, Antibiotics 485-6w
Badgers & Bovine Tuberculosis (No 2) Review 579w
Brucellosis, Cattle diseases 284w
Brucellosis, Slaughterhouses 283w
Cattle, Drug research 283w
Common agricultural policy, Crops 2w
Farmers, Debts 282w
Food additives 275w
Food additives, EC law 276w
Food additives, Food industry 276w
Food additives, Food standards 486w
Food additives, Nutrition & health 276w
Food labelling 555-6
Food labelling, Chocolate 557
Food labelling, Fats 277w, 556-7
Food labelling, Food additives 556
Food labelling, Nutrition & health 556
Food standards, Nutrition & health 277-8w
Forestry Commission, Land acquisition 724-5w
Growth promoting hormones, Black economy 613w
Horses, Animal welfare 281-2w
Horses, Export of live animals 485w
Horses, Markets 560
Horticulture, EC internal trade 278-9w
Pesticides, Fenvalerate 484w
Pesticides, Licensing 725w

Fenvalerate
Pesticides 484w

Fermanagh & South Tyrone
By election writs (17.12.85) 139

Ferries
Falkland Islands 522w

Field, Mr Frank
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 170-1
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 698
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 30
Questions
Board & lodging charges, Young people 418w
Civil disorder, Haringey 343w
Exceptional needs payments, Draught-proofing materials 315w
Families, Exceptional needs payments 701w
Families, Supplementary benefits 700-1w
Handicapped children, Families 315-6w
Housing benefits, Social security recipients 701w
Housing benefits, Social security reform 696w
Income, Social security reform 696w
Income support scheme, Young people 701w
Low pay, Marginal tax rates 594-6w
Maternity benefits, Public expenditure 697w
Maternity benefits, Social security reform 697w
Ministers of religion, Early retirement 445w

Fields, Mr. Terry
Questions
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review 740w
Fire services, Equipment 274w
Mary Rose, Ancient monuments 678w

Fife
Civil service manpower 361w
Ministry of Defence 381w, 643w

Film industry
British Film Institute 35-8w

Financial institutions
Fraud (18.12.85) 433-72

Financial institutions (18.12.85) 346
Bank of England 359w
Banks 309w
City of London 360w
Investment in financial assets (14.01.86) 938-1024

Financial services 135-6w, 589w, (14.01.86) 938-1024, 1057, 1069, 1191
Confederation of British Industry 1057
EC internal trade 1072
Greater London 1072
Securities & Investment Board 1057

Financial Services Bill 1985/86
1R (18.12.85) 346
2R (14.01.86) 135-6w, 589w, 938-1024, 1057, 1069
Money res (14.01.86) 1025-6
Ways & means res (14.01.86) 1026
Fraud 135-6w
Lloyds of London 589w, 1057-8, 1069
Members interests 1058

Financial Services Bill 1985/86
Lloyds of London 1069-70

Financial targets
Exports Credits Guarantee Department 1061
Ordnance survey 104w
Post Office 450-1w

Finsberg, Sir Geoffrey
Questions
Flats, Service charges 677w
Westland helicopters 567
Westland helicopters, Civil servants 1206

Fire certificates 175w

Fire Precautions Act 1971 (16.01.86) 1225-38

Fire Precautions (Amendment) Bill 1985/86
1R (17.12.85) 178-9

Fire prevention
Aircraft 582w
Electric lighting 175w
Multiple occupation 626w
Public buildings (17.12.85) 178-9

Fire regulations
Prosecutions 174-5w

Fire resistant materials 234w, 582w
Aircraft 582w
Nurses 234w

Fire services
Equipment 274w
Local government expenditure 172w, 173w
Testing 274w

Firearms certificates
Fees & charges 274w

Firearms Licensing Committee 274w

Fires
Coal mining 1205
Hospitals 234w, 438w, 697w
Nursing homes 697w
Oakthorpe 1205
RAF Brampton 917

Fish
Government grants 613w
Import controls 613w
USA 613w

Fish conservation
Salmon 563
Scotland 565w

Fish diseases 486w

Fisher, Mr Mark
Debates etc
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 113-6, 118-9
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1011
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1162
Questions
EC reform 201w
Universities, Research 117w

Fisheries
EC action (16.01.86) 1240-67
Falkland Islands 364w, 562-3
Great Grimsby 399w
Social security benefits rules 239-40w
South Atlantic 583-4w

Fishery agreements
Argentina 364w

Fishery protection
Sea fishing 62w
South Atlantic 584w

Fishing crews
Industrial training 399w

Fishing gear 579w
Drift nets 614w

Fishing limits
Falkland Islands 562

Fishing vessels
Shipping safety 479w, 582w
135-6w, 589w, 1057, 1069

Flannery, Mr Martin
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 318, 324
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 785
Questions
British Aerospace, Westland helicopters 920-1
Overseas trade, South Africa 1074
Philippines, Foreign policy 198w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 115w, 143

Flats
Service charges 677w

Flats Management Committee of Inquiry 677w

Fletcher, Mr Alex
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 165
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 965-8
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 694
Questions
North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board, External financing limits 164w
Ravenscraig Steelworks, Trade unions 294w

Fog
M25 43w

Fontainebleau Summit 539-40w

Food
Development aid 770

Food additives 275w, 561
EC law 276w
Food industry 276w
Food labelling 277w, 556
Food standards 486w
Nutrition & health 276w
Research 486w

Food aid
Ethiopia 40w
Fuels 772
Sudan 447w, 772

Food aid from EC
Africa 329w

Food from Britain 483-4w
Cooperatives 483-4w
Government grants 483-4w

Food industry
Food additives 276w

Food labelling 555-6
Chocolate 557
Fats 277w, 556-7
Food additives 277w, 556
Nutrition & health 556

Food poisoning 605w
Hospitals 605w
Stanley Royd Hospital 325w, 605w

Food standards
Food additives 486w
Irradiation 310w
Nutrition & health 277-8w

Food surpluses
Butter 279w
Disaster relief 329w
EC action 279w
European Economic Community 277w, 279w
Intervention stocks 1w, 279w

Food & Environment Protection Act 1985 725w
Pesticides 723w, 725w

Fookes, Miss Janet
Questions
Materials technology 633w

Foot, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1229
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 815-20
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 782-3
Questions
Business statement 576
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 1206

Football Safety Review
Ministerial statements (16.01.86) 1225-38

Foreign Affairs Select Committee (17.12.85) 180-218, 257, 287-8
General Belgrano 287-8

"Foreign Affairs Select Committee on Famine in Africa" (17.12.85) 180-218, 257

Foreign aid 551w
Developing countries 550-1w

Foreign companies in UK
Car industry 1062

Foreign investment in UK
Japan 1193
Westland helicopters 451w

Foreign patients
Income 69-70w
NHS charges 69-70w

Foreign policy
Afghanistan 204w
Argentina 199w
Middle East 193w
Namibia 205w
Philippines 31-2w, 198w
South Africa 195w, 293
Syrian Arab Republic 203w
Torture 363-4w
USSR 194w
Yugoslavia 203w
Zimbabwe 200w

Foreign relations
African National Congress 294
Iran 363w
Iraq 735-6w
Israel 290
Japan 205w
Libyan Arab Republic 1206
Middle East 290-1
Saudi Arabia 204w
South Africa 295, 296
Sri Lanka 202w
Strategic defence initiative 194w
Zimbabwe 200w

Foreign tourists
Immigration rules 174w
Interviews 174w
Statistics 5-6w
Visas 132w

Foreign workers
South Africa 285

Foreign & Commonwealth Office
Arab boycott 291
Civil service manpower 640w
Equal opportunities 33-4w

Forestry Commission
Dorset 724-5w
Land acquisition 724-5w

Forests
Nature conservation 162w

Forman, Mr Nigel
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 308
Questions
Armed forces pensions, Costs 96w
EC Budget Council 48-9w
Economic growth 651w
European Security Conference, Stockholm 292
Income tax, Tax allowances 647w
Nuclear test ban 299
Pollution control, Disclosure of information 369w
Public participation in planning, Disclosure of information 369w

Forrest Committee see Breast Cancer Screening Working Party

Forsyth, Mr Michael
Questions
Gartcosh Steelworks, Factory closures 591w
Marginal tax rates, Low pay 646w
Rate limitation, Local government expenditure 219w

Forsythe, Clifford
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Forth, Mr Eric
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 305
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1085
Questions
Civil servants, Trade unions 720-2w
Company registration, Fees & charges 136w
Council of Ministers, Offices 463-4w
Defence contracts 911-2
European Assembly 202w
Hong Kong, Annual reports 133w
Inflation 648w
Public order policing, Civil disorder 919
Regional aid, West Midlands 1196
Securities & Investment Board, Self-regulatory system 245w
South Africa, Economic sanctions 294
Student grants, Student loans 148

Forth road bridge 723w
Income 723w
Joint boards 723w
Road tolls 566w, 723w

Foster, Mr Derek
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1166

Foulkes, Mr George
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 305
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 944, 951, 1012
Members interests (17.12.85) 243
Tobacco Smoking (Public Places) Bill, 1R (18.12.85) 346
Questions
Agricultural Advisory Services, Scotland 59-60w
AIDS, Scottish health boards 63w
Bypasses, Scotland 61-2w
Chile, Diplomatic service 298
European Economic Community, Treaties 364w
Falkland Islands, Crime 32w
Falkland Islands, Criminal investigation 32w
Falkland Islands, Fisheries 364w
Falkland Islands, Peace negotiations 191-2w
Farmers, Severe weather payments 209w
Fishing vessels, Shipping safety 479w, 582w
Food from Britain, Government grants 483-4w
Free ports 649w
Lighthouses, Davaar Island 479w
Lighthouses, Northern Lighthouse Board 479w
Nicaragua, USA 284
Northern Lighthouse Board, Expenditure 582-3w
Northern Lighthouse Board, Housing improvement 583w
Social security appeals tribunals, Scotland 79w
Westland helicopters, Cabinet Committees 1206

14 Signals Regiment 99w, 101-2w, 215w
Armed Forces discharges 99w, 215w
Armed Forces strength 101-2w

Fowler, Rt Hon Norman, Secretary of State for Social Services
Debates etc
Social security, Ministerial statements (16.12.85) 21-34
Social Security Bill 1R, (17.01.86) 1345
Questions
Advertising agencies, Dept of Health & Social Security 411-4w
Civil service manpower, Dept of Health & Social Security 414-6w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Civil service manpower 595w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Public appointments 504w
Drug abuse, Publicity 557-8w
Equal opportunities, Dept of Health & Social Security 595-6w
NHS finance, Regional health authorities 156-7w
Personal social services, Consultants 323-4w
Stanley Royd Hospital, Food poisoning 325w

Fox hunting
Army 379-80w, 536-7w, 538w
Military vehicles 537w, 538w
RAVC Melton Mowbray 538w

France
Fast reactors 29w
Road traffic control 113w
Sheep meat 559

Fraserburgh Harbour Order Confirmation Bill 1985/86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Fraserburgh Harbour (No 2) Order Confirmation Bill 1985/86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Fraserburgh Harbour (No. 3) Order Confirmation Bill 1985-86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Fraser, Mr John
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 596, 639, 644-9
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 325
Questions
Brixton Prison, Body searches 458w
Distribution & Media Sales (UK), Inquiries 243w
Legal aid, Legal costs 2-3w
Nicaragua, Ministers visits abroad 283
Rate rebates, Government grants to local authorities 80-1w
Rate rebates, Lambeth 67-8w

Unemployment, Norwood 728w

Fraser, Mr Peter, Solicitor-General for Scotland
Questions
Legal costs, Scotland 635w
Sexual offences, Trials 290w

Fraud
City of London 135-6w, 153, 155-6, 360w, 568-9w, 1191, 1192-3
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 433-72
Criminal investigation 252-3w, 253-4w, 568-9w, 766-7, 768
Criminal proceedings 153, 155-6, (14.1.86) 925-34
Crown courts 454-5w
Financial institutions (18.12.85) 433-72
Financial Services Bill 1985/86 135-6w
Hill Kestral Communications 540w
Inland Revenue 344w
Johnson Matthey 510w
Lloyds of London 346-7w
Members correspondence 252-3w
Peter Cameron Webb Syndicate 767
Prosecutions 767, 768
Social security abuse 344w

Fraud Investigation Group 766-7
Manpower 766-7, 768

Free ports 649w

Free school meals 709-10w
Scotland 110w
Social security recipients 19-20w, 110w
Wales 19-20w, 20-1w

Freedom of expression
Higher education 113w, 151
Manchester University 151
Prosecutions 152

Freeman, Mr Roger
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 32
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 273-4
Questions
Arms control 203w
Business statement 1217
Community programme, Voluntary organisations 398w
International economic relations 1202
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Pensions 156
Students, Departmental publications 38w
Water Metering Steering Group Report 463w

Freemasonry 8w
Police (20.12.85) 671-2

Freeson, Rt Hon Reg
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 213-4
Questions
Community radio 625w
Community radio, Ethnic minorities 625w
Social security claims, Cricklewood 694w
Social security claims, Harlesden 693-4w
Social security claims, Neasden 693-4w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 146-7

Freshwater fish
Acid rain 544-5w

Freud, Mr Clement
Debates etc
Arts finance, Local government reform (20.12.85) 733-4
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 109-110, 116-7, 118, 123
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1230
Questions
British Council, Finance 297
CERN, UK contributions 145
School meals, Child care 38w
Special educational needs, Pupils 123-4w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w, 144

Fuel poverty (16.12.85) 131-8

Fuels
Energy consumption 124w
Food aid 772

Funerals
Death grants 316-7w
Exceptional needs payments 436w
Social Fund 599w
South Africa 196w

Further education
Student grants 120w

Gale, Mr Roger
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 172
Questions
Petroleum exploration 26w

Galley, Mr Roy
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1377, 1399-1401
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 30
Questions
School transport, Travel concessions 116w

Gardens
Cultural heritage 357w
Scotland 357w

Gardiner, Mr George
Questions
Tax yields, Alcoholic drinks duties 361w

Gartcosh
Demonstrations 921
Factory closures 1070-1, 1071-2

Gartcosh Steelworks (20.12.85) 691-9
Factory closures 591w

Gas fuels
Standing charges 124-5w

Gas meters
Privatisation 27-8w

Gas safety
Exhibitions 245w

Gas showrooms 5-6
Privatisation 5-6

Gas supply industry
Trade unions 27w

Gas tariffs
Landlord & tenant 23-4w
Price controls 30w
Privatisation 10, 30w

Gaza
West Bank 291

GEC 347w, 719w
Mergers 179w, 609w, 719w

GEC Avionics 98w, 912
Defence contracts 98w
Nimrod aircraft 912, 913

General Belgrano 287-8
Disclosure of information 287-8
Falkland Islands 288
Foreign Affairs Select Committee 287-8

General Certificate of Secondary Education 120w

General consents 219w, 366-9w, 470w
Greater London Council 366-9w

General development orders 369-71w
Town & country planning 369-71w

General Electric Company 179w

General Medical Services Committee 421-2w

George, Mr Bruce
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1396-9
Questions
Defence Select Committee, Civil service manpower 641w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Civil service manpower 640w
House of Commons Select Committees, Administrative delays 691w
House of Commons Select Committees, Civil servants 628w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons debates 683-6w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons divisions 679-82w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons staff 691-4w
House of Commons Select Committees, House of Commons debates 693w
House of Commons Select Committees, Members 681-4w
House of Commons Select Committees, Select Committee evidence 685-6w, 689-92w
House of Commons Select Committees, Specialist advisers 685-6w, 687-90w
House of Commons Select Committees, Temporary staff 691w
House of Commons Select Committees, Witnesses 691-2w
Select committees, Publishing 652-4w

Gifts
Ministers 578w
Prime Minister 578w, 628w

Gilmour, Rt Hon Sir Ian
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 240-2
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 315

Glanford
Regional aid 371-2w

Glasgow
Building industry 482w
Employment schemes 57-8w
Maternity services (18.12.85) 544-50
Mental health services 615w
Scottish courts 358-9w
Unemployment 57-8w

Glasgow District Council 614-5w
Shopping centres 614-5w

Glass industry
Barnsley 53w

GLC Research Library 469w

GLCO
Local government reform 470w

Glory Hole 464w
Derelict land grants 464w

Glyn, Dr Alan
Questions
Business statement 1220
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Heating 503-4w
Examinations, Industrial disputes 442w

Godman, Dr Norman A
Debates etc
Defence procurement (18.12.85) 385-6
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1351, 1382, 1396, 1401-3
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 589
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1251, 1256, 1257-9
Questions
Business statement 1221
Coastal shipping, EC action 762-3
Falkland Islands, Fishing limits 562
HMS Otter, Shipbuilding 717-8w
Scott Lithgow, Defence contracts 642w
Submarines, Defence contracts 641-2w, 911
Submarines, Tenders 642w
University finance, University Grants Committee 118w

Golding, Mr John
Debates etc
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No. 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 264, 274-6
Questions
Access to buildings, Mobility of disabled 655-6w
Baking industry, Staffordshire 636w

Baking industry, Working hours 635-6w
Hospitals, Telephones for disabled 505w

Goodhart, Sir Philip
Debates etc
Beckingham Hospital (20.12.85) 738-41, 743

Goodlad, Mr Alastair, Under-Secretary of State for Energy
Questions
Alternative energy, EC Energy Council 10
Alternative energy, Energy research 4
Coal mining, Industrial disputes 29w
Electricity generation 3-4
Electricity generation, Nuclear power 4-5
Fast reactors, International cooperation 29w
Industrial energy prices, Electricity area boards 13
Industrial energy prices, Temperature 13
Nuclear accidents, Hinckley Point B 30-1w
Nuclear accidents, Information 249w
Nuclear power stations, Construction 28w
Nuclear power stations, Industrial injuries 250w
Nuclear safeguards, Capenhurst 29w
Opencast mining, Environment protection 5
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, Departmental reports 717w
Yelland Power Station, Power station closures 716w

Gorst, Mr John
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1088
Questions
VAT, Tax avoidance 654w

Gould, Mr Bryan
Debates etc
Copyright (18.12.85) 527
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 439-45, 456, 469, 471
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1004-10, 1014
Questions
Business statement 1217-8
Community programme, Finance 637w
Company liquidations, Ultraleisure 449-50w
Financial Services Bill 1985/86, Members interests 1058
Lloyds of London, Members interests 1069-70
Local government reform, Hainault Forest 662-3w
Multifibre arrangement 24w, 1062-3
Multifibre arrangement, EC action 184w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" Social security receipients 566-7
Sacred Heart of Mary School, Upminister 646w

Government assistance
Airbuses 634w
A320 Airbus 632w

Government assistance to industry
Energy efficiency 307w
Energy prices 13
Shipping 163w
Tobacco industry 24w
Worsley 25w, 136w, 139w

Government Communications Headquarters
European Court of Human Rights 207w
Trade union membership 207w

Government departments
Attorney-General 567-8
Criminal proceedings 567-8
Disclosure of information 446w
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 47

Government grant to local authorities
Civil defence 273w

Government grants
Action on smoking & health 428w, 429w
Agriculture 266-7w
AIDS 427w
British Film institute 35-8w
Civil defence 272-3w, 292-3w
Companies 723-4w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board 271w
Defective housing 254-5w
Director of Public Prosecutions 253-4w
Doctors surgeries 603w
Domestic energy conservation 629w
Educational finance 289-90w
Employment schemes 179-83w
Energy efficiency 331w
Enterprise allowance scheme 56-7w
Export promotion 1060
Family Planning Association 80w
Fish 613w
Food from Britain 483-4w
Health education 121w
Law centres 253w
Leighton Linslade bypass 112w
London Marathon 263w
London Regional Transport 46-7w
Nature Conservancy Council 218w
Rugby 18w
Rural Water Supplies & Sewerage Acts 454w
Save the Children Fund 771-2
Trades Union Congress 639w
Victim support schemes 545-6w
Voluntary organisations 176-7w
Wales Tourist Board 286w
Wind power 27w

Government grants to local authorities 512-6w
Capital investment 21w
Child care 119w
Civil defence 9w, 272w, 293w, 483w
Housing insulation 263w
Housing investment programmes 255-6w
Insulation grants 673-9w
Rate rebates 80-1w
Rate support grants 104w
Urban programme 13w, 18-20w, 260w
Wales 617-8w

Government grants to voluntary organisations 176-7w, 441w
Kirkby Victims Support Scheme 187w, 271w

Government shareholding
Company finance 647-8w

Governments grants
Ancient monuments 678w

Governments grants to local authorities
Civil defence 273w

Gow, Mr Ian
Questions
Army in Northern Ireland 265-6w
Mortgage relief, Mortgage interest rates 1198
Northern Ireland Office, Civil service manpower 41w
Scottish Office, Civil service manpower 161w
Welsh Office, Civil service manpower 284w

Graduates
Employment 336-8w
Industry 120w
Speech therapy 444w
Unemployment 397w

Grant, Sir Anthony
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 949, 978-81, 983
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1028-9
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 320
Questions
Financial services 1057
House of Commons staff 66w
Road freight transport, Hazardous wastes 45w
Road freight transport, Road accidents 45w

Grant, Donald 294w
Tayside Health Board 294w

Great Grimsby
Fisheries 399w

Greater Glasgow Health Board 615w

Greater London
Building regulations 13-4w
Civil servants 48w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 738w
DHSS local offices 738w
Dial-a-ride 478w
Drug crimes 459w
Duty solicitors 446-7w
Employment opportunities 299-300w
Financial services 1072
Health services 234w
Health services finance 311w
Homelessness (20.12.85) 700-8
Hospital waiting lists 155w, 558w
Housing problems (20.12.85) 700-8
New businesses 566w
NHS finance 145-8w, 311w
Railway closures 761
Taxicards 476w
Unemployment 398-9w

Greater London Council
General consents 366-9w
Handicapped 469w
Housing finance 216-8w
Land values 13w
Local government expenditure 216-8w, 219w, 366-9w, 470w
Local government functions 469w
Local government land 13w, 257-8w
Local government reform 16w, 105w, 219w, 468-9w, 470w, 512w, 564
Rate equalisation 108w
Redundancy 564-5
Science & technology 105w

Greater London Council Research Library
Local government reform 469w

Greater Manchester
Arts finance 189w
Chief constables 565

Greater Manchester Police
Members correspondence 175w

Greece
Coastal shipping 763

Greenbelt
Hertfordshire (19.12.85) 665-70

Greenway, Mr Harry
Questions
Armed forces strength, Vocational guidance 917
Higher education, Freedom of expression 113w
Horses, Markets 560
House of Commons, Sanitation 160w
Imports, Dogs 5w
New businesses, Greater London 566w
Open University, University finance 544w
Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 265w, 553w, 627w
Railway closures, Greater London 761
Religious education, Schools 708w
Security, 10 Downing Street 271w, 457w
Shareholders, Investment in financial assets 1193
Teachers, Industrial disputes 143
Teachers, Pay 1206-7
UNESCO 179w

Greenwich
Local government revenue 661w

Gregory, Mr Conal
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 610, 640-2
Dog fighting, Public petitions (19.12.85) 664
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 326
Sunday trading, Public petitions (19.12.85) 663
Toys & games, Safety (13.01.86) 790
Questions
Council housing, Empty housing 218-9w
Food labelling, Chocolate 557
National Bus Company, Privatisation 760-1
Rent arrears, Council housing 257-60w
Yorkshire & Humberside 264w

Griffiths Inquiry see NHS Management Inquiry

Griffiths, Sir Eldon
Questions
A45, Road traffic 295w
Baton rounds, Metropolitan Police 171-2w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Manpower 6w

Griffiths, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 248-9
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1037-9
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 891-3
Questions
Overseas Development Administration, Scholarships 640w

Grist, Mr Ian
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 192, 204-7
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 336
Questions
Welsh Development Agency, Capital investment 615-6w

Groce, Cherry 130w
Police firearms 130w

Growth promoting hormones 613w
Black economy 613w

Grylls, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 784
Questions
Defence expenditure, Defence procurement 379w
EC Research Council 244w

Guatemala
Defence 473w

Gulf States
Ministers visits abroad 587-8w

Gulf war 206-7w, 296
United Nations 206-7w

Gummer, Rt Hon John Selwyn,
Minister of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Debates etc
EC Fisheries Council, Ministerial statements (19.12.85) 584-9
Questions
Agricultural policy 278w
Butter, Food surpluses 279w
Butter, Imports 280w
Butter, Intervention stocks 351w, 483-4w, 487w
Butter, New Zealand 210w
Cattle, Animal feed 541-2w
Cereals, Agricultural land 554-5
Cereals, Agricultural production 276w
Cereals, Agricultural subsidies 551-2w
Cereals, Agricultural surpluses 276w, 553-4
Cereals, Co-responsibility levy 558
Cereals, Intervention stock 283w
Cereals, Prices 557, 558, 561
Cereals, Production quotas 557, 558
Cereals, Weather 558
Common agricultural policy, EC reform 278w, 561
Common fisheries policy, EC Fisheries Council 282w
Common sheep meat regime 560
Common sugar regime, Raw materials 279w
Crops, Pulses & seeds 277w
Drift nets, Fishing gear 614w
Environment protection, EC action 282w
Falkland Islands, Fisheries 562-3
Falkland Islands, Fishing limits 562
Farm incomes 281w
Fish diseases 486w
Food additives 561
Food from Britain, Government grants 483-4w
Food surpluses, European Economic Community 277w, 279w
Intervention stocks 542-3w
Intervention stocks, Agricultural surpluses 551w
Intervention stocks, Beef & veal 540-1w
Intervention stocks, Butter 351w
Intervention stocks, Cereals 1w, 551w, 554
Intervention stocks, Food surpluses 1w
Milk, Co-responsibility levy 560-1
Milk, Production quotas 209w, 281w, 552, 553
Milk & milk products 278w
Nylon monofilament gill nets 579w
Outgoers scheme 562
Outgoers scheme, Common agricultural policy 562
Production quotas, Cereals 555
Radioactive waste disposal, Sea pollution 209-10w
Salmon, fish conservation 563
Sheep, Clawbacks 559-60
Sheep meat, Clawbacks 560
Sheep meat, Exports 559
Untreated milk, Licensing 281w

H L Chemicals 484w

Haemophilia
AIDS 70w
Screening 70w

Hainault Forest 662-3w
Local government reform 662-3w

Hamilton
Regional development grants 135w

Hamilton, Mr James
Questions
British Steel Corporation, Privatisation 1059
Business statement 577
EC integration 197w

Hamilton, Mr Neil
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 309
Questions
Capital gains tax 48w
Coal mining, Redundancy pay 247-8w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 647w
Regional aid, Chester 1067
School administration, Local education authorities 149-50
Small businesses, Corporation tax 141w
Tax yields, capital gains tax 360w
Tax yields, Corporation tax 359w
Tax yields, Tax allowances 142w
Tax yields, VAT zero rated goods 142w
VAT, EC countries 305-6w

Hamilton, Mr Willie W
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1137-9

Hampshire
Industrial development 464w
Structure plans 730w
Vacant land 464w

Hampson, Dr Keith
Debates etc
Wesland helicopters (13.01.86) 783, (15.01.86) 1141, 1142, 1143
Questions
European fighter aircraft, Defence procurement 909
Sea pollution, Beaches 223-8w
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 155

Hancock, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Oral question time point of order (17.12.85) 142
Questions
Adoption, Disclosure of information 700w
AIDS, Departmental coordination 556w
AIDS, Health service staff 556-7w
Asbestos, Brakes 407w
Civilian Pay Records Office 523w
Cruelty to children, Local government social services 437w
Devonport Dockyard, Management 381w
Devonport Dockyard, Shipbuilding 374w
Dockyards, Manpower 102w
Dockyards, Transport 374w
East Sutton Park Open Prison, Diets 625w
Glory Hole, Derelict land grants 464w
Harbour masters, Portsmouth 717w
HMS Challenger 641w
Housing investment programmes, Asbestos stripping 371w
Income tax, Orphans 654w
Industrial development, Hampshire 464w
Initial teacher training, Portsmouth 288w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 310w
Mandatory student grants, Refugees 646w
Motorways, Noise insulation grants 407w
Navy, Armed forces civilians 374-8w
Navy, Armed forces storage depots 374w
Nicorette, Prescriptions 315w
Opticians 739w
Private education, Pupils 442w
Shipbuilding, Security 564w
Tax yields, Private education 50w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141-2
Trident, Costs 212w
VC10 aircraft, Defence contracts 97w, 247w
VC10 aircraft, Military aircraft 97w

Handbooks
Nursing homes 605w

Handicap benefits
Administrative delays 738w
Social security reform 597-8w

Handicapped (17.01.86) 1346-1404
Concessionary fares 478w
Diet & disease 78w
Greater London Council 469w

Handicapped children
Attendance allowance 598-9w
Families 315-6w
Mobility allowance 598-9w

Handicapped workers
Unemployment 725w

Hanley, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc
Copyright (18.12.85) 522-7
Questions
Car industry, Foreign companies in UK 1062
Insolvency Act 1985, Publicity 183w
Overseas trade, Service industries 1073-4
RAF Brampton, Fires 917
Road traffic control, Local government reform 46w

Hannam, Mr John
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1353-6
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1123
Questions
Coal mining, Scotland 2
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 647w
Nationalised industries, Privatisation 153
Social security benefits reductions 606w

Hanson Trust 633-4w

Hanwell
Railway closures 761

Harbour masters 717w
Portsmouth 717w
Privatisation 717w

Hardy, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 320-1
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1140
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 10-1, 634w
Bus fares, Price increases 759
Business statement 1220
Civil servants, Department of Health & Social Security 18
Coal mining, Working hours 7
Criminal statistics 547w
European Court of Human Rights, Government Communications Headquarters 207w
Farm incomes 281w
Gas tariffs, Privatisation 30w

National Coal Board, Overseas investment 28-9w
Special steels, Industrial production 591w

Hargreaves, Mr Ken
Questions
Urban deprivation, Statistics 12w

Haringey
Civil disorder 343w
Coffee 284

Harlesden
Department of Health & Social Security local offices 693-4w
Social security claims 693-4w

Harman, Ms Harriet
Questions
Bettman Centre, Aids for handicapped 493w
Equal opportunities, Home Office 5w, 127w
Equal opportunities, Law reform 5w
Home Office, Public appointments 5w
Rape, Law reporting 346w
Supplementary benefits, Slough 739-40w
Urban programme, Holiday pay schemes 13w
Willowbrook estate, Housing improvement 259w

Harmondsworth Detention Centre 623-4w

Harris, Mr David
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 305
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1259, 1266
Tin, Cornwall (18.12.85) 357, 539-41
Questions
Cereals, Production quotas 557
Common fisheries policy, EC Fisheries Council 282w
EC Fisheries Council 487-8w

Harrison, Rt Hon Walter
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1017
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 891
Orders & regulations, House of Commons Standing Committees (14.01.86) 934
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 862
Questions
Channel crossing, Lighting 759
Motorways, Lighting 292w, 296-7w
M1, Road signs 405w, 631w
Nuclear weapons tests, Australia 216w
Nuclear weapons tests, Christmas Island 609w
Nuclear weapons tests, National Radiological Protection Board 906
Polaris submarines, Medical records 95-6w
Road signs, Motorways 631w

Hart, Rt Hon Dame Judith
Questions
Ethiopia, Disaster relief 447w

Harvey, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 210-3
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 340
Questions
Small firms service, Wales 286w

Haslehurst, Mr Alan
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1145-7
Questions
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141-2

Hattersley, Rt Hon Roy
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 160-1
Questions
Banking supervision, Public appointments 1193
Mortgage relief, Mortgage interest rates 1198

Havers, Rt Hon Sir Michael, Attorney-General
Questions
Associated British Foods, IRA 252w
Fraud, Criminal investigation 766-7, 768
Fraud investigation group, Manpower 768
Hill Kestrel Communications, Fraud 540w
Juries, Crown courts 445-6w
Peter Cameron Webb Syndicate, Fraud 767
St Edward, Bones 540w
Trials, Costs 713w
Westland helicopters, Official secrets 614w

Hawkins, Mr Christopher
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 598, 604-5, 622, 640, 644

Hawksley, Mr Warren
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 826-9
Questions
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review 310w

Hayes, Mr Jerry
Debates etc
Owoseja, Oluronke, Kidnapping (20.12.85) 725-7
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 818, 831-5, 838
Questions
Dartford tunnel, Road construction 111w
Exchange rates, Mark 650w
Iron & steel, Treaties 1059
USA, Nuclear disarmament 199w

Hayhoe, Rt Hon Barney, Minister of State for Health
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1364-70
Questions
AIDS 427w
AIDS, Advisory services 71w
AIDS, Departmental coordination 556w
AIDS, Departmental publications 70w
AIDS, Discrimination 71w
AIDS, Disease control 72w
AIDS, Government grants 427w
AIDS, Haemophilia 70w
AIDS, Health education 71w
AIDS, Health service staff 556-7w
AIDS, Medical research 71w
AIDS, Patients 494w
AIDS, Research finance 71w
Amenity beds, NHS & private practice 311w
Amenity beds, Regional health authorities 314-6w
Artificial insemination, Clinics 325w
Blood, Imports 326w
Breast cancer, Screening 78w, 432w, 571-2
Cancer hazards, Radiation hazards 698w
Cervical cancer, Administrative delays 699w
Cervical cancer, Departmental circulars 238-9w
Cervical cancer, Screening 239w, 324-5w, 439w, 500w, 501w, 569-70, 570-1, 572, 699w, 737-8w
Chemists shops, Prescriptions 428w
Child health, Social class 602w
Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, Royal ordnance factories 744-6w
Debendox, Drug side effects 498-9w
Dental charges exemptions 420w
Dental services, Fees & charges 147w
District health authorities, Capital investment 507w
District health authorities, Contracts for services 155w, 508w
District health authorities, Cost effectiveness 600-1w, 743-4w
District health authorities, Expenditure 238w, 702-3w
Doctors surgeries, Government grants 603w
Family doctors, Patients 325w
Family Planning Association 80w
Family Planning Association, Health Education Council 80w
Family practitioner committees, Audit 154w, 607w
Health service staff, Derbyshire 322-3w, 509w
Health service staff, Expenditure 736-7w
Health service staff, Housing 603w
Health service staff, Low pay 736w
Health service staff, Manpower 321w
Health services, Contracts for services 236w
Health services, Greater London 234w
Health Services Board, Declarations of interest 505w
Health services finance, Greater London 311w
Health services finance, Sponsorship 311w
Heart diseases, St Helens & Knowsley Health Authority 428w
Hospital closures, Consultation papers 228-9w
Hospital consultants, Breach of contract 699w
Hospital consultants, Conditions of employment 312w
Hospital consultants, Contracts of employment 312w
Hospital consultants, NHS & private practice 601w
Hospital Hygiene Services, Bromley Health Authority 601w
Hospital staff, Disciplinary proceedings 235-6w
Limited list prescribing 739w
Limited list prescribing, Appeals 421-2w
Limited list prescribing, Lipoflavanoid 231w
Limited list prescribing, Orders & regulations 81w
Local dental committees 420w
Marriage Act 1983, Departmental circulars 420w
Maternal mortality 81-4w
NHS, Contracts for services 385-96w, 436-8w, 702w
NHS, Management 326w, 700w
NHS, Pay 312w, 557-9w
NHS, Privatisation 311w, 427w, 429-32w, 494w, 601w
NHS, Recruitment 503w
NHS administration, Medical profession 429w
NHS charges, Foreign patients 69-70w
NHS finance, Greater London 145-8w, 311w
NHS finance, Regional health authorities 498w
NHS finance, Rural areas 75w
NHS finance, Teaching hospitals 312w
NHS Management Inquiry 326w
NHS & private practice, West Midlands 66-8w
North East Thames Regional Health Authority 230-1w
Nurses, Clothing 234w
Nurses, Recruitment 419w
Nurses, Skilled workers 95w
Opticians 739w
Patients, Family doctors 699w
Prescription charges 698w
Prescription charges exemptions, Diseases 501-2w
Prescription charges exemptions, Publicity 157-8w
Prescriptions, Costs 502w
Primary health care 155w
Primary health care, District health authorities 602w
Primary health care, Expenditure 602w
Primary health care, Homelessness 606w
Primary health care, Inner city areas 602-3w, 606w
Primary health care, NHS finance 703-4w
Regional health authorities, Codes of practice 319w
Regional health authorities, Cost effectiveness 325-6w
Regional health authorities, Declarations of interest 505-6w
Regional health authorities, NHS finance 417w
Spectacles, Costs 433w
Spectacles, NHS 326-7w
Spectacles, Prescriptions 433w
Spectacles, Prices 238w, 604w
Stanley Royd Hospital, Food poisoning 605w
Surgery, Infectious diseases 325w, 440w
Teaching hospitals, NHS finance 508-10w

Haynes, Mr Frank
Questions
Coroners 547w
Crime, Statistics 457w
Falkland Islands, EC external relations 192w
Industry, Pay 585w
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Finance 11
Pay settlements, National Economic Development Council 1203
Teachers, Industrial disputes 143
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 1203-4

Hayward, Mr Rob
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 166
Questions
National No-Smoking Day, Opinion surveys 419w

Hazardous wastes
Road accidents 45w
Road freight transport 45w

Hazards
Channel crossing 630w

Heads of state
Brunei 629w

Healey, Rt Hon Denis
Questions
African National Congress, Foreign relations 294
Europe, Security 292-3
Nuclear test ban 299

Health education
AIDS 71w
Drug abuse 155-6w
Government grants 121w
Nutrition & health 121w

Health Education Council
Dept of Health & Social Security 429w
Family Planning Association 80w
Skoal Bandits 432w

Health hazards
Health service staff 556-7w
Motor vehicles 407w

Health physics
Merchant seamen 221-2w

Health service ancillary staff
Patients 235w

Health service staff
AIDS 556-7w
Amber Valley 322-3w, 509w
Derbyshire 322-3w, 509w
Expenditure 736-7w
Health hazards 556-7w
Housing 603w
Low pay 736w
Management 235w
Manpower 321w
Patients 235w
Pay 312-3w, 736-7w
Sick leave 324w
Training 71w

Health services
Blind 697w
Cancer 501w
Contracts for services 236w
Greater London 234w
Information 234w
Privatisation 161w
Rate limitation 571w
Scotland 164-6w

Health Services Board 505w
Codes of practice 505w
Declarations of interest 505w

Health services finance
Capital investment 326w
Greater London 311w
Joint boards 58w, 59w
Scottish health boards 59w
Sponsorship 311w

Health & Safety at Work etc Act 1974 639w

Health & Safety Executive
Building industry 52w

Health & Social Services & Social Security Adjudications Act 1983 571w

Heart diseases
NHS finance 504-5w
St Helens & Knowsley Health Authority 428w
Surgery 238w
Transplant surgery 504-5w

Heathcoat-Amory, Mr David
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 44-5
Questions
CERN, UK contributions 145
Intervention stocks, Cereals 551w
UNESCO 179w
VAT, Tax evasion 648w

Heathrow
Armed forces deployment 521-2w
Immigrant detainees 457-8w
Stolport 408-9w
Taxis (17.12.85) 277-82

Heating
Asbestos 371w
Council housing 719w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 503-4w

Heating allowances (16.12.85) 131-8
Income support scheme 318w

Heddle, Mr John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 947
Questions
Building societies, Takeovers 142-3w
Drinking & driving, Publicity 583w
Religious education, Schools 708w
Supplementary benefits, Hickson, AD 76w

Heffer, Mr Eric S
Questions
Nicaragua, USA 284

Helicopters
Aerospace industry 137w, 526w
Costs 533w
Defence expenditure 535w
Defence procurement 520w, 529w, 532-3w, 534w, 609-10w, 610-1w
EC countries 515-6w
European Economic Community 533w
Factories 530w
Falkland Islands 610w
International cooperation 529-30w, 530-1w, 531-2w, 534w, 535w
Technical assistance 515-6w, 525-6w
USA 530w

Hemel Hempstead bypass 477w

Henderson, Mr Barry
Debates etc
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 587
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1251, 1253-4
Questions
Business statement 581

Heroin
Drug abuse 132w
Prescriptions 132w

Hertfordshire
Commuters 409w
Greenbelt (19.12.85) 665-70
Rate support grants 104w
Unemployment 300w

Heseltine, Rt Hon Michael, Secretary of State for Defence (until 9 Jan 1986)
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1209
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 780, (15.01.86) 1098-1107, 1115, 1165
Questions
Falkland Islands, Ministers visits abroad 212w
Westland helicopters, House of Commons debates 1204

Heseltine, Michael 515w, 553-4w, 614w, 629w
Official secrets 515w
Westland helicopters 921, 1206

Hickmet, Mr Richard
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1209-10
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1236
Questions
Bank of England, Bank loans 1193
Cyprus, United Nations 32w
Iron & steel industry, Factory closures 1071
Overseas trade, Japan 590w
Regional aid, Glanford 371-2w

Hicks, Mr Robert
Questions
Butter, Intervention stocks 351w, 487w
Intervention stocks, Butter 351w

Hickson, A D 76w
Supplementary benefits 76w

Higgins, Mr Terence
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 162-3
Questions
Coastal Shipping, EC countries 763
Economic growth, manufacturing industries 1200
Inland tax assessment, Bureaucracy 308w

High rent schemes 410-2w

High technology parks
Agricultural land 559

Higher education
EC countries 117w
Educational finance 338-40w
Freedom of expression 113w, 151
School leaving 122w
Speech therapy 444w
Student numbers 117w, 118w

Higher education admission 709-10w
Educational standards 115w
Scottish Certificate of Education 115-6w
Universities 643w

"Higher Education Consultation Paper" 118w, 120w

Highlands & Islands Development Board
Agricultural support systems 294-5w
Tourism 65w

Highlands & Scottish Tourist Board 65w

Hijacking
International cooperation 207w

Hill, Mr James
Questions
Business statement 577, 1218
Elderly, Community policing 155
Overseas trade, South Africa 1074
South Africa, Economic sanctions 294

Hill Kestrel Communications 540w
Fraud 540w

Hill livestock allowances
Scotland 294-5w

Hinckley Point B 30-1w, 64w
Nuclear accidents 30-1w, 64w

Hind, Mr Kenneth
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 833, 839-42, 844
Questions
North Yemen, Development aid 447-8w

Hip replacements 238w, 419w, 499-500w, 604w
Hospital waiting lists 499-500w, 604w
West Midlands Regional Health Authority 419w

Hirst, Mr Michael
Questions
"Higher Education Consultation Paper" 118w
Inflation 649w

Jordanhill College of Education, College closures 294w
Neighbourhood watch schemes 547w
Patent Office, Non-departmental public bodies 453-4w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical Assistance 560w
Vauxhall Motors 588-9w

HMS Challenger 641w

HMS Euryalus 564w

HMS Otter 564w, 717-8w
Shipbuilding 717-8w

HMS Resolution 95-6w

Hogg, Mr Douglas
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 226, 229, 236, 244
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 795, 824, 846, 808-816
Questions
Car tax 1199
Production quotas, Cereals 555

Hogg, Mr Norman
Debates etc
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 533
Maternity services, Glasgow (18.12.85) 544-5

Holiday pay schemes 13w
Urban programme 13w

Holland, Mr Stuart
Debates etc
Crown Agents (Amendments) Bill, Money res (16.01.86) 1336
Members (18.12.85) 364
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 186, 189-94, 206, 215, 217
St Olaves St Thomas and St Johns Charities (18.12.85) 365-71
Questions
Aid financed trade, Development aid 770
Brixton Prison, Body searches 342w
Brixton Prison, Prisoners rights 342w
Brixton Prison, Security 342w
Brixton Prison, Women 342w
Food aid, Sudan 772
Metropolitan Police, Recruitment 10-1w
Zimbabwe, Foreign policy 200w

Holloway Prison 623w
Sanitation 623w

Holt, Mr Richard
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 167
Industrial tribunals (18.12.85) 531-5, 538
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 321
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 270
Questions
Buses, Speed governors 758
City & Guilds of London Institute, Vocational education 118w
Driving tests, Dyslexia 478w
Exservicemen, Employment discrimination 906
Regional aid, Cleveland 1066

"Home Life: Residential Care" 604w

Home Office
Advertising 275w
Empty housing 458-9w
Equal opportunities 5w, 127w
Local government reform 11-2w
Public appointments 5w
Research finance 340-1w

Home Robertson, Mr John
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1250, 1262-4
Questions
Business statement 578
Cereals, Agricultural land 554-5
Cereals, prices 558
Civil service, Scotland 18
Coal mining, Scotland 2
Intervention stocks, Agricultural surpluses 551w
Military aircraft, Low flying 641w
Rate support grants, Lothian Regional Council 615w
Tobacco, Retail trade 138-9w
Tobacco industry, Government assistance to industry 24w
Tobacco industry, Scotland 62w
UNESCO, Commonwealth 179w

Home visits 415w
Social security claims 415w

Homelessness
Families 465-6w, 651w
Greater London (20.12.85) 700-8
Primary health care 606w
Secure tenancies 468w

Homicide
Prisoners release 462w

Honduras
Armed forces training 525w
Defence 473w
Development aid 448w
Human rights 207-8w
Refugees 207-8w

Hong Kong
Annual reports 133w
Multifibre arrangement 1063
Nationality 584w, (16.01.86) 1268-304
Overseas aid 772

Hong Kong Act 1985 (16.01.86) 1268-304

Honours
Political Honours Scrutiny Committee 3w

Hordern, Sir Peter
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 164
Questions
Block grant, Per capita costs 672-3w
Cereals, Agricultural subsidies 551-2w
Trade competitiveness, Industry 556

Hormone treatments
Human growth hormones 700w
NHS 700w

Horses
Animal welfare 281-2w
Army 536w, 537w
Export of live animals 485w
Marginal land 281-2w
Markets 560

Horticulture
EC accession 278-9w
EC internal trade 278-9w

Hospital administration 235w

Hospital beds 167w
Hospital closures 77w, 495w
Northern Ireland 266w
Regional health authorities 495w
Scotland 353-4w
Scottish health boards 354-8w

Hosptial catering
Armed forces 373w, 374w
Armed forces catering services 373w
Margarine 428w

Hospital closures
Consultation papers 228-9w
Hospital beds 77w, 495w
Middlesex Hospital 155w
NHS finance 503w
Ruchill Hospital (18.12.85) 377-8
Scottish Health boards 353-4w
Sick leave 324w

Hospital consultants
Breach of contract 699w
Conditions of employment 312w
Contracts of employment 312w
Disciplinary proceedings 312w
NHS & private practice 601w

Hospital discharges 236-7w
Community care 236-7w

Hospital Hygiene Services
Bromley Health Authority 601w

Hospital length of stay 235w, 604w

Hospital patients
Trauma 158w

Hospital radio (18.12.85) 378-80

Hospital staff
Disciplinary proceedings 235-6w

Hospital waiting lists
Acute beds 558w
Amber Valley 322w
Bolton Health Authority 496w
Coronary bypass operations 325w
Derbyshire 322w
Greater London 155w, 558w
Hip replacements 499-500w, 604w
Surgery 155w, 238w

Hospital wards
Child patients 284w

Hospitals 605w, (20.12.85) 738-44
Amber Valley 323w
Construction 266w, 554-6w
Construction costs 234-6w
Derbyshire 323w
District health authorities 84-96w
Falkland Islands 125w
Falkland Islands Company 125w
Fires 234w, 438w, 697w
Food poisoning 605w
NHS 84-96w
Northern Ireland 266w
Per capita costs 125w
Peterborough Health Authority 326w
Privatisation 236w, 293-4w, 508w
Smoking 503w
Sponsorship 605w
Telephones for disabled 505w
Wales 108w, 284-6w

House of Commons
Sanitation 160w

House of Commons accommodation
Richmond Terrace 261w

House of Commons catering
Apples 716w

House of Commons Chamber
Speakers rulings & statements (16.01.86) 1270

House of Commons debates
House of Commons Select Committees 683-4w, 693w
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 166, 167 (18.12.85) 342, 343, 344
Westland helicopters 1204

House of Commons divisions
House of Commons Select Committees 679-82w
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 251 (14.01.86) 1014, 1015

House of Commons galleries
Speakers rulings & statements (14.01,86) 983

House of Commons Library
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1209-12

House of Commons questions
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 48, (15.01.86) 1072 (16.01.86) 1224

House of Commons Select Committees 291-2w
Administrative delays 691w
Armed Forces Bill 1985/86 (20.12.85) 744
Civil servants 628w
Estimates days 693w
House of Commons debates 683-6w, 693w
House of Commons divisions 679-82w
House of Commons staff 691-4w
Members 681-4w
"Order Paper" 683-6w
Select Committee evidence 685-6w, 689-92w
Speakers rulings & statements (19.12.85) 591
Specialist advisers 685-6w, 687-90w
Temporary staff 691w

Witnesses 691-2w

House of Commons staff 66w
House of Commons Select Committees 691-4w

House of Commons voting methods
Members interests 15-6

House of Fraser 634w
Mergers 634w

House of Lords reporting
Speakers rulings & statements (18.12.85) 396

House purchase
Birmingham 458-9w
Housing Defects Act 1984 103-4w

Household Cavalry 536w, 537w

Households
Families 506w
Housing stock 16w
Social class 285w
Wales 285w
Water supply 468w

Housing
Health service staff 603w
Immigration rules 127-8w
Liverpool (20.12.85) 745-54
Waltham Forest (20.12.85) 717-24

Housing benefits
Costs 317w
Expenditure 596w
Income support scheme 318w
Lambeth 67-8w
Local government expenditure 410w
Pensioners 410w
Rate rebates 78w
Rates & rating 317w, 319w
Social security benefit reductions 410-2w
Social security benefits rules 503-4w
Social security recipients 410-2w, 701w
Social security reform 596w, 597w, 696w, 697w
Voluntary organisations 695w

Housing construction
Planning appeals 105-6w

Housing cooperatives (20.12.85) 745-54

Housing Corporation
Finance 262w

Housing Defects Act 1984 16-7w, 103-4w, 254-5w, 466-7w
Easiform housing 17w
House purchase 103-4w

Housing departments
Lewisham 920
NALGO 920

Housing design
Crime prevention 175w

Housing finance 262w, 576w
Greater London Council 216-8w
Local government expenditure 217w
Slum clearance 565

Housing improvement
Northern Lighthouse Board 583w
Willowbrook estate 259w

Housing insulation
Government grants to local authorities 263w
Wales 719w

Housing investment programmes
Asbestos stripping 371w
Government grants to local authorities 255-6w
Private rented housing 217w

Housing problems
Greater London (20.12.85) 700-8
Liverpool (16.01.86) 1337-40

Housing revenue accounts 663-4w, 664-70w
Surpluses 664-70w

Housing standards 574-6w

Housing stock 574-6w
EC countries 16w
Households 16w

Housing subsidies
Expenditure 663-4w

Howard, Mr Michael, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade & Industry
Debates etc
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 445, 467-72
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1010-7
Insurance, Contracts (20.12.85) 677-80
Questions
Associated British Foods, Company accounts 243w
Book piracy 1067-8
Brewing industry, Public houses 136w
Companies 588w
Company accounts, Johnson Matthey 1068-9
Company law, Law reform 136-7w
Company liquidations, Cardiff 451w
Company liquidations, Inquiries 25w
Company liquidations, W G Allen 1073
Company registration, Fees & charges 136w
Distribution & Media Sales (UK), Inquiries 243w
Electricity tariffs, Landlord & tenant 23-4w
Exhibitions, Gas safety 245w
Financial Services Bill 1985/86, Fraud 135-6w
House of Fraser, Mergers 634w
Imperial Tobacco, Takeovers 633-4w
Insider trading, Prosecutions 184w
Insolvency Act 1985 137w
Insolvency Act 1985, Publicity 183w
Lloyds of London, Financial Services Bill 1985/86 589w
London Commodity Exchange, Upper Waiting Hall 633w
Manufactured goods 586w
Manufacturing industries, Industrial investment 587w
Office of Fair Trading, Cash Limits 244w
Plessey, Mergers 179w
Public utilities, Consumer protection 590-1w
Small businesses, Company accounts 243w
Takeovers, Codes of practice 335w
Trade Descriptions (Origin Marking) (Miscellaneous Goods) Order 1981 245w

Howarth, Mr Alan
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 942, 955, 973
Questions
Tax rates & bands, Taxpayers 1195
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141-2
UNESCO, UK contributions 771

Howarth, Mr Gerald
Debates etc
Insurance, Contracts (20.12.85) 676-7
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 43, (13.01.86) 787 (15.01.86) 1131
Questions
British Airways, Privatisation 580w
European fighter aircraft, International cooperation 563w
School governors, Elections 152

Howe, Rt Hon Sir Geoffrey, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council, Ministerial statements (18.12.85) 301-9
Questions
Anglo-Irish Agreement 735w
Argentina, Diplomatic relations 198w, 199w
Argentina, Foreign policy 199w
Argentina, Peace negotiations 198-9w
Chile, Diplomatic service 298
Diplomatic service, Trade promotion 297-8
EC Foreign Affairs Council, EC budget 202w
EC integration 365-6w
EC reform 201w
EC reform, Parliament 201-2w
EC reform, Voting methods 201w
Europe, Security 292-3
European Assembly 202w
European Assembly, EC reform 200-1w
European communities, Vosting methods 193-4w
European Security Conference, Stockholm 292
Falkland Islands, Peace negotiations 191-2w
Hong Kong, Annual reports 133w
Iran-Iraq war 296-7
Iran-Iraq war, Peace negotiations 296
Iraq, Terrorism 200w
Jamaica, Diplomatic service 298
Jordan, Peace negotiations 288
Middle East, Peace negotiations 288, 289
Namibia, Western Contact Group 286
Portugal, EC budget contributions 207w
South Africa, African national Congress 285
South Africa, Foreign policy 195w
South Africa, Mandela, Nelson 286
South Africa, Ministers visits abroad 284-5
South Africa, Trade unions 285
South Africa, Violence 285-6
Trade promotion, Marketing 298
USSR, Foreign policy 194w

Howell, Rt Hon David
Questions
Oil prices 1201

Howell, Mr Ralph
Questions
Cereals, Export credit guarantees 242-3w
Income tax 420-1w
Prices, Retail prices index 362w
Production quotas, Cereals 555
Social security benefits rules, Exceptional circumstances additions 69w
Standard of living, Families 418-9w
Unemployment 549w
Unemployment, Handicapped workers 725w
Unemployment benefits, EC countries 72w
Wood, Imports 332w

Howells, Mr Geraint
Debates etc
Fuel poverty (16.12.85) 131-2
Questions
Cereals, Prices 558
Class sizes, Pupil-teacher ratios 116w
Deterrence theory 563w
EC reform, Voting methods 201w

Hoyle, Mr Doug
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 39-40, (13.01.86) 788
Questions
Alcoholism & crime 457w
Army, Fox hunting 379-80w, 536-7w; 538w
Army, Horses 536w
Bank of England, Banking supervision 1191
County Palatine, Magistrates 329w
Freemasonry 8w
Industrial development 585w
Magistrates, Manpower 3w
Magistrates, North West region 346w

Hubbard-Miles, Mr Peter
Questions
Rear seat belts 345w
Rear seat belts, Orders & regulations 476w

Hughes, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Oral question time intervention (13.01.86) 764
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 79, 85, 86, 89-91
Questions
Channel crossing, Cabinet 759
Channel crossing, Channel ferries 765
Channel crossing, Lorries 113w

Hughes, Mr Roy
Questions
Avon bridge 630-1w
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 27w
Prescription charges 698w
Severn bridge, Debts 756

Hughes, Mr Sean

Questions
Manufacturing industries, Industrial investment 587w
Prime Minister official engagements 265w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 143
Young people, Supplementary benefits 156

Hughes, Mr Simon
Debates etc
Homelessness, Greater London (20.12.85) 705
Housing cooperatives (20.12.85) 748-9
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1028, 1039-42
Planning inquiries, Dounreay (14.01.86) 1050
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 314-5
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 271-3
Questions
Air pollution, Consultation papers 259w
Prime Minister domestic visits, Kings College Hospital 103w
South Africa, Nassau Summit 196w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence expenditure 560-1w
Water supply, Nitrates 257w

Human growth hormones 700w
Hormone treatments 700w

Human rights
Chile 200w, 473-4w
Honduras 207-8w
Iran 363w
Iraq 296, 736w

Hume, Mr John
Questions
Youth training scheme, Northern Ireland 41w

Hunt, Mr David, Under-Secretary of State for Energy
Questions
Alternative energy, Energy research 634w
Coal mining 28w
Coal mining, Industrial injuries 250-1w
Coal mining, Industrial relations 12-3
Coal mining, Investment 26w
Coal mining, Manpower 28w
Coal mining, Private investment 29w
Coal mining, Privatisation 445w
Coal mining, Productivity 26w, 717w
Coal mining, Redundant mineworkers payments scheme 12
Coal mining, Scotland 2-3
Energy efficiency, Domestic energy conservation 331w
Energy Efficiency Year, Domestic energy conservation 330-1w
Energy Efficiency Year, Voluntary organisations 331w
Margam mine, National Coal Board 14-5
Ministers domestic visits, Coal mining 1-2
National Coal Board, Coal mine closures 330w
National Coal Board, Compensation 717w
National Coal Board, Factory closures 329-30w
National Coal Board, Overseas investment 28-9w
National Coal Board, Relocation of employees 330w
Opencast mining 28w
Smoke & chimney gases, Polkemmet Bing 551-2w
Waste disposal, Polkemmet 3
Wind power, Electricity generation 27w
Wind power, Government grants 27w

Hunter, Mr Andrew
Questions
Cereals, Agricultural production 276w
Industrial production 632w
Overseas trade, Romania 585w
Town & country planning, General development orders 369-71w

Hurd, Rt Hon Douglas, Secretary of State for the Home Department
Debates etc
Criminal Proceedings arising from Fraud Review Committee, Ministerial statements (14.01.86) 925-34
Drug crimes, Personal property (19.12.85) 591
Drug Trafficking Offences Bill, 1R (19.12.85) 591
Football Safety Review, Ministerial statements (16.01.86) 1225-38
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 792-801, 803, 811
Questions
Advertising, Home Office 275w
Airport security, Manchester Airport 569w
Alley, Eric, Civil defence 177-8w
Crown courts, Criminal proceedings 454-5w
Farrakhan, Louis 627w
Home Office, Public appointments 5w
Home Office, Research finance 340-1w
Immigration, Official secrets 455w
Immigration appeals, Members correspondence 176w
Local government reform, Home Office 11-2w
Metropolitan Police 546w
Philips, Cyril 548w
Police, Public expenditure 273-4w, 341w
Police authorities, Local government expenditure 172w, 173w
Prisons, Design 177w
Security, 10 Downing Street 271w, 457w
Victim support schemes, Government grants 545-6w
Voluntary organisations, Government grants 176-7w

Hyperbaric oxygen 76-7w
Multiple sclerosis 76-7w

Hypermarkets
County Hall 369w
Employment opportunities 13w
Planning appeals 13w
Planning permission 260w

Hypothermia
Death 321w, 322w
Economic regions 322w

Illegitimate children
Cohabitation 153w

Immigrant detainees
Disclosure of information 457-8w
Heathrow 457-8w
Indian subcontinent 623-4w
Members correspondence 9-10w

Immigrants
Bangladesh 625w

Immigration
India 715w
Members correspondence 342w
Official secrets 455w

Immigration appeals
British citizenship 8-9w
Entry clearances 715w
Members correspondence 176w
Primary purpose rule 273w

Immigration applications
Nazemi, Dr 272w
Political refugees 714w

Immigration controls 625w
Bangladesh 623-4w
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 494-507
Indian subcontinent 342w
Members correspondence 455-6w
Newcastle Airport 273w
Sri Lanka 455-6w
Statistics 9-10w

Immigration officers 625w

Immigration rules
Foreign tourists 174w
Housing 127-8w
Personal income 127-8w

Imperial Tobacco 633-4w
Takeovers 633-4w

Import controls
Fish 613w

Import penetration
Textile industry 1063-4

Import quotas
Butter 210w

Imports
Blood 326w
Butter 280w
Coal mining 8-9
Dogs 5w
Morocco 138w
Phosphates 184-5w
Salmon 543w
Strategic defence initiative 213w
Wood 332w

Income
Agricultural Development and Advisory Service 280-1w
Amenity beds 314-6w
BBC 626w
Channel crossing 345w
Foreign patients 69-70w
Forth road bridge 723w
Postal workers 450-1w
Pre-payment certificates 502w
Public sector assets 652w
Social security reform 696w

Income distribution
Assisted places scheme 643-4w

Income support
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 317-8w

Income support scheme 318w, 599w, 697w, 701w, 704-6w, 741-2w
Families 318w
Heating allowances 318w
Housing benefits 318w
Industrial disputes 599w
Pensioners 317-8w, 741-2w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 317-8w
Severe weather payments 318w
Single people 741w
Social security recipients 317-8w
Unemployed 317-8w, 597w
Young people 434w, 701w

Income Tax 420-1w, 647w
Double taxation 103w
Low pay 1201
Orphans 654w
Pay 647w
Single people 647w
Stocks & shares 511w
Tax allowances 647w
Tax rates & bands 50-1w, 190w, 647w
Tax yields 50-1w

Income tax assessment 593-4w
Overseas workers 191w

India
British residents abroad 639-40w
Immigration 715w
Special voucher scheme 640w, 715w

Indian subcontinent
Immigrant detainees 623-4w
Immigration controls 342w
Visas 342w

Indictable offences
Police cautions 546-7w

Indirect taxation
Family income 306-7w

Industrial arbitration
Conditions of employment 1206-7

Industrial building allowances
Leisure facilities 360w
Tax yields 360w

Industrial development 584-5w
Cost effectiveness 586w
Hampshire 464w
Regional planning & development 586w
Small businesses 56w

Wales 757

Industrial disputes
Coal mining 14, 29w
Examinations 442w
Income support scheme 599w
Poundswick School 149-50
Social security benefits rules 318w
Social security benefits rules 599w
Stone quarrying (18.12.85) 374-6
Teachers 114-5w, 119w, 141-2, 143, 144-5, 146-7, 544w

Industrial energy conservation
Energy efficiency 7-8

Industrial energy prices
Electricity area boards 13
Temperature 13

Industrial health & safety
Coal mining 7
Small businesses 302-3w

Industrial injuries
Building industry 79w
Coal mining 250-1w
Nuclear power stations 250w
Social security benefits 79w

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council 76w

Industrial investment
Business expansion scheme 141w
Manufacturing industries 587w

Industrial loan stocks
Small investors 1194

Industrial production 632w
Iron and steel industry 24-5w
Manufacturing industries 1199-1200
Special steels 24-5w, 591w
Westland helicopters 518-9w

Industrial relations
Coal mining 11-2, 12-3

Industrial training
Fishing crews 399w
Information technology 299w
North West region 299w

Industrial training schemes
Tameside 125w

Industrial tribunals
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 531-8

Industry
Exchange rates 509-10w
Graduates 120w
Labour costs 509-10w
Pay 585w
Trade competitiveness 566

Infectious diseases
Surgery 325w, 440w, 605w

Inflation 648w, 649w, 650w
Average earnings 650w

Information
Health services 234w
Nuclear accidents 249w

Information technology
Industrial training 299w
Universities 442-4w

Information technology centres 54w
Youth training scheme 54w

Initial teaching training 288w
Portsmouth 288w

Injuries
Building industry 52-4w

Inland Revenue
Bureaucracy 308w
Fraud 344w

Inland tax assessment
Bureaucracy 308w

Inner city areas (20.12.85) 709-16
Church of England 521w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 736w
Employment 397w
Primary health care 602-3w, 606w
Teachers appraisal 122w

Inner London Education Authority
Local government expenditure 185w

Inquiries
Company liquidations 25w
Disclosure of information 629w
Distribution & Media Sales (UK) 243w
Legal aid 446w
Lloyds of London 1069
Official secrets 768-9
Wallace, Colin 134-5w

Insider trading
Prosecutions 184w

Insolvency Act 1985 137w, 183w
Publicity 183w

Insulation
Building regulations 8

Insulation grants 263w
Government grants to local authorities 673-9w

Insurance
Contracts (20.12.85) 673-80
Restrictive trade practices 1073-4

Intellectual property
Strategic defence initiative 184w, 213-4w

"Intellectual Property Rights & Innovation Consultation Paper" 453-4w

Interest rates
Economic growth 1200
European monetary system 1191-2
Exchange rates 1198
International economic relations 1202-3
Manufacturing industries 1200-1

Intergovernmental Conference 201w, 365-6w

International Commission on Radiological Protection 220-1w, 372w

International Committee of the Red Cross 562w
Treaties 562w

International conferences
Anglo-Irish Agreement 4w
Archaeology 148-9

International cooperation 477w
Aerospace industry 517-8w
Agusta 529w, 610w
Arms trade 535w
Defence procurement 910
European fighter aircraft 563w, 909, 916
Fast reactors 29w
Helicopters 529-30w, 530-1w, 531-2w, 534w, 535w
Hijacking 207w
Nuclear test ban 290-1w
South Africa 195w
Terrorism 207w
Westland helicopters 519w, 526-8w, 529w, 530w, 532w, 534w, 610-1w, 1072

International economic relations 1202
Exchange rates 1202
Interest rates 1202-3
Western Europe 1202

International Monetary Fund
Airlines 593w
Developing countries 593w

International Tin Council (18.12.85) 539-43

Intervention stock
Cereals 283w
European Agricultural Guidance & Guarantee Fund 283w

Intervention stocks 542-3w
Agricultural surpluses 551w
Animal feed 553-4
Beef & veal 540-1w
Butter 351w, 483-4w, 487w
Cereals 1w, 551w, 554, 557
Costs 1w, 277w, 351w, 487w
Food surpluses 1w, 279w
Skimmed milk powder 540-1w

Interviews
Foreign tourists 174w
9 Signal Regiment 379w
Social security recipients 229w

Invalid care allowances 701-2w
Cohabitation 701w
Costs 701w
European Court of Justice 701w
Married women 701w

Investment
Coal mining 9, 26w

Investment business 245w

Investment in financial assets (18.12.85) 346
Financial institutions (14.01.86) 938-1024
Shareholders 1193

Investor protection 452w, 764-5, (14.01.86) 938-1024, 1073
Channel crossing 764-5
Company liquidations 1073
Westland helicopters 452w

Invisible trade balance
City of London 1192

In-service training
Dept of Education & Science 120w
Nutrition 120w

IRA
Associated British Foods 252w

Iran
Foreign relations 363w
Human rights 363w
Oil imports 249-50w
Overseas trade 331-2w

Iran-Iraq war 296-7
Peace negotiations 296

Iraq
Arms embargos 735w
Foreign relations 735-6w
Human rights 296, 736w
Kurdistan 735w
Political prisoners 735w
Terrorism 200w

Iraqi Kurdistan 735w

Iron & steel
Exports 1060, 1068
Motor components industry 1061
Treaties 1059
USSR 1065

Iron & Steel industry
Factory closures 591w, 1070-1
Industrial production 24-5w
Ministerial statements (20.12.85) 691-9
Ravenscraig Steelworks 1070, 1071-2
USA 1060

Irradiation
Food standards 310w

Irving, Mr Charles
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 316
Questions
Board & lodging charges, Costs 417-8w
Council housing, Costs 217w
Road safety, Lorries 46w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 137w

Islam
Women 208w

Islamabad
Entry clearances 624w

Isle of Man
Lighthouses 47[illegible], 582-3w

Israel
Arab boycott 33w
Arms embargoes 206w
Foreign relations 290
Ministers visits abroad 289

Italy
Westland helicopters 519w

Jackson, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 51, 62
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 44, (13.01.86) 787
Questions
Buses, Speed governors 476w
Cereals, Agricultural surpluses 276w
Cereals, Prices 561
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 267-8w

Jamaica
Diplomatic service 298
Trade promotion 298

Janner, Mr Greville
Debates etc
Insurance, Contracts (20.12.85) 673-6, 679, 680
Questions
Arab boycott, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 291
BBC external services, Electromagnetic interference 206w
Business statement 581
Equal opportunities officers, Civil service recruitment 31w
Exchange rates, Sterling 651w
Farrakhan, Louis 627w
Health & Safety at Work etc Act 1974 639w
Military vehicles, Road accidents 913
Teachers, Industrial disputes 144

Japan
Balance of trade 590w
Foreign investment in UK 1193
Foreign relations 205w
Overseas trade 590w
Unemployment benefits 72w

Jarrett, Floyd 131w
Complaints against police 131w

Jarrett, Patricia 131w

Jenkin, Rt Hon Patrick
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 956-61
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1228

Jenkins, Rt Hon Roy
Debates etc
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 696-7
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 872-3

Jessel, Mr Toby
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1232
Juries (18.12.85) 415-8, 422, 426
Questions
Crown courts, Criminal proceedings 454-5w
Juries 269-70w
Juries, Crown courts 445-6w
Military bands, Costs 918
Mortage relief, Mortgage interest rates 1197
Overseas aid, Bilateral aid 447w

Jet aircraft
Air force 384w

Job centres 639w
Wales 719-20w
Working hours 719-20w

Job creation schemes
South east region 299-300w

Job start scheme 399w

John, Mr Brynmor
Questions
Food labelling, Fats 556-7
Forestry Commission, Land acquisition 724-5w
Milk, Production quotas 553
Outgoers scheme 562
Sheep meat, Clawbacks 560

Johnson Matthey (17.12.85) 159-67, 305w, (18.12.85) 433-72, 510w, 649w, 1068-9
Accounting 649w
Annual reports 649w
Banking supervision 649w
Company accounts 1068-9
Company finance 594w
Fraud 510w

Johnson Matthey Metals 649w

Johnson Smith, Sir Geoffrey
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 226-31
Questions
Food labelling, Food additives 556

Johnston, Sir Russell
Questions
Highlands & Islands Development Board, Tourism 65w
Portugal, EC budget contributions 207w
Strategic defence initiative 560w

Joint boards 58w, 59w, 404-6w, 483w, 723w
Forth road bridge 723w
Health services finance 58w, 59w

Joint financing
Scotland 58w

Joint liaison committees 59w
Scotland 59w
Voluntary organisations 59w

Jones, Mr Barry
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 333-4
Questions
Agricultural research, Crops 2w
Common agricultural policy, Crops 2w
Cooperatives, Wales 719w
Housing insulation, Wales 719w
Job centres, Wales 719-20w
Reid, P, Members correspondence 341w

Jones, Geoffrey 525w

Jones Mr Gwilym
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 339

Jones, Mr Robert B
Questions
Aid financed trade, Water treatment 770
A41, Bypasses 477w
Unemployment benefits, Social security abuse 300w

Jopling, Rt Hon Michael, Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1240-6, 1249
Questions
Annual Review of Agriculture, 1986 543w
Dumping, Licensing 614w
EC Agricultural Council, Common agricultural policy 351-2w
EC Fisheries Council 487-8w
Farmers, Severe weather payments 209w
Fish, Import controls 613w
Fish, USA 613w
Priorities Board for Research & Development in Agriculture & Food 210-1w
Salmon, Northern Ireland 543w
Veterinary services 1-2w

Jordan
Peace negotiations 288
Syrian Arab Republic 289

Jordanhill College of Education 294w
College closures 294w

Joseph, Rt Hon Sir Keith, Secretary of State for Education and Science
Questions
Education, Departmental publications 113-4w
Education support grants, Expenditure 289-90w
Higher education, Educational finance 338-40w
Inner London Education Authority, Local government expenditure 185w
Science & technology research, Research finance 39w
Student grants, Parental contributions 39-40w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w, 119w, 141-2, 143, 144-5, 146-7
Teachers, Pay 146, 579w
Teachers appraisal 152
Turville School, Members correspondence 579w
Voluntary schools, Educational finance 340w

Judgments
Board & lodging charges 240w
Private rented housing 464w
Special educational needs 288-9w

Juries 269-70w
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 415-32
Crown courts 445-6w

Jury vetting 269-70w

Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1227-8, 1238
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 794, 798, 800, 801-12, 833, 834, 861
Questions
Police, Public expenditure 273-4w, 341w

Keays, Sarah 768-9

Kellet-Bowman, Mrs Elaine
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1004, 1012

Kennedy, Mr Charles
Debates etc
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 698
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 33
Statutory Sick Pay Uprating Order 1985 (15.01.86) 1179

Kershaw, Sir Anthony
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 170
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 180-3, 208
Questions
British Council, Cultural relations 297
Falkland Islands, General Belgrano 288

Key, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 845-8

Keyworth
British Geological Survey 17

Kidnapping
Children (20.12.85) 725-30

Kidney failure 699-700w
Kidney patients 699-700w

Kidneys
Medical treatments 310-1w
Transplant surgery 310-1w, 698w

Kilfedder, James
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Kilroy-Silk, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Quangos (18.12.85) 354
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 322
Young people (18.12.85) 358
Questions
Birds, Scotland 721-3w
Cervical cancer, Screening 737-8w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Government grants 271w
District health authorities, Merseyside 149-52w
EC Foreign Affairs Council, EC budget 202w
Heart diseases, St Helens & Knowsley Health Authority 428w
Kirkby Victims Support Scheme, Government grants to voluntary organisations 187w, 271w
Life imprisonment 171w
Life imprisonment, Prisoners release 170-1w
Per capita costs, Prisons 170w
Police custody 620w, 621w
Police custody, Costs 621w
Police custody, Expenditure 621w
Police custody, Manpower 621w
Prison medical services, Per capita costs 172w

Prison population, Ethnic groups 170w
Prisons, Per capital costs 170w
Probation, Ethnic monitoring 130-1w
Probation, Statistics 713w
Racial attacks 622-3w
Regional health authorities, Merseyside 150w
Remand in custody 621-2w
Remand in custody, Police cells 619-20w, 715w
Student numbers, Women 121w

Kings College Hospital 103w
Prime Minister domestic visits 103w

King, Mr Roger
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1036, 1042-3
Questions
Motor vehicle parts, Spain 1061-2

King, Rt Hon Tom, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
Questions
Anglo-Irish Agreement 265w
Army in Northern Ireland 265-6w
Codes of practice, Royal Ulster Constabulary 269w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 267-8w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Codes of practice 42w
Terrorism, Sentencing 553w

Kinnock, Rt Hon Neil
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1211-2
Prime Ministers question time point of order (19.12.85) 568
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 773, (15.01.86) 1082-7
Questions
British Aerospace, Westland helicopters 919
Business statement 573-5, 1214
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Poverty 154-5
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 1205
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 564

Kinsley
Coal mine closures 7

Kirkby Victims Support Scheme 187w
Government grants to voluntary organisations 187w, 271w

Kirkwood, Mr Archy
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 171-2
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 28
Questions
Agricultural policy 278w
AIDS, Advisory services 71w
AIDS, Departmental publications 70w
AIDS, Discrimination 71w
AIDS, Haemophilia 70w
AIDS, Health education 71w
AIDS, Medical research 71w
AIDS, Research finance 71w
Blood, Scotland 292w
British Council 192w
Defence equipment, Nuclear weapons 561w
Factor VIII, Blood 416w
Family practitioner committees, Audit 154w, 607w
National Youth Advisory Council, Public appointments 287-8w
NHS charges, Foreign patients 69-70w
Oil revenues, Tax yields 1202
Regional health authorities, NHS finance 417w
Sea fishing, Scotland 62w
Social security payments, Administrative delays 75w
Supplementary benefits, Young people 84w, 434-5w
Youth training scheme 54w, 187w
Youth training scheme, European Social Fund 299w
Youth training scheme, Finance 187w
Youth training scheme, Ministers domestic visits 186-7w
Youth training scheme, Take-up of employment 187w

Kneller Hall 918
Royal Military School of Music 918

Knight, Mr Greg
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 405, 406, 408-9
Questions
Customs, Drug crimes 144-5w
Offshore drilling, Energy research 26-7w
UK repayments from EC budget 539-40w

Knight, Dame Jill
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 875
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 27

Knowles, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 329
Questions
Dept of the Environment, Efficiency scrutinies 263w

Knox, Mr David
Questions
Alternative energy, EC Energy Council 10
Economic growth 651w
European Communities 206w
Manufactured goods 586w
Milk, Co-responsibility levy 560-1
Money supply, MO 306w
National income, Public sector borrowing requirement 190w
Public expenditure, National income 189w

Kurdistan
Iraq 735w

Laboratories
Blood 416w

Labour costs
Industry 509-10w

Labour only sub-contracting 42w, 50w, 52w, 186w
Building industry 42w, 52w
Self-employed 42w, 52w
Tax exemption certificates 50w

Labour Party
Defence 567

Labour turnover
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 736w
DHSS local offices 738w

Lagan Valley
By election writs (17.12.85) 139

Lambeth
Housing benefits 67-8w
Rate rebates 67-8w

Lamond, Mr James
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 304
Questions
European Security Conference, Stockholm 292
Multifibre arrangement, Textile industry 1063-4
Strategic Defence Initiative, Defence research 907

Lamont, Mr Norman, Minister of State for Defence Procurement
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1144
Questions
Areospace industry, Helicopters 526w
Agusta, Company finance 533w
Agusta, International cooperation 529w, 610w
Agusta helicopters, Defence procurement 530w
Air force, Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament 213w
Air force bases, Armed forces deployment 538w
Arms trade, International cooperation 535w
British Aerospace, Defence contracts 98-9w
Defence, Cost effectiveness 564w
Defence expenditure, Defence procurement 379w
Defence procurement 247w
Defence procurement, Cost effectiveness 372w
Defence procurement, International cooperation 910
Defence procurement, Mergers 719w
Devonport Dockyard, Management 381w
Dockyards, Management 718w
Dockyards, Privatisation 718w
Earthquakes, Defence research 211w
European fighter aircraft 915
European fighter aircraft, Defence contracts 910
European fighter aircraft, Defence expenditure 534-5w, 612w
European fighter aircraft, Defence procurement 909
European fighter aircraft, International cooperation 563w, 909, 916
Exservicemen, Employment discrimination 906
GEC, Mergers 609w
Helicopters, Defence procurement 532-3w, 534w, 609-10w
Helicopters, European Economic Community 533w
Helicopters, International cooperation 529-30w, 530-1w, 531-2w, 534w, 535w
Military aircraft, Early warning systems 562w
Ministry of Defence, Early retirement 215-6w
Nimrod aircraft, Costs 98w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence 98w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence contracts 912, 913
Nimrod aircraft, Radar 98w
Nimrod aircraft, Repairs & maintenance 97-8w
Nuclear test ban, Civil service manpower 366w
Nuclear weapons, Nuclear fuel cycle 561w
Nuclear weapons tests 216w
Nuclear weapons tests, Australia 216w, 561w
Nuclear weapons tests, Christmas Island 609w
Nuclear weapons tests, National Radiological Protection Board 906
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injuries compensation 563w
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injury compensation 905-6
Public footpaths, Defence Act 1842 373w
Public footpaths, Menwith 372-3w
Royal ordnance factories, Production capacity 215w
Smith, James, Defence procurement 214w, 215w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence contracts 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence expenditure 560-1w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 213w, 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Imports 213w
Strategic defence initiative, Intellectual property 213-4w
Strategic defence initiative, Lasers 214w
Strategic defence initiative, Tactical nuclear weapons 213w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 560w
Tornado aircraft, Defence expenditure 534w, 611-2w
Trident 562w
Trident, Contracts 562w
Trident, Costs 212w
Trident missiles 246w
Trident missiles, Testing 212w
VC10 aircraft, Defence contracts 97w, 247w
VC10 aircraft, Military aircraft 97w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 534w

Westland helicopters, Defence contracts 535w
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 525-6w
Westland helicopters, International cooperation 526-8w, 529w, 530w, 532w, 534w, 610-1w
Westland helicopters, Letters 525w
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 610w
Westland helicopters, Shares 533w
Westland helicopters, USA 533w

Lancashire
Local government staff 627w

Land acquisition
Defence land 916-7
Forestry Commission 724-5w

Land reclamation
Compensation 463w
Shopping centres 614-5w

Land Registry Office
Birmingham 109w

Land Resources Development Centre
Finance 770-1

Land use
Agricultural land 558-9

Land values
Greater London Council 13w

Landlord & tenant
Electricity tariffs 23-4w
Gas tariffs 23-4w

Languages education
Nordic countries 118-9w

Lasers
Nuclear weapons 909
Strategic defence initiative 214w

Latest damage 109w, 766
Building industry 766
Law Reform Committee 109w

Latham, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 609-12
Oral question time intervention (18.12.85) 287
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 300
Questions
Anglo-Irish Agreement 265w
Farrakhan, Louis 627w
Foreign aid 551w
Foreign aid, Developing countries 550-1w
Israel, Arab boycott 33w
Limited list prescribing, Orders & regulations 81w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 290
Peres, Shimon, Official visits 552w
Post Office, Financial targets 650-1w
Scientific civil service, Conditions of employment 17
Skoal Bandits, British Medical Association 432w
Social security benefits, Members correspondence 432-3w
Tobacco industry, Advertising codes of practice 434w

Law centres 446w
Finance 253w, 261-2w
Government grants 253w
Local government reform 261-2w

Law enforcement
Crime 457w
Sunday trading 251-2w

Law officers
Disclosure of information 769

Law reform
Company law 136-7w
Equal opportunities 5w
Leasehold housing (14.01.86) 935-7

Law Reform Committee 109w
Latent damage 109w

Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1985 290w

Law Reform (Parent & Child) (Scotland) Bill 1985/86
2R* (17.01.86) 1410

Law reporting
Rape 546w

Lawler, Mr Geoff
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1231
Questions
Multifibre arrangement 1062-3
School choice, Schools & parents 122w
Teachers, Dismissal 150
Visas, Indian subcontinent 342w

Lawrence, Mr Ivan
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 878-82, 888, 889
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 808
Questions
Budapest Cultural Forum 208w
Financial Services Bill 1985/86, Fraud 135-6w
Immigration appeals, Members correspondence 176w
Road accidents, Breathalysers 481w
Road accidents, Cars 481w
Trade unions, Political levy 399-400w

Lawson, Rt Hon Nigel, Chancellor of the Exchequer
Debates etc
Banking supervision, Ministerial statements (17.12.85) 159-67
Questions
Bank of England, Bank loans 1193
Bank of England, Banking supervision 1191-2
Banking supervision, Public appointments 1193
Budget, USA 648w
City of London, Fraud 1192-3
City of London, Invisible trade balance 1192
Economic growth, Interest rates 1200
Economic growth, Manufacturing industries 1199-1200, 1200-1
International economic relations 1202
International economic relations, Exchange rates 1202
International economic relations, Interest rates 1202-3
International economic relations, Western Europe 1202
Oil prices 1201
Oil revenues, Tax yields 1202

Lead
Radioactive waste disposal 106w

Lead free petrol (14.01.86) 1027-48
Capital investment 634-5w
Costs 635w
Energy consumption 635w
Taxation 654-5w

Lead pollution
Water supply 12w

Leadbitter, Mr Ted
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1164-5

Leasehold housing
Law reform (14.01.86) 935-7

Leasehold Reform Bill 1985/86
1R (14.01.86) 935-7

Leave
Civil servants 720-2w

Lee, Mr John, Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement
Questions
Air force 101w
Air force, Armed forces discharges 381-2w
Air force, Armed forces retirement 382-3w, 383-4w
Air force, Armed forces training 564w
Air force bases, Public buildings 522w
Armed forces, AIDS 212w
Armed forces, Vocational guidance 918
Armed forces catering services, Armed forces civilians 373w
Armed forces catering services, Hospital catering 373w
Armed forces deployment, Bolton 96w
Armed forces discharges, Aircrew 99-101w
Armed forces officers, Criminal investigation 525w
Armed forces pensions, Costs 96w
Armed forces pensions, Widows 246w
Armed forces strength, Bolton 522-3w
Armed forces strength, Vocational guidance 917
Armed forces strength, 9 Signal Regiment 101-2w
Armed forces training, Aircrew 99w, 101w
Armed forces training, Morocco 212w
Armed forces training, South Africa 523w
Army, Fox hunting 379-80w, 536-7w, 539w
Army, Horses 536w
Civil service manpower, Ministry of Defence 381w
Civilian Pay Records Office 522w
Defence contracts 911-2
Defence contracts, Scotland 912
Defence contracts, Scott Lithgow 914
Defence land, Land acquisition 916-7
Defence land, Rainham marshes 561w
Defence procurement, Cammell Laird 912
Defence procurement, Navy 914
Defence procurement, Warships 914
Defence procurement, West Germany 525w
Devonport Dockyard, Shipbuilding 374w
Dockyards, Manpower 102w
Dockyards, Transport 374w
14 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 215w
Harbour masters, Portsmouth 717w
HMS Challenger 641w
HMS Otter, Shipbuilding 717-8w
L9A1 gas spray guns 211w
Mallon, Seamus, Ulster Defence Regiment 246-7w
Military aircraft, Low flying 641w
Military bands, Costs 918
Ministry of Defence, Fife 643w
Ministry of Defence, Security vetting 643w
Naval bases, Construction 97w
Navy, Armed forces civilians 374-8w
Navy, Armed forces storage depots 374w
9 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 215w, 524w
9 Signal Regiment, Police interrogation 524-5w
Official secrets, Trials 99w
Polaris submarines, Medical records 95-6w
Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital, Armed forces catering services 373w
Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital, Contract catering 373w, 374w
Radiation hazards, Atomic Weapons Research Establishment 372w
RAF Brampton, Fires 917
Scott Lithgow, Defence contracts 642w
Shipbuilding, Security 564w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 560w
Submarines, Defence contracts 641-2w, 911
Submarines, Shipbuilding 911
Submarines, Tenders 642w
13 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 523w, 524w
Type 23 frigates 914
Type 23 frigates, Defence contracts 913-4

Leeds
Water supply 220w

Leeds General Infirmary 154w, 233-4w
Building repairs 154w

Leeds Western District Health Authority 233-4w

Lee, Bruce 454w
Court of Appeal 454w

Legal advice & assistance (19.12.85) 654-62

Legal Advice & Assistance (Amendment) (No 2) Regulations 1985 (19.12.85) 654-62

Legal Advice & Assistance (Prospective Cost) Regulations 1985 (19.12.85) 654-62

Legal aid 253w
Inquiries 446w
Legal costs 2-3w

Legal costs
Cash limits 635w
EC action 42w
Legal aid 2-3w
Scotland 635w

Leicestershire
Motorways 477w
Police 455w

Leigh, Mr Edward
Questions
Inflation 650w
University finance, Private investment 122w
USSR, Political refugees 205-6w

Leighton, Mr Ron
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 164
Questions
Community programme, Training allowances 398w
Employment schemes, Newham 51w
Majid, Jamila, Body searches 342-3w
Monteith, Billy, Arrests 343w
Part-time employment 51w
Self-employed, Building industry 399w
Self-employed, Ethnic groups 399w

Leighton Linslade bypass 112w
Government grants 112w

Leisure facilities
Industrial building allowances 360w

Lemibach, Pedro Fernandez 476w
Political prisoners 474w

Lesotho
Economic sanctions 923-4
South Africa 923-4

Lester, Mr Jim
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 194-7
Questions
International Committee of the Red Cross, Treaties 562w

Letters
Westland helicopters 525w

Lewisham
Housing departments 920

Lewis, Sir Kenneth
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1141
Questions
British Aerospace, Ministers correspondence 922
Business statement 1215-6

Lewis, Mr Terry
Debates etc
Football Safety Reviews (16.01.86) 1233-4
Members interests (17.12.85) 224
Questions
Defence procurement 155
Government assistance to industry, Worsley 25w, 136w, 139w
Nicaragua, EC external relations 201w
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injury compensation 905-6
Public utilities, Consumer protection 590-1w
Student grants, Further education 120w

Leytonstone
Social security recipients 69w
Supplementary benefits 69w

Liability
Building industry 766

Libyan Arab Republic
Foreign relations 1206
Terrorism 1206
USA 1205-6

Licensed premises
Bingo 143-4w

Licensing
British Gas Corporation 6, 10-1
Dogs 217-8w
Dumping 614w
Nursing homes 79-80w
Pest control 721-3w
Pesticides 725w, 725w
Untreated milk 281w

Life imprisonment 171w
Prisoners release 170-1w

"Lifting the Burden White Paper" 303w, 369-71w
Small businesses 303w
Town & country planning 369-71w

Lightbown, Mr David
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1039, 1040
Questions
Local government land, Vacant land 729-30w
Postal services, Monopolies & Mergers Commission 241-2w
"Public Expenditure White Paper" 539w

Lighthouses
Dawsar Island 479w
Isle of Man 479w, 582-3w
Manpower 168w
Northern Lighthouse Board 479w

Lighting
Channel crossing 759
EC action 42w
Motor vehicles 42w
Motorways 292w, 296-7w, (18.12.85) 383-5, 477w

Limited list prescribing 81w, 231w, 421-2w, 739w
Appeals 421-2w
Lipoflavanoid 231w
Orders & regulations 81w

Lincolnshire
Water supply 656w

Lipoflavanoid
Limited list prescribing 231w

List D schools 162w
School closures 162w

Litherland, Mr Robert
Questions
Chile, Human rights 200w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w

Littleborough
Unemployment 566-8w

Liverpool
Building industry 491-2w
Housing (20.12.85) 745-54
Housing problems (16.01.86) 1337-40
Nursery schools 119w
Unemployment 492-3w
Urban planning (16.01.86) 1337-40

Livsey, Mr Richard
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 339
Questions
Air force, Armed forces training 564w
European monetary system 307w
Plant breeding institute, Property transfer 286-7w
Rate support grants, Powys 1207-8
Sheep, Clawbacks 559-60

Lloyds Act 1982 Inquiry (14.01.86) 938-1024

Lloyds Bank International 517w, 518w
Westland helicopters 517w, 518w

Lloyds of London 565-6
Financial Services Bill 1985/86 589w, 1027-8, 1069-70
Fraud 346-7w
Inquiries 1069
Members interests 1057-8, 1069-70

Lloyd, Mr Ian
Debates etc
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 60-3
Questions
Food additives 275w
South Africa, S & T research 195w

Lloyd, Mr Tony
Debates etc
Fire Precautions (Amendment) Bill, 1R (17.12.85) 178-9
Manchester Airport (18.12.85) 351
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 806, 833
Questions
Airport security 630w
Assisted areas, North West region 139-40w
Channel crossing 475w
Factory Inspectorate, North West region 188w
Food additives 561
Foreign tourists, Immigration rules 174w
Industrial development, Regional planning & development 586w
Law centres 446w
Manchester Airport, Security 630w
Nuclear weapons, Europe 204w
Nuclear weapons, Lasers 909
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injuries compensation 563w
Open University, Tuition fees 116w
Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 265w, 552-3w
Shareholders, Privatisation 1194

Loan guarantee scheme
Companies 301-2w

Loans
Mortgages (19.12.85) 592-653

Lobbying (17.12.85) 219-57

Local authorities
Civil defence 177-8w
Local enterprise agencies 303-4w
Non-domestic rates 570w
Planning appeals 222w
Political parties 469-70w
Urban deprivation 12w, 18-20w

Local authorities in Scotland
Civil defence 293w

Local dental committees 420w

Local education authorities
School administration 149-50
Youth training scheme 488w

Local enterprise agencies 56w, 303-4w
Local authorities 303-4w

Local government social services
Cruelty to children 437w

Local Government Act 1985 11-2w, 46w, 47-8w, 661w

Local government audit 729w

Local Government Bill 1985/86 678w

Local government expenditure 511w
Basildon District Council 922
Bed & breakfast accommodation 465-6w, 577w
Civil defence 9w
Defective housing 576w
Drug crimes 6-7w
Fire services 172w, 173w
Greater London Council 216-8w, 219w, 366-9w, 470w
Housing benefits 410w
Housing finance 217w
Inner London Education Authority 185w
Police 273-4w
Police authorities 172w, 173w
Public transport 168w, 404-6w

Rate limitation 219w
Voluntary organisations 237w

Local government finance 468w, 651w
Local government reform 222-3w

Local government functions
Greater London Council 469w

Local government land
Greater London Council 13w, 257-8w
Vacant land 729-30w

Local government reform
Arts finance 189w, (20.12.85) 731-7
Civil service manpower 11-2w, 15w, 24w, 47-8w, 49-50w, 258w
County Hall 369w
Departmental leaflets 469w
Dept of the Environment 258w
Dept of Trade & Industry 24w
Dept of Transport 47-8w
GLCO 470w
Greater London Council 16w, 105w, 219w, 468-9w, 470w, 512w, 564
Greater London Council Research Library 469w
Hainault Forest 662-3w
Home Office 11-2w
Law centres 261-2w
Local government finance 222-3w
London boroughs 677-8w
Pedestrian areas 111w
Public transport 404-6w
Rates & rating 108w
Road traffic control 46w, 490w
Road works 111w
South Bank 512w
Thamesmead Community Trust 259w
Treasury 49-50w
Voluntary organisations 237w, 603w
Woolwich Ferry 110-1w, 406-7w

Local Government Reorganisation (Transitional Provisions) Order 1985 (13.01.86) 791

Local government revenue 468w
Greenwich 661w
London Regional Transport 46-7w

Local government services
Civil defence 9w

Local government social services
Aids for handicapped 493w

Local government staff
Educational psychology 338w
Emergency planning 456w
Lancashire 627w
Manpower 469-70w, 570w, 577w
Pay 456w, 570w
Redundancy 468-9w
Thamesmead community trust 728-9w

Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 663w

Local Loans (Increases of Limit) Order 1986 (14.01.86) 934

Loch area 548-9w

Loch Inchard 631w

Lofthouse, Mr Geoffrey
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 221, 222
Questions
Business statement 1221-2
Coal mining, Industrial relations 12
EC reform, Voting methods 201w
"Higher Education Consultation Paper" 120w
Manufacturing industries, Castleford 126w

London boroughs
Concessionary fares 478w
Costs 677w
Local government reform 677-8w
Political affiliations 459w
Rates & rating 469w

London Commodity Exchange
Upper Waiting Hall 633w

London Coordinating Committee 469w

London docklands
Employment opportunities 220w, 467w
Stolport 408-9w

London Docklands Development Corporation
External financing limits 472w
Management techniques 571w
Property transfer 471-2w

London docklands railway 471-2w, 679w, 755, 764
Canary Wharf 755
Construction 755
Employment 471-2w
London Regional Transport 755
Manpower 679w
Private sector 764
Profitability 764
Stolport 755

London Marathon 263w
Government grants 263w

London Regional Transport 46-7w, 755
Government grants 46-7w
Local government revenue 46-7w
London docklands railway 755

London Residuary Body 259w, 369w, 677-8w
Finance 677-8w

Londonderry, East
By election writs (17.12.85) 139

Long stay patients 702w
Mental hospitals 702w

Lorries
Channel crossing 113w
Road safety 46w

Lost working days
Teachers 115w

Lothian Estates 717w
Compensation 717w

Lothian Health Board
Debts written off 292w

Lothian Regional Council 615w
Rate support grants 615w

Low flying
Military aircraft 641w

"Low Income Families, 1981" 74-6w

Low incomes (16.12.85) 131-8
Families 74-6w
Unemployed 74-6w

Low pay
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 473-93
Energy conservation 315w
Health service staff 736w
Income tax 1201
Manual workers 726w
Marginal tax rates 594-6w, 646w

Loyden, Mr Eddie
Questions
Nursery schools, Liverpool 119w

Luce, Rt Hon Richard, Minister of State Privy Council Office (Minister for the Arts)
Questions
Arts Council, Arts finance 512w
Arts Council, Recreation spaces 512w
Arts Council grants, Concert Halls 304-5w
Arts finance, Greater Manchester 189w
British Library, Construction, Specific cases 35w
Civil servants, Dept of Health & Social Security 18, 19-20
Civil servants, Work study 17-8
Civil servants, 10 Downing Street 18-9
Civil service, Scotland 18
Civil service, Trade unions 31w
Civil & Public Services Association 31w
Equal opportunities officers, Civil service recruitment 31w
Government grants, British Film Institute 35-8w
Non-departmental public bodies 109w
Scientific civil service, Conditions of employment 16-7
South Bank, Arts finance 512w
South Bank, Local government reform 512w
South Bank, Managers 512w
South Bank, Pulford, Richard 512w
South Bank Board, Pay 512w
Yorkshire Water Colour Society, Upper Waiting Hall 34-5w

Luxembourg Summit 201-2w

Lyell, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 803, 824-5, 852-3, 855
Questions
Common sugar regime, Raw materials 279w

Lygo, Admiral Sir Raymond 592w

L9A1 Gas Spray Guns 129-30w, 211w

McCrea, William
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

McCrindle, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 597, 620-3
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 997-9
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 29-30
Questions
Airports, Fees & charges 733w
British Airways, Privatisation 733w
Cervical cancer, Screening 570-1
City of London, Invisible trade balance 1192
International Monetary Fund, Airlines 593w
New Cross Building Society 653w

McCurley, Mrs Anna
Questions
Naval bases, Construction 97w
Submarines, Defence contracts 911

McCusker, Harold
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

McDonald, Dr Oonagh
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 600-4
Questions
Civil servants, Dept of Health & Social Security 19-20
Economic growth, Manufacturing industries 1200-1
Iran-Iraq war, Peace negotiations 296
Tax yields, Tax allowances 309w
Universities, Research 118w

Macfarlane, Mr Neil
Questions
Prisoners release, Homicide 462w

MacGregor, Rt Hon John, Chief Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Civil servants, Greater London 48w
Crown lands & estates, Diorama 655w
Crown lands & estates, Rates & rating 49w
Economic growth 651w
Exchange rates, Interest rates 1198
Labour costs, Industry 509-10w
Local government expenditure 511w
Local government finance 651w
Local government reform, Treasury 49-50w
Manufactured exports 306w
Mortgage relief, Mortgage interest rates 1197, 1198
National income, Public sector borrowing requirement 190w
Oil prices, Economic planning 648w
Pay settlements, National Economic Development Council 1203
Productivity, OECD countries 653w
Public expenditure, National income 189w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 1197
Public expenditure, Per capita costs 360w
"Public Expenditure White Paper" 539w
Public sector borrowing requirement 305w

Regional aid, Northern region 1195-6, 1196-7
Regional aid, West Midlands 1196
Unemployment 190w

Machine tools
Export controls 361w
South Africa 361w

McKay, Mr Allen
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 321
Questions
Arab states, Christmas 203w
Coal mining, Industrial disputes 14
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 920

MacKay, Mr Andrew
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 473-4
Questions
Air transport 477w
Defence land, Land acquisition 916-7
Income tax, Low pay 1201
Libyan Arab Republic, Terrorism 1206
Middle East, Ministers visits abroad 193w
South Africa, Foreign relations 296

MacKay, Mr John, Under-Secretary of State for Scotland
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1264-7
Maternity services, Glasgow (18.12.85) 545-50
Questions
Agricultural Advisory Services, Scotland 59-60w
AIDS, Scottish health boards 63w
Birds, Scotland 721-3w
Blood, Scotland 292w
Body searches, Scotland 60-1w
Civil defence, Local authorities in Scotland 293w
Civil defence, Scotland 292-3w, 483w
Fish conservation, Scotland 565w
Forests, Nature conservation 162w
Health services finance, Scottish health boards 59w
Highlands & Islands Development Board, Tourism 65w
Hospital beds, Scotland 353-4w
Hospital beds, Scottish health boards 354-8w
Joint financing, Scotland 58w
Joint liaison committees, Scotland 59w
Lothian Health Board, Debts written off 292w
Maternal mortality, Scotland 63-4w
Mental health services, Glasgow 615w
NHS, Scotland 482w
Pesticides, Licensing 723w
Police, Scotland 352w
Scottish health board, Conflict of interests 161w
Scottish health boards, Capital investment 164-6w
Scottish health boards, Conflict of interests 161w, 163w
Scottish health boards, Contracts for services 293-4w
Scottish health boards, Public appointments 294w
Scottish Islands, EC grants & loans 482w
Sea fishing, Scotland 62w
Tayside Health Board 163w
Youth custody, Scotland 63w

McKelvey, Mr William
Questions
Strategic defence initiative, Foreign relations 194w

Maclean, Mr David
Questions
Business education, Universities 335w
EC Agricultural Council, Common agricultural policy 351-2w
Firearms certificates, Fees, & charges 274w
Higher education, Freedom of expression 151
Milk, Production quotas 552
Priorities Board for Research & Development in Agriculture & Food 210-1w
Road signs, Tourist attractions 345w
Strategic defence initiative, USSR 908
University teachers, Pay 335-6w

Maclennan, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1254-6
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1234
Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1333-4
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 794, 823-6
Questions
Export Credits Guarantee Department, Financial targets 1061
Farmers, Debts 282w
Open University, Student numbers, Specific cases 116w

McNair-Wilson, Mr Michael
Questions
Cancer hazards, Radiation hazards 698w
Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, Royal ordnance factories 744-6w
Military aircraft, Early warning systems 562w
Radiation hazards, Atomic Weapons Research Establishment 372w
Unemployment 639w
Wildlife Inspectorate, Professional misconduct 107-8w

McNair-Wilson, Mr Patrick
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 781

McNamara, Mr Kevin
Questions
Air force 101w
Air force, Armed forces discharges 381-2w
Air force, Armed forces retirement 382-3w, 383-4w
Air force, Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament 213w
Air force bases, Armed forces deployment 538w
Armed forces deployment, South Africa 212w
Armed forces deployment, 9 Signal Regiment 379w
Armed forces discharges, Aircrew 99-101w
Armed forces officers, Criminal investigation 525w
Armed forces strength, 9 Signal Regiment 101-2w
Armed forces training, Aircrew 99w, 101w
Armed forces training, Ulster Defence Regiment 102w
Codes of practice, Royal Ulster Constabulary 269w
Defence procurement, International cooperation 910
European fighter aircraft, International cooperation 916
14 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 215w
Interviews, 9 Signal Regiment 379w
Lee, Bruce, Court of Appeal 454w
9 Signal Regiment, Armed forces deployment 525w
9 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 215w, 524w
9 Signal Regiment, Police interrogation 524-5w
Official secrets, Trials 99w
Royal ordnance factories, Production capacity 215w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Codes of practice 42w
13 Signal Regiment, Armed forces discharges 523w, 524w
Ulster Defence Regiment, Training 245-6w
Wages Inspectorate, Yorkshire & Humberside 489-92w
Westland helicopters 578w
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 592w

McQuarrie, Mr Albert
Debates etc
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 72-81, 83-4, 88, 90, 94, 97, 101, 102, 103
Questions
Cereals, Agricultural surpluses 553-4
Defence contracts, Scott Lithgow 914
Falkland Islands, Fisheries 562-3
Navigational aids, Scotland 631w
Pilotage, Scotland 580w

McTaggart, Mr Bob
Questions
Child benefit, Scotland 72-3w

McWilliam, Mr John
Debates etc
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 697

Madden, Mr Max
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1210
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 950
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1232
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1271
Oral question time point of order (15.01.86) 1074-5
Prime Ministers question time point of order (19.12.85) 568
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 323
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 34
Questions
Business statement 582, 1223
Immigration, Official secrets 455w
Immigration appeals, British citizenship 8-9w
Ministers domestic visits, Bradford 651w
Multifibre arrangement 1064
NHS, Technicians 151-2w
Railway closures 44w
Road signs, Motorways 42-3w
Slum clearance, Bradford 565
Unemployment benefits, Administrative delays 397w
UNESCO 179w
University finance, Educational finance 116-7w

Made in Britain 1061
Motor vehicle parts 1061, 1062

Madel, Mr David
Questions
Leighton Linslade bypass, Government grants 112w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114w, 115w, 147, 544w

Maginnis, Ken
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

Magistrates
County Palatine 329w
Manpower 3w
North West region 346w
Political affiliations 329w, 346w

Majid, Jamila 342-3w
Body searches 342-3w

Major, Mr John, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health & Social Security
Debates etc
Fuel poverty (16.12.85) 133-8
Low incomes, Heating allowances (16.12.85) 133-8
Low pay (18.12.85) 487-93
Statutory Sick Pay Uprating Order 1985 (15.01.86) 1175-6, 1179-82
Questions
Departmental forms, Administrative delays 154w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Personal records 497w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service recruitment 153w, 496w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service manpower 496w

Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, East Midlands 496w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil servants 497w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Heating 503-4w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Labour turnover 736w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Greater London 738w
DHSS local offices, Civil service manpower 509w
DHSS local offices, Greater London 738w
Families, Exceptional needs payments 701w
Families, Low incomes 74-6w
Housing benefits, Costs 317w
Housing benefits, Rate rebates 78w
Housing benefits, Social security benefits rules 503-4w
Housing benefits, Social security recipients 410-2w, 701w
Housing benefits, Social security reform 596w
Income support scheme, Young people 701w
Rate rebates, Government grants to local authorities 80-1w
Rate rebates, Lambeth 67-8w
Retirement pensions, Social security recipients 497-8w
Retirement pensions, South Africa 427-8w
Social security appeals tribunals, Scotland 79w
Social security benefits, Orkney 499w
Social security claims, Cricklewood 694w
Social security claims, Harlesden 693-4w
Social security claims, Home visits 415w
Social security claims, Neasden 693-4w
Social security payments, Administrative delays 75w
Social security payments, Post Office 228w
Social security recipients, Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 322w
Social security recipients, Leytonstone 69w
Social security recipients, Sheffield 229w
State occupational pensions, Men 147-8w
Supplementary benefits, DHSS local offices 497w
Supplementary benefits, Exceptional needs payments 321-2w
Supplementary benefits, Hickson, AD 76w
Supplementary benefits, Slough 739-40w
Supplementary benefits, Social security abuse 422w
Supplementary benefits, Social security recipients 497w, 742-4w
Supplementary benefits, Statistics 321-2w
Supplementary benefits, Young people 506-8w
Unemployment benefits, Social security recipients 498w

Makenjuola, Adebola 252w
Sexual offences 252w

Malaysia
Drug crimes 569w

Mallon, Seamus 246-7w
Ulster Defence Regiment 246-7w

Malnutrition
Ethiopia 40-1w

Malone, Mr Gerald
Debates etc
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 76, 79-80, 83, 93, 99-103
Questions
Sexual offences, Trials 290w

Management techniques
London Docklands Development Corporation 571w

Management & Personnel Office
Equal opportunities officers 31w

Managers
South Bank 512w

Manchester Airport 169w, 297w, 409w, 480w, 569w, 578w, 630w
Airport security 569w, 578w
Companies 169w
Management 297w, 409w, 480w
Manchester City Council 169w
Police firearms 569w
Security 630w

Manchester City Council 168w, 169w, 480w
Manchester Airport 169w
Public transport 168w

Manchester University
Freedom of expression 151

Mandatory student grants
Refugees 646w

Mandela, Nelson
South Africa 286

Manpower Services Commission
Training 151
Youth training scheme 113w

Manual workers
Low pay 726w

Manufactured exports 306w

Manufactured goods 586w
Balance of trade 452-3w, 587w
EC trade 453w
USA 520-1w

Manufacturing industries
Castleford 126w
Economic growth 1199-1200, 1200-1
Employment 398w
Industrial investment 587w
Industrial production 1199-1200
Interest rates 1200-1
Profitability 1200
Regional development grants 332-4w
Regional selective assistance 332-4w
Wales 285w

Maples, Mr John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 954, 975
Questions
Building regulations, Greater London 13-4w
Woolwich Ferry, Local government reform 110-1w

Marek, Dr John
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 340
Questions
Argentina, Diplomatic relations 198w
British Rail, Railway travel 477w
Capital investment, Wales 332w
Civil disorder, Street lighting 173w
Fire regulations, Prosecutions 174-5w
Milk, Production quotas 552
Ministers correspondence, Disclosure of information 734w
Motor components industry, Iron & steel 1061
Prime Minister domestic visits, Railway travel 552w
Tristan da Cunha, Companies 364w
Tristan da Cunha, Overseas trade 33w

Margam mine 14-5
National Coal Board 14-5

Margarine
Hospital catering 428w

Marginal land
Crops 2w
Horses 281-2w

Marginal tax rates
Average earnings 1194
Low pay 594-6w, 646w
OECD countries 1194
Profits 141w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 1195
Social security reviews 495-6w
Taxpayers 1195

Marine engines
Occupational deafness 76w

Mark
Exchange rates 650w

Market share 332w, 335w, 453w
EC trade 453w

Marketing
Trade promotion 298

Marketing of Investments Board 245w, 766-7
Self-regulatory system 245w

Markets
Horses 560

Marlow, Mr Tony
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 306-7
Members interests (17.12.85) 224, 248
Members interests, Liberal Party (18.12.85) 343
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1028, 1031
Oral question time point of order (18.12.85) 300
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 799
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 45, (15.01.86) 1097, 1128
Questions
Army reserves, Armed forces training 916
Business statement 1217
Coal mining, Private investment 29w
Members & trade unions 16
Middle East, Ministers visits abroad 193w
Middle East, Violence 287
Sportsgrounds, Safety certificates 175-6w
Taxation, Families 646w

Marriage Act 1983 420w
Departmental circulars 420w

Marriage (Wales) Bill 1985/86
2R & rem stages* (17.01.86) 1410

Married people
Personal tax allowances 652w

Married women 701-2w
Invalid care allowances 701w
Retirement pensions 409w

Married womens half test 409w

Marshall, Mr David
Questions
Road works, Scotland 352-3w

Marshall, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 42
Questions
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 1204-5

Martial arts weapons 570w
Young people 570w

Mary Rose 678w
Ancient monuments 678w

Mason, Rt Hon Roy
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 231-4
Questions
Coal mining, Barnsley 53w
Coal mining, Privatisation 6, 445w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Association of Metropolitan Authorities 6-7w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Manpower 6w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Regional crime squads 6w
Yorkshire Water Colour Society, Upper Waiting Hall 34-5w

Mason, Flt Sgt 525w

Materials Advisory Group 633w

Materials technology 633w

Maternal mortality 81-4w
Scotland 63-4w

Maternity benefits
Exceptional needs payments 436w
Public expenditure 697w

Social Fund 599w
Social security reform 696-7w
Tax yields 696-7w

Maternity services
Glasgow (18.12.85) 544-50

Mates, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 40, (13.01.86) 784

Mather, Mr Carol, Comptroller of Her Majesty's Household
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 863

Mawhinney, Dr Brian
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 31
Questions
Budget, USA 648w
Ethiopia, Food aid 40w
Ethiopia, Malnutrition 40-1w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 115w

Maxton, Mr John
Questions
EC reform, Parliament 201-2w

Maxwell-Hyslop, Mr Robin
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 774
Members interests (17.12.85) 226, 247
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 310, 311, 317
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 269-71
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 788
Questions
Butter, Imports 280w
Butter, New Zealand 210w
National Bus Company, Privatisation 760
Nicaragua, Airspace 283
Veterinary services 1-2w

Mayhew, Sir Patrick, Solicitor-General
Debates etc
Legal Advice & Assistance Regulations 1985 (19.12.85) 654-7, 660-2
Questions
Attorney-General, Security 446w
Crown Prosecution Service, Manpower 159w
Duty solicitors, Greater London 446-7w
Family courts review, Family courts 446w
Fraud, Criminal investigation 253-4w
Fraud, Members correspondence 252-3w
Inquiries, Official secrets 768-9
Land Registry Office, Birmingham 109w
Latent damage, Law Reform Committee 109w
Law centres 446w
Law centres, Finance 253w
Legal aid 253w
Legal aid, Inquiries 446w
Legal aid, Legal costs 2-3w
Liability, Building industry 766
Lloyds of London, Fraud 346-7w
Magistrates, Manpower 3w
Magistrates, North West region 346w
Makenjuola, Adebola, Sexual offences 252w
Official secrets, Disclosure of information 769
Rape, Law reporting 346w
Solicitor-General, Ministers correspondence 766
Sunday trading, Law enforcement 251-2w

Maynard, Miss Joan
Questions
EC integration 198w
Forests, Nature conservation 162w
Simonstown, Naval bases 134w
Water supply, Lincolnshire 656w
Water supply, Water authorities 656-62w

McCrea, William
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

McCusker, Harold
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Meacher, Mr Michael
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 25-6
Statutory Sick Pay Uprating Order 1985 (15.01.86) 1176-9, 1181
Questions
Average earnings, Men 300-1w
DHSS local offices, Civil service manpower 509w
Disposable income, Social security reform 694w
Exceptional needs payments 739w
Family credit, Strike benefits 495w
Family credits, Social security reform 598w
Health service staff, Manpower 321w
Human growth hormones, Hormone treatments 700w
Hypothermia, Death 322w
Income support scheme, Young people 434w
Means tested benefits, Social security reform 704-6w
NHS, Management 700w
Pensions, Average earnings 319-20w
Pensions, Employers contributions 320w
Pensions, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 320-1w
Pensions, State earnings related pensions scheme 320w
Personal income 594w
Personal taxation 593-4w
Prescription charges exemptions, Publicity 157-8w
Prescriptions, Costs 502w
Productivity, OECD countries 653w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Statistics 740w
Social security benefits, Young people 495w
Social security benefits disqualification, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 324w
Social security recipients, Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 322w
Social security reform 694w
State earnings related pension scheme, Social security reform 694w, 744w
Supplementary benefits, Exceptional needs payments 321-2w
Supplementary benefits, Social security recipients 742-4w
Supplementary benefits, Statistics 321-2w
Supplementary benefits, Young people 434w
Unemployment, Economic regions 301-2w

Meadowcroft, Mr Michael
Questions
Betting & gaming duties, Bingo 143-4w
Cattle, Animal feed 541-2w
Food labelling, Fats 277w
Intervention stocks, Beef & veal 540-1w
Leeds General Infirmary 233-4w
Multifibre arrangement 1063
Oil revenues 307w
School meals, Nutrition 113w
Strategic defence initiative, Nuclear weapons 907-8
Strategic defence initiative, Royal United Services Institute 194w
Tax thresholds, Tax rates & bands 1195
Youth training scheme, Skilled workers 151

Means tested benefits
Social security reform 435-6w, 704-6w

Medical education
Ophthalmology 739w

Medical profession
NHS administration 429w

Medical records
Polaris submarines 95-6w

Medical research
AIDS 71w
Child health 602w
Diet & disease 78w
Surgery 601-2w
Trauma 38w

Medical treatment
Multiple sclerosis 76-7w

Medical treatments
Cancer (13.01.86) 898-904, (15.01.86) 1183-90
Kidneys 310-1w
Multiple sclerosis 76w, 77w

Mellor, Mr David, Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department
Debates etc
Juries (18.12.85) 429-32
Questions
Alcoholism & crime 457w
Animal experiments 173-4w
Brixton Prison, Body searches 342w, 458w
Brixton Prison, Prisoners rights 342w
Brixton Prison, Security 342w
Brixton Prison, Women 342w
Coroners 547w
Crime, Statistics 457w
Crimes of violence, Women 275w
Criminal injuries compensation 131w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Government grants 271w
Criminal Proceedings Arising From Fraud Review Committee 540w
Criminal statistics 547w
Drinking & driving, Convictions 132w
Drug abuse, Heroin 132w
Drug crimes, Malaysia 569w
East Sutton Park Open Prison, Diets 625w
Fraud, City of London 568-9w
Freemasonry 8w
Holloway Prison, Sanitation 623w
Home Office, Empty housing 458-9w
Imports, Dogs 5w
Juries 269-70w
Kirkby Victims Support Scheme, Government grants to Voluntary Organisations 271w
Lee, Bruce, Court of Appeal 454w
Life imprisonment 171w
Life imprisonment, Prisoners release 170-1w
Per capita costs, Prisons 170w
Police custody 620w, 621w
Police custody, Costs 621w
Police custody, Expenditure 621w
Police custody, Manpower 621w
Police custody, Prevention of Terrorism Acts 459-60w
Prison accommodation 7w
Prison medical services, AIDS 170w
Prison medical services, Per capita costs 172w
Prison population, Ethnic groups 170w
Prison staff, Manpower 343-4w
Prison staff, Recruitment 343w
Prison staff, Retirement 343w
Prison staff, Training 623w
Prisoners, Petitions 4w
Prisoners on remand, Prison population 170w
Prisoners release, Homicide 462w
Prisons, Per capital costs 170w
Probation, Ethnic monitoring 130-1w
Probation, Statistics 713w
Rape, Criminal injuries compensation 270-1w
Reid, P, Members correspondence 341w
Remand in custody 621-2w
Remand in custody, Police cells 619-20w, 715w
Young people, Police cautions 546-7w
Youth custody, Prisons 8w

Members (18.12.85) 361-5
House of Commons Select Committees 631-4w
Professional consultants 15

Members allowances
Members staff 15
Private members bills 441w

Members attendance
Speakers rulings & statements (18.12.85) 345

Members conduct
Public bills 734w
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 158, 243, (18.12.85) 435, 436, (13.01.86) 835, 875, (14.01.86) 917, (15.01.86) 1072, 1148, 1163, 1164

Members correspondence
Fraud 252-3w
Greater Manchester Police 175w
Immigrant detainees 9-10w
Immigration 342w
Immigration appeals 176w
Immigration controls 455-6w
NHS 601w
Reid, P 341w
Social security benefits 432-3w
Turville School 579w

Members deaths
Stevens, Martin (13.01.86) 755

Members facilities
Computers 16
Reprography 716w
Telephone systems 16

Members Fund (16.12.85) 128-30

Members interests 15-6, (17.12.85) 219-57
Business statement (17.12.85) 176-7
Financial Services Bill 1985/86 1058
House of Commons voting methods 15-6
Lloyds of London 1057-8, 1069-70
Speakers rulings & statements (14.01-86) 950, 1012-5

Members Interests Select Committee (17.12.85) 219-57

Members interventions
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 132-3, (17.12.85) 229, (18.12.85) 300, (20.12.85) 748, (14.01.86) 951, 965, 987, (15.01.86) 1162, 1186

Members pensions (16.12.85) 128-30

Members resignations
Beggs, Roy (17.12.85) 139
Forsythe, Clifford (17.12.85) 140
Kilfedder, James (17.12.85) 140
Maginnis, Ken (17.12.85) 139
McCrea, William (17.12.85) 139
McCusker, Harold (17.12.85) 140
Molyneaux, James (17.12.85) 139
Nicholson, James (17.12.85) 140
Paisley, Ian (17.12.85) 140
Powell, J Enoch (17.12.85) 140
Robinson, Peter (17.12.85) 140
Ross, William (17.12.85) 139
Smyth, Martin (17.12.85) 140
Taylor, John David (17.12.85) 140
Walker, A Cecil (17.12.85) 140

Members speeches
Speakers rulings & statements (14.01.86) 951, 965, 987 (15.01.86) 1120, 1145, (16.01.86) 1268

Members staff
Members allowances 15

Members & local authorities (18.12.85) 361-5

Members & trade unions 16

Men
Average earnings 300-1w
State occupational pensions 147-8w

Mental health services
Glasgow 615w

Mental hospitals
Child patients 702w
Long stay patients 702w

Mental patients
Death 73-4w
Respiratory diseases 73-4w

Mentally handicapped (17.01.86) 1346-1404

Menwith
Public footpaths 372-3w

Merchant, Mr Piers
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 329
Questions
Manufactured exports 306w
Regional aid, Northern region 1065
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141-2
Type 23 frigates, Defence contracts 913-4

Merchant banks
Westland helicopters 451w

Merchant seamen
Health physics 221-2w

Mergers 588w
Codes of practice 335w
Defence procurement 719w
GEC 179w, 609w, 719w
House of Fraser 634w
Plessey 179w, 609w

Merit awards 441w, 442w
Teachers 441w, 442w

Merrick
Acid rain 548-9w

Mersey Regional Health Authority 149-52w
Capital investment 149-52w

Merseyside
Building industry 491-2w
Concert halls 304-5w
District health authorities 149-52w
Regional health authorities 150w
Unemployment 493w

Merseyside County Council 304-5w

Merseyside Residuary Body 677w, 731w
Pocock, Leslie 731w
Public appointments 677w

Metropolitan Police 546w
Baton rounds 171-2w
Civil disorder 172-3w, 343w
Complaints against police 344w
Councillors 459w
Electoral register 128w
Expenditure 460w
Manpower 275w, 459w
Offices 171-2w
Police powers 126-7w
Police training 460w
Ports 459w
Recruitment 10-1w
Rewards 7w
South Africa 10-1w

Meyer, Sir Anthony
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 304
Juries (18.12.85) 417
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 335
Questions
Severn bridge, Road tolls 757

MFV Mhari L 582w

Mhari L
Shipping accidents 479w

Michie, Mr Bill
Questions
Financial services, Securities & Investment Board 1057
South Africa, EC external relations 194-5w

Mid Glamorgan
Cervical cancer 616-7w

Mid Glamorgan Health Authority 616-7w, 618w

Middle East 193w
Council of Ministers 133w
Foreign policy 193w
Foreign relations 290-1
Ministers visits abroad 193w
Palestine Liberation Organisation 286-7, 288
Peace negotiations 192w, 193w, 286-7, 288, 289-90, 290-1, 291-2
United Nations 291-2
Violence 287

Middlesex Hospital 155w
Hospital closures 155w

Mid-Ulster
By election writs (17.12.85) 139

Mikardo, Mr Ian
Questions
Israel, Ministers visits abroad 289
Middle East, Palestine Liberation Organisation 287

Milan Summit 197w

Military aircraft
Air force 247w
Early warning systems 562w
Low flying 641w
VC10 aircraft 97w

Military bands
Costs 918

Military exercises
Airport security 521-2w
New Zealand 734w

Military Police 213w
Air force 213w

Military vehicles
Chile 298
Fox hunting 537w, 538w
Road accidents 913

Milk
Cheese 553
Co-responsibility levy 560-1
Production quotas 209w, 281w, 552, 553

Milk & milk products 278w

Millan, Rt Hon Bruce
Questions
Business statement 580

Millbank
Bus lanes 559w

Miller, Dr M S
Debates etc
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 55, 59-60
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 41
Questions
Arab states, Prisoners 192w

Mills, Mr Iain
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1030, 1032, 1037, 1038, 1039, 1040-1, 1043-5
Questions
Criminal Proceedings Arising From Fraud Review Committee 540w
Motor vehicle safety, EC law 111w
Motorways, Safety barriers 167w
Science & technology research, Research finance 39w
Space saver spare wheels, Motor vehicle safety 111w
Trials, Costs 713w
Association of Chief Police Officers 127w

Ministerial responsibility
Child care 552w
Speakers rulings & statements (16.01.86) 1207

Ministerial statements
Banking supervision (17.12.85) 159-67
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 168-74
Criminal Proceedings arising from Fraud Review Committee (14.01.86) 925-34
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 584-9
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 301-9
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1225-38
Iron & steel industry (20.12.85) 691-9
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 310-30, 331-40
Social security (16.12.85) 21-34
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 29, 32, 46, 47, (18.12.85) 324, 336, (13.01.86) 874, (14.01.86) 932
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 35-46, (13.01.86) 777-89, 870-4

Ministers
Anglo-Irish Agreement 4w
Declarations of interest 734w
Gifts 578w
Speakers rulings & statements (17.01.86) 1372

Ministers correspondence 168w, 169w, 517w, 518w, 553-4w, 610w, 614w, 629w, 700w, 724w, 734w, 918-9, 920, 922, 1203-4
Adoption 700w
British Aerospace 918-9, 922
Disclosure of information 734w
Pearce, Austin 734w
Solicitor-General 614w, 766, 1203-4, 1206
Westland helicopters 517w, 518w, 519-20w, 553-4w, 610w, 724w, 1203-4, 1205, 1206

Ministers domestic visits
Bradford 651w
Coal mining 1-2
Youth training scheme 186-7w

Ministers of religion
Early retirement 445w
Resignations 445w

Ministers visits abroad
Falkland Islands 212w
Gulf states 587-8w
Israel 289
Middle East 193w
Nicaragua 283
Philippines 198w
South Africa 284-5

Ministry of Defence
Civil service manpower 381w
Contracts 247w
Early retirement 215-6w
Fife 381w, 643w
Security vetting 643w

Miscampbell, Mr Norman
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 892

Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 358-9w

Mitchell, Mr Austin
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 612-6
Complaints against police, Public petitions (20.12.85) 671-2
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1379
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 588
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 974-8, 985, 1011, 1012
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1249, 1251, 1258, 1259-62
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 893-4
Questions
Aerospace industry, Helicopters 526w
Aerospace industry, International cooperation 517-8w
Agusta, Company finance 533w
Agusta, International cooperation 529w, 610w
Agusta, helicopters, Defence procurement 530w
Airbuses, Aerospace industry 451-2w
Arms trade, International cooperation 535w
Bank of England, Commercial bills 362w
Channel crossing, Channel ferries 535-6w
Channel tunnel, Wars 520w
Defence procurement, West Germany 525w
Economic growth, Interest rates 1200
Falkland Islands, Ferries 522w
Fisheries, Great Grimsby 399w
Helicopters, Defence procurement 532-3w, 610w
Helicopters, EC countries 515-6w
Helicopters, European Economic Community 533w
Helicopters, International cooperation 529-30w, 530-1w, 531-2w, 534w
Higher education, Student numbers 118w
Takeovers 522w
USA, Balance of trade 520-1w
USA, Defence procurement 521w
Westland helicopters 474-5w
Westland helicopters, Company finance 452w, 515w, 518-9w, 534w
Westland helicopters, Cost effectiveness 517w
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 525-6w
Westland helicopters, Disclosure of information 515w
Westland helicopters, Discrimination 518w, 519w
Westland helicopters, European Commission 515w
Westland helicopters, International cooperation 526-8w, 529w, 530w, 534w, 610-1w
Westland helicopters, Italy 519w
Westland helicopters, Letters 525w
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 517w, 518w, 519-20w, 553-4w, 610w
Westland helicopters, Shareholders 516w, 518w, 519w
Westland helicopters, Shares 533w
Westland helicopters, USA 533w

Mitchell, Mr David, Under-Secretary of State for Transport
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 408-14
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 875-7, 894-5
Taxis, Heathrow (17.12.85) 279-82
Questions
Avon bridge 630-1w
British Rail, Railway travel 477w
Bus fares, Price increases 759-60
Channel crossing 475w, 630w
Channel crossing, Cabinet 759
Channel crossing, Hazards 630w
Channel crossing, Lighting 759
Channel crossing, Motor vehicles 478-80w
Channel crossing, North of England Regional Consortium 759
Channel crossing, Railway freight transport 476w
Channel crossing, Road traffic 475-6w
Channel crossing, Travel 475w
Channel tunnel, Safety 758-9
Civil servants, Disclosure of information 520w
Dartford tunnel, East London River Crossing 761
Dartford tunnel, Private sector 762
Dartford tunnel, Road traffic 762
Departmental correspondence, Dept of Transport 580-1w
Departmental leaflets, Dept of Transport 581w
London docklands railway, Private sector 764
Railway closures 44w
Railway closures, Greater London 761
Railway electrification, Dorset 44w
Railway network, Northern region 732-3w
Railway transport, Commuters 409w
Railway transport, Electic power 297w
Rear seat belts, Orders & regulations 476w
Road accidents, Breathalysers 481w
Road accidents, Cars 481w
Severn bridge, Debts 756
Severn bridge, Road tolls 757
Transport Act 1985, Publicity 581w
Tunnels, Psychology 407w

MO 306w
Money supply 306w

Moate, Mr Roger
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 888-90

Mobilisation for Laboratory Animals 173-4w

Mobility allowance
Handicapped children 598-9w

Mobility of disabled
Access to buildings 655-6w

Molyneaux, James
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

Money resolution (19.12.85) 653, (14.01.86) 1025-6, (16.01.86) 1336

Money supply
MO 306w

Monktonhall Colliery
Coal mining 2-3

Monopolies & Mergers Commission
Postal services 241-2w
Public houses 136w

Monro, Sir Hector
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 626-7
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1229
Questions
Channel crossing, Environmental impact assessment 15w
Common sheep meat regime 560
Intervention stocks, Cereals 554
Salmon, Fish conservation 563
Youth training scheme, School leaving 567w

Monteith, Billy 343w
Arrests 343w

Montgomery, Sir Fergus
Questions
Business statement 576
Chief constables, Greater Manchester 565
National Freight Company, Shares 477w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 119w

Moore, Rt Hon John, Financial Secretary to the Treasury
Debates etc
Questions
Black economy, Building industry 593w
Business expansion scheme, Bed & breakfast accommodation 651w
Business expansion scheme, Industrial investment 141w
Business expansion scheme, Scotland 652w
Capital gains tax 48w
Companies, Privatisation 647-8w
Double taxation, Canada 307-8w
Fraud, Inland Revenue 344w
Income tax 647w
Income tax, Low pay 1201
Income tax, Orphans 654w
Income tax, Tax allowances 647w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 50-1w, 190w, 647w
Income tax assessment, Overseas workers 191w
Income tax assessment, Bureaucracy 308w
Marginal tax rates, Average earnings 1194
Marginal tax rates, Low pay 646w
Marginal tax rates, Taxpayers 1195
Ministers domestic visits, Bradford 651w
National income, Taxation 648w
National insurance contributions, Employers contributions 510-1w
Oil revenues 307w
Personal income 594w
Personal tax allowances, Married people 652w
Personal taxation 593-4w
Public sector assets, Privatisation 652w
Shareholders 650w
Small businesses, Corporation tax 141w
Tax evasion 190w
Tax exemption certificates, Building industry 50w
Tax incentives, Energy efficiency 307w
Tax rates & bands, Taxpayers 1195
Tax thresholds, Tax rates & bands 1195
Tax yields, Capital gains tax 360w
Tax yields, Corporation tax 359w
Tax yields, Industrial building allowances 360w
Tax yields, Private education 50w
Tax yields, Privatisation 361w
Tax yields, Tax allowances 142w, 309w
Taxation, Day nurseries 141-2w
Taxation, Employment opportunities 650w
Taxation, Families 646w
Taxation, UK companies abroad 510w

Morocco
Armed forces training 212w
Arms trade 134w
Imports 138w

Phosphates 138w
Resources exploration 134w

Morris, Rt Hon Alfred
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1356-64, 1380
Members Fund (16.12.85) 128-30
Questions
Aircraft, Safety measures 581-2w
Airport security, Manchester Airport 578w
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review, Disclosure of information 600w
Business on own account scheme 550w
Business statement 575
Channel crossing, North of England Regional Consortium 759
Cinemas (Safety) Regulations 1985 8w
Greater Manchester Police, Members correspondence 175w
Manchester Airport, Companies 169w
Manchester Airport, Management 297w, 409w, 480w
Members allowances, Private members bills 441w
Pensions, Women 319-20w
Poundswick School, Industrial disputes 150
Public transport, Manchester City Council 168w
Rate limitation, Health services 571w
Special educational needs, Judgments 288-9w

Morris, Rt Hon John
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1272-3, 1276-7
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 872, (15.01.86) 1124-7
Questions
Airport security, Manchester Airport 569w
Attorney-General, Security 446w
Criminal proceedings, Government departments 567-8
Official secrets, Disclosure of information 769
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 724w
Westland helicopters, Official secrets 614w

Morris, Mr Michael
Questions
Boiler conversion scheme, Coal firing scheme 27w
Chemists shops, Prescriptions 428w
Hospital catering, Margarine 428w
Overseas trade, Security 291w

Morrison, Mr Charles
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 319
Questions
Crops, Pulses & seeds 277w

Morrison, Mr Peter, Minister of State for Trade & Industry
Questions
Assisted areas, North West region 139-40w
British Shipbuilders 587w
British Steel Corporation 587w
British Steel Corporation, Privatisation 1059
British Steel Corporation, Public appointments 449w
Car industry, Foreign companies in UK 1062
Car industry, Motor vehicle parts 1061
Companies, North West region 723-4w
EC Steel Council 25-6w
Economic growth, Regional planning & development 586w
European Regional Development Fund, Council of Ministers 137-8w
Exports, Iron & steel 1068
Gartcosh Steelworks, Factory closures 591w
Government assistance to industry, Worsley 25w, 136w, 139w
Imports, Morocco 138w
Industrial development, Regional planning & development 586w
Industry, Pay 585w
Iron & steel, Exports 1060
Iron & steel, Treaties 1059
Iron & steel industry, Factory closures 1070-1
Iron & steel industry, Ravenscraig Steelworks 1070, 1071-2
Local Government reform, Civil service manpower 24w
Motor components industry, Iron & steel 1061
Motor components industry, Vauxhall Motors 1062
Motor vehicle parts, Spain 1061-2
Phosphates, Imports 184-5w
Privatisation, Share ownership 1059
Public sector assets, Privatisation 1058-9
Regional aid, Chester 1067
Regional aid, Cleveland 1066
Regional aid, Northern region 589w, 1065, 1066, 1067
Regional development grants, Hamilton 135w
Research, Civil service dispersal 585-6w
Special development areas, Blyth Valley 1066-7
Special steels, Industrial production 591w
Tobacco industry, Government assistance to industry 24w
United Engineering Steels 539w
Vauxhall Motors 588-9w
Warships, British Shipbuilders 724w

Mortgage interest rates
Mortgage relief 1197, 1198
Owner occupied housing 1198

Mortgage relief
Mortgage interest rates 1197, 1198
Young people 1197

Mortgages
Loans (19.12.85) 592-653

Motor components industry
Iron & steel 1061
Vauxhall Motors 1062

Motor vehicle parts
Car industry 1061
Made in Britain 1061, 1062
Spain 1061-2

Motor vehicle registration
Wales 631w

Motor vehicle safety
Buses 476w
EC law 111w
Safety belts 345w
Space saver spare wheels 111w, 298w, 405w

Motor vehicles
Channel crossing 478-80w
Health hazards 407w
Lighting 42w
Riot Damages Act 1886 131w

Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 875-97

Motorways
Costs 731w
Death 112w
Expenditure 732w
Leicestershire 477w
Lighting 292w, 296-7w, (18.12.85) 383-5, 477w
Noise insulation grants 407w
Road accidents 112w
Road construction 477w
Road signs 42-3w, 631w
Road traffic 45-6w, 297w
Safety barriers 167w
Scotland 292w

Moynihan, Mr Colin
Debates etc
Afghanistan (20.12.85) 686
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1394-6
Members (18.12.85) 361-5
Special constables (17.01.86) 1411-5
Questions
British Steel Corporation 587w
Chemical weapons 196w
Development aid, Sudan 772
Housing departments, Lewisham 920

Mudd, Mr David
Questions
Badgers & Bovine Tuberculosis (No 2) Review 579w
Butter, Intervention stocks 483-4w

Multifibre arrangement 24w, 588w, 1062-3, 1064
EC action 184w
Hong Kong 1063
Textile industry 1063-4

Multiple occupation
Fire prevention 626w

Multiple sclerosis
Hyperbaric oxygen 76-7w
Medical treatment 76-7w
Medical treatments 76w, 77w

Murphy, Mr Christopher
Debates etc
Rates & rating (18.12.85) 376-7
Questions
Airbuses, Government assistance 634w
A320 Airbus, Government assistance 632w
Business statement 1221
Council house sales 259-60w
Council house sales, Welwyn Hatfield 463w
Employment, Welwyn Hatfield 399w
Housing benefits, Local government expenditure 410w
NHS finance, Regional health authorities 498w
Railway network, Northern region 732-3w
Railway transport, Commuters 409w
Rate support grants, Hertfordshire 104w
Sentencing, Crimes of violence 341-2w
Unemployment benefits, Welwyn Hatfield 397w

Musselburgh
Coal mining 2

M1 44w, 405-6w, 477w, 478w, 631w
Construction costs 44w
Road construction 406w, 478w
Road signs 405w, 631w

M3 362w

M5 630-1w

M25 43w, 44w, 405-6w
Construction costs 44w
Fog 43w
Road construction 406w
Road traffic 405-6w

M62 406w
Road construction 406w

Nairobi Conference 127w, 208w, 595-6w
Dept of Health & Social Security 595w
Statistics 595-6w

NALGO
Housing departments 920

Namibia
Foreign policy 205w
Political parties 133w
Racial discrimination 205w
State succession 133w
SWAPO 133w
United Nations 472w
Western Contact Group 286

Nassau Summit 196w
South Africa 196w

National Advisory Committee on Nutrition Education 121w

National anthems
European Communities 521w

National Association of Ladies Circles (17.01.86) 1345

National Bus Company
Asset stripping 760
Pensions 761
Privatisation 760-1
Share ownership 760-1
Tenders 760

National Coal Board
Coal mining closures 330w
Compensation 717w
Factory closures 329-30w
Margam mine 14-5
Overseas investment 28-9w
Relocation of employees 330w

National Drugs Intelligence Unit 6-7w
Association of Metropolitan Authorities 6-7w
Manpower 6w
Regional crime squads 6w

National Economic Development Council
Pay settlements 1203
Regional planning & development 586w

National Farmers Union 613w

National Freight Company
Shares 477w

National income
Public expenditure 189w
Public sector assets 190w
Public sector borrowing requirement 190w
Taxation 648w

National insurance benefits
Expenditure 439w

National insurance contributions 420-1w
Coal mining 14
Employers contributions 510-1w
Pay 510-1w
Tax thresholds 1201

National No-Smoking Day 419w
Opinion surveys 419w

National Radiological Protection Board
Nuclear weapons tests 906

National Union of Teachers 141-2, 152
Pay 143
Strikes 141-2

National Youth Advisory Council 287-8w
Public appointments 287-8w

Nationalised industries
Privatisation 153, 1194
Westland helicopters 1058-9

Nationality
Hong Kong 584w, (16.01.86) 1268-304

NATO 564w
Channel ferries 765
Defence expenditure 535w
Nuclear weapons deployment 907
Tactical nuclear weapons 562-3w
UK contributions 4w
Warsaw Pact 292-3

Natural gas production 26w
Energy research 26-7w

Naturalisation 714w

Nature Conservancy Council
Annual reports 17w
Channel crossing 15w
Government grants 218w
Orders & regulations 14-5w

Nature conservation
Forests 162w
Wash 463w

Naval bases
Construction 97w
Faslane 97w
Simonstown 134w

Navigational aids
Scotland 631w

Navy
Armed forces civilians 374-8w
Armed forces deployment 215w
Armed forces storage depots 374w
Defence procurement 914
Shipping 641w
Warships 914

Nazemi, Dr 272w
Immigration applications 272w

NCB (Enterprise) Ltd 11, 250w
Finance 11
Research finance 11
Upper Waiting Hall 250w

Neale, Mr Gerrard
Questions
Wind power, Electricity generation 27w

Neasden
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 693-4w
Social security claims 693-4w

Needham, Mr Richard, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
Questions
Building industry, Northern Ireland 42w
Hospital beds, Northern Ireland 266w
Hospitals, Northern Ireland 266w
NHS finance, Northern Ireland 268-70w
Residential care of children, Northern Ireland 134-5w

Neighbourhood watch schemes 547w
Police relations with public 155

Neill Committee see Lloyds Act 1982 Inquiry

Nellist, Mr Dave
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 305-6
Members interests (17.12.85) 221, 229, 235-6, 241, 249
Oral question time point of order (15.01.86) 1076
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 788, 874, (15.01.86) 1089
Questions
Business statement 1220-1
Coal mining, Manpower 28w
Government grants to local authorities 512-6w
Johnson Matthey Metals 649w
Public sector assets, Privatisation 1058-9
South Africa, Foreign policy 195w
South Africa, Trade unions 285
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w
UK contributions, NATO 4w
Westland helicopters, International cooperation 1072
Westland helicopters, Public sector 1204

Nelson, Mr Anthony
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 940-1, 982, 987-91
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 325-6
Questions
Syrian Arab Republic, Jordan 289

Nepal
Prime Minister visits abroad 922

New blood lectureships 442-4w

New businesses 566w
Greater London 566w

New Cross Building Society 653w

New Towns (Access to Information) (Scotland) Bill 1985/86
2R Order read (17.01.86) 1410

New Zealand
Butter 210w, 280w
Military exercises 734w

Newcastle Airport 273w
Immigration controls 273w

Newham
Employment schemes 51w
Prevention of Terrorism Acts 459-60w
Social security benefits 496w
Thames Flood Barrier 257-8w

Newry & Armagh
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Newton, Mr Tony, Minister of State for Social Security
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges, Ministerial statements (17.12.85) 168-74
Statutory Sick Pay Uprating Order 1985 (15.01.86) 1177
Questions
Aids for handicapped, Blind 411w
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review 310w, 740w
Artificial Limb & Appliance Centres Review, Disclosure of information 600w
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Tyne & Wear 553w
Bettman Centre, Aids for handicapped 493w
Blind, Social services 697w
Board & lodging charges, Costs 417-8w
Board & lodging charges, Social security recipients 240w
Board & lodging charges, Tyne & Wear 740w
Board & lodging charges, Young people 418w
Child benefit 436w
Child benefit, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 318w
Child benefit, Scotland 72-3w
Disposable income, Social security reform 694w
Exceptional needs payments 739w
Exceptional needs payments, Draught-proofing materials 315w
Families, Supplementary benefits 700-1w
Family credit, Social security claims 435w, 495w
Family credit, Social security reform 694-5w
Family credit, Strike benefits 495w
Family credit, Tax rates & bands 696w
Family credits, Social security reform 598w
Family income supplement, Social security reform 596-7w
Family income supplements, Social security recipients 434w
Funerals, Death grants 316-7w
Funerals, Exceptional needs payments 436w
Handicap benefits, Administrative delays 738w
Handicap benefits, Social security reform 597-8w
Handicapped children, Families 315-6w
Handicapped children, Mobility allowance 598-9w
Hospitals, Telephones for disabled 505w
Housing benefits, Expenditure 596w
Housing benefits, Local government expenditure 410w
Housing benefits, Pensioners 410w
Housing benefits, Rates & rating 317w, 319w
Housing benefits, Social security reform 597w, 696w, 697w
Housing benefits, Voluntary organisations 695w
Income, Social security reform 696w
Income support scheme, Heating allowances 318w
Income support scheme, Housing benefits 318w
Income support scheme, Industrial disputes 599w
Income support scheme, Pensioners 317-8w, 741-2w
Income support scheme, Severe weather payments 318w
Income support scheme, Single people 741w
Income support scheme, Social security recipients 317-8w
Income support scheme, Unemployed 317-8w 597w
Income support scheme, Young people 434w
Income tax 420-1w
Invalid care allowances 701-2w
Invalid care allowances, Costs 701w
Invalid care allowances, European Court of Justice 701w
Invalid care allowances, Married women 701w
Low pay, Marginal tax rates 594-6w
Married women, Retirement pensions 409w
Maternity benefits, Public expenditure 697w

Maternity benefits, Social security reform 696-7w
Means tested benefits, Social security reform 435-6w, 704-6w
National insurance benefits, Expenditure 439w
Occupational deafness, Marine engines 76w
Pensions, Average earnings 319-20w
Pensions, Employers contributions 320w
Pensions, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 320-1w
Pensions, State earnings related pensions scheme 320w
Pensions, Women 319-20w
"Reform of Social Security Consultation Paper" 598w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Statistics 740w
Rent rebates, Social security reform 596w
Severe disablement allowance, Administrative delays 499w
Severe disablement allowance, Social security benefits disqualification 437w
Severe disablement allowance, Social security recipients 499w
Severe weather payments 599-600w
Severe weather payments, Exceptional needs payments 71-2w
Social Fund, Finance 319w
Social Fund, Maternity benefits 599w
Social security, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 310w
Social security benefits, Costs 414w, 596w
Social security benefits, Industrial injuries 79w
Social security benefits, Members correspondence 432-3w
Social security benefits, Newham 496w
Social security benefits, Young people 495w
Social security benefits disqualification, "Reform of Social Security White Paper" 324w
Social security benefits reductions 606w
Social security benefits rules, Exceptional circumstances additions 69w
Social security benefits rules, Industrial disputes 318w
Social security benefits rules, Seasonal workers 239-40w
Social security benefits rules, Students 229-30w
Social security reform 598w, 694w
Social security reviews, Marginal tax rates 495-6w
Standard of living, Families 418-9w
State earnings related pensions scheme, Social security reform 694w
State earnings related pensions scheme, Social security reform 744w
Supplementary benefits, Board & lodging charges 553-4w
Supplementary benefits, Carers 599w
Supplementary benefits, Costs 319w
Supplementary benefits, Young people 84w, 434-5w
Unemployment benefits, EC countries 72w
Water charges, Social security reform 597w
Young people, Social security benefits rules 422-6w

NHS
Cleaning services 427w
Contracts for services 385-96w, 436-8w, 702w
Early retirement 429-32w
Hormone treatments 700w
Hospitals 84-96w
Management 326w, 700w
Members correspondence 601w
Pay 312w, 557-9w
Prices 557-9w
Privatisation 311w, 427w, 429-32w, 494w, 601w
Recruitment 503w
Scotland 482w
Smoking 503w
Spectacles 326-7w
Technicians 151-2w
Telephones for disabled 505w

NHS administration
Departmental circulars 420w
Medical profession 429w
Nurses 429w

NHS charges
Foreign patients 69-70w

NHS complaints 232w
Clinical judgements 231w, 232w, 233w
Ex gratia payments 231w

NHS finance
Greater London 145-8w, 311w
Heart diseases 504-5w
Hospital closures 503w
North West Thames Regional Health Authority 498w
Norther Ireland 268-70w
Primary health care 703-4w
Regional health authorities 156-7w, 417w, 498w
Rural areas 75w
Teaching hospitals 312w, 508-10w

NHS Management Inquiry 326w

NHS & private practice
Amenity beds 311w
Hospital consultants 601w
West Midlands 66-8w

Nicaragua
Airspace 283
Coffee 284
EC external relations 201w
Ministers visits abroad 283
USA 283-4

Nicholls, Mr Patrick
Questions
Animal welfare 347-8w
Car tax 1199
Dogs, Licensing 217-8w
Energy efficiency, Industrial energy conservation 7-8
Income tax 647w
Limited list prescribing, Appeals 421-2w
Student grants, Deeds of Covenant 120w
Untreated milk, Licensing 281w

Nicholson, James
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Nicorette
Prescriptions 315w

Nigeria
Children (20.12.85) 725-30

Nimrod aircraft 97-8w, 562w, 912
Costs 98w
Defence 98w
Defence contracts 97-8w, 912, 913
GEC Avionics 912, 913
Radar 98w
Repairs & maintenance 97-8w

9 Signals Regiment 99w, 101-2w, 215w, 379w, 524-5w
Armed forces deployment 379w, 525w
Armed forces discharges 99w, 215w, 524w, 525w
Armed forces strength 101-2w
Interviews 379w
Police interrogation 524-5w

Nitrates
Water pollution 545w, 656w
Water supply 257w

Nitrogen oxides 544w

Noise insulation grants 407w
Motorways 407w

Non-departmental public bodies 109w, 453-4w
Patent Office 453-4w

Non-domestic rates
Local authorities 570w

Nordic countries 118-9w
Languages education 118-9w

Norfolk
Smoking related diseases 73-5w

Norris, Mr Steve
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 476-9, 483, 484-5

North Devon 580w
Road construction 580w

North Devon link road 580w

North Down
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

North East Hampshire structure plan 730w

North East region 190w
Customs officers 190w

North East Thames Regional Health Authority 230-1w, 501w
Cancer 501w

North of England Regional Consortium
Channel crossing 759

North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board
External financing limits 164w

North Sea
Offshore drilling 248-9w

North Sea oil
Oil exports 28w
Technical assistance 250w

North West region
Assisted areas 139-40w
Companies 723-4w
Factory Inspectorate 188w
Industrial training 299w
Magistrates 346w
Regional development grants 139-40w
Sewers 15w

North West Thames Regional Health Authority 498w
NHS finance 498w

North West Water Authority 260w
Water charges 260w

North Yemen
Development aid 447-8w

Northern Ireland 579w
Agriculture 266-7w
Autumn Statement 267-8w
Body searches 185-6w
Building industry 42w, 186w
Cost per pupil 554w
Demonstrations 266w, 340w
Devolution 565
Emergency powers (16.01.86) 1307-30, 1331-5
Hospital beds 266w
Hospitals 266w
NHS finance 268-70w
Police 265-6w
Prisons 185-6w
Public expenditure 267-8w, 1197
Pupil-teacher ratios 554w
Residential care of children 134-5w
Salmon 543w
Terrorism (16.01.86) 1307-30
Trials (16.01.86) 1331-5
Youth training scheme 41w

Northern Ireland Office
Civil service manpower 41w
Oral questions 65-6w

Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 Independent Review (16.01.86) 1331-5

Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1331-5

Northern Ireland (Emergency Provision) Act 1978 (Continuance) (No 3) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1307-30

Northern Ireland (Loans) Bill 1985/86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Northern Lighthouse Board 168w, 582-3w
Expenditure 582-3w
Housing improvement 583w
Lighthouses 479w

Northern region
Customs officers 190w, 191w
Development agencies 1195-6
Drug crimes 190w
Railway network 732-3w
Regional aid 589w, 1065, 1066, 1067, 1195-6, 1196-7
Small businesses 1067
Unemployment 1065, 1066

Norway
Coastal shipping 762-3

Norwood
Unemployment 728w

Nuclear accidents
Hinckley Point B 30-1w, 64w
Information 249w
Nuclear Installations Inspectorate 549w

Nuclear disarmament (18.12.85) 380-3
Defence research 906
USA 199w

Nuclear fuel cycle
Nuclear weapons 561w

Nuclear fuel reprocessing
Dounreay 109-10w, 160w, (14.01.86) 1049-56
Fast reactors 109-10w

Nuclear Installations Inspectorate
Nuclear accidents 549w

Nuclear physics
Research finance 145

Nuclear power
Electricity generation 4-5
Radioactive waste disposal 4-5

Nuclear power stations
Advanced gas-cooled reactors 30-1w
Construction 28w
Death 250w
Electricity generation 3-4
Industrial injuries 250w
Nuclear safety 30w

Nuclear safeguards 609w
Capenhurst 29w

Nuclear safety
Nuclear power stations 30w
Radioactive waste disposal 220-1w
Scotland 64w

Nuclear test ban 196-7w, 299
Civil service manpower 366w
East West relations 290-1w
International cooperation 290-1w
Research 366w
Strategic defence initiative 197w

Nuclear weapons
Defence equipment 561w
Europe 204w
Lasers 909
Nuclear fuel cycle 561w
Road transport 913
South Pacific 734w
Strategic defence initiative 907-8

Nuclear weapons deployment
Deterrence theory 915
NATO 907
Nuclear weapons policy 915
Strategic defence initiative 907
USSR 908

Nuclear weapons policy (18.12.85) 380-3
Clwyd, Ann 915
Deterrence theory 915
Nuclear weapons deployment 915

Nuclear weapons tests 216w
Australia 159w, 160w, 216w, 561w, 629w
Christmas Island 609w
Exservicemen 906
National Radiological Protection Board 906
Personal injuries compensation 563w
Personal injuries compensation 905-6
Radiation hazards 561w
Seismic monitoring 298-9
Strategic defence initiative 910

Nugee Committee see Flats Management Committee of Inquiry

Nursery schools
Cost per pupil 707-9w
Liverpool 119w

Nurses
Average earnings 1199
Clothing 234w
Fire resistant materials 234w
Management 326w
NHS administration 429w
Recruitment 419w
Skilled workers 95w

Nursing homes
Fires 697w
Handbooks 605w
Licensing 79-80w

Nutrition
In-service training 120w
School meals 113w, 644w

Nutrition & health
Food additives 276w
Food labelling 556
Food standards 277-8w
Health education 121w

Nylon monofilament gill nets 579w

Oakes, Rt Hon Gordon
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 605-9

Oakthorpe
Fires 1205

O'Brien, Mr William
Debates etc
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 266-9

Occupational deafness
Marine engines 76w

Occupational pensions
Employees contributions 320-1w
State earnings related pension scheme 320w

Occupations
Specialist advisers 685-6w

OECD countries
Marginal tax rates 1194
Productivity 653w

Office of Fair Trading
Cash limits 244w

Office of Telecommunications
Prices 589w

Offices
Council of Ministers 463-4w
Metropolitan Police 171-2w
Thamesmead Community Trust 729w

Official hospitality 264w, 628w
Chequers 264w
10 Downing Street 264w

Official Report
Speakers rulings & statements (16.01.86) 1213, 1239

Official secrets
Daily Telegraph 455w
Disclosure of information 769
Heseltine, Michael 515w
Immigration 455w
Inquiries 768-9
Open government 919
Parkinson, Cecil 768-9
Trials 99w
Westland helicopters 614w, 629w

Official secrets acts 629w, 768-9, 919
Prosecutions 919

Official stationery 381w
Publicity 381w

Official visits
Peres, Shimon 552w

Offshore drilling
Energy research 26-7w
North Sea 248-9w

Oil depletion
Oil reserves 13-4

Oil exports
North Sea oil 28w

Oil imports
Iran 249-50w

Oil industry
Capital investment 248w

Oil prices 1201
Economic planning 648w
Public sector borrowing requirement 1202

Oil reserves
Oil depletion 13-4
Oil recovery 13-4

Oil revenues 307w
Tax yields 1202

Oil rigs
Manpower 248-9w

Okehampton bypass 371w, 407w
Dept of the Environment 371w
Dept of Transport 407w
Anniversaries 371w, 407w

Okehampton Bypass (Confirmation of Orders) Bill 1985/86
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591

Old peoples homes
Registered homes 79-80w

Oldchurch Hospital (13.01.86) 898-904
Radiotherapy (13.01.86) 898-904

O'Neill, Mr Martin J
Questions
Defence procurement, Cammell Laird 912
Defence procurement, Warships 914
Regional aid, Northern region 1067

Onslow, Mr Cranley
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1212
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 874, (15.01.86) 1120-4
Questions
Drift nets, Fishing gear 614w
Fish, Import controls 613w
Fish, USA 613w
Fish conservation, Scotland 565w
Fish diseases 486w
Fishing gear 579w
Graduates, Employment 336-8w
Nylon monofilament gill nets 579w
Unemployment, Graduates 397w

Open government
Official secrets 919

Open University 544w
Student numbers, Specific cases 116w
Tuition fees 116w
University finance 122w, 544w, 711-2w

Open University Visiting Committee 544w

Opencast mining 28w
Environment protection 5
Planning permission 464-6w
Privatisation 445w

Opening hours 503-4w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 503-4w

Ophthalmology
Medical education 739w

Opinion surveys
National No-Smoking Day 419w

Oppenheim, Mr Phillip
Questions
EC Steel Council 25-6w
Health service staff, Derbyshire 322-3w, 509w
Hospital waiting lists, Derbyshire 322w
Hosptials, Derbyshire 323w
Milk, Production quotas 209w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Derbyshire 289w

Regional aid, Northern region 1197
School leaving, Derbyshire 645w
School leaving certificates, Derbyshire 645-6w
Supplementary benefits, Board & lodging charges 553-4w

Opposition Days
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1082-174

Opticians 739w

Oral questions
European Communities (18.12.85) 300
Northern Ireland Office 65-6w
Speakers rulings & statements (18.12.85) 300, 345, (19.12.85) 568, (13.01.86) 769, (15.01.86) 1059, 1075, 1076, (16.01.86) 1192

Order of business
Council of Ministers 365w

Order Paper 683-6w
House of Commons Select Committees 683-6w

Orders & regulations
A47 477w
Continental shelf 30w
Limited list prescribing 81w
Nature Conservancy Council 14-5w
Rear seat belts 476w
Road freight transport 45w
Pilotage 167w
Speakers rulings & statements (14.01.86) 934
Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981 14-5w

Ordnance Survey
Financial targets 104w
Management 104-5w

Orkney
Social security benefits 499w

Orme, Rt Hon Stanley
Questions
Alternative energy, Energy research 634w
Energy efficiency, Domestic energy conservation 331w
Energy Efficiency Year, Domestic energy conservation 330-1w
Energy Efficiency Year, Voluntary organisations 331w
National Coal Board, Coal mine closures 330w
National Coal Board, Factory closures 329-30w
National Coal Board, Relocation of employees 330w

Orphans
Income tax 654w

Orroseja, Oluronke (20.12.85) 725-30

Osborn, Sir John
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 402-5, 406, 414
Questions
Iron & steel industry, Industrial production 24-5w

Ottaway, Mr Richard
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 598
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 435, 455-9

Outgoers scheme 552, 562
Common agricultural policy 562
Tenant farmers 562
Unemployment 552

Outpatients
Children 108w

Overcharging
Defence contracts 214w, 215w

Overseas aid 551w
Africa 770
Agriculture 769
Bilateral aid 447w
Debts 308-9w
Developing countries 550-1w
Estimates days (17.12.85) 180-218, 257
EC aid 447w
Hong Kong 772
Overseas students 713w
Sudan 771-2
UNESCO 241w

Overseas Development Administration
Scholarships 640w

Overseas investment
National Coal Board 28-9w

Overseas students
Overseas aid 713w
Student numbers 709-11w
Welsh Plant Breeding Station 336w

Overseas trade
Argentina 199w
Diplomatic service 203-4w
Iran 331-2w
Japan 590w
Romania 585w
Security 291w
Security equipment 589w
Service industries 1073-4
South Africa 1074
Trade promotion 298
Tristan da Cunha 33w
USSR, 590w, 1064-5

Overseas workers
Income tax assessment 191w

Owen, Rt Hon David
Questions
Lloyds of London 565-6

Owen, Gwynfor 525w

Own resources 359w
Bank of England 359w

Owner occupied housing
Mortgage interest rates 1198
Planning permission 673w

O'Dwyer, Ella 342w

O'Shea, Tony (20.12.85) 673-80

Page, Sir John
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 410
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 947-8
Juries (18.12.85) 419-21
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 872

Page, Mr Richard
Debates etc
Greenbelt, Hertfordshire (19.12.85) 665-7
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 41
Questions
M25, Road construction 406w
M25, Road traffic 405-6w
Road construction, Berkhamsted bypass 765-6

Paisley, Ian
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Palestine 202w
Self-determination of states 291

Palestine Liberation Organisation
Middle East 286-7, 288
Peace negotiations 193w
Terrorism 287
USA 289-90

Parental contributions
Student grants 39-40w

Parents
Social security benefits rules 422-6w

Parents rights
Schools & parents 39w

Park, Mr George
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1118-9
Questions
Car tax 1199
South America, Debts 200w

Parkinson, Cecil 768-9
Official secrets 768-9

Parks
Arts Council 512w

Parliament
EC reform 201-2w

Parliamentary constituencies
Unemployment 125w

Parliament papers
Speakers rulings & statements (13.01.86) 787, 788, 1077, 1087, (16.01.86) 1209-12

Parliamentary private secretaries 348-52w

Parliamentary recess
Speakers rulings & statements (19.12.85) 754

Parris, Mr Matthew
Questions
Agriculture, Northern Ireland 266-7w
Bus fares, Price increases 759-60
Copyright, Television programmes 24w
Limited list prescribing, Lipoflavanoid 231w
United Engineering Steels 539w

Parrot Corporation 615-6w

Parry, Mr Robert
Debates etc
Liverpool (16.01.86) 1337-40, 1341, 1344
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 318
Questions
Arts Council grants, Concert halls 304-5w
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 30w
British residents abroad, Prisoners 473w
Building industry, Belfast 454w
Building industry, Death 52-4w
Building industry, Glasgow 482w
Building industry, Labour only subcontracting 52w
Building industry, Liverpool 491-2w
Building industry, Northern Ireland 42w, 186w
Building industry, Scotland 61w
Civil service, Trade unions 31w
Council house waiting lists 465w
Council house waiting lists, Waiting lists 482w
Falkland Islands, Ministers visits abroad 212w
Health & Safety Executive, Buildings industry 52w
Social security benefits, Industrial injuries 79w
Syrian Arab Republic, Foreign policy 203w
Tax exemption certificates, Building industry 50w
Unemployment, Liverpool 492-3w
Urban areas, Social deprivation 467w

Parsons, Mark 131w
Complaints against police 131w

Part-time employment 51w

Passengers
Channel crossing 478-80w

Patchett, Mr Terry
Questions
Coal mining 28w

Patent Office 453-4w
Non-development public bodies 453-4w

Patients
AIDS 494w
Family doctors 325w, 699w
Health service ancillary staff 235w
Health service staff 235w

Patten, Mr Chris, Minister of State for Education & Science
Debates etc
Education Support Grants (Amendment) (No 2) Regulations 1985 (16.12.85) 126
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 111-3, 117-8, 120-2
School meals (16.12.85) 126
Questions
Business education, Curriculum 123w
City & Guilds of London Institute, Vocational education 118w
Class sizes, Pupil-teacher ratios 116w
Education support grants, Expenditure 713w

Education welfare officers, Child care 185w
Educational psychology, Local government staff 338w
Educational standards, Schools 117w
Examinations, Industrial disputes 442w
General Certificate of Secondary Education 120w
Government grants to local authorities, Child care 119w
Health education, Nutrition & health 121w
In-service training, Dept of Education & Science 120w
Nursery schools, Cost per pupil 707-9w
Nursery schools, Liverpool 119w
Poundswick School, Industrial disputes 150
Religious education, Schools 708w
Religious education, Teacher training 288w
School administration, Local education authorities 149-50
School choice, Schools & parents 122w
School closures, Crayford School, Bexley 149
School governors, Elections 152
School leaving, Educational qualifications 122w
School meals, Child care 38w
School meals, Nutrition 113w
School transport, Travel concessions 116w
Special educational needs, Pupils 123-4w
Special schools, School governors 119w
Student grants, Further education 120w
Students, Departmental publications 38w
Teachers, Dismissal 150
Teachers, Merit awards 441w, 442w
Teachers, Pay 707w
Teachers appraisal, Inner city areas 122w
Youth training scheme, Educational standards 150
Youth training scheme, Manpower Services Commission 113w
Youth training scheme, Skilled workers 150-1

Patten, Mr John, Minister of State for the Environment (Housing, Urban Affairs & Construction)
Debates etc
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 262-6, 271, 272
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Local government expenditure 465-6w, 577w
Building regulations, Greater London 13-4w
Council housing, Empty housing 662w
Council housing finance 465-6w
Defective housing, Council housing finance 465-6w
Defective housing, Local government expenditure 576w
Defective housing, Repairs & maintenance 466-7w
Easiform housing, Defective housing 16-7w
Easiform housing, Housing Defects Act 1984 17w
Empty housing, Public sector housing 263-4w
Flats, Service charges 677w
Homelessness, Secure tenancies 468w
House purchase, Housing Defects Act 1984 103-4w
Housing Corporation, Finance 262w
Housing finance 576w
Housing insulation, Government grants to local authorities 263w
Housing investment programes, Government grants to local authorities 255-6w
Housing stock 574-6w
Local government revenue 468w
Nitrates, Water pollution 545w
North West Water Authority, Water charges 260w
Sewers, North West region 15w
Sewers, Water authorities 571-2w, 572-3w
Smith houses, Defective housing 254-5w
Urban development grants, Spencerbeck estate 465-6w, 574w
Water authorities, External financing limits 730-2w
Water authorities, Finance 467w, 572w
Water authorities, Privatisation 679-82w
Water authorities, Property transfer 673w
Water Metering Steering Group Report 463w
Water meters, Water charges 103w
Water pollution, Nitrates 545w
Water supply, Households 468w
Water supply, Lead pollution 12w
Water supply, Leeds 220w
Water supply, Lincolnshire 656w
Water supply, Nitrates 257w
Water supply, Water authorities 573-4w, 656-62w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 573w

Pattie, Mr Geoffrey, Minister of State for Information Technology
Debates etc
Copyright (18.12.85) 527-30
Questions
Aerospace industry 632w
Aerospace industry, Exports 632w
Airbuses, Aerospace industry 451-2w
Airbuses, Government assistance 634w
A320 Airbus, Government assistance 632w
British Telecom, Price increases 589w
Copyright, Recording equipment 592w
Copyright, Television programmes 24w
Counterfeit manufacturing 592w
EC internal trade 1072
EC internal trade, Financial services 1072
EC Research Council 244w
Industrial development 584-5w
Manufacturing industries, Regional development grants 332-4w
Materials technology 633w
Post Office, Financial targets 450-1w
Postal services, Monopolies & Mergers Commission 241-2w
Rolls-Royce, Company finance 590w
Westland helicopters, Avionics 243-4w
Westland helicopters, International cooperation 1072

Pavitt, Mr Laurie
Questions
Doctors, Computers 77-8w
European communities, Voting methods 193-4w
Hospital closures, Consultation papers 228-9w
Jamaica, Diplomatic service 298
NHS, Privatisation 427w
Nurses, Recruitment 419w
Nurses, Skilled workers 95w
Vaccination, Tuberculosis 151w

Pawsey, Mr J F
Debates etc
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 110-1
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 324-5
Questions
AIDS 427w
AIDS, Government grants 427w
AIDS, Patients 494w
Car tax, Car industry 1198-9
Coal mining, Industrial injuries 250-1w
Crime prevention, Closed circuit television 340w
Education support grants, Expenditure 289-90w
Government grants to voluntary organisations 441w
Home Office, Research finance 340-1w
Nuclear power stations, Industrial injuries 250w
Police authorities, Local government expenditure 172w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141
Teachers, Pay 579w
Upper Waiting Hall, Exhibitions 607-8w

Pay
Ambulance services 161w
Armed forces civilians 523w
British Steel Corporation 449w
Health service staff 312-3w, 736-7w
Income tax 647w
Industry 585w
Local government staff 456w, 570w
National insurance contributions 510-1w
National Union of Teachers 143
NHS 312w, 557-9w
Pharmacists 428w
Police 716w
Regional health authorities 235w
South Bank Board 512w
Teachers 64-5w, 114-5w, 141-2, 143, 144, 146, 579w, 707w, 1203, 1206-7
Technicians 151-2w
University teachers 335-6w
Youth training scheme 727-8w

Pay review bodies 146
Teachers 144-5, 146-7

Pay settlements
Burnham Committee 119w
National Economic Development Council 1203

Peace negotiations
Angola 133w
Argentina 198-9w
Falkland Islands 191-2w
Iran-Iraq war 296
Jordan 288
Middle East 192w, 193w, 286-7, 288, 289-90, 290-1, 291-2
Palestine Liberation Organisation 193w

Pearce, Austin 734w
Ministers correspondence 734w

Pedestrian areas
Local government reform 111w

Pendry, Mr Tom
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1230-1
Questions
Companies, North West region 723-4w
Free school meals, Wales 19-20w
Hospital beds 167w
Hospital beds, Northern Ireland 266w
Hospital beds, Scotland 353-4w
Hospital beds, Scottish health boards 354-8w
Hospital closures, Hospital beds 77w, 495w
Hospitals, Construction 554-6w
Hospitals, Northern Ireland 266w
Hospitals, Wales 284-6w
Industrial training schemes, Tameside 125w
NHS, Privatisation 429-32w, 494w
School meals, Scotland 110w
School meals, Wales 20-1w
Unemployment, Littleborough 566-8w

Penhaligon, Mr David
Debates, etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 618-20, 645
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 587-8
Members interests, Liberal party (18.12.85) 346
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 324
Recess motions, Christmas (18.12.85) 388
Tin, Cornwall (18.12.85) 541
Questions
Health service staff, Expenditure 736-7w
Local government staff, Pay 570w
Mortgage relief, Mortgage interest rates 1198
Oil rigs, Manpower 248-9w
Police, Pay 716w
Submarines, USA 373w
Teachers, Pay 707w

Pension funds
British Gas Corporation 9
Personal savings 1193

Pensioners
Housing benefits 410w
Income support scheme 317-8w, 741-2w
Spectacles 433w

Pensioners Right to Heat Light & Communications Bill 1985/86
1R (18.12.85) 347-9

Pensions
Administrative delays 75w
Average earnings 319-20w
Employees contributions 320w
Employers contributions 320w

National Bus Company 761
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 156, 320-1w
State earnings related pensions scheme 319-20w
Women 319-20w

Peoples Europe Committee 521w

Per capita costs
Block grant 672-3w
Cervical cancer 572
Hospitals 125w
Prison medical services 172w
Prisons 170w
Public expenditure 360w
School meals 643w
Womens prisons 170w

Per capital costs
Prisons 170w

Peres, Shimon 552w
Official visits 552w

Personal income 594w
Immigration rules 127-8w

Personal injuries compensation
Nuclear weapons tests 563w, 905-6

Personal property
Drug crimes (19.12.85) 591

Personal records
Dept of Health & Social Security 497w

Personal savings
Pension funds 1193
Social security recipients 410w

Personal social services
Consultants 323-4w

Personal tax allowances
Married people 652w

Personal taxation 593-4w

Pest control
Licensing 721-3w

Pesticides
Fenvalerate 484w
Food & Environmental Protection Act 1985 723w, 725w
Licensing 723w, 725w

Pesticides safety precautions scheme 484w

Peter Cameron Webb Syndicate 766-7
Fraud 767

Peterborough Health Authority 326w
Hospitals 326w

Peterhead Bay Harbour (16.12.85) 72-106

Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill 1985/86
Order for consideration read (16.01.86) 1191
2R (16.12.85) 72-106

Petitions
Prisoners 4w

Petroleum exploration 26w

Pharmacists
Pay 428w

Philippines
Foreign policy 31-2w, 198w

Philips, Cyril 548w

Phoenix companies 539w

Phosphates
Imports 184-5w
Morocco 138w
Resources exploration 134w

Pike, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 598-9, 633-5
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 326
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 33
Questions

British Aerospace Ministers correspondence 918-9
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 5-6
Channel tunnel, Safety 758
Industrial development, Regional planning & development 586w
Intervention stocks, Cereals 1w, 554
Middle East, Council of Ministers 133w
Nuclear weapons tests, Personal injuries compensation 563w
Prime Minister official engagements 265w, 627w
Road construction, Airedale 764
South Africa, Economic sanctions 295-6
Tax yields, Privatisation 361w
Youth training scheme, Educational standards 150

Pilot Boat R Regulations 1983 167w

Pilotage
Orders & regulations 167w
Scotland 580w

Planning appeals 106w, 222w
Birtenshaw Farm 18w
Housing construction 105-6w
Hypermarkets 13w
Local authorities 222w
Property development 106w

Planning*inquiries
Dounreay (14.01.86) 1049-56

Planning permission
Hypermarkets 260w
Opencast mining 464-6w
Owner occupied housing 673w
Road construction 763-4
Stolport 366w
Willowbrook estate 259w

Plant Breeding Institute 286-7w
Property transfer 286-7w

Plastic bullets
Police equipment 270w
West Midlands Police 270w

Playing fields
Building land 285w, 286w
Wales 285w, 286w

"Pleasure Leisure & Jobs" 345w

Plessey
Mergers 179w, 609w

Plymouth
Submarines 373w

Pocock, Leslie 731w
Dismissal 731w
Merseyside Residuary Body 731w

Points of order
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 174, (18.12.85) 300, 342, 343, 344, 466, (19.12.85) 568, (15.01.86) 1075

Polaris submarines
Medical records 95-6w
Radiation hazards 95-6w

Police (17.01.86) 1411-8
Computers 130w, 352w
Drug crimes 6w
Electoral register 128w
Expenditure 129w
Freemasonry (20.12.85) 671-2
Leicestershire 455w
Local government expenditure 273-4w
Manpower 169-70w, 178-9w, 455w, 456w, 716w
Northern Ireland 265-6w
Pay 716w
Public expenditure 273-4w, 341w
Scotland 352w

Police authorities
Civil defence 272w
Local government expenditure 172w, 173w

Police cautions 546-7w
Indictable offences 546-7w
Young people 546-7w

Police cells 619-20w, 621-2w, 715w
Remand in custody 619-20w, 715w

Police custody 620w, 621w
Costs 621w
Expenditure 621w
Manpower 621w
Prevention of Terrorism Acts 459-60w

Police detention 619-20w, 621-2w

Police equipment
Plastic bullets 270w
Riot control weapons 129-30w

Police Federation 569w

Police firearms
Groce, Cherry 130w
Manchester Airport 569w

Police interrogation
Scotland 357w
9 Signal Regiment 524-5w

Police misconduct
Sexual offences 252w
Tottenham 131w

Police powers
Metropolitan Police 126-7w

Police protection 714w
Royal Observer Corps 714w

Police relations with public
Neighbourhood watch schemes 155

Police training
Civil disorder 172-3w
Metropolitan Police 460w

Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984 169-70w
Custody officers 169-70w

Polisario Front 133-4w
Diplomatic relations 133-4w

Political affiliations 329w, 346w, 459w
London boroughs 459w
Magistrates 329w, 346w

Political Honours Scrutiny Committee 3w
Honours 3w

Political levy
Trade unions 304w, 399-400w

Political parties
Local authorities 469-70w
Namibia 133w

Political prisoners
Chile 474w
Iraq 735w
Lembach, Pedro Fernandez 474w
Turkey 191w

Political refugees 714w
Immigration applications 714w
USSR 205-6w

Polkemmet
Waste disposal 3

Polkemmet Bing 551-2w
Smoke & chimney gases 551-2w

Pollock, Mr Alexander
Debates etc
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1256-7
Questions
Legal costs, Scotland 635w

Pollutants
Pollution 544w

Pollution control
Consultation papers 259w
Disclosure of information 369w

Pollution monitoring
Radioactive wastes 167w

Poole Borough Council Bill (HL) 1984/85
Rep* (16.01.86) 1191

Population
Wales 285w

Porter, Mr Barry
Debates etc

Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 975

Portillo, Mr Michael
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 10
Building societies, Company registration 143w
Inflation 650w

Ports
Metropolitan Police 459w
Scotland (16.12.85) 72-106

Portsmouth
Harbour masters 717w
Initial teacher training 288w

Portugal
EC budget contributions 207w

Post Office
Automatic credit transfer 228w
Financial targets 450-1w
Social security payments 228w

Postal services
Monopolies & Mergers Commission 241-2w

Postal workers
Income 450-1w

Postgraduate students
Science & technology research 579-80w

Poundswick School 149-50
Industrial disputes 149-50

Poverty
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 154-5

Poverty trap (18.12.85) 473-93

Powell, J Enoch
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Powell, Mr Ray
Questions
Cereals, Agricultural production 276w
Health education, Nutrition & health 121w

Powell, Mr William
Debates etc
Unemployment (18.12.85) 371-4
Questions
A1, Road construction 478w
Income tax assessment, Overseas workers 191w
Replan 644-5w
Town & country planning, General development orders 369-71w
Trade promotion, China 1073

Power industry
Capital investment 248w

Power station closures 716w
Yelland Power Station 716w

Powley, Mr John
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 327
Questions
Housing investment programmes, Government grants to local authorities 255-6w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w, 144

Powys
Educational finance 1207-8
Rate support grants 1207-8

Prentice, Rt Hon Reg
Questions
Africa, Overseas aid 770

Prescott, Mr John
Questions
Health physics, Merchant seamen 221-2w
Radioactive waste disposal, Nuclear safety 220-1w
Radioactive waste disposal, Sea pollution 209-10w
Wages councils, Personnel 726w

Prescription charges 698w

Prescription charges exemptions
Diseases 501-2w
Publicity 157-8w

Prescription drugs
Costs 77-8w

Prescriptions
Chemists shops 428w
Costs 502w
Heroin 132w
Nicorette 315w
Spectacles 433w

Press releases
Speakers rulings & statements (18.12.85) 343

Prevention of Terrorism Acts 459-60w
Newham 459-60w
Police custody 459-60w

Preventitive medicine
AIDS 63w

Pre-payment certificates
Income 502w

Pre-school education
School population 712w

Price, Sir David
Questions
Local government finance 651w

Price controls
Gas tariffs 30w

Price increases
British Telecom 589w
Bus fares 759-60

Prices
Bread 551-2w
Cereals 555, 557, 558, 561
NHS 557-9w
Office of Telecommunications 589w
Retail prices index 362w
Spectacles 238w, 604w

Primary education
Cost per pupil 707-9w

Primary health care 155w
District health authorities 602w, 702-3w
Expenditure 602w, 703-4w
Homelessness 606w
Inner city areas 602-3w, 606w
NHS finance 703-4w

Primary purpose rule 273w
Immigration appeals 273w

Prime Minister
Gifts 578w, 628w

Prime Minister domestic visits
Kings College Hospital 103w
Railway travel 552w

Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 265w, 552-3w, 627w

Prime Minister visits abroad
Costs 264w
Nepal 922

Prime Ministers questions
Speakers rulings & statements (16.01.86) 1207

Prior, Rt Hon James
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1273

Priorities Board for Research & Development in Agriculture & Food 210-1w

Prison accommodation 7w

Prison medical services
AIDS 170w
Per capita costs 172w

Prison population
Ethnic groups 170w
Prisoners on remand 170w
Scotland 357-8w

Prison staff
Manpower 343-4w
Recruitment 343w
Resignation 343w
Retirement 343w
Training 623w

Prisoners
Arab states 192w
British residents abroad 473w
Petitions 4w

Prisoners on remand
Prison population 170w
Scotland 357-8w

Prisoners release
Homicide 462w
Life imprisonment 170-1w

Prisoners rights
Brixton Prison 342w

Prisons
Design 177w
Northern Ireland 185-6w
Per capita costs 170w
USA 177w
Young offenders 63w
Youth custody 8w

Private education
Charities 50w
Pupils 442w
Tax yields 50w

Private investment
Channel crossing 764-5
Coal mining 29w
Energy efficiency 7-8
Railway transport 732-3w
University finance 122w

Private members bills
Members allowances 441w

Private Members motions
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 49-71

Private notice questions
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 46

Private patients
West Midlands Regional Health Authority 66-8w

Private rented housing
Housing investment programmes 217w
Judgments 464w

Private sector
Dartford tunnel 762
London docklands railway 764

Private sector housing
Empty housing 263-4w

Privatisation
Airports 478w
British Airports Authority (16.01.86) 1239
British Airways 580w, 733w
British Gas Corporation 5-6, 6-7, 9, 10-1, 27-8w, 30w, 634w
British Shipbuilders 724w
British Steel Corporation 1059
Coal mining 6, 445w
Companies 647-8w
Dockyards 718w
Gas meters 27-8w
Gas showrooms 5-6
Gas tariffs 10, 30w
Harbour masters 717w
Health services 161w
Hospitals 236w, 293-4w, 508w
National Bus Company 760-1
Nationalised industries 153, 1194
NHS 311w, 427w, 429-32w, 494w, 601w
Opencast mining 445w
Public sector assets 652w, 1058-9
Public utilities 590-1w
Share ownership 153, 1059
Shareholders 1194
Tax yields 361w
Water authorities 679-82w
Water supply industry 573w

Probation
Ethnic monitoring 130-1w
Statistics 713w

Proctor, Mr K Harvey

Questions
Dartford tunnel, East London river crossing 761
Demonstrations, Surveillance 266w, 340w
Electricity generation 3-4
Immigration, Members correspondence 342w
Trident, Defence expenditure 562w

Production capacity 215w
Royal ordnance factories 215w

Production quotas
Cereals 554-5, 557, 558, 561
Milk 209w, 281w, 552, 553

Productivity
Coal mining 11-2, 26w, 717w
OECD countries 653w

Professional consultants
Members 15

Professional misconduct 107-8w
Wildlife Inspectorate 107-8w

Professional qualifications
Educational psychology 337-8w
Pulford, Richard 512w
Social workers 108w

Profitability
British aerospace 156
London docklands railway 764
Manufacturing industries 1200

Property development
Planning appeals 106w

Property Services Agency
Berkshire 669-72w

Property transfer
London Docklands Development Corporation 471-2w
Plant Breeding Institute 286-7w
Water authorities 673w

Prosecutions
Customs 361w
Fire regulations 174-5w
Fraud 767, 768
Freedom of expression 152
Insider trading 184w
Official secrets acts 919
Scottish courts 357w

Prosthetics
Disclosure of information 600w

Protectionism
USA 1068

Psychology
Tunnels 407w

Public appointments
Agricultural research 336w
Banking supervision 1193
British Steel Corporation 449w
Data protection tribunal 130w
Dept of Health & Social Security 504w
Home Office 5w
Merseyside Residuary Body 677w
National Youth Advisory Council 287-8w
Scottish health boards 294w
Washington Development Corporation 729w

Public bills
Members conduct 734w

Public buildings
Air force bases 522w
Airports 167w
Fire prevention (17.12.85) 178-9
Smoking 502w

Public expenditure
Defence expenditure 561w
Maternity benefits 697w
National income 189w
Northern Ireland 267-8w, 1197
Per capita costs 360w
Police 273-4w, 341w
Regional aid 1196

"Public Expenditure White Paper" 539w

Public footpaths
Cycleways 19w
Defence Act 1842 373w
Menwith 372-3w
Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981 372-3w

Public holidays
Railway transport 297w

Public houses
Brewing industry 136w
Monopolies & Mergers Commission 136w

Public inquiries
Road construction 43w

Public Order Bill 1985/86
2R (13.01.86) 792-869

"Public Order Law White Paper" 460-1w

Public order policing (13.01.86) 792-869
Civil disorder 919
Sportsgrounds (16.01.86) 1225-38

Public participation in planning
Disclosure of information 369w
Road construction 756

Public petitions
Breast Cancer (17.01.86) 1345
Complaints against police (20.12.85) 671-2
Dog fighting (19.12.85) 664
Social security (20.12.85) 672
Speakers rulings and statements (20.12.85) 672
Sunday trading (19.12.85) 663

Public sector
Westland helicopters 1204

Public sector assets
Income 652w
National income 190w
Privatisation 652w, 1058-9

Public sector borrowing requirement 305w, 347w
National income 190w
Oil prices 1202

Public sector housing
Empty housing 263-4w

Public transport
Local government expenditure 168w, 404-6w
Local government reform 404-6w
Manchester City Council 168w

Public utilities 590-1w
Consumer protection 590-1w
Privatisation 590-1w

Publicity
Drinking & driving 583w
Drug abuse 505w, 557-8w
Insolvency Act 1985 183w
Official stationery 381w
Prescription charges exemptions 157-8w
Severe weather payments 71-2w
Transport Act 1985 581w
Vaccination 78-9w

Publishing
Copyright 1067-8
Select committees 652-4w

Pulford, Richard 512w
Professional qualifications 512w
South Bank 512w

Pulses & seeds
Agricultural production 277w
Crops 277w

Pupils 698w
Private education 442w
Special educational needs 123-4w
Technical & vocational education initiative 727-8w
Travelling expenses 544w

Pupil-teacher ratios 711w
Amber Valley 289w
Class sizes 116w
Derbyshire 289w
Northern Ireland 554w

Pym, Rt Hon Francis
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 314

Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital 373w, 374w
Armed forces catering services 373w
Contract catering 373w, 374w

Racial attacks 622-3w

Racial discrimination
Namibia 205w

Radar
Nimrod aircraft 98w

Radiation hazards
Atomic Weapons Research Establishment 372w
Cancer hazards 698w
Exservicemen 563w, 609w, 905-6
Nuclear weapons tests 561w
Polaris submarines 95-6w
Radioactive waste disposal 220-1w
ROF Burghfield 372w

Radice, Mr Giles
Debates etc
Education (Amendment) Bill, Rem stages (16.12.85) 122-3
Questions
Company liquidations, Inquiries 25w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 144-5, 147
Turville School, Members correspondence 579w

Radio frequencies
Road signs 42-3w

Radioactive waste disposal
Lead 106w

Radioactive waste disposal
Dock workers 221-2w
Nuclear power 4-5
Nuclear safety 220-1w
Radiation hazards 220-1w
Research 106w
Safety measures 221w
Sea pollution 209-10w

Radioactive wastes
Pollution monitoring 167w

Radiotherapy
Oldchurch Hospital (13.01.86) 898-904
Southend Hospital (15.01.86) 1183-90

RAF Brampton 917
Fires 917

RAF Cranwell 99w, 101w
Armed forces training 99w, 101w

RAF Finningley 101w
Armed forces training 101w

RAF Shawbury 99w
Armed forces training 99w

RAF Valley 99w
Armed forces training 99w

Raffan, Mr Keith
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 338
Questions
Government grants to local authorities, Capital investment 21w

Railway closures 44w
Greater London 761
Hanwell 761

Railway electrification
Dorset 44w

Railway freight transport
Channel crossing 476w

Railway network
Northern region 732-3w

Railway transport 44w
Commuters 409w
Electric power 297w
Private investment 732-3w
Public holidays 297w

Railway travel
British Rail 477w
Prime Minister domestic visits 552w

Rainham marshes
Defence land 561w

Raison, Rt Hon Timothy, Minister of State for Overseas Development*
Debates etc
Crown Agents (Amendments) Bill, Money res (16.01.86) 1336
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 214-8
Questions
Africa, Food aid from EC 329w
Africa, Overseas aid 770
Aid financed trade, Development aid 770
Aid financed trade, Water treatment 770
Central America, EC aid 448-50w
Development aid, Sudan 772
Ethiopia, Disaster relief 447w
Ethiopia, Food aid 40w
Ethiopia, Malnutrition 40-1w
Falkland Islands, Hospitals 125w
Falkland Islands Company, Hospitals 125w
Food aid, Sudan 772
Foreign aid 551w
Foreign aid, Developing countries 550-1w
Honduras, Development aid 448w
Hong Kong, Overseas aid 772
North Yeman, Development aid 447-8w
Overseas aid, Agriculture 769
Overseas aid, Bilateral aid 447w
Overseas aid, Overseas students 713w
Overseas Development Administration, Scholarships 640w
Sudan, Food aid 447w
Sudan, Overseas aid 771-2
UNESCO 179w
UNESCO, Commonwealth 179w
UNESCO, Overseas aid 241w
UNESCO, UK contributions 771
Water supply, Deserts 770-1

Randall, Mr Stuart
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 165
EC Fisheries Council (19.12.85) 585-6
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1246-50
Questions
Falkland Islands, Fisheries 563
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141

Rape
Criminal injuries compensation 270-1w
Law reporting 346w

Rate equalisation 108w
Greater London Council 108w

Rate Fund contributions 663-4w
Expenditure 663-4w

Rate limitation
Appeals 465w
Basildon District Council 922
Health services 571w
Local government expenditure 219w

Rate rebates
Government grants to local authorities 80-1w
Housing benefits 78w
Lambeth 67-8w
Social security reform 596w

Rate support grant penalties (18.12.85) 310-30

Rate support grants
Government grants to local authorities 104w
Hertfordshire 104w
Lothian Regional Council 615w
Ministerial statements (18.12.85) 310-30, 331-40
Powys 1207-8
Wales (18.12.85) 331-40, 618-9w

Rates Act 1984 219w, 570w

Rates & rating (18.12.85) 376-7
Block grant 104w
Crown lands & estates 49w
Housing benefits 317w, 319w
Local government reform 108w
London boroughs 469w

RAVC Melton Mowbray 537w, 538w
Fox hunting 538w

Ravenscraig Steelworks 294w, 1059, 1070
Iron & Steel industry 1070, 1071-2
Trade unions 294w

Raw materials
Common sugar regime 279w

Reagan, President 734w
Strategic defence initiative 907-8

Rear seat belts 345w, 476w
Orders & regulations 476w

Recognition of states
Western Sahara 133-4w

Recording equipment
Copyright 592w

"Recording & Rental of Audio & Video Copyright Material Consultation Paper" 592w

Recreation spaces
Arts Council 512w

Recruitment
Metropolitan Police 10-1w
NHS 503w
Nurses 419w
Prison staff 343w
Teachers 141-2, 146

Redmond, Mr Martin
Questions
Youth training scheme, Manpower Services Commission 113w

Redundancy
Coal mining 330w
Dockyards 215-6w
Greater London Council 564-5
Local government staff 468-9w
Small businesses 55-6w

Redundancy pay
Coal mining 247-8w

Redundant mineworkers payments scheme 12, 247-8w
Coal mining 12

Rees, Rt Hon Merlyn
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 246-8
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 800
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 39, (13.01.86) 781, (15.01.86) 1151, 1152

Rees, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc
"Banking supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 164

"Reform of Social Security Consultation Paper" 434-5w, 598w

"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 21-34, 156, 310w, 317w, 318w, 320w, 434w, 436w, 495-6w, 566, 598w, 740w, 744w
Child benefit 318w
Civil servants 19-20
Income support 317-8w
Income support scheme 317-8w
Marginal tax rates 1195
Pensions 156, 320-1w
Poverty 154-5
Social security 310w
Social security benefits disqualification 324w
Social security recipients 566-7
Statistics 740w

Refugees 714w
Honduras 207-8w
Mandatory student grants 646w
Vietnam 772

Regional aid
Chester 1067
Cleveland 1066
Glanford 371-2w
Northern region 589w, 1065, 1066, 1067, 1195-6, 1196-7
Public expenditure 1196
Scunthorpe 371-2w
Tatton 1067
Wales 757
West Midlands 1196

Regional crime squads
Drug crimes 6w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit 6w

Regional development grants
Hamilton 135w
Manufacturing industries 332-4w
North West region 139-40w

Regional enterprise units 56w

Regional health authorities
Amenity beds 314-6w
Codes of practice 319w
Cost effectiveness 325-6w
Declarations of interest 505-6w
Expenditure 311w
Hospital beds 495w
Merseyside 150w
NHS finance 156-7w, 417w, 498w
Pay 235w

Regional planning & development
Economic growth 586w
Industrial development 586w
National Economic Development Council 586w

Regional selective assistance 332-4w
Manufacturing industries 332-4w

Registered homes 79-80w
Old peoples homes 79-80w

"Registration & Inspection of Nursing Homes" 605w

Reg (EEC) 2057/82 (16.01.86) 1240-67

Reid, P
Members correspondence 341w

Reinstatement grants 466-7w, 576w

Release on licence 170-1w

Religious education
Schools 708w
Teacher training 288w

Relocation of employees
National Coal Board 330w

Remand in custody 621-2w
Police cells 619-20w, 715w
Scottish courts 357w

Rent addition 506-8w

Rent allowances
Young people 506-8w

Rent arrears
Council housing 257-60w

Rent rebates
Social security reform 596w

Renton, Mr Tim, Minister of State for Foreign & Commonwealth Affairs*
Questions
Arab boycott, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 291
Arab states, Christmas 203w
Arab states, prisoners 192w
Arab states, Women 208w
Arms control 203w
British residents abroad, Prisoners 473w
Chemical weapons 196w
Chile, Human rights 473-4w
EC internal relations, Defence 474w
Entry clearances, Administrative costs 640w
European Court of Human Rights, British dependent territories 736w
European Court of Human Rights, Government Communications Headquarters 207w
Fisheries, South Atlantic 583-4w
Fishery protection, South Atlantic 584w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Civil service manpower 640w
Gulf war, United Nations 206-7w
Honduras, Defence 473w
Hong Kong, Nationality 584w

India, British residents abroad 639-40w
India, Special voucher scheme 640w
Iran, Foreign relations 363w
Iran, Human rights 363w
Iraq, Arms embargoes 735w
Iraq, Foreign relations 735-6w
Iraq, Human rights 736w
Iraq, Kurdistan 735w
Iraq, Political prisoners 735w
Israel, Arms embargoes 206w
Israel, Ministers visits abroad 289
Japan, Foreign relations 205w
Lembach, Pedro Fernandez, Political prisoners 474w
Middle East, Foreign policy 193w
Middle East, Ministers visits abroad 193w
Middle East, Palestine Liberation Organisation 286-7
Middle East, Peace negotiations 192w, 193w, 289-90, 290-1, 291-2
Middle East, Violence 287
Morocco, Arms trade 134w
Namibia, United Nations 472w
Nuclear test ban 196-7w, 299
Nuclear test ban, International cooperation 290-1w
Nuclear test ban, Strategic defence initiative 197w
Nuclear weapons, Europe 204w
Nuclear weapons tests, Seismic monitoring 298-9
Palestine 202w
Philippines, Foreign policy 198w
Philippines, Ministers visits abroad 198w
Saudi Arabia, Foreign relations 204w
Strategic defence initiative 194w
Strategic defence initiative, Foreign relations 194w
Strategic defence initiative, Royal United Services Institute 194w
Syrian Arab Republic, Foreign policy 203w
Syrian Arab Republic, Jordan 289
Treaties, Space technology 208w
USA, Nuclear disarmament 199w
West Bank 193w
Western Sahara, Recognition of States 133-4w
Westland helicopters 474-5w

Repairs & maintenance
Blackwall tunnel 480w
Defective housing 466-7w
Nimrod aircraft 96-8w
Rotherhithe tunnel 480w

Replan 644-5w

"Report of the Royal Commission into British Nuclear Tests" 561w, 629w

Representation of the People (Northern Ireland) (Amendment) Regulations 1985 (13.01.86) 791

Representation of the People (Scotland) Amendment Regulations 1985 (16.12.85) 48

Reprography
Members facilities 716w

Research
Civil service dispersal 585-6w
Coal mining 11
Food additives 486w
Nuclear test ban 366w
Radioactive waste disposal 106w
Temporary staff 117w
Unemployment 397w
Universities 117w, 118w

Research finance
Agricultural research 771
AIDS 71w
Alternative energy 10
Home Office 340-1w
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd 11
Nuclear physics 145
Science & technology research 39w
Science Research Council 645w
Trauma 158w

Residential care
Codes of practice 604w

Residential care of children
Northern Ireland 134-5w

Residuary bodies 731w

Resignations
Ministers of religion 445w
Prison staff 343w

Resource allocation working party 498w

Resources exploration
Morocco 134w
Phosphates 134w

Respiratory diseases
Mental patients 73-4w

Restrictive trade practices
Insurance 1073-4

Retail prices index
Prices 362w

Retail trade
Tobacco 138-9w

Retirement
Prison staff 343w

Retirement pensions
Married women 409w
Social security recipients 497-8w
South Africa 427-8w
Supplementary benefits 742-4w

Rewards
Metropolitan Police 7w

Rhodes James, Mr Robert
Questions
Council of Ministers, Order of Business 365w

Rhys Williams, Sir Brandon
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 993-4
Questions
BBC external services, Satellite broadcasting 206w
Cohabitation, Single people 153w
EC internal trade, Financial services 1072
Families, Low incomes 74-6w
Households, Families 506w
Small investors, Industrial loan stocks 1194
State occupational pensions, Men 147-8w

Richardson, Ms Jo
Questions
Arab states, Women 208w
Children, Children in care 82w
Maternal mortality 81-4w
Maternal mortality, Scotland 63-4w

Richmond terrace 261w
House of Commons accommodation 261w

Ridley, Rt Hon Nicholas, Secretary of State for Transport
Debates etc
Airports Bill, 1R (16.01.86) 1239
Questions
Aircraft, Safety measures 581-2w
A1, Road construction 478w
Blackwall tunnel, Repairs & maintenance 480w
Blackwall tunnel, Road traffic 479w
Bus lanes, Millbank 559w
Channel crossing, Channel ferries 765
Channel crossing, Lorries 113w
Channel crossing, Private investment 764-5
Channel crossing, Road accidents 765
Channel crossing, Road traffic 345w
Channel crossing, Shipping 475w
Coastal shipping, EC action 762-3
Coastal shipping, EC countries 763
Coastal shipping, Greece 763
Concessionary fares, London boroughs 478w
Dial-a-ride, Greater London 478w
Drinking & driving, Publicity 583w
Driving tests, Dyslexia 478w
Fishing vessels, Shipping safety 479w, 582w
Lighthouses, Davaar Island 479w
Lighthouses, Manpower 168w
Lighthouses, Northern Lighthouse Board 479w
London docklands railway, Construction 755
London docklands railway, Stolport 755
London Regional Transport, Government grants 46-7w
Manchester Airport, Companies 169w
Manchester Airport, Management 297w, 409w, 480w
Motorways, Lighting 296-7w
M1, Road signs 405w, 631w
National Bus Company, Privatisation 760-1
Navigational aids, Scotland 631w
Northern Lighthouse Board, Expenditure 582-3w
Northern Lighthouse Board, Housing improvement 583w
Okehampton bypass, Dept of the Environment 371w
Okehampton bypass, Dept of the Transport 407w
Pilotage, Scotland 580w
Public transport, Local government expenditure 404-6w
Public transport, Manchester City Council 168w
Road accidents, A127 295-6w
Road signs, Motorways 631w
Road traffic control, Local government reform 46w
Road traffic control, Talgarth road 490w
Pilotage, Orders & regulations 167w
Transport supplementary grants 168-9w
Woolwich Ferry, Local government reform 110-1w

Rifkind, Mr Malcolm, Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Secretary of State for Scotland & a Privy Counsellor from 9 Jan 1986)
Questions
Africa, Democracy 208w
African National Congress, Foreign relations 294
Angola, Peace negotiations 133w
Council of Ministers, Order of Business 365w
Developing countries, Debts 204w
Diplomatic service, Overseas trade 203-4w
Djibouti, UK companies abroad 365w
EC integration 197w, 198w
EC reform, Voting methods 201w
European Assembly, Elections 204w
European Assembly members, Crimes of violence 32-3w
European Communities 206w
European Economic Community, Treaties 364w
Middle East, Council of Ministers 133w
Morocco, Resources exploration 134w
Namibia, Foreign policy 205w
Namibia, Political parties 133w
Namibia, Racial discrimination 205w
South Africa, EC external relations 194-5w, 195-6w
South Africa, Economic sanctions 196w, 293, 294-5, 295-6
South Africa, Foreign policy 195w
South Africa, Foreign relations 295, 296
South Africa, Funerals 196w
South Africa, Nassau Summit 196w
South Africa, S & T research 195w
South America, Debts 200w
USSR, Political refugees 205-6w
Yugoslavia, Foreign policy 203w
Zimbabwe, Foreign policy 200w
Zimbabwe, Foreign relations 200w

Right to buy 259-60w

Riot control weapons
Police equipment 129-30w
Testing 129-30w

Riot Damages Act 1886 131w
Motor vehicles 131w

River Mersey 614w

Rivers
Waste disposal 614w

Road accidents
A127 295-6w

breathalysers 481w
lers 481w
Channel crossing 765
Costs 112w
Drinking & driving 112w, 481w
Hazardous wastes 45w
Military vehicles 913
Motorways 112w
Road freight transport 45w
Traffic lights 582w

Road construction 477w
Airedale 763-4
A1 478w
A40 44w
Berkhamsted bypass 765-6
Dartford tunnel 111w
Defence land 561w
"Fairer & Faster Route to Major Road Construction" 756
Motorways 477w
M1 406w, 478w
M25 406w
M62 406w
North Devon 580w
Planning permission 763-4
Public inquiries 43w
Public participation in planning 756
Road works 756
Scotland 61-2w

Road freight transport
Hazardous wastes 45w
Orders & regulations 45w
Road accidents 45w

Road humps 405w
Road traffic control 405w

Road safety (13.01.86) 875-97
Lorries 46w

Road safety barriers
A127 295-6w

Road signs
Motorways 42-3w, 631w
M1 405w, 631w
Radio frequencies 42-3w
Tourist attractions 345w

Road tolls
Dartford tunnel 761
Forth road bridge 566w, 723w
Severn bridge 757

Road traffic
A45 295w
Blackwall tunnel 479w
Channel crossing 345w, 475-6w
Channel tunnel 475-6w
Dartford tunnel 762
Motorways 45-6w, 297w
M25 405-6w

Road Traffic Act 1972 359w

Road traffic control
France 113w
Local government reform 46w, 490w
Road humps 405w
Talgarth road 490w

Road traffic offences 569w

Road transport
Nuclear weapons 913

Road works
A19 297w
A92 61w, 162w
Costs 731w
Expenditure 732w
Local government reform 111w
Road construction 756
Scotland 352-3w

Road & rail transport comparisons
Coal stocks 29w

Roberts, Mr Allan
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 315-6
Questions
Education welfare officers, Child care 185w

Roberts, Mr Ernie
Debates etc
Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1334

Roberts, Mr Wyn, Under-Secretary of State for Wales
Questions
Cycleways, Public footpaths 19w
Free school meals, Wales 19-20w
Rural water supplies & sewerage acts, Government grants 454w
School meals, Wales 20-1w
Woolaway houses, Defective housing 167w

Robertson, Mr George
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 302
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 882-4
Questions
British Council, Finance 297
Business statement 581
Demonstrations, Gartcosh 921
EC integration 198w
Regional development grants, Hamilton 135w

Robinson, Mr Mark, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Wales
Questions
Bone marrow disorders, Transplant surgery 167w
Child patients, Wales 284w
Cornish unit houses, Wales 331-2w
Hospital beds 167w
Hospitals, Wales 108w, 284-6w
Households, Wales 285w
Playing fields, Wales 285w, 286w
Population, Wales 285w
Radioactive wastes, Pollution monitoring 167w
Social workers, Wales 108w

Robinson, Peter
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Roe, Mrs Marion
Questions
Horticulture, EC internal trade 278-9w
Marriage Act 1983, Departmental circulars 420w

ROF Burghfield
Radiation hazards 372w

Rogers, Mr Allan
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 165
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 408, 412
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 433-7, 438, 451, 454, 466, 469
Juries (18.12.85) 425
Members interests (17.12.85) 244
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 340
Questions
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w

Rolls-Royce
Company finance 590w

Romania
Overseas trade 585w

Rooker, Mr Jeff
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 320
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 784, (15.01.86) 1092
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Local government expenditure 465-6w, 577w
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 27-8w
Business expansion scheme, Bed & breakfast accommodation 651w
Church of England, Inner city areas 521w
Council housing, Empty housing 662w
Council housing finance 465-6w
Defective housing, Council housing finance 465-6w
Defective housing, Local government expenditure 576w
Defective housing, Repairs & maintanance 466-7w
Empty housing, Public sector housing 263-4w
Home Office, Empty housing 458-9w
Homelessness, Secure tenancies 468w
Housing finance 576w
Housing stock 574-6w
Land Registry Office, Birmingham 109w
Local government revenue 468w
Owner occupied housing, Planning permission 673w
Supplementary benefits, DHSS local offices 497w
Urban development grants, Spencerbeck estate 465-6w, 574w
Water meters, Water charges 103w
Water supply, Households 468w

Roskill Committee see Criminal Proceedings arising from Fraud Review Committee

Ross, Mr Ernie
Questions
Middle East, Palestine Liberation Organisation 286-7
NHS, Scotland 482w
Scottish health boards, Conflict of interests 161w, 163w
Scottish health boards, Contracts for services 293-4w
Scottish health boards, Public appointments 294w
Tayside Health Board 163w

Ross, Mr Stephen
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 878
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 782, (15.01.86) 1116, 1132
Questions
Channel tunnel, Safety 758-9
Metropolitan Police, Complaints against police 344w
National Bus Company, Privatisation 760
Prison staff, Manpower 343-4w
Prison staff, Recruitment 343w
Prison staff, Retirement 343w

Ross, William
Members resignations (17.12.85) 139

Rost, Mr Peter
Questions
Coal mining, Investment 9

Rosyth Dockyard 374w, 718w
Management 718w
Shipbuilding 374w

Rotherhithe tunnel 480w
Repairs & maintenance 480w

Rowe, Mr Andrew
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1375, 1381, 1386-90
Questions
Business expansion scheme, Industrial investment 141w
Speech therapy, Higher education 444w
Speech therapy, Teachers 433-4w
Voluntary organisations, Government grants 176-7w

Rowlands, Mr Ted
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 339
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 6, 11
Energy efficiency, Building regulations 8

Royal Military School of Music 918
Kneller Hall 918

Royal Observer Corps 274w, 714w
Emergency planning 714w
Police protection 714w

Royal ordnance factories
Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment 744-6w

Production capacity 215w

Royal Ulster Constabulary
Codes of practice 42w, 269w

Royal United Services Institute 194w
Strategic defence initiative 194w

Rubha Na Leachaig 631w

Ruchill Hospital (18.12.85) 377-8, 615w
Hospital closures (18.12.85) 377-8

Rugby
Government grants 18w
Sports Council 18w

Rules of engagement 609w

Rumbold, Mrs Angela, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment
Debates etc
Arts finance, Local government reform (20.12.85) 734-7
Questions
Acid rain, Freshwater fish 544-5w
Air pollution, Consultation papers 259w
Air pollution, Sulphur dioxide 545w
Block grant, Per capita costs 672-3w
Channel crossing, Environmental impact assessment 15w
Dogs, Licensing 217-8w
Local authorities, Non-domestic rates 570w
Local government audit 729w
Local government reform, Greater London Council 469w
Local government staff, Pay 570w
Nature Conservancy Council, Government grants 218w
Nature conservation, Wash 463w
Ordnance Survey, Financial targets 104w
Pollution, Pollutants 544w
Radioactive waste disposal, Research 106w
Rate limitation, Appeals 465w
Rate limitation, Health services 571w
Rate support grants, Hertfordshire 104w

Rural areas
Development aid 770
NHS finance 75w
Wind power 27w

Rural water supplies & sewerage acts 454w
Government grants 454w

Ryman, Mr John
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 164
Banks Colliery, Standing Order No 10 applications (17.12.85) 175
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1236-7
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 821-2
Questions
Business statement 1222
Colliery review procedure 9
Solicitor-General, Ministers correspondence 766
Special development areas, Blyth Valley 1066-7

SACEUR 562-3w

Sackville, Mr Tom
Questions
Opencast mining 28w
Opencast mining, Environment protection 5
Saudi Arabia, Foreign relations 204w

Sacred Heart of Mary School 646w
Upminster 646w

Saddleworth
Unemployment 566-8w

Sadlers Wells Theatre (20.12.85) 731-7

Safety
Channel tunnel 758-9
Toys & games (13.01.86) 790

Safety barriers
Motorways 167w

Safety belts (13.01.86) 875-97
Motor vehicle safety 345w

Safety certificates 175-6w
Sportsgrounds 175-6w

Safety measures
Aircraft 581-2w
Radioactive waste disposal 221w

Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975 (16.01.86) 1225-38

Salmon
Fish conservation 563
Imports 543w
Northern Ireland 543w

Sanitation
Holloway Prison 623w
House of Commons 160w

Satellite broadcasting
BBC external services 206w

Sathananthan, Dr 132w

Saudi Arabia
Foreign relations 204w

Save the Children Fund 771-2
Government grants 771-2

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan
Questions
Coastal shipping, EC action 762
Martial arts weapons, Young people 570w

Scholarships
Overseas Development Administration 640w

School administration
Local education authorities 149-50

School choice
Education Act 1980 122w
Schools & parents 122w

School closures
Crayford School, Bexley 149
List D schools 162w

School governors
Elections 152
Special schools 119w

School leaving
Derbyshire 645w
Educational qualifications 122w
Higher education 122w
Youth employment 726w
Youth training scheme 567w

School leaving certificates
Derbyshire 645-6w

School meals (16.12.85) 107-25, 126, 709-10w
Child care 38w, 119w, 141-2
Nutrition 113w, 644w
Per capita costs 643w
Scotland 110w
Wales 20-1w

School nurses 237-8w, 697-8w
Educational Health Services 697-8w

School population
Pre-school education 712w

School transport
Travel concessions 116w

Schools
Armed forces 917
Class sizes 711w
Cost per pupil 708w
Educational standards 117w
Religious education 708w

Schools & parents
Parents rights 39w
School choice 122w
Special schools 119w

Science & technology
Greater London Council 105w

Science & technology research
Postgraduate students 579-80w
Private Members motions (16.12.85) 49-71
Research finance 39w
South Africa 195w

Science Research Council
Research finance 645w

Scientific civil service
Conditions of employment 16-7

Scientists
Strategic defence initiative 265w

Scope of debate
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 269, 274, (18.12.85) 464, (20.12.85) 679, 680, (15.01.86) 1178, (16.01.86) 1333

Scotland 912
Abortion deaths 63-4w
Acid rain 549w
Agricultural advisory services 16-7, 18, 59-60w
Agricultural research 59-60w
Ambulance services 161w
Birds 721-3w
Blood 292w
Body searches 60-1w
Building industry 61w
Business expansion scheme 652w
Bypasses 61-2w
Child benefit 72-3w
Civil defence 292-3w, 483w
Civil service 18
Coal mining 1-2, 2-3
Defence contracts 912
Fish conservation 565w
Free school meals 110w
Gardens 357w
Health services 164-6w
Hill livestock allowances 294-5w
Hospital beds 353-4w
Joint financing 58w
Joint liaison committees 59w
Legal costs 635w
Maternal mortality 63-4w
Motorways 292w
Navigational aids 631w
NHS 482w
Nuclear safety 64w
Pilotage 580w
Police 352w
Police interrogation 357w
Ports (16.12.85) 72-106
Prison population 357-8w
Prisoners on remand 357-8w
Road construction 61-2w
Road works 352-3w
School meals 110w
Sea fishing 62w
Social security appeals tribunals 79w
Teachers 64-5w
Tobacco industry 62w
Youth custody 63w

Scott, Mr Nicholas, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
Debates etc
Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 (16.01.86) 1331-2, 1335
Questions
Body searches, Northern Ireland 185-6w
Demonstrations, Surveillance 266w, 340w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Northern Ireland 554w

Scott Lithgow 642w
Defence contracts 642w, 914

Scottish Certificate of Education 115-6w
Higher education admission 115-6w

Scottish courts
Drinking & driving 359w
Drug abuse 358-9w
Glasgow 358-9w
Prosecutions 357w
Remand in custody 357w
Summary trial 357w, 358w

Scottish Grand Committee (16.12.85) 48, 127

Scottish health boards
AIDS 63w
Capital investment 164-6w
Conflict of interests 161w, 163w
Contracts for services 293-4w, 482w

Health services finance 59w
Hospital beds 354-8w
Hospital closures 353-4w
Public appointments 294w

Scottish islands 163w, 482w
EC grants & loans 482w
Sea transport 163w

Scottish Office
Civil service manpower 161w

Screening
Breast cancer 78w, 432w, 571-2
Cervical cancer 239w, 324-5w, 439w, 500w, 501w, 569-70, 570-1, 572, 616w, 617w, 618w, 699w, 737-8w
District health authorities 324-5w
Haemophilia 70w
Wales 572

Scunthorpe
Regional aid 371-2w

Sea Fisheries (Prohibition of Fishing & Fishing Methods) (Scotland) Order 1985 62w

Sea fishing
Fishery protection 62w
Scotland 62w

Sea pollution
Beaches 223-8w
EC law 223-8w
Radioactive waste disposal 209-10w

Sea transport
Scottish islands 163w

Seasonal workers
Social security benefits rules 239-40w

Secretarial staff
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 496w

Secretaries of State
Dismissal 516w

Secure tenancies 468w
Homelessness 468w

Securities & Investments Board 1057
Financial services 1057
Self-regulatory system 245w

Security
Attorney-General 446w
Brixton Prison 342w
Europe 292-3
Expenditure 291w
Manchester Airport 630w
Overseas trade 291w
Shipbuilding 564w
10 Downing Street 271w, 457w

Security equipment
Overseas trade 589w

Security industry
Violence 921

Security vetting
Ministry of Defence 643w

Sedgemore, Mr Brian
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 163, 167
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 455, 459-66, 472
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 968-72
Questions
Brunei 628w
Developing countries, Debts 204w
In-service training, Dept of Education & Science 120w
Johnson Matthey 649w
Sultan of Brunei 629w

Seismic monitoring 298-9
Nuclear weapons tests 298-9
USSR 298-9

Select Committee evidence
House of Commons Select Committees 685-6w, 689-92w

Select Committees
Publishing 652-4w

Selective schools 117w
Educational standards 117w

Self-determination of states
Palestine 291

Self-employed
Building industry 186w, 399w
Ethnic groups 399w
Labour only sub-contracting 42w, 52w
Statistics 299w

Self-regulatory system 245w, (14.01.86) 938-1024
Marketing of Investments Board 245w
Securities & Investments Board 245w

Self-sufficiency
Blood 292w

Sensory aids
Telephones for disabled 655-6w

Sentencing
Crimes of violence 341-2w
Terrorism 553w

Service charges
Flats 677w

Service industries
Employment 398w
Overseas trade 1073-4

Severe disablement allowance
Administrative delays 499w
Social security benefits disqualification 437w, 499w
Social security recipients 499w

Severe weather payments 71-2w, (16.12.85) 131-8, 209w, 318w, 553-4, 599-600w
Exceptional needs payments 71-2w
Farmers 209w
Income support scheme 318w
Publicity 71-2w

Severn bridge 756
Debts 756
Road tolls 757

Sewers
North West region 15w
Water authorities 571-2w, 572-3w

Sexual offences
Compensation 270-1w
Evidence 290w
Makenjuola, Adebola 252w
Police misconduct 252w
Trials 290w

Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1976 346w

Share ownership
National Bus Company 760-1
Privatisation 153, 1059

Shareholders 650w
Investment in financial assets 1193
Privatisation 1194
Westland helicopters 451w, 516w, 518w, 519w

Shares
Airlines 478w
British Gas Corporation 5-6, 27w
National Freight Company 477w
Westland helicopters 533w

Shaw, Mr Giles, Minister of State for the Home Department
Debates etc
Criminal Records Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1407-9
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 858-62
Special constables (17.01.86) 1415-8
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers, Ministerial responsibility 127w
Baton rounds, Metropolitan Police 171-2w
BBC 626w
BBC, Income 626w
BBC, Television advertising 626w, 636w
BBC Advertising & Sponsorship Review 627w
Broadcasting programmes 130w
Cinemas (Safety) Regulations 1985 8w
Civil defence, Communication 7-8w
Civil defence, Government grants 272-3w
Civil defence, Government grants to local authorities 9w, 272w, 273w
Civil defence, Local government expenditure 9w
Civil defence, Local government services 9w
Civil defence, Training 272w
Civil disorder, Haringey 3[illegible]
Civil disorder, Metropolitan Police 172-3w
Civil disorder, Street lighting 173w
Community radio 625w
Community radio, Broadcasting licences 713-4w
Community radio, Ethnic minorities 625w
Complaints against police, Jarrett, Floyd 131w
Complaints against police, Parsons, Mark 131w
Crime prevention, Closed circuit television 340w
Drinking & driving, Christmas 567-8w
Drug crimes, Greater London 459w
Early warning systems, Chemical weapons 462w
Electoral register, Disclosure of information 128w
Electoral register, Metropolitan Police 128w
Electoral register, Police 128w
Emergency planning, Local government staff 456w
Emergency planning, Royal Observer Corps 714w
Fire prevention, Electric lighting 175w
Fire prevention, Multiple occupation 626w
Fire regulations, Prosecutions 174-5w
Fire services, Equipment 274w
Firearms certificates, Fees & charges 274w
Greater Manchester Police, Members correspondence 175w
Groce, Cherry, Police firearms 130w
Housing design, Crime prevention 175w
Majid, Jamila, Body searches 342-3w
Martial arts weapons, Young people 570w
Metropolitan Police, Complaints against police 344w
Metropolitan Police, Councillors 459w
Metropolitan Police, Offices 171-2w
Metropolitan Police, Police powers 126-7w
Metropolitan Police, Police training 460w
Metropolitan Police, Ports 459w
Metropolitan Police, Recruitment 10-1w
Metropolitan Police, Rewards 7w
Monteith, Billy, Arrests 343w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Association of Metropolitan Authorities 6-7w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Manpower 6w
National Drugs Intelligence Unit, Regional crime squads 6w
Neighbourhood watch schemes 547w
Plastic bullets, Police equipment 270w
Police, Computers 130w
Police, Expenditure 129w
Police, Leicestershire 455w
Police, Manpower 178-9w, 456w
Police, Pay 716w
Police equipment, Riot control weapons 129-30w
Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984, Custody officers 169-70w
"Public Order Law White Paper" 460-1w
Racial attacks 622-3w
Riot Damages Act 1886, Motor vehicles 131w
Road traffic offences 569w
Sentencing, Crimes of violence 341-2w
Sportsgrounds, Safety certificates 175-6w
Thames Valley Police, Manpower 128w
United Kingdom Warning & Monitoring Organisation 274w

Sheehan, Flt Sgt 525w

Sheep
Clawbacks 559-60

Sheep meat
Clawbacks 560
Exports 559
France 559

Sheerman, Mr Barry
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1272
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 880, 886, 890-1
Questions
Community programme, Training grants 52w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Government grants 56-7w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Small businesses 57w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Women 57w
Enterprise & deregulation unit, Costs 56w
Law centres, Finance 253w
Law centres, Local government reform 261-2w
Legal aid 253w
Loan guarantee scheme, Companies 301-2w
Local government reform, Greater London Council 16w
Open University, University finance 122w
Small businesses, Bureaucracy 55-6w
Small businesses, Industrial health & safety 302-3w
Youth training scheme 54-6w, 400-4w
Youth training scheme, Information technology centres 54w
Youth training scheme, Local education authorities 488w
Youth training scheme, Skilled workers 151
Youth training scheme, Travelling expenses 488-9w, 489-90w

Sheffield
Social security recipients 229w

Sheldon, Rt Hon Robert
Questions
International economic relations, Western Europe 1202
Limited list prescribing 739w
Scientific civil-service, Conditions of employment 17

Shepherd, Mr Colin
Questions
Milk, Production quotas 553
Sheep meat, Exports 559

Shersby, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 325
Questions
A40, Construction costs 44w
Copyright, Recording equipment 592w
Electricity tariffs, Landlord & tenant 23-4w
Heart diseases, Transplant surgery 504-5w
London Regional Transport, Government grants 46-7w

Shipbuilding
Devonport Dockyard 374w
HMS Otter 717-8w
Rosyth Dockyard 374w
Security 564w
Submarines 641-2w, 911

Shipping
Channel crossing 475w
Government assistance to industry 163w
Navy 641w

Shipping accidents
Mhari L 479w

Shipping safety
Fishing vessels 479w, 582w

Ships
Customs 144w
Drug crimes 144w

Shop hours (18.12.85) 376-7, (19.12.85) 663

Shopping centres
Glasgow District Council 614-5w
Land reclamation 614-5w

Shops
Cardiff West 565w
Manpower 565w

Shops Act 1950 251-2w

Shops Bill (HL) 1985/86 547-8w

Shore, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1210

Short Ms Clare
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 474, 482-7, 488
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1133
Questions
Community programme 51w
Primary purpose rule, Immigration appeals 273w
School leaving, Educational qualifications 122w
Unemployment 153
West Bank 193w

Short, Mrs Renee
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 29
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1160
Questions
Cervical cancer, Screening 571
Employment schemes, Vocational training 186w
Employment schemes, Wolverhampton 186w
Family courts review, Family courts 446w
Hip replacements, West Midlands Regional Health Authority 419w
NHS & private practice, West Midlands 66-8w
Plastic bullets, Police equipment 270w
Riot Damages Act 1886, Motor vehicles 131w

Sick leave
Health service staff 324w
Hospital closures 324w

Sick pay
Social security benefits uprating (15.01.86) 1175-82

Sikorsky helicopters (16.12.85) 35-46, 4[illegible]w, 530w, 578w, 610w (13.01.86) 777-89, (15.01.86) 1082-174

Silvester, Mr Fred
Questions
Business statement 577
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 50-1w

Simonstown
Naval bases 134w

Sims, Mr Roger
Debates etc
Beckenham Hosptial (20.12.85) 741
Questions
Business statement 576
London docklands railway, Construction 755
Multifibre arrangement, Hong Kong 1063

Single people
Cohabitation 153w
Income support scheme 741w
Income tax 647w

Skeet, Sir Trevor
Debates etc
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 49-54, 68, 71
Questions
Coal mining, Productivity 26w

Skilled workers
Nurses 95w
Youth training scheme 150-1

Skimmed milk powder
Intervention stocks 540-1w

Skinner, Mr Dennis
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 166-7
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 306
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 449-55
Johnson Matthey (18.12.85) 345
Members interests, Liberal Party (18.12.85) 343, 345-6
Prime Ministers question time intervention (14.01.86) 922
Private notice questions (16.12.85) 46
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 36, 46, (13.01.86) 785, 873-4
Questions
Armed forces, Vocational guidance 918
Business statement 579-80, 1224
City of London, Fraud 1192-3
Civil servants, 10 Downing Street 18-9
Coal mining, Imports 9
Company accounts, Johnson Matthey 1069
Dept of Health & Social Security, Civil service manpower 595w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service recruitment 496w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, East Midlands 496w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil servants 497w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Civil service recruitment 496w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Labour turnover 736w
Export credit guarantees, Ecuador 1060-1
Fayad, Mohammed 628w
Johnson Matthey, Accounting 649w
Members facilities, Computers 16
Ministers, Gifts 578w
Peter Cameron Webb Syndicate, Fraud 767
Prime Minister, Gifts 578w
Prime Minister visits abroad, Costs 264w
Retirement pensions, Social security recipients 497-8w
Supplementary benefits, Social security recipients 497w
10 Downing Street, costs 264w
10 Downing Street, Official hospitality 264w
Unemployment benefits, Social security recipients 498w

Skoal Bandits 432w
British Medical Association 432w
Health Education Council 432w

Slaughterhouses
Brucellosis 283w

Slough
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 739-40w
Supplementary benefits 739-40w

Slum clearance
Bradford 565
Housing finance 565

Slums
Bed & breakfast accommodation 553w

Small businesses
Bureaucracy 55-6w
Company accounts 243w
Corporation tax 141w
Employment 303w
Enterprise allowance scheme 57w
Industrial development 56w
Industrial health & safety 302-3w
"Lifting the Burden White Paper" 303w
Northern region 1067
Redundancy 55-6w
UK trade with EC 1072

Small firms service 286w
Wales 286w

Small investors
Industrial loan stocks 1194

Smith Committee see Resource allocation working party

Smith houses 254-5w
Defective housing 254-5w

Smith, Mr Chris
Debates etc
Arts finance, Local government reform (20.12.85) 731-4, 736

Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 836-9
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 319
Questions
Armed forces, AIDS 212w
Fast reactors, International cooperation 29w
Foreign tourists, Statistics 5-6w
Milk & milk products 278w
Nature Conservancy Council, Government grants 218w
Nuclear safeguards, Capenhurst 29w
Prison medical services, AIDS 170w
Strategic defence initiative 909
Taxation, Day nurseries 141-2w
USA, Central America 205w
Water supply, Lead poliution 12w

Smith, Sir Dudley
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1230
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 31
Questions
Agricultural land, Land use 559
Business statement 575, 1215
Immigration controls, Sri Lanka 455-6w

Smith, James 214w, 215w,
Defence procurement 214w, 215w

Smith Rt Hon John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 944, 948-56, 962
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 36-7, 45, 46, (13.01.86) 778-9, 789, 836-9, 870-1, (15.01.86) 1135, 1152-9, 1163
Questions
Iron & steel industry, Ravenscraig Steelworks 1071-2

Smith, Mr Tim
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 165
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 597, 601, 619, 642-4
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 435, 436, 445-8, 454
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 328
Questions
Small businesses, Company accounts 243w
Taxation, Employment opportunities 650w
Victim support schemes, Government grants 545-6w

Smoke & chimney gases
Polkemmet Bing 551-2w

Smoking
Hospitals 503w
NHS 503w
Public buildings 502w
Tobacco (18.12.85) 346

Smoking related diseases 73-5w, 415-6w
Death 73-5w, 415-6w
Norfolk 73-5w
West Norfolk & Wisbech Health Authority 415-6w

Smyth, Martin
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Snape, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 399, 402, 405-9, 410, 414
Drinking & driving (18.12.85) 518-9, 520
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1231-2
Manchester Airport (18.12.85) 352
Questions
Air freight transport, Trade competitiveness 733-4w
Car tax 1199
Dash 7 aircraft, Finance 408w
Stolport, British Airways 408w
Stolport, Heathrow 408-9w

Soames, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1234
Questions
Annual Review of Agriculture, 1986 543w
Defence procurement 247w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 192w, 291
Nimrod aircraft, Costs 98w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence 98w
Nimrod aircraft, Defence contracts 912
Nimrod aircraft, Radar 98w
Philippines, Foreign policy 31-2w
Salmon, Northern Ireland 543w
Schools & parents, Parents rights 39w

Social class
Child health 602w
Households 285w

Social deprivation 467w
Urban areas 467w

Social Fund (16.12.85) 21-34, 315w, 316w, 319w, 436w, 599w
Death grants 316-7w
Finance 319w
Funerals 599w
Maternity benefits 599w

Social security
Consultants 323-4w
Ministerial statements (16.12.85) 21-34
Public petitions (20.12.85) 672
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 310w

Social security abuse
Fraud 344w
Supplementary benefits 422w
Unemployment benefits 300w
Welwyn Hatfield 397w

Social security appeals
Administrative delays 79w
Scotland 79w

Social security benefit reductions
Housing benefits 410-2w

Social security benefits (17.01.86) 1345
Costs 414w, 596w
Industrial injuries 79w
Members correspondence 432-3w
Newham 496w
Orkney 499w
Young people 495w

Social security benefits disqualification
Family credit 434w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 324w
Severe disablement allowance 437w, 499w

Social security benefits reductions 606w

Social security benefits rules
Exceptional circumstances additions 69w
Fisheries 239-40w
Housing benefits 503-4w
Industrial disputes 318w
Parents 422-6w
Seasonal workers 239-40w
Students 229-30w
Supplementary benefits 497w
Young people 422-6w

Social security benefits uprating
Sick pay (15.01.86) 1175-82

Social Security Bill 1985/86
1R (17.01.86) 1345

Social security claims
Cricklewood 694w
Family credit 435w, 495w
Harlesden 693-4w
Home visits 415w
Neasden 693-4w

Social security commissioners 71-2w

Social security payments
Administrative delays 75w
Post Office 228w

Social security recipients
Board & lodging charges 240w, 418w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices 322w
Family income supplements 434w, 498w
Free school meals 19-20w, 110w
Housing benefits 410-2w, 701w
Income support scheme 317-8w
Interviews 229w
Leytonstone 69w
Personal savings 410w
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" 566-7
Retirement pensions 497-8w
Severe disablement allowance 499w
Sheffield 229w
Supplementary benefits 497w, 509w, 742-4w
Unemployment benefits 498w

Social security reform 596w, 597-8w, 694-5w, 696-7w, 701w, 704-6w, 740w, 741-2w, 744w
Disposable income 694w
Family credit 596-8w, 694-5w
Family income supplement 596-7w
Handicap benefits 597-8w
Housing benefits 596w, 597w, 696w, 697w
Income 696w
Maternity benefits 696-7w
Means tested benefits 435-6w, 704-6w
Rate rebates 596w
Rent rebates 596w
State earnings related pensions scheme 694w, 744w
Water charges 597w

Social security reviews 435-6w, 599w
Marginal tax rates 495-6w
Strike benefits 495w
Supplementary benefits 434-5w
Young people 495w

Social services
Blind 697w
Exhibitions 556w

Social workers
Professional qualifications 108w
Wales 108w

Soft loans 585w, 1060, 1073
Aid financed trade 585w
China 585w, 1073
Export promotion 1060

Social security benefits rules
Industrial disputes 599w

Soley, Mr Clive
Debates etc
Juries (18.12.85) 426-9
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 848, 853-8
Questions
Fraud, Inland Revenue 344w
Holloway Prison, Sanitation 623w
Prison staff, Training 623w
Supplementary benefits, Social security abuse 422w
Tax evasion 190w

Solicitor-General
Ministers correspondence 614w, 766, 1203-4, 1206
Westland helicopters 724w

South Africa
African National Congress 285
Armed forces deployment 212w
Armed forces training 523w
Arms embargoes 134w
British embassies 196w
Death 285-6
EC external relations 194-5w, 195-6w
Economic sanctions 195-6w, 293, 294-5, 295-6
Employment 196w, 1074
Foreign policy 195w, 293
Foreign relations 295, 296
Foreign workers 285
Funerals 196w
International cooperation 195w
Lesotho 923-4
Machine tools 361w
Mandela, Nelson 286
Metropolitan Police 10-1w
Ministers visits abroad 284-5
Nassau Summit 196w
Overseas trade 1074
Retirement pensions 427-8w
S & T research 195w

Trade unions 285
Violence 285-6
Widows benefits 427-8w

South America
Arms trade 589w
Debts 200w

South Atlantic 583-4w
Fisheries 583-4w
Fishery protection 584w

South Bank 512w
Arts Council 512w
Arts finance 512w
Local government reform 512w
Managers 512w
Pulford, Richard 512w

South Bank Board 512w
Pay 512w

South Down
By-election writs (17.12.85) 140

South East region
Job creation schemes 299-300w

South Pacific
Nuclear weapons 734w

South Yorkshire
Bus fares 759-60

South Yorkshire County Council 6w

Southampton
Dockyards 294

Southend Hospital (15.01.86) 1183-90
Radiotherapy (15.01.86) 1183-90

Space saver spare wheels 111w, 298w, 405w
Motor vehicle safety 111w, 298w, 405w

Space technology
Treaties 208w

Spain
Motor vehicle parts 1061-2

Speaker and his deputies, For rulings and statements see separate heading Speakers rulings & statements
Debates etc
Amendments & new clauses (17.12.85) 219, 223, 226, 227, (19.12.85) 592, (13.01.86) 792, (14.01.86) 938, (15.01.86) 1082
Disallowed questions (16.12.85) 6, (13.01.86) 758, 769, (15.01.86) 1058
House of Commons questions (16.12.85) 47-8
Members deaths, Stevens, Martin (13.01.86) 755
Orders & regulations (16.01.86) 1307
Private Members bills (17.01.86) 1410
Procedure (16.12.85) 36, 37, 72, (17.12.85) 154, (18.12.85) 288, 414, (20.12.85) 700, 716, (13.01.86) 773, 787, (14.01.86) 1015, 1017, (15.01.86) 1105, (16.01.86) 1232, 1322
Royal Assent (19.12.85) 591
Standing Order No 10 applications, Bates Colliery (17.12.85) 175
Standing Order No 10 applications, Toys and games (13.01.86) 790
Standing Order No 10 applications, Westland helicopters (18.12.85) 341

Speakers rulings & statements
Adjournment debates (16.12.85) 132-3, (20.12.85) 748, (15.01.86) 1186
Business questions (16.01.86) 1223, 1224
Business statement (13.01.86) 774, 775
By election writs (17.12.85) 139
Calling of Members (17.12.85) 142, 249, (18.12.85) 345, (19.12.85) 568, (20.12.85) 696, (15.01.86) 1130, (16.01.86) 1221
Government departments (16.12.85) 47
House of Commons galleries (14.01.86) 983
House of Commons Chamber (16.01.86) 1270
House of Commons debates (17.12.85) 166, 167, (18.12.85) 342, 343, 344
House of Commons divisions (17.12.85) 251, (14.01.86) 1014, 1015
House of Commons questions (16.12.85) 48, (15.01.86) 1072, (16.01.86) 1224
House of Commons Select Committees (19.12.85) 591
House of Lords reporting (18.12.85) 396
Members attendance (18.12.85) 345
Members conduct (17.12.85) 158, 243, (18.12.85) 435, 436, (13.01.86) 835, 875, (14.01.86) 917, (15.01.86) 1072, 1148, 1163, 1164
Members interests (14.01.86) 950, 1012-5
Members interventions (16.12.85) 132-3, (17.12.85) 229, (18.12.85) 300, (20.12.85) 748, (14.01.86) 951, 965, 987, (15.01.86) 1162, 1186
Members speeches (14.01.86) 951, 965, 987, (15.01.86) 1120, 1145, (16.01.86) 1268
Ministerial responsibility (16.01.86) 1207
Ministerial statements (16.12.85) 29,32, 46, 47, (18.12.85) 324, 336, (13.01.86) 874, (14.01.86) 932
Ministers (17.01.86) 1372
Official Report (16.01.86) 1213, 1239
Oral questions (18.12.85) 300, 345, (19.12.85) 568, (13.01.86) 769, (15.01.86) 1059, 1075, 1076, (16.01.86) 1192
Orders & regulations (14.01.86) 934
Parliamentary papers (13.01.86) 787, 788, 1077, 1087, (16.01.86) 1209-12
Parliamentary recess (19.12.85) 754
Points of order (17.12.85) 174, (18.12.85) 300, 342, 343, 344 466, (19.12.85) 568, (15.01.86) 1075
Press releases (18.12.85) 343
Prime Ministers questions (16.01.86) 1207
Private notice questions (16.12.85) 46
Public petitions (20.12.85) 672
Scope of debate (17.12.85) 269, 274, (18.12.85) 464, (20.12.85) 679, 680, (15.01.86) 1178, (16.01.86) 1333
Sub judice (13.01.86) 828
Supplementary questions (18.12.85) 284, (15.01.86) 1067, 1069, (16.01.86) 1193, 1199, 1219
Table Office (16.12.85) 48
Unparliamentary expressions (17.12.85) 163, 166

Spearing, Mr Nigel
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 304
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1014
Gartcosh Steelworks, Scottish Affairs Select Committee (19.12.85) 590
Water Authorities (Return on Assets) (No 2) Order 1985 (17.12.85) 264
Questions
African National Congress, Foreign relations 294
Blackwall tunnel, Road traffic 479w
Channel crossing, Motor vehicles 478-80w
Channel crossing, Railway freight transport 476w
Channel crossing, Road traffic 475-6w
Channel crossing, Travel 475w
Crown Prosecution Service, Manpower 159w
Dept of Health & Social Security local offices, Greater London 738w
DHSS local offices, Greater London 738w
Handicap benefits, Administrative delays 738w
Local government land, Greater London Council 257-8w
London docklands, Employment opportunities 220w, 467w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Management techniques 571w
London docklands railway, Construction 755
London docklands railway, Private sector 764
Members conduct, Public bills 734w
Motorways, Road traffic 297w
Pearce, Austin, Ministers correspondence 734w
Pedestrian areas, Local government reform 111w
Planning permission, Stolport 366w
South Africa, EC external relations 195-6w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 146
Teachers appraisal, Inner city areas 122w
Water authorities, Finance 467w
Water supply, Deserts 770-1
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 724w

Special constables (17.01.86) 1411-8

Special development areas
Blyth Valley 1066-7

Special educational needs 123-4w, 288-9w
Dyslexia 288-9w
Judgments 288-9w
Pupils 123-4w

Special schools
School governors 119w
Schools & parents 119w

Special steels 539w, 591w
Industrial production 24-5w, 591w

Special voucher schemes 640w, 715w
India 640w, 715w

Specialist advisers 685-6w, 687-90w
Costs 687-90w
House of Commons Select Committees 685-6w, 687-90w
Occupations 685-6w

Spectacles
Companies 326-7w
Costs 433w
NHS 326-7w
Pensioners 433w
Prescriptions 433w
Prices 238w, 604w

Speech therapy
Graduates 444w
Higher education 444w
Teachers 433-4w

Speed, Mr Keith
Questions
Air transport, Bilateral treaties 47w
British embassies, USSR 366w
Channel crossing 630w
Channel crossing, Hazards 630w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 42w
Space saver spare wheels, Motor vehicle safety 405w

Speed governors 757-8
Buses 476w, 757-8

Speller, Mr Tony
Questions
Building regulations, Energy Efficiency Year 13w
Crown Suppliers, Fees & charges 335w
Domestic energy conservation, Government grants 629w
Insultation grants, Government grants to local authorities 673-9w
Road construction, North Devon 580w
Yelland Power Station, Power station closures 716w

Spencer, Mr Derek
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 327
Questions
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 9
Fraud, Criminal investigation 768
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141-2
Westland helicopters 563-4

Spencerback estate
Urban development grants 465-6w, 574w

Spicer, Mr Jim
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 41, (15.01.86) 1114-7
Questions
Advertising agencies, Dept of Health & Social Security 411-4w
Advertising agencies, Dept of Trade & Industry 21-3w
Export promotion, Turkey 1060

Spicer, Mr Michael, Under-Secretary of State for Transport
Questions

Air freight transport, Trade competitiveness 733-4w
Air transport 477w
Air transport, Bilateral treaties 47w
Aircraft, Fire prevention 582w
Aircraft, Fire resistant materials 582w
Airport security 630w
Airports, Fees & charges 733w
Airports, Privatisation 478w
Airports, Public buildings 167w
A41, Bypasses 477w
British Airways, Privatisation 580w, 733w
Buses, Speed governors 476w, 757-8
Dash 7 aircraft, Finance 408w
Dept of Transport, Efficiency scrutinies 298w
Manchester Airport, Security 630w
Motor vehicle registration, Wales 631w
Motorways, Leicestershire 477w
Motorways, Road construction 477w
National Freight Company, Shares 477w
Road accidents, Traffic lights 582w
Road construction, Airedale 763-4
Raod construction, Berkhamsted bypass 765-6
Road construction, "Fairer & Faster Route to Major Road Construction" 756
Road construction, North Devon 580w
Road construction, Road works 756
Road works, Costs 731w
Road works, Expenditure 732w
Stolport, British Airways 408w
Stolport, Heathrow 408-9w
Taxicards, Greater London 476w

Sponsorship
Health services finance 311w
Hospitals 605w

Sports Council
Rugby 18w

Sportsgrounds
Public order policing (16.01.86) 1225-38
Safety certificates 175-6w

Squire, Mr Robin
Debates etc
Board & lodging charges (17.12.85) 171
Oldchurch Hospital (13.01.86) 898-901
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 323
Questions
Dartford tunnel, Road traffic 762
Defence land, Rainham marshes 561w
Family credit, Social security reform 694-5w
Family credit, Tax rates & bands 696w
Housing benefits, Social security reform 697w
Housing benefits, Voluntary organisations 695w
Maternity benefits, Social security reform 696-7w
Official secrets, Open government 919
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w

Sri Lanka
Foreign relations 202w
Immigration controls 455-6w
Visas 132w, 624w

St Edward 540w
Bones 540w

St Helens & Knowsley Health Authority 428w
Heart diseases 428w

St Olaves St Thomas & St Johns Charities (18.12.85) 365-71

Staffordshire
Baking industry 636w

Staff-student ratios
Universities 121w

Stamp duties
Tax thresholds 307w

Stanbrook, Mr Ivor
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 785

Standard of living
Families 418-9w

Standing charges (18.12.85) 347-9
Electricity 124-5w
Gas fuels 124-5w

Standing Order No 10 applications
Banks Colliery (17.12.85) 175

Stanley, Rt Hon John, Minister of State for the Armed Forces
Questions
Armed forces deployment, South Africa 212w
Armed forces deployment, 9 Signal Regiment 379w
Armed forces training, El Salvador 525w
Armed forces training, Ulster Defence Regiment 102w
Army reserves, Armed forces training 916
BAOR, Costs 211w
Channel crossing, Channel ferries 535-6w
Civil defence, Emergency planning 523w
Defence equipment, Nuclear weapons 561w
Defence expenditure, Public expenditure 561w
Deterrence theory 563w
Falkland Islands, Ferries 522w
International Committee of the Red Cross, Treaties 562w
Interviews, 9 Signal Regiment 379w
Military vehicles, Road accidents 913
NATO 564w
NATO, Defence expenditure 535w
Navy, Armed forces deployment 215w
Navy, Shipping 641w
9 Signal Regiment, Armed forces deployment 525w
Nuclear safeguards 609w
Nuclear weapons deployment, Deterrence theory 915
Nuclear weapons policy, Clwyd, Ann 915
Nuclear weapons policy, Nuclear weapons deployment 915
Simonstown, Naval bases 134w
Submarines, USA 373w
Tactical nuclear weapons, NATO 562-3w
Territorial Army & Volunteer Reserve 916
Ulster Defence Regiment, Training 245-6w

Stanley Royd Hospital 325w, 605w
Food poisoning 325w, 605w

State earnings related pensions scheme
Occupational pensions 320w
Pensions 319-20w
Social security reform 694w, 744w

State occupational pensions
Men 147-8w
Women 147-8w

State succession
Namibia 133w

Statistics
Crime 457w

Statutory Sick Pay Uprating Order 1985 (15.01.86) 1175-82

Steel, Rt Hon David
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 774-5
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 694
Members interests, Liberal party (18.12.85) 343
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1089, 1095-8
Questions
Ambulance services, Scotland 161w
Business statement 1215
Fraud, City of London 155-6
List D schools, School closures 162w
Official secrets acts, Prosecutions 919

Sterling
Exchange rates 651w

Stern, Mr Michael
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 251
Questions
Air force bases, Public buildings 522w
Airports, Public buildings 167w
Archaeology, International conferences 148-9
European fighter aircraft 915
Housing benefits, Rate rebates 78w
Inflation, Average earnings 650w
Prime Minister official engagements 627w
Prisoners on remand, Prison population 170w
Rolls-Royce, Company finance 590w
Severn bridge, Road tolls 757
Stocks & shares, Income tax 511w
Stocks & shares, USA 511w
USSR, Foreign policy 194w

Stevens, Mr Lewis
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 480-2, 484
Questions
Dept of Transport, Efficiency scrutinies 298w
Small businesses, "Lifting the Burden White Paper" 303w

Stevens, Martin (13.01.86) 755
Members deaths (13.01.86) 755

Stewart, Mr Allan, Under-Secretary of State for Scotland
Questions
Building industry, Glasgow 482w
School meals, Scotland 110w
Shopping centres, Glasgow District Council 614-5w
Teachers, Scotland 64-5w
Tobacco industry, Scotland 62w
Unemployment, Glasgow 57-8w

Stewart, Mr Andy
Questions
Milk, Production quotas 553

Stewart, Rt Hon Donald
Debates etc
Criminal Records Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1407
Fisheries, EC action (16.01.86) 1252-3
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 103
Questions
Alternative energy, Energy research 4

Stewart, Mr Ian, Economic Secretary to the Treasury
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 592-600, 601-2, 622
Questions
Africa, Debts 308-9w
Bank of England 652w
Bank of England, Commercial bills 362w
Bank of England, Financial institutions 359w
Bank of England, Own resources 359w
Building societies, Company registration 143w
Building societies, Takeovers 142-3w
Coinage, Commonwealth Games 592w
European monetary system 307w
Exchange rates, Mark 650w
Exchange rates, Sterling 651w
Financial institutions, Banks 309w
Financial institutions, City of London 360w
Fraud, Johnson Matthey 510w
Inflation 649w, 650w
Inflation, Average earnings 650w
International Monetary Fund, Airlines 593w
Johnson Matthey 305w, 649w
Johnson Matthey, Accounting 649w
Johnson Matthey, Annual reports 649w
Johnson Matthey, Banking supervision 649w
Johnson Matthey, Company finance 594w
Johnson Matthey Metals 649w
Money supply, MO 306w
New Cross Building Society 653w
Stocks & shares, Income tax 511w
Stocks & shares, USA 511w
Tax thresholds, Stamp duties 307w
Trustee savings banks, Banks 363w

Stobhill Hospital (18.12.85) 544-50

Stockholm
European Security Conference 292

Stockport
Unemployment benefit offices 639w

Stocks & shares
Income tax 511w
USA 511w

Stokes, Mr John
Questions
Business statement 1216
Nuclear weapons policy, Clwyd, Ann 915

Stolport
British Airways 408w
Heathrow 408-9w
London docklands 408-9w
London docklands railway 755
Planning permission 366w

Stone quarrying
Blenau Ffestiniog (18.12.85) 374-6
Industrial disputes (18.12.85) 374-6

Stott, Mr Roger
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 887-8
Questions
Chile, Arms embargoes 199w
Coastal shipping, Greece 763
National Bus Company, Privatisation 761
Sports Council, Rugby 18w

Strang, Mr Gavin
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1236
Official Report (16.01.86) 1213, 1239
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 783, (15.01.86) 1147-8
Questions
Business statement 1223
Cereals, Co-responsibility levy 558
Coal mining, Unemployment 26w
Iron & steel industry, Ravenscraig Steelworks 1071
Johnson Matthey, Annual reports 649w
Milk, Production quotas 552
Nuclear weapons deployment, Deterrence theory 915
Nuclear weapons tests, Australia 159w, 160w, 561w
Nuclear weapons tests, Seismic monitoring 298-9

Strangford
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Strategic defence initiative 194w, 560w, 909
Civil servants secondment 160w
Computer applications 910-1
Defence contracts 214w
Defence expenditure 560-1w
Defence research 213w, 214w, 906, 907
Deterrence theory 907-8
Edinburgh University 910
Foreign relations 194w
Imports 213w
Intellectual property 184w, 213-4w
Lasers 214w
Nuclear test ban 197w
Nuclear weapons 907-8
Nuclear weapons deployment 907
Nuclear weapons tests 910
Reagan, President 907-8
Royal United Services Institute 194w
Scientists 265w
Tactical nuclear weapons 213w
Technical assistance 4w, 533w, 560w
Technology transfer 213-4w
Treaties 208w
USSR 908, 1065

Strathclyde
Building industry 482w

Straw, Mr Jack
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 1013
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 316, 330
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1093
Questions
Departmental correspondence, Dept of Transport 580-1w
Departmental leaflets, Dept of Transport 581w
Local Government Bill 1985/86 678w
[redacted] government expenditure 511w
Local government staff, Lancashire 627w
Local government staff, Manpower 469-70w, 599w
Transport Act 1985, Publicity 581w

Street lighting 173w, 175w
Civil disorder 173w
Crime prevention 173w, 175w

"Strengthening the Local Voluntary Sector Consultation Paper" 176-7w

Strike benefits
Family credit 495w
Social security reviews 495w

Strike Command 384w

Strikes
National Union of Teachers 141-2

Structure plans
Hampshire 730w

Student grants 147-8
Deeds of Covenant 120w
Further education 120w
Parental contributions 39-40w
Student loans 148

Student numbers
Higher education 117w, 118w
Overseas students 709-11w
Women 121w

Student numbers, Specific cases
Open university 116w

Students
Deeds of covenant 229-30w
Departmental publications 38w
Social security benefits rules 229-30w
Supplementary benefits 147-8

Sub judice
Speakers rulings & statements (13.01.86) 828

Submarines
Cammell Laird 911
Defence contracts 641-2w, 911
Plymouth 373w
Shipbuilding 641-2w, 911
Tenders 642w
USA 373w
Vickers Shipbuilding & Engineering 911

Sub-postmasters 450-1w

Successor authorities 677w

Sudan
Agriculture 772
Development aid 772
Disaster relief 447w
Food aid 447w, 772
Overseas aid 771-2

Sugar
Chemical industries 279w

Sulphur dioxide 3, 544-5w, 548-9w
Air pollution 3, 545w

Sultan of Brunei 629w

Sumberg, Mr David
Questions
Business statement 577-8
Easiform housing, Defective housing 16-7w
Easiform housing, Housing Defects Act 1984 17w
Israel, Arms embargoes 206w
Middle East, Palestine Liberation Organisation 287

Summary trial
Scottish courts 357w, 358w

Sunday trading
Law enforcement 251-2w
Public petitions (19.12.85) 663

Supplementary benefits
Board & lodging charges 69w, 553-4w, 740w
Carers 599w
Costs 319w
DHSS local offices 497w
Disadvantaged 154-5
Exceptional needs payments 321-2w
Families 700-1w
Hickson, AD 76w
Leytonstone 69w
Retirement pensions 742-4w
Slough 739-40w
Social security abuse 422w
Social security benefits rules 497w
Social security recipients 497w, 509w, 742-4w
Social security reviews 434-5w
Statistics 321-2w
Students 147-8
Young people 84w, 156, 434-5w, 506-8w

Supplementary questions
Speakers rulings & statements (18.12.85) 284, (15.01.86) 1067, 1069, (16.01.86) 1193, 1199, 1219

Supply estimates (17.12.85) 258

"Supply Estimates 1985/86, Supplementary Estimates" (17.12.85) 258

"Supply Estimates 1986/87, Votes on Account" (17.12.85) 258

Support for innovation scheme 633w

Surgery
Death 601-2w
Heart diseases 238w
Hospital waiting lists 155w, 238w
Infectious diseases 325w, 440w, 605w
Medical research 601-2w

Surplus land 286w

Surpluses
Housing revenue accounts 664-70w

Surveillance
Demonstrations 266w, 340w

SWAPO 133w, 472w
Namibia 133w
United Nations 472w

Syrian Arab Republic
Foreign policy 203w
Jordan 289

Table Office (16.12.85) 48
Speakers rulings & statements (16.12.85) 48

Tactical nuclear weapons
NATO 562-3w
Strategic defence initiative 213w

Takeovers 522w
Building societies 142-3w
Codes of practice 335w
Imperial Tobacco 633-4w

Talgarth road 490w
Road traffic control 490w

Tameside
Industrial training schemes 125w
Temporary employment 125w

Tanker aircraft 97w, 247w

Tapsell, Sir Peter
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 163-4
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 307
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 971
Members interests (17.12.85) 235-7
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 782

Tatton
Regional aid 1067

Tax allowances
Income tax 647w
Tax yields 142w, 309w

Tax avoidance
VAT 654w

Tax evasion 190w
VAT 648w

Tax exemption certificates 50w
Building industry 50w
Labour only subcontracting 50w

Tax harmonisation
European Communities 521w

Tax incentives 307w
Energy efficiency 307w

Tax rates & bands
Family credit 696w
Income tax 50-1w, 190w, 647w
Tax thresholds 1195
Taxpayers 1195

Tax thresholds
National insurance contributions 1201
Stamp duties 307w
Tax rates & bands 1195

Tax yields
Alcoholic drinks duties 361w
British Gas Corporation 123w
Capital gains tax 360w
Corporation tax 359w
Electricity supply industry 123w
Income tax 50-1w
Industrial building allowances 360w
Maternity benefits 696-7w
Oil revenues 1202
Private education 50w
Privatisation 361w
Tax allowances 142w, 309w
VAT zero rated goods 142w

Taxation
Day nurseries 141-2w
Employment opportunities 650w
Families 646w
Lead free petrol 654-5w
National income 648w
UK companies abroad 510w

Taxicards
Greater London 476w

Taxis
Heathrow (17.12.85) 277-82

Taxpayers
Marginal tax rates 1195
Tax rates & bands 1195

Taylor, John David
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Taylor, Mr John Mark
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 630, 634, 636-7
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 799
Questions
Company liquidations, WG Allen 1073
Latent damage, Law Reform Committee 109w
Philips, Cyril 548w
Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 553w, 627w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 560w
Tax thresholds, Stamp duties 307w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 114-5w
Yugoslavia, Foreign policy 203w

Taylor, Mr Teddy
Debates etc
EC Foreign Affairs Council (18.12.85) 303
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1031
Southend Hospital (15.01.86) 1186
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 783
Questions
Balance of trade, Manufactured goods 452-3w
Channel crossing, Private investment 764-5
EC budget, UK contributions 511w, 655w
EC integration 365-6w
EC internal relations, Defence 474w
EC reform, Voting methods 201w
European Assembly members, Crimes of violence 32-3w
European Communities, National anthems 521w
EC law, Conditions of employment 552w
European fighter aircraft, Defence expenditure 534-5w, 612w
Food surpluses, European economic community 279w
Helicopters, Defence procurement 520w, 534w, 609-10w
Helicopters, International cooperation 532w
Intervention stocks 542-3w
Manufactured goods, EC trade 453w
NATO, Defence expenditure 535w
Nitrates, Water pollution 545w
Peoples Europe Committee 521w
Tornado aircraft, Defence expenditure 534w, 611-2w
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 566
Westland helicopters, International cooperation 532w
Westland helicopters, Merchant banks 451w

Tayside Health Board 163w, 294w
Grant, Donald 294w

TA11 Airbus 634w

TA9 Airbus 634w

Teacher training
Religious education 288w

Teachers
Advisory Conciliation & Arbitration Service 147
Child care 144
Conditions of employment 1203
Dismissal 150
Educational standards 442w
Industrial disputes 114-5w, 119w, 141-2, 143, 144-5, 146-7, 544w
Lost working days 115w
Manpower 707w
Merit awards 441w, 442w
Pay 64-5w, 114-5w, 141-2, 143, 144, 146, 579w, 707w, 1203, 1206-7
Pay review bodies 144-5, 146-7
Recruitment 141-2, 146
Scotland 64-5w
Speech therapy 433-4w
Trade unions 114w, 143, 144

Teachers appraisal 122w, 152
Inner city areas 122w

Teaching hospitals
Cervical cancer 571
NHS finance 312w, 508-10w

Tebbit, Rt Hon Norman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
Questions
County Palatine, Magistrates 329w

Technical assistance
Defence research 908
Helicopters 515-6w, 525-6w
North Sea oil 250w
Strategic defence initiative 4w, 533w, 560w

Technical & vocational education initiative
Pupils 727-8w

Technicians
NHS 151-2w
Pay 151-2w

Technology transfer
Strategic defence initiative 213-4w
USSR 1065
Westland helicopters 1205-6

Telephone charges (18.12.85) 347-9

Telephone systems
Members facilities 16

Telephones for disabled
Hospitals 505w
NHS 505w
Sensory aids 655-6w

Television
BBC external services 206w

Television advertising
BBC 626w, 636w

Television programmes
Copyright 24w

Temperature
Industrial energy prices 13

Temple-Morris, Mr Peter
Questions
Iran-Iraq war 296-7
Middle East, Peace negotiations 290-1
Milk, Production quotas 281w

Temporary employment 125w, 695w
Tameside 125w

Temporary staff 51w
House of Commons Select Committees 691w
Research 117w

10 Downing Street 264w, 271w, 457w, 628w
Civil servants 18-9
Costs 264w
Official hospitality 264w
Security 271w, 457w

Tenant farmers
Outgoers scheme 562

Tenants cooperatives 259w, 728-9w

Tenders 61-2w, 381w, 429w, 463-4w, 517w, 642w, 718w, 760
Defence contracts 517w
East London river crossing 111w
National Bus Company 760
Submarines 642w

Terlezki, Mr Stefan
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 337
Questions
Company liquidations, Cardiff 451w
Motor vehicle registration, Wales 631w
Playing fields, Wales 285w, 286w
Shops, Cardiff West 565w
Technology transfer, USSR 1065

Termination of employment
Contracts for services 155w

Territorial Army & Volunteer Reserve 916

Terrorism
Capital punishment 553w
International cooperation 207w
Iraq 200w
Libyan Arab Republic 1206
Northern Ireland (16.01.86) 1307-30
Palestine Liberation Organisation 287
Sentencing 553w

Test tube babies
Clinics 325w

Testing
Fire services 274w
Riot control weapons 129-30w
Trident missiles 212w

Textile industry
Bradford 1063
Import penetration 1063-4
Multifibre arrangement 1063-4

Thames Flood Barrier
Newham 257-8w

Thames Valley Police 128w, 129w, 169-70w, 178-9w
Manpower 128w

Thamesmead Community Trust 259w, 728-9w
Elections 259w
Local government reforms 259w
Local government staff 728-9w
Offices 729w

Thatcher, Rt Hon Margaret, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury and Minister for the Civil Service
Debates etc
Deposited papers (16.01.86) 1210
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1088-95
Questions
Aerospace industry, International cooperation 517-8w
Airport security, Manchester Airport 578w
Anglo-Irish Agreement, International conferences 4w

Anglo-rish Agreement, Ministers 4w
Animal welfare 347-8w
British Aerospace, Ministers correspondence 918-9, 922
British Aerospace, Profitability 156
British Aerospace, Westland helicopters 919, 920-1
Brunei 628w
Channel crossing 920
Channel tunnel, Wars 520w
Chief constables, Greater Manchester 565
Child care, Ministerial responsibility 552w
Church of England, Inner city areas 521w
Civil servants, Disclosure of information 520w
Criminal proceedings, Government departments 567-8
Defence procurement 155
Demonstrations, Gartcosh 921
Devolution, Northern Ireland 565
Disclosure of information, Inquiries 629w
Domestic energy conservation, Government grants 629w
Double taxation, Canada 103w
Elderly, Community policing 155
European Communities, National anthems 521w
EC law, Conditions of employment 552w
Fayed, Mohammed 628w
Fires, Coal mining 1205
Fraud, City of London 153, 155-6
Government grants to local authorities 512-6w
Greater London Council, Local government reform 564
Greater London Council, Redundancy 564-5
Heathrow, Armed forces deployment 521-2w
Helicopters, Defence procurement 520w
Helicopters, EC countries 515-6w
Honours, Political Honours Scrutiny Committee 3w
House of Commons Select Committees, Civil servants 628w
Housing departments, Lewisham 920
Libyan Arab Republic, Terrorism 1206
Libyan Arab Republic, USA 1205-6
Lloyds of London 565-6
Local government expenditure, Basildon District Council 922
Members conduct, Public bills 734w
Military exercises, New Zealand 734w
Ministers, Gifts 578w
Ministers correspondence, Disclosure of information 734w
Nationalised industries, Privatisation 153
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Dounreay 160w
Nuclear weapons tests, Australia 159w, 160w, 629w
Official secrets, Open government 919
Official secrets acts, Prosecutions 919
Parliamentary private secretaries 348-52w
Pearce, Austin, Ministers correspondence 734w
Peoples Europe Committee 521w
Peres, Shimon, Official visits 552w
Prime Minister, Gifts 578w, 628w
Prime Minister domestic visits, Kings College Hospital 103w
Prime Minister domestic visits, Railway travel 552w
Prime Minister official engagements 103w, 265w, 552-3w, 627w
Prime Minister visits abroad, Costs 264w
Prime Minister visits abroad, Nepal 922
Public order policing, Civil disorder 919
Public sector borrowing requirement 347w
Rate support grants, Powys 1207-8
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Pensions 156
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Poverty 154-5
"Reform of Social Security White Paper", Social security recipients 566-7
Slum clearance, Bradford 565
Strategic defence initiative, Civil servants secondment 160w
Strategic defence initiative, Scientists 265w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 4w
Sultan of Brunei 629w
Takeovers 522w
Teachers, Pay 1203, 1206-7
10 Downing Street, Costs 264w
10 Downing Street, Official hospitality 264w
Trade competitiveness, Industry 566
UK contributions, NATO 4w
Unemployment 153
USA, Balance of trade 520-1w
USA, Defence procurement 521w
Violence, Security industry 921
Westland helicopters 563-4, 567, 578w
Westland helicopters, British Aerospace 920, 1204-5
Westland helicopters, Cabinet Committees 1206
Westland helicopters, Civil servants 1206
Westland helicopters, Company finance 347w, 515w, 518-9w
Westland helicopters, Cost effectiveness 517w
Westland helicopters, Defence procurement 155, 564, 566
Westland helicopters, Disclosure of information 515w
Westland helicopters, Discrimination 518w, 519w
Westland helicopters, European Commission 515w
Westland helicopters, House of Commons debates 1204
Westland helicopters, Italy 519w
Westland helicopters, Ministers correspondence 517w, 518w, 519-20w, 553-4w, 1203-4, 1206
Westland helicopters, Official secrets 629w
Westland helicopters, Public sector 1204
Westland helicopters, Shareholders 516w, 518w, 519w,
Yorkshire & Humberside 264w
Young people, Supplementary benefits 156

Thermal insulation
Energy Efficiency Year 13w

13 Signals Regiment 523w, 524w
Armed forces discharges 523w, 524w

Thomarin, Sylvia 342-3w
Body searches 342-3w

Thomas, Mr D E
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 798, 842-5
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 335-6
Stone quarrying, Industrial disputes (18.12.85) 374-6
Westland helicopters (13.01.86) 786-7
Questions
Civil defence, Communication 7-8w
Civil defence, Emergency planning 523w
Nuclear test ban 196-7w
Radioactive wastes, Pollution monitoring 167w
Rural water supplies & sewerage acts, Government grants 454w
Social workers, Wales 108w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 906
Violence, Security industry 921

Thomas, Dr Roger
Debates etc
Rate support grants, Wales (18.12.85) 338
Questions
Bone marrow disorders, Transplant surgery 167w

Thompson, Mr Jack
Questions
Economic growth, Regional planning & development 586w
General Certificate of Secondary Education 120w

Thompson, Mr Patrick
Questions
Double taxation, Canada 103w
Higher education, Educational finance 338-40w
National insurance contributions, Employers contributions 510-1w
Nuclear test ban 196-7w
Wind power, Government grants 27w

Thorne, Mr Neil
Debates etc
Juries (18.12.85) 424-6
Questions
Alley, Eric, Civil defence 177-8w
Defence procurement, Mergers 719w
Exhibitions, Social services 556w
GEC, Mergers 609w

Thorne, Mr Stan
Questions
Prime Minister visits abroad, Nepal 922

Thurnham, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1349-50, 1367, 1372-6, 1379, 1380, 1383, 1385-6, 1390
Financial institutions, Fraud (18.12.85) 444, 450, 466-7
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 943
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 33
Questions
Armed forces deployment, Bolton 96w
Armed forces strength, Bolton 522-3w
Arts finance, Greater Manchester 189w
Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 650w
Defence, Cost effectiveness 564w
Exports, Wealth 1061
Food surpluses, European Economic Community 277w
Hospital waiting lists, Bolton Health Authority 496w
Immigration rules, Housing 127-8w
Industrial development, Regional planning & development 586w
Industrial training, Information technology 299w
NHS administration, Medical profession 429w
North West Water Authority, Water charges 260w
Planning appeals 106w
Planning appeals, Birtenshaw Farm 18w
Planning appeals, Housing construction 105-6w
Planning appeals, Property development 106w
Self-employed, Statistics 299w

Tin
Consolidated Fund debates (18.12.85) 539-43
Cornwall (18.12.85) 539-43

Tobacco
Retail trade 138-9w
Smoking (18.12.85) 346
Young people 138-9w

Tobacco industry
Advertising codes of practice 434w
Government assistance to industry 24w
Scotland 62w

Tobacco Smoking (Public Places) Bill 1985/86
1R (18.12.85) 346

Tornado aircraft 611-2w
Defence expenditure 534w, 611-2w

Torney, Mr Thomas
Questions
Multifibre arrangement, Textile industry 1063
South Africa, EC external relations 194-5w

Torture
Amnesty International 363-4w
Foreign policy 363-4w

Tottenham
Civil disorder 919
Police misconduct 131w

Tourism
Highland & Islands Development Board 65w

Tourist attractions 345w
Road signs 345w

Town & country planning
General development orders 369-71w
"Lifting the Burden White Paper" 369-71w

Town & Country Planning Act 1971 222w

Townsend, Mr Cyril D
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 42
Questions
Jordan, Peace negotiations 288

Toys & games
Safety (13.01.86) 790

Tracey, Mr Richard, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Sport)
Debates etc
Greenbelt, Hertfordshire (19.12.85) 667-70
Questions
Greater London Council, Science & technology 105w
Hypermarkets, Planning permission 260w
Industrial development, Hampshire 464w
Local government expenditure, Greater London Council 366-9w
Local government expenditure, Greater London Council 470w
Local government land, Greater London Council 13w, 257-8w
Local government reform, Civil service manpower 15w, 258w
Local government reform, County Hall 369w
Local government reform, Departmental leaflets 469w
Local government reform, Greater London Council 16w, 468-9w
Local government reform, Greater London Council Research Library 469w
Local government reform, Hainault Forest 662-3w
Local government reform, London boroughs 677w
Local government revenue, Greenwich 661w
London Marathon, Government grants 263w
London Residuary Body, Finance 677-8w
Mary Rose, Ancient monuments 678w
Merseyside Residuary Body, Pocock, Leslie 731w
Merseyside Residuary Body, Public appointments 677w
Owner occupied housing, Planning permission 673w
Planning appeals 106w, 222w
Planning appeals, Birtenshaw Farm 18w
Planning appeals, Housing construction 105-6w
Planning appeals, Hypermarkets 13w
Planning appeals, Local authorities 222w
Planning appeals, Property development 106w
Planning permission, Opencast mining 464-6w
Planning permission, Stolport 366w
Sports Council, Rugby 18w
Town & country planning, General development orders 369-71w
Washington Development Corporation, Public appointments 729w

Trade competitiveness
Air freight transport 733-4w
Coal mining 9
Exchange rates 566
Industry 566

Trade Descriptions (Origin Marking) (Miscellaneous Goods) Order 1981 245w

Trade promotion
Association of British Chambers of Commerce 587w
China 1073
Diplomatic service 297-8
Jamaica 298
Marketing 298
Overseas trade 298
USSR 1064-5

Trade union membership
Government Communications Headquarters 207w

Trade unions
British Dental Association 125w
Civil servants 720-2w
Civil service 31w
Gas supply industry 27w
Political levy 304w, 399-400w
Ravenscraig Steelworks 294w
South Africa 285
Teachers 114w, 143, 144

Trades Union Congress
British Gas Corporation 30w
Government grants 639w

Tradewinds Airways 733-4w

Traffic lights
Costs 111-2w
Road accidents 582w

Training
Child care 185w
Civil defence 272w
Educational psychology 337-8w
Health service staff 71w
Manpower Services Commission 151
Prison staff 623w
Ulster Defence Regiment 245-6w

Training allowances 398w, 727-8w
Community programme 398w
Companies 727-8w

Training grants
Community programme 52w

Transplant surgery
Bone marrow disorders 167w
Computer applications 698w
Heart diseases 504-5w
Kidneys 310-1w, 698w

Transport
Dockyards 374w

Transport Act 1985 581w
Publicity 581w

Transport costs
Channel crossing 475w

Transport supplementary grants 168-9w

Transport & Road Research Laboratory 407w

Trauma
Hospital patients 158w
Medical research 38w
Research finance 158w

Travel
Channel crossing 475w

Travel concessions
School transport 116w

Travelling expenses
Pupils 544w
Youth training scheme 488-9w, 489-90w

Treasury
Local government reform 49-50w

Treaties
European Economic Community 364w
International Committee of the Red Cross 562w
Iron & Steel 1059
Space technology 208w
Strategic defence initiative 208w

Treaty of Rome 201-2w, 474w, 591-2w

Trials
Costs 713w
Northern Ireland (16.01.86) 1331-5
Official secrets 99w
Sexual offences 290w

Trident 562w
Contracts 562w
Costs 212w
Defence expenditure 562w

Trident missiles 246w
Testing 212w

Trident submarines
Defence contracts 911

Trinity House 168w

Trippier, Mr David, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment
Questions
Community programme, Training grants 52w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Government grants 56-7w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Small businesses 57w
Enterprise allowance scheme, Women 57w
Enterprise & deregulation unit, Costs 56w
Fisheries, Great Grimsby 399w
Industrial training, Information technology 299w
Loan guarantee scheme, Companies 301-2w
Local enterprise agencies, Local authorities 303-4w
New businesses, Greater London 566w
Small businesses, Bureaucracy 55-6w
Small businesses, Employment 303w
Small businesses, "Lifting the Burden White Paper" 303w
Technical & vocational education initiative, Pupils 727-8w
Youth training scheme 54-6w, 187w, 400-4w
Youth training scheme, Finance 187w
Youth training scheme, Information technology centres 54w
Youth training scheme, Local education authorities 488w
Youth training scheme, Ministers domestic visits 186-7w
Youth training scheme, Pay 727-8w
Youth training scheme, School leaving 567w
Youth training scheme, Take-up of employment 187w
Youth training scheme, Travelling expenses 488-9w, 489-90w

Tristan da Cunha
Companies 33w, 364w
Overseas trade 33w

Trotter, Mr Neville
Questions
Warships, British Shipbuilders 724w

Trustee savings banks
Banks 363w

Tuberculosis
Vaccination 151w

Tuition fees
Open University 116w

Tunnels
Driving 407w
Psychology 407w

Turkey
Export promotion 1060
Political prisoners 191w

Turville School 579w
Members correspondence 579w

Twinn, Dr Ian
Questions
Coinage, Commonwealth Games 592w
Government grants to local authorities, Child care 119w
Marginal tax rates, Average earnings 1194
Trade unions, Political levy 304w

Tyne & Wear
Bed & breakfast accommodation 553w
Board & lodging charges 740w
Customs officers 144w
Defence industries 913-4

Type 23 Frigates 913-4
Defence contracts 913-4

Ulster Defence Regiment
Armed forces training 102w
Mallon, Seamus 246-7w
Training 245-6w

Ultraleisure
Company liquidations 449-50w
Export Credits Guarantee Department 449-50w

Underpayments 489-92w
Yorkshire & Humberside 489-92w

Unemployed
Adult education 644-5w
Income support scheme 317-8w
Low incomes 74-6w

Unemployment 153, 190w, (18.12.85) 371-4, 549w, 639w
Blyth Valley 1066-7
Building industry 454w
Cleveland 1196-7
Coal mining 26w
Copeland 188w
Economic regions 301-2w, 638-9w
Glasgow 57-8w
Graduates 397w
Greater London 398-9w
Handicapped workers 725w
Hertfordshire 300w
Littleborough 566-8w
Liverpool 492-3w
Merseyside 493w
Northern region 1065, 1066
Norwood 728w
Outgoers scheme 552
Parliamentary constituencies 125w
Research 397w
Saddleworth 566-8w
Statistics 725w
Wales 285w
Wandsworth 398-9w

Unemployment benefit offices 639w
Stockport 639w

Unemployment benefits
Administrative delays 397w
EC countries 72w
Japan 72w
Social security abuse 300w
Social security recipients 498w
Welwyn Hatfield 397w

Unemployed
Income support scheme 597w

UNESCO 179w
Commonwealth 179w
Overseas aid 241w
UK contributions 297, 771

Unfair competition
British Airways 733w
Westland helicopters 519w

Unfair dismissal (Increase of Limits of Basic & Special Awards) Order 1985 (19.12.85) 662

United Engineering Steels 539w

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority
Departmental reports 717w

United Kingdom Warning & Monitoring Organisation 274w

United Nations
Chile 473-4w
Cyprus 32w
Falkland Islands 191-2w
Gulf War 206-7w
Middle East 291-2
Namibia 472w
SWAPO 472w

United Technologies (16.12.85) 35-46, 451w, (13.01.86) 777-89, (15.01.86) 1082-174

Universities
Business education 335w
Higher education admission 643w
Information technology 442-4w
Research 117w, 118w
Staff-student ratios 121w

University College Aberystwyth 336w

University finance
Educational finance 116-7w
Open University 122w, 544w, 711-2w
Private investment 122w
University Grants Committee 118w, 442-4w

University teachers
Careers development 712w
Pay 335-6w
Working hours 335-6w

Unparliamentary expressions
Speakers rulings & statements (17.12.85) 163, 166

Untreated milk 281w
Licensing 281w

Upminster
Sacred Heart of Mary School 646w

Upper Bann
By election writs (17.12.85) 140

Upper Waiting Hall
Exhibitions 607-8w
London Commodity Exchange 633w
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd 250w
Yorkshire Water Colour Society 34-5w

Urban areas (20.12.85) 709-16
Social deprivation 467w

Urban deprivation 12w, 18-20w
Local authorities 12w, 18-20w
Statistics 12w

Urban development grants 574w, (20.12.85) 709-16
Spencerbeck estate 465-6w, 574w

Urban planning
Liverpool (16.01.86) 1337-40

Urban programme
Government grants to local authorities 13w, 18-20w, 260w
Holiday pay schemes 13w

US bases 538w
Armed forces deployment 538w

USA
Aerospace industry 517-8w
Armed forces deployment 205w
Arms control 199w
Balance of trade 452-3w, 520-1w
Budget 648w
Central America 205w
Company taxation 510w
Contadora Group 205w
Defence procurement 521w, 526-8w
Deficit financing 648w
Dogs 5w
European Economic Community 1059
Fish 613w
Helicopters 530w
Iron & steel industry 1060
Libyan Arab Republic 1205-6
Manufactured goods 520-1w
Nicaragua 283-4
Nuclear disarmament 199w
Palestine Liberation Organisation 289-90
Prisons 177w
Protectionism 1068
Stocks & shares 511w
Submarines 373w
Western Europe 1202
Westland helicopters 474-5w, 533w

USSR (20.12.85) 681-90
British embassies 366w
Foreign policy 194w
Iron & steel 1065
Nuclear weapons deployment 908
Overseas trade 590w, 1064-5
Political refugees 205-6w
Seismic monitoring 298-9
Strategic defence initiative 908, 1065
Technology transfer 1065
Trade promotion 1064-5

Vacancies
Community programme 303w
Wales 285w

Vacant land
Hampshire 464w
Local government land 729-30w

Vaccination
Discounts 151w
Publicity 78-9w
Tuberculosis 151w

Vaccine damaged children
Compensation 157w

van Straubenzee, Sir William
Questions
Ministers of religion, Early retirement 445w

VAT
EC countries 305-6w
Tax avoidance 654w
Tax evasion 648w

VAT threshold
Building industry 593w

VAT zero rated goods 142w
Tax yields 142w

Vauxhall Motors 588-9w
Motor components industry 1062

VC10 aircraft 97w, 247w
Costs 97w
Defence contracts 97w, 247w
Defence procurement 97w
Military aircraft 97w

Ventilation
Channel tunnel 758-9

Veterinary investigation centres 1-2w

Veterinary medicine 485-6w
Antibiotics 485-6w

Veterinary services 1-2w

Vickers Shipbuilding & Engineering 642w
Defence procurement 912
Submarines 911

Victim support schemes 271w, 545-6w
Government grants 545-6w

Vietnam
Refugees 772

Viggers, Mr Peter
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 594, 638-40
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 32
Westlands helicopters (13.01.86) 872
Questions
Armed forces pensions, Widows 246w
Breast cancer, Screening 432w, 571-2
Civil servants, Dept of Health & Social Security 19
South African, Foreign policy 195w
Voluntary schools, Educational finance 340w

Violence
African National Congress 285
Middle East 287
Security industry 921
South Africa 285-6

Violent disorder (13.01.86) 792-869

Viral diseases
Discrimination 71w

Visas
Bangladesh 624w
Foreign tourists 132w
Indian subcontinent 342w
Sri Lanka 132w, 624w

Vocational education
City & Guilds of London Institute 118w

Vocational guidance
Armed forces 918
Armed forces strength 917

Vocational training
Employment schemes 186w

Voluntary organisations
Community programme 398w
Energy Efficiency Year 331w
Government grants 176-7w
Housing benefits 695w
Joint liaison committees 59w

Local government expenditure 237w
Local government reform 237w, 603w

Voluntary redundancy 330w

Voluntary schools
Educational finance 340w

Vote Office 652-4w

Voting methods
EC reform 201w
European communities 193-4w
EC law 552w

Waddington, Mr David, Minister of State for the Home Department
Debates etc
Hong Kong, Nationality (16.01.86) 1268-77, 1302-4
Immigration control (18.12.85) 503-7
Questions
British citizenship 715w
Data protection tribunal, Public appointments 130w
Entry clearances, Dacca 624w
Entry clearances, Immigration appeals 715w
Equal opportunities, Home Office 5w, 127w
Equal opportunities, Law reform 5w
Foreign tourists, Immigration rules 174w
Foreign tourists, Statistics 5-6w
Immigrant detainees, Heathrow 457-8w
Immigrant detainees, Indian subcontinent 623-4w
Immigrants, Bangladesh 625w
Immigration, Members correspondence 342w
Immigration appeals, British citizenship 8-9w
Immigration controls 625w
Immigration controls, Bangladesh 623-4w
Immigration controls, Sri Lanka 455-6w
Immigration controls, Statistics 9-10w
Immigration rules, Housing 127-8w
Local government staff, Lancashire 627w
Naturalisation 714w
Nazemi, Dr, Immigration applications 272w
Newcastle Airport, Immigration controls 273w
Political refugees, Immigration applications 714w
Primary purpose rule, Immigration appeals 273w
Refugees 714w
Shops Bill (HL) 1985/86 547-8w
Special voucher scheme, India 715w
Visas, Bangladesh 624w
Visas, Foreign tourists 132w
Visas, Indian subcontinent 342w
Visas, Sri Lanka 132w, 624w

Wages councils
Personnel 726w
Young people 726w

Wages Inspectorate
Yorkshire & Humberside 489-92w

Wainwright, Mr Richard
Questions
Argentina, Diplomatic relations 199w
Arms trade, South America 589w
Community programme, Vacancies 303w
Community programme, Working hours 303w

Waiting lists
Council house waiting lists 482w

Waldegrave, Mr William, Minister of State for the Environment (Countryside & Local Government)
Debates etc
Motor vehicles, Exhaust emissions (14.01.86) 1027-34, 1035, 1041, 1045-7
Questions
Health physics, Merchant seamen 221-2w
Local Government Bill 1985/86 678w
Local government staff, Manpower 469-70w, 577w
Nature Conservancy Council, Annual reports 17w
Pollution control, Disclosure of information 369w
Radioactive waste disposal, Nuclear safety 220-1w
Sea pollution, Beaches 223-8w
Wildlife Inspectorate, Professional misconduct 107-8w
Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981, Orders & regulations 14-5w

Walden, Mr George, Under-Secretary of State for Education & Science
Debates etc
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 67-71
Questions
Agricultural & Food Research Council 336w
Archaeology, International conferences 148-9
Business education, Universities 335w
CERN, UK contributions 145
Educational psychology, Professional qualifications 337-8w
Freedom of expression, Prosecutions 152
Graduates, Employment 336-8w
Higher education, Freedom of expression 113w, 151
Higher education, Student numbers 117w, 118w
Higher education admission 709-10w
Higher education admission, Scottish Certificate of Education 115-6w
"Higher Education Consultation Paper" 118w, 120w
Initial teacher training, Portsmouth 288w
Languages education, Nordic countries 118-9w
Mandatory student grants, Refugees 646w
Medical research, Trauma 38w
Open University, Student numbers, Specific cases 116w
Open University, Tuition fees 116w
Open University, University finance 122w, 544w, 711-2w
Overseas students, Student numbers 709-11w
Plant Breeding Institute, Property transfer 286-7w
Postgraduate students, Science & technology research 579-80w
Replan 644-5w
School leaving, Derbyshire 645w
School leaving, Educational qualifications 122w
Science Research Council, Research finance 645w
Speech therapy, Higher education 444w
Staff-student ratios, Universities 121w
Student grants 147-8
Student grants, Deeds of Covenant 120w
Student grants, Student loans 148
Student numbers, Women 121w
Universities, Higher education admission 643w
Universities, Research 117w, 118w
University finance, Educational finance 116-7w
University finance, Private investment 122w
University finance, University Grants Committee 118w, 442-4w
University teachers, Careers development 712w
University teachers, Pay 335-6w
Welsh Plant Breeding Station, Overseas students 336w

Wales
Capital investment 332w
Cash limits 619w
Cervical cancer 616w, 617w, 618w
Child patients 284w
Cooperatives 719w
Cornish unit houses 331-2w
Economic situation 756
Free school meals 19-20w, 20-1w
Government grants to local authorities 617-8w
Hospitals 108w, 284-6w
Households 285w
Housing insulation 719w
Industrial development 757
Job centres 719-20w
Manufacturing industries 285w
Motor vehicle registration 631w
Playing fields 285w, 286w
Population 285w
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 331-40, 618-9w
Regional aid 757
School meals 20-1w
Screening 572
Small firms service 286w
Social workers 108w
Unemployment 285w
Vacancies 285w

Wales Tourist Board 286w
Government grants 286w

Walker, A Cecil
Members resignations (17.12.85) 140

Walker, Mr Bill
Debates etc
Gartcosh Steelworks, Scottish Affairs Select Committee (19.12.85) 590-1
Iron & steel industry, Scotland (20.12.85) 695
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 92-5, 102
Westland helicopters (15.01.86) 1102
Questions
Business statement 578
Cereals, Weather 558

Walker, Rt Hon Peter, Secretary of State for Energy
Questions
Boiler conversion scheme, Coal firing scheme 27w
British Gas Corporation, Privatisation 5-6, 6-7, 30w
Coal mine closures, Kinsley 7
Coal mining, Imports 8-9
Coal mining, Industrial disputes 14
Coal mining, Industrial health & safety 7
Coal mining, Investment 9
Coal mining, Productivity 11-2
Coal mining, Redundancy pay 247-8w
Coal mining, Unemployment 26w
Coal mining, Working hours 7
Colliery review procedure 9
Energy efficiency, Building regulations 8
Energy efficiency, Energy prices 8
Energy efficiency, Industrial energy conservation 7-8
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Finance 11
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Research finance 11
NCB (Enterprise) Ltd, Upper Waiting Hall 250w
Power industry, Capital investment 248w

Wallace, Mr James
Debates etc
Planning inquiries, Dounreay (14.01.86) 1049-53, 1054-5
Questions
Armed forces training, South Africa 523w
Common fisheries policy, EC Fisheries Council 282w
Defence procurement, Navy 914
Higher education admission, Scottish Certificate of Education 115-6w
Iron & steel industry, Ravenscraig Steelworks 1070
Lighthouses, Manpower 168w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Dounreay 109-10w, 160w
Scottish Islands, EC grants & loans 482w
Social Security benefits, Orkney 499w
Strategic defence initiative, Technical assistance 560w
Tax incentives, Energy efficiency 307w

Wallace, Colin 134-5w
Inquiries 134-5w

Waller, Mr Gary
Debates etc
Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1982 (13.01.86) 884-7
Questions
Multifibre arrangement 588w
M1, Road construction 406w
Road construction, Airedale 763-4

Road works, Costs 731w
Road works, Expenditure 732w

Walters, Mr Dennis
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 192w, 289

Waltham Forest
Council housing (20.12.85) 717-24
Housing (20.12.85) 717-24

Wandsworth
Unemployment 398-9w

Wardell, Mr Gareth
Debates etc
Leasehold Reform Bill, 1R (14.01.86) 935-7
Questions
Child patients, Wales 284w
Cornish unit houses, Wales 331-2w
Hospitals, Wales 108w
Namibia, Foreign policy 205w

Wardle, Mr Charles
Questions
Employment, Inner city areas 397w
Student grants, Parental contributions 39-40w

Wareing, Robert N
Debates etc
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1368-9, 1372, 1390-4
Questions
British Aerospace, Ministers correspondence 922
Community programme, Exservicemen 637-8w
Dumping, Licensing 614w
Fire prevention, Multiple occupation 626w
Imperial Tobacco, Takeovers 633-4w
Local government audit 729w
Merseyside Residuary Body 677w, 731w
Merseyside Residuary Body, Pocock, Leslie 731w
Merseyside Residuary Body, Public appointments 677w
Sri Lanka, Foreign relations 202w
Water authorities, Property transfer 673w

Warren, Mr Kenneth
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 38, (15.01.86) 1148-50

Wars
Channel tunnel 520w

Warsaw Pact
NATO 292-3

Warships
British Shipbuilders 724w
Defence procurement 914
Navy 914
West Germany 525w

Wash
Nature conservation 463w

Washington Development Corporation 729w
Public appointments 729w

Waste disposal
Polkemmet 3
Rivers 614w

Water
Acid rain 549w

Water authorities
External financing limits 572w, 730-2w
Finance 467w, 572w
Privatisation 679-82w
Property transfer 673w
Sewers 571-2w, 572-3w
Water pollution 656-62w
Water supply 573-4w, 656-62w

Water charges 463w
North West Water Authority 260w
Social security reform 597w
Water meters 103w

Water Metering Steering Group Report 463w

Water meters
Water charges 103w

Water pollution
East Anglia 257w
Nitrates 545w, 656w
Water authorities 656-62w

Water supply
Deserts 770-1
EC countries 468w
Households 468w
Lead pollution 12w
Leeds 220w
Lincolnshire 656w
Nitrates 257w
Water authorities 573-4w, 656-62w

Water supply industry
Privatisation 573w

Water treatment
Aid financed trade 770

Watts, Mr John
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 602, 630-3
Questions
Export promotion, Data banks 587w
Hypermarkets, Planning permission 260w
Labour costs, Industry 509-10w
Metropolitan Police, Offices 171-2w
Personal tax allowances, Married people 652w
Police, Expenditure 129w
Police, Manpower 178-9w
Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984, Custody officers 169-70w
Religious education, Teacher training 288w
Thames Valley Police, Manpower 128w
Urban programme, Government grants to local authorities 18-20w, 260w

Wealth
Exports 1061

Weather
Cereals 558

Weetch, Mr Ken
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 623-5
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 808
Questions
British Dental Association, Trade unions 125w
Dental charges exemptions 420w
Dental services, Fees & charges 147w
Departmental forms, Administrative delays 154w
Local dental committees 420w
USA, Central America 205w

Wells, Mr Bowen
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 479-80
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 199-201, 215
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 328
Questions
Namibia, Western Contact Group 286
South Africa, Economic sanctions 293

Wells, Sir John
Debates etc
Channel crossing (18.12.85) 403
Questions
House of Commons catering, Apples 716w
Reprography, Members facilities 716w

Welsh Development Agency
Capital investment 615-6w

Welsh Office
Civil service manpower 284w

Welsh Plant Breeding Station 336w
Overseas students 336w

Welwyn Hatfield 397w, 399w, 463w
Council house sales 463w
Employment 399w
Social security abuse 397w
Unemployment benefits 397w

West Bank 193w, 286-7, 290-1
Gaza 291

West Germany
Air force 381-2w
Armed forces 211w
Defence procurement 525w
Warships 525w

West Midlands
NHS & private practice 66-8w
Regional aid 1196

West Midlands Police
Plastic bullets 270w

West Midlands Regional Health Authority 66-8w, 419w
Hip replacements 419w
Private patients 66-8w

West Norfolk & Wisbech Health Authority 415-6w
Smoking related diseases 415-6w

Western Contact Group
Namibia 286

Western Europe
International economic relations 1202
USA 1202

Western Sahara
Recognition of States 133-4w

Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 35-46, 137w, 155, 243-4w, 347w, 451w, 452w, 474-5w, 515-6w, 517-8w, 518-9w, 520w, 529-30w, 530-1w, 531-2w, 533w, 534w, 535w, 553-4w, 563-4, 566, 567, 578w, 592w, 609-10w, 610-1w, 614w, 629w, 724w, 734w, (13.01.86) 777-89, 870-4, 918-9, 920, 922, 1058-9, (15.01.86) 1082-174, 1203-4
Avionics 243-4w
British Aerospace 592w, 724w, 918-9, 920-1, 922, 1204-5
Cabinet Committees 1206
Civil servants 1206
Company finance 137w, 347w, 452w, 515w, 518-9w, 534w
Cost effectiveness 517w
Defence contracts 515w, 534w, 535w
Defence procurement 155, 525-6w, 564, 566
Disclosure of information 515w, 520w, 919, 920-1
Discrimination 518w, 519w
Employment 1204
European Commission 515w
European Court of Justice 518w
Foreign investment in UK 451w
Heseltine, Michael 921, 1206
House of Commons debates 1204
Industrial production 518-9w
International cooperation 519w, 526-8w, 529w, 530w, 532w, 534w, 610-1w, 1072
Investor protection 452w
Italy 519w
Letters 525w
Lloyds Bank International 517w
Lloyds International Bank 518w
Merchant banks 451w
Ministerial statements (16.12.85) 35-46, (13.01.86) 777-89, 870-4
Ministers correspondence 517w, 518w, 519-20w, 553-4w, 610w, 724w, 1203-4, 1205, 1206
Nationalised industries 1058-9
Official secrets 614w, 629w
Opposition Days (15.01.86) 1082-174
Public sector 1204
Shareholders 451w, 516w, 518w, 519w
Shares 533w
Solicitor-General 724w
Technology transfer 1205-6
Unfair competition 519w
USA 474-5w, 533w

WG Allen 1073
Company liquidations 1073

Wheeler, Mr John
Debates etc
Football Safety Review (16.01.86) 1232
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 820-3

Rate support grants (18.12.85) 319
Questions
BAOR, Costs 211w
Djibouti, UK companies abroad 365w
Entry clearances, Fees & charges 291w
Local government land, Greater London Council 13w
Metropolitan Police 546w
Prisons, Design 177w

White, Mr James
Questions
Unemployment, Glasgow 57-8w

Whitfield, Mr John
Debates etc
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 994-7
Questions
British Aerospace, Westland helicopters 921

Whitney, Mr Ray, Under-Secretary of State for Health and Social Security
Debates etc
Beckenham Hospital (20.12.85) 741-4
Oldchurch Hospital (13.01.86) 901-4
Southend Hospital (15.01.86) 1187-90
Questions
Action on smoking & health, Government grants 428w, 429w
Adoption, Disclosure of information 700w
Blood alcohol levels 435w
Cancer, North East Thames Regional Health Authority 501w
Child health 237-8w
Child health, Medical research 602w
Child patients, Mental hospitals 702w
Children, Children in care 82w
Cohabitation, Single people 153w
Cruelty to children 603w
Cruelty to children, Local government social services 437w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Action on Smoking & Health 429w
Dept of Health & Social Security, Statistics 604w
Diet & disease, Medical research 78w
District health authorities, Merseyside 149-52w
Doctors, Computers 77-8w
Drug abuse, Family doctors 505w
Educational health services 600w
Exhibitions, Social services 556w
Factor VIII, Blood 416w
Food standards, Irradiation 310w
Health education, Drug abuse 155-6w
Health service ancillary staff, Patients 235w
health service staff, Management 235w
Health service staff, Pay 312-3w
Heart diseases, Transplant surgery 504-5w
Hip replacements, Hospital waiting lists 499-500w, 604w
Hip replacements, West Midlands Regional Health Authority 419w
Hospital catering, Margarine 428w
Hospital closures, Hospital beds 77w, 495w
Hospital closures, NHS finance 503w
Hospital closures, Sick leave 324w
Hospital discharges, Community care 236-7w
Hospital length of stay 235w, 604w
Hospital patients, Trauma 158w
Hospital waiting lists, Bolton Health Authority 496w
Hospital waiting lists, Coronary bypass operations 325w
Hospital waiting lists, Derbyshire 322w
Hospital waiting lists, Greater London 558w
Hospital waiting lists, Surgery 155w
Hospitals 605w
Hospitals, Construction 554-6w
Hospitals, Construction costs 234-6w
Hospitals, Derbyshire 323w
Hospitals, Fires 234w, 438w, 697w
Hospitals, Food poisoning 605w
Hospitals, Peterborough Health Authority 326w
Hospitals, Sponsorship 605w
Households, Families 506w
Human growth hormones; Hormone treatments 700w
Hypothermia, Death 321w, 322w
Kidney failure, Kidney patients 699-700w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 310-1w, 698w
Leeds General Infirmary 233-4w
Leeds General Infirmary, Building repairs 154w
Local government expenditure, Voluntary organisations 237w
Mental patients, Respiratory diseases 73-4w
Middlesex Hospital, Hospital closures 155w
Multiple sclerosis, Medical treatment 76-7w
National No-Smoking Day, Opinion surveys 419w
NHS, Hospitals 84-96w
NHS, Technicians 151-2w
NHS complaints 232w
NHS complaints, Clinical judgements 231w, 232w, 233w
Nicorette, Prescriptions 315w
Nursing homes, Handbooks 605w
Nursing homes, Licensing 79-80w
Pupils 698w
Regional health authorities, Merseyside 150w
Regional health authorities, Pay 235w
Residential care, Codes of practice 604w
School nurses, Educational health services 697-8w
Skoal Bandits, British Medical Association 432w
Smoking, Hospitals 503w
Smoking, Public buildings 502w
Smoking related diseases, Death 415-6w
Smoking related diseases, Norfolk 73-5w
Speech therapy, Teachers 433-4w
Surgery, Death 601-2w
Surgery, Hospital waiting lists 238w
Surgery, Infectious diseases 605w
Tobacco industry, Advertising codes of practice 434w
Vaccination, Publicity 78-9w
Vaccination, Tuberculosis 151w
Vaccine damaged children, Compensation 157w
Voluntary organisations, Local government reform 603w

Wick
DHSS local offices 499w

Widows
Armed forces pensions 246w

Widows benefits
South Africa 427-8w

Wiggin, Mr Jerry
Debates etc
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 40, (13.01.86) 782 (15.01.86) 1135-7

Wigley, Mr Dafydd
Debates etc
Breast cancer, Public petitions (17.01.86) 1345
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Bill, 2R (17.01.86) 1367, 1382-6
Questions
Government grants to local authorities, Wales 617-8w
Military exercise, New Zealand 734w
Ministry of Defence, Security vetting 643w
Nuclear weapons tests, Australia 629w
Planning appeals 222w
Planning appeals, Local authorities 222w
Rate support grants, Wales 618-9w
Trident 562w

Wildlife Inspectorate 107-8w
Professional misconduct 107-8w

Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981 14-5w, 218w, 372-3w, 463w
Orders & regulations 14-5w
Public footpaths 372-3w

Wilkinson, Mr John
Debates etc
Overseas aid (17.12.85) 186-9
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 39, (13.01.86) 781, 873, (15.01.86) 1100, 1105, 1139-45
Questions
Defence research, Technical assistance 908
Exhibitions, Gas safety 245w

Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Debates etc
Members interests (17.12.85) 223-4
Members interests, Liberal party (18.12.85) 342
Recess motions, Christmas (18.12.85) 386-9
Westland helicopters, Government departments (16.12.85) 47
Questions
Disclosure of information, Inquiries 629w
Employment schemes, Government grants 179-83w
Motor components industry, Vauxhall Motors 1062
Nazemi, Dr, Immigration applications 272w
Westland helicopters, Official secrets 629w

Willowbrook estate 259w
Housing improvement 259w
Planning permission 259w

Wilson, Mr Gordon
Debates etc
Business statement (13.01.86) 775
Peterhead Harbours (South Bay Development) Order Confirmation Bill, 2R (16.12.85) 75, 76, 87-8
Questions
Acid rain 548-9w
Acid rain, Freshwater fish 544-5w
Acid rain, Scotland 549w
Air pollution, Sulphur dioxide 545w
Continental shelf, Orders & regulations 30w
Defence contracts, Scotland 912
Financial institutions, Banks 309w
North Sea oil, Technical assistance 250w
Pollution, Pollutants 544w
Trustee savings banks, Banks 363w

Wind power
Electricity generation 27w
Government grants 27w
Rural areas 27w

Winnick, Mr David
Debates etc
Public Order Bill, 2R (13.01.86) 796
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 45, (15.01.86) 1123, 1125, 1143-5, 1160
Questions
Business statement 582, 1222-3
Immigrant detainees, Heathrow 457-8w
Mallon, Seamus, Ulster Defence Regiment 246-7w
Members interests 15-6
South Africa, Foreign relations 295

Winterton, Mrs Ann
Questions
Family Planning Association 80w
Family Planning Association, Health Education Council 80w

Winterton, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc
"Reform of Social Security White Paper" (16.12.85) 34
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 45
Questions
Aerospace industry 632w
Aerospace industry, Exports 632w
Aerospace industry, Manpower 636-7w
Black economy, Building industry 593w
Building industry, Complaints 570-1w
Housing stock, EC countries 16w
Housing stock, Households 16w
Motorways, Road traffic 45-6w
Namibia, United Nations 472w
Sewers, North West region 15w
VAT threshold, Building industry 593w

Witnesses
House of Commons Select Committees 691-2w

Wolverhampton
Employment schemes 186w

Women
Arab states 208w

Average earnings 300-1w
Brixton Prison 342w
Crimes of violence 127w, 275w
Dept of Health & Social Security 504w
Enterprise allowance scheme 57w
Equal opportunities 5w
Islam 208w
Pensions 319-20w
State occupational pensions 147-8w
Student numbers 121w

Womens prisons
Per capita costs 170w

Wood
Exports 332w
Imports 332w

Wood, Mr Timothy
Debates etc
Rate support grants (18.12.85) 328
Questions
Car industry, Motor vehicle parts 1061
Company law, Law reform 136-7w
Drug abuse, Publicity 557-8w
Insolvency Act 1985 137w
Navy, Armed forces deployment 215w
NHS finance, Regional health authorities 156-7w
Sudan, Food aid 447w

Woodall, Mr Alec
Questions
Coal mine closures, Kinsley 7

Woodcock, Mr Mike
Questions
Lead free petrol, Capital investment 634-5w
Lead free petrol, Costs 635w
Lead free petrol, Energy consumption 635w
Taxation, Lead free petrol 654-5w

Woolaway houses 167w
Defective housing 167w

Woollard, Brian (20.12.85) 671-2

Woolwich Ferry 110-1w, 406-7w
Local government reform 110-1w, 406-7w

Work study
Civil servants 17-8

Working hours
Baking industry 635-6w
Coal mining 7
Community programme 303w
Job centres 719-20w
University teachers 335-6w

World Archaeological Congress 148-9
Association of University Teachers 148-9

Worsley
Government assistance to industry 25w, 136w, 139w

Wrigglesworth, Mr Ian
Debates etc
"Banking Supervision White Paper" (17.12.85) 162
Business statement (13.01.86) 776
Financial Services Bill, 2R (14.01.86) 999-1001
Science & technology research (16.12.85) 54-6
Westland helicopters (16.12.85) 43, (13.01.86) 784
Questions
A19, Road works 297w
Customs officers, North East region 190w
Customs officers, Northern region 191w
Drug crimes, Northern region 190w
Regional aid, Northern region 1067, 1196

Yelland Power Station 716w
Power station closures 716w

Yeo, Mr Tim
Debates etc
Low pay (18.12.85) 474-6, 487
Questions
Argentina, Foreign policy 199w
Cereals, Agricultural production 276w
Defence procurement, Cost effectiveness 372w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 647w
Lloyds of London, Financial Services Bill 1985/86 589w
Takeovers, Codes of practice 335w
Teachers, Industrial disputes 141
Trade Descriptions (Origin Marking) (Miscellaneous Goods) Order 1981 245w

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 233-4w

Yorkshire Water Authority 656-62w

Yorkshire Water Colour Society 34-5w
Exhibitions 34-5w
Upper Waiting Hall 34-5w

Yorkshire & Humberside 264w
Underpayments 489-92w
Wages Inspectorate 489-92w

Young, Mr David
Questions
EC integration 197w

Young, Sir George, Under-Secretary of State for the Environment
Debates etc
Building Societies Bill, 2R (19.12.85) 649-53
Homelessness, Greater London (20.12.85) 703-8
Housing co-operatives (20.12.85) 749-53
Housing, Waltham Forest (20.12.85) 720-4
Liverpool (16.01.86) 1340-4
Urban areas (20.12.85) 712-6
Questions
Access to buildings, Mobility of disabled 655-6w
Building industry, Complaints 570-1w
Building regulations, Energy Efficiency Year 13w
Council house sales 259-60w
Council house sales, Welwyn Hatfield 463w
Council house waiting lists 465w
Council housing, Costs 217w
Council housing, Empty housing 218-9w
Council of Ministers, Offices 463-4w
Crown Suppliers, Fees & charges 335w
Dept of the Environment, Efficiency scrutinies 263w
Glory Hole, Derelict land grants 464w
Housing finance, Greater London Council 216-8w
Housing investment programmes, Asbestos stripping 371w
Housing investment programmes, Private rented housing 217w
Housing stock, EC countries 16w
Housing stock, Households 16w
Insulation grants, Government grants to local authorities 673-9w
Law centres, Local government reform 261-2w
Local government land, Vacant land 729-30w
London docklands, Employment opportunities 220w, 467w
London Docklands Development Corporation, External financing limits 472w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Management techniques 571w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Property transfer 471-2w
London docklands railway, Employment 471-2w
London docklands railway, Manpower 679w
Private rented housing, Judgments 464w
Regional aid, Glanford 471-2w
Rent arrears, Council housing 257-60w
Richmond terrace, House of Commons accommodation 261w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Elections 259w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Local government reform 259w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Local government staff 728-9w
Thamesmead Community Trust, Offices 729w
Urban areas, Social deprivation 467w
Urban deprivations, Statistics 12w
Urban programme, Government grants to local authorities 18-20w, 260w
Urban programme, Holiday pay schemes 13w
Willowbrook estate, Housing improvement 259w

Young offenders
Prisons 63w

Young people
Board & lodging charges 418w
Income support scheme 434w, 701w
Martial arts weapons 570
Mortgage relief 1197
Police cautions 546-7w
Rent allowances 506-8w
Social security benefits 495w
Social security benefits rules 422-6w
Social security reviews 495w
Supplementary benefits 84w, 156, 434-5w, 506-8w
Tobacco 138-9w
Wages councils 726w

Younger, Rt Hon George Secretary of State for Scotland (Secretary of State for Defence from 9 Jan 1986)
Debates etc
Iron & steel industry, Ministerial statements (20.12.85) 691-9
Questions
Ambulance services, Scotland 161w
Defence attaches 608-9w
Defence research, Technical assistance 908
Defence Select Committee, Civil service manpower 641w
Drinking & driving, Scottish courts 359w
Drug abuse, Scottish courts 358-9w
Hill livestock allowances, Scotland 294-5w
Jordanhill College of Education, College closures 294w
List D schools, School closures 162w
North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board, External financing limits 164w
Nuclear safety, Scotland 64w
Nuclear weapons, Lasers 909
Police interrogation, Scotland 357w
Prison population, Scotland 357-8w
Ravenscraig Steelworks, Trade unions 294w
Remand in custody, Scottish courts 357w
Scottish Office, Civil service manpower 161w
Sea transport, Scottish Islands 163w
Strategic defence initiative, 560w, 909
Strategic defence initiative, Computer applications 910-1
Strategic defence initiative, Defence expenditure 560w
Strategic defence initiative, Defence research 906, 907
Strategic defence initiative, Edinburgh University 910
Strategic defence initiative, Nuclear weapons 907-8
Strategic defence initiative, Nuclear weapons deployment 907
Strategic defence initiative, Reagan, President 907-8
Strategic defence initiative, USSR 908
Summary trial, Scottish courts 357w, 358w
Trident, Defence expenditure 562w

"Your Business in the Making" 581w

Youth custody
Prisons 8w
Scotland 63w

Youth employment
School leaving 726w

Youth training scheme 54-6w, 187w, 400-4w
Board & lodging charges 489-90w
Educational standards 150
European Social Fund 299w
Finance 41w, 54w, 187w
Information technology centres 54w
Local education authorities 488w
Manpower Services Commission 113w
Ministers domestic visits 186-7w
Northern Ireland 41w
Pay 727-8w

School leaving 567w
Skilled workers 150-1
Take-up of employment 187w
Travelling expenses 488-9w, 489-90w
Yugoslavia
Foreign policy 203w
Zimbabwe
Foreign policy 200w
Foreign relations 200w